CHILDREN'S AID SOCIETY PRESENTS REPORTS

RECEPTION FOR "Y" MEMBERS

Happy Time at Gymnasium Last Evening a Junior Members' Reception

The Y.M.C.A. Gymnasium last night was the centre of attraction for the Boys' Department of the Association. Over a hundred strong gathered together for a reception following the membership campaign and the general consensus of opinion is that with the exception of the slow walk (60 secs.) there was not a slow minute during the evening.

The program was scheduled to start at seven-thirty but some of the younger fry were not taking any chances of being late for the party and were right on the job at six-fifteen. The program which started with an obstacle race, included group games and stunts of all kinds. The novelties of the evening were the rope calesthenics, the medicine ball kicking contest and the blindfold boxing contest.

Midway the program was interspersed by a rousing sing-song following which Mr. Honor Judge Deroche gave the boys one of the best ten minute talks that it has ever been our privilege to listen to. The fact that the whole group of a hundred or more boys gave the speaker perfect attention is the most efficient testimony of their appreciation. The Judge spoke along the lines of clean sportsmanship and clean living. He cited some of the outstanding examples in the world of sport where failure to play the game according to the rules had been very costly for some of the erstwhile stars.

Mr. R. Woodley, chairman of the Boys' Work Committee moved a vote of thanks to His Honor Judge Deroche and Mr. George Griffin, in a few well-chosen words, seconded the motion.

Before the Church Wagon roller ice, a presentation took place of which three members of the Boys Division, were presented with trinkets given by Mr. M. P. Duff, Chairman of Membership, for meritorious work in connection with the membership campaign held earlier in the month. Following this Mr. Sidenius, the General Secretary, presented a prize for the best Bible Essay of the Junior Boys' Group.

At this point the younger generation proceeded to assemble their hanger pangs, and to the casual onlooker it would appear that they were on the whole fairly successful in attaining their objective. We trust there were not painful experiences to follow.

REV. A. E. MILLSON GAVE EXCELLENT ADDRESS AT BRIDGE ST CHURCH

Painted a New Story Around An Old Theme—Children's Meeting To-night

At the meeting in Bridge St. School Hall last night the Rev. W. E. Millson gave a talk, that was what all agreed to be the best yet, and all his addresses have been good. He took the story of Zaccheus the Publican and made a story in a new way. The Evangelist was at his best in his vivid and picturesque description of how this hated and despised taxgatherer first came to hear of Jesus, and of his efforts to get a sight of him and of the results that followed. His two main points were, first that there were obstacles that were in the way of Zaccheus that had to be overcome before he could realize his desire. But the determination shown by the seeker, overcame all these. The crowd was between Zaccheus and Jesus at first, but later Jesus was between Zaccheus and the Crowd.

Millson used these two points to good advantage in applying them to the case of all seekers. The man who is in earnest will get to Jesus and Jesus will always stand between the man who serves him and all who would make it hard to serve Christ.

To-night at the closing meeting of the week Mr. Millson will speak on "The Wages of Life." Students and young people are most cordially invited.

FATALLY SHOT AT GOLDEN LAKE

Gunning Accident Takes the Life of a Young Man

A fatal hunting accident occurred a few days ago at Golden Lake, when John Sell the nineteen-year-old son of Mr. John Sell of Wilberforce, received the charge of a No. 20 shotgun in the lower region of the abdomen and died ten minutes after. He with three companions—two Rennie boys and another youth named Rosaker, were in the woods in the vicinity of Golden Lake hunting. While at rest for a few moments, one of the Rennies, standing at the bottom of an incline ledge of rock, let his gun fall which discharged and found a mark and victim in Sell who was standing above. His companions, horror-stricken at the tragedy, carried him to the home of Mr. Paul Welworth, where he died in about ten minutes' time.

FIVE OFFICERS FROM FRANCE TO VISIT UNITED STATES

Chamber of Deputies Makes An Award for This Purpose

Paris, Dec. 1.—Chamber of Deputies today approved a motion proposed by the military committee appointing three hundred thousand francs to enable five officers of the forces in America for the purpose of advancing good relations.

MEMBERSHIP TOTAL NOW NEARING OBJECTIVE

The Chamber of Commerce is Finally Closing Its Campaign for New Members with Encouraging Results

The total of memberships in the Chamber of Commerce campaign is mounting up in a most satisfactory way and is now nearly 260. It seems practically assured that the objective of 300 will be secured just as soon as the canvass is completed. The team workers have taken the names of a number of others who were absent from the city or away from home during the earlier days of the campaign and these will now be seen and everybody given an opportunity to connect themselves with the organization.

It has been a most gratifying feature of this renewal drive that so many have voluntarily brought in their membership applications either to the team workers or to the Chamber of Commerce. These were not merely renewals but a considerable number of them were fresh new applicants. Yesterday one of the team workers was gratified to have a gentleman from outside the city call at his office and ask for a membership card.

It has been especially pleasing to those in charge to note the very representative character of the membership that has been secured. In the preceding campaign, three years ago, many of those who joined the new organization did not really understand its character and some of them were not in sympathy with modern Chamber of Commerce work or community effort. These men presently represents those who have joined the Chamber of Commerce as a matter of conviction and not because of any sudden or temporary enthusiasm. They have watched the work of the organization the past three years and they believe it is the best possible method and influence that can be employed for the building of a greater Belleville. Following are some of the later additions to the membership since the last previous report:

F. S. Wilson, The J. C. Wilson Co.
A. B. Ketcheson, Browning, Harris, Nortcliffe & Co., Patterson Block.
R. Shiphant & Son, Butcher and Grocer, 44 Bridge St.

PREMIER KING MAKES APPEAL TO PROGRESSIVES

Replies to Mr. Meighen, and Answers Many Questions—Says Lanark Election Campaign Unimportant

Carleton Place, Nov. 30.—One of the most astonishing statements, and last evening by Premier King, during in the interests of the Liberal candidate, David Findlay, in the Lanark by-election was that the result was a matter of indifference to the Government. The lack of logic is glaring. Although the Premier says the result is of no import, he did not explain how he himself had been invigorated into entering the fray, or why he planned to make two speeches last night, or why so many Cabinet ministers had been sent into the riding, or why the Minister of Labor, James Murdock, had been rushed from the lasting stage of an ocean liner in Quebec into the midst of this contest. He went to great length to assure the people of Carleton Place that the defeat of the ministerial candidate would have but very little practical significance at the present time, much less than a ministerial defeat in the new solidly Liberal province of Quebec or Nova Scotia. This was the argument that the Premier used to induce the people of Lanark to vote for Mr. Findlay, and that have given to the Conservative party in past elections, including the general election of 1921.

The Premier's address was what he

A CASE FOR INVESTIGATION

A local citizen has, through local employment condition, been compelled to move with his family, to Trenton, where he has obtained a situation with the Crenshing Company. This man is a good Belleville citizen, a veteran of the Great War with a splendid record and it is indeed unfortunate that he is forced to change his residence under such circumstances. This should be investigated with the view of providing suitable employment. Mention of the matter to The Intelligencer will be appreciated.

TAXATION MAY BE CONSOLIDATED

Winnipeg, Dec. 1.—All taxation laws of the province may be consolidated into a one-year act, depending on a report to be prepared by the Manitoba Tax Commissioner, L. W. Pogue, which is to be submitted to the provincial treasury not later than Dec. 15.

The government has passed an order-in-council declaring "The commissioner shall consider and report upon the practicability and wisdom of consolidating all taxing laws of the province into one revenue act."

Three types of taxation will come under the one act, if this step is taken: Licenses, or fees paid for the privilege of doing something in the future; taxes, or fees paid for having done or possessed something, and levy, or fees assessed upon land valuation.

Mr. Thos. H. Ruston, local superintendent, presented his report as follows:

Belleville, Nov. 30th, 1922.

Mr. President, Ladies and Gentlemen.

I have the honor to present the annual report of the work in connection with the Children's Aid Society of the City of Belleville and County of Hastings. In doing so we give thanks to Almighty God for the work He has allowed us to accomplish.

The general work of the Society have been kept in view, i. e. protecting children from cruelty, caring for the neglected, providing foster homes for the homeless, adjusting family troubles and saving the weak and erring from criminal careers.

Many unfortunate children as a result of our efforts received the care and protection of the Society.

This year we have been somewhat hindered in our work through financial difficulties but we are hoping through the efforts of the Financial Campaign Committee, who have issued a letter of appeal giving full details of income and expenses, etc., to the citizens of the community that this difficulty will be overcome.

The industrial conditions of the city have been such as to greatly reduce the number of families in which children were without the ordinary comforts of a good home.

In the County it has been a year fraught with blessings and good store. There is enough and to spare. These conditions reflect favourably upon the work of the Children's Aid Society.

Yet with improved conditions there are the constant round of calls for personal telephone and personal interviews at the office, the homes visited and warnings given the court attendance in all cases where children are involved, all this work is important and saves many a home though the results cannot be tabulated and shown on paper.

For instance, recently I spent a whole afternoon in the office dealing with a man who had deserted his wife and child and vowed never to live with her again but could not come to a settlement so arranged another meeting next day with him and his wife and succeeded in bringing about a reconciliation.

Another case, a man came to my office complaining of the persistent attentions of a woman, after a straight talk and pointing out to him his responsibility he went his way, but behind it all was the fact that through this society he had been brought to justice in a previous case and had learnt his lesson.

In the investigation of cases of neglect we are brought face to face with many of the most perplexing problems of human life. To check evil influences by providing wholesome surroundings and by that give every boy and girl a chance of becoming a good citizen is the generally accepted solution. But how difficult the task of providing this environment or improving local conditions without breaking up or destroying the home. When one takes into consideration the ignorance and godlessness of so many parents, and the absence from home of the mother, the wage earner, and it is wonder that so many of both sexes thrown upon society without possessing of a spark of moral principal to restrain them should fall before the temptations and snares which beset the pathway of the young. Here we have the problem of the Godless home out of which neglect and delinquency come.

At this point we feel that a typical case dealt with during the year will demonstrate the practical work done.

Mother and father dead leaving some little girls absolutely without any means for support, no friends or relatives who could provide a home for them. They were made wards of the society and eventually placed in some of the best

Yesterday, on Wm. Bro[illegible] hill, a pony about to [illegible] was noticed struggling under a heavy load of scrap iron and plenty of oats would be even tha reward.

The animal was very [illegible] and [illegible] to [illegible] stretch its appetite was [illegible] It was with great difficulty that [illegible] the load to the summit. It was a pitiable sight to see the poor animal struggling with the load and [illegible] the [illegible] of the driver. The owner of the animal [illegible] in the city. At the conclusion of one number on the program she was presented with a large bouquet of chrysanthemums.

The instrumental duets given by the sisters were received with a call for a great deal of applause.

There was a larger attendance than usual for such concerts, and the audience was most appreciative.

The hour is getting [illegible] to [illegible] that hall should be up to a decided disadvantage. The acoustics were bad to begin with, and then [illegible] made it difficult for both artists and audience. Just as the hoarers were spell bound with the rendering of a very beautiful selection, the town clock boomed out its hourly chimes, destroying all romance and making it difficult for the people to keep in an appreciative frame of mind. On another occasion a nearby locomotive, [illegible] and to interrupt. Probably the worst feature of all was the absolutely abominable gas lighting. The gas lights were extinguished in order to make [illegible] er, if possible, the little glow of the stage lights. In order that the artists could read their music.

Such conditions are extremely discouraging to artists, and sooner or later these facts will become advertised abroad, and Belleville will then have great difficulty in [illegible] ing upon the better class of talent to give entertainments here. The audience was away disappointed. Apart from the artists, after experiences such as last night.

We would encourage noted musicians to come to Belleville and Belleville people to patronize high class concerts. The first step to further these desires is to discard the practice of holding of concerts in the City Hall. We have other places more suitable.

Mr. Kihl was playing under some what of a handicap, not knowing as to the acoustics, a slight speak to one of his hands in Kitchener a few days ago.

With all the above difficulties to overcome, it speaks volumes for the artists who were able to give a successful concert in spite of conditions.

If the society had done nothing more all this year than take this family to Belleville it would be worth all the cost of operation. Have you ever tried to compute the value in dollars and cents of a child saved from misery and want and placed on the high road to success. And that is only a small amount;it is worth infinitely more than dollars and cents. "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these have done it unto Me."

The following statistics for the year ending October 30th, 1922, will give some slight conception of the operations carried on:

The administration of the adoption Act and the Act for the protection of the children of unmarried parents has involved a great deal of work. Under the former Act 30 cases have been dealt with.

Under the latter we have had 17 cases, 9 of these have been satisfactorily settled, 2 cases withdrawn, 1 case dismissed, and 4 cases unfinished. The amounts obtained have varied with each case as taken on its merit. All the circumstances surrounding the case have to be taken into consideration and to some extent you have to be governed by these circumstances in accepting a settlement. But all cases have to be submitted to the Provincial Officer for his approval. Approximately $2,274 has been accepted or paid from this district to the Department. Something like $22,000 have been paid for the maintenance of Illegitimate Children throughout the Province of Ontario, during the year. In conclusion I would like to sincerely thank those who have come to our assistance in carrying on. Special mention should also be made of the friends who contributed money, clothing etc., and to Mrs. Corby who again provided for the children's picnic.

We often have wonderful opportunities for some good people to invest the that affection of their heart where there is almost sure to be the best returns, and we would beg of you to give this your careful consideration.

Respectfully submitted

Local Superintendent C. A. S.

Mrs. W. H. Nugent presented the following report of the W.H.M. Committee.

Mr. President and Members:

The reports presented by the Conveners of the different departments of the work which they were by the desire of this Board placed in charge, prove that they have been faithful in the discharge of the duties they accepted and further show that an active interest has been exercised in all that relates to the aims of the Society.

The report shows the average number of children for the year 17.03, approximately 18 per month. The total cost for maintenance (under the head of Maintenance we class groceries, meat, bread, milk, coal and sundries to the amount of $13.87) totalling $994.92. Cost per child per year $52.00, per week $1.00, per meal 3 cts, a decrease over 1921 of $23.90 per inmate, which total on the average $439.20. This is a substantial reduction, but the nourishment of the child has not been affected or reduced, but owing to more moderate prices and the more generous contributions of food from the county and city friends of the Society in response to appeals we received this benefit. To clothe a child, taking an average of 18 children, for a year at a cost of $72.00 is impossible under ordinary conditions and the prevailing prices. Boots are our heaviest item of expense to do the clothing but we obtain many boots donated, but to the kind hearts and willing hands of individuals and the various societies working, we are indebted for well filled bales of clothing and by submitting from time to time lists of the "needs" and sizes, the garments are sent in ready to wear which is a further economy of labor.

Due to quarantine the inventory of clothing will be given later. The household and repair accounts do not come under the same system as the convenor takes no personal action excepting where life or property would be endangered by delay. All recommendations for the purchase of household requirements or needed repairs are placed before the board at earliest meeting and their decision governs the action taken. The title of The Women's Household Managing Committee may strike the ear as if this committee was vested with considerable authority in the control of affairs. The members of this board who have followed the work closely know this is not the case, but to those who are occasional visitors I would briefly recite activities. The Convener and Co-Con. of Maintenance buy the foods just as required whether it be daily or semi-weekly, keeping an accurate account in their own book of the order purchased, this is checked at the end of the month with the delivery book and the itemized account is rendered by the merchant. O. K'd by the Convenor, read and adopted by the board, handed to the secretary then to the treasurer who when funds are available issues the cheques and the account is closed. Quite a save taken the trouble and time to take these cheques and pay the merchants from whom they made the purchase and also have their own book receipted. The same method has been followed by the Con. and Co-Con. of clothing but the household and repair accounts are what comes under dealt with by the board handed to the Treasurer and not dealt with any further by the Convenor. The resulting arrangement was the decision of the board in dealing with a circumstance of condition of accounts of the years before and it is to their credit, to record that their action was governed by good judgment and with difficulty. The conveners objected to the repeated requests for payment of the orders they gave and their books terminating until the present arrangement made more demands on their time but this was willingly given if it is in any way assisted by work. In the recommendation of the Auditors that the Treasurer pay all accounts this Committee cannot concur. There has always been a discrepancy between the Maintenance reports we submitted to this board.

The Conveners know the actual cost of maintaining a child in the Shelter but in the financial report many departments were included under the general heading of Maintenance which when compared with those of our conveners was very conflicting and the recommendation of the Auditors for a better classification of the departments of the work will we believe have a good effect upon the work from a public view.

When summing up what the W. H. M. Com. stand for, they are a small group of active members, living honored lives of the work, doing the work YOU have apportioned them to do and doing nothing without the approval of this honorable body. The work is much an ordinary routine and to us it seems to hold a wider area of usefulness and we feel that we ought and might follow the life of child committed into our care further than the hour we bid it goodbye at the door of the Shelter. According to the Act in respect thereto we should know its destination and we urge that this record be kept in the book provided at the Shelter for this purpose.

In retiring from the chair of this Committee I wish to express the happiness I have experienced in my association with its members and my gratitude for the courtesy, harmony and cooperation which has existed and extend to my successor the hope that she receive the same encouragement. And to you, Mr. President, on behalf of the Committee, we thank you for the support you have given the work and value your presence has given us.

EVENING MEETING

In the evening at the Oddfellows Hall, Rev. Peter Bryce, of Toronto, chairman of the Mothers' Allowance Board and director of Child Welfare for the Social Service Council, gave an address relative to child welfare which was much appreciated by all present.

This is the time of year when Uncle Sam tells the fellow "Turkey." And when he is through giving thanks that he is not as others are—and that he was allowed to go with the war, and gather in all spoils thereof, he might add a word of advice that a diabolical attempt is being made to abolish his favorite pastime of burning an occasional negro at the stake.—Toronto Telegram.

ESKIMOS ARRIVE IN LIMESTONE CITY

Will Probably Have Workout at Stadium This Afternoon

The Eskimo football team arrived in the city on the noon train from Grand Trunk, and as far as is known, they will make their headquarters in the same hotel which has been their home since they started on Tuesday morning last on their long trip eastward in search of the Dominion rugby championship.

The visitors were met at the train by Gatherdin, Iron Queen's and everybody connected with them. Earlier in the week there was a request from the Eskimos for an opportunity to have a workout on the Stadium this afternoon and it was learned that if the weather conditions today justify the removal of the straw from the Stadium the visitors will be given a chance to have the desired workout. If the weather is not favorable, other arrangements will be made to provide proper facility for the Westerners to get the exercise which will, undoubtedly, be welcome to them after the long train ride.

MAY HAVE STORM FOR RUGBY GAME

"Toronto Star" Prophets Out Again—Sure Sign of Change of Weather

When enquiries were made after the health of Adam Gow, the team representative of the Toronto Star, who was at the Guelph final basketball game, the reply was that Gow was still alive, and doing police court work for the Star. Of late, however, the odd prophecy has been made by the Star, so that Gow or Marsh must be "clinging ink" again on the sport sheet.

"KEN" MALLEN

TO COACH BRANTFORD

"Ken" Mallen, well-known professional hockey player, and fancy skater, has been secured as coach for the Brantford intermediate hockey squad for the winter. Ken, who has been on the Pacific coast 12 years, returned East this autumn, and has been visiting relatives and friends. He spent one day in Belleville recently with his brother, Ray, and proceeded on to Toronto and Brantford. Ken was instructor of fancy skating in Frisco for a time, after he quit the strenuous game of hockey.

HERE'S ANOTHER

All hail to Queen's. Haul up the chaplet of wild blossoms and pin them on the brows of a fighting team. Queen's are a great aggregation, certainly the hardest hitting football machine since the days of the old Tigers. Their spirit is wonderful, and they should toy with Edmonton Saturday.—The Toronto Star.

It would not be well to abide by the toying part of the statement, in fact Queen's are more apt to lose now than ever. The Toronto Star dops is upset every time it's set up.

QUEEN'S ARE READY

FOR ESKIMOS

Kingston, Ont., Nov. 30.—Queen's players had their last hard scrimmage of to-day behind sealed doors in preparation for the game on Saturday with the Edmonton Eskimos. They will have a light signal practice to-morrow, and will then rest from their labors until Saturday afternoon.

McKelvey and McLeod, who were injured in Saturday's game in Toronto, are still receiving medical attention, but they are expected to be all right by Saturday. The players as a whole, however, are in good football trim, and ready for the conflict.

Of the 2,000 in 10,000 cities, total liabilities of $55,719,411.43 or a per capita indebtedness of $160.92, while the towns of 1,000 to 5,000 had total liabilities of $35,407,404.64, a per capita debt of $76.60. The total assets of the cities in 1920 amounted to $805,861,290.54, showing a per capita value of $266.60.

INDOOR BALL LEAGUE OPENS WITH BANG

Y.M.C.A. and Civil Service Stage One of Best Games Yet—"V" Lose Out 13-12

K.V.A. Win in Walk From Scouts

In one of the closest and best games of indoor baseball ever staged in the Armouries here, the Civil Service nine, used on the Y.M.C.A. squad by the close score of 13-12 after the game went eleven innings in order to break the tie.

The boys from the Post Office and the Customs Department thought that they were due for defeat before the game commenced, but the Red Triangle outfit felt that they were going to have a battle royal, judging by the appearances of their rivals in the workouts before the game. There is no consolation for the "V" crowd in losing, however, as they will now receive their Xmas mail the same as other years, for if the Post Office squad lost, they promised the Reds that they would not start their mail.

If the city were scoured for the purpose of selecting two teams that were evenly matched, the result could not be any better than these two teams.

Although the Reds got away to a fair lead in the middle of the game, they had a bad inning and the opposition tied matters up. The tie remained unbroken at the end of the ninth, and the extra innings were played. With two down in the eleventh, and one on, C. S. slugger connected and put the ball to the guns, sending over the lucky old 13th, and the game was over.

Lineups

Civil Service—Hinchy, 1f., Crook, 2nd., Lloyd, c., Keeler, p., Liberty, c.f., Rogers, 1st., Phillips, r.f., Lang, s.s., Aylesworth, 3rd.

Y.M.C.A.—Newton, 2nd. and c., Yeomans, s.s., Chapman, r.f., Pearson and McLeod 3rd., Brockel, 1.f., McLeod and Hughes, c., f., Hibbert, p. and 2nd, Keeber, p., Alexander, 1st.

The second game between the Scouts and the Hydro (K.V.A.), split was a walk away in nine scores. In fact the book keeper got a cramp in the hand from making up runs for Hydro and he ceased work, so that it is not known what the score was.

Lineup

Scouts—H. Bedard 1st., V. Naphan, 2nd., R. Bedard, 1.f., H. Kellar, p., Rose, c., Bedard, r.f., Gilbert, c.f., E. Reels, s.f., Wilbur, r.f., Hayes, p.

Hydro—B. Brown, 2nd., Arnott, 1st., Maylee, r.f., Leslie, p., Hibbard, c.f., Oliphant, c., Poste, 3rd., Harvey, s.s., Reels, l.f.

Ken Collins handled both games very satisfactorily.

NOTICE.

Owing to the Armouries being used by the soldiers, there will be no games of Indoor Baseball next week.

STAG SOCIAL SLATED FOR Y.M.C.A. MONDAY

Boxing Bout, Songs, Stunts, Swims and Eats Are Main Features

On Monday evening at the "Y", something novel will be staged, when a Stag social will be the main attraction on the Gym floor. Group games, swims bowling, and sing songs will be predominate.

There will be an bounteous lunch served also.

BOWLING

Last night the Bowling Alleys at the "Y" featured a doubleheader. The first game between K.V.A. and Greenlaw's was won by the former by a narrow margin. The second game between the "Y" Reds and C.T.R. was productive of higher scores and was won by the Reds with something to spare.

For the Red's, Chilbert rolled the champion score of 353 in his three strings. Yeoes ran a very close second with 349. Weir was high men of the C.T.R. five, his three string total being 337.

Poste led the K.V.A. Five, rolling 833 in the three strings. Bateman was high man of Greenlaw's. His score for three string being 457.

DOUBLE HEADER AT DOMENICO'S

In a double header at Domenico's Allers last night the G.T.R. Office defeated the C. I. A. and in the second game the C. I. A. downed the Outfords. In the first game the G. T. HOGTOWN AGAIN

The followint from Hamilton Herald again shows hog town tactics of Toronto. Of course the allegation is against The Holy Toronto Globe, and as it does not represent Toronto by any manner of means, the city should not be judged by this sheet.

The Toronto Globe rugby expert gave Harry Balstone, of Toronto, and Billy Hughes, of Hondreal, credit for Queen's victory over Argos on Saturday—Balstone for his clever play and Hughes for hi "new stut" in the way of coaching.

We dimgree.

The honors belong to two Hamiltonians—"Pep" Leadley and George Awray.

Leadley's trusty boot resulted in all of Queen's points. His running was another feature, and he worked up on the line when Argos were in possession with telling effect.

Awray coached Queen's last season and again this year up to the time of his illness. And Queen's didn't show anything new in their play against Argos.

Why not give the credit to the Hamilton boys who richly deserve it?

Upward movement in New York market after the holiday yesterday. The ills are again prominent and the operations on the long side are proving profitable to speculative interests. Short coverings are undoubtedly playing a big part in the advance.

Demand sterling is quoted at $4.51½; French francs 8.89c, and German marks at 1½c per hundred.

Imperial Tobacco had record year; net profits were the greatest in the history of the company.

There seems to be a pool operating in Toronto, although vigorously denied by Toronto interests. They were tipping this stock at 128 some time ago and afterwards tried to unload at 98. These manipulations should be brought out of their hiding.

Power is again in the limelight and will likely become the centre of attraction on the Toronto and Montreal markets. There are big things on foot in power circles.

Blue Sky Law for Ontario is proposed by Ontario Government Committee. This will likely apply to all companies selling stock, and purchaser of stock will likely be compensated if claims in prospectus are found incorrect. The legislation will be aimed at the bucket shops and unsound promotions. The Intelligencer has only recently in this column warned against the oil and other salesmen with highly speculative issues. They are operating throughout Hastings at the present time and the intending investor should be wary and inspect the bona fies of both the company an the salesman. This propose legislation is greatly needed to eliminate these fly-by-night artists who are passing the hat throughout the community. It will protect the trader and also the legitimate dealer in securities of merit.

BRING CANADIANS HOME

A very commendable feature of the immigration policy of the Federal Government is that of the inauguration of measures for the repatriation of Canadians who are at present resident in the United States. There are unquestionably many Canadians in the States who would be glad to return to their native land if arrangements could be made whereby opportunities could be provided here for making a living that would permit them to live reasonably near the standard enjoyed by them in the States. This is not a difficult problem, except in as far as it can only be developed on a small scale, at first, but can be worked out on an ever-increasing scale. One person has expressed the opinion that our greatest export to the United States, ever since Confederation, has been well educated men and women, tens of thousands of whom have taken their places among the professional and business leaders of their adopted land. Some of these more successful men and women, we cannot expect to repatriate, because opportunities for them in Canada are not sufficiently numerous. Our educational expenditures required to produce these professional and business men and women are tremendous, and it would seem that we are producing them in greater numbers than we are able to absorb. Our present problem is to create more opportunities for this desirable type of citizen. A certain amount of emigration will, however, continue, just as long as Johns Hopkins University needs an Osler or a Barker, railway construction a Jim Hill, literature a Bliss Carman, and political life a Franklin Lane.

In considering the problem we must not exclusively consider, however, the illustrious few, but take a broader view of the situation and consider the great number of the less illustrious but highly desirable type. Many of these Canadians who have taken up agriculture in the States could have done quite as well here, and would have had the added benefit of living in Canada than in the environment in which they now find themselves. This is just as true of the emigrant from the Maritime Provinces and Quebec to the New England States, as it is of the Ontario men and women, who, in the years preceding the opening of our own West, poured into Michigan, Minnesota and the Dakotas.

The repatriation of Canadians who have long been resident across the border and have formed family ties there will be a difficult undertaking, even if, as in the case of agriculturists, substantial improvements in the form of homesteads on cheap lands of good quality are offered them. The best time to begin the repatriation of Canadians is before they leave Canada. To pump people into the Dominion from the United States while there is a steady leakage from Canada to that country is not good business. So far as legislation and administrative action can be usefully directed to the stopping of the leak they should be employed. Instead of offering the French or English speaking Canadian now in the United States a home on some liberal settlement plan if he will return to his native land, why not make the offer to the look-loose young Canadian who is beginning to look for an opening across the border?

The natural growth of the Canadian population is almost enough, if properly conserved and directed, to provide settlers for immediately available vacant land. It is good business to look for immigrants of the right sort in Holland, Belgium, Scandinavia and other European lands, and in the United States. But it would be even better business to let it be known that for every native-born Canadian who desires to till the soil there is a better opportunity here at home than he will find across the border or in more distant lands. For Canada, Canadians first!

INTEREST

The pace that modern society is traveling today allows one but little time to become interested in anything and people frequently remark that they are bored with the commonplace happenings of their town, which they term, as going "dead." Such a statement reflects more or less directly on the speakers themselves, conveying the fact that they are either letting the town go "dead," or are not identifying themselves with the activities of the town or their domestic and community duties.

Many philosophers have evolved theories for the promotion of the contentment of our frail humanity, and, with the exception of the Christian philosophy of Love, few have been able to advance anything that meets with popular approval. As a rule they appear to run to pleasures of the frothy, highly exciting and selfish variety. We have become slaves of such desires. Indulgence in such emotional pastimes naturally produces a reaction, and then in these periods of so-called depression, the town becomes "dead" and there is nothing to interest a "wide-awake, red-blooded individual." Probably there is no better remedy than to become interested in our business, our domestic duties, our community duties or to cultivate a useful hobby. By so doing we throw off the raiment of the slave, and become the custodian of our own future. The real concrete pleasure and contentment that we gain from doing a good deed, an educational one, is far greater, yea, greater by a hundred fold, than the fleeting and highly emotional pleasure obtained from that, which is commonly known as recreation, today.

The remedy would appear to be like Castoria, because it should commence at home. Make our homes the coziest and most attractive places in the town. Make the kiddies and the older folks at home, happy. Take an interest in these homes, make them attractive inside and out. Then take an interest in our Y.M.C.A., our fraternal associations, our churches, Chamber of Commerce, and our sporting associations. A healthy interest will soon be aroused in these institutions, and rubbing shoulder to shoulder with our townspeople, we will learn to know them better, and when we know them better we will find that they are not such bad fellows after all. Our financial and social interests are so interlocked today, that we have to know our neighbors to get along.

Thus if we want to develop a real sense of contentment we will have to develop an interest that is healthy in the everyday things that surround us. Once we do this, we become better citizens, our business prospers, and we always have a few interesting problems on our hands. The world looks brighter and for some reason or another we become much more contented, and feel that the modern type of amusement has been produced for those who have not enough physical stamina to create amusements out of the many interesting things that are at hand. We are supporting in luxury a few men, whose fertile brains are devising for us amusements that do not amount to much more than a fallen for their bait. Let's be big enough to rise above these present tendencies and devote ourselves to more useful pastimes, which give us greater rewards mentally and physically.

PASSING COMMENT

In all fairness it must be stated that coal carts which carry fuel to anxiously waiting cellars cannot be accused of breaking the speed limit.

o o o

Hon. Charles Stewart's plans on immigration do not include the Ku Klux Klan. Canadians will note with satisfaction.

o o o

A number of Greek politicians and soldiers have been shot for offences against the shoe-shining state. Even a peaceful wayfaring man cannot help feeling sorry for the soldiers.

o o o

Considering that the police of old London are not allowed to carry firearms, their success in handling serious mob situations must evoke surprise among New York's "finest", who are not thus handicapped.

HINTS THAT WILL HELP YOU WHEN YOU HAVE YOUR PICTURE TAKEN.

"Tell me some of the things we need to know when we go to have our own pictures taken," was asked Mr. Pirie McDonald, one of the greatest photographers in the city of New York.

"Well," he replied, "don't forget that the photographer must know for what 'purpose' you want the picture. That is almost the first question I ask a man who comes to me for a sitting: 'What do you want it for?' Sometimes he says, 'What the deuce do you want to know that for?'

"If he says that, I usually reply, 'Oh, I didn't ask the lady's name!' But here's the point: If this is entirely for family consumption, or for just a circle of old friends, that is one thing. If you want it to represent you in business, that is another. But it is to go to the girl you are 'swanked' to, for goodness sake tell me, old top! For I can make those swanky things, too."

"Another thing to remember is that when you go to a photographer you will get a portrait of yourself as you appear to that man." So be careful in choosing the man. Study the work of different photographers, and choose the one whose angle seems to suit your temperament. If one man is characterized by doing sweet and gentle stuff, bear in mind that you are not going to get the punch that some other man gives in his work.

"But having chosen your photographer, go to him with the idea that you will be pleased. If you go critically, with your back up, you are going to have a photograph of yourself with your back up!

"That's a thing that works both ways, too. If the photographer has his back up, yours will involuntarily assume the same position. Several years ago I made things pretty hard for myself because of my critical attitude toward other people. They were always rubbing me the wrong way, always disagreeing with me; and I didn't like that, or them either. But I got to thinking the thing over, and I found that instead of looking for those things which I could like in people, I was absorbing the things I couldn't like. When I realized this I determined that from that day forward I was going to look into the faces of all men to find them, something I could like."

Ed. Note—Of late years Mr. McDonald has photographed only men. He has preferred to specialize in this way and show others to make portraits of the ladies and the children.

AT THE RAINBOW'S END.

Are you one of those fellows who always want
A different job than they've got?
Are you one of the kind who always look
Across at their brother's lot?
The world's just full of folks like this—
Forever changing 'round;
They kill the chance that might be theirs
By never gaining ground.

There's a pot of gold at the rainbow's end
For the man who sticks to his work;
And chances galore are right at your door,
But they pass by those who shirk.
Stick to your job, fellows—climb to the top;
The world needs men who will find
The reward you'll find at the rainbow's end
Is greater than gold, indeed.

PRESS OPINION AT EDISON

(Kingston Whig.)

Thomas A. Edison's disapproval of the present day college graduate will revive the controversy aroused by his former intelligence questionnaire. His main objection is that the average graduate objects to work, especially if it is dirty. Lack of imagination and initiative is another fault. The collegian thinks he knows it all; he does not want to begin at the bottom and work up; he wants to start at the top. The same defects have been pointed to some products of the high school and, indeed, it is characteristic of many of the modern youth.

All of which gives point to Edison's remark that as a rule the right kind of men don't go to college; another way of saying that too many of the wrong kind do. College, he admits, is a good place for the man who wants to work, but there are very few of that type nowadays. Possibly the rush to the college is the result, the notion, that a college education will lead to a soft snap without work, a "white collar job." It was not that way in the days when going to college was a serious preparation for a life work.

Mr. Edison's criticism is based on experience, shared by many employers. The colleges are blamed because they cannot turn out a first class product with inferior material. The remedy is closer selection of students. Provoked by collegiate succeeding, Mr. Edison says college education is not a necessity, but he recognizes that, given to the proper type of student, it is an advantage. Men of natural gifts can succeed without it, as in his own case, but all the college education in the world could not make a dullard into an Edison.

COMING BACK HOME.

(Toronto Telegram.)

According to his Toronto organ, Premier Rodger has a suit of clothes made from Canadian tweed. This is probably being put forth as proof that he is being weaned away from his preference for things American. Next we may expect to hear that he is wearing a new pair of cottoped boots made in Montreal and that he does not even oil them with the product of that great philanthropic corporation that claimed his services during the war.

WIT AND HUMOR

DOUBTFUL BENEFIT

A member of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals was touring Spain. She met a Spanish nobleman.

"Do subscribe to my society," she said.

Finding her attractive, he made no reply.

"I'll do more than that, dear lady," he said. "I'll get up a bull fight for your society's benefit."

THE PLEA FOR THE DEFENCE

Young Bretthaw had finished the defence of his first case, a mighty hopeless one. His client had stolen the hams, and they had been found in his bureau drawer, hidden under a red flannel underskirt.

"Gentlemen, anyhow," Lawyer Brieflees, tears streaming from his eyes, wound up his final speech for the defence, "these impassioned words:

"Gentlemen, out in the country, many miles from here, there stands a humble cottage. Around it an aged daughter, a frail, anaemic girl. The daughter, a frail, anaemic girl. The daughter's father, prone in his trembling hand. The white-haired woman at his side weeps. The old man is dying, and this furniture with a thin, transparent hand.

"That pathetic group, gentlemen, was the last hated breath for your verdict. Acquit the accused, and they will be transported to the seventh heaven. Convict him, and despair will overwhelm them. For, gentlemen, need I say it?—the old man is my client. The dear old lady is my mother, and the frail girl weeping by the fire is my adoring sister."

STRAIGHT YES OR NO

"Are you willing to answer any question I may put to you with a straight Yes or No? asked Lord Gladstone of a heckler.

"Yes, I am," replied the heckler without hesitation.

"Gladstone then leaned forward, and, in a clear voice, slowly asked: "Have you stopped beating your wife?"

Amid uproarious laughter the heckler beat a hasty retreat from the hall.

Mexico City, Dec. 1.—The city today counted the casualties of a pitched battle between the police and a mob which attempted to storm the Municipal Building last night. The death list thus obtained as result of fighting, stood at 12, while about fifty persons are known to have been injured.

PREEMIER KING MAKES APPEAL

behinds his whole efforts was plainly seen. He was appealing on the Progressed seaskoine in tone, and treated the generalities largely. The purpose premises of the riding, who have realised that the election of the Liberal candidate, David Findlay, would give the Government an actual majority of one vote in the House of Commons. And to those claims distinish the influence of the Progressive group.

Gives the Government a fair show and time about is fair play, were two of the arguments which the Prime Minister of Canada addressed to voters of Lanark. He complained that in Lanark the Government had actually to fight. He made public avowal that he would have liked to have included a couple of representatives of the Progressive party in his Cabinet, and the Premier added, virtuously, not for political purposes. Findlay's Election Would Mean Majority

Mr. King expressed himself in such a way that he finally had to come right out and plainly admit that he hoped for Mr. Findlay's election, because it would give the Government a majority of one in the House of Commons.

The reason for his wish was particularly impressive; it was that the Progressives might have greater opportunity for freedom in debate. The Progressive members of Parliament would not be likely to stand in whether had refrained from advocating Progressive policies in order to maintain the Liberal Government in power. Premier King nevertheless assured his audience to-night that Progressives were often silent in Parliament for fear they might have the support of the Conservatives after bring about a defeat of the Government.

Replies to Mr. Meighen.

Mr. King's attitude became more interesting and he showed more signs of life and punch, when he attempted to reply to Mr. Meighen's condemnation of the Government's dismissal of the old Canadian National Railway Board, that when he was engaged in the exposition of some of his pet theories of Government.

He chose to regard the Conservative leader's criticism of the course of the Ministry as an attack upon Sir Henry Thornton and the other members of the new railway directorate. Mr. Meighen, averred the Prime Minister, should have awaited the arrival of Sir Henry Thornton in Canada to take up his duties before saying unkind things of him and others of the new directors. Can Mr. Meighen name a man better fitted than Sir Henry Thornton? asked Mr. King. If he can, I ask him to name him; if he cannot, I ask him to be silent.

Question of Railways.

The Government's failure to appoint an employe of the Canadian National Railways to the Board which is to manage this system, Mr. King justified by saying that Tom Moore knows the needs of labor throughout the country. We have already a railway man in the Cabinet, Hon. James Murdock. The Prime Minister also defended the Government's non-committal attitude toward the British Government's enquiry on September 16 as to Canada's view of the Near East situation. He did not enter into any details of the transaction.

After all, concluded Mr. King, the Parliament was the body to settle such a question. Mr. King concluded that the Government, which increased the sales tax by 50 per cent., had alleviated the burden of taxation. He gave Hon. P. C. Larkin, Canadian High Commissioner in London, a great deal of the credit for the negotiation of the agreement for the removal of the cattle embargo.

Perpetuation of the freight rates on wheat and flour eastbound from the Prairie Provinces established by the Crow's Nest Pass agreement of 1898 is defended as the observance of the pledge given to the Western farmers by the Laurier Government. He proclaimed that the protracted wanderings of Cabinet Ministers in distant lands were for the purpose of finding wider markets for the farmers and manufacturers. He admitted that the Government had not implemented its pre-election promises, adding that a Government that would do everything in 11 months would turn such a somersault that it would never be heard t again.

Like Mr. Bonar Law.

In explanation of his avoidance of such a consequence he compared himself to Mr. Bonar Law in his desire for tranquility and a little less government. The Prime Minister was well received by an audience which filled the Town Hall here. He left Hon. Jas. Murdock and Mr. Findlay to address that audience, while he went himself to Almonte to address a second meeting.

SECOND FIRE IN INSIDE MONTH

University of Montreal Again Has a Serious Conflagration

(Canadian Press.)

Montreal, Dec. 1.—Fire which started shortly before midnight last night did damage estimated at about three hundred thousand dollars to the Dentistry and Veterinary School Building of the University of Montreal. It was extinguished at 2.30 this morning. Nine firemen suffered injuries in the conflagration. This is the second fire in university of Montreal within a month. An investigation will be held.

Montreal, Dec. 1.—In anti Roman Catholic incendiary is blamed for the fire which, last night, destroyed the dental department of the University of Montreal, and it is hinted that the Ku Klux Klan propaganda may have inspired him. Last night's fire was the third within two years in the University. No specific information, however, is available about the commencement of the fire though the professors and the students connected with the institution, which is Roman Catholic, appear firmly convinced that some religious fanatic is responsible.

JAPANESE TRADE CONTINUES TO BE FAIRLY GOOD

(Canadian Press.)

Osaka, Japan, Dec. 1.—Although two-thirds of the offices occupied a few months ago by brokers are vacant today and the business depression has forced many businessmen to seek cheaper quarters in the suburbs, the general trend of Japanese foreign trade appears to be upward. Foreign trade increased 5 per cent. during the last nine months. The export business during that time was worth about $585,000,000 as compared with about $136,000,000 during the first three-quarters of 1921.

Japanese manufacturers have lost much of their war business, but exports to North America have increased 70 per cent., to South America 81.6 per cent. and to Europe 250 per cent. during the last nine months. The increase has been mainly in raw silk, cotton yarns, silk tea, electric wires, refined sugar, cotton cloth. There have been exports of coal, paper, cement, beer, iron, toys, and lumber. During the same period Japan has been buying rice, [illegible] wheat, woollen goods, iron and coal in increasing volume.

Winnipeg, Nov. 30.—Emphasizing the need for an educational campaign to warn automobilists drivers in countries where the dinner rush is at midway crossings, officials of the general claims department of the Canadian National Railways western lines assert that in the first ten-months of the present year there had been 40 automobile accidents of this nature, resulting in injuries to 18 persons and death to six, and that at least 90 per cent of the accidents could have been avoided had the car drivers exercised prevaution.

STRAW FOR FEEDING

A Great Factor for Carrying Over Live Stock.

Of Most Value When Cut Early—Oat Straw Best of the Cereals — Old and Musty Straw Not Desirable for Live Stock Feeding.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

The quantity of straw consumed by the live stock of Ontario amounts to many thousand tons each year. It is important as a feed, but unfortunately its value is frequently overrated. Straws, the by-products of different grains, have different values. The line of demarcation between hays, straws and grains is not clear, but generally speaking straw is the by-product of ripened grain or forage plants, being made up of the dry leaves and stems. The nearer the plant is to the mature condition at time of harvest the lower the feeding value, because of the concentration of the nitrogenous and fat properties in the developing and ripening seed.

Straw Best When Cut Early.

The straw from over-ripe grain is generally hard in character, unpalatable and indigestible; while the straw from grain cut in the green side are softer, more palatable, and generally contains a higher percentage of digestible matter. The hard condition of over-ripened grain straw causes such to be almost useless as a feed. Even the bulk fodder has a feed value, that value cannot be satisfactorily extracted by the digestive processes of our domestic animals.

Varieties of Straw Fed.

The straws generally used for stock feeding are oat, barley, wheat, pea and bean straw. Others, such as timothy, flax, bean and rye straws are sometimes used, but with indifferent results. Oat straw, the best of the various straws for feeding, carries considerable feed value, as indicated by chemical analysis, but unfortunately a large percentage of the nutritive properties cannot be extracted by the digestive processes of our domestic animals. What is true of oat straw is more pronounced with the other varieties of straw, the harder and drier such are, the less the animals can extract from them.

Oat Straw Is a Good Bulky Feed.

Oat straw can be used as a feed for cattle, horses and sheep, during the autumn and winter period to supply bulk and some nourishment to the ration. Dry cattle can use large amounts of oat straw as a maintenance feed. Horses that are at all work can eat straw, as a large part of their ration. Straw is too bulky for horses at present or hard work.

Barley straw, if free from beards, ranks next to oat straw as a feed, and may be used as a roughage, but a good part of the animal maintenance must come from some other source.

Wheat Straw Poorer—Also Rye.

Wheat straw is of lower value than barley straw, and serves to give bulk and a small part of the required nourishment to the animal. Wheat straw as a supplement to roots and silage in winter feeding plays an important part in the maintenance of health and dry stock. Rye straw is generally so hard and indigestible as to be of little use as a feeding feed. Clover and other legumes straws while containing components of considerable feed value are frequently so hard and unpalatable that the animal can make only partial use of them. Pea and vetch straws are generally the most valuable of the legume straws. Dry sweet or red clover straws or alfalfa stems carry a feed value that is generally out of reach of the average farm animal's stomach, unless these materials are steamed or finely ground.

Old and Musty Straws Are Not Desirable.

Old, dry and musty straws have little or no feed value, from soft and clean straw in no matter from what source can generally be used to good advantage by all live stock if care is taken to prepare such in a manner that will aid the animal digestion to extract the nourishing elements. Cutting, steaming, or mixing with other feeds to increase palatability and digestibility is always advised.—L. Stevenson, Sec., Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.

Versatile Matter.

The advantage of matter in the soil may be summed up as follows: It aids aeration, retains moisture, encourages root, provides conditions suitable for bacteria, aids decomposition of soil particles, supplies plant food, deepens soil layer, prevents leaching, maintains soil warmth. Every opportunity to return to the soil this important matter of any kind must be taken advantage of by all farmers having any regard for the value of their field.

Continuous grain cropping decreases the productivity of soils. This is due largely to the fact that the grain and the grain crop vegetable matter in the soil that is essential to the production of bacterial action, without chemical and bacterial action in the soil the plants cannot feed, and be difficult.—L. Stevenson, Toronto.

Save Shelling Peas.

Save shelling peas by using the following method: Wash, and put the unshelled peas in a stewpan. Boil ten or fifteen minutes; stir thoroughly with a fork, then pour them into a colander, saving the water. Pick out the empty pods, put the peas in the strained water, and return all to the fire. Season as usual. You will have saved the sweetness from the pods and much valuable time.

"GOLF" - - - - - - - - - - By Barran Lewis

Golf is golf and there ain't no game the writers write about in the sporting pages that makes a man a bug quicker nor makes a bug a man quicker. It's the same. Golf is the game called golf. I know. I been caddying here at the Crescent Club for seven years. I'm going to be a pro and in about three years them caddying chaps like Sweetser and Ey-ans will have a fine time getting set, but finally he taps the ball and she rolls pretty as you please to the hole and drops in. Kerplunk!

ain't no sense to that as any real "pro" knows, but these amateurs they always develop what they call their individuality. I'll say they got individuality! I ain't been caddying 'round here for three years for nothing.

He lines up that putt and he tries again. He don't find his stance secure on that polished floor at first and he has considerable time getting set, but finally he taps the ball and she rolls pretty as you please to the hole and drops in. Kerplunk!

Now, Larry didn't figure on what that putt meant to him or maybe he'd never made it. It's like that, if you knew where you was going, sometimes you wouldn't start. There's a roar from below like Brown's red ball is loose.

"What the ——" with dashes, as I always see them sport writers use, though why I can't tell when they're writing about golf.

The ball had gone straight down through that ceiling and kersplash into the vegetable soup Hennery Hicks was having for his lunch that day. Hennery is a terrible tempered man and he grabs a shotgun and fires through the floor. The shot hits a pipe from, which load hits the tub of hard-ened water which rises like a geyser and hits the ceiling, comes down again and it crashes through the ceiling and submerges Hennery.

Larry doesn't wait at all to see the result. When a man wants to play golf nothing but sciatica rheumatism or high water can bring him back

A BOUT SWEET CLOVER

Hints Regarding the Cutting, Curing and Siloing.

Should Be Cut Before Blooming—In Filling the Silo Tramp Well—Some Farmers Recommend the Use of Salt—Old Dobbin Starts a March on the Tractor.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

Sweet clover should be cut for hay in the green eagy state just before blooming. If cut for hay great care should be taken to properly cure it. It would seem that the best method is to cut it in the field and dry it thoroughly before drawing it to the barn. Wet, damp or poorly-cured hay provides ideal conditions for the development of mould.

As sweet clover hay is difficult to cure under the best conditions a very good means of preserving it would seem to be in the form of silage. The experience of the last few years, however, has revealed the fact that certain precautions are necessary in making silage if it is to remain sweet in the silo green, succulent, and free from mould.

When to Cut for Silage.

Sweet clover for silage should be cut at the same time as for hay, i.e., just before blooming. The blade should be tallowed as closely as possible with the waggons and the sweet clover put into the silo at once. It should not be left lying on the ground for even a day, especially during hot, dry weather, for the part of the cutting bar should be set to cut the sweet clover as fine as possible. If for any reason the feed seems dry a stream of water should be run into the water box, for it is essential to have the sweet clover well moistened so that it can be well packed in the silo.

Clover Should Be Carefully Tramped.

One of the most important steps in the making of good silage is that of seeing that it is spread evenly and tramped thoroughly in the corners. Seventy-five per cent. of the failures in making first-class silage last year were due to insufficient packing. "At least two men—preferably more—are necessary to properly tramp sweet clover in the silo. Great care should be taken to see that it is in the country this spring, and it was not always in vain to the number of men in the silo. One farmer said he had two men in his silo while it was being filled last summer, and he could not explain why one half of his silage was rotten from the top to the bottom, and that on the opposite side from the blower pipe. The condition was easily explained, however, when it was realized that the two men had stood on either side of where the cut was blown in, and had simply forked it over to the other side before tramping at all. Because sweet clover has a fluffy stem and has not the weight that cut corn has it requires to be packed more firmly to prevent the development of mould.

Some Farmers Recommend the Use of Salt.

The use of salt either in curing the hay or in the silo is strongly recommended by some farmers, and if the sweet clover is not being handled under the most favorable conditions it would probably help in curing the fodder.

In conclusion, it may be well to sum up the four important steps that must be followed if the sweet clover is going to be ensilaged in the best possible manner:

(1) It should be cut before blooming.

(2) It should not be allowed to lie in the field after being cut.

(3) It should not be cut fine.

(4) It should be tramped well.—Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph.

Old Dobbin Starts March on Tractor.

"Tractor manufacturers and horse breeders associations may make what relative merits of tractors and horses as sources of farm power with all the eloquence of which they are capable," declares G. A. Pond, in charge of the cost accounting section of Minnesota University Farm, "but the farmer who has both available keeps his eye steadfastly on the relative prices of tractor fuel and oats and acts upon his power supply accordingly."

Recently summarized data collected showed but 298 hours of use per tractor in 1921 as compared with 415 hours the year previous, a decrease of 28 per cent. The use of horse labor, on the other hand, increased an average of 610 hours per farm during the same period.

The fact that tractor fuel declined only 19 per cent. in price while horse feed decreased 55 per cent. partly explains the change.

In the Orchard.

The foliage of stone fruits, as cherry, plum, and peach, if on the whole quite tender, and the usual bug sprays should be employed with caution. Arsenate of lead is least likely to do harm, though more than two applications, especially in peach, may cause shothollig, dropping of leaves, and burning of fruit.

The care of the home orchard provides for spare time occupation and profitable occupation for those who enjoy seeing things grow.

Important In Chicken Yard.

The health of our family depends largely upon the kind of feed that is given them and the way it is served. It is just as important to feed right in the chicken yard; there the right kind of feed and see that it is not tainted in any way.

THORNTON'S CHANCES OF SUCCESS

The great problems and the great danger that will face Sir Henry Thornton when he takes over Canada's Government Railway System, are outlined by Bernard D. Dunn in the current issue of Maclean's Magazine:

"The management must get greater efficiency from the employees and must restrict the increase in their number in future periods of large business and more liberally reduce their number in periods of bad business than it has in the past. In 1919 the traffic of the Canadian railways declined. The Canadian Pacific reduced the number of its employees by 2,988. The Canadians Northern, under government management, increased the number of its employes by 8,953. Statistics illustrating the same point can be given for railways of the United States. There was a decline of traffic in this country in 1919. The railways were under government operation, and the number of employees increased 72,000. In 1921 the railways of the United States had been returned to private operation. There was a heavy decline of traffic and the number of railway employees was reduced over 200,000. It was only by such considerable reduction that the railways of the United States were saved from almost universal bankruptcy."

Mr. Dunn is recognized as one of the first authorities in railway problems on this continent. As Editor-in-Chief of Railway Age he has a wide reputation in continent wide, and his judgment is regarded as thoroughly sound. Mr. Dunn says:

"The deficit of the Canadian government railways cannot be wiped out, however, merely by increasing the efficiency and economy with which the lines are managed. No matter how efficiently and economically expenses may be reduced, deficits will continue to be incurred unless the railways are allowed to adjust their rates sufficiently to offset what the traffic will bear, and to charge enough rates to cover not only all operating expenses but also interest on the entire investment in the railways.

"While railway rates in both the United States and Canada are higher than they were before the war, it is easily demonstrable that they are too low in proportion to the expenses of most railways. This is conspicuously true of the government railways of Canada. If their rates and operating expences bore a reasonable relationship to each other they would not be incurring the large deficits they are. Nevertheless, in both the United States and Canada there is a strong demand, especially from the western farmers, for reductions of freight rates. Railway rates in Canada are regulated by a board of railway commissioners. If Sir Henry Thornton opposes reductions of rates which he thinks will result in large deficits continuing to be incurred indefinitely, will he be able to get the support from the government necessary to make his opposition successful?

"Is it not singular there are so many men, even including many business men, who cannot see, or refuse to see, that if the railway rates are not sufficient enough to cover operating expenses and interest on the entire investment in a government system of railways a deficit must be incurred which must be paid from taxes, and that a given amount collected in taxes imposes just as heavy a burden upon and tends just as strongly to hinder the development of the industry and commerce of a country as the same amount collected in railway rates. Furthermore, when the entire cost of furnishing railway service is covered by the rates, those who receive the service pay for it; while when the rates are not made high enough to cover the entire cost of the service, those who get the service pay only part of it, and the rest being paid by the taxpayer. It is plainly inequitable to give railway service to some persons for less than the cost of furnishing it, and then force others who do not receive it to make up the difference in taxes. Furthermore, when the business principle of making railway rates and consequently expenses and fixed charges is departed from, the door is left wide open for every kind of inefficiency and extravagance, the burden of which falls upon the taxpayer.

"The government-owned railways of Canada are incurring a deficit which, measured by the population and wealth of the country, is enormous, and that imposes a burden on the taxpayers which would be minimized were it called less than vast and almost unsupportable. He must, if his work is to be successful, conceive and carry out means of reducing and finally stopping out this deficit. He must do this in the face of a growing demand in both the United States and Canada for the reduction from the high levels reached during the war of railway rates, especially on freight, and particularly on agricultural products.

"The most important question that remains to be settled regarding Sir Henry Thornton's work as chairman of the Canadian governmental railways is whether he will, or even can, be given freedom and authority to manage them in practically the same way that he would manage them if they were owned by a private company and he were its president. If he is given this measure of freedom of action and authority he may succeed in time in accomplishing some real improvement in their physical condition, operating efficiency and financial results as was achieved in recent years by Harriman, Ripley and Hill on the Union Pacific, the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe, the Southern Pacific and other western railways in the United States. It he does succeed in doing this he will confer great benefits upon the people of Canada which the imagination cannot now even estimate. On the other hand, if he is hampered and mistaken public sentiment causes political influences to interfere with what he may think are correct economies, maintain rates and carry out other policies essential to establishing a business-like relationship between the expenses and the earnings of the government railways, his work will not be successful; and the responsibility for its failure, as well as the losses which will have to be paid because of it, inevitably will fall upon the people of Canada."

Editor's Note:—Sir Henry Thornton's success is problematical and we cannot, therefore be any too sure of same, inasmuch as he has had no previous railway experience in regard to the Canadian roads. He has a tremendous task and the citizens of the country should diligently follow his moves and study his policy. The Government should realize their great responsibility in this all important matter, but with Hon. Mr. Meighen in the role of leader it will safely be assured that the least detail will not be overlooked in the exactions of government policy, constructive or otherwise.

MEXICO OBJECTS TO UNCOMPLIMENTARY FILMS

Mexico City, Nov. 30.—The Mexican is "bad man," he is usually depicted in motion pictures made in the United States, it is to be hoped that Mexico will be barred from this country by presidential order.

The wide-sombreroed villain, adorned with no less than six guns and as many knives, who commits all sorts of atrocities and is rescued between reels by a Mexican bandit, is not only not typical of Mexico, but is an insult, according to officials here. Before long it has been decided to bar all films of this offending nature, and picture houses showing those already in the country will be subjected to a heavy fine.

FAREWELL PERFORMANCE OF REX STOCK COMPANY

A play of such international fame as Mr. Cyril Maude's "Grumpy," leaves little to be said as far as the play itself goes. It is so well known and was such a tremendous hit, that few of us are not familiar with it. "Grumpy" has been selected as the farewell vehicle of the popular Rex Stock Company, who close their Belleville engagement, Tuesday night, appearing only Monday and Tuesday night, after a record breaking engagement of thirty-one weeks in Belleville.

It is said that those in "The Know" that the Rex Company will give a wonderful performance of this great mystery play. Those who remember "Rex" as "Judge" Brewster in "The Third Degree," can rest assured of a real per formance of Grumpy, old Mr. Bullivant. It has been said that Rex's real forte is character acting, and he himself says that his favorite parts have been old characters, our Bill Yale as Braddock, Grumpy's faithful old friend, will one appear in one of those roles we all love him in. Zana Vaughn will appear as the winsome and lovable Virginia, and Howard Brown and Billy Seymour in respectively important parts.

When it comes to mystery and creeps, Grumpy nearly out "Bats" the "Bat." The shadow on the window. The hand slipping through the door. The struggle in the dark with the unseen foe would smack of nerve dreams if it were not in such a high class comedy-drama.

Refined vaudeville specialties, will as usual, be presented between acts.

WOMEN WARNED AGAINST DYE IN CHEAP FURS

London, Nov. 30.—A warning has been issued by the London health institutions to women to guard against wearing cheap furs, quantities of which recently have been brought into England.

Many women who have purchased fur coats have found themselves suddenly afflicted with a skin rash about the chin and neck. The disease is similar to that which appeared in Belgium in 1913 and last year Copenhagen, and which was traced to the dyes used in furs.

RAINS

Some rains there are that comfort send
To fields
That out unsewn and doubles and fears
Slowly;
Some rains are silver wires that sing
And day,
And some are tapping fingers, then and
Some rains race by, staccato-like and gay,
As steps of youth that dance before the old.

And there's the rain that creeps in from the sea,
Winding its thin grey scarves with usual care
About each tumbled weed and shabby tree;
But, oh, when teasing April spreads her snare
Of tangled threads of silver rain and sun,
Most of bright winged dreams we had and fled—
Drawn by the foolish magic she has spun.

And caught and held within her spangled web,

TRAINING A HUSBAND

By RICHARD BOWLAND KIMBALL

(In "Modern Priscilla")

I have been wondering lately how much a husband ought to know about his home—about the things on which his home is run and the actual, practical details of running it. It is an important question, and a most interesting one, and it even has its humorous aspects.

I freely admit that a husband with an apron round him, helping his wife dry the dishes, is somewhat of a humorous object. But I like wife enough to see that she does the apron round his waist, and she is also apt to give him a kiss on the back of the head for helping her; that is, if he does it from the heart out, with a spirit of good will and helpfulness.

Fellow husbands, don't hate me when I say that we husbands ought to know a good deal about the way our homes are run and do a good deal, too, to help our wives run them. Let me hasten to add that all such sound psychologic reasons for saying this, it is an established fact that the more we know about each subject, the more interested we are in it. The greatest source of boredom in life is ignorance.

Little trouble to learn about our home and the running of it, our knowledge will repay us a hundredfold in increased interest.

I know wives will agree with me when I say that husbands are a good deal like children. There is something about almost every husband, about his awkwardness and his helplessness if he help in every way he can. Many times has the wife feared that he may break a cherished article in drying it; not more than that, she wishes him to be comfortable and happy.

"Never mind, dear! Let me do it. You must be tired," she says. The result is that the husband loses interest in helping her. He reclines on his masculine back and begins to think how tired he is—for that is the idea she has implanted in his mind—and before long he falls asleep in that and when he has to help her, it comes hard, like a duty, instead of easily and happily, like an opportunity.

With cooperation on the husband's part, there will be less danger of a sense of separation, as if the husband were a stranger in his own home; for the home, to be successful, must represent a unity of purpose in both husband and wife. Unity is a word to conjure with, almost a magic word; and without it there can be no successful home. But unity is not enough. A home, to be alive, must be a little like life; and life is not only ample to us of diversity in unity, or variety in routine. Therefore, I believe that every wife and every husband ought to respect each other's personality and give it a chance to grow.

NEW KERRIGAN PICTURE BRIMFUL OF ACTION

To lovers of excitement and adventure, "The Coast of Opportunity," featuring Jack Kerrigan, which began a three-day's showing at the Regent Theatre yesterday, will offer entertainment of a very satisfying quality.

The story centres around Dick Brisbane, a young mining engineer, who has been left a copper claim in Mexico. The mine surrounding his claim is controlled by Senor Ramon, the mine's railway magnate, who suspects the value of the property and hires a bar-room adventurer to kidnap the owner and hold him prisoner until the option expires. Bristow eludes his captors on the last day of the option, rides to town and, with the aid of a resourceful young girl, forces them to accept a cash bargain.

"Handsome Jack" Kerrigan is seen to advantage as the lovable Dick Bristow.

A new Vodevil Movies, a interesting Kinogram, and a good comedy titled "Shipwrecked" are being exhibited on the same program.

YOUNG WOMEN WHO SUFFER

Letter Points Way Towards Relief — Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Toronto, Ontario.—"I suffered from the time I was a schoolgirl and had taken many medicines with you in my left side and with cramps and everything worse each year until I was all run down. I was so bad at times that I was unfit for work. I tried several patent medicines and was only relieved for a short time. Some of the doctors wanted to have an operation but my father objected. Finally I learned through a friend of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Tablets and tried it. I am relieved from pain and cramps and feel fine. I am saving my life. You may use my letter to help other women as I am glad to recommend the medicine."—Miss M. Goodman, 14 Rochdale Ave., Toronto, Ontario.

NEW ANGLE TO TRIANGLE IN "STORM"

Powerful Photoplay Scores Big Hit at Premier Here Last Night

Something new in eternal triangle situations is revealed in "The Storm," photoplay of Universal-Jewel attraction, which had its local premier at Griffin's Theatre last night. It will be recalled that the stage version of Langdon McCormick's play took New York off its feet, and was wildly acclaimed as one of the dramatic events of a decade. One has no hesitancy in similarly commending the screen version.

"The Storm" is a story of two men and a woman snowbound in the fastness of far north mountains for four months. One of the men hates woman because he had never met any. He greets the girl, arrival with open gear. The other knows the sex from scores of affairs in London. He has hidden himself away in the mountains to escape all women. But with the week both men decide this particular girl is the most desirable person in the world.

The picture was made under the direction of Reginald Barker, producer of "The Old Nest" and other famous successes, but it is doubtful if any of his earlier efforts can be compared with "The Storm." It will remain at Griffin's Theatre for the balance of the week.

LINKED LIVES

By

D. Kinmount Roy

'No,' said Reginald Hardcastle, joining them; 'she is neither mermaid nor fairy, but a lady of extraordinary charm, all that's true, a lady of distinction, I say.'

'Softly, softly, my son,' said the Professor, 'no one is contradicting you. You have seen this paragon, and can speak, perhaps, from personal observation, but some of us have been a long minute,' and the old man's eyes rested upon his son with a strange, questioning anxiety.

'She was—' began the young fellow, she was—but what use talking?' he added, stopping suddenly, and turning away with a quick gesture of impatience.

'That's right, Reginald,' said Politmore, joining him, 'just what I would do myself! Keep the picture to yourself—it would never do to catalogue the fine points of a divinity.'

'I believe we'll quarrel yet!' said Reginald, turning savagely upon his friend.

'Oh, no, we won't,' answered Politmore suavely, passing his arm through his friend's, and giving it a friendly pressure. 'We'll keep our own council, Reginald, instead, and find the lady.'

'By Jove, you are right!' the young man replied, gratefully, with a new light upon his face, as they slipped quietly from the room.

'Your son feels it quite keenly,' remarked Mrs. Atherton, 'and how impetuous he is! I love to see him so—I love to see a young man impetuous and unsolidifying—all that comes later! But really you know, between ourselves, it is all very interesting, very romantic and himself and in the country too, where people are so good, so unsophisticated—and so dull! But tell me, Professor, really such a true, island and all!'

'What do you mean, madam?' the Squire asked, a trifle stiffly.

'Well, you have not got it up like a play, you understand, just to amuse us?'

'I? Oh, no! I assure you it is quite real, the person is gone, quite gone, no doubt about it.' The Squire spoke with conviction, nevertheless Mrs. Atherton declared it was highly diverting, most exciting—quite unlike the country!

Just then the sound of rapid hoof-beats roused every one. There's news,' remarked one of the guests.

'Newt' echoed the Squire, with a tense eagerness in his tone, as he moved to the door. Sir Hugh Polworth was announced.

Sir Hugh, a neighbouring magistrate, had ridden over to bring news himself. The carriage had been tracked for many miles, and had then been lost again, but it transpired that they had made for the coast, where a schooner had been cruising for several days, and boarding her, the wind serving, they were soon safe from pursuit.It had been noticed that there were more than one lady in the party, but accounts were so conflicting that how many there were could not be ascertained' It was also reported that one of the men seemed to be in a helpless condition and was taken on board with difficulty. Beyond these facts, if facts they were, nothing could be discovered.

Sir Hugh's opinion was that after reporting the occurrence to the proper authorities nothing more could be done locally.

What could be the motive for such an abduction? someone asked. 'Ah! there lies the mystery of the case,' Sir Hugh answered; 'when the grandmother of the child was seen today she could throw no light on it. They lived very quietly, even for persons in their humble circumstance, and had few friends or acquaintances coming or going. Several weeks ago an artist came into the neighborhood, accompanied by some French relatives, and her grand-daughter became acquainted with the mto some extent. They left, it seems, about the time of this affair.' An evil-looking fellow, who was suspected of having been selling small wares and curios, but in certain he left before this outrage was perpetrated. The grandmother reminded me that some twenty years ago a crime of an even worse description was committed in the same locality and criminals have not to this hour been brought to justice.'

'Are we ever likely to hear more of this affair,' remarked the Squire; 'people are so stupid that the bolder the crime the less the chance of detection.'

'It is most unfortunate,' observed Sir Hugh, with a shrug, 'every mystery is so unpleasant for every one in the country, as it is in the nature of a recollection on our nervous system. If we could only get at the motive,' he continued, 'I am satisfied we could run down the offender wherever he is!'

'But that is just what cannot be got at,' put in the Squire, 'and without it we can do nothing.'

'True, true, Hardcastle—quite true; but Jack Deel McLean, this poor girl's grandmother, and every possible thing, and gave it as her solemn conviction that both victims would be brought to light and the wretches convened brought to justice. She is a sort of religious mystic, I judge, and spoke with a fervour and elevation of thought not common in her condition of life. Confess to having been much moved.'

'I would not let the visionary ramblings of a half crazed creature like that have so much influence on you, Jack,' she actually saw what she described, and was inspired like an ancient prophetess to declare vengeance. It really was most extraordinary and impressive. I wish you could have heard it.'

Someone touched the piano—perhaps it was Miss Skidmore—and the tension of the last half-hour was broken, to the relief of every one.

The Short Story Jr.

THE NIGHT AFTER

Eric walked down past the barn-yard. He was enjoying his Thanksgiving visit to his uncle's farm so much, for everything about the farm was new to him.

He opened the gate and wandered into the enclosure. His uncle had given him some feed to bring to the chickens, and this he scattered, enjoying the way the silly things rushed about. Out of one of the poultry houses stepped a stately pullet, its brown and feathers gleaming in the sun.

"My goodness, what a large turkey!" exclaimed Eric. "It looks as big as the aldo of a house." He backed off, as to his surprise, another enormous turkey came out. "Well, this is funny! I thought Uncle Ralph said he'd sold all his turkeys, except the ones we had for dinner today."

He started for the gate, but the two turkeys headed him off, waving their wings back and forth in a menacing manner. Then, to his horror, three other turkeys came out and joined the first ones. It seemed to him that they grew larger and larger as he looked at them.

"Shoo! shoo! shoo!" said the first one, looking at Eric with a wickedly twinkling eye.

"Exactly," nodded the second gravely.

"I speak for a leg," clamored the third, crowding closer.

"Well, I don't want the neck, that's certain," stated the fourth grumpily, "I'm much too the wings," chimed in the fifth.

"Hey, you let me out of here," cried Eric, looking in terror at the revatched monsters, standing in a circle about him. He tried a dash for the gate, but they hemmed him in.

"Pat enough," declared the first one.

"With cranberry sauce!" gobbled the second.

"Dressing!" sibled the third.

"Done past right!" exclaimed the fourth, flapping his wings.

Then, with one accord the fifth.

Closer they crowded, until he felt half smothered. "Eric," called his

AMBROSE SMALL'S ESTATE AT OSGOODE HALL

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Nov. 30.—Orders of the Master in Chambers, under which Mrs. Ambrose Small received $250,000 and her maintenance allowance of $30,000 a year from the estate of her husband, who has been missing for several years, was set aside today by Chief Justice R. M. Meredith, sitting in Osgoode Hall and on the motion to an estate committee was directed.

COMPROMISE EFFECTED

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Montreal, Nov. 30.—It was learned today that a compromise in the question of wage reductions has been effected between the Grand Trunk Railway and a thousand of its employees, including clerks, freight handlers, station men and other classes of workers, covered by the Canadian Brotherhood of Railroad and Steamship Clerks. The cuts you have range from three to five cents an hour.

THE SORE SHOULDER

Ill-fitting Collars Cause Much Suffering to Horses.

Shoulder Galls Are Developed—Soaking the Collar in Water Helps to Reshape It—Method from the Gallic Russian Fly Control.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

A collar that does not fit the horse's neck and shoulder perfectly may be the cause of considerable suffering to the animal through sore necks, galling, and blistering. Hundreds of horses suffer each year, more especially during the period of harvest, whether, when the work on the land is pressing.

Poor Collars Cause Shoulder Galls.

Shoulder galls develop largely through the use of collars that do not fit properly, through the draft being too high or too low, through neglect on the part of the driver to keep both collar and shoulder clean. When a teamster develops a blistered heel or a sore toe the necessity of adjustment is fully and painfully apparent to him, so he fusses around and adjusts the boot or his foot to get relief for himself. A humane and thoughtful driver will do the same for his horses; but—unfortunately there are many drivers who neglect to give their horses all the attention that a working animal is entitled to. Collars may fit the horse's shoulders in the spring when the animal is in good condition, but the shrinkage of flesh due to the hard work of several months may leave the horse with a collar much too large. The collar that is too large or not of the correct shape is bound to cause trouble. Sore neck, sore shoulders or unnecessary pain that may develop inflammation or other bad habits or reduce the efficiency of the horse, should be avoided.

A Horse's Hair Is Done From the Shoulder.

The work that the horse has to perform is done from the shoulder, so it is very important that extreme care be given the fitting and adjustment of the collar. The new collar is generally so hard and stiff that it is difficult to mould it to the shape of the horse's neck and shoulder without soaking it in water over night. After soaking the collar of the proper size three inches of water, face down until well wet, it may be placed on the horse. The hame straps should be adjusted to draw the collar far enough to the neck. The collar in its softened condition will press into shape to fit the horse's shoulder. Be sure of the adjustment of the hames and draft. Work the horse only moderately the first few days while the shoulders are "hardening" and becoming used to the collar. Frequent airing and bathing to cool the shoulder and remove sweat and dust are very essential in preventing shoulder troubles.

Dealing With Mis-shapen Shoulders.

Horses that have mis-shapen shoulders can only be given relief by being fitted with a collar or collar pad made to suit the requirements of a special case. An hour's work on a collar pad will be tried and tested in the hands of a humane teamster will save a faithful horse much pain. If your horse is suffering from shoulder galls, adjust the draft or make a new collar or collar pad so as to remove the pressure at the point of the sore. The horse's shoulder should not be washed during the day when at heavy work, especially during hot weather. Bath with salt water each evening, and the galls will with a dusting of zinc oxide. If the horse be fortunate to have the use of a good driver or teamster it is not likely to suffer from shoulder trouble very long. Remember, the horse cannot speak and must suffer in pain; it is up to you who are responsible for the horse's welfare to give the working comfort that a faithful slave is entitled to enjoy.

RUSSIAN FLY CONTROL

Is Found Best Effected by the Late Planting of Wheat.

The late planting of wheat is generally recognized as being the most effective protection for Russian fly control. Land for wheat should be prepared early, at least six weeks before seeding, in order that a firm seed bed with loose soil to cover and to provide ample covering when the seeding is done. Late in September harrow strips should be seeded around the field at least one rod wide and cultivated in the spring with the seeding of the crop. For the purpose of attracting any Hessian flies that may be present, and which can be condemned for egg laying. Between the 15th and 20th of October harrow egg-catching strips should be ploughed, well in and thoroughly re-worked and seeded. Lands that are in good condition will withstand Hessian fly attacks much better than poor ill-prepared soils, and it is the fact, that a weakened plant can make good recovery if well nourished. For preventive late seeding is justified if possible, and seed as late as you can expect to get a crop. Fall ploughing is best for wintering.—L. Stevenson, Sec., Dept. of Agriculture, Toronto.

Costly House for Poultry.

An extensive and costly house for the poultry does not necessarily mean that the poultry stock kept thereon is any better than the average. In many places we find that the money invested in many of his houses and surroundings than he is in the stock of poultry.

The man who loses his temper and abuses the animals has no right to have live stock under his care.

A garden that produces only one crop and idles away half of the growing season does only half of its duty.

SOY BEANS IN ONTARIO

Its Seed Production Here Is Yet Rather Uncertain.

The Crop Is Good for Hay, Pasture, Silage or Seed—Breeding Plants for Selection—Systematic Field Arrangement—Marl.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

Soy beans can be successfully grown for fodder in Southwestern Ontario and in the Niagara Peninsula, and in favored areas even farther north. The production of seed of the Soy bean in Ontario is a more uncertain problem. In good seasons, first-class seed of a number of varieties have been produced at Guelph, and in poor seasons no matured seed was obtained from any variety.—Seed Inoculation Necessary.

Soy beans are very rich in albuminous, the seed having a higher percentage of protein than either cotton beans or field peas. This plant is a legume, and when planted for the first time should be inoculated with the proper nitrogen fixing bacteria. The Soy bean has various uses, the whole crop being grown for hay, pasture, silage, or green manure, and the seed for stock feed. In the Orient, it is largely grown not only for stock feed, but to an even larger extent for human consumption.

For Hay, Silage, Pasture or Seed.

Soy beans have been grown for fodder and seed production in various experimental plots at Guelph since 1894, and have been distributed through the medium of the Experimental Union to farmers of Ontario each year for the past twenty-three years. During the past five years, the most promising varieties under test at Guelph have been: (1) O. A. C. No. 211, Ito San, Minnesota No. 167, Early Brown and Early Yellow.

Seed Crop Not Too Much Preferred.

A sandy loam soil not too rich is suitable for growing Soy beans. The seed-bed preparation for Soy beans should be much the same as for Indian corn and they should be planted about the same time. Soy beans are usually protected from weeds when planted in drills which are about thirty inches apart, that treatment. It requires three-quarters to one bushel of seed per acre to sow, and about one and one-half bushels to plant the same area for fodder production.

Producing Plants for Selection.

A number of plant-breeding selections are under test at Guelph, and it is hoped that before long we shall be produced which will be early enough to mature seed over the land, and, at the same time, produce a good yield of green fodder. The best strains grown at Guelph in the O. A. C. No. 211. This strain was distributed in 1921 to the Essex Experimental Union, Co-operative Experiment, material for which will be sent to any Ontario farmer who desires to test this crop in his district of 1923.—Dept. of Field Husbandry, O. A. C., Guelph.

Systematic Field Arrangement.

Many an old farm has waste land, unproductive pastures, irregular field and fence lines and rundown soil, but still the proprietor does not become a bankrupt. In fact, farm gives and keeps lodging, and if an early homesteaded area it may be quite a good earning farm. When three old farms come into the ownership of young and progressive men, they chased at a price in keeping with the present land values, reconstruction must be affected. The reorganization of the farms will mean a general cleaning up of fields, fences, buildings and roads. Some buildings will have to be moved to conform with the new farm area to conform with the modern and necessary lay-out plan with a systematic field arrangement of fields, straight fence lines, drained areas, and buildings in the new yard, so different from the half century or more arrangement of fields as were about old farm homes. Old farms are not modernized or made over in a year. Time is required to clear the fence lines of bushes and trees, to drain the fields, to rebuild the fences and to repair the buildings. The present day investment requires that every foot of land should be productive. The field arrangement and general farm plan should be worked out before the first fence post is put in the highway.—L. Stevenson, Toronto.

Marl.

Marl is a mixture of disintegrated limestone and clay, containing lime, magnesia, phosphorus and potassium. There is no better fertilizer than marl for clay loams and marl, and it is surprising that more farmers do not make use of this material on many farms. Small marl beds are found in many districts of Ontario, and this material can usually be obtained for the labor of excavating. Farm labor and teams might be used to advantage during the spring during the summer and autumn period getting out marl for future use. Marl should be crushed or finely divided marl can be directly applied to the land at any season of the year. —L. Stevenson.

Pure-Bred Makes Best Gain.

The grade hog is more profitable than the scrub or the pure-bred is more profitable than the grade. The pure-bred gains weight faster on the same feed than either the grade or the scrub and finishes so much better for the market that it invariably commands a much better price.

The bigger a hog can make of himself the more profitable he is.

IRON AND STEEL MARKETS

In its summary of the iron, steel, metal and machinery markets, Canadian Manufacturing, published at Toronto, makes the following comment in its Nov. 30th issue:

Production of steel ingots according to advices from Pittsburgh, is on a basis of 72 to 80 per cent. the highest rate since October, 1920. The fact that emerges from the present situation is that since Oct. 1, steel production has been at a rate 15 per cent. above the average rate in the six months preceding. Stocks were decidedly low at the beginning of that period. Consumption could not have exceeded production, and it is evident, therefore, that it must be at least 15 per cent. heavier. This is a great point to consider in connection with industrial reviews suggesting that business is getting worse and will continue to do so. There is some opinion that the inflationary period has not been entirely dissolved.

November's record in Canadian markets has been one of steady demand, although orders have not been remarkable for size. Slight improvement is reported and some of the outstanding orders on plate and structural steel are being cleaned up. Railroads are buying materials for car repairs, and just what Sir Henry Thornton's arrival will mean to the Canadian steel industry is at present a topic of interest among those who are inclined to be speculative. His approval, it is understood, is all that is necessary in order to set in motion rolling stock orders that have been hanging fire. To bring the national railroads to the highest standard of efficiency, it is evident that a very considerable sum of money will be spent, and Sir Henry is the man supposed to have the first and last word to say in the loosening-up process.

It is to be expected that some readjustment of sheet and tin plates would be announced by the Steel Corporation on the first quarter of 1922, but no advance has been made. It is evident that the last unsuccessful attempt to

BELLEVILLE BOY IN TROUBLE

Entered G.T.R. Station at Omemee, Also One Residence

Omemee, Nov. 29.—Many stories have been related and no little excitement has been caused by a youth of about 16 years of age, who claims his name is Elliott, and that his home is in Belleville. Sometime, after midnight on Sunday evening, he entered the G.T.R. station, after breaking a pane of glass, and took a number of railway tickets. He then proceeded down the track to the residence of Mrs. J. H. Heyes, and by ensued entrance, through the back door. Here he took so his booty, two pairs of gloves, a number and other articles, and made his escape but not without alarming the lady of the house who woke her husband, Mr. Walter Eagleton, and together they made an investigation and found he had ransacked several drawers. Eagleton tracked him in the fresh snow to Mr. Percy Race's verandah where they found him asleep with the stolen articles in his possession. He also had a number of other trinkets, a bank book containing about $40 and also $5 in cash. Mr. Eggleton took him back with him, where he returned the stolen property and afterward turned him over to the Village Bailiff, who placed him on the train, enroute for his home in Belleville.

FATAL ACCIDENT IN LUMBER CAMP

Mrs. Oscar Keitch whose home is at 83 Main street west, in this city, was this morning in receipt of a message of an exceptionally sad nature. It was to the effect that her husband had been killed in a lumber camp near the village of Bancroft. Details of the affair are meagre but it is surmised that Mr. Keitch was killed by a falling tree. The fatality occurred on Friday afternoon. The victim of the distressing accident was about 40 years of age and had resided in Belleville but a short time coming to this city from Wellington, Prince Edward County. A brotherin-law of deceased, Mr. Dallas Putman is also domiciled with the family and was in the same lumber camp. The body was today brought to the city for interment. In addition to the wife four children survive.

HALF TOWN OF TERREBONNE DESTROYED BY FIRE

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Montreal, Dec. 2.—The lower half of the town of Terrebonne, 25 miles from Montreal, was destroyed by fire last night, according to a telephone message received here this morning by the Canadian Press. The town hall post office and 78 houses are said to be destroyed, with a loss of half million dollars. The church, convent and the Jesuit Roman Catholic College are reported safe. There are four hundred people homeless, but no lives have been lost, owing to prompt confusion attended the outbreak.

The householders rushed from the burning buildings carrying with them what they could salvage. Women dragged sleighs along the muddy streets, and others tried to combat flames. The ladies of Holy Sacrament brought out the best and it was carried about the smoke filled streets while men, women and children knelt and prayed.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

The fire fighters, men and apparatus from Montreal, are present in large numbers and have examined buildings to prevent any spread of the fire to the west end of the town, although the flames are now well under control. Refugees are being cared for at College St. Louis, which was not reached by the flames.

LOCAL MARKET WELL ATTENDED

Fair Prices Obtained For All Products Offered For Sale

The attendance upon the market to-day was exceptionally large, in fact it was the largest that had been held here for some time. Much farm and garden products were offered for sale and buyers were present in numerous. There were not many changes to note in prices over those of a week ago. Butter was very plentiful, selling at 38c and 40c. per pound. Fresh eggs are somewhat of a luxury judging from the price asked, namely 63c. and 65c. per dozen. Dressed poultry especially chickens was in abundance and prices for same were fairly reasonable. Our quotations are as follows:

MR. MEIGHEN AT CARLETON PLACE

Address Two Meetings—Deals With All Active Matters

Carleton Place, Dec. 1st—The Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen addressed two meetings here tonight at one hall was not large enough to accomodate the people who wished to hear him. The meetings were held in the Cheves Friend's Hall and in the auditorium of the Town Hall. Mr. Meighen answered the questions placed by Mr. King the previous evening and gave entire satisfaction of his hearers. He dealt with the National Railways, New East, and Wheat Board and Grain Commission. The audiences were intensely enthusiastic and the riding appears to be preponderously Conservative. He will speak with in many other active questions of the day and met with a sympathetic hearing.

MR. KING AT PERTH

Perth, Dec. 1.—Declarations that the Government intended doing all in its power to give public ownership of the Canadian Railways a fair chance, criticism of the Government's attitude on the New East situation and further assurance that the Government continues to have Government in which the people would continue to be consulted, were features of the speeches of Premier King and Hon. Jacques Bureau, Conservative speeches in Lanark to-day. Right Hon. Mr. King addressed three meetings in Perth, a gathering of school children at Lanark village.

CANADIAN BACON LOSING GROUND

Thinks Grading of Hogs Would Improve Quality

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Dec. 2.—At present Canadian bacon is losing, rather than gaining ground, on the British market, Dr. J. H. Grisdale, deputy minister of Agriculture told the senior officers of Livestock Branch at a banquet here last night.

While in appearance Canadian bacon on British market is equal to that of England and Ireland, the same is considered to be below their requirements. Canada will undoubtedly restore to Canada her lost prestige on British market, he said.

TWO PANICS AT ELECTION MEETINGS

Cries of Fire Alarmed Audience at Carleton Place and Also at Perth

Carleton Place, Dec. 1.—Toward the close of the meeting which was being addressed by Hon. Arthur Meighen here tonight, fire alarm was rung in the fire hall immediately behind the rear of the auditorium in which the meeting was held. The audience heard it and became alarmed. The people rose to their feet and some of the more nervous started to move toward the exits. Mr. Meighen continued to speak until the band in the gallery began to play a cheerful air. The audience settled down and Mr. Meighen resumed his speech, remained the attention of his audience, which loudly cheered his every remark. The alarm of fire turned out, it was stated afterward, to have been caused by a short circuit due to the blowing down of an electric wire.

Perth, Ont., Dec. 1 (Canadian Press).—The crash of a fire door being blown in by the prevailing high wind, an excited rush from the "gods" and an alarming cry of fire presented a near panic at Right Hon. Mackenzie King's meeting in the Saltcreek theatre at about 10.30 tonight.

The panic lasted only for a moment, but that was long enough to send a crashing, burdling crowd of panicky men and women pouring out en masse into the narrow street. It was assured the nervous ones and re-established a calm.

At the dark of the theatre people stood densely packed, listening to the Prime Minister's statement on the New East Affairs, when above the noise of hurrying feet came a cry of "Fire!"

The Prime Minister continued speaking without interruption and waving his speaker and others on the stage remaining seated, the audience calmed down.

"MAPLEHURST" WRECK TAKES ELEVEN LIVES

Steamer a Total Loss—Captain and Officers Stay With the Ship, Upholding Traditions of the Sea—Are Kingston Men

Houghton, Mich., Dec. 2.—Latest reports of the wreck of the ill-fated steamer "Maplehurst", show that the list of drowned totals eleven, one more than was reported yesterday. Nine men were saved by the heroic efforts of Capt. Charles A. Tucker and his life saving crew. If the crew had jumped, Captain Tucker believes that all lives would have been saved. The list of drowned are:

ARMOUR DUNN, chief engineer, Kingston, Ont.

FRANK SMITH, first mate, Kingston, Ont.

J. LALANDE, mate, Valleyfield, Que.

JOHN WOOD, wheelsman, Hamilton, Ont.

HIRAM WILLARD, wheelsman, Kingston, Ont.

CARLRAD MALETTE, oiler, Cape Point, Ont.

M. MACKABRILL, fireman, Sydney, N.S.

HUGHES, steward, Montreal, Que.

C. E. PELON, deckhand, St. Zotique, Que.

L. PELON, deckhand, St. Zotique, Que.

The survivors are: Jean Duval, St. Zotique; Will Saure, St. Zotique; Frank Rodorique, Coteau; Fred Marshall, destroyed; Ms. marshall, Moorcrel; Henry Burch, Cabong; H. Duval St. Zotique; Henry Murray, Kingston, Ont.; Thomas C. Brown, Montreal.

The Maplehurst, owned by the Canadian Steamships Company, of Montreal, was bound from Lorain, Ohio, to Port William with a cargo of coal.

IS A TOTAL LOSS

Montreal, Dec. 1.—According to information supplied to the Canada Steamships Company of Montreal owners of the ill-fated Maplehurst, the vessel is a total loss, lying in twenty-five feet of water with only the top of her smokestack showing. The loss of the vessel and cargo is estimated at $200,000.

Commenting on the disaster, Thomas Plimsoll, operating manager of the Canada Steamships Company, said it was evident that Captain Menard and his officers had displayed marked by their ship aiding the crew to get to the lifeboat, but they had, following the custom of the sea, stayed with the junior officers to safety that he might notify the owners and take charge of the survivors.

KINGSTON VICTIMS

Kingston, Ont., Dec. 1.—Captain Menard, drowned in the wreck of the Maplehurst, was one of the most skilful mariners on the Great Lakes. He resided on Bigot Street. A widow and children, Chief Engineer Dunn lived at 166 William Street and is survived by his widow, four sons and two daughters. First Mate Smith was unmarried.

EXCELLENT AIMS OF Y.M.C.A

Local President Invites Investigation Into Aims of Organization

In Belleville, as in many other places, the comment is not infrequently heard that the life of the community is over-organized. An increasing number of people are inquiring as to the purposes and values of the numerous organizations they are invited to join or otherwise support; and organizations are realizing more and more the importance of subjecting themselves to critical self-analysis.

"This is a healthy tendency," said G. F. Ostrom, President, Local Y.M.C.A., in commenting upon this matter yesterday, "and it is to be hoped that it will continue, particularly as regards such organization as are intimately allied with the life of the people. The more that the public will search into the nature and work of organizations which have grown out of its own vital needs and aspirations, as the Y.M.C.A. has done, the better will the public understand its own problems and the better it will be able to serve itself through these organizations.

"There is an aspect of Y.M.C.A work on which we would greatly appreciate frank comment and help. It is this—how best to keep the emphasis clear and definite that the purpose behind every Y.M.C.A. activity is the spiritual one of helping men and boys to live the most useful lives of which they are capable.

"The platform on which the Association has stood, from its beginning as a small group of young men until its present-day world status, today, is that every young man should be given a chance for all-round development. This means development of body, mind and spirit, side by side. It believes the spirit stands a better chance with sound body and an occupied mind, and in its 75 years of history, has made of this theory an active one, that numerous organizations that look toward the training of youth have adopted this idea.

"If the Association were merely a club where at a small price men and boys could get gymnasium and athletic training, educational opportunities and healthful social contacts, it would have no opinion still be worth all the cents to any community. Were it taken out of the community, it would have left a loving, healthy memories to any community. Were it taken out of the community, it would have left a loving, healthy memories and commend service to their fellow men.

"We of the Belleville Y.M.C.A. want to serve, and want to help others serve, in that way. We want to enlist men and boys for service, in leadership and in the ranks. For we want the interpretation of our Association to be that it stands for practical religion which is indicated by its name."

DENIAL DAY AT CONFERENCE

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Lusanne,De ac. 2.—This was denial day at Lausanne. Nearly every delegation to the New East Conference handed some report or report, most of the stories denied being contained in despatches printed by Paris newspapers. The Greeks denied that money had broken out among their troops in Western Thrace. The Bulgarians denied the charges made by the Greeks that they were co-operating with the Turks in harassing the Greek army on the border of Western Thrace. The British denied that the disposition of the Mosul oil fields in Mesopotamia is or has been under consideration here.

COST PER DAY MAY BE REDUCED

This is Confidently Expected by the Management of Children's Aid Society

In connection with the report of the annual meeting of the Children's Aid Society, which appears in this issue, the treasurer's report showed that there was an indebtedness to the extent of some $1,200. The County Council owes the Society a considerable amount and when this is forthcoming the indebtedness will be wiped out and a surplus shown. It is also confidently expected that the maintenance per diem on municipalities will be reduced from $1 to 75 cents. A recommendation to this effect was received, but discussion was reserved for a few days in order that representatives of the society may meet the finance committee of the County Council in reference to an adjustment of accounts.

S. WALKER, President

WORKING CLASS HAVE FAR TO TRAVEL

Stockholm, Dec. 2.—"The working classes cannot immediately take over the management of the state," said Sweden's premier, Hjalmar Branting, quoting the words of Karl Marx after the Paris Commune, in a recent address before the Association of Swedish Young Social-Democrats in Stockholm.

"We must not forget," continued the premier, "that we have to go forward and upward and that is a long way to go. The socialist community which we shall develop will not be merely the one sketched out years ago, but it will conform to our basic ideas. The difficulties on our road have been infinitely greater than we could imagine."

Mr. Branting pointed to examples in Central Europe and Russia, to show that the working classes were not yet able readily to perform the task which had been thrown before them. "During the last ten years," he said, "we have left the stage of being a proletariat without rights, and are now on a higher plane. Thanks to increased education, it is clear that the working class is now overtaking, and in certain cases has outdistanced, the bourgeoisie as regards social and economic knowledge. We shall never allow ourselves to be fettered by private capitalism, and we shall see that the fundamental principle of socialism will not be thrown through change will take place but only through the power of decrees and orders. First of all we must shape the human material of which the new social edifice can be constructed."

A HEARTY CENTENARIAN.

St. Catharines Man Can Look Back Over Eighty Years.

Past the century mark and "still hitting on all six" is the enviable record of Daniel Plumsteel, of St. Catharines, who will be 103 on July 7th next. Mr. Plumsteel is still conscious mentis and retains in great measure the full vigor of his younger days.

The early activities of William Lyon Mackenzie, the destruction of the press and type of the Colonial Advocate of which this hot tempered Scotsman was the editor. His election to the assembly as the member for York, and his great popularity in 1834 when Mackenzie was elected the first mayor of York, when it was incorporated under the name of Toronto. The rebellion of 1837, of which Mackenzie was the leader and later his flight to the United States.

All of this and more was vividly recalled by Mr. Plumsteel, who, when interviewed, wasted no reminiscently of the affairs of eighty and ninety years ago. His lengthy memory commences with the year 1830, and his early childhood days were mentioned and the many hardships and vicissitudes suffered by the settlers in Upper Canada in those early days.

In speaking of later events he remembered very well the visit of King Edward VII., when the Prince of Wales, to Canada. It is related that on the arrival of the prince there was much controversy as whether the future ruler of the Empire should ride in the conveyance provided by the town or on the fire wagon and the civic fathers and the gallant firemen almost came to blows before the matter was finally settled. The prince rode on the fire wagon. The issuance of Canada's first postage stamp, the adoption of the decimal system of currency and the early Confederation movement were also recalled.

When interrogated regarding the Quebec Raid of 1866, the grand old man, as he is known, replied that he remembered it very well. "I did not hear of it until Sunday when I and several others from Alisburg armed ourselves and went to the scene of activities," he said. While there he remember seeing Dr. King, who had been shot in the leg, and we not being in uniform were promptly set to by Fenians and were fired upon, but they missed us." Due to the gallant efforts of the local militia their services were not required and they returned to their homes with the other volunteers.

Born at Morrisburg, near Prescott, on July 7th, 1819, Mr. Plumsteel is now 103 years old. Early in life he became connected with the shipbuilding industry and made a good ship has he built. Somewhat of a wanderer by nature he has resided in various parts of Ontario, formerly residing in Allenburg and finally settling in St. Catharines. In politics, Mr. Plumsteel is a staunch Conservative and an adherent of the Methodist Church, having missed the morning service for many years.

ALL ROADS LEAD TO KINGSTON

Many Local Rugby Fans Are in Limestone City To-day for Big Game

As early as 8.30 this morning, the long line of motor cars which left this city for Kingston, began their crusade, for the Richardson stadium being their ultimate goal. It is expected that scores from this city will be on deck when the two rival teams trot out into the playing field.

Today's attraction, as almost everyone knows is the most important rugby game in the Dominion of Canada, for today at the Limestone city, Queen's University record winners of Intercollegiate and the Eastern championship, are battling with the Edmonton-Eskimos, winners of the Western prairie championship.

Although this is the second day in December (The Xmas month) the weather is really unusually fine, and everything points to a grand finish for the past rugby season, which has been more or less of a revelation this year. Truly Queen's can no longer be termed the Tombstone City.

Latest news from Kingston informs the world that the stage is all set for the greatest battle that has ever been staged for Kingston in years and years, and a very large crowd numbering several thousands is expected to be on hand for the encounter, though it is admitted, that there will not be the big local crowd for the Eskimo game as there was for the Queen's-Varsity battle which resulted in such an overwhelming victory for the Toronto team. It is expected that seats will be provided for the Tri-Color at the game and no difficulty is anticipated in handling the large crowd. The Stadium will be decked out in all its glory today with the Queen's flags flying as well as the ballooms and national flags.

Given a good dry field, there is every confidence that Queen's will master the Westerners easily, but on a soggy field there is every drive to battle twenty-five per cent harder, and it will be a severe strain on them. Anyone who has followed Queen's know that it makes a difference with Queen's what kind of a field they are playing on, and their plays can only be worked on a dry field.

Measures have been taken to have the field in a dry condition for today's game, and it is not expected that there will be any serious drawbacks along these lines. But of the tickets are being eagerly grabbed up.

There is every confidence among Queen's supporters that the Tri-Color can win this game, despite the fact that Coach White, of the Eskimos, has stated that he did not expect Edmonton to win the Grey Cup. This appears to be a statement under a veil and Queen's are taking no chance that kind of talk as they are going on the field tomorrow knowing that they are up against a real team and they will have to the last to win or go down fighting.

All arrangements for entrance to the Richardson stadium are complete and people will know just where to go. The Queen's band will be on hand for the occasion, and the Queen's-Varsity rooting cheering squad in line also. Boo Hoo will make her last appearance before the game this fall as no local bets have been known to have been placed on the game.

C. O. LEAGUE BALL MEETING

Representative Attendance and Much Business of Interest Transacted

At the Hotel Quinte yesterday afternoon, the executive of the C. O. L. B. A., were in session, and matters of general import to Baseball were discussed. Vice President, Jack Graham, of Lindsay, was in the chair and Secretary J. G. Knott, of Oshawa, was also present. The various clubs in the league were represented by the following gentlemen: Cobourg, A. F. Allison, K. R. Barnes; Bowmanville, N. O. Patterson, R. E. Wilen; Lesbeside, W. P. Henderson; Lindsay, Fred W. Morse, M. J. Dedman, Vice-Pres.; Peterborough, Jake Solomon, Mr. Johnston; Port Hope, S. Jackson; Oshawa, J. G. Knott, Sec.; Belleville, M. P. Duff.

Communications were first read and the 2 reserve residence rule brought up for subject of discussion. A. F. Allison of Cobourg, in speaking for his club was very strongly opposed to the January date. Cobourg is a summer town and if May 1st, date was settled upon, by the league, it would be of no benefit to his club. It is a difficult matter to keep players in town as more remunerative positions are generally found for them at other points and just when the home talent is sufficiently developed to be of first-class playing value to the club, then the player decides to move to a larger locality. It has been talked to remain in the baseball but, if a team of league calibre is desired, the January rule would not appear sufficient. He was therefore opposed to abide by the decision of the league.

Mr. N. O. Patterson, of Bowmanville club, thought the January rule was to be the saviour of baseball, and as far as Bowmanville is concerned, was strongly in favor of the January meeting on the January first basis, thus defeating the moving around of the players.

The Leaside club, represented by W. P. Henderson, were stated to be in a rather peculiar position regarding the definite residence of players. Local housing accommodation was insufficient to meet the demand as there were facilities for only 300 in this rapidly growing town. Next year, however, January 1st, would apply in Leaside and special legislation should be enacted by the League to meet the situation.

Jake Solomon of Peterboro', questioned the legality of the January rule, stating the constitution to May 1st, as it would seriously conflict with the playing season in the senior finals.

M. P. Duff, of Belleville, stated that the January 1st rule is the proper thing to encourage home talent and local interest residences. The transient class of player is not wanted. Anyway, the matter was thoroughly brought before the annual meeting next year, when delegates would be instructed in the matter for the O. B. A. meeting later.

S. Jackington of Port Hope, supported Dr. Allison's stand. Those transient might just as well be ironed with themselves. Team, compelled to carry players over the winter would cause trouble ahead and he suggested that if any team using the May 1st rule relative to players, should win the permanent next season, they would be ineligible to compete in the O. B. A. finals. He was in favor of getting away from the O.B.A.A. Only a few games would be sacrificed and local conditions would be considered. The parent body of the C. O. League were blessed with as much brains as those of the O.B.A.A., and were quite capable of directing the affairs of their own league. All baseball brains are not located in Toronto, said Mr. Lockington and the Central Ontario towns should develop their own boys.

Jake Solomon of Peterborough, thought that the Central Ontario League teams should go to the finish. They should retain their players and compete in the final play-offs for the championships. It was necessary to remain in the O. B. A.

M. P. Duff, of Belleville, stated that when the local season was finished there was nothing left for the players, and the gate receipts at the finals were impossible for the treasury balance of the Belleville club.

The Lindsay and Leaside representatives were in favor of the January rule and continued affiliation with the O.B.A.A and Secretary Knott thought that the O.B.A.A. would not countenance the withdrawal of Mr. Lockington. All players in order to retain the amateur status must qualify under the residence rule. It was finally decided to abide by a previous recommendation to leave the date January 1st, and send it along to the executive for final disposition at the annual meeting.

A motion then prevailed that the annual meeting of the Central Ontario League be held at the Dunham Hotel, Cobourg, on the second Wednesday in March, at 10.30 a.m.

There was some further discussion relative to the Belleville player. Secretary Knott stated that the O.B. A.A., residence rule constitutes where the player resides, and it was up to Belleville to overcome the difficulty, but their particular grievance would be settled later on.

The Central Ontario League was stated to be in a more flourishing financial condition than ever. Immediately some of the representatives had some club financial problems to discuss, and these were satisfactorily settled. Umpire trouble had cost the League $300 last season, which, Secretary Knott stated, would not have been expended if the double umpire system had been continually used at all games. There was considerable difficulty in securing the services of capable umpires at particular times and, in some instances, clubs did not desire two officials. M. P. Duff of Belleville wanted teams to be notified previous to the game as to the services of the umpires so that arrangements could be made in plenty of time, to have the best officials on hand for the games promptly on time.

It was moved and seconded that Cobourg, Leaside and Lindsay be refunded $25, protest fees deposited and Umpire Collins of Belleville will receive $10 for his services. Motion under a general misunderstanding, the responsibility of which should be borne by the league.

M. P. Duff expressed the pleasure of the Belleville Club to the executive for the kindness and courtesy extended to those present an invitation to the banquet at 6.30pm Quinte last evening. Thanks acknowledged by Vice-President Dedman and the meeting adjourned but not before O. B. A. Secretary Knott, who evidently believes in early preparation, had given notice that Bowmanville reports the league meeting to be held there in 1924.

"FINNEGAN" HILLS JOINS PRO. COMPANY

Finnegan Hills has accepted the league "go west young man" and is leaving for over the pond in Calgary where he will try out with the Tigers of that city. The offer from the Calgary team was very flowery and Finnegan decided to take a chance in professional company. He is a valuable acquisition to the local teams, Junior and Intermediate, for many years and his loyalty to baseball and athletic enthusiasm to their feet on many occasions. His place will indeed be hard to fill and all his friends to make good in professional company.

JARVIS MAY RACE IN ENGLAND NEXT YEAR

Commodore Annilius Jarvis, owner of the "Haswell", a fine big schooner yacht, is contemplating taking her for another season cruise and will probably enter races off the English coast. There is practically no schooner sailing in the U. S. A. "Boss" Gardner will not engage in competition, worthy of the name, and in order for Mr. Jarvis to enter in such a race as the "P" boats on short, triangular courses, which do not furnish sufficient sea room and which are a thing of the past, it is a significant event for a Canadian yacht to race in British waters and outstanding ability.

If he undertakes this ocean cruise all yachtsmen will take a very keen interest in the event, but the fact remains that his yachting advice and pleasing personality will be greatly missed in the ranks of the L.Y.R.A. to be held at Belleville next season. The local followers of the sport would like to see the Haswell in water such "Haswell's" hows during this regatta.

ENGLISH COAL PRODUCTION SHOWS HEAVY DECREASE

London, Dec. 2—Coal production in England has dropped 124,000,000 tons, or about 40 per cent, since 1913. The heads of the coal exporting houses declare that the decrease in the production is not due to the lack of supply, but to the fact that the export owners are closing down entirely or partially as a means of forcing the mines to make concessions in the matter of wages and hours.

NEAR EAST CONFERENCE

Lausanne, Dec. 2nd.—The question of Turkish capitulations is on Near East Conference program for discussion today. BANQUET TENDERED TO G.T.R. TEAM

Babe Ruth Hat

Mr. Knott, of Oshawa, Secretary of the Central Ontario Baseball League, was called upon to present to Stanley Hagerman the Babe Ruth hat for making the greatest number of home runs during the season.

Mr. Stanley Hagerman conveyed his thanks for the gift which he appreciated very much.

Secretary's Address

Mr. M. Dulmage of Guelph, Secretary of the Ontario Amateur Baseball Association, expressed the pleasure he felt at being present at such a gathering, especially in Belleville his home town. The speaker referred to his connection with the O.A.B.A. and was proud of the Association. He was proud of the Belleville baseball team and the success that had crowned their efforts. He congratulated the O.A.B.A. on the splendid work of the executive in charge of the championship season. The fact that there are nearly 16,000 members of the O.A. B.A. in Ontario which is an evidence of the interest taken in the game. The Central Ontario Baseball League was considered a model in the O. A. B. A. He advised the teams in this league to encourage the boys in the towns and cities to form a chain from the junior or intermediate baseball teams from which senior players can be drawn. He was proud of the record made by the G.T.R. baseball team. Mr. Dulmage laid particular stress on the residence rule and advised all the teams in this and other leagues to adhere strictly to it. He was a firm believer generally in baseball and the interest that was manifested through out the country in the game.

K. Williams, S. Hagerman, W. Ross C. Casey and A. Weir.

Mr. Barnes congratulated the Belleville players and wished them every success in the future.

Mayor's Tribute

Mayor Ponton referred to the pleasure it was to be present, on such an occasion. The Belleville team this season won two notable victories, namely the capturing of the Central Ontario League championship and defeating the Hillcrest team. His Worship referred to the Bylaw being submitted at the municipal election for a parks commission and a money by-law to provide an athletic field. He hoped next year that Belleville would have an up-to-date baseball diamond. He had much pleasure in presenting to the members of the baseball team a complimentary season's ticket for the Station street skating rink, also an order for club bags for each member of the team, the latter the gift of the citizens.

Manager Arrow on behalf of the team accepted the gifts and expressed thanks for the same.

Brief remarks of a complimentary nature to the Belleville team were made by Mr. Craig of Peterboro, Mr. Wilen of Bowmanville, Mr. Henderson of Leaside, Mr. Morse of Lindsay, Mr. Knott of Oshawa, Mr. Allison of Cobourg and J. G. Moffat of Belleville.

Mr. M. P. Duff thanked the press for the favor for the reports given of the games also his assistance in promoting the game.

On motion of Dr. O'Callaghan, seconded by Rev. D. C. Ramsay, a vote of thanks was tendered the chairman, Mr. Graham Nolan for their assistance in making the evening's programme a success.

The successful entertaining programme was brought to a close by the singing of the National Anthem.

"THE "FAGLESS" SEASON

Here is a good tip for the youngsters who want to play hockey this winter. Make it a closed season for cigarettes. There will be hockey for all boys and a large number of players to choose from for the different teams and the youngster who is not addicted to the "fag" will have a better chance of landing a place than the chap who wastes his energy on the cigarette.

SO THEY SAY

Six men, sole survivors of a wreck, were cast upon a desert island. Were they glad? Not for some months, till a man-of-war took them off. In his log the captain of the warship noted the racial characteristics of the six thus: The two Irishmen had fought every day for the whole time of their wreckage. The two Englishmen had not spoken to each other because they should had not been properly introduced. The two Scots had started a Caledonian Society. The two Americans had formed a trust and were trying to corner the island.

PLAYS CHAMPIONSHIP TENNIS AT 52

(Canadian Press)

London, Dec. 2—England's Grand Man of Tennis, W. J. G. Ritchie, recently celebrated his 52nd birthday by passing into the finals in the London Covered Courts Lawn Tennis Championships a fine performance indeed as the entry was of a very high quality. Ritchie is one of the most wonderful veterans who have ever graced English sport.

At 56 years of age he plays tournament lawn tennis practically every day of his life and thrives on it. Some people may think that a man is too old at 40 for such a strenuous exercise but Ritchie meets and beats good players thirty years his junior and he keeps on doing it. He is slower than he was ten years ago, but a compensation is that he has the added brain of a great lawn tennis "general."

Vital, and a matchless steadiness pulls the veteran Ritchie through. He gets everything back, and works with one object, to get his opponent out of position. That accomplished, he finishes off the rally with a neat and reasonably hard shot.

NEWS NOTES FROM OTTAWA G.W.V.A

The Re-Establishment Probe

The Royal Commission appointed at the last session of Parliament to investigate G.W.V.A. charges against the Board of Pension Commissioners is the investigation of the need for further re-establishment measures for ex-soldiers, is losing no time in undertaking the second phase of its task. In response to representations by C. G. MacNeil, Dominion Secretary G.W.V.A. acting on behalf of the Dominion Veterans' Alliance, the Commission has agreed to have a representative of the Alliance present with the personnel in order to line up the evidence at the various points visited.

It was also due to representations from the veterans that the Commission decided to visit the western prairie province, Prince Edward Island excepted. Sittings will be held at Halifax, St. John, Montreal, Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary and Vancouver.

It is probably slinificance that the first matter listed in the Commission's programme is to receive suggestions as to any improvements in the methods whereby ex-service men may apply for pensions and treatment, and also in submitting appeals from pension decisions. The second matter on the provision for those who may be considered permanently as "orphan" cases. Evidence as to the present nature of existing re-establishment needs among ex-service men and dependents, will comprise the third phase, and suggestions for the disposal of canteen funds the fourth. The work of the Commission is to commence on or before January 15th and it is hoped to complete the tour of the Dominion in time to report on the various matters to the House of Commons, which, it is anticipated, will be in session at the time.

Named the G.W.V.A.

The retirement of R. R. Maxwell from the Dominion Presidency of the G.W.V.A. Veterans' Association of Canada, recalls the fact that he was the originator of the name of the association. Shortly after Mr. Maxwell returned to Winnipeg early in 1916, following his recovery from wounds received at the Second Battle of Ypres, the question of a returned soldiers' organization was discussed. It was at this stage it was taken towards the close of 1916 and the name suggested by Mr. Maxwell and adopted was the Winnipeg Great War Veterans' Association. Mr. Maxwell was elected vice-president and a few months later became president.

When the national conference of veterans was called in April, 1917, at first-class professional player.

WAS DANDURAND AFTER PUBLICITY?

Or Did He Expect Conacher To Accept the "So-Called" $5,000 Offer?

Canadians have evidently failed to lend Lionel Conacher, but just the same Senator Dandurand pulled a bunch of publicity effort when he made a liberal offer to the great Rugby star of Toronto Varsities.

The chances are that Dandurand didn't offer any $5,000—in fact, he declares he didn't—but he offered a good round sum, and perhaps it is just as well for him that Conacher turned it down. While the greatest Rugby player in Canada, Conacher is not by any means such a hockey star. While he is lasted, he would probably be a good box-office attraction, and the money invested in him returned with interest. Conacher is just as great a natural athlete, and with such great physical equipment, that he might, in fact compare favorably with a

The Wheat Market.

Winnipeg shorts were squeezed out Thursday and prices jumped 3½c per bushel. Yesterday, December wheat sold at $1.08 and opened this morning at $1.04½.

It is generally the case when a big business is left until the last day of the month, the market becomes very erratic, and this was the situation in Winnipeg.

The market on the whole, is now very quiet and the export trade in grain at Montreal shows no improvement.

Liners.

Toronto Rails is subject to severe pressure on the Toronto, Exchange. The feat of prolonged litigation and the uncertainty of the outcome of arbitration proceedings recently concluded would seem to be the factors which stimulated the selling.

Thomas Gibson, Deputy Minister of Mines, at the "Blue Sky" committee meeting at Toronto, advocated against the issuing of shares of one dollar par value. When a company is incorporated for $1,000,000 par value, a gambling counters for gambling are provided. He said there was a motive of avarice underlying the small investor to purchase securities of the wildcat variety, and complete protection of such persons from their own folly was impossible.

Sterling in New York 4.32. Raw cotton in New York 23.40c. New York funds 1-32 per cent. premium.

Oil Stock Advertising.

Charging that ninety-five per cent. of all stock advertising is false, boyant, misleading and deceptive," a national campaign against sellers of stock of fictitious oil companies was announced by the National Vitalizer Committee of Associated Advertising Clubs.

Customs revenue up in November, increased over 1921 by $6,741,795. Excise taxes largely responsible for this.

Prices of stocks off less than one point during November. Brazilian was the most active in Canadian exchanges.

COMPARISON OF QUEEN'S AND ESKIMOS

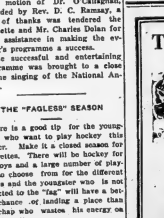

Whether heft is superior to speed in Rugby will be demonstrated by the Eskimo-Queens collision in Kingston Saturday. Queens have won the eastern Rugby honors largely through their dazzling speed on wing and backfield. Queens play an open game on the attack and more particularly on the back field, and the speed of their players makes this style highly effective.

The Westerners are strong for line plunging, following the American style of line plunging. This is but natural, as several of the Edmonton stars are from Uncle Sam's country, and their coach "Deacon" White, a typical product of the United States "smash 'em up" system. Arguments proved last year that speed on the back field was superior to sheer smashing strength of line, and Queens will probably clinch the argument this year.

The claims of those who sought to show that the present Rugby system gave precedence to weight and strength, and who based a weak sort of campaign upon the theory that the unfortunate fatal accident to Allan Arless, have been thoroughly discredited. Queens are one of the fastest teams in the east, and has won through sheer speed and smart football.

ONLY A RECOLLECTION

I remember, I remember,
Before Hughes and days of fame,
When the Queens team played good football;
But they never won a game.

The Phonograph for those who want the best—

AMONG Sonora owners are about 3,000 who have experience and knowledge especially equip them as judges of phonographs and musical people of means, who have purchased many phonographs, proved by numerous eminent favorites, who are keen critics of reproduction; noted musicians, whose whole life is devoted to the best in music—these prefer Sonora.

The reason is clear. Those who demand the best are the best judges. And in any comparison Sonora wins points for point—in the beauty of tone, in distinction of line and cabinetry, in marvellous, lasting preservation, and in patented exclusive features.

DISASTERS ON LAKE ONTARIO

Every Autumn, Lake Ontario, in common with the other Great Lakes, takes its toll of life and property. The eastern end of the lake has always been the scene of these late Autumn disasters. This is due to the fact that there is here located the widest expanse of the waters of the lake and also dangerous shores with but few harbors. All the south shore of Prince Edward County, stretching from Prinyille to the end of Long Point, is a very dangerous stretch of coast line, and there is not one harbor or anchorage, worthy of the name, in the whole length. The New York State shore line of Lake Ontario, stretching from Oswego to the mouth of the St. Lawrence, is also dangerous and has only two harbors, very close to one another, and not easy of access at all times. The result is that when coal-laden craft leave Oswego for Bay of Quinte or St. Lawrence River ports they have an open run in the lake of roundly fifty miles to make either the Upper or Lower Gaps, and somewhat less if they go to the south of Wolfe Island.

For ordinary steamers that can make a speed of from eight to ten miles the run is not at all risky. However, many things have worked together to make navigation as practised in this section of the lake, dangerous. No wooden schooners or vessels for cargo purposes have been built on the lakes for years, their cost running so high that there has been no opportunity of obtaining a return on the money invested. There would be enough business to keep a small number of vessels in operation, if coal strikes, railway embargos, car shortages, price manipulations, etc., did not enter into the calculation. All these factors cause the coal freighting business to be very uncertain, and returns from same to be more or less of a speculation. Thus no new craft have been built for forty or fifty years especially for the coal-carrying trade between Oswego and the Bay of Quinte ports of Kingston, Bath, Picton, Deseronto, Belleville and Trenton. The schooners that are engaged in this trade, are all very old. They are reasonably safe in the summer season but are not seaworthy in the autumn weather. A few steamers have been engaged in this trade, but as a rule they have been old and of a design entirely unsuited for lake work.

Now a schooner leaving Oswego with a load of coal does not put out till a favourable slant of wind having not only the right direction but also the right intensity, is obtained. The desired wind may permit her to make five or six miles an hour, and if it holds good, she gets across in, say, ten hours. Quite a change in weather conditions may occur in ten hours, and if the wind drops or changes direction the craft may be twenty-four hours on the lake. If the wind freshens and she cannot make shelter, why trouble is encountered.

When the boats were new, they could take a little dirty weather and not mind it. Today it is not a case of seamanship, it is an out and out gamble with Father Neptune and Dame Nature.

There are a large number of new steel steamers carrying coal and grain from Lake Erie ports to St. Lawrence River ports, right up until the close of navigation. These boats, comparatively speaking, rarely get into trouble, because they are steam propelled and are more seaworthy. A great deal of anthracite coal is hauled from Oswego to Montreal and rarely is one of these boats in trouble.

Just as long, however, as the old wooden sailing and steam craft operate, there will be wrecks and loss of life. Probably there have been few better sea boats on the lakes than were some of these trim sailing vessels in their prime, but their best days have gone. It needs good sailors and good bottoms to weather early autumn gales on the Great Lakes as there is no sea room, as sailors call it, to ride out a gale. There is only one thing to do, and that is to make shelter, and these old craft are not always capable of doing that.

These old boats have practically all gone out of existence and only a few are left. This means that we residents of the Bay of Quinte towns and cities will have to secure new craft if we are to receive water-borne coal from the Pennsylvania fields after a year or so. We do not secure these boats we will have to pay the price of all rail fuel.

SIGNS OF VICTORY

Col. John A. Currie, former M.P., and now provincial member elected in Southeast Toronto, has been out over the Western lines of the Canadian National Railways lately. At a meeting of South Toronto Conservatives the other evening, he reported upon the political situation as he had been able to size it up. Both the Liberal party and the Progressive group show signs of disintegration out West, in his opinion.

"They have sized up Mr. Crerar out there," he said, "and he could not be elected again in his own riding after his manipulation with the Grain Growers. He claims he left because of business, but he had to leave," said the Colonel. "Crerar has fallen and his day is done."

J. T. MacNicol was optimistic both as to the federal and Ontario situation.

"People all over the country are beginning to look forward to the sane guidance of our leaders," said, and referred in terms of high praise to the leadership of Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen.

"He was in office but a short time, and did not have a chance to show his worth," said Mr. MacNicol, "but he is a second John A. Macdonald. Sir John's shoes have not been filled since 1891, but Mr. Meighen is going to fill them. The first thing we know the administration at Ottawa is going to explode and the people will rally behind Mr. Meighen."

Mr. MacNicol also spoke highly of Hon. Howard Ferguson, and said he was the most persecuted man in the province.

"I don't know what would have happened if he had not been in Queen's Park during the last session. He stayed there day and night, and did not let the farmer group put anything over on him," said the speaker, who predicted that Mr. Ferguson would be returned to power next year.

FAIRNESS

The very best thing in our hearts is fairness. One cannot be kind, cannot be big, cannot be hopeful and helpful, unless one has fairness in his heart.

Fairness is, after all, the Golden Rule.

The unkind are usually unfair; the small are usually cheats, and the pessimists are always poisonous.

Fairness grows in importance and value exactly in the proportion that you deal it out. The more fairness you give, the more fairness is returned to you.

Humanity is really hungry for fairness. Get the reputation for fairness for fairness, and the whole world will come to you.

By dealing out fairness your financial condition will improve, and your heart will be filled with happiness, your life will be quickened, and what more can a man desire than these three things: money, pleasure and life?

It costs nothing to give fairness, and it pays in three ways—in the three big things that every red-blooded man wants: Health, Wealth and Happiness.

HERE AND THERE

BACK TO NATURE.

The millionaire of sixty looks with loosing eyes upon the poor boy eating his bun and piece of berry pie a few feet from his task engine in the factory. Too manly to shed a tear, he weeps inwardly and longs to snatch that simple repast away from the weary lad, a thousand times happier and more contented than he. The touring capitalist glances from his Rolls-Royce at the plodding farmer still plowing or sowing, though the sun is nearly set, and wishes that he might give up all the pleasures that wealth can buy and change places with the peaceful rustic. The man who lives in a city with all the comforts of modern civilisation at his elbow craves a cottage in the woods.

We have never heard of a millionaire actually trading places with the young home-made pie eater—most likely the pie came from a poor grade lunch room—nor of the country capitalist who carried out his longing to deed over to the farmer all his earthly possessions in exchange for a few acres of stony land, a leaky house and the chance to work twenty hours a day. But now and then one of the city dwellers does put into execution his constantly reiterated cry for a permanent lodge in the great wide open spaces. The old friends note the disappearance, but not infrequently his former haunts soon know him again. With as little ostentation as possible he resumes his old habits and companions. He is usually willing to talk about other subjects.

DARK AGES.

After the break-up of the Roman Empire, at the end of the fourth century, Western Europe passed into the Dark Ages, a period of ignorance and stagnation that, according to Hallam, lasted a thousand years. To explain clearly what is meant it was considered best to quote Mr. Wells—

"It is frequently said that Europe in the sixth and seventh centuries relapsed into barbarism, but that does not express the reality of the case very well. Barbarism is a social order of an elementary type, orderly within its limits; the state of Europe beneath its political fragmentation was a social disorder. Its morale was not that of a beast, but that of a slum. In a savage kraal a savage knows that he belongs to a community and lives and acts accordingly; in a slum, the individual neither knows of nor sets in relation to any greater being."

PRESS OPINIONS

WHAT IS THE SOLUTION?

(Peterboro Examiner.)

While there is nothing radically new in Hon. Charles Stewart's announced immigration policy, it will be welcomed as a change from the negative to the positive.

Instead of putting up the bars to keep people out, Canada is going out into the world to bring new citizens here, although a standard must be maintained that will keep the Dominion from becoming a dumping ground for the riff raff of Europe.

It is of the utmost importance that our population should be built up, and built up with sound, solid citizens, who will soon grasp the Canadian view-point and adapt themselves to Canadian conditions.

But as The Examiner pointed out last week, it is even more important to keep our Canadians at home and stop the tide of migration across the border.

Hon. Mr. Stewart's plans call for a campaign aimed at the repatriation of Canadians who have taken up residence in the United States.

If in that respect they are successful it would be a much finer thing for Canada than the bringing in of twice their number of new settlers.

The boys and girls who have left the land of the maple to carve out their future "across the line," would need an education given only in Canada to make them Canadians.

They would merely be coming home and what a glad home coming it would be.

Better than bringing in new citizens, better even than bringing back those we have lost, would be the keeping at home of our citizens who may be tempted to try their luck in the United States.

The problem has been with us since Confederation, and it must be confessed we have made very little progress towards its solution.

Nor does Hon. Mr. Stewart's announcement give us much ground for hope that he has found the answer.

SIR HENRY'S START.

(Toronto Telegram)

Sir Henry Thornton, fresh from the banquet halls of Britain, will enter into Canada's railway life via a banquet hall in Montreal. Sir Henry may eat his way into the confidence of the Canadian people, but there are those who doubt that he will imbibe much of the spirit of public ownership from the flow of language that will accompany the first after-dinner lawyerages of his Canadian career.

TOO MUCH GOVERNMENT

(Kingston Standard)

It is satisfactory to see that the question of too much government is attracting more and more attention in Canada. The Press is noticing it frequently, and it is a subject which needs the thought and action of the people. The Toronto Mail and Empire says that "Everyone knows that Canada is over-governed, in the sense that it has about twice as many officials in each department as it needs. Dominion, Provincial and municipal jurisdictions often overlap. Each body proceeds to build up a big indebtedness, and base taxation upon extravagant estimates. The taxation from all three sources totals into a tremendous sum, and makes the cost of living high. The indebtedness of the country is about $40 per British subject—$2,000 per family. That is, for interest on debt alone, the average family has to find about $120."

Canadian Finance puts the case neatly when it says that our Boats of governments really deal with a population about equal to that of London, England. The above figures show some of the financial results, but not all. This paper suggests that reductions should be made in government. Quite so. But, who is going to tell the ch? it is not to be expected that the legislators will partake thunderbox out of existence. It looks as if just as Canada has "too much" railways and will have to wait for the population to make them pay, so she has "too much" government and will have to wait till the population wakes up.

How to Restore Loved Ones Back to Robest Health

If a convention of all men and women who have sick relatives and friends could be united in some Canadian city, there would be a wide-awake change in the health conditions of Canada in a few weeks. It is certain that needless bodily and pill borne would go flying out sick-room windows.

It would be proved from letters of thousands of men and women in all walks of life in all walks of life, that Internal Bathing is nature's own method of curing sickness, sickness and that it is the best, safest, speediest road back to robust health.

A Belleville clergyman writes: "As self is naturally sensitive about having her name known in public print, you have my permission that others should know what the J.B.L. Cascade has done for her. It has really given her a new lease of life. She was a victim of constipation and indigestion, which became worse each year, since using the J.B.L. Cascade five, about four years ago she has not been sick a day, and has become robust and strong in appearance. She is a changed woman altogether, and is at liberty to give my name to private."

The J.B.L. Cascade is shown and explained at J. R. McKeown's, Druggist, who will give you one on request and interesting and helpful booklet by Dr. C. A. Tyrrell, M.D., C.M., entitled "The Art of Internal Bathing." It contains a surprising amount of information that the average man and woman knows little about. Write or 'phone for it today, or address Tyrrell Hygienic Institute, Bathurst St., Toronto.

JOHN ST. BAZAAR IS A SUCCESS

Interesting Displays and the Proceeds Amounts to $450

One of the most successful bazaars John Street Sunday School room yesterday. The large tables were well patronized and had been arranged with the greatest care. The large fancy work booth, in charge of Mrs. J. E. Cook, Mrs. Mac Robertson, Mrs. Fisher and Mrs. Rollins was decorated with some crepe paper and the fancy work booth, with fir cones of mauve was provided over by Mrs. Gowdy, Mrs. Hodgins, Mrs. Mills, Mrs. Thompson and Mrs. Tuite. The home-cooking booth was a very attractive sight with orange crepe paper streamer and fluffy paper cosmos. The ladies in charge of this booth were Mrs. G. Boyle, Mrs. R. Boyle, Miss C. The candy and novelty table was one of the most attractive spots of the bazaar. In color scheme was pink and it contained every conceivable kind of candy, made in fancy shapes and in pretty containers, quaint little candy "bouquets" and many other quick-selling novelties. The candy booth was in charge of Mrs. McVee and Mrs. McArthur.

In the corner of the hall stood an orange tree, on which small orange packages filled with popcorn and apples, were hung. In charge of the tree were Mrs. Bloomfield, Mrs. Deuike and Mrs. Atkins.

A very interesting feature of the bazaar was the doll booth at the back of the hall, arranged and dressed over by the young girls of Mrs. Chadwick's Sunday School class. The booth was decorated with Japanese fans, flue and green crepe paper and small artificial flower sprays. The girls, dressed pretty in Japanese costumes, sold ice cream and "could does".

HEAVY CHRISTMAS TRAVEL

Winnipeg, Dec. 1.—Traffic to Europe for Christmas this year is heavier than it has been since pre war days, according to Canadian Pacific passenger officials. An exodus of holiday travellers from western Canada bound for the old country will leave Winnipeg tomorrow morning, December 2, at nine o'clock over the Canadian Pacific lines. The railway has made special arrangements to meet the extra passenger traffic, and trains will run alongside the ships at St. John, N. B., guaranteeing connection with the company's Atlantic liners. Two special cars carrying approximately seventy passengers from points in Alberta and Manitoba, attached to the regular east bound train will leave the Winnipeg terminal Saturday and will connect with the "Maxburn" on December 5 for Liverpool and Glasgow.

CONCERT IN CITY HALL.

At the City Hall last evening a concert consisting of interesting numbers was rendered under the auspices of the Orange Lodge of this city which was largely attended. A programme of high class music was rendered by Miss Lillian Marsh, a Belleville kiddie, "Molly the Trolly", a song was given the by a group of Belleville kiddies and was heartily applauded. Miss Bernice Bleist gave a solo which was very much enjoyed. Mr. Scott and other members of the lodge also assisted in the programme. Mayor Hanna acted as chairman. A silver collection was taken up.

With the approach of the Christmas season, one hears again the old familiar slogan, "Shop Early," "only 27 shopping days till Christmas," etc. Heard every year, it perhaps becomes rather tiresome; but when the information is made, there is found to be a real reason for the advice. First of all, it ensures a good choice; and at this time, the shops are displaying a full line of holiday goods and one can spend leisurely afternoons in looking over what they have. In this way a good idea can be gained of the range of possibilities for gifts, which will come within the reach of one's purse; and which will suit the varied requirements and tastes of the recipients.

Then one will probably get more for the same money, by purchasing before the rush that "difficult" relative, we will be paying more than we should for it. The chances are that if we had really faced the problem of that difficult gift" a few weeks before, with a little effort we would have found exactly what we wanted, at a price which would have been satisfactory.

The woman who emerges after Christmas with her spirits joyful, her list all crossing ends and gifts all having been filled, and no one forgotten; with all her friends having received that little remembrance which was "just what they wanted most," and with her purse lightened to the approximately extent that she intended, to her comes the satisfaction which belongs to the successful Christmas shopper.

LLOYD GEORGE'S NEW HOME

Dropped $25,000 a Year and Free House—10 Downing Street, a Quaint Old Habitation

Lloyd George has, of course, flitted from the official residence of the British Prime Minister at No. 11 Downing Street, where Bonar Law, his Scots-Canadian successor, is now installed. No. 11, like the several other houses which occupy the same site, is certainly a dingy little old red brick habitation abutting almost on the sidewalk, its dimensions accentuated by the gorgeous facade of the Government offices across the way. Canadians come to Knox-in-land are puzzled to know why Great Britain cannot provide a more imposing mansion for its Premier.

London Exteriors Deceptive.

But the visitor soon learns not to judge London houses from their outward appearance, and discovers that some of the dingy old residences are really very snug and comfortable, but beautiful within and filled with treasures on the way of priceless pictures, furniture and china.

No. 11 Downing Street, which was built by a rich Londoner some 250 years ago, was successively the home of the early King Georges and later set apart by the Crown as the official residence of the Prime Minister. It is a quite small house with a smallish square hall, but the ceilings are lofty and the rooms spacious compared with modern dwellings in Toronto. The War Council Chamber, which occupies most of the back of the ground floor, is a room measuring probably 50 feet long by 20 feet wide, and containing only one quaint, and immensely valuable painting of Lord Nelson, who was chancellor of England in Elizabeth's time.

War Council Chamber.

A Toronto man sat in this room one day during a recent visit he say and heard many interesting confidential statements given by Lloyd George, now in the prime of his powers. It is one of the few rooms in all England with double windows, and they are not available only in order to prevent any chance scrap of conversation from the deliberations which are held in there from reaching inquisitive ears outside. Most of the most momentous decisions in the Napoleonic wars and in the Great War were arrived at in this Chamber. When Premier Asquith came into occupancy in April 1911, No. 11 Downing Street did not even have a modern bath in it—just the old portable tin baths of some past story. But he installed up-to-date plumbing and other improvements.

A Slummy Neighborhood.

The moving vans did not have far to go when Lloyd George and the family moved up, for the Georges are living down in Vincent Square, Westminster. It is approached through a rather seedy neighborhood, and the middle of the square is occupied by the squalid football ground of Westminster School. Indeed the houses in Vincent Square are surviving relics of the days when it was the genteel residential place of folk who paid from $150 to $250 a year in rental.

Lloyd George Economizing.

It must be remembered that Lloyd George lost $25,000 a year salary when he vacated the Premiership, and he could have saved very little of it. In view of all the expenses of his office, he could not have saved the $10,000 a year he inherited under Andrew Carnegie's will must come in very handily nowadays. Lloyd George was considered a comparatively poor man with a small practice as solicitor when he became Premier. He has doubtless had opportunities of making money in the stock market through tips from Lord Beaverbrook and other prominent city friends, but he has availed himself of their information and made money, he does not show it in his wealth, and Hollis Royce car is probably provided from the party fund. Of course by owning Cambridge House at Criccieth, in North Wales, and his cottage at Churt in Surrey.

Eighteenth Century Houses.

But for all the location of his London home is in the modern establishment, Lloyd George is not far removed from one of those fashionable quarters which prevailed in London as being socially sanctified into drab corners of London. He is only a few blocks from the Georgian old eighteenth century houses—some with carved cast iron doors—around Westminster Abbey, which after a period of decay and assin relect suddenly became fashionable again about twenty years ago. Such streets as Great Smith and the Duke of Marlborough and several leading politicians live hereabout.—Toronto Telegram.

THE FEEDING OF LAMBS

low to Raise Sheep From Day of Birth.

Mother's Milk the Best Food—When and How to Feed Grain—Cause for Failure With Lambs—Reasons for Success.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

Mother's milk is the first and best food for lambs. If this is not available, then the milk of goats or cows will do. Most of the ewes on pasture sheep has been well fed on oats, bran, clover and few roots for at least a month before lambing. In the fall lamb, there is little likelihood of a milk shortage for one lamb. Lambs that have taken mothers unusually need some assistance to obtain nourishment. The mother sheep can be held in a small pen and allowed to have the lamb nurses. This is usually not necessary for more than two or three days. The twins or triplets from one ewe to another can be made at birth or while the lamb is still very young by putting the ewe, who by the way depends largely on the sense of smell to identify her offspring. Should a ewe have but one lamb, a day old, and is desired to have her feed a second one, rub the two lambs together until they have the same smell and then test the ewe's ability to identify. If a ewe loses her lamb and it is desired to have her adopt and feed another one, such can be done by removing the skin from the dead lamb and placing such on the back of the lamb that is to be desired she should adopt. This must, of course, be done immediately after short time; but cutting a slit in each corner of the pelt through which the legs of the living lamb may be passed. The pelt may be tied in this place for a few days. Twin lambs frequently do not get sufficient milk for best development and should be the strong lamb will get more than its share. Close attention is necessary to make such adjustment as will insure the lambs getting a fair share. When lambs are not getting all the milk that they need from their mothers, provision should be made to supplement such by teaching the lambs to drink cows' milk from bottle or pan.

Grain Feeding.

When the lambs are two or three weeks old they will start nibbling at grain, hay or grass. At this time, they should be encouraged to feed by way of placing choice bits of food-stuffs where they can easily reach it, where they can reach it without being disturbed by the older sheep. Bran, ground oats, mixed with a small oil cake meal are very desirable concentrates for lambs. Fresh water and salt should always be available in the pens, yards or pasture. The amount of grain to feed will depend largely upon the use that it is desired to make of the lambs. Lambs for the fat market usually get enough grain for several grain feeding, while those for breeding or ordinary market should be limited within the bounds of profitable feeding. With lambs for exhibition, coats are sometimes of secondary importance, and the grain feeding is more liberal than it is with the lambs of the breeding or market flock. Lambs are apt to grain fed from the beginning will reach market weight at a much earlier age than those not receiving grain and will command prices of fat-tening period. When grain feeding is the initial stage of fattening or after weaning, the lambs will depend upon the grain. They will not eat enough grass or other roughage as is in keeping with profitable feeding. The amount of grain to feed should be determined, by the age of the lamb, the purpose for which it is being fed, and the coarse feeds available. Such feeds from the time that the lambs begin to feed is a profitable practice if the amount of grain fed per day does not reduce the lamb's appetite for the bulk other coarse feeds. During the fattening period, the amount of grain fed per day should generally not exceed one and one-half pounds per day if the feeding is to be profitable. Good pasture grass, clovers, or rape should be supplied liberally for all lambs intended for the ordinary market or breeding. For fitting lambs, the coarse feeds should be largely dependent upon.

Causes of Failure In Lamb Feeding.

1. Ewes not properly fed during pregnancy period.
2. No supplementary feeds for the lambs.
3. Failure to properly dock and ailer lambs.
4. No provisions against failure of feeders.
5. No protection from other stock.
6. Failure to deal with eggs or larvae of stomach worm.
7. Failure to dip and destroy ticks and lice.
8. Failure to clip wool from inner thighs and udders.
9. Using poor scrub stock.

Results of Failure.

1. Proper care and liberal feeding of ewe and lamb.
2. Supplementary feeding ample.
3. Wool removed from vicinity of udder.
4. Ticks destroyed or prevented.
5. Using good vigorous stock of proper breeding.
6. Ample supply of green forage. Rape is considered the best single forage or larvae of stomach worm and injurious to sheep and lambs.
7. Protection provided against fly nuisance.
8. Docking and altering performed at proper time.—L. Stevenson, Sec., Dept. of Agriculture, Toronto.

PLANS TO FOSTER AUSTRALIA'S NATIONAL ART

London, Eng., Nov. 30.—During the past few years there has been a distinct national movement in Australia towards the growth of an Australian school of art. It was not until Australia's prophets had gained honors in other countries that the Australian people awoke to the true worth of their art, and now the people of big Antipodes have become appreciative. Their appreciation has been stimulated by men like Tom Roberts, George Lambert, Arthur Streeton and others.

A definite school has sprung up in the past decade. Australian painters find inspiration in the beauties of his own country, and, incidentally, ready buyers among their own countrymen. It is a school which, with a few exceptions, has confined its energies towards translating the spirit of the bush onto canvas, and a certain monotony of Australian landscape is reflected in a certain sameness about the works of modern Australian painters.

One of the handicaps under which both the artists and the general public of the Commonwealth labor is the lack of opportunity of studying the variety of method and art in the Old World. Certainly in the many excellent galleries throughout Australia there are examples of contemporary art, but financial and other considerations place a necessary limit on their numbers, and Australians must follow the progress of painting in the great art centres of the world at a distance of several thousand miles.

With a view to giving the people of Australia the opportunity of enjoying the samples of the work of modern European painters and Australian artists, the chance of studying their methods, an interesting scheme has been launched. Several public spirited Australians have subsidized a project to obtain a loan exhibition for Australia. Their representative, Percleigh Boyd, who is himself one of the most promising of the younger school of Australian painters, is now in London in connection with the project. He proposes to approach artists, both in this country and on the continent, for the loan of samples of their work, and he hopes that they will give their assistance to what will be a fresh means of stimulating the artistic growth of Australia. It is a new form of artistic propaganda on a large scale, and by this means it is hoped to "familiarise" Australians with the finest products of European artistic development.

The Federal Government of Australia and the Governments of the several Australian States have promised their active cooperation in the project. The exhibition will visit Sydney, Melbourne and Adelaide next year, according to Mr. Boyd, who expects to obtain about 1,500 pictures for it.

FUR BEARING ANIMALS MAY BECOME EXTINCT

Winnipeg, Nov. 30.—Fur bearing animals of all kinds are being killed so rapidly there is no doubt that in the near future all fur will have to be raised in captivity, today declared R. I. Raynes, breeder of silver black foxes, Alberaon, P.E.I., who was a recent visitor here after a trip through Western Canada.

After an inspection of many districts he declared that Manitoba with its bright dry winter climate, was eminently adapted for the raising of silver foxes.

The future of the silver fox industry was exceedingly bright, Mr. Raynes stated. Raising of foxes was not a difficult matter. They ate anything that a dog would eat and necessary attention called for but a few minutes a day. As an animal, this business would be a very jaying one for farmers, he said.

WINNIPEG NEEDS PENAL INSTITUTION

Winnipeg, Nov. 30.—Imperative need for a penal institution, and a reformative character in Manitoba was urged by Mr. Justice Curran at the recent assizes here when called upon to sentence two lads found guilty of the theft of automobiles.

"This case is an excellent illustration of the need of such an institution," he said. "I hope the time is not far distant when we will have a refory institution, not in name only but one that will do reformative work."

"There is no need to make a plea to my sympathies for a boy on the threshold of life," he said, "for I have brought up five boys of my own. To send a boy to the penitentiary for the first offence is something that I would not do. It simply means wrecking his future."

The youths, aged 17 and 18, were given a fourteen months term, the oldest to be sent to the jail farm operated by the provincial jail authorities and the younger one to the Portage la Prairie reformatory for the same period.

MUSIC and DRAMA

WALLY REID'S FATHER WROTE "HUMAN HEARTS"

Supporting House Peters in "Human Hearts," the Universal-Jewel coming to Griffin's next Thursday to Saturday, with a matinee Saturday, are some of the film world's most notable character artists. Russell Simpson has played roles of impressive calibre since pictures were in their beginning. George Hackathorne is the cinema's latest sensation, a juvenile "find" in character work with "The Little Minister" and other remarkable successes behind him. Gertrude Claire is the most lovable of mothers, Ramsey Wallace and Edith Hallor noted for young characters, and Suita Edwards is one of the real old-time comedians of the stage. Mary Philbin plays the sympathetic feminine lead.

"Human Hearts" was written by Hal Reid, father of the celebrated screen star. Wallace Reid and was presented with wonderful success on the stage for many seasons.

"For Land's Sake!" a very amusing Mermaid comedy, a beautiful Travelogue, and Art Accord in the second chapter of the thrilling adventure play "Buffalo Bill", are also exhibited on the same program. Regular prices will prevail during the exhibition of "Human Hearts."

EXCELLENT CAST IN "HER MAD BARGAIN"

Louis B. Mayer assembled an excellent cast to support Anita Stewart in "Her Mad Bargain" the star's new vehicle for First National, which is to be shown at the Regent Theatre this Monday to Wednesday, matinee daily. Heading the list as leading man is Walter McGrail, who played a similar role with Miss Stewart in her last two pictures, "Playthings of Destiny" and "The Invisible Fear."

"Her Mad Bargain" tells the story of a girl who is forced by circumstances to leave the secure, comfortable place of fashionable society and provide for her very existence in the open mart of the world. As Alice Lambert the soul of refinement and a person woefully unprepared for commercial strife, Anita Stewart battles life courageously in her attempts to achieve success without sacrificing her ideals. One of the most sympathetic roles of her career, the part is specially designed to her rare talent of impersonation and is just the type of character in which the public likes best to see her.

"Her Mad Bargain" was produced at the Mayer studio, by Director Edwin Carewe.

A good comedy, Fox News, and a new chapter of the gripping adventure play "Robinson Crusoe", are being exhibited on the same program.

J. WARREN KERRIGAN AT REGENT TONIGHT

J. Warren Kerrigan's latest Brunton production, "The Coast of Opportunity," adapted from the popular best seller of that title by Page Philips, the eminent New York novelist and magazine writer, is being exhibited at the Regent tonight for the last time.

In this picture Kerrigan takes the part of a young mining engineer who finds fortune in copper in an isolated desert region of Old Mexico. The star is support by an unusually brilliant cast headed by Pitai Bru nette. The direction is by Ernest Warde and Jack Cunningham wrote the adaptation.

A new Vaderi Movies, a Kinogram and a two-reel Century comedy titled "Henpecked" are being exhibited on the same program.

REX BIDS FAREWELL TO BELLEVILLE NEXT WEEK

Rex Sneldrore and his popular Stock Company will close their remarkably successful thirty-week engagement at Griffin's Opera House next Tuesday night, the company on playing here two nights next week, Monday and Tuesday, presenting Cyril Maude's celebrated stage bit, "Grumpy."

Rex appears in the title role, that of Grumpy old Mr. Bullivant, Zana Vaughn appears as the winsome and lovable Virginia, and Howard Brown, Hazel Williams, Billy Seymour, Florence Winters and Joe Kelly have equally important roles. Our Bill Yale portrays Bradford, Grumpy's faithful old valet, one of those roles we all love to see him in. Refined vaudeville specialties will be introduced between acts.

"THE STORM" SETS NEW PACE FOR MOVIE THRILLS

The beauty of the drama is sometimes so clogged with restraint that it becomes obscured in a salty wash, but this is NOT true of "The Storm," which has delighted large audiences at Griffin's on Thursday and Friday evenings, and which is receiving its final exhibition at Griffin's tonight. It is a powerful story of love and hate, of simple honesty and crafty cunning, of quiet mountain peaks and raging snow storms, of peace and quiet and of mountain forests turned into an inferno.

House Peters, Virginia Valli and Matt Moore are excellent in their roles, and great credit must be given to Josef Swickard.

An atmospheric musical setting especially arranged for the photoplayma and played by a symphony orchestra adds greatly to the enjoyment of the program.

Pathe News, a two-reel Century comedy entitled "Three Weeks Off," and Art Accord in a new adventure play, "Buffalo Bill," are being exhibited in addition to the above feature offering.

JAPAN CLAIMS THAT AMERICAN SHIPS ARE NESTS OF BOOTLEGGERS

Yokohama, Dec. 1.—"The law will make every American ship running out of an Oriental port a nest of bootleggers," stated a veteran shipping man here, referring to the Daugherty ruling against the transportation of sale of liquor on United States steamships anywhere on foreign vessels in American waters.

The principal Japanese shipping companies are uncertain what to do as a result of the ruling which has been the cause of spirited discussion in Japanese ports.

According to one man, an Ayerican, who has been associated with Japanese shipping for thirty years, every forward and cabin boy will soon be making huge profits from the sale of prohibited beverages to passengers, who will pay high prices for whatever they can get. He wonders what the United States coast, will do if a Chinese cabin boy is charged with violating the law. The complications, he points out, will arise from the fact that existing immigration laws strictly prohibit the entry of Chinese and they would probably be effective in the case of Chinese charged with breaking the American law on the high seas.

Japan is not altogether opposed to the prohibition ruling, and some authorities believe that American ships will make as much from their fountain services as they ever did from their bars.

Steamship companies are now considering whether to discontinue the sale of liquor or divert their boats to Vancouver instead of Seattle.

"A Terrible Experience"

"I Recall My Experiences with the Burglar with Feelings of Horror!"

"How would you feel if you wakened in the middle of the night with a flashlight shining in your eyes and the gruff voice of a man threatening that, 'If you make the slightest noise, I'll kill you?' That was my experience the end of last March when my husband was away in the woods and I was alone with my three children. Everytime I think of this experience a shudder passes over me and as long as I live I shall remember it. At the time I really thought I would die. It's a wonder my heart did not stop beating. I was so weak that even if I had any desire to move, I could not. I was bathed in a cold, clammy perspiration. When I realized the situation details now makes me shudder, it was a result of this shock that I contracted a high fever and for hours at a time I was delirious. I got so bad that the doctor finally gave up hope of my ever recovering, but by careful nursing, I was finally pronounced out of danger. The shock had left me so weak, that, for no reason whatever, I would suddenly burst into tears. All the life seemed to have been taken out of me. I kept getting weaker and weaker, so much so that my husband and children were constantly worrying about me. Doctors prescribed for me and while I willingly tried their medicines, only very few of them did me any good, but onlertunately the good was not lasting. My family asked me if I would try Carnol and I said, 'I was willing to try anything,' but felt that it would not do me any good. Four bottles of Carnol taken regularly, has completely restored my former health and strength and, whilst I occasionally recall my experience with the burglar with feelings of horror, I am otherwise as well and strong as I have ever been. Carnol is the most wonderful preparation I have ever used for building and restoring health and strength. It has done wonders for me and I cannot say enough when I have recommended it." Mrs. McC. 6f...

Carnol is sold by your druggist, and if you can conscientiously say, after you have tried it, that it hasn't done you any good, return the empty bottle to him and he will refund your money. 5-118

SKINNING AN ANIMAL

How to Get the Best Out of a Hide.

Skin While the Carcase is Warm—Have the Knife Sharp—Avoid Wrinkling — Cut Carefully Above the Legs.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

During the autumn season, considerable farm butchering is done, and in the operation many good hides are spoiled in the skinning. To do a good job one must select a clean and level spot in the shatter of a tree or in a building if the floor is good. A block and tackle or other hoist arrangement should be rigged in a convenient position.

Skin While Carcase Is Warm.

The animal should be clean; if not it will be difficult to keep the hide and carcase in proper condition. The skinning should start immediately the animal is dead, and the more quickly it is done while the hide is warm the more easily the hide will come off. Make sure that the knife is sharp. After skinning and sticking the animal it should be suspended to facilitate bleeding. It is the suspended position the operator should begin skinning the head, cheeks and face. When skinning over the face leave the flesh on the head. The presence of meat on the hide is an objection. The head is removed at the joint of the atlas joint, or end of the spinal column. The horns should not be removed from the skull. With the head out of the way the animal should be completely lowered and placed breast up, being held in this position by a spiked stick between brisket and floor. The legs should then be skinned out and the feet removed.

Avoid Forming of Wrinkles.

After removing the feet the hide should be ripped down the belly from the sticking cut to the tail. The sides should then be skinned by working forward to the brisket and then back to the inside of the hind leg, close to the tail. The free hand should be used to lift away, pulling outward and upward against the knife. Care should be taken to prevent the formation of wrinkles under the hide as it is being removed. The hide should be skinned off nearly to the hock joint, leaving it attached at the thighs and shoulders. Change the prop over to the other side of brisket and skin the other side in the same manner.

Cut Carefully Above the Legs.

For the cut at the front legs start in the center, cutting the skin well forward at the brisket and in advance of the front legs, cut back to the union of the fore leg and body and on down the inside of leg to meet the cut made when skinning the side. In skinning the hind legs start at the center line about six inches from the tail and split the skin in straight line to the hock. Skin over the rump and thighs. At this stage it is best to insert a gambrel above the hock joints and raise the carcase so that the shoulder will still rest on the floor. Split the skin on the outer side of the tail and skin out the tail bone to the end.

Skin Away From Tail and Legs.

Skin the hide carefully away from the base of the tail and strip from the legs and back, using the fat or a blunt instrument as a scraper. A handle, skinning stone or the back of a cleaver. Be careful not to cut the hide, since such cut reduces the value. When skinned out to the shoulders the carcase is hoisted clear of the floor and the skinning completed down over the neck. Split the ears by cutting lengthwise and fold the hide flesh side in. Tie for shipment.—Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.

Cheap Ice For the Farmer.

Farmers who have not already done so should prepare to lay by a store of ice for cooling milk and for household use next summer. The cost of harvesting and storing ice is low when compared with the benefits derived. Ordinarily, it is safe to harvest two tons of ice for each cow in the herd. This will allow for chilling and leave enough for family needs. Where cream only is sold about one-third of that quantity of ice will be needed.

Did you ever try co-operation in ice harvesting? It works like a charm. Get one or two of your neighbors to go into such a scheme. One pond or stream and one set of tools will answer for all. The equipment necessary for harvesting and storing ice consists simply of saws, tongs, and iron bars (or peaks) for the blocks of ice around.

A rough board enclosure ten feet square and eight feet high will hold sufficient ice to provide fifty pounds per day for 120 days after allowing for a reasonable amount of wastage. An important fact to be remembered is that the smaller the quantity of ice stored the larger is the proportion of waste. The bottom of the enclosure should be covered with a foot of sawdust, and a foot of space left between the boards and the ice, which should also be filled with sawdust. The ice should be similarly covered. Dry-drier the sawdust the better. If the soil beneath the enclosure is porous, a previous clay, a layer of gravel under the sawdust is advisable.

If sawdust is not obtainable, planer mill shavings will serve. If neither is to be had, two feet of marsh hay or any will hay will answer. The roughest kind of a shed that will resist the weather is all that is required.

If you are not making money on the farm, scratch your head and do some hard thinking.

Keep feeding the hens or they'll stop laying. Keep feeding the pullets or they'll stop growing.

BUILDING EXPANSION PROCEEDING AT AN ACCELERATED PACE

The revival of residential construction in its year overshadowed everything else in the building field. But there has also been another revival that is very significant: Industrial construction this year has totalled 25 millions compared with 16 millions in 1921. This increase, although it has not yet assumed large proportions, seems to indicate a substantial revival in the class of building. All types of construction contracts awarded during the eleven months of 1922 amounted to $269,371,400 compared with $221,014,000 in the same period of 1921, being an increase of 17.3 per cent.

During November, construction contracts awarded in Canada, according to MacLean Building Reports, Limited, amounted to $21,453,000 compared with $16,620,800 in November 1921. Residential building accounted for 36.6% of the November total and amounted to $7,864,900. Business building amounted $7,065,700, or 32.9%; industrial building $748,000, or 3.5%; public works and utilities $5,779,800, or 27%. The value of contemplated new work reported during November amounted to $34,902,100.

The figures for the different provinces are as follows:

	No. of Projects	Value.
Ontario	1,114	$13,706,300
Quebec	496	7,107,100
British Columbia	104	871,500
Manitoba	69	347,600
Alberta	23	150,800
Saskatchewan	40	147,300
New Brunswick	17	133,000
Nova Scotia	" 14	71,500
Prince Edward Island	3	19,000
Total for Dominion	1840	$21,453,900

The Dominion figures according to classification or types are as follows:

	No. of Projects.	Value.
Churches	17	312,200
Departments	7	354,500
Factories	21	743,000
Public Garages	52	367,800
Hospitals	9	311,400
Hotels & Clubs	15	103,500
Office Buildings	10	376,500
Public Buildings	9	569,600
Residences	1495	7,609,574
Schools	32	2,353,165
Stores	76	1,172,000
Theatres	7	140,000
Warehouses	18	365,000
Total Buildings	1773	15,674,100

Bridges	$0,500
Dams and Wharves	72,900
Sewers & Waterworks	317,000
Roads & Streets	757,000
General Engineering	4,301,800
Total for Dominion 1840	$21,453,900

The cost of building continues to advance slightly. The activity of the past season, coupled with the cool and fall difficulties, tended toward a firming of prices, but it is confidently expected that with the resumption of normal conditions in the building field, a greater volume of production will replenish the stocks of building material dealers and re-establish prices for spring building activity on a basis comparable with the similar period of 1922.

It is quite certain that many projects are now being overhauled for the 1923 building period, and in every section of the community, architects are reporting an increase in planning activity, and every office looks for ward confidently to a busy season during the coming winter in preparation of the spring building. The building of moderate cost homes will undoubtedly be resumed actively early next year.

Help burned Ontario over the Winter!

MEN and women of Ontario—it is time that we should all realize the terrible completeness of the fire calamity that devastated Northern Ontario in the early days of October. Fires and calamities we have had before, but never such complete destruction as this.

Over 1,200 square miles laid desolate, town after town nothing but a bleak expanse of ruins, hundreds of farms swept bare, thousands of your fellow citizens "cleaned out" and thrown abruptly back into man's primeval struggle against nature and her grim forces: fire, hunger, ice and the stark northern cold.

Give 1,800 families a fighting chance to get on their feet. Temporary relief must go on. We must not fail the North.

Winter—the relentless foe

Coming as this terrible fire did, in the autumn, with the harvests in, with the townspeople already preparing for the rigors of winter—the complete destruction wrought is the harder to overcome.

Thousands of people at first had literally no place to lay their head, little to wear and nothing to eat. They had to be taken care of at first, somehow, and then, desperately as the days went by, and the cold grew more intense, rough but serviceable standard shacks, 16' x 20', have been replacing tents, old street cars, packing boxes and sheet iron—a regular food supply has been established, and rough clothing is being distributed.

What can a man do with his blackened hole in the ground, his barn a charred heap, his work shop a twisted pile of rubbish—and a northern blizzard raging over all?

Temporary Relief Until Spring

In the name of humanity we must see these fellow citizens through until Spring opens up the land and general business activities are resumed. Money must be forthcoming from the citizens of Ontario, from municipalities, industries, societies, public bodies, lodges, churches, etc.—not for rehabilitation or re-establishment, but for the supply of bare necessities, "temporary relief" in fact, to the stricken North.

The Brighter Side of the Picture

Everywhere throughout the fire swept district one hears only a strong, manly note of confidence, of resolution to go forward, to "stick to the country" if body and soul can be held together, to make good once more, to restore the hundreds of burned farms, to rebuild the eight or ten destroyed towns—And it will be done if the stress of temporary relief from Old Ontario does not dry up!

All for One—One for All

Here is a portion of our Province in ruins and for the sake of the whole Province as well as for its own sake, this section must be restored to prosperity and happiness. We need the North. Never was its vigorous, pioneering spirit so one and all, let's "give a hand into the saddle"—and do it NOW!

Money is needed. The Relief Committee can buy in large quantities, get big discounts, and often free gifts of merchandise from the many manufacturers who are generously co-operating with the Committee. The exact needs are now known.

The Northern Ontario Fire Relief Committee has been enlarged and now is thoroughly representative of the Province of Ontario. The Provincial Government is co-operating to the fullest extent and is doing everything that a Government can properly do to assist in temporarily relieving the fire sufferers.

To give immediate relief the Committee must secure actual cash without delay. If each municipality or county would devise some means of raising an amount equal to one half mill on the total assessment the relief can be continued. The raising of relief funds could be undertaken by public spirited citizens, churches or councils and provides a most desirable outlet for Christmas giving. Now is the up to every community in Ontario to help a neighbouring district in its hour of trial. Make cheques payable to—

Three Xmas Menus

Christmas is a home day in most families, and the dinner depends upon financial, economical and social conditions, but generally, an old-fashioned feast finds favor.

MENU
Cream of tomato soup
Turkey, stuffed sweet potatoes, boiled Onions, mashed turnips, celery, Pickles and cranberry jelly
Celery and apple salad
Mince and pumpkin pie
Cheese Coffee Cider

Have the turkey drawn from the turkey legs, boil and chop the giblets for the gravy, and roast the bird on its breast instead of his back, so the juices may run into the white breast meat instead of weeping away in the pan.

For the dinner's small quarters, one must begin beforehand to get things ready if a real bone dinner is desired.

MENU
Salmon canapes
Roast boned turkey, cranberry jelly,
Celery, candied sweet potatoes,
Pickles, rolls, asparagus
Alligator pear salad
Plum pudding, hard sauce
Coffee Cider

The salmon comes out of a can. Drain, leave the skin fake and cream it with mayonnaise, juice of an onion, juice of half a small lemon, a little red pepper, a teaspoonful of mustard, and chopped olives, and a hard boiled egg put through the sieve. Mix lightly and spread on fresh toast points. Garnish with fresh cress.

Roast the turkey, stuff and roll it the day before. Boil the bones and trimmings with a vegetable soup bunch and seasonings. Strain, set aside, remove the grease, and it is ready, if needed or for use next day.

Jelly and sausage can be gotten canned, as well as the pudding.

Two of the alligator pears make a salad for six people with the lettuce and dressing.

Should the preparation of the turkey be too much for small quarters it is possible to buy one at the delicatessen, or get the baker to roast the bird.

MENU
Oysters on the half-shell with a relish
Filet of sole, tartar sauce, potato puffs
Roast turkey, chestnut stuffing, glazed sweet potatoes, baked onions, fried parsnips, celery, olives, salted nuts
Entree of sweetbreads and mushrooms en casserole
Dinner rolls
Cheese and tomato salad
Mince pie, frozen pumpkin custard
Coffee

The finest chestnut filling is made by boiling a pound of large sweet chestnuts after peeling and blanching them. When soft, mash them, add a heaping tablespoonful of butter, pepper, salt to taste, a teaspoonful of sugar, and a gill of sweet cream. Beat very light with a fork. Then add a cupful of chopped raisins, a half-cupful of white celery tops, chopped, the juice of a large onion and dry cracker dust enough to form the mass. Then cut in another heaping tablespoonful of butter, and add a teaspoonful of sage, and a cupful of currants full of curry powder. Parboil and dice the sweetbreads, saute the mushrooms, make a rich cream sauce, a beaten egg and a little sweet cream. Bake ten minutes.

LIQUOR RETURNED TO OWNER

In the issue of "The Intelligencer" of November 28th inst. an article appeared stating that a consignment of liquor, which had been seized by the provincial police officers in the Sorlastina, had been returned to the Canadian Industrial Alcohol Co. of Corbyville."

While it remains a fact that the liquor was moved from the place where it had been placed upon its seizure, yet it was not returned to Industrial Alcohol Refineries at Corbyville.

In conversation with Mr. Frank Munro, an official of the Industrial Alcohol Co. Ltd. this morning, he stated that the above Company had nothing whatever to do with the consignment of liquor in question, but that the liquor was returned to its owner.

The Half Speed Man

What It Means When You Feel Run Down and Out of Sorts.

(You know what it means to feel "all out of sorts." Most people have felt this way at some time. Nerves out of order, irritable, languid, depressed. An aching head, appetite bad and digestion weak. With some people this condition comes and goes; with others it is chronic—they can't shake it off. It interferes with business, spoils recreation and robs life of all its joys. These men and women are only able to work at half-speed The trouble is caused by poor, watery blood. You can improve your condition to-day by taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These pills enrich and stimulate the blood, strengthen the nerves and give you fresh vigor. Here is proof. Mr. William F. Bell, Branchbridge, Ont., says:—"I have been recommending Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for a number of years, because of the benefit I get from their use. I was in a terribly run down condition. I was scarcely able to do anything all winter. To make matters worse I took the mumps and caught cold, and as a result was confined to bed for six weeks, part of the time in a terrible fever. Of course I was doctoring, but instead of getting better I was growing weaker. At this time my father-in-law urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, but had lost faith in all medicine and refused. However, he had such faith in them that he bought me six boxes, and of course I could not refuse to take them. Now I am glad I did not, I had not taken them long before I began to have faith in the pills myself. There was no doubt I was improving. Day by day my strength came back and I gained in weight from 115 to 146 pounds. Therefore, I feel that I cannot speak too highly of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I hope my experience will convince some other sufferer of the value of this medicine."

You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail postpaid at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

LINKED LIVES

By
D. Kinmount Roy

Sir Hugh Polwarth took his leave, and the Squire retired to his own apartment, ill at ease, and much less satisfied with himself that his absence than he had been for many a day.

"What could have possessed Kinkaun to have failed so openly?—and to go about in daylight?" he mused with bitterness; 'and then to have so many people with him was almost to court defeat!' And yet the inducements to act in good faith and to fulfil his part of the contract were so largely in his favour that there must have been good reasons for the methods he employed. Surely there must have been good reasons," he repeated, 'and all may yet be well!' He paced his room for several minutes in deep thought, and then, locking the door, he took from the inner drawer of a cabinet the miniature of a beautiful female face, on which he gazed long and earnestly.

As he looked, his eyes grew soft, and his heart beat tumultuously. 'All, God!' he cried, in self-amazement, 'after so many years!' And turning the picture face downward on the table, he corrected it with a shaking hand. 'She must be like her mother!' he whispered to himself; 'I wish I could have seen her—I wish I could have found some other way!'

'No, no,' he corrected himself, 'this is weakness, criminal weakness, which must be overcome—forgotten!' and he ground his heel into the carpet, pressed his hand hard down upon the picture, and left it.

Suddenly he turned the face up again, and looked at it long and steadily. 'I must everything fair and honest at the time,' he said, like a man defending himself; 'I meant fair, so help me God! but circumstances were too much for me—too much for me; before Heaven, I swear it this night, circumstances mastered me and forced me into the course I followed: hundreds of men would have done the same under the same conditions. To give way now is madness! I have been afraid to look you in the face for years, Madeline—you, horribly afraid! and I must never look again—never again. The image of your living form, Madeline—my Madeline—must never put me to fear, nay, my son to shame!' And so saying, she walked deliberately to the fireplace with a firm step, and thrust the picture into the glowing coals and there crushed it into small fragments as it burned until it was consumed. Having thus disposed of it, he heaped fuel upon the fire, and sat down to dream as he watched the dancing flames.

Whatever his meditations were, when he arose it was with a sigh of relief; perhaps there was a far-off echo of some thing like pain; but all the same he slept like a man who has done a good day's work and had had an honest night to the oblivion of peaceful slumbers.

Reginald was soon in possession of all we have related, as told by Sir Hugh, as to the abduction of Oona. His first impulse was to ride over to Mr. Alpin's in quest of more light on the dark problem; but Donald was from home, and Mrs. Alpin could not leave her sick laddie to see the King, if he had called, much less the Squire's son.

The young fellow was ill at ease until the Hall was empty of guests, and then, with brief leave-taking, he started out with Polinson in the hope of learning the fate of the lady of the island. The prospect of success seemed very slight indeed. That an unknown schooner had put to sea under suspicious circumstances was absolutely all that was known. The two young men thought it possible that some tidings or clue could be found at once other of the many seaport towns where such a craft would be likely to put in, in case of storm, or to gather news, or perhaps to find a safe hiding-place. And so they went forth, as trusty comrades, in play the role of knight-errants and to deliver the lady from the hands of her captors, if so be they were fortunate enough to succeed in their quest.

Reginald Hardcastle hardly knew why the desire to learn the fate of this unknown lady should still be more dominate his life and command all his time and energy but so it was, and for the first time in his hitherto frivolous career all his powers were employed to help and succor another. The air of mystery which had surrounded the birth of the girl piqued his curiosity, and now to learn her fate became the ruling passion of his life.

CHAPTER X
A STORM AT SEA

When the mysterious schooner mentioned in the last chapter put to sea, her name was carefully concealed, and her movements were such as to mislead any inquisitive observers who might be on the look-out for them. However, as it became dark her course was changed, and under cover of the gloom she could carry she developed extraordinary speed. In fact, the crowd on which she was just then employed was not very agreeable to the captain or his crew, and the sooner they could attend to other business the better pleased they would be, one and all.

Kinkaun and his party were a sorry sight. The two women were half-dead with fright; Heathfield almost dead in reality from his injuries; and Kinkaun, battered and bruised in mind and body, was raving like a wild beast, and vowing vengeance on every one concerned.

Heathfield was past caring where he was or whither he was going, but the women were in abject terror, apprehensive of what might lie before them. Kinkaun never thought of relieving their anxiety by a single word, and his mood was such that it was not safe to ask questions.

THE VOICE OF BENNY A. CLOCK

Benjamin Alarm Clock was his full name, but they called him Benny A. for short. "Hurrah, hurrah, hurrah!" he shouted, "it's time to get up. Hurrah!"

"Mercy," groaned old Grandfather Clock. "It's a pity you couldn't keep still at this time of the morning and let a fellow sleep. A person of my age shouldn't have his early morning rest disturbed."

"Oh, you're such a staid old fossil," grunted Benny A. disgustedly. "Weren't you ever young in your life?"

Grandfather Clock looked ruined. "Yes," he mourned with dignity, "but I shouldn't be so hard on me."

"Oh," Grandfather Clock hastened to assure him, "I made my noise at proper times. Every hour I sang forth, and I had a beautiful bass voice, too. Not one of these cracked, jangy voices that you hear every day now."

"Like mine, I suppose you mean to infer," snapped Benny A. He was beginning to get angry at Grandfather Clock.

Well, yours isn't as sweet and soft as it might be," Grandfather replied quietly.

"Huh," sniffed Benny A, "why don't you sing forth in your beautiful bass voice now? I'd like to hear you."

"I'm old and my voice is ruined," said the aged Grandfather Clock. "Alas, time when I made as much noise as you are a bold, disrespectful clock, but some day you, too, will know what it is to be old."

"Not if I know it!" Benny A, grunted. Grandfather Clock made him tired with his queer, old-fashioned ways. He'd just show the old fossil.

"Hurrah, hurrah, hurrah!" he shouted, louder than ever. "HURRAH!" There was a whir, a crash, and then a loud hush. Benny A. ticked slowly and painfully.

"Why, what's the matter?" asked Grandfather Clock.

"Oh, I've lost my voice. It's cracked!" wailed Benny A.

"I told you so, I told you so," ticked Grandfather.

Has Depended on Dr. Chase's Medicines for 25 Years

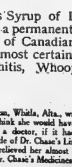

This letter from Mrs. Thompson gives you some idea of why so many thousands of people depend on Dr. Chase in the hour of sickness.

Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has a permanent place in the great majority of Canadian homes because it is the most certain relief from Croup, Bronchitis, Whooping Cough and Asthma.

Mrs. Alex. Thompson, Whitla, Alta., writes:—"When my first baby was born, I think she would have died from croup before we could reach a doctor, if it had not been for a neighbor who had a bottle of Dr. Chase's Linseed and Turpentine in the house. This relieved her almost immediately. That was 21 years ago, and Dr. Chase's Medicines have been friends of ours ever since."

Asthma

Mr. Thomas Bood, Sholdrake, North Shore, Que., writes:—"I suffered for years with asthma, sometimes being unable to lie in bed, but after a treatment of Dr. Chase's Linseed and Turpentine, I am now quite well and thank this medicine for restoring me."

IRELAND CONSIDERS NATIONALIZATION OF RAILROADS

Dublin, Nov. 30.—The commission appointed by the Irish Government to inquire into the working of Irish railways has just reported, with one dissenting vote, in favor of the nationalization of the railways by the State. It is recommended, however, that the management be not in the hands of a State Minister, but by a National Railway Board representing various interests, including labor.

The present market value of the entire railway stock in Ireland is estimated at between twenty-five and thirty million pounds sterling which, it is suggested, should be acquired by a tribunal that would issue bonds at reasonable interest and redeemable from a sinking fund in instalments over ten years. The project of nationalization, however, has been broadly criticized; it is not popular.

The Irish railways are at present being run under difficulties. During the war, fares were raised 100 per cent, although the increase in England was only 75 per cent. This has now been reduced to 50 per cent. while the Irish 100 per cent. increase remains unaltered.

ONE REAL WISE RUGBY FAN

Writes "Toronto Star" and Calls Sport Writers for "Undue Prominence" Given Conacher

Backing up the statements made in the paper regarding Conacher and his Toronto Star Press agents, the following article explains the situation absolutely. By the way, the Rugby Public have bombarded the Star with letters, calling them for such "undue prominence" talk.

A Toronto fan writes to explain why so many people rooted for Queen's. It was, he says, because of the undue prominence given to Conacher before the game, and questioned the assertion that the Argo star was equal to any halfback in America. He adds:

"Now, the general public are a funny outfit. When they have been told repeatedly that a certain thing is impossible, they love to see the dope upset. Therefore we turned out to see Queen's stop Conacher. They cheered to the echo when he fumbled the ball time after time, and because they had any hard feelings toward Conacher or the Argos, but they loved to have it proved that nothing is impossible. Conacher was only human after all."

"In The Star, he says, "you enlarge on Conacher's 40-yard run and a few gains in the backs, but do you give any display about Dinsmore and his 50-yard run, his touchdown and his all-round playing? Do you do justice to that Argo line. If it had not played so faultlessly the result would have been terrible?

"On the day's play Laidlaw, Batston and Dinsmore outplayed Conacher. Give them credit; don't try and fool the public. Conacher is a wonderful player, but he fair, give credit to the man that nailed him in his tracks; give his team-mates their due, and give Queen's credit for their uphill fight."

The followers of the red, blue and yellow-have a comeback at Toronto critics for referring to Kingston as the "Ponhamore City." They say: "Now the shoe is on the other foot and we feel sorry for a city the size of Toronto allowing a lot of dead skeletons (pretty lively ones now, don't you think so?) to beat them on the gridiron.

"Your paper has been carrying the wonderful headline 'Can Queen's Stop Conacher?' You received your answer Saturday, Argos found a real team to play, and would have beat champions of the east, only Queen's dropped in for the day, and before nightfall had walked away with Argos' crown. We noticed that Argos had a dog for a mascot. We think they should have had a goat instead, which, if it didn't bring them luck, might have given them milk to soothe their feelings after the big disaster.

"We think credit should be given where credit is due, so let's all buck up and pull for dear old Queen's to keep the decision honors in the east when Eskimos come for it next Saturday."

Thursday night in the office of the Blue Garages Ltd., a meeting of the executive of the Frontenac Hockey Club, Kingston, was held and every member was present. Plans for the coming season were gone into and discussed from every angle and the proposed amendments to be brought up at the annual meeting of the Ontario Hockey Association were gone over and the delegate was instructed on several matters which might affect the local club. For the most part, the local club was opposed to a number of the amendments because it could not be seen where these proposed amendments would be of any advantage to hockey as played.

ACCIDENT ON KINGSTON ROAD

Car Crashes Through Fence at Dangerous Curve Near Millown

One accident occurred on the Kingston road, between this city and Napanee Limestone City, on Saturday last. Just east of Millown, at the right angle turn under the viaduct, a touring car came to grief on the home ward, trip, towards Belleville. Instead of turning abruptly to the right to go under the viaduct, the car shot to the right, and went clear through the fence, and the bank of the cut and cleared the fence. One wheel was smashed off, but no one in the party injured.

TWO-MINUTE TALKS AT ROTARY

There was a large attendance at the regular weekly Rotary luncheon today and all oratory was confined to local literature. Director H. "Sid." Mason from Albert College gave a five minute talk on the first code of ethics of the club, which was thoroughly enjoyed. "Charlie" Symons also gave a resume of the great work done by Rotarians of the way of discovering and supplying needs of crippled children of this city, and several other members of the club also gave short talks on this all important subject.

The Belleville Rotary club by the way is going out strong after this condition, and the members are going to see that children of this city who are in need of medical attention will receive same.

President Billy Deacon presided in his usual proficient manner.

BY-ELECTION CAMPAIGN IN LANARK CLOSES

The Electors Will Render Their Verdict at the Polls To-day—Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen and Premier King Return to Ottawa

BOROUGH OF TOO MUCH TROUBLE

Suburb of London Always Has Something to Worry About—Has Small-pox Now

London, Dec. 4. (Canadian Press.)—Poplar is seldom without troubles of its own. If it is not taxes or unemployment it is something else and the latest something else is smallpox. This disease has been epidemic in the borough for some time, but at latest reports it had practically run its course and the health authorities thought they had it well in hand.

The smallpox outbreak has been of a virulent character. The Poplar workhouse has been closed by the scourge and a large number of inmates have been removed from the Workhouse to the Isolation Hospital at Long Reach, near Dartford.

Even the Public Vaccinator of Poplar, Dr. Halliday, is down with smallpox. Dr. Halliday contracted the disease through vaccinating patients, and he has been in isolation as a result of this. Whether the Public Vaccinator himself has been vaccinated within the last few years has not been made public, and naturally there is a good deal of conjecture in the matter. Any person in Poplar who has been vaccinated within ten years need not undergo the operation in connection with the present outbreak.

THE LAUSANNE CONFERENCE

(Canadian Press Dispatch)

Lausanne, Dec. 4.—Under the auspices of the Dardanelles to all warships except those of Turkey and giving the Turks the right to fortify the Straits was adopted by Foreign Minister Tchitcherin, Russia, at today's meeting of the conference. Ismet Pasha, Turkey, asked for the absolute control of the Straits by Turkey. The delegates of Greece, Bulgaria, and Roumania explained the position of their respective Governments. The meeting started at eleven, decided to adjourned at one o'clock without the time being fixed for the next meeting.

Perth, Ont., Dec. 4th.—The tide of victory has ebbed in Lanark County. Right Hon. Arthur Meighen and Premier King have made their last appeals for support for their candidates in hard fought by-election campaign of the past fortnight and are both again in Ottawa. The case rests now with the voters, the electors, whose verdict will be known when the polls have closed tonight. Mr. Meighen closed his tour of the constituency on Saturday, with meetings at Lanark Village and at Perth, where Premier King spoke on Friday evening. At both places the Conservative leader was received by audiences which voiced their enthusiasm by applause and cheers. Mr. Meighen placed his argument in support of the candidature of Hon. Dr. R. F. Preston before more than a thousand people at Lanark Village. The Leader of the Opposition addressed two large meetings in the evening at Perth.

Premier King and Hon. Jas. Murdock spoke to gatherings at Smith's Falls, a town of 5,000, where the Conservative leader opened his tour on Tuesday.

Smith's Falls has generally given a Conservative majority in the past and where is a large railway vote in the town, a considerable portion of which is expected to be recorded in the advance polls before Saturday night.

The outcome of the voting is awaited with interest in several centres. The contest between D. Preston, the Conservative leader and David Findlay, the Liberal nominee in the riding, which gave Sir Iahe Hon. J. A. Stewart a majority of 1,500 a few years ago, has waged with an intensity unknown in Lanark for years.

Mr. Meighen brought to light on Saturday, a new means by which the Liberals are endeavoring to secure votes in the urban sections of the riding. He drew attention to a pamphlet or circular, announcing that the Government would place orders with factories in the Lanark County for a type of connecting rod for the National Railways and adding "vote for Findlay." This appeal the Conservative leader described as an attempt to bribe the constituency by a Government which had promised that the new Canadian National directorate would operate publicity owned railway system, free of political interference.

CANADIAN GOVERNMENT ASKED TO CO-OPERATE

(Canadian Press Dispatch)

New York, Dec. 4.—The Canadian Government will be asked to participate in a plan, in partnership with the British Government, for the aiding of immigrants who desire to go to the Canadian West under the Salvation Army's immigration scheme. This was disclosed by Commissioner David Lamb, International Secretary of the Army, who is in New York en route to Canada, in an interview with a representative of the Canadian Press. The plan does not involve any very radical step in connection with Canada's immigration policy, or one which will necessitate large expenditure.

RESIDENCE AIRE SUNDAY AFTERNOON

Considerable Damage Resulted From Fire Which Started in Fireplace Chimney

Fire broke out in the residence at 103 Front Avenue on Sunday afternoon at 2.20 p.m. which resulted in considerable damage, not only to the interior of the house, but also to the furniture and other furnishings.

It appears that the occupants of the house, Mr. James Copeland, and his daughter were in the house at the time the fire commenced, but were not aware of the fact until they were warned by Major Ponton, who noticed the smoke coming out through the roof. Mr. Copeland was rooting up rafters when the alarm was given.

The brigade was immediately summoned, and on the scene of trouble in short order. Upon their arrival, however, the flames were endeavoring to break out through the roof, and quick action prevented a more serious conflagration. The fire which had originated in the fireplace chimney, had gotten in between the walls in the attic, and it was necessary for the firemen to chop a hole in the roof from the outside, and also from the inside of the house in order to get at the seat of the trouble. The blaze was finally quelled, but not before considerable damage had been done to the attic, and also the contents of the house, which suffered mostly from the water. It is understood that the loss is covered by insurance. The house is owned by Dr. Joseph Caldwell.

PROGRESSIVE M.P. BOLTS TO LIBERALS

(Canadian Press Dispatch)

Toronto, Dec. 4.—William James Hanmell, M.P. for Muskoka, says he has nothing to fear and nothing to gain in connection with his action in going over to the Liberals from the Progressives.

"I have not stooped to face my constituents," he declares. "There may be a few of them who will be critical, but they are of Tory stripe. I believe that the mass of voters will be satisfied with my action. I received strong Liberal support at the election one year ago, but the Tories bought me and Mr. Meighen came into the riding against me."

INTERNATIONAL POSTAL CONFERENCE OPENS AT OTTAWA TO-DAY

Post-Master General of the United States Present—Welcomed by Premier King

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Ottawa, Dec. 4th.—With expressions of welcome and goodwill, the first International Postal Conference between Canada and United States opened at the Parliament Buildings at eleven o'clock this morning. On behalf of Canada the Right Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, Premier, and Hon. Charles Murphy, Postmaster General, extended greetings to Hon. Hubert Work, Postmaster General of the United States, and the officials accompanying him, and Dr. Work on behalf of the United States replied.

Ottawa, Dec. 4.—Premier King observed in opening the Conference that there was no citizen of this country, however humble or however great, to whose interests were not vitally associated with the Post Office Department, for that reason the present conference had a great significance.

He spoke of his visit to Washington, of the cordial welcome given him, and of what he believed to have been beneficial results, of mutual discussion on matters of common interest. That was the best kind of reciprocity. Reciprocity in an endeavor to be of mutual service to the "greatest country in Canada," he continued "desire nothing more than most cordial and entire friendship with our neighbors to the south."

Ottawa, Dec. 4.—The following is the text of the speech delivered at the International Postal Convention, by Hon. Charles Murphy, Postmaster General of Canada.

"As it is my good fortune to share with the Prime Minister the privilege of extending a cordial welcome on behalf of the Canadian Government to Postmaster General Work and his associates, from the United States, I desire to express, not only my appreciation of their presence here, but my appreciation of the honor that has been paid us by the representatives of the great and friendly neighbor who are coming to the Capital of the Dominion to take part in this first International Postal Conference—an conference that objects intimately affect all the inhabitants of the North American Continent.

"Possibly, the full measure of our obligations, for the courtesy shown us will not be appraised, if I do not mention that it was the late Postmaster General of the United States who first suggested the holding of this Conference, and who, at the same time, left it for Canada to decide where it should be held.

"It has long been the custom among a certain class of public speakers to assert that the link which binds in friendship the American and the Canadian people is the link of a common origin, a common language, common ideals. That may sound pleasant to the ear; but it is not a correct statement. The real link is the service two nations is the Postal Service common to both. And that link has endured since the year 1763, when Benjamin Franklin opened Post Offices at Quebec, Three Rivers, and Montreal, and established the first postal service between Montreal and New York by way of Lake Champlain and Lake George.

"To the people of our day and generation Benjamin Franklin is known as a philosopher, a statesman and a scientist; but it is not so generally known that in the world of letters, and particularly in the postal service, Franklin enjoyed a reputation equal to that which he achieved in any of the other fields in which he excelled. However, such is the fact. In early Colonial days, he was in turn Deputy Postmaster General and Postmaster General, and in the discharge of the duties attaching to these offices he travelled over a vast and sparsely inhabited region that now contains near, by one-half the population of the United States, and Canada. Hence, it was that he came to Canada in 1763, and, in order that the mails might be, ods might make connection with the Steam Packets that sailed monthly from New York, he laid out a mail line in operation the first postal route between Montreal and New York.

"The international mail service that Franklin thus established followed a route, that, from the postal point of view, not only formed a link between neighboring nations, but which, even to this day, has an irresistible attraction for the traveller by land as well as for the lover of romance.

"Almost every mile of that route which lies between the waters of the St. Lawrence and those of the Hudson has woven into its history not only the ennobling record of the trials, the sacrifices and the sufferings of those pioneers, of the Cross, Joques, Le Caron, Bourdon, Poncet and Le Moyne; but there is also woven into the same history the no-less thrilling tale of the exploits and adventures of those brilliant soldiers of France, Champlain, Frontenac, Iberville, Levis and Montcalm, all of whom made use of the same highway in the course of their military operations.

"Reminders of the noble self-sacrifice and the splendid heroism of those distant years there are in plenty on both sides of the International Boundary line—that proclaiming the common heritage to which the people of Canada and of the United States are joint heirs. And, as a further proof of the bond that has so long existed between the two countries, the tourist who passes through the Village of Lake St. George will notice that the main thoroughfare is still called Canada Street—in memory of the days in Franklin's time, because of the fact that it was part of the new route by which the mails were carried to and from Canada.

"It is, therefore, entirely appropriate that the fellowship of those illustrious men who first forged the link of our international postal relations with Canada, in Canada is at its conference with their Northern neighbors and elaborate plans for extending and making more efficient that modern postal service which Franklin had the vision to conceive and the practical ability to put into successful operation.

"There have, of course, been numerous occasions since the year 1763 when the international service then inaugurated has been enlarged and improved, but the most important was to the Postal Conventions of 1792, 1848, 1875, 1891, 1898, 1907 and 1920.

"To solve new postal problems that arise for immediate attention is the object of this Conference. The time as which we meet should be propitious for a satisfactory solution of these problems. A period of peace and business instability is gradually giving way to more settled conditions, and the improvement in general business is reflected in the business of the Post Office. Proof of that, I may mention that while the operations of the Canadian Post Office Department resulted in a deficit at the end of the last fiscal year of $1,653,000, the operations of the present fiscal year will show not only that that deficit has been wiped out, but that there will be a surplus of, approximately, $1,000,000. And not only that, but that like results are reflected in the operations of the United States Post Office Department.

"Gratifying as are these results, we cannot rest satisfied with them.

MRS. PANKHURST ADDRESSES THE CANADIAN SOCIAL HYGIENE COUNCIL

"Social Hygiene" is a term which for broadest meaning implies normal social conditions. A campaign for "Social Hygiene" is a campaign, therefore, aimed to prevent abnormal environment and upbringing for every individual in the community. This implies good recreation, the development of the talents of each child, good home conditions and the organization of all methods which will provide the fullest opportunity for each person. Its attainment can only be achieved by co-operation on the part of the state, the community and the individual."

Ottawa, December 1.—Mrs. Pankhurst expressed her appreciation that a medical man (Dr. Heagerty) had dealt with the medical and scientific facts of the social hygiene problem. She prefaced her remarks by stating that the birthright of all human beings was knee-fold, namely, physical, mental and spiritual, and until we had that trinity of endowment properly conserved on all individuals the country would not get the race of men and women it should have. This was particularly important in those days when all citizens must assume their share of responsibility of governing the country.

It was apparent, she went on, that the problem of recreation was fundamental. People for the most part sought recreation outside of the home. Was that desirable, she asked?

In a recent survey by Mrs. Kinnear for the Canadian Social Hygiene Council of two large public institutions in the city of Toronto, covering female patients, the alarming fact was disclosed that 76 per cent. of these cases embarked on a career of moral delinquency through bad home conditions. Of these the contributory causes might be indicated as follows: death of father or mother, desertion by father or mother, separation of parents, drink and sickness in the home. That, what may be styled as "broken homes," actually was responsible for 76 per cent. of the immorality in these cases.

Proceeding, she pointed out, in addition to those who did not enjoy the advantage of proper home conditions, there was another large percentage that were denied the benefits of home environment at all, living in rooming or boarding houses, or working in domestic service. Not only four were actually found in houses of prostitution.

Another contributing factor, said Mrs. Pankhurst, was the absence of training by the parents themselves in knowledge of the right sort. Children grow up, go to school and enter upon life with their knowledge of its under lying facts provided by street gossip, questionable conversations or vile texts. One generation of human beings brought up in the right way would entirely transform the situation. All this talk about human nature was nonsense. It was not human nature but human ignorance and lack of proper education.

While nationality and religion in this particular survey did not enter into the result to any great extent, the foregoing conclusion is further confirmed by the fact that among both men and women the first steps towards immorality were taken during the years of fifteen, sixteen, seventeen and eighteen in the vast majority of cases.

"The investigation showed that the methods today plays a most important part in immorality, and in relation to the opportunity to get out to the city parks and country roads figures largely in the location at which immorality takes place, and appears gradually to be relegating the regular houses of prostitution into the background."

"In this social hygiene work", she declared, "we are endeavoring to change if possible the moral outlook on life, because while the physician does its best to cure, we shall not get a cure until the people have taken it up along with other social responsibilities, and insure against the passing on of disease to innocent victims —either wives or children."

"This is a national campaign simply for normal conditions, that is conditions which are ordained by nature. It is not in the scheme of nature that the source of life should be poisoned. There are people who claim that human nature is so constituted that we must have these vicious conditions. That is not so. It is not in the scheme of nature."

With regard to moral delinquency among men, Mrs. Pankhurst made the startling statement that among the cases investigated, 42 per cent. of committed men practised immorality, and home conditions did not bear the same influence as among women. "Though the social hygiene movement," she concluded, "we are going to get security for motherhood. The child is the most precious asset of the nation. Thus, those who talk about the second coming of Christ, may some day be faced with the question, 'What have you done with my little ones?' There was a time when it was thought you could treat this as a medical problem.

But you cannot divorce it from the moral issue, and the strength of this movement lies in the fact that we must combine the material with spiritual; to speak biblically, to bring about a change of heart.

Mrs. Pankhurst made a strong appeal for public support on behalf of the Ottawa Social Hygiene Council.

COULD HARDLY STAND AT TIMES

Hips, Back and Legs Would Have That Tired Ache

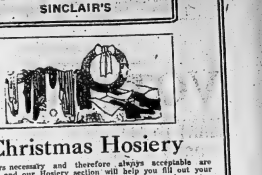

Everett, Washington.—"For several years I have had trouble with the lower part of my back and my hips and my legs would ache with that tired ache, I could hardly stand on my feet at times. I was always able to do my work although I did not feel good. I saw Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised and having heard several cases in it decided to try it. I feel first-rate at the present time. It has done wonders for me and I keep it in the house right along. I always recommend it to others who are sick and ailing."—Mrs. J. M. SINGER, 4032 High St., Everett, Washington.

To do any kind of work, or to play for that matter, it costs impossible if you are suffering from some form of female trouble. It may cause your back or your legs to ache, it may make you nervous and irritable. You may not be able to keep up and around, but you do not feel good.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a medicine for women. It is especially adapted to relieve the cause of the trouble and then these annoying pains, aches and "no good" feelings disappear.

It has done this for many, many women; why not give it a fair trial—now.

ment seek to make possible, results more gratifying still. We can, by mutual co-operation, assist each other in attaining such an end; and, having regard to what has been accomplished in the past, I am confident that the outcome of the next few days' deliberations will inaugurate a new era in international postal achievement, postal efficiency and postal success.

"A glance at the programme prepared for this meeting will indicate how numerous and varied are the subjects to be dealt with. You will also observe that the subjects to be discussed are not limited to those enumerated. Among those not mentioned may be cited one upon which, the experience and judgment of our American friends may be brought to bear with practical advantage, namely, the proposal to have a summary aeroplane mail service, and, for that reason, it could not be finally determined at a conference composed only of postal representatives; however, if time permits after the regular programme has been disposed of, a discussion of this proposal will be both illuminating and helpful.

"There is another subject not included in the programme to which brief allusion may be made. I refer to the suggestion that the domestic rate of postage on letters in Canada might be reduced from 3c. to 2c. The fact that such a reduction was made in the United States a few years ago is often cited as a reason for similar action being taken in this country. As there seems to be an impression that the suggested reduction is a matter within the jurisdiction of the Post Office Department, it is desirable to point out that such is not the case. The increase from 2c. to 3c. on the Canadian domestic rate on letters was due to the special War Revenue Act of 1915, which provided that in addition to the postage payable in the form of a postage stamp, there should be a tax of 1 c. imposed on every letter and postcard mailed within Canada. A return to the former rate of 2c. is, therefore, possible only when the special war tax of 1c. is repealed. That is a matter to be determined by the Finance Department, and not by the Post Office Department. Its determination rests, of course, on considerations of revenue and policy that are within the special purview of the Finance Department. While such are the facts, the Post Office Department is both willing and eager to assist in procuring the 1c. war tax and restoring the 2c. postage rate.

"Once more may I assure our visitors from the United States, that although in their journey from Washington to Ottawa they crossed the international boundary line, they did not then enter a country of strangers. Quite the reverse. They are, in fact, among friends and brothers who are desirous of expressing neighborly feeling and international good-will in deeds, rather than in words. A true time to further speak on my part. With great pleasure I give way to Honorable Dr. Work, The Postmaster General of the United States.

TWO MORE BODIES RECOVERED FROM ILL-FATED MAPLEHURST

Houghton, Mich., Dec. 3.—Two more bodies of the eleven lost when the Canadian steamer Maplehurst sank at the Portage Lake Canal Friday morning were found yesterday. One was that of Captain George Menard, Kingston, Ont., and the other, not fully identified, was either that of Chief Engineer Ambrose Dunn, of Kingston, or Stewart Hughes, of Montreal.

Eight bodies still are missing. Nine survivors left last night for their homes in Canada.

SCHOONER DAVIS RELEASED.

Kingston, Ont., Dec. 3.—On Saturday the schooner Lyman Davis, owned by Capt. McCullough, Napanee, was released. She was ashore on Waupoos Island, having been blown there by the gale of last Sunday night. After lightening 75 tons of her load over board, the Donnelly wrecking crew was able to release the schooner, which proceeded to Napanee.

HOLLINGER REACHES FOR BOWELS OF EARTH

Timmins, Nov. 28 (Special).—The Hollinger Consolidated has 2,700 men on its payroll. A big force is engaged on construction work on surface where the erection of a huge ore house is under way, and which will have a capacity of 12,000 tons.

Showing the greatly increased efficiency in the mine is the fact that a fraction over three tons of ore are being raised from underground for each underground shift per man.

A total of about 120 machines are employed. Ore is being drawn from the 900 and 1,250-foot levels as well as upper levels. The work of continuing the main shaft to great depth has commenced from 1,250 feet. The first objective will be to connect up with the 1,550-foot level and then to continue downward steadily until the ultimate objective of possibly a mile or more in depth is reached.

A. F. Brigham, general manager, told a newspaperman that it is reasonable to expect the proposition of gold to extend to the greatest depth to which it is possible for man to dig. —North Bay Nugget.

HER HUMBLE OPINION

The head of the house had telephoned that he would bring home a guest to luncheon—and a grouch when his wife realized that he would delight in dining. Preparations were made accordingly, with results satisfactory to her hospitable and housewifely heart.

Unfortunately six-year-old Gladys came in a trifle late. Sweeping the table with one all-embracing glance, "Hmm!" she queried audibly, as she climbed into her chair, "is this lunch?"

"Why, of course, it's luncheon, Gladys," her mother hastily interposed, with a reproving gesture.

But Gladys was not to be awed. "Well," she replied, "maybe it is; but it looks exactly like Sunday dinner."

Now Corporation Will Provide Hydro Power for Rich Mining Districts

Initial Bond Offering is Being Made to Cover Cost of Installing First Three Units—Earnings Will Largely Exceed Interest Requirements.

Montreal, Dec. 1. (Special).—Owing to the widespread interest in Canadian gold mining operations, more particularly in the Northern Ontario region, the new bond issue of the Great Northern Power Company, Limited, is a development of special importance in view of the tremendous growth looked for in the next few years and the demand which is bound to arise for hydro power to operate mining plants and reduction mills.

This company is placing on the market a new issue of $550,000 first mortgage 7 per cent. sinking fund bonds, due in 1937, or for a period of fifteen years. The interest is payable semi-annually and the bonds may be redeemed in whole or in part on any interest date after Nov. 1, 1927. The issue amounts to $550,000, and no other issue may be made except to the extent of 75 per cent. of the cost of further expenditures on capital account and then only provided the net earnings of the company, after sinking fund provision, shall have shown the interest charges earned not less than 1½ times on both those issued and those planned to be issued. This showing must be for a period of twelve consecutive months within fourteen months immediately preceding the issue.

The power sites of the company are so located that they are in a position to supply practically all the camps north of the Cobalt district, including Porcupine, Kirkland Lake, Matachewan and Shining Tree in the gold zone and Gowganda in the silver producing zone.

In Matachewan and Shining Tree no power is at present available even for carrying on development work, as the result of which the development work of the district is seriously retarded. The only power possible is steam, the cost of which is prohibitive.

All the available power in the Porcupine field is taken up and there is a demand for a greater supply. Some steam power is being used which costs from $300 to $500 per horse power per annum. The metered rate for hydro power in that territory is $60 to $70 per horse power.

John E. Hardman, the well-known mining engineer, who has had many years' experience with the territory, has prepared a report commenting favorably on the prospects of power requirements and no difficulty is anticipated in disposing of all the power the company can produce at attractive rates. The district is of such a character as to be heavily mineralized and in each of the districts served there are at least two mines of real magnitude with excellent prospects of developments which will command the full complement of power when it is ready for delivery.

Contracts are being taken only with mines of financial responsibility and their immediate lines are being directed to such mines, the ownership being vested in the company. The mines bear the cost of the transmission system which will be repaid to them through rebates on a percentage of the cost of the power they consume.

McNatt, Thomson & Co., Limited, who have specialized in Canadian hydro-electric securities, have purchased the issue and will shortly make an offering of it on the Canadian market.

Among the Canadian hydro issues recently floated by the same firm are those of the Manitoba Power Co., Laurentian Power Co., Limited; Southern Canada Power Company, and the East Kootenay Power Co., Limited.

SALVAGED COAL

A rumor started on Saturday that, there was a possibility of some of the hard coal, salvaged from the schooners wrecked last Sunday night, trying to get into the bay, might find its way to Belleville. Many people in need of coal have been making inquiries regarding the matter, as, apparently they began to count on getting a portion of it in their cellars.

Information obtained from various sources has shown that there is absolutely no foundation to the rumor. Only one of the four vessels was consigned to Belleville, and as fortune has decreed, this one is the only one that has entirely passed out of existence and there is practically no hope that her cargo will ever be salvaged. On the other hand all salvaging operations will be conducted by wrecking companies belonging to Kingston, but at this season of the year they could hardly be prevailed upon to come to Belleville with scows and tugs, as the probability of being frozen in, is too great.

Add to this the fact that screened hard coal is selling at $17.50 a ton in Kingston, it is hardly likely that the salvors would go to the expense of loading this coal by hand into railway cars and paying freight to Belleville where this same coal sells at $10.00 per ton.

Of course these wrecked cargos have probably passed out of the hands of the consignees, and in that case Belleville would have no claim on them at all. People would be ill-advised to place any faith in the rumor. Citizens should protect themselves in every reasonable way, purchasing any fuel that they can. Those who wait for salvaged coal to come to Belleville will have a long, cold wait.

THE GREEK EXECUTIONS

The wholesale executions at Athens on Tuesday of, hitherto, the leading personages in Grecian affairs, cause one to wonder what the world is coming to. This affair will meet with the vigorous disapproval of civilization, as the atrocity is nothing short of murder and is somewhat on a parallel with the Red rule of Russia. The Hellenics of the olden days were a people of great prestige, but that state is indeed greatly discounted in the present generation in Greece, if this particular event is to count for anything.

It would appear that the executioners, in a state of wrath and fury, exemplified their murderous and revengeful temper in the bastard sort, stating as their reason the fact that these military and public men so sent to their death, were directly responsible for the loss of the recent war for expansion, with the Turks.

There is no excuse for this degenerate barbarism, and it is a challenge to our League of Nations and to our civilized institutions, that cannot be overlooked.

Great Britain, at any rate, has frowned upon the affair, and to more forcibly impress her attitude upon the Greek Government, has withdrawn her Ambassador.

HERE AND THERE

ANIMALS AND THE WONDERFUL THINGS THEY DO.

Think of the spider and its web. The web is as well thought out as the dome of St. Paul's. The spider builds as if it had studied stress and strain like an engineer. It makes one kind of web for itself and another for its victims; it meets the danger of storms by making new runners.

Go to the ant. How many among the millions who trample them to death know the wonderful things these creatures do? They will capture the green flies that devour our roses, make them prisoners, herd and pasture them as cows to keep them, protect their eggs to ensure a continued supply, and when new blos are born the ants will carry them to the plants that green flies live on, and take them back to prison.

Long before man had built his first bridge the beaver had built his dam; long before man had thought it all out the beaver had arched his dam against the stream and made little sluices. One of the fundamental rules of engineering was working in the world of animals. Ants make tunnels. The beaver builds a lodge, at his dam, and a storehouse for winter. For countless ages he has solved the problem that so long baffled Hamlin, when he lay in he awoke and finds a free water gate through which he can receive supplies.

The bees, perhaps the first sanitarians in the world have established a civilization as wonderful as ours. They toil and build and store; they obey the laws and punish those who break them; they live and work and die without being inspired by motives beyond the dreams of men

THE YEAR IS GROWING OLD.

The Sullener came, a thing of beauty,
A phantom pageant, green and white,
That lurched in streams and sang in breezes
From warm hills, kissed with sunny light.

The green is faded now and languid,
The trees are dyed a heavy shade of gold;
And birds no longer sing their love-songs,
For, see! the year is growing old.

TWO IS COMPANY—THREE IS A CROWD.

In talking to Miss Schooley, who is the executive head in the United States of the Y.W.C.A., after she has organized and completed a successful campaign to raise twenty-five million dollars, she had the following statement to make:

"One of the most difficult situations to handle—are you sure everyone will agree with me about this?—say I'm sure everyone will agree with me about this,—is that Miss Schooley," is to try to 'sell' something to a person when there are other people present. If you go into a man's office, for instance, and one of his friends or associates is there, you have got to put hold of this third person's interest, too. If you don't, he is a silent force against you all the time. Such a situation requires a good deal of diplomacy.

"In the first place, never show annoyance, or embarrassment, because of this third person's presence. Treat him as you do with the waiter there; but you must not give the least size of this. "That will make him your antagonist. Include him in the conversation. Assume that he has will be interested. Don't retard him as a hindrance. Regard him as another prospect.

"I have found myself especially in just such a situation, and have succeeded in 'selling' my idea to both men, receiving a contribution from each of them. Here again you can help yourself by an understanding of the man nature. In the third party, the man who is unexpected by present, feels that he enjoys a sort of immunity; you haven't come to ask him for money to help on any cause you have nothing is expected; and because he is on that 'safe' frame of mind, he is willing to be convinced that you have a good proposition.

"In a case like that, I bring this third person into the conversation. I talk first to one man, then to the other. I ask the opinion of the third person occasionally; and often he says something which even helps my argument. You see, he is more open to conviction, because he doesn't think he is going to be asked for money. And if, as not infrequently happens, as I said before, that he becomes so thoroughly sold on the idea that he, too, makes a contribution."

PROTECTIONIST LIBERALS
(Perth Expositor.)

The King Government contains every variety of believer in tariff matters from the free trader through to the high protectionist. There is no unity in the King Government in tariff matters. They have a variety for every section of the country. In the election, now closing, the campaign managers rent their "protectionist" members here. Not one of the speakers is a free trader. Yet the man who was not appealing to rural sections to vote for the King Government who a short year ago were promising free trade and a lower tariff.

FAITHFUL TO MR. STEWART'S MEMORY

(Perth Expositor.)

Lanark County has given many an outstanding figure to Canadian public life, but none more notable in the esteem and service of this country than did the late Hon. J. A. Stewart, K.C., M.P. His untimely death in October left a vacancy in Parliament, which will be filled in the election next Monday. Against heavy odds, Mr. Stewart won Lanark a short year ago for the Conservatives by a majority of 2633. Lanark has always been Conservative, and there is no good reason why this county should change at the present time. Lanark cannot change the mind of one man—simply on the invitation of a Government that is hard pressed. Lanark loved Mr. Stewart. The Lanark Union Conservative party cannot forget him and are looking to this county to retain it as a Conservative in Member. Hon. Dr. Preston is the successor to Mr. Stewart, and sentiment might well guide the hand that marks the ballot on Monday—particularly in Perth and adjacent townships, for whose interests he has served Mr. Stewart labored at all times. Faithful then to Mr. Stewart's memory, let Lanark give Hon. Preston a 2500 majority on Monday.

ST. ANDREW'S DAY AT KINGSTON

The members of the Anglican W. A. of this city held their corporate communion service in St. George's Cathedral on St. Andrew's Day. The Lord Bishop Right Rev. Dr. Bidwell was the celebrant, Rural Dean Cooper read the Epistle, and Rural Dean Starr read the Gospel. The sermon was preached by Rev. G. W. Hart of the Committee of the Convention, Mirfield, England. He preached a powerful sermon on woman's duty and importance. He contrasted the character of Lydia and Jezebel of Thyatura. One was a good woman, faithful to duty, and charitable. The other was an evil woman. Both were enthusiastic and energetic. The difference to-day was to get people enthusiastic about Christ. He spent eight years in South Africa. All the Missionaries were enthusiastic and enthusiastic in their work. A lot of Christian women did not care whether a child was baptized up as a Moslem or as a Christian.

Lydia and Jezebel both had much influence in the community.

He appealed to the women to use their influence in the work of Christ in the church and at the home.

At 7.30 there was a corporate communion for all young people's Societies, Sunday school workers and church workers.

In the afternoon and evening there were open houses at the Bishop's Palace, and Deanery, completed by Rev. G. W. Hart. At 2.30 p.m., in St. James' Sunday school room, Rural Dean Decanal Chapter of Frontenac held its Fall session. After transacting the usual business, an address by Bishop was read by Rev. Mr. Cantrell of Shanty Lake. The subject was, "Christian Science and Spiritualism Book of Revelation." The next meeting of the Chapter will be held at Wolfe Island.

On Friday, Dec. 1st, the Rev. G. W. Hart conducted a quiet day for the members of the W. A. of the parish of Portarlie. His addresses were plain heart to heart talks to the clergy. He pointed out that the work of the ministry lead the Christ life. The sins of the teachers are teachers of sin. He pointed out the need of a rule for their daily life. He referred to his work in South Africa, where he spent eight years. The work was full of inspiration and listened with rapt attention.

At the close of the quiet day Bishop Bidwell, on behalf of the members of the clergy, thanked Father Hart for his kindness in coming to Kingston and for his helpful addresses.

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor of The Intelligencer.

Dear Sir:—I notice in your account of the concert of Thursday evening given by the artists, Mr. Vigo Kidd and Miss Helen Hunt, and under my direction, you speak of the City Hall as a very poor place for high class entertainments, a fact which I heartily agree with, but when you say there are other places more suitable, I for, one would certainly like to know where they may be found.

I have been here a number of years and have brought and endeavored to get good concerts to appear in Belleville and have often wished for a more suitable hall, but outside of the churches and Opera House—which are not available for these entertainments—I have yet to discover a better one.

We greatly need a nice attractive concert and lecture hall, holding six or eight hundred people, comfortably seated and lighted, and I know of no better benefit that might be conferred on the Belleville public than by some philanthropic and generous hearted person either to finance or donate a hall for the use of present and future citizens. I hope it may soon be done.

Thanking you for your space.

I am sincerely,

V. P. HUNT.

Editor's note—In our issue of Dec. 1st we stated that there were better places than the City Hall in which to hold such concerts. We still believe this to be the case in our opinion as to Prof. Hunt, they are either not available at all, or there are conditions connected with their being available, which could not be met. This is to be regretted, and we hope some plan may be evolved whereby a suitable hall for such entertainments may be secured.

THE NEWER CANADA, FARTHER NORTH

1—A farm in the Peace River country. 2—Vegetables and children grow well in the newest north. 3—Vermilion Landing on the Peace River. 4—Peace River potato patch.

So far as known, the first grain ever grown on the Peace River is now the Province of Alberta, was in the Peace River country. This was in 1909. Daniel W. Harmon, in charge of the Northwest Company's post at Dunvegan, records in his diary that in that year on July 23rd, he cut his barley.

"I think it is the finest," he wrote, "what I have ever seen in any country. The soil on the points of land along this river are excellent."

Harmon's opinions as to the possibilities of the country was supported by traders and travellers who followed. Professor John Macoun was the first scientific explorer to study it and interest with rapt attention.

At the close of the quiet day Bishop Bidwell, on behalf of the members of the clergy, thanked Father Hart for his kindness in coming to Kingston and for his helpful addresses.

Some People Believe

That a married man turns up ever so often with a black eye.

That all mothers-in-law are what Shermanhe'd war is.

That the cook has a couple of policeman friends in every evening.

That father always kicks Ferdy downstairs when he asks for daughter's hand.

That every Irishman says "Begorrah!" and

That every Englishman wears a monocle and says "Bah Joye!"

In that year, according to the figures of the Alberta Department of Agriculture, there were produced in the provincial constituency of Peace River the following quantities of grain: Spring wheat, 1,035,650 bushels, an average yield per acre of 26.34; winter wheat, 31,107, an average of 16.26; oats, 4,334,400, an average of 40.22; barley, 323,490, an average of 22.42; rye, 40,802, an average of 43.81. Harmon's judgment was thus well vindicated after 111 years.

It should not be forgotten that its mineral and timber wealth may yet be shown to equal its agricultural. For over a century it has been a rich fur producer and many farmers add considerably to their revenue by trapping in their spare time.

Dr. C. M. Dawson, when assistant director of the geological survey, made an estimate that in the Peace River territory there was at least 23,500 square miles of land suitable to agriculture. The acreage sown to various grains in 1920 in the country immediately tributary to the river was under 175,000. Estimates that have been made since have reduced his figure, so it is evident that there is plenty of opportunity for new settlement. He calculated that if all the land available for cultivation in the drainage basin of the river.

The Edmonton, Dunvegan and British Columbia and Central Canada railways were built in the early years of the European war. The mileage from Edmonton to the town of Peace River is 314 and to Grande Prairie 407. But it was not till 1920, when the C.P.R. began the construction of these lines, that a satisfactory service was established. Edmonton. The thermometer does go away down at times in the winter here, but it's doubtful if anyone has ever pulled out on that account. The mean winter temperature at Fort Vermilion is but a few degrees lower than that of Winnipeg.

In the growing season chief fruit danger is not great. In thirty years in the Fort Vermilion farm, only twice has there been frost damage, and then the loss was far from complete. The display of flowers and vegetables at that fair testified to the quality of the soil for the growth of Augist. The average precipitation is between twelve and thirteen inches, and a map of it occurs in June and July, it proves ample.

The charm which the country possessed for all who traversed it in the days when it was still "the wild northland," the trip which Sir William Butler gave it in the seventies still holds for those who pursue modern tracks than his. To journey by the river, from where it burst through the mountain canyon, west of Hudson's Hope, to the mouth of Chutes, seven hundred miles downstream there is no obstacle to navigation between the points—an experience never to be forgotten. At Dunvegan the banks are three hundred feet high, gradually lessening as the river broadens At Fort Vermilion it is close to a mile and a half across.

It is a waterway along which at every large population must some day find prosperity and contentment. What has been accomplished in the last few years has been made to show that "some days" is not now as far off as it seems. The time will be long-period when Peace River development was only a dream.

WORK

Work: well, play, well, comradeship still keeping.
Set the windows of our soul as wide as they can be!
"Where dost thou dwell, sweet happiness?"
'I live in many places—palace, hall, And cottage, or where lonely waters fall,
In crowded streets and courts, where white wares break,
With those that laugh, I laugh, with watches wake;
Fence my sure root, mirth by blow soon call;
Children well know me, but they best of all
Who found 've had hidden in their own heartache."

Fashion Fancies

THE RISE OF RIBBONS

Ribbons have to a certain extent always played a rather important part in fashions. Some times their position has been distinctly conspicuous, and then again their prestige has been dimmed, and for the time being they were more or less in obscurity. But this season ribbon is a factor which must be acknowledged for there are certain phases in the fashions of the winter which are best expressed through the medium of ribbons.

When one remembers the ribbon costumes of a dance ago, when satin, grosgrain and taffeta were the only ribbons to be found; the ribbons of to-day in their wide range of weaves, their exquisite patterns and marvellous colorings are really amazing. And it is not surprising that designers have chosen ribbon for the concretion on many of their loveliest creations.

One particular frock, a lovely symphony in pastel colors, is made of wide metal ribbon in shades of rose, blue and shadowy green, arranged in alternate rows on a background of silver net. The effect is delightful.

A STREET COSTUME

A street costume for the youthful figure has a short hip-length coat of brown matelasse over a brown velvet skirt. The collar is of brown rabbit fur, which develops into revere of henna-colored moire de chine, the longer of which ends with a man glie knotted at one side of the jacket.

WOMAN'S BRAIN INFERIOR, SAYS MARY GARDEN

Chicago, Dec. 1.—"Woman is the inferior of man. Her brain is two ounces lighter and she is centuries behind man in mentality. You may not think so, but I am convinced.

Thus did Mary Garden defy her sex on her return to Chicago for the opera opening.

"Men have two ounces more brains than women. That is a great deal. Woman can never hope to make it up."

"The more I see of people," said the singer, "the more firmly convinced I become that women are far inferior to men mentally. Among my friends it is always the men who do the things that count. Fancy a woman building a great railway system. She couldn't. It is not in her."

Mix cornstarch with the one-fourth cup cold water, add to sugar and simmer thirty minutes. Add butter, salt and vanilla, and serve as soon as butter is melted.

LINKED LIVES

By

D. Kinmount Roy

In fact, Kinkman was in the worst possible plight; his only satisfaction, when he had time to consider it, was that he was a good deal richer; but then the bitterness of failure in the larger game on which he had set his heart, poisoned even that crumb of comfort. Still, he had the Squire's written statement, and it would be strange if he could not extort something from his fears.

In short, Kinkman was in a very bad humor. He was angry with his son for being such a poor second in such a fine business; and he was angry with himself for not having disabled MacAlpin before Graham came up. He might even have shot the girl, seeing he could not carry her off, and so have earned the Squire's guidance—and perhaps his gratitude. If he groaned in mental misery over his defeat, he also groaned in bodily suffering; his bones seemed out of joint, his wrists were blue and swollen, his back felt as though it were broken, and he was, taken all in all, but a heap of wretchedness and baffled greed, cursing his luck, cursing MacAlpin, cursing the Squire, and himself and everything.

It was quite clear to others that his son's injuries were far more serious than he was aware of; but of this he took little note. The young fellow lay still, his eyes closed, and his breath faint and laboured; at times his mind wandered, and it was—or would have been to some persons—pitiful to hear him professing his devotion to the lady of the island, and vowing to guard her with his life.

Had Kinkman not been so much absorbed in his own misery and the failure of his evil schemes, he might have realized sooner that his son was out of his projects once for all, a wreck in body and mind, so that that part of his wicked devising had come to naught, and the young man's broken life lay at his father's door.

The wind had fallen, and with the approach of night there came a hush of brooding fear, which spread itself like a mystic mantle over the still waters. The captain knew the signs full well, and the crew busied themselves with a will to put the little craft in trim to meet the onrush of the gale. Before night had quite closed in the man on the look-out had noticed the white horses in the far distance charging towards them, while coasting vessels and fishing smacks were making all haste to find shelter before the storm broke.

The schooner does not, however, follow their example and had no choice but to stand out to sea, trusting to weather the gale. Sailors are proverbially superstitious, and the crew of the "Rover" were no exception to the rule. They had a rooted aversion to sailing with Kinkman on board, being fully persuaded that he had private dealings with the enemy of mankind, to book special pleasure in bringing sailor men into deadly peril. The captain scorned their superstitious misgivings and bombarded them with bitter sarcasms and oaths, from a rich vocabulary compounded of the evil sayings of many lands. The men obeyed, but with a sullen resentment that finally became dangerous. Soon they were in the heart of the storms; the sea rose as if under some demoniac impulse, and crashed over them, recoiling only to return with fresh fury to the onslaught, and bursting upon them again and again with undiminished rage.

The schooner rose gallantly to the contest, and breasted the breakers, quivering though all her timbers, but with a buoyant obedience to her helm which soon filled the crew with delight, and, forgetting their ill-humour, they entered into the spirit of the battle with all their might; and breaking out each full-throated cheers, they vowed that they would back their ship against Kinkman and all the fiends he could command. The night was dark as Erebus, and no sound could be heard but the tramp, tramp of the sailors, the thunder of the elements, and the swish of water. Once and again the Captain bellowed out an order which cut through the turmoil like a keen rapier and braced the crew to the utmost tension of endeavour and endurance.

Toward morning the wind fell, and by dawn there was nothing left of the hurricane but a light breeze and a troubled sea.

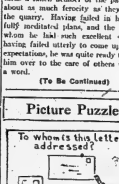

About two weeks later, wind and tide being favourable, they were heading for a snug cove on a rock-bound coast. The captain, who evidently knew his ground, threaded his way with marvellous seamanship among dangerous rocks and treacherous shoals, sailing gallantly on, without pause or doubt, where few would have cared to follow, until he dropped anchor in a natural basin that seemed as though specially fashioned to give shelter and safe harbourage to storm-tossed wanderers of the waves.

Here Kinkman landed, but disappointment awaited the women of the party, who were told they had still a journey of many leagues before them, as Heathfield required medical help and care.

The young man, in spite of all the attention they could give him, remained in a semi-stupor from which nothing seemed sufficient to arouse him. If there was anyone on earth for whom Kinkman cared, it was his son; but the man's nature had so long been under the influence of the lowest motives and dominated by greed and crime, that his son's continued helplessness only irritated him beyond patience. His was the disposition of the wolf, that attacks a fallen member of the pack with about as much ferocity as they would the quarry. Having failed in his carefully meditated plans, and the son for whom he had such excellent schemes having failed utterly to come up to his expectations, he was quite ready to hand him over to the care of others without a word.

Successful Studying

The Good Side of Cramming

(This is the tenth of a series of articles which will help young students to learn more and get better grades by showing them how to study more efficiently.)

Since there must be "cramming", Cramming is harmful when it means trying to learn in a short time a lot of points you let slide, but if cramming means careful reviewing, it is a good thing.

Every one should do some cramming.

No matter how well you may have learned a thing in the first place, you need to refresh your mind before an examination, bringing facts out of their storehouse and dusting them off ready for use.

Go Over Outlines

First of all, read over all the outlines you have made and then you were studying the subject in the first place. If necessary, memorize the large divisions, so as to have them organized in your mind. Then, if you have dates to learn, or other sets of facts, drill them thoroughly for a short time, work on something else and then drill again, repeating these brief drills until you feel you really have the facts in mind.

If you have more than one lesson to study, divide up your time, making sure your mind to get a certain lesson in a section as a whole and renews your interest in it.

Set a limit for your study period and stick to it. At the end of the time set go to bed. Never let your cramming drag on until your mind is tired out.

The Short Story Jr.

ELEANOR'S LEMON PIE

It was Monday afternoon. The domestic science class filled into the large white kitchen. "Now, girls," said Miss Smith, "I hope you will make some very fine lemon pies today. I shall choose the best one to exhibit at the Institute."

"She'll take Eleanor's, of course," whispered one of the girls. "Did you ever see such a teacher's pet?"

"No, I never! She took her cookies and her bread for the exhibit. She thinks just anything Eleanor makes is perfect."

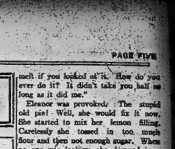

"Well, Eleanor always does lots better than the rest of us," Fanny Baker spoke up, "so I don't see what call we have to be jealous. But oh, dear, I don't see why her things are always so much better. I do try so hard. I wish I could put something in the exhibit, don't you?"

The girls had lowered their voices, but unknown to them Eleanor had heard every word. "The jealous old things," she thought. "I hate every one of them, except, of course, Fanny. Fanny's a dear. If it hadn't been for her, I would have let my bread burn the other day."

Eleanor had thought that she would work hard and have all the exhibit her work, just to show the girls, but now she was seized with a sudden desire to have Fanny's pie exhibited instead of her own.

Smiling mysteriously to herself, she carefully dumped her ingredients together, mixed them in a haphazard way and popped the crust in the oven to bake. "There, that surely won't be anything extra," she thought.

"Oh, how lovely," Fanny sighed enviously, as Eleanor drew the crust from the oven. "It looks like it would just much if you looked at it. How do you ever do it? It didn't take you half so long as it did me."

Eleanor was provoked. The stupid old pie! Well, she would fix it now. She started to put her lemon filling. Carelessly she tossed in too much flour and then not enough sugar. When she saw was looking, she dumped in a whole handful of salt. Later, however, when she poured the filling into the crust, she was disgusted to see that it looked perfect. Of course it would taste awful—then she remembered that Miss Smith would never taste it.

"Your pie looks fine, Eleanor," she said as she passed.

Her mouth set in a grim line Eleanor started to beat the whites of her eggs. She'd soon fix that disgusting old pie. She turned the oven on as high as she could and popped the pie in to brown the meringue. Slamming the oven door shut, she went off to wash her dishes.

"Eleanor, your pie's done," Fanny called. "You had the oven awfully high, but I turned it down for you. Oh, my hands are all wet. I'll take it out." She pulled out the pie, how a lovely, golden brown mist. "Isn't it just beautiful?"

Every one agreed that it was, when Eleanor's pie was exhibited at the fair.

QUEENS ARE DOMINION CHAMPS. DEFEAT ESKIMOS HANDILY

Queens Out-Run and Out-Kick Visitors, Also Predominate in Plunging, Which Was Eskimos' Specialty—Visitors Disappoint Fans With Their Exhibition

Kingston, Dec. 2.—For the first time in many, many years Queen's-Montreal Universityare Rugby champions of Canada. The second attempt of Western Canada to move the Grey Cup from the East failed yesterday at Richardson Stadium here. The Presbyterian representatives of the Kingston institution of learning amassed a total of thirteen points against one by the Edmonton Elks. But the latter were the best in the West. The better team won, even though the Elks were in the final, 1 to 0, at half-time.

To say that Edmonton disappointed Eastern fans is about right. There were few in the East who expected the Edmonton would win. Nor were there many in the West. But it was figured that great plunging of the Western owners would again dominate, as it dominated last season in the final with Argos. And it was figured that the Queen's backfield would offset, and more, all that Edmonton could offer in plunges. But the Elks fared poorly in line plunging. And when Queen's stopped them there they had no other plays. Despite reports to the contrary, the West have learned little from last year in the matter of backfield work. A few plays were attempted, but they were slow and poorly executed.

Queen's outplayed Edmonton, which was more a surprise than was anything else. Eighteen times during the game did Queen's make yards; sometimes, of course, on backfield runs. Edmonton made yards on six occasions only. Queen's made more than that on straight line work. The winners adopted a style of defence that put a damper on the heavy line work. Knowing that Edmonton had nothing in the matter of backfield and end runs to worry about, Queen's kept their entire team, except Leadley and Batstone, in a small area. The front line usually stopped the heavy forces of the attack, and the second line smothered in right on that spot.

Had Queen's adopted that style of defence against any team in the East they would have been beaten. Argos would have run around those ends for great gains. And Edmonton could have won, or at least made a better showing, had they had someone who could skirt the end fast. Queen's did not need to have anyone far out because on the few end runs and backfield plays Edmonton did try they were so slow that the speedy Queen's team had plenty of chance to hover quickly and frustrate such a play.

Edmonton's weakness was in lack of well-balanced backfield and an outside wing. Fraser kicked well enough, in fact at times outpunted Leadley, but he had to hurry because his line did not hold tight. As a result his outside wings were never anywhere near Batstone and Leadley when the catch was made. This put Queen's then get into their action, and invariably ran it back for good distances to then punt. It was this returning of punts, especially by Leadley, that featured Queen's play.

First Half Lifeless.

The first half was very draggy, and though Edmonton scored the only point list before half time was called the crowd had nothing to enthuse over. Queen's did pull some of the backfield runs, but at that Edmonton had a lot of success in breaking through and stopping a lot before they were in motion. And then Queen's made a number of bad, moves that Edmonton took cdvantage of. But when Queen's started the third quarter with Leadley kicking on the first down and returning punts, the tide turned. Fraser caught wall, but Thomas, Walker and those other Queen's tacklers downed him in his tracks. There was bound to be a fumble, and there was. Then four successive bucks sent Mundell over for a touchdown. That was the 6-0 count at this point, though during the entire period Queen's looked much the better. Another touchdown followed in the final quarter, when Queen's took another line-plunging streak and ended it with a backfield run on which Harding romped over for a touch.

Summed all up, the West will have to improve in backfield plays and in developing outside wings who have speed and can tackle. Edmonton were woefully weak at the outside position. There seems to be no reason why Western teams cannot develop backfield plays. Of course, it was claimed Queen's victory was due to that famous running interference which features their play. But they have it down to such perfection that officials hardly know whether it is illegal or not. Truth to tell they did not use it nearly as much against Edmonton as against Argos. Edmonton backed in substitutes, too. Had they had one good man to work with Fraser on the backfield, more success would have been achieved.

Those Edmonton line-plungers hit the line as they did last year, but they found a different style of defence. The Edmonton line opened their opponents to one side to make the hole because Queen's stood back a few distances and Edmonton were afraid to encroach any further for fear of overstepping the threeyard zone. On the other hand the Edmonton defence against the Queen's line plunging was not of the best. The tackling was hit and miss, though they did a lot of that kind themselves. Queen's' cony were without Captain McKelvey their best wing man.

Play started, but retired in the first few minutes. An injured back sustained in the Argo game, bothered him. Reynolds, who replaced McKelvey, plunged in great style.

Those who looked at the Eskimos last season and the Elks this year opined that the former made the better showing, though they were beaten 23 to 9, as against 13 to 1 for the Elks. The field was in perfect condition, and the dry footing aided the speedy Queen's team. Edmonton preferred the heavy going. The Elks were not downhearted. They claim they will be back again—and will be welcomed.

The line-up:—

Queen's—McLeod, flying wing; Batstone, Leadley and Harding, halves; Evans, quarter; Lewis, snap back; McIlreed and Carson, inside wings; McKelvey and Mundell, middle wings; Walker and Thomas, outside wings; Venle, Deinbay, Dolan, Reynolds, Johnson, Nichols, Grondin, McEwl and Bond, subs.

Edmonton—Dorman, flying wing; Fraser, Dunsworth and Creighton, halves; McAllister, quarter; Shieman snap back; Carrigan and Duke inside wings; Palmer and Vance, middle wings; Cullinane and Burnett, outside wings; Brunson, Seely, Adams, Brown, Spence and Dye, subs.

Referee—"Silver" Quilty, Ottawa.

Umpire—E. Murray Thompson, Kingston.

Head linesman—Bob Isbister, Hamilton.

KINGSTON IS NOW ON MAP

The Old City Was a Gay One Saturday and There Was Splendid Reason For The Gaiety

If Kingston is a "Tombstone City," as it has been dubbed by rival rugby teams in the past, the resurrection certainly occurred on Saturday afternoon, when the tricolor rugby squad of Queen's University, defeated the Edmonton Eskimos, champions of the West, and thereby became the Champion Rugby team of the Dominion of Canada.

Possibly never before did Richardson Stadium present such a gala appearance as it presented Saturday afternoon. The crowd was estimated at five thousand some 1,500 of whom were students, bedecked with colors, and proud possessors of loud voices. The three leaders had a busy time of it. Queen's University Brass Band was out in full bloom, and sing songs, yells, and tactics of all descriptions confused the masses of fans as they eagerly awaited they arrival of the teams.

The Eskimos trotted out first at 2.30 p.m. and were greeted by prolonged cheers. Queen's followed and again the cheers that went up for the grand, old tricolor squad were deafening. The music men were dubbed to the spot, and began to grind out the pictures of the boys in action before the game. The newspaper photographers were also present.

At half time the movie men also took pictures of the jubilant fans about the field.

Bob Hoo was greeted by the wellbuilt Airedale mascot for the Eskimos but Boo Hoo didn't seem to be any too friendly at first. Later they seemed to understand one another a little better, with the result that Boo Hoo and Omar, amused and entertained the fans greatly during the half.

At 2.33 "The King" was played, and the old game commenced. Just before the drop of the ball, 100 pie rons were liberated, with the tricolor attached to their legs and the effect was a very pleasing surprise to the fans.

At half time, the students paraded about the field displaying the various streamers for their Alma Mater Society, each candidate being well advertised by his enthusiastic supporters. The platform of one candidate was represented by a solid cab, with imitation of a solid, and well plastered platform, while another was represented by a portly dab, labelled "Mike Bark."

After the game, the students' processions of Queen's bedecked with their banners, canes and every other weapon they could pick up, paraded all over the city, led by the three leaders and their band. Up with the cheer leaders walked Ellie Pierce, late Mayor of Queen's. Ellie carried a huge hat. Over it was, "We Did" painted on it in letter letters. They led the students' dance, and all the Indian war dances were on the programme. An attempt was made to rush the Grand Theatre, and the police had considerable difficulty in warding off the students, who then built a huge bonfire on the street car tracks. This was fine for about 20 minutes, but then another street car came along, and could not get through the conflagration with a rush hour load.

The Fire Brigade was summoned, and all the fire apparatus in the city came tearing down the Main Street, and quickly extinguished the fire. Motor cars stalled in the crowd and were raised bodily off the street by the husky students, and parked unnoticed fully. Several leaders were slightly hurt and the Brigade was kept busy with their "little squirting machines" for the students termed the chemical extinguishers. Alcoholically speaking, however, everyone took to ice cold spirits, for Queen's had won the Rugby War of 1922.

Wagers were few on Saturday's game, the Eskimos asking as high as 5 to 1 odds; which looked somewhat like a mountain in the Yukon mush.

Just before the game closed; it was rumored that Boo Hoo got-scared at Omar, the Airedale, saying, "Go away dawg, you make me tired, every time I case upon you," where upon Boo Hoo followed his clinking chain to his winter quarters, and today he will be snoozing peacefully, also sucking his paw.

ST. AIDAN'S WIN O.R.F.U. JUNIOR TITLE

St. Aidan's on Saturday afternoon at Varsity Stadium won the O.R.F.U. Junior title for the second successive year, when they defeated the Hamilton Tigers III, by 28 to 1 in a suddon-death final. While the Toronto City League champions were the best team and showed that they are one of the strongest junior teams that has been assembled in this city, they did not have as great a margin over the Yellow and Black as the score indicates. The game was featured by the results of fumbles by Hamilton backs, while another was due to a kick being blocked.

The Saints won because they were in their toes all the time and were on the ball to advantage at every opportunity that was presented. Smith and Reeves were very prominent in the scoring, the former obtaining in one of the best exhibitions of how to play flying wing that has been seen on the Varsity turf in any game. He was down on every kick and prevented the Tigers' backs from either turning the ball or running it back and pounced on a number of fumbles for good gains, once going over for a touch. Reeves worked well and also broke through on Walker, blocking a number of kicks. He and Smith proved good lose ball hounds.

33RD ANNUAL O.H.A. MEETING

Goalkeepers were given permission to stop the puck any way they desired, and pro coaches were barred from the penalty box and players' bench during games at the thirty-third annual meeting of the Ontario Hockey Association, held in the Temple Building Saturday morning. Over eighty clubs, several of them new ones, were represented at the meeting, which was one of the most successful ever held in the history of the world's greatest amateur hockey body. The large number of amendments up for the consideration of the meeting brought out some earnest discussion, showing that the proposed changes to the rules and regulations had been studied very closely.

The officers were elected as follows:—Past president, A. E. Copeland, of Midland; president, W. Northey, Dunnville; first vice-president, Wm. Esson, Stratford; second vice-president, George B. McKay, Kitchener; A.A.U. of C. governor, W. Dacre Paxton, Whitby; secretary, W. A. Hewitt, Toronto; executive committee, Jack Perry, Bond, Peterboro; it. Butler, Lindsay; Angus B. Campbell, Cobalt, and R. Wylie Wilkinson, Galt.

The exchequer's territory was defined as follows: A dark, distinguishable line shall be drawn on the ice between the centre of each goalpost and extending one foot on each side. From the centre of this line and fronting the goal a half-circle shall be drawn in the ice with a radius of four feet. This arc shall be the goaltender's territory.

Useless skating will be stopped by the adoption of the following rule which was passed:—The puck may be stepped with the hand but not carried or held or knocked on by any part of the body. A player must not throw the puck or shove it to deliberate with his hand or kick it deliberately. (Penalty at least one minute for each offence).

The honorarium of the secretary for the season of 1921-1922 was moved at $1,500, and the treasurer at $1,000.

The meeting decided that referees should in all cases report with reference to the lighting of each rink at each game, stating if in his opinion the rink is sufficiently lighted to allow spectators to follow the game at all times in a satisfactory manner. Detrimental reports will be immediately dealt with by the executive.

P. J. Molqueen, president of the Sportsmen's Patriotic Association, appealed for support with regard to the new civic stadium, a by-law for which will be placed before the electors on January 1st. The O.H.A. went on record as being strongly for the proposed stadium.

A standing vote of thanks to the retiring president, Mr. A. E. Copeland, was carried, and the new president, Mr. W. A. Fry, of Dunnville, was introduced to the meeting and given a hearty reception.

REX GIVING FAREWELL' PERFORMANCES THIS WEEK

Good Bye Rex! Rex and his hearty family will make their last two appearances in Belleville at Griffin's tonight to Tuesday night, supposedly for two only, and presenting what we doubt prove one of their best shows "Grumpy," the internationally famous stage hit as played with wonderful success by the brilliant English actor, Cyril Maude.

Rex appears in the role made famous by Mr. Maude, that of Grumpy old Mr. Bullivant, and the balance of the company have been assigned important roles which they will acquit in their usual capable manner. The usual careful attention to the correct atmospheric settings, and lighting effects, will again be evident this week. Refined vaudeville specialties will be introduced between acts, thus doing away with any long waits between acts, so let's all turn out to say "So Long" to the best stock Company we ever had.

TENSE HEART INTEREST IN NEW ANITA STEWART PLAY

Because she thought she had lost everything in life worth living for Dorothy Lambert embarked upon one of the craziest experiments any one could conceive. She offered to give life itself for the sake of a year of luxury. This, in brief, is the situation presented in "Her Mad Bargain," the sensational attraction playing at the Regent Theatre tonight to Wednesday matinee daily. Primarily a production Josephine Quirk, who wrote the scenario, has evolved a story that measures its heart interest in generous quantities and intermingles touch of pathos with its gripping narration and speedy action.

The lavishness that has been a byword in former Anita Stewart picture is again in evidence, coming to a climax in a large ballroom scene where extravagant appointments and a cast of several hundred extra families make a scene of impressive splendor.

A large and capable cast supports the star. Walter McGrail, former leading man for Mildred Harris, is the leading male role in this. Others are Arthur Edmund Carew, Gertrude Astor, Helen Raymond, George B. Williams, Ernest Butterworth, Adele Farrington, Margaret McWade, Will Badger and Peter Challenger.

"Sky is with Flowers," a two-reel Sunshine comedy, Fox News, and a new chapter of "Robinson Crusoe" special have been arranged for exhibition on the same program.

SPECIAL PROGRAM AT GRIFFIN'S WEDNESDAY

A special photoplay program is being exhibited at Griffin's on Wednesday night only, consisting of Jack Perrin and Leatrice Joy, supported by an all star cast in a 7 reel picture freighted with thrills and happiness titled "Partners of the Tide."

The historic stone pier in Beale was chosen for several scenes of the photoplay, it was this exact spot where President Woodrow Wilson landed in America on his return from the peace conference in Versailles, in Beale harbor, the scene of the tea party of revolutionary fame.

The rocky coast of the famous resort at Bar Harbor, Me., was also used for some of the scenes.

A two-reel Century comedy, a three reel Western drama, and other select ed attractions will be exhibited on th same program.

A STORY THE WHOLE WORLD LOVES, 'HUMAN HEARTS

What do you look for in a motion picture? Is it romance, is it exceptional strength of character, or a story; is it the star, the supporting cast, or the action? No matter which one, or combination, you enjoy most your wish will be gratified in "Human Hearts," the universally acclaimed masterpiece which come this Thursday to Saturday, with a matinee Saturday.

House Peters plays the stellar role of "Tom" Logan in this, picturesque version of Hal Reid's great stage success of a decade ago. He is supported by Edith Haller and a notable cast of film celebrities. King Baggot directed the production.

Announcement of the booking of this Universal-Jewel masterpiece by Manager Forhan has aroused much pleasant interest among local picture fans, showing that resident of this city are fully conversant with the great success it is achieving in the largest cities of the country. From all indications Griffin's Theatre will carry attendance records with this intensely human story of everyday folks.

"Fo'Castle's Sake," a two-reel Mermaid comedy, a Travelogue and Art Record in the second chapter of the gripping adventure story "Robinson Bill" are being exhibited on the same program.

JUNIOR COUNCIL

VISIT HOSPITAL

On Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock the Junior Council were visitors at the General Hospital. They were met by Mrs. W. C. Mikel, president of the W. C.A. They first visited the emergency operating room where all injured are brought in first. The Mayor and aldermen expressed themselves well pleased at the splendid equipment. The next was the nurses' home where the nurses reside and have their lectures. Mayor Hayes shook hands with the skeleton in the lecture room. The next was the nurses' new dining hall which is not quite completed. A trip was then made down to the Fire Hall where the visiting is generated. Engineer Kolesch gave the boys a very good talk on the location of the hospital which is by the Dundas system, which saves quite a few tons of coal. A trip was made to the laundry where the washing is done. Then to the kitchen, alas the boys were fooled, for they got nothing to eat. From the kitchen they journeyed to the first floor and then to the second where they visited the up-to-date operating room. Nurse Allen explained the use of the different instruments. Doc. Fulford tried to operate on Ald. Buckland's tongue but gave the job up as hopeless. From the second floor the boys visited the third floor where all the new rooms are. Ald. Harold Buckland was bashful and wouldn't go in the Baby ward.

After coming back to council again the Council minus the Mayor who was flirting with a nurse, wound up their trip very much educated in one of the city's finest institutions. The real need in making the hospital one of the finest in America is an up-to-date X-Ray equipment which will cost in the neighbourhood of $5000. Any citizen having that amount to donate would gladly be welcomed by the Jr. Council as the good X-Ray equipment is badly needed.

A hearty vote of thanks was tendered Mrs. W. C. Mikel for her splendid hospitality in conducting the trip.

EARLY GATHERING OF WOLF CLANS A SIGN?

Pembroke, Dec. 4—Whether the predictions of a mild winter following an open fall be fulfilled or not, and Indians, weather forecasters, and the small animals are insistent on the unusually early gathering of wolves into packs up on the Petawawa River appears to indicate the contrary.

A party of hunters from town who had been hunting at Black Bay on the south branch of the Petawawa report that the wolves are very thick in that part of the country. Some of the deer near they shot and which they were unable to carry in at night was devoured by wolf packs before

BISHOP FALLON AT HAMILTON

Hamilton, Dec. 3.—Bishop Fallon of London preached a memorable sermon tonight to a large congregation in St. Patrick's Church. He said that the growth and influence of the Catholic Church were greater today than they ever had been.

By all the laws of time and history the Catholic Church should have now been but a memory. It should have followed all the other sacred Monarchies, Republics and institutions to the limbo of forgotten things, had predictions made years ago had been fulfilled. The Church was stronger today than ever in its life history. Great nations, that were contemporaneous with its earlier years, were dead, while the vitality of the Catholic Church was inexhaustible. S.S. MELITA ARRIVES AT PORT

Brig.-Gen. Hughes on Board —Reports on Work of Memorial Commission

St. John, N.B., Dec. 4.—S.S. Melita of Canadian Pacific Steamship Line, in command of G. Hamilton, from Antwerp, Havre, and Southampton, with large passenger list, 4500 tons of freight, and mails from Havre, docked at Sand Point this afternoon. The passengers were quickly passed through the emigration shed and at 1.30 the first train for Montreal was despatched. Among the most prominent passengers arriving on the Melita were Brig.-Gen. H. T. Hughes C.M.G., D.S.O., Chief Engineer of Canadian Battle Field Memorial Commission, Tom Moore, President of Canadian Trades and Labor Congress, and Judge Chandler of The New Brunswick Supreme Court, who is returning home with his bride. The voyage across the Atlantic was uneventful. There were the usual concerts, dances, etc., which were greatly enjoyed by the passengers, the ship's performers being highly commended on their efforts to make the voyage a pleasant one for all. Brig.-Gen. Hughes, who is en route to his home in Victoria spoke most interestingly of the work accomplished by the commission with which he is associated. The "clipper" as he is familiarly know by officers and men of the Melita, was the quickest ship ever let for the monument to be erected at St. Julien, where the second battle of Ypres was fought, and is already under construction and should be completed by April. It is the hope of the Commission that it will be ready for unveiling on July first, 1923. At Passchendaele, Sanctuary Wood, Hill 62, Hooge, Ypres and Courcelette, where Canadians, all the grading for the sites of the memorials has been completed and the foundations laid. At Hill 60 considerable construction work has been carried on, retaining walls have been built, paths and approaches, as well as a road leading from Ypres to Menin (as memorial sites of Hill 62 are completed. At either side of the road from Ypres to Menin Canadian maples have been planted.

The maples he says have flourished and looked well this season. The designer of the Vimy Ridge memorial is now at London where he is working on drawings and sketches for the monument that will mark another scene of Canadian exploits during the world war. At Drury Cross and Boulion Ridge much work has been done on grading, draining and terracing for the sites of the memorials. General Hughes says that it becomes necessary to change the site previously selected for the memorial at Courcelette, as it adjoined an old sugar factory but this seems a large factory had been built to replace one old one, so the commission found it advisable to select another site that the memorial might have the prominence it deserves. Gen. Hughes will spend a few days in Kingston, en-route to his home, where he will visit his son, who is attending college there, he will then proceed to Ottawa, where he will report officially on the work accomplished by the Commission this session. With Hon. Rudolph Lemieux, General Hughes had a visit, President Millerand and various ministers of the French Government. He expresses the belief that when the Hon. Lemieux returns to Canada about the 20th of the month, he will be able to make a statement of Frances offer to Canada of a great tract of land for certain purposes. The "clipper" paid a complimentary visit to officers of the Melita on his said, "I have made many trips across the Atlantic but none have I enjoyed more than this one aboard the Melita, the courteous treatment of officers and attendants to all passengers is worthy of commendation. Everyone one why the line is so popular.

ASSOCIATION HOLDS MEETING

Encouraging Financial Report of Property Owners' Association

Long and prolonged was the argument and discussion at the meeting of the Ratepayers' Association and Citizens' League, held last evening at the City Hall, as to just what the correct name of the Association really was. Alderman Robinson was the chief objector, and took the platform to voice his disapproval of the change of name. When the Association was first formed, he explained, it was known as the Real Estate Owners' Association, and later it was regularly decided to rename it the Property Owners' Association. Alderman Robinson spoke well nigh half an hour offering those the opportunity felt by him towards this change, and expressed his belief that it should not be named the Ratepayers' Association. This brought forth a storm of protest from George Bennett, who mounted the platform and explained that it should be called the Ratepayers' Association.

"Ten per cent. of the population of this city only are property owners," said he. "The ninety per cent. are ratepayers. But who pays the taxes? It is certainly not the landlords, so why not give the taxpayers the honor of being included in the name of this association?"

Mr. Ben Sanford very diplomatically caused further argument on this subject to subside, by moving that the name of the Association be laid over until the next regular meeting of the Association, and Mr. W. C. Mikel seconded the motion, which carried unanimously. The advisability of procuring 1,000 membership cards for presentation to bona fide members, upon joining the Association, was also laid over until the next regular meeting, at were all recommendations.

It was definitely decided, however, to hold regular association meetings every 1st weeks, and on Friday, commencing Friday, December 15th.

Alderman Robinson read the financial report, which showed that a substantial sum of money is now to the credit of the Association in the bank. 305 members having joined the Association, although but 327 members paid the fifty cents admission fee. The report read was a very concise one, and absolutely correct, and showed the good work of Ald. Robinson in the interests of the Association. President W. H. Panter commended upon the work of Ald. Robinson in highest terms.

Judge Fralick gave a short, concise talk on the finances of the city, in which he stated that it was his belief that the taxpayers should have a voice in such an organization, as each taxpayer is really a stock holder. The purpose of the Association was to point out, but was one manner of securing civic efficiency at the least spread, namely, by discussion. In these days, when the debt is climbing, Judge Fralick felt that a number of the rough corners should be knocked off, as those in charge of the civic matters did not appear to realize that

AIRPLANE ASSISTS IN IRISH SCRAP

First Time Air Machine Used in the Irish Troubles

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Cork, Dec. 5.—An airplane for the first time yesterday was brought into action against the irregulars, which operations resulte to sight of three machines reached near Drimoleague. Call for reinforcements from the national troops brought an airplane to the scene and sighting the irregulars it bombed them out. Others made their escape into a neighboring wood, but the airplane circled over them and attacked them with machine guns. It is thought that a great majority of the rebels were killed or wounded. The nationals' lost one killed.

Y.M.C.A. SENIOR MEMBERS STAGE A SOCIAL EVENING

Goodly Number in Attendance and Interesting Program Carried Out—Address on the Y.M.C.A. National Convention

The attendance at the Senior Members' Reception, held at the Y.M.C.A. last night, was scarcely up to expectations, but those who did put in an appearance were unanimous in their opinion that they thoroughly enjoyed themselves.

The program of the evening was considerably varied, in fact it might be said to have progressed from the ridiculous to the sublime. Starting out with group games, races and all manner of stunts on the gymnasium floor, it included two very excellent solos by Mr. Albert Greenlaw of Detroit, and a short outline by Mr. Percy Lee, territorial secretary of the National Council of the Y.M.C.A., in which he gave some impressions obtained at the International Convention of the Young Men's Christian Association, held at Atlantic City November 30th to the 10th. Mr. Greenlaw's vocal contributions and Mr. Lee's address were of course the features of the evening, and beyond the question of a doubt were very much appreciated by everyone present. Mr. Greenlaw sang "Open the Gates of the Temple," by Vanderwater, and by special request he gave as an encore "Old Black Joe." In the conclusion of Mr. Lee's address, of which an outline follows, the rations came up the line and for a brief period conversation was a secondary matter of importance.

The one unfortunate feature in connection with the program of last night was that the General Secretary, Mr. Sidenius, who had planned the reception, was unable to be present on account of illness.

Mr. Lee gave an address relative to the recent North American Y.M.C.A. convention and the following is a synopsis of his remarks:

"To give one an adequate idea of this truly great convention is well nigh impossible, one had to be there and catch the true spirit of the Christian brotherhood in order to realize just how important and far reaching were the decisions arrived at after mature deliberation. One was impressed with the fact that there was a group of 1800 to 2000 earnest Christian Canadians progressive, who were not afraid to face squarely the issues that confronted them, young men chiefly, with a different aspect for the past and present and trustiness of the association movement but not bound by it, holding steadfastly to what was good on the experience of yesterday and yet willing to take the forward look in anticipation of even a greater future. The primary concern of all the delegates was to do the right thing regardless of the consequences, and it was a genuinely International convention in fact as well as in spirit.

Taking part in the program were representatives of the brotherhood from all parts of the world including Dr. Swaddelson Joon, India, Dr. Dey is from the Near East, C. D. Hoffman Hankhow, T. C. Yang from Tsuchien, China, other delegates from Manilla, Korea, Japan, United States and Canada. The idea of Christian brotherhood was great strength-ened by the fellowship of one delegate with the other from their far-flung points of the world's circumference.

Each delegate seemed to respect the point of view of his fellow delegate. Strong convictions naturally appeared, men differed but in a friendly and fraternal spirit; they were praying cy seeking to find a unity of spirit that would enable the brotherhood to move forward as a whole, never

CHURCH UNION NOW ASSURED

So Says Dr. Chown of the Methodist Church

Ottawa, Dec. 5.—Rev. Dr. Chown, General Superintendent of the Methodist Church in Canada, stated yesterday night that the opposition to church union had reached its zenith and that the forces favoring the union would assert themselves in the Presbyterian church. He was not worrying over the outlook. The union had to come because christianity of the twentieth century was not going to be guided by the dead hand of the past.

INTERESTING SUIT AT NAPANEE

Judgment Delivered by His Honor Judge Lovell in Case of Sterling Bank vs. Hayes and Neville

Reasons for Judgment

The evidence establishes that Defendants joined the Sheffield United Farmers' Club at the time of its organization and remained members of that organization until it ceased to function.

It was an unincorporated club and among its activities was co-operative buying and selling of goods and stock. Arrangements were made with the plaintiff bank at the beginning for credit to enable the business to be carried on and one of the conditions exacted by the bank was that collateral security be provided by the club in the form of individual notes of $100 each signed by the members, which was done. The defendants being among those who did so.

In 1919 a car load of hogs was shipped by certain officers of the club in the name of the club and in consequence of the improper loading of the car some of the animals died en route, resulting in a considerable loss.

This loss amounting to $389.22, being charged to the club at a meeting held in September, 1919, a motion was introduced by defendant Neville, seconded by defendant Hayes, providing that "each member pay his equal share of $389.22 that his not appears in the bank" and the resolution was adopted. Cheerfully worded and poorly expressed as it is I interpret this motion to mean that the loss was recognized as the club's and that the club should meet the account liability by making an assessment on the members who had signed the notes held by the bank. Another resolution, moved and seconded by the same parties, provided for a loan of the above amount from the bank but no specific loan of the sum seems to have been put through although most of the members paid up into the club to the credit of the club the amount assessed against them and the bank evidently did cash cheques of the club issued to pay the cost of the shipment of hogs including the loss arising therefrom.

Unfortunately, however, a number of the members did not pay the sums assessed against them and the

TRENTON HAS NEW SYSTEM OF WATER SUPPLY

Springs in the Side of the Mountain Being Utilized —Natural Supply of Pure, Cold Water

Trenton, Ont., Dec. 4.—More or less use, for general purposes, has been made of the numerous springs in the mountain side for the past couple of years. Recently it was decided that an up-to-date system for the proper collection and distribution of this water should be constructed and the contract for same has been placed with the Weidel Company.

This company has placed on the mountain a new reservoir of 750,000 gallons capacity, at the foot of the mountain just at the rear, and to the south of the Combing Mills' property, it is stated being constructed a reinforced concrete collecting basin, over 400 feet long and about ten feet wide, with a fully enclosed roof. The numerous outlets from the springs are all led into this collecting basin, and a new pumping house is being erected on the town property at this point. Two electric driven turbine pumps will take water from the collecting basin and pump it into the reservoir at the top of the mountain.

While Chipman of the firm of engineers, Chipman and Power, states that the springs in the mountain furnish enough water to supply the needs of a town of 60,000 people.

The water is pure spring water and is excellent for drinking purposes. It is of course, too hard for use in boilers and for industrial purposes. As all of Trenton's industries have their own water arrangements have been made to have these factories take their water for other purposes than drinking, from the river. The railways use river water for their industrial requirements.

DR. PRESTON LEADS CONSERVATIVES TO VICTORY

Carries Carleton Place, Smith's Falls, Perth and Almonte, As Well as Several Rural Constituencies

Perth, Ont., Dec. 4th.—After one of the most strenuous by-election contests waged in Ontario in years, and the most strenuous ever waged in Lanark, Dr. Preston, the Conservative Candidate was last night declared elected by a majority that will exceed 1400. All the urban sections of the constituency turned in conservative majorities, these places being Carleton Place, Smith's Falls, Perth and Almonte. A large number of rural areas also gave conservative majorities. The conservatives carried the constituency a year ago by a majority of about 300 so the election yesterday cuts this former majority practically in half.

The railway men in Smith's Falls was looked upon as one of the really big factors. It went strongly Conservative Both candidates are residents of Carleton Place, which town went in favor of Dr. Preston. The Liberal organization managers at Perth last night admitted that defeat was inevitable when the Smiths Falls and Carleton Place results were made known.

CONSERVATIVES CELEBRATE

Tonight when the results became known, Conservatives in all parts of the riding celebrated their victory with processions and bonfires. Victory was expected by them, but they believed the majority would have been considerably less.

There were 43 urban polls and an advance poll at Smith's Falls, and also seven polls at Almonte. Everything else considered as rural, were considered to be practically urban polls. These fifty polls gave Preston a majority of more than 1,000 over his opponent.

ADVANCE POLL GIVES PRESTON MAJORITY

Smith's Falls gave Dr. Preston a majority of 279 according to latest advices. Of this total the Conservative Candidate secured 116 of a majority in the advance poll.

ANALYSIS OF THE RESULTS

Carleton Place, the home-town of both candidates, gave Preston a majority of 208 against 210 over all for Stewart in 1921.

Perth town was the only urban centre where the Conservative majority was greatly reduced. Tonight it was 114, as against 1,174 last year.

Townships which according to the latest returns available tonight, gave majorities to Preston, were: Bathurst, 47; Beckwith, 66; Drummond, 79; North Elmsley, 66; Montague, 188; Packenham, 117; Ramsay, 60; South Sherbrooke, 93.

Township returning Findlay majorities were: North Burgess, 132; Dalhousie, 13; Dalhousie and North Sherbrooke, 234; Lanark Township, 136; Lanark, 3; Lanark Village, 108.

RETURNS STILL INCOMPLETE

One of the Lanark Township had not reported, though a total is the lowest ship was reported to give Findlay a majority of 136.

Some returns which are still to be received will, it is said, increase the Preston majority rather than otherwise, probably will increase it to 1,400.

To-night the returns are too incomplete to indicate the total vote.

Perth, Dec. 5th.—Armed figures of the Lanark by-election make the majority of Dr. R. F. Preston, Conservative, Smith Falls, complete and clear from. The tendency of farmers to return to former party affiliations, which was seen in the provincial elections is much commented upon. This was in evidence in all parts of the riding. The southern portion of the riding went conservative as has done ever since Confederation. Carleton Place and Perth also went Conservative. The north portion was Liberal in spots.

COAL ARRIVES IN BELLEVILLE

The Warrenko Arrives in Local Harbor With 750 Tons of Coal

At noon today Belleville received another cargo of hard coal which is probably the last load of water borne coal that will come to Belleville this season. The barge Warrenko brought the load which runs about 750 tons. The cargo is for the Allen and Downey Coal Companies. A great deal of risk was involved in getting this frozen across the lake at this season and the consignees are to be congratulated on the safe arrival of the vessel. Belleville citizens too should feel happy that the initiative of these enterprising firms has resulted in an

NEW INDUSTRY AT TRENTON

Dominion Combing Mills Expect to Start Operations March 1st.

Trenton, Ont. Dec. 4.—One of Trenton's new industries, The Dominion Combing Mills, Ltd., has completed all exterior work on its new factory buildings, and has same entirely enclosed. The firm has ten acres of land just under the corner of the mountain. A Canadian National Railway siding enters the property and runs up to a cement loading platform. The building presents a very clean and attractive appearance. They have been constructed of West Lake Brick, which is manufactured from the white sand of the Sand Banks on West Lake.

The company when operating, will be the only wool combing mills in the Dominion. They expect to employ about two hundred hands. The logical development of the combing business will be spinning and weaving when end of the business Trentonians expect will come at a not far distant date. The machinery will commence hand soon on March 1st next.

A large quantity of soft water will be required and a good supply has been erected by the town on the company's property. This stand pipe is connected by pipe to the river, and the company simply lifts by pump the water from the stand pipe.

OTTAWA ELATED OVER VICTORY

Conservative Circles Rejoice at Dr. Preston's Victory

Ottawa, Dec. 4.—Great rejoicing was manifested in the conservative circles here when the results of the by-election in Lanark became known. There was a corresponding disappointment in the Liberal quarters. It is true that Lanark consistency was of a strong Conservative stronghold, and was carried by the late Hon. J. A. Stewart a year ago by a majority of 2,600 over a Progressive opponent. Members of the King Government, and other Liberals, however, seem to have brought themselves to the belief that they could pile up a big majority in the northern section of the riding.

U.S. FARMERS CLAIM THEY LABOR AT DISADVANTAGE

Many Newsy Notes From Washington—Forests Receive Attention

(Associated Press)

Washington, Dec. 5th.—American farmers, comprising about one-third of the country's population, feel themselves, notwithstanding their hard work and large production this year, still laboring under a serious disadvantage as compared with other groups of workers because of the disorganized relationship of prices, Secretary Wallace of the Department of Agriculture told President Harding and Congress today in his annual report.

"There is food in superabundance," Mr. Wallace said, "and this contributes to the prosperity of business and industry for a time, but the inadequate return which the farmer is receiving, and has for three years, inevitably will result in readjustments in the number of people on the farms and in the cities, which will not be for the continuing good of the nation."

There has been a greatly accelerated movement of farmers, and especially farmers' sons from the farms to the cities and industrial centers, the Secretary reported, declaring that best welfare "indicates that during July, August and September twice as many persons left the farms for cities as normally."

The secretary renewed his recommendation for rural credits legislation, asserting that action should be taken promptly to increase the maximum which a Farm Loan Bank may loan to an individual from $10,000 to $25,000. He advocated also a reduction in most of the term loans may run, saying a system should be established by which the farmer could borrow for periods of from six months to three years. Creation of a new bureau of home economics was urged by the Secretary, to enable the department to extend its efforts toward better economic systems in the rural community.

Another problem requiring immediate attention, the Secretary said, was "the necessity of working out and applying a comprehensive plan protecting, reserving and using our forests." He declared forest legislation should be enacted extending federal co-operation to the states in the protection of forests, co-ordinating state and federal service in the growing and distribution of forest-planting material, conserving the chase of timberland "as rapidly as the condition of the treasury will permit," and converting into national forests some areas now comprised in Indian reservations.

The secretary reported good progress in organization of the Packers and Stockyards Administration and the Grain Futures Administration, in the campaign against plant pests, and in the various other lines of service in which his department is interested.

This year would be a prosperous year for agriculture, and consequently a prosperous year for the nation, if the relationship of prices now was such as existed before the war, Secretary Wallace said. There has been some increase in prices of farm products, but there has not been much improvement in the present relationship between the prices of the things the farmer produces and the things he buys.

Among the causes which contribute to the abnormal relationship of farm prices to the prices of other things, Secretary Wallace mentioned these:

Overproduction of many farm crops.

Maintenance of industrial wages at near war-time levels.

Economic depression and depreciated currency in European countries.

Interference with the efficient functioning of necessary industries.

Unreasonably high costs of distribution of some farm products.

"Some contend there is no such thing as overproduction of farm products and can not be so long as there are people in the world who suffer for food and clothing," said Secretary Wallace. "On the same line of reasoning it can be argued that the production of automobiles will be inadequate until every man and woman and every boy and girl of high school age owns one. There is overproduction, as far as the producer is concerned, whenever the quantity produced can not be marketed at a price which will cover all costs and leave the producer enough to tempt him to continue production. And whenever there is such overproduction the output will be reduced either by conscious effort on the part of the producers or by the operation of economic laws which drive the less efficient producers out of business. The fact is that for three years in succession the farmers of the United States have produced more of some crops than could be sold at prices high enough to cover producing costs.

"It will never be possible for the farmers to relate their production to profitable demand with the nicety of the manufacturer, both because they can not control the elements which influence production and cannot estimate demand so closely. Neither will the farmers ever be able to organize as have the better unions and by rules and regulations add disciplinary measures compel obedience to policies adopted. The rule, however, bring about a better adjustment of production, and especially of marketing, to the needs and purchasing ability of possible customers, if they will perfect their organizations and call their aid more skilled in interpreting conditions which influence supply and demand. Better adjustment of farm production is worth striving for. Both the farmers and the consuming public would be benefited through more stable production and therefore more stable prices."

Picturing the plight of American farmers, Secretary Wallace said the production records of this year furnish a vivid illustration of the vitality of agriculture and the courage, hope and hopefulness of the American farmer.

"Certainly no other industry could have taken the losses agriculture has taken and maintain production," he said. "Nor have we evidence to show that any other group of workers would have taken the reduction in wages in the spirit in which the farmers have taken their reduction. Many thousands of farmers lost much of their crops in the weather the storm, notwithstanding their strenuous efforts. Thousands purchased seed during the period of the high prices have been obliged to give up the struggle, let their land go back, lose all the money invested in it, and move away. Many thousands of renters who had substantial savings invested in farm equipment and livestock have practically through the same experience and have lost everything."

Among the more hopeful aspects to the situation notwithstanding the continued low purchasing power of farm products, Secretary Wallace pointed out that

"It is fair to say that in general the farmers of the United States are in better condition financially now that they were a year or eighteen months ago," he declared. "Farm products are selling at relatively fair prices, and it is estimated the aggregate value of the crops in the country this year is about $1,500,000,000 more than last year. Considerable quantities of these crops will be fed and the increased value will not be directly recovered by the farmer, but the bare fact that such a large increase in money will reach the farmer's pockets next year is most gratifying and reassuring.

"The advance in price of cotton has been most helpful throughout the cotton-growing states. Considerably higher prices for wool, lambs, and sheep have resulted in pulling the sheep industry out of the slough of despond and setting it on its feet again. Right through the period of depression hogs have been selling at considerably higher prices relatively than other farm crops. On the whole it has been a fairly satisfactory year for cattle feeders. Credit conditions have improved and the outlook is bright.

"Another hopeful sign is the increasing willingness and desire of people engaged in industry, commerce and finance to help bring about a more favorable adjustment for the farmer. Such people are coming to realize more and more the menace to themselves in conditions so unfavorable to agriculture as those of the past three years. Their attitude toward the farmer has changed from that of a benevolent paternalism such as we see much in evidence during the 10 years preceding the war. They now understand more clearly that their own welfare is inseparably linked up with the farmer, and that in doing what they can to help him get on his feet again they are helping themselves as well."

In relation to the price of farm products at the basic farm and primary markets, Secretary Wallace said, all evidence pointed to substantial declines in the prices of farm products in the cities. Secretary Wallace said the cost of distribution remains high, notwithstanding frequent violent denunciations of profiteers in the cities. In part, this high cost of distribution, he declared, is caused by the multiplication of distributing agencies during the last six years, in part by the increase in rent, and especially by the increase in rent, and especially pline, but in larger part by the higher wages which employes in the distributing business have been able to maintain.

Taxes on farms in most farming states have more than doubled and are proving to be one of the most burdensome sources of complaint by farmers and during the next few years the whole question of taxation, the use of the proceeds of taxation, and the equitable distribution of the burden will probably receive considerable attention by thoughtful farmers.

there is an end to all this. The Coleman Ward school was given as an example where $30,000 was saved by laying the matter over for a while. The 1919 Council plunged the city in to debt of one-quarter of a million dollars, and now the taxes are very high, the chief sufferers being the poorer people who are least able to meet such obligations.

Ex-Alderman Woorley introduced a resolution to the meeting, protesting against legislation enacted by the Provincial Government in 1919, by which the townships were requested to maintain sections of the main artery roads in such municipalities. Ex-Alderman Woodley suggested that the City Council protest against this legislation, and ask to receive redress. This resolution was unanimously passed.

Mr. W. C. Mikel, K.C., introduced a resolution to the meeting as to the advisability of doing all in their power to have the 146th Anniversary of the United Empire Loyalists held here in Belleville. This resolution was unanimously passed also.

Alderman Greenlee spoke regarding the proposed Parks Commission Act, which will come up before the electors on the next election day January 1st. Alderman Greenlee cited the law governing the construction of such a commission, and read the statistics as revised on this subject.

Ex-Mayor Panter, chairman of the meeting, brought up the matter of the report of Alderman Patterson on the West Dundas street sewer, in which Alderman Patterson stated that he was agreeable to meeting the Association and substantiating the statement contained in the report to the effect that $2,000 was paid to the contractor on his contract, over and above that sum which was due and legitimate.

It was decided to invite Aldermen Patterson to the next regular meeting of the Association, where he will explain the report minutely.

Last night's meeting, by the way was one of the most successful meetings yet held by the Association.

INTERESTING SUIT AT NAPANEE

funds of the club proved insufficient to meet the demands made on its bank account, and it was decided that when that account was closed on Feb. 9th, 1921, there was a debit balance of $2.35, and there was at no outstanding and unpaid an over due note of the club dated August 30th, 1920 for $1,000 with interest at 7% per annum upon which had been paid only the sum of $106.17 on January 14th, 1921. The indebtedness remains unsatisfied.

As the members of the club paid their respective assessments their notes were delivered up to then by the book manager of the bank. It was suggested that by doing so the bank released the makers from all liability for the debts of the club to the bank, but I do not agree with such a contention. Whatever other effect it had it did not affect the liability of any of the members for the direct indebtedness of the organization, not as partners, but as individuals constituting the club which had no corporate entity and cannot therefore proceed against as such but only through its members. No discharge was ever given them nor did the bank ever surrender its right to demand from the club or the men composing it the indebtedness now sought to be recovered.

Nor do I accept the view that the action of the club in realizing that the loss arising from the hog shipment be met by the members in equal shares of all shareholders in whose membership from the obligation to see that the full amount due be paid. The mover and seconder under so intended it was not so provided and in any event would not have bound the bank. At most it was an arrangement among the debtors themselves providing a method whereby an acknowledged debt due from them all should be paid. If that method resulted in full payment, well and good, but if not the liability still remained.

In any event the amount sued on includes other advances than those made on account of the "hog loss". The note above mentioned was given to raise a fund for feed, binder twines and other goods.

Without discussing the right of the defendant to contribution from their fellow members I find that as members of the Sheffield United Farmers' Club the defendants are liable for the indebtedness of the Club to the Plaintiffs which now amounts to $75.48 and there will be judgment accordingly with costs.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

INDUSTRIAL RESEARCH FOR ONTARIO

To the Editor of The Intelligencer,

Belleville, Ont.,

March has appeared in the leading press of to-day about "Industrial Research" for Ontario, and even for our Dominion. It will be interesting to many to learn that the Engineering Alumni of the University of Toronto assembled October 28th, 1922, resolved that—

Resolution 1

The Engineering Alumni of the University of Toronto, assembled October 28th, 1922, resolved that, realizing the necessity of Research in the Fundamentals of Industry, besides knowing Ontario to be wonderfully endowed with Natural Resources for Agriculture, Manufacture and Electricity;

Carried almost unanimously.

Now sir, it is maintained, If we in Ontario will put our shoulders to the burden and create a "Foundation Research" for Ontario somewhat commensurate with its resources, it will undoubtedly pay us in years, if not in a thousand fold.

Let us thoughtfully and courageously make the endeavor.

Yours truly,

THOMAS WICKETT, '89

THEFT OF FURS VIA SALOON ROUTE, AT MONTREAL

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Montreal, Dec. 4.—Breaking into an upstairs room of a saloon, burglars are said to have knocked down a wall into the fur store of M. Richer, St. Lawrence Blvd., next door, cut a hole in the floor and, after bundling up the entire stock of furs, worth $25,000, left by the way they entered and escaped in an automobile.

TRAPPIST MONASTERY SAFE

Oka, Quebec, Dec. 5.—The Superior Church, seminary and priests' residence here were destroyed by fire this morning. The great monastery of Trappist monks was not touched by flames.

FAREWELL APPEARANCE OF REX COMPANY

Saved the Best Till the Last —Delightful Comedy Presented

The people like mystery, and when that mystery takes the form of a detective story full of comedy, one has excellent foundation upon which to build up a successful play. Such is the plot of Grimpy which was presented last night by the Rex Stock Company. It is easily the best offering that the company has given in Belleville in its long continuous run of thirteen weeks. The company showed to advantage last evening again. Some of the members, who had won their way into the hearts of the Belleville theatre-goers did not have as heavy parts as usual, and thus had ably limited opportunity to display their talents.

The plot is built around an eccentric old gentleman, Grumpy, who has a kindly disposition and very brusque exterior. This is Grumpy, and the part is played by Rex Sanderson, whose work is of the better order. He was perfect in his portrayal of the irritable old grandfather. Grumpy's nephew is a gentleman in his house, who later takes advantage of the hospitality and grumpy generosity of his earlier legal experience to run the culprit to earth. Zana Vaughn plays the part of Virginia Vaughn, daughter of Grumpy. Here was a character that just suited Miss Vaughn and she made the most of it. Howard Brown in his portrayal of the character of Ernest Hemer gave also a splendid account of himself. He had a very heavy part and played it excellently. Billy Seymour played the part of the villain, Zana Jarvis. Now villains, often in spite of good acting find it difficult to get the sympathy of the audience. However, in masterful way that Mr. Seymour handled his work last night earned for him a new place in the hearts of the audience.

Joe Kelly took two characters last evening, and although only on the stage for brief intervals, made the most of them. Others who, last night took minor roles, but discharged them well, were William Yule and Charles Hannah.

The ladies, with the exception of Zana Vaughn, all had minor parts, but they took care of them in an admirable manner. Their gowns were especially attractive.

Humor came out at the most unexpected places, and it can truthfully be said that there was not a dull moment in the whole performance. Yet the atmosphere of the whole play was different. There was a distinct absence of that slap-stick comedy so common in many of the Tabloid Stock offerings. The scene is laid in England, and the humor is English, free of the type that is associated with a Yankee comedy. Truly it is a performance well worth seeing and is far superior to the usual stock offering. The first few road companies can put on a better performance than that which was given last night.

The Browns, Hazel and Howard, gave a delightful vaudeville sketch between the acts.

Rex makes his final appearance in Belleville tonight, and we will regret his departure. He stated last night that it would be away in the indefinite future when he returned.

SIKI TELLS OF FRAME-UP

Carpentier was to Have "Knocked" Him Out in Fourth Round.

Paris, Dec. 4.—"Betting" Siki, the Senegalese conqueror of Georges Carpentier, declared to-day, in the presence of Deputy Dingee and two witnesses, that his fight with Carpentier for the light-heavyweight world's championship had been "framed," but that during the fight he had determined to be the winner. Siki said that, once he was in the ring in front of a crowd of 50,000 people acclaiming him, and conscious of his own strength, he had a revulsion of feeling, despite reminders from his corner during his minute's rest after the third round, and had decided to go in and win.

Deputy Dingee, listening to this story, from the deposed black champion, recently bereft of his title by the Boxing Federation, told to newspapermen, said it was exactly what Siki had related to him as he and the Siki said he would tell his court and of which Dingee said he had proof. That was the only reason the deputy stated, for his agreeing to fight the case of the Senegalese.

Tragedy of Double-crossing

"Feel the Siki-Carpentier battle, which Siki declares was designed to be the most tragic double-cross in the history of boxing, "the frame-up of the century," become the greatest tragedy of double-crossing that caused the downfall of Europe's idol, was due to the pride of the black fighter, declares.

"I could not lay down before 50,000 people acclaiming me," he said. "Before that I had been on my knees to, my; man."

Siki declared that fifteen days before the fight he agreed to quit in the fourth round.

"But inside my own heart," added the interpreter, "I kept repeating: 'I will knock him dead if I can.'

"I was supposed to take a short count in the second round, then go to the floor again in the second, followed by a nine-second count just before the bell in the third round, come up groggy for the fourth round, then drop with both arms hanging limp and be counted out."

Referee Made Him Fight

"I entered the ring in a bewildered condition," continued Siki, "and thought to do as I agreed, dropping to my knees in the first round after two minutes of fighting. Referee, the referee, brought me up shouting, saying: 'Get up, Siki, you are not hurt.'

"I was in a trance throughout the second round, becoming within myself whether I should lie down myself. Georges wasn't hurting me, although he reached me with his hard rights to the jaw which caused the ringside spectators to grunt each time he hit.

"At the beginning of the third round I had fully decided that I would take another count as agreed on. Siki went on; "but the round had progressed two minutes before Georges hit me hard enough to give me a chance to go down. A right swing then hit me high on the cheek, and I said 'Here goes' and dropped to one knee, fully resolved to stay there.

"Then the howls of the multitude reached my head, which seemed to clear. 'It's beaten; the negro is finished,' were the jeers that assailed me.

"Then during these seven seconds that I was kneeling before Georges I made up my mind to fight. I knew I could win. You remember how I jumped up and swung my left, which caught Georges flush on the point of the jaw."

Siki then and gave a demonstration for the benefit of Deputy Dingee, who looked on with apparent pride at his compatriot.

"You know the rest," continued Siki. "How Georges with a pained look of surprise on his face, went down for the count of four and climbed

"From the fourth round on I did not hurt him too badly, I felt him to be very weak. His blows lacked wind. I whispered to him several times that he should quit, but instead he butted me twice and hit me below the belt, which further enraged me and strengthened my determination to win, especially as the crowd was now favoring me and cheering, while they booted Georges for his rough work."

Deputy Dingee, who recently took up the defense of Siki in the Chamber of Deputies and is suing the French Boxing Federation for the rehabilitation of his fellow countryman, intervened at this stage.

WILL INCREASE SEATING CAPACITY

It is understood that extensive repairs will be made to the skating and hockey rink here prior to the opening of the hockey season. Further seating accommodation will be made for from six to eight hundred fans, and in future, tickets will be placed on sale previous to games as is the practice in larger cities. In this way, fans will be able to have a choice of the better seats by being on the job early after the plan opens.

SUPERIOR BULLETIN SERVICE SATURDAY

The snappy bulletin service provided by the Intelligencer on Saturday last, covering the Rugby Championship being decided throughout Ontario has been favorably commented upon by the local fans. The detail of every important feature of the Kingston game was bulletined and the score was posted from time to time throughout the centre. The final result of this game was in the windows almost immediately after the cessation of play, and our own special representative attended the game to report same in detail.

It is the intention of the Intelligencer to provide this same quick service in connection with the various sporting events scheduled for this winter, and the sporting page of the paper will be made a feature and will therefore receive special attention at all times.

QUEEN'S THINK ELKS WERE POOR SPORTS

Eskimos Expected Reception at Depot and Queens Expected Elks at the Banquet Tendered in Their Honor

Kingston, Ont., Dec. 4.—Queen's University authorities were surprised to learn that the manager and some of the members of the Edmonton team took their defeat so hard. Prof. Stanley Baker, representing Queen's Athletic Board, was at the station when the train came in on Friday about midnight, but he was given to understand that the Westerners were going to stay on their special sleeper overnight, and for that reason he thought it useless to board the coach. The general feeling at the university on Monday was that the Edmonton players were poor sports, or they would have attended the Queen's banquet on Saturday evening. Deacon White, coach of the team, accepted the invitation which was extended by Queen's Athletic Board by Prof. Dupuis to the banquet Saturday evening, and the visitors failed to turn up.

Major Cromwell, adjutant at the Royal Military College, stated on Monday afternoon that both General Mac-Donell and himself attended an invitation to the Elks to visit the college on Saturday evening. The commandant was given to understand that the players would go to the college and a coach was detailed to remain at the telephone all evening, thinking that the Westerners would phone they were coming. It had been arranged that they would be shown over the college buildings, no matter what time of night they arrived.

ST. AIDANS CHALLENGE C. R. U. SQUAD

Although the last senior game of the 1922 season was played on Saturday there are still games to be played in the intermediate, junior and intermediate series. St. Aidan's having won the junior O.R.F.U. title are now after their second successive Canadian title, and Secretary McHee has notified the C.R.U. that the St. Aidan's are ready to play next Saturday. The Saints won the Canadian junior championship last year by defeating Queen's Thirds in Kingston, 19 to 8, and this season have a much stronger aggregation.

THE MAIN DUCK ISLANDS

Every autumn, just before the close of navigation, these usually quiet and little-known islands, suddenly spring into prominence, when the annual reports of wrecks begin to come in. Very few people are familiar with the islands and yet none of them is more than a few miles in the middle of the lake. They are far from being rocks, and are not in the middle of the lake. They are just twelve miles out from the lighthouse at Indian Point and are reached by following Traverse, or Long Point, as the south-eastern point of Prince Edward county is known. The islands are only about twenty miles from Kingston and about the same distance from Cape Vincent, N.Y. They are, roughly, about forty miles from Oswego, N.Y. Many are the tales told of how these dangerous reefs are the cause of many wrecks. Now as a matter of fact, they are a splendid advertisement to mariners. The light-house and the fog horn on the islands give a countless number of mariners their bearings every season. All regular courses sailed by vessels from Toronto, Hamilton, Port Dalhousie and Charlotte, N.Y., to Kingston and the St. Lawrence River ports pass close to the islands. Similarly ships from Oswego to Kingston or river and bay ports, pass the islands. Thus all this marine traffic is very glad indeed to confirm its position previous to making a mainland land-fall.

The islands have offered a sheltered anchorage to many ships that have reached the eastern end of the lake and could not, without great risk, attempt to get into a mainland harbor. For every ship wrecked on the islands, scores and scores have been piloted and saved from wreck by them. Thus they are truly an asset, rather than a danger, to navigation.

Some have advocated that a wireless broadcasting service should be maintained from the islands. The slight use for such apparatus does not justify the expense.

The Main Ducks are Canadian, and consist of two islands. The Main Duck Island is about a mile and a half long, and at its widest part, is three-quarters of a mile wide. Yorkshire island, the smaller of the two, is only a few hundred yards away and is about half a mile long and somewhat less in width.

They are very pretty, having beautifully wooded land and this is varied by hill and dale. Mr. Claude Cole, a Canadian by birth, now resident in Cape Vincent, N.Y., owns them and maintains a zoo on the islands. Only recently he took several buffalo there from Kingston. A few men remain on the islands all winter to pack ice for the fishermen's use in the summer. The population consists of fishermen and the light-house keepers.

It is only rarely that the lake freezes solid to the mainland, but it has done so on several occasions.

Thus these little islands have a useful purpose to serve, are very attractive, and have an interesting history, yet they are little heard of in Belleville although only sixty miles distant by water.

A PROGRESSIVE MEMBER TURNS (?) LIBERAL

Evidently Mr. W. J. Hammell, Progressive M.P. for Muskoka, does not himself believe that the Conservatives have the right to offer him opposition in his election campaigns. In Canadian Press despatches yesterday he is said to have stated that Hon. Mr. Meighen and the Tories fought against him during his last political battle for the Dominion House, and gives this as one of his reasons for bolting from his party to the Liberal benches.

The childish attitude of this member would seem to exemplify the "I won't play" and "no fair" commonplace conditions of kindergarten days. Even the children are weaning themselves away from this baby-talk and childish politics, and if Mr. Hammell thinks that this reason will vindicate his recent political movement, in the eyes of his constituents, self-preservation of mind is indeed very easily accomplished.

However, the Canadian people are not so easily duped with such a jumble of jargon. The King Government will doubtless be pleased to receive the benefit of one more vote in the House, but they cannot surely feel that the ranks of Liberalism have been seen particularly enhanced in debating value. In this instance the "re-call" plank in the Progressive platform has been temporarily changed to one of "switch."

From a distance, however, it would appear to be the return of the prodigal. The Alpha of the Progressive is well known by this time, and Omega is becoming better known and, is, of consummation with the passing of the days.

There will likely be more of these sudden political "flops" of crucial moments, as the election nears. But let those intending parties understand, not only that their true colors and party intent has been quite distinguishable throughout their political peregrinations, but that their course of action should be substantiated by real reasons.

HERE AND THERE

THE RADIO IN FOREST PROTECTION.

An interesting and successful demonstration of the capabilities of the wireless telephone used in conjunction with the aeroplane for forest protection was recently given by the Air Board, to a number of lumbermen and foresters at the wireless station, near Ottawa. An aeroplane equipped with a transmitter flew over the city and while fifteen hundred feet above ground continued during the flight to describe where he was and what he could see, and every word was plainly audible to his hearers on the ground. Two types of receiving apparatus were used; one was capable of sending messages, the other was a field machine set up in a tent with a temporary aerial.

It has been proposed, in conjunction with the aerial forest patrol, to equip the machines and principal ranger stations with radio-telephones of this kind which would very greatly facilitate the reporting of forest fires observed by the aeroplane. The receiver sets supplied to the rangers would be adjusted to a specified wave length and need, whether he wanted it repeated, or what he wanted the aeroplane to land. The use of the radio-telephone very materially increases the value of the aeroplane patrol, as it will enable the observer to report immediately to the nearest ranger the exact location, size, and other necessary information in regard to forest fires so that he may extinguish them before they assume serious proportions. It is proposed, also, in connection with this system to have a sending station at the principal headquarters of the forest-protective organization by which orders can be sent to all the rangers at stated hours.

During the past season, two aeroplane patrols have been maintained in Ontario, one from Parry Sound, and the other from Whitney, and the report of the season's work shows that, as a result of this service, the forest fires have been reduced in number and have been reported and extinguished much more quickly than was possible under a purely ground-patrol system. It is claimed that the moral effect of having a daily patrol which is bound to see and report every slen of a fire has been to inspire greater care by campers, settlers and others through whose carelessness many of the serious fires are caused, and also to promote greater efficiency on the part of the forest rangers.

HE WAS ALL RIGHT—UNTIL THEY GAVE HIM ETHER.

A young man, who, when a stranger in New York and out of luck, was standing on one of the North River docks wondering mournfully where his next meal was coming from. He had noticed a deaf-and-dumb beggar standing on the other end of the same dock, and hungry as he was, he congratulated himself that he was in full possession of his faculties and not dependent on precarious charity for his living.

To his astonishment, after the crowds were gone, the beggar approached him, gave him money, took him home to a well-furnished apartment, and finally inducted him into the ranks of the professional, "dummies"—as deaf and dumb fakers are called. After some instruction the youngster went out on his own hook and finally fell into my hands.

"His record was good and he withstood pretty successfully the usual tests, such as sudden and unexpected noise, and cleverly contrived questions. Still suspicious, the authorities sent him to the hospital, where he was put under the influence of ether for a moment. When he came out he was talking his head off, and the game was up. This, by the way, is an infallible test. When a man is still under the anesthetic but commencing to recover consciousness, he will babble like a running brook, if he can talk at all.

PRESS OPINIONS

A CHANGE OF OPINION
(Peterboro Examiner.)

"The drivers of motor automobiles must realize that pedestrians have some rights on the highways, and must be protected by continuing to travel fast, drivers of automobiles invite stinnent laws."—Mayor Musgrie, Toronto.

"Is there no remedy, or must the daily murder of the innocents continue? I maintain that the cause in most cases of out of ten, in case of motor accident, is speed. Fix a low speed limit for Toronto. Let it be known that the police are posted throughout the city to apprehend speeders, and the city will be a long way on the road to immunity from child murder by motors."—Sir Thomas White.

These two quotations from yesterday's Globe indicate how strongly public opinion is swinging against the speed fiend, aimed by the almost daily recital of a young life taken by a motor car.

The change in sentiment in Toronto in this respect is remarkable.

It is not long since a bill sponsored by Peterboro bodies, was introduced in the legislature to reduce the speed limit to 25 miles an hour, and it was laughed out of court.

The Toronto members vied with each other in hespitic ridicule on what they termed a reactionary measure.

There was no need of a lower speed limit," they declared, and some of them hinted that Peterboro was not sane when it suggested such a speed limit for the city.

The slaughter of children on Toronto's streets has worked a surprising shift of opinion and the bill which was ignored by the Peterboro bill last year, are beginning to see that it was a move in the right direction.

The fact is, as Sir Thomas White points out in an eloquent plea for the protection of children, that the existing laws and regulations relating to automobiles, are wholly inadequate to properly deal with the situation.

And he points out, as will be noticed, that the best remedy would be a lower speed limit, strictly enforced.

TOO MANY TREES?
(Kingston Whig.)

Kingston has far too many trees on numbers of its streets. If one-half the trees on some boroughfares were removed, there would still be too many remaining. Trees are all right in their proper place, but huge maples and elms should not be permitted to grow a few feet from a house, for their branches keep the sun and atmosphere away and make them damp and dangerous. There is a certain block in Kingston where the trees are so thick that houses are dark and damp, and families who have occupied them grew up sickly.

WIT AND HUMOUR

"Turn to Him the Other."

"Suppose, Bobbie, that another boy should strike your right cheek?" asked the teacher, "what would you do?"

"Give him the other cheek to strike," said Bobbie.

"That's right," said the teacher.

"I mean," said Bobbie, "and if he struck that I'd paralyze him."

"I was not-always thus," said the seedy-looking speaker. "When I first opened my eyes upon this old sinbesmirched world, our family circumstances were far better, than are mine. Time was when I was accustomed to pass this very spot in my own carriage, and my mother—bless her—"

New Hydro Issue By Nesbitt Thomson & Co.

Will Place on Market $860,000 First Mortgage Bonds of Great Northern Power Co.

Montreal, Dec. 5.—(Special)—Nesbitt Thomson & Co., Limited, investment bankers, announce the offering of the $850,000, first mortgage 7 per cent. sinking fund gold bonds of the Great Northern Power Company, Limited.

These bonds are dated Nov. 1, 1922, and mature in fifteen years. A sinking fund, commencing Nov. 1, 1923, will be sufficient to retire the entire issue by maturity. The bonds may be retired by purchase in the open market or called at 105 and accrued interest.

The company is restricted to dividends on the $2,000,000 common stock at the rate of 4 per cent., until half of the outstanding bond issue is retired and no dividends over 6 per cent. can be paid until the entire issue is retired.

The hydro-electric plant which the company is constructing on the Montreal River, within distributing distance of the chief mining districts which are now seriously short of power, will also be able to supply other districts which are at present without facilities apart from steam plants, operating costs of which are practically prohibitive.

Mining developments of a highly promising character are developing throughout the district which the company plans to serve by further expansion as the demand grows but the earnings of the first unit, now nearing completion to supply 2,150 horse power are estimated at $100,000 per annum, against the requirements of bond interest of $59,500. Two further units will bring the installed capacity up to a production of 6,500 horse power, which will give estimated earnings of $227,500, or equal to 4½ times the bond interest, and should show about 12 per cent. on the common stock.

ANTHRACITE PROSPECTS

Coal Shortage By End of Winter Predicted

New York, November 29.—The country is facing a shortage of 15,000,000 tons of anthracite coal before the end of the winter, it was said today at the offices of the State Fuel Administration. The estimate is based on a survey of conditions in the anthracite field, taking, according to officials, the most optimistic viewpoint regarding production during the next four months.

An analysis of the output shows, it is said, that the October supply, the surplus of which would ordinarily be used to make up the difference between the consumption and the output in later months, was 1,000,000 tons short. November, is estimated to be 1,850,000 tons short. The estimated shortage for December is 3,720,000 tons; for January, 3,700,000 tons, and for March 1,230,000 tons.—Montreal Gazette.

FOWL SUPPER A SUCCESS

Large Attendance at Anniversary Supper at Foxboro Methodist Church

On Sunday anniversary services were held at the Foxboro Methodist Church and on Monday evening a fowl supper was held which was largely attended, many from the city and vicinity being present. Supper was served in the Sunday School room and the spread provided was all that could have been desired, good things being in abundance. After all had been served a platform meeting was held in the auditorium of the church, presided over by the Pastor, Rev. Mr. Butler. A varied and interesting programme was presented, pleasing all present. Instrumental music was furnished by Bridge Street Church orchestra. Appropriate addresses were given by Revs. Farnsworth, Honey and Wood, the latter the Pastor of the Presbyterian church in the village. Solos were given by Misses Vallere Wrightmyer and Marjorie Bird who were compelled to respond to encores. Misses Ada Meserve and Madden gave a dialogue which was well rendered and caused considerable merriment. Mr. Finley of Albert College gave a recitation in good form, Rev. Mr. Lane of West Huntington gave a reading in a manner that brought down the house. The affair was in every respect a great success and a goodly sum was realized for the church.

NEW USE FOR COAL

Self-Proclaimed Wizard Offers His Services To Hastings Co. People

Basing his argument upon his own knowledge, there is said to be a Peterboro, a gentleman, well situated as he, through extraordinary means, peculiar to his individual makeup, can detect without the least difficulty, the presence of oil, gold, gas, salt, ore of all kinds, subterraneous oil and salt water streams, lakes in the bowels of the earth and many other extremely interesting things known by nature.

This remarkable faculty is his because the electric currents in his body act with the electricity emanating from Mother Earth, that immediate discovery of the aforementioned resources is very simple. But this is not all.

He can make discrimination as to the presence of these particular things, and can locate without the slightest trouble the exact position of same, together with the vein markings in the rock. Different sorts of wood, particularly selected are used in these searches and with a divining rod this gentleman walks nonchalantly about the fields and wrests the secrets from Nature. How this is done in the instance of oil discovery is uncertain as the fact that oil is a non-conductor of electric current does not bother him in the least.

Five thousand dollars is said to have been recently paid to him for his valuable services in locating oil in Pennsylvania for some American capitalists, when all other know methods had failed. It is said that this man wishes to definitely determine the quantity of gas and oil in the recent find at Stirling and he offers his services to citizens there, providing of course that the finances relative to the forming of a stock company for exploitation, are upheld by Stirlingites with the preponderance of the stock allotment, in his favor. This gentleman is understood to be heavily interested in the floating of a company to extract fluorspar from the fields near Madoc. In this instance the original operators of the property are understood to have found that the existence of large quantities of zinc properties so contaminated the fluorspar that the mining of it was unprofitable and useless commercially. They immediately abandoned the scheme but this winter friends from Peterboro came along with his divining rod and smart by discovered the vein of ore, (which he declares the ultimate company lost trace of). So far out there, nothing but sand seems to have been found in the drilling, but perhaps there is a short circuit somewhere and the electric current cannot function. People should wish him luck anyway, as we had better watch our forests. They may be rapidly depleted in the cutting of driving posts and that would not do.

BI-FOCAL EYEGLASSES SHOULD BE CHEAPER

Buffalo, Dec. 4.—The price of eyeglasses, especially of the bifocal type will be materially lower next year, it is asserted by Dr. D. E. Sharp, an executive of one of the largest concerns in America engaged in the manufacture of magnifying glass. Patents which look over this type of eyeglass will expire and with the resulting competition among manufacturers and the elimination of royalties, material reductions should come, he said. Rapid progress has been made in America since the industry, formerly controlled by Germany, was virtually cut off from that country entirely by the great war. Telescope lenses of all sizes are now successfully made in American plants.

which at the past was debatable ground for the two Atlantic parties, reduce the Conservative lead in the southern portion of the county to the aid of Progressive or United Farmer votes, and elect their candidate, David Findlay of Carleton Place.

The Government had much to gain in strength and prestige by victory, and its members threw themselves into the fight and applied every political resource at their command. Premier King himself and the Ontario and Western members of the Cabinet made speaking tours in the constituency and every effort was made by organization and advertisement to carry the county for Mr. Findlay. Failure after and a campaign is a deep disappointment to the Government.

It is true that Dr. Preston's majority is much less than that of the late Mr. Stewart in 1921, Mr. Stewart contested the riding as a Labour Minister, and as a citizen whose useful business and public work had contributed to the prosperity of Lanark County. additional 750 tons lot of hard nut and egg coal being in the city.

Speaking to the Intelligencer this afternoon, Miss Allen, of the Allen Company, stated that the barge left Deseronto at an early hour on Sunday morning, being in tow of a lower St. Lawrence River tug. After a rough trip the tug and barge arrived in Kingston on Sunday night. There they stayed over night and yesterday morning came up the bay to Deseronto where as she, (the tug) had to hasten on to her home port before being frozen in. The barge spent the night at Deseronto.

One of the Weddel tugs from Trenton was secured and was sent to Deseronto to get the Warrenkh. The Weddel tug and barge left Deseronto this morning. All the boats and slips to navigation have been removed for the winter.

The message in spite of heavy winds they made the run up the bay to this city. The barge is heavily laden and at present is aground in the harbor.

The water is very low this autumn and the heavy wind today has caused the level to lower some six inches more. It is thought that the boat may worked into the dock when the wind goes down.

Speaking to the Intelligencer this afternoon Mr. Ned Downey stated that he was greatly relieved at having the boat in the harbor, as she has caused a good deal of anxiety to them for the last few days.

"My Boy was Starving to Death"

"As He Was Getting No Nourishment He Was Gradually Wasting Away."

"Here's a story which will interest every mother. Before my boy was born, I was in such delicate health that the doctor didn't think I would survive the ordeal. For weeks after he was born my life was despaired of, as I couldn't feed him and the poor little fellow was left to the care of friends. He wasn't naturally strong. No care was taken in choosing his food and his poor little stomach became so weakened that he couldn't keep anything at all. As he was not getting no nourishment from his food, he was gradually wasting away. Finally, in desperation, we sent for a doctor specially and he said that my boy was starving to death. He gave him some medicine and ordered a certain diet. The child did improve but somehow couldn't seem to get strong. This went on for four or five years and the boy still continued weak and puny looking. He could not play like other children without having to lie down and rest. My sister who lives on a farm near Deseco, said that she could fix him up in a week and sent him to her. Being heartily persuaded from him, I was ready to make any sacrifice to get him strong. He was away from me for three months and it was with feelings of great excitement that I awaited his return as my sister had written me that I would be surprised when I saw my boy. When my sister got off the train, I could not believe that it was my own boy that she was leading by the hand. I never saw such a change in any child. He was fat and rosy and full of life with a hearty appetite! What on earth have you done to him," I said, 'Why,' she replied 'simply apple bun bi-cent of doses, gave him good food—and here's the real secret, I gave him three bottles of Carnol before he had taken half a bottle his whole appearance had changed. He got heavier, his face took on a colour and he would run round for hours at a time.' The change in my boy is the most wonderful event in my life. I am a regular 'fan' for Carnol and never lose a chance to boost it. As I write I am looking out of the window and when I see that rosy, active, healthy child running around, I cannot believe that he was once a puny, delicate boy."

Carnol is sold by your druggist, and if you can conscientiously say, after you have tried it, that it hasn't done you any good, return the empty bottle to him and he will refund your money. 6-23

ge sight of the responsibility that confronted it is helping to carry on and enlarge the interests of Christian men in the lives of men and boys.

The convention by resolution reaffirmed its reverent recognition in the supremacy of Jesus Christ as the Head of every man and of all movements and institutions and recognized that the most important agency for the promotion of religious life is the church. No other institution should be permitted to supplant or ignore its primacy. The Association reaffirms its historical policy of absolute loyalty to the church and reasserts its intention to recognize in all its activities the pre-eminence of the church.

The convention reaffirmed its policy of evangelical control. One of the noteworthy reports received at the one from the committee on the re dirment fund showing that the accrual liability of $4,000,000 was properly and sufficient paid-in to make the fund operative, over 4000 secretaries having agreed from over 1000 different Young Mens' Christian Associations. The convention faced the fact that the Young Mens' Christian Association had not in any adquate way occupied its field, that, even 1,000 members did not begin to represent the number of young men and boys that ought to be won to our fellowship and program.

These young men and boys are discontented with the past and with much of the present and compared with other generations they are extremely critical and yet they are the most acquiring generation the world have ever known. They are ready to pay great prices to usher in a better day. It is a difficult generation, but it is a very hopeful one and in Jesus Christ moreover, we have the one most uniting personality and program that this generation demands. This generation must be won for their own sake, for the sake of the church into which we ought to pour in great streams the flower of the boyhood and young manhood of our nation.

They must be won because of their leadership. The Young Mens' Christian Association is a youth movement its crowning glories have ever been won when this was held in ascendence. The most characteristic thing about the Association at its very best is every land is the leadership, the participation, and the sense of responsibility of youth.

Mr. W. Murphy has been through this line with his clover dresser and did some good work.

Mr. Earl Carter has been engaged to make cheese in the Bronk factory for the season of 1923.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Hodges of Foxboro dined on Sunday at the home of the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Yorke.

JES' MY DOG.

(By Bertha McKinney.)

He hasn't any pedigree,
He isn't much on looks,
You'd never find a dog like him
In any story books;
He's jes' my dog.

In color he's as yaller
As the ripest yaller ear,
But when I think o' his devotion
It fills my eyes with blur;
He's jes' my dog.

He wouldn't bring a dollar
If I wish'd he'r her him sold,
But every single yaller hair
To me is purest gold;
He's jes' my dog.

The Daily Recipe

CHRISTMAS CAKE.

(Very Rich.)

One lb. butter, 1 lb. sugar, 10 eggs, one lb. blanched almonds, 1 lb. walnut meats, ¾-lb. candied cherries cut in half, 1 lb. dates cleaned fine, 3 lbs. large seeded raisins, 2 lbs. best currants, ½ lb. preserved ginger cut fine, 1-2 lb. candied pineapple, 1 lb. mixed peel cut very fine, 2 teaspoons ground allspice, 2 teaspoons of cinnamon, ½ teaspoonful clove—(small) ½ cup cold strong coffee, ½ cup grape jelly, 3 teaspoons (level) baking powder, flour to make stiff (about 1 ½ lbs.) Mix fruit together, pour coffee over and let stand three hours. Cream butter and sugar together. Beat eggs until they are light and add to butter and sugar. Mix flour, baking powder and spices together and add to butter, sugar and eggs, then add fruit, nuts and jelly. Beat well, adding more flour if necessary. Put in cake moulds, steam for five or six hours, then dry slowly in a moderate oven for two hours.

TO REMOVE STAINS.

As soon as you notice a stain remove it, as the longer it is left the more difficult will it be to remove.

To remove coffee and fruit stains stretch the stained part over a bowl and pour boiling water through it from a height until the stain disappears.

To remove chocolate and tea stains soak material in cold water, to which has been added a little borax, then apply boiling water as for coffee stains.

To remove ink stains soak, if dry, in sweet or sour milk; if wet, in oxalic acid rinse.

To remove mildew stains apply soft soap and powdered chalk; keep moist, then lay stained material in the sun.

To remove rust on white material soak spots with lemon juice, then cover with salt. Stand in the sun till stain disappears, then rinse thoroughly.

When coffee and tea stains are of long standing cover them with glycerine and allow to stand for 2 or 3 hours. Then wash with cold water and hard soap. If not efficacious the first time try, try, try again.

ALICE TERRY

FILM WITH UNIQUE STORY

"Her Mad Bargain," the Louis Mayer-First National attraction starring Anita Stewart that opened its run at the Regent Theatre last night is unique because it has many twists that make it stand-out among the season's offerings.

Alice Lambert, protege of wealth, is unduly deprived of every comfort and luxury she has known. Without any training in the practical things of life she is forced to a miserable existence haunting studios of dressmaking shops for a few hour's work as a model. Fleeing from the persecutions of an undesirable artist she presents a charming picture in negligee as she bounces into the studio of David Leighton. David is a high minded young man, who decides to save Alice from herself; and once she won't accept aid from him he talks her into signing an unusual bargain by which she is to be surrounded with every comfort for the period of five years.

There's a price to be paid but it's by life the young artist is after. That's all we can tell you about the play without spoiling your enjoyment of an unique situation when you go to see the picturesquely.

Anita Stewart is herself. That describes capable acting, a glittering show of gorgeous clothes, beautiful features and a graceful carriage. Her support is unusually capable. Walter McGrail is the leading man and the players include among other, Arthur Edmund Carew and Adele Farrington. Young Ernest Butterworth takes a juvenile role with a mixture of comedy and pathos.

The direction was by Edwin Carew and the scenario by Josephine Quirck.

CAMPBELLFORD NEWS

FUNERAL OF JAMES FRANCIS

The funeral of James Francis Dunlay, of Seymour-West, whose sudden death at Peterborough last Thursday came as a great shock to his friends and relatives in this district, took place on Sunday morning, Dec. 3, and proceeded to St. Mary's Church, where requiem mass was celebrated. Six cousins of deceased acted as pallbearers and the remains were laid to rest in St. Mary's Cemetery. The late Mr. Dunlay was the only son of Richard Dunlay, a life-long resident of Seymour township and leaves a wife and baby girl to mourn his loss.

The funeral of Mrs. Jean Dinwoodie, who died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. W. W. Cumming, 133 Bedford Road, Toronto, on Friday, Dec. 1st, at the age of 90 years, took place at Campbellford on the arrival of the Grand Trunk train at 1.28 p. m. The remains were laid to rest in Mount Pleasant Cemetery. The deceased was the widow of James Dinwoodie and daughter of the late Commander, R. Cuck of the Royal Navy.

By

D. Kinmount Roy

For two or three days the 'Rover' disappeared her cargo without intermission, during which time the ship was carefully examined, in order that any damage resulting from the recent storm might be repaired. It was no light task the crew had before them; for every thing had to be carried halfway up the cliffs, and then conveyed through a passage cut in rocks to an underground storehouse, running under a low, rambling building a hundred yards or more inland. This cellar-like receptacle was divided into compartments by doors of great strength, strongly secured, and in one of the least accessible was a rough fastness of a smuggler-keep, whether for use or as a warning it would be hard to say. These strange underground apartments communicated with the building above as well as with the sea, the whole indicating skilful planning and almost complete concealment.

For some distance behind and on either side the house there were broad stretches of cultivated land, and a flock of goats and a few cows contentedly browsing gave a touch of colour and a suggestion of home-comfort to the scene. There were not more than a dozen trees, if so many, breaking the expanse, and these looked like forsaken sentinels that could hope for no relief, while a solitary thorn-bush, protected from intrusion by a rough bank thrown up around it, stood like a thing of old, the whole indicating skilful planning and threatening, like a witch smitten dunces on humankind. Beyond the fit of cultivated land lay broad pastures of sparse, rendering approach from the land practically impossible save by one path, if path it might be called, which only those in the secret of its treacherous windings could by any chance find their way.

This was the dreary retreat Kinkman had in view for Goss, where he intended she should remain, helpless and hopeless, until she learned obedience to his wishes and became the willing bride of his son, Walter Heathfield.

And now his carefully devised schemes are in shreds, his son bore defeated and himself baffled and defied, left to brood over his ill success in a rudder stronghold. He was not the man to accept defeat as belonging to the natural order of things; if he passed to think, it was that he might rise at the first opportunity and build his airy castle afresh as though nothing had happened of any serious consequence. The men loved him little, and trusted him not at all. True, they were not saints, and sinners steeped in multiplied offences against the law; but their offences were of the fearless sort that went hand in hand with courage and endurance and to a man they were contemptuous of Kinkman's supple duplicity and underhand ways. They were fascinated by the free, wild life of the sea, while Kinkman was above all things a true child of Mammon, and never rose, save in brief spasms of a not altogether extinct conscience, to care for anything but gain. Rightly or wrongly they were persuaded that he would sell his soul to the devil for money, and would not hesitate to betray every man of them could it be turned to his own advantage.

Fortunately the captain had some hold upon him, the nature of which the men could not fathom, but it was considered sufficient to induce him to commit no treachery; he had never landed at the stronghold before, and it was certain he would never leave it if the men had any cause to doubt his good faith.

It was early autumn when they reached Munk's Castle, as the place was called, and it was early spring before Kinkman ventured to explore his surroundings. The 'Rover' had come and gone more than once in the course of this time, bringing news from the outer world, and much plunder besides for their storerooms. Revenue cutters and an occasional warship passed, standing well out to sea, for the dangerous actions of the coast was well known and dreaded. The fact was, the depredations of the schooner were suspected, but as her captain took liberal toll of England's enemies, the commanders of His Majesty's ships had a blind eye for the doings of the desperate fellows, who were really making successful, though irregular, war against the common foe. That Kinkman chafed at the enforced retirement was natural, and yet there was no other way for his safety or success; and this he knew full well. He explored the cliffs in every direction, but was shrewd enough not to venture into the marsh; yet, for all his prudent regard for his own life, he came near meeting an ingloriou end. Munk's Castle, as we have seen, was protected in front by the sea, owing to the dangerous navigation, and behind by marsh; on one side the sea had cut a chasm in the rock which effectually barred the way for anything without wings; while on the other east wind and water had combined to scoop out a valley, locally known as the Coil, and the sand into hills, and cutting off the castle-land from the intrusion of undesirable visitors. The topography was exceedingly irritating to Kinkman. To be unable to go and come as will exasperated him, add ill-humour only served to provoke the rough banter of the men, who enjoyed his discomfiture: they, as expert seamen, were able to get around by boat when they pleased. They warned him that the sand was treacherous, and that once the sandhill was past there was no return without help, and help might not be forthcoming. Whether Kinkman suspected that they were imposing on his simplicity was never known, but one afternoon he ventured too far, and soon found himself over the lip of the dune, making his way to the bottom without any power of arresting his progress. When at last he came to a stop, and got his breath, he said many things that can be better imagined than recorded.

Paint Brush Pictures

A Colorful Dresser Scarf

A dainty dresser set for sister may be made by painting with sealing wax little trays and holders which can be bought at any variety store or which dad will gladly have around the house. Both a set is much prettier than a plain ivory one and lends a touch of bright color to any girl's room.

The sealing wax paint is made of the little sticks of sealing wax, which may be bought at stationery stores in all colors. For this entire set you will need three sticks of black, two of gold, and one of each of three bright colors, such as French blue, yellow, and red. Break each stick into several pieces, putting each color in a separate cup or little pan. Pour over the broken pieces just enough denatured alcohol to cover them. Allow this to stand overnight. If the wax is all melted in the morning and is thin enough to paint with, you are ready to go to work. You may need to add a little more alcohol to thin the paint.

Use China Dishes

The powder and rouge set and pin tray are of china. You need not get a smooth china, as you would if painting a pretty gift, had walked off on his front feet after a piece of candy. The boys and girls all laughed and applauded him.

Now that he was back in the old barn where he and Nancy lived, he felt that he could speak to them. So, as soon as it's the season for circuses to come around again," he announced to Nancy, "I'm going to join one. I don't think such talent as mine should be wasted. Any one who makes such a bit bit as I did should go on the stage. You ought to have seen how grand I looked. I had a frill around my neck and a hat on my head. You'll never be dressed up like that, Nancy."

"I'm sure I wouldn't want to be," she answered grumpily.

"I might have known you'd be jealous," grinned Willie.

Suddenly they stopped talking, for they heard voices just outside the window. Fred and his father were having a big argument. "Any more trouble like this," threatened Fred's father, "and you'll have to get rid of those goats. That's all there is to it. Mrs. Atkins was simply furious. She says Jeanne had seen that straw hat of hers only a few times last summer and it is good as new, and an expensive bargain at that."

"Well," answered Fred ruefully, "Paul Atkins said we could have it. And we cut it down to fit Willie, so it was spoiled anyway before he ate the old hat."

"Just try telling that to her! Now mind what I said."

Willie wandered into the barn. He glared at Willie Goat and sent a kick in his direction, which Willie dodged. "Now we can't use their garage any more," he stormed. "Don't see what we had to have that old goat in it for anyway." [illegible]

"Ha! did you say?" tittered Nancy.

If your pen nib is corroded push it into a raw potato several times to remove its growth.

The best way to clean a gas burner is to use an old toothbrush instead of a cloth.

The Short Story Jr.

WILLIE GOAT MAKES A HIT

Willie Goat once more found he would scarcely look at Nancy. Had he not made a hit on the stage? His success had gone to his head, so that he no longer cared to nibble on common tin cans or to gossip with Nancy.

Fred and the other boys on the street had given a show on the second floor of Atkin's big garage, and Willie had been the star performer. He had stood on a box and eaten peanuts. When Fred had picked up his hack legs he

NEWS ITEMS FROM THE WEST

Regina, Dec. 4.—Better crop returns and a determination on the part of councils to pay greater attention to the matter of collection of taxes is expected to bring about a marked improvement in the financial position of Saskatchewan municipalities within the next year, according to the annual report of J. J. Smith, deputy minister, to Hon. C. M. Hamilton, provincial minister of municipal affairs.

There has been a steady improvement in the work of municipal offices during the past year, the report states, and this is attributed to the growing disposition of council boards to overcome the importance of the work being done by municipal officials and to pay them adequate remuneration. The report adds:

"The marked business depression which set in during the close of 1920 adversely affected the financial standing of a considerable proportion of Saskatchewan's municipalities. This depression is still in evidence and the improvement in the financial position of the municipalities which it was predicted would take place as soon as normal business conditions returned has not up to the present been realized.

"Tax collections have fallen off considerably with the result that many municipalities are still experiencing difficulty in making the required payments to the school districts and telephone companies. Many municipalities continue to pay out increasingly large amounts in interest to the banks. This is particularly true of a number of rural municipalities.

"In the year 1918 the interest paid by the rural municipalities of Saskatchewan on current municipal loans amounted to $191,154. In 1920 the interest payments had increased to $270,846, while in 1921 these payments amounted to $393,167. These figures do not include payments of interest on seed grain, relief and debenture loans. These interest charges constitute a heavy annual drain upon the municipalities and emphasize in a striking manner the importance of the prompt payment of taxes by the taxpayers."

DARWIN'S EVOLUTION ATTRACTED BY SWEDISH BOTANIST

Stockholm, Dec. 2.—A declaration that Darwin's theory of evolution is strong comes from the Rev. Dr. J. Enander, a Swedish country minister, more famous as a botanist, who has just returned to his congregation and to an orchard of at least a thousand varieties of willows and willowy hybrids, after a botanical tour through the United States and Canada.

"The cross-breeding of plants is as fascinating to a botanist as the cross-breeding of races to a biologist," says Dr. Enander. "Cross-breeds usually occur, when the willows go northward, or to higher altitudes in mountainous countries. The female willow is a more hardy and aggressive pioneer than the male, but continues being fertilized by the male as long as he is able to follow. When the male plants finds the migration too hard and gives up, the female willow accepts fertilization from some male of a kindred species, and thus cross-breeds arise." Dr. Enander added that there were more than 70 varieties of willows, or willows, and many thousands of cross-breeds.

The United States' customs officers prevented the Swedish botanist from taking in live botanical specimens which he wanted to show to American scientists. This was in accordance with the law designed to prevent spreading of plant diseases. Dr. Enander now intends to prevail upon the Swedish government to inspect plants which it is desired to export, and to give pledges to the United States authorities that they are free from disease.

ARMENIAN LOSSES IN SMYRNA FIXED

Athens, Dec. 5.—The losses of the Armenian community in Smyrna total $114,000,000 according to a tabulation made by a committee under the direction of the Bishop of Smyrna.

Sixty million of this total is in real and personal property, and the remainder in intangible assets like bonds and bonds in Armenian companies operating in Asia Minor. The annual income of 8,000 Armenian families in Smyrna used to be $7,500,000, whereof 15 per cent. was given to charities and to the church.

Smyrna, which was the richest Armenian community in the world before the coming of the Turkish army, had 20 millionaires, but today every one of these men is virtually penniless. The largest losers are the landowners, textile importers and exporters of fruits, cereals, carpets and opium.

The number of Armenians killed in Smyrna, according to the committee, is 4,000 and the number of persons who are missing or who have been made prisoners is stated to be 8,000 men and 15,000 women.

The most prominent Armenian business men killed were Sarkis and Kasparian, landowners, and Gurzelian and Panossian, textile merchants.

CURZON FINDS RAY OF HOPE

London, Dec. 4.—While the recent address of Lord Curzon, Secretary of Foreign Affairs, to an audience of business men in the city, dealt in a large measure with the actual political situation of the New East, the speaker also expressed some interesting ideas as to conditions on the Continent. He does not believe that the future outlook of economic Europe is one of unrelieved gloom.

"I see the little nations of Europe pushing forward to a greater life of international unity during the next few years," said Lord Curzon. "In the states of Czecho-Slovakia, Jugo-Slavia, Rumania, Poland and Finland, and in the Baltic States, I see symptoms of life and energy, and the growth of a strong sense of national independence and power. But on the other hand, if I look at the great powers, whether they emerged triumphant from the war or whether they were broken up by the disasters that ensued, I find that they are in a position of much greater dislocation and disturbance. Take our own country. Our financial position is much stronger, with the exception of America, than any other State that took part in the war.

"But at the same time we have a burden of heavy taxation which weighs down industry, and which is a burden upon every man in this country.

"France is weighted with a heavy debt and is sore about reparation. Germany is in a position of political instability and is debilitated by the utter collapse of her exchange. Russia is still outside the comity of nations, because she cannot make up her mind to accept the conditions which render admission to that comity possible and desirable. She is still enamored of communism, and persists in pursuing her communistic propaganda in every part of the world.

"Austria was saved only by the intervention of the powers when on the verge of perishing. Italy has been concerned with more than one convulsion and change of Government.

"What an Ambition it would be for the statesmen of the great powers to combine and survey this situation; to dissociate it section by section; gradually to take the various pieces of the jig-saw puzzle which are lying about and fit them in their own places, and once more present a picture of a peaceful and united Europe.

LUCKY PENNSYLVANIANS SHOVEL FREE COAL FROM RIVERS

Harrisburg, Pa., Dec. 2.—The coal problem this winter is one only of strong arm muscles and a vehicle, wheelbarrow, horse and wagon, or motor truck, for some of those Pennsylvanians whose home, are on the banks of streams which flow from the hard coal regions.

River-coal, so-called because it is found in the beds of these rivers, is the solution. The coal, in the form of small particles, finer than the grade known commercially as buckwheat, has been used for years, largely by manufacturing plants, but the fear of shortage this year has increased household consumption, and many persons living along the streams in which it is found are gathering their own supply with the use of a shovel and a cart or automobile for transportation.

The coal is mainly the product of culm or refuse banks in the vicinity of anthracite further up the streams. It is found in the Lehigh, Schuylkill and Susquehanna rivers down which it has been washed in the years since the anthracite mining was begun in Pennsylvania. In many sections of these rivers beds several feet thick have existed, but commercial dredging and pumping operations combined with greater conservation on the part of mining companies is reducing the supply.

Householders who have gathered their own winter fuel from the rivers have found the coal frequently in eddies near the shore, where it has been necessary only to shovel it out. The man, living near the Susquehanna in the vicinity of Harrisburg, has established a complete supply of coal, with the cost of transportation. Commercially the coal sells for about $3 a ton. Four dealers reported for its sale in household furnaces, and when used it produces, it is said, as much or more heat than the grade commonly sold for household use.

More than a half-million tons of river coal, valued at nearly $700,000, were recovered from the Schuylkill, Susquehanna and Lehigh rivers in commercial operations during 1921, state reports show.

MUSIC and DRAMA

CLERGY IN TRIBUTE TO 'HUMAN HEARTS'

A challenge to fifteen hundred New York clergymen to "come, see and criticise if you can" was issued by King Baggot, director of the Universal picture "Human Hearts" when that film was shown in New York City. Baggot asserted his belief in the good intention of moving picture producers. Critics and reformers to the contrary, all branches of the film industry are striving to make clean pictures, Baggot contended.

As proof of his statement he offered his picture "Human Hearts," explaining it would be found to be thrilling and filled with interest and suspense, yet clean as a whistle and surcharged with high principles.

Hundreds of clergymen accepted. Scores of letters later were received from them highly praising the picture and complimenting Baggot and Universal.

"Human Hearts" was adapted from Al Reid's celebrated rural drama of a decade ago. In the screen version House Peters plays the leading role. The picture is to be shown at Griffin's this Thursday to Saturday with matinee Saturday.

"Far Land's Sake," a two reel Mermaid comedy, a Travelogue, and Chap ter 2 of the thrilling western play "Buffalo Bill" are announced for presentation on the same program.

MYSTERY AND THRILL FEATURES "PARTNERS OF THE TIDE" HERE TOMORROW

Jack Perrin athletic screen star, in a brawny sailor's mate in his latest seafaring vehicle with Lestrice Joy, titled, "Partners of The Tide," which is being exhibited at Griffin's, Tuesday, one night only.

As Matt Peasely in this refreshing picture of the sea, Mr. Perrin is said to have one of the best roles of his stellar career. Mr. Perrin loves the sea and boats, and "Partners of the Tide" gives the star rare opportunities in sea scene. The sea scenes were made in and near Boston and off the rocky Main coast, where three vessels and tug chartered were employed.

One scene of "Partners of the Tide" reveals a boat grounded on the rocks by heavy seas and a high wind. A great risk was taken by the actors of this scene, as it was necessary to brave rough water and the possible danger of being stranded on the rocks.

A two reel Century comedy, a five reel Western drama and other varied plays of interest have been arranged for exhibition on the same program.

A Fuel Saving Secret

This is a message to conscientious housewives, and a piece of advice to all.

The shortage and high price of cooking fuel has brought to light many things which might never have been known otherwise. Here is one thing, for instance. Did you know that good enameled ware cooking utensils heat more quickly than utensils made all of metal, such as copper, brass or aluminum? It's true. Try it!

Take a good grade of enameled ware saucepan, and a similar sized saucepan made of copper, aluminum or brass. Put two quarts of cold water into each. Set them on the fire and time them—see how long it takes each to boil. Over a moderate heat, water in the enameled ware saucepan will boil in approximately ten minutes, but with the same heat will take approximately eighteen minutes—almost double the time—to come to the boil!

Think of the wasted heat and the amount of wasted money it must represent! Just figure what this would run into in a year!

Use enameled ware utensils for cooking and save heat and money. Don't purchase cheap, flimsy enameled ware. Get the best, either Diamond Ware, which is sky blue and white outside with a snowy-white lining, or Pearl Ware, which is a beautiful pearly grey and white mottle inside and out. Another enameled ware of really super qualities is snow-white outside and inside with deep blue trimmings. It is called Crystal Ware and is now used in many of Canada's finest homes.

All three of these wares carry a green and red shield shape SMP trade mark on every utensil. Don't buy enameled ware unless it carries one of these trade marks. You can buy SMP Crystal Ware, Diamond Ware or Pearl Ware at any hardware store. Don't accept substitutes.

How- ever, the prosperity of one good season usually atones for the depression of more than one bad one.

Development, and consequently capi- tal, is needed in Rhodesia today. Irri- gation schemes, land settlement, railway construction must be pushed forward if Rhodesia is to become as prosperous as the cousins' Dowsers. Population also is needed, but it must be population of the right kind.

Closely bound up with the question of land settlement is that of railway development. At present two schemes of railway construction are under dis- cussion, and it is hoped that by the near future large tracts of the country may be opened up and the journey between Rhodesia and her great market, the Rand, may be thereby considerably shortened.

"DOUBLES"

London, Nov. 23.—Frank Edward Allen and William Mackintosh Allen, eight-and-a-half-year-old twins, are so absolutely alike, not only in build and looks, but in mental ability, that their schoolmaster is completely bat- fled.

They have been at the school only a fortnight, and in marking their pap- ers he has frequently given marks to the wrong twin. Their marks for the fortnight were exactly the same; con- sequently they are both placed thir- teenth, and sit together.

"Both boys are exceptionally keen," their school teacher says, "and very sturdy. They are identical in temper- ament, think alike, and act in the same characteristic manner."

William is exactly a quarter of an hour older than his brother. They are equally enthusiastic in outdoor games.

Their mother states that when they were on holiday in Scotland, a Scotsman recently discovered that she was supposed to be used to roll out dough and not knock it out of a tight- ened head.

Railway News

Philadelphia.—The Canadian Pa- cific Railway has opened its new offices here in the Cross Building at the corner of Locust and 15th Streets. Growth of the company's business and the gradual movement of the city's most important busi- ness institutions in this direction were responsible for this move into larger quarters in the heart of the hotel, theatre and business district. The offices which have been hand- somely fitted, accommodate both freight and passenger officials of Canadian Pacific rail and ocean lines, as well as representatives of the Minneapolis, St. Paul and Sault and the Duluth, South Shore and Atlantic Railways.

London, Ont.—This year the Cana- dian Pacific Railway has arranged to hold weekly first aid classes at London throughout the entire year and the instruction will be furnished by the employees themselves, many who have become very proficient in first aid work.

By this means those employees who have had previous instruction can drop into the classes from time to time and refresh themselves on the instruction, while the new em- ployees, especially those in train and engine service, whose duties may require them to be absent from the classes one week, will have the opportunity of taking the instruc- tion later on as the classes will con- tinue throughout the year. E. T. Wright, C. P. R. storekeeper at Lon- don, is chairman in charge of the committee, which is looking after the formation of first aid classes on the London division.

Montreal.—Judge Choquet's warn- ing issued some time ago threaten- ing to fine the parents of boys caus- ing damages in any part of the city was put into effect when he con- demned fifteen mothers of arrested lads to pay $3.72 each for the acts of their offspring.

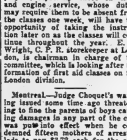

For some time there has been daily reports from the C. P. R. of destruction to cars and fixtures by youngsters who run wild through the yards and use the cars for play- ing hide and seek. The most seri- ous accusations were laid against boys who were caught throwing stones at passing trains, endanger- ing the lives of travellers. Judge Choquet gave a warning that he would hold the parents responsible for the acts of wandering by chil- dren. When he had fifteen cases prepared for court he carried out his warning by making the parents pay the costs of the damages in- curred.

Montreal.—From Finland to Du- luth, Minn., via Montreal, travelling alone and tagged like a piece of baggage, is the record of Veikko Tuominen, aged eight, who stepped off the Canadian Pacific train in Duluth the other day, wearing a smile of confidence and trust in the strength he would about him. He was on his way to his uncle, Frank Salini, at Virginia, Minn.

The lad recently became an or- phan, and his uncle wrote to friends in Helsingfors that he would take care of the boy. Salini was unable to go to Finland for him, so little Veikko was tagged and placed in charge of the Canadian Pacific. He came from Helsingfors to England, where he was placed on board the S.S. Melita, and carefully looked after until his arrival at Montreal. Still a ward of the company, he was sent on to his destination. In all he travelled about 9,000 miles, and ap- peared to be as happy as a clam.

Parry Sound.—Parry Sound, On- tario, was last week the scene of the latest of a series of railway acci- dents that seem to indicate a grow- ing carelessness on the part of motorists. It was another case of the motor car hitting a moving train, and there was about the event all the usual evidences of gross, fool- hardy disregard of danger that marks most of these so-called acci- dents.

"The engine was switching at the time, and was moving at about five miles an hour. The engine bell was ringing, and the whistle had sound- ed just before the engine whistled at the crossing. A motorist who was driving thought he had import- ant fact that he was approaching a railway crossing could not have missed the warnings given; but in this case the auto rolled merrily on and struck the side of the engine, and naturally came off second best. Fortunately the occupant of the car escaped injury for which he need waste no thanks on his own watch- fulness and careful driving. It might be well if less fuss be made at approaches to level crossings un- paved, or make them so rough as to compel slow driving of motor cars, for in no other way can these people be persuaded to approach these crossings at a speed that will permit them to come to a stop when their lives depend upon their so doing.

The Harp in Canada

LAKE LOUISE ALBERTA.

From time immemorial nature has been a source of inspiration to the poet. The majesty of the moun- tains, the serene beauty of the for- est, the charm of crystal pools seem to have the effect of moving poetic souls. Canada, with its wealth of glorious scenery is therefore natur- ally the home of poets, and, indeed, it has been said that we cannot throw a snowball without hitting one.

The Canadian school of poetry is essentially a nature school. Bliss Carman, Charles G. D. Roberts and Archibald Lampman have set the standard, and a very high standard it is. Probably nothing in Canadian literature has been more quoted than Bliss Carman's "Low Tide on Grand Pre," a poem which breathes the spirit of nature as felt on the lovely shores of Nova Scotia. The modern Canadian poets are follow- ing in the footsteps of these writers, but going further afield, as the facilities for travel throughout the great Dominion are extended. Thus, for instance, in a neat volume of poems by a young Irish-Canadian poet, M. A. Hargadon, some fine changes from Ireland to Nova Scotia, Quebec, and the Canadian Rockies. Here is a charming verse from a poem about Lake Louise:

"This lake is God's best picture; that is why He hung it on the mountains at the sky

And set it in so beautiful a frame; Art gathers all the heaven have none the same."

This is the closing verse of a poem inspired by the majestic beauty of Banff:

"There is no lovelier place to live And when at last I die, I think my soul will go to Banff Instead of to the sky;

For here there is no sorrowing, No suffering nor care, And, up so near to paradise, It seems enfolded there."

The French-Canadians are described as:—

"Branch of a splendid race trans- planted here

Illuming life through all this lovely land."

In Nova Scotia Mr. Hargadon is in- spired to write lines that are par- ticularly happy:—

"God writes His poetry to-day; I see the flashes of His hand On distant hills, along the bay, All through the fair Acadian land.

"His book is every scene about, There are a million happy lines; The sweetest I have chosen out Beneath the steeples of the pines."

Many of the poems are about free- land, a country which has given Canada many good settlers, and no, doubt, will give many more. Here, is a verse from one:—

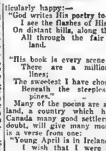

"Young April is in Ireland now, I wish that I were with her there,

For she is fair the loveliest Of all the Apeils anywhere; She has the sweetest voice and face;

She has the brightest gowns to wear."

Irish and Canadian poems are illu- strated with attractive photographs of scenes in Canada and Ireland. With St. Patrick's day approaching, and with Ireland now taking her place amongst the nations, the book is likely to create a wide interest at the present time, as it appears at a particularly opportune moment. It is prefaced by a sympathetic in- troduction by Colonel George H. Ham.

Irish and Canadian Poems are issued by The Modern Publishing Com- pany, 30 Dowd Street, Montreal. Price, one dollar.

"I Can Now Do My Work Without Feeling Tired"

Mrs. A. Moffatt, Rexton Falls, Que., writes:

"I suffered from a run-down system and nervous debility. I could not sleep or rest at night, and felt so weak I could not walk any distance. I took several boxes, but they only helped me while I was taking them. Mother advised me to take Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and I felt great bene- fit from the first box, and con- tinued taking several boxes. To- day I feel like a new woman, and am able to do my work without that dreadful tired feeling."

FEW HORSE-DRAWN VEHICLES

Carriage and Wagon Builders Have Almost Given Up That Branch of the Business.

The members of a firm formerly prominent in building horse-drawn vehicles on the Pacific coast give some interesting figures showing how the carriage and wagon building has died business, due to the inroads of the automobile industry in the transportation field.

It seems that there were 14,000 buggies sold in Los Angeles county alone in 1906, and 6,500 wagons. Two years later the first motorcar appeared and business therefore declined steadily. It is doubtful if 100 buggies a year are sold now in California. Lumbermen working in rural districts used to sell an average of two buggies a day and more and more. The present wagon builder said 28,000,000 worth of horse-drawn vehicles in 1906. In 1909 they stopped manufacturing them and concentrated their production facilities on motorcars, which they had gradually developed as their wagon trade decreased.

Not all firms were so far-sighted or fortunate, however, and many well-known lines formerly manufactured thousands of horse-drawn vehicles are now a memory. Most were builders of progressive mind installed motorcar departments and are now reaping a harvest as manufacturers of special truck and bodies to be fitted to standard motorcar truck chassis, work for which their mechanical equipment, working forces and experience are particularly well adapted.

MOTOR FUEL SUPPLY SHORT

Gasoline Cannot Be Relied On to Fill Demand—Alcohol the Coming Power.

Mineral oils vary very much in their makeup. Those of Mexico are particularly rich in the heavier hydrocarbons and are therefore excellently adapted for use as fuel. The lighter oils yield more kerosene and gasoline.

The prospect of gasoline supply effects one reason for automobile use has been increased enormously within the last ten years, but the growth of the output has been only relatively as great as the growth of the automobile industry. There are now 7,000,000 automobiles in the United States; by the end of the present year there will be 8,000,000.

Nothing is more certain than that the supply of gasoline will not keep pace with the increasing demand. We shall have to look to coal as the source of motor fuel. Already "benzol," a by-product of the distillation of bituminous coal is being used for this purpose in considerable quantities. Another fuel available for carburetors is ethyl (or ethyl redistilled) is alcohol, which can be obtained in unlimited quantities from molasses, from available potatoes, and all sorts of vegetable wastes.

Watching Life of Plants.

From fuller information, now at hand in regard to the machine by aid of which the Indian scientist, Sir J. C. Bose, has been watching the life in London the hypnotic of plants, shows that he does much more than make the plants write what they already know—that plants increase in size. He also has revealed that the growth of a plant is by no means steady or continuous, but is affected by many of the influences besides mere nutriment that affect the growth of animals. In short, this machine which is called a crescograph and magnifies movement 10,000 times, proves that plants are much more alive than it is customary to credit them with being, and it is not an altogether doubtful notion when the facts in relation to plant life become better known, deserving of consideration for their "feelings" and something of compunction about treating them as they may develop.

Pharmacy Popular.

Pharmacy is a popular pursuit among the women of South America, according to a Y. W. C. A. worker in that country, because it is a protected profession and is considered womanly. South American girls have not gone into public life and into the business world and the nearest to a career such can girls have and still consider, as a rule, only the so-called professions of work. They teach and sew and a few have become typists and stenographers, but most women who take up any profession train for nursing, medicine or pharmacy. Chemistry is also a popular study.

Rather Embarrassing.

"We had just moved into a new house. I was dressing when the fellow rang, and mother went to the door. Sure enough it was the young man I was trying to avoid. But instead of saying I was not at home, mother said: 'Oh, let me show you our new house.' Everything was lovely until approaching the closet, where I was crouched down on my knees, hair dressed, mother said: 'This is where we keep all our old junk and rubbish,' and opened the door.

I shall never forget how embarrassed I was.—Exchange.

CLAIMS HE DIED AND CAME TO LIFE

Queer Story of a Chinaman Who Once Lived in Seattle

Hong Kong, Dec. 2.—Thirty years ago Chin Gee Hee was a humble store keeper in Seattle, who probably spent much of his time wondering where his next meal was coming from. Today he is "King of Southern China."

And it is all because, according to his own story, he died when was forty-six and was sent back from heaven by Hades more unctuous existence than he previously spent.

There is a big bronze statue at Sunning as a perpetual reminder that Chin Gee did his duty when he came back to earth. He built a railway from Canton to Sunning in Southern China and in the eyes of the peasants of that country Mr. Chin is something more than a mere storybook mind.

He is seventy-six now, but he claims that during his brief sojourn in heaven he was told that he would live 104 years. Just long in Seattle not even Chin Gee Hee remembers exactly, but he still possesses an Illuminated address presented to him by the Seattle Chamber of Commerce. He made money while in Seattle, but he also lost most of it and when he returned to China he had to sell his home to pay his employees.

After that, at the age of forty-six, Chin Gee Hee "died." That, at any rate, he declares to be the position in truth. In heaven, he says, they told him they were not ready for him and they suggested that he return and build the Kongmoon-Sunning railroad. Chin took the idea and shortly after his "resurrection" he became very prosperously successful. The building of the railroad was only one of his achievements.

He prefers kings to presidents, declaring to interviewer: "Presidents no good. American still worse than presidents. People like King all same England. See Prince of Wales walk all over north and no one shoot him."

His idea for the economic salvation of China is that everyone in the country should contribute on the basis of one dollar a head, the rich paying enough to meet the shortage of money from the poorer classes.

ENGLISH SOCCER FOOTBALL HISTORY

London, Dec. 2.—(C. P.)—For the English Soccer enthusiast who has a fondness for delving into the history of the game, the seven day period extending between November 24 and December 1 receives much attention, as a great deal of the history of Association Football is written around dates that fall within this period.

It was on November 24, 1862 that the committee of the newly formed Football Association met to consider the so-called Cambridge Laws, which it was claimed "embraced the true principles of the game with the greatest simplicity." A week later, on December 1, these laws were "officially" passed, and despite modifications in the laws from time to time, the principles as first outlined have remained to the present day. November 30, 1872, marked the occasion of the first international match played under Association Football rules, England—Scotland playing at Partick, Glasgow, on that date. Seven years later the first English-Welsh international was played, while in 1882 England and Ireland played its first international.

The growth of Association football, even in its early days, was very rapid and within five years the game had become an securely established that an inter-county match was attempted. This, in turn, gave way to the pretentious "international", and last Thursday marked the fiftieth anniversary of the first international match.

Added interest in the first international is given through the fact that one of England's representatives in that game, J. C. Clegg, is now, half a century later, the foremost figure in Association Football. He has for the past thirty years been chairman of the Football Association Council and much of the remarkable success which has attended football government during the past three or four decades is largely attributed to the foresight of Mr. Clegg. At the October, 1922, meeting of the Football Association, at which Mr. Clegg presided, he was the recipient of hearty congratulations from all quarters on the completion of his half century's connection with football affairs.

The first international match of the present season was played on October 21 when England defeated Ireland by two to nothing. This made the thirty-seventh international match between the two countries, of which England has won 20, Ireland 8 and five were drawn. The total goals scored during these matches were: England 167, Ireland 26.

Since 1900 England has won 13 of 21 games played, Ireland winning in Belfast in 1913 and at Middlesborough in the following year. The match at Middlesborough, in 1905, at Belfast 1910, 1919 and 1920 resulted in draws.

R.C.M.P. GET MAN AFTER LONG CHASE

Ottawa, Ont. Dec. 4.—The R. C. M. P. always get their man no matter where the chase may lead or what time it make take them to achieve their end, and an illustration of this well known fact is furnished in the recent trip taken by Sergt. Fred Syms of this city, who travelled 1,000 miles to bring to justice a man who we believed to have been responsible for the death of an Indian in the Mackenzie district, through selling him bad liquor.

R. C. M. P. headquarters recently received information that an Indian trapper, William Diamond by name, had died in August last in the north and he was last left, also that the Indian witnesses be needed had gone to Wapiscogan, Ontario, a trading post on a canoe and guide, Sergt. Syms travelled nearly one hundred miles by steamer and over long portages and until he found the Indians and obtained their story. Conducting his investigation further he found that while the trapper had sold home brewed beer to his buckets to the Indians, Diamond, according to Coroner Bigger, had not died as a direct result of alcoholic poisoning, but through partaking of a heavy meal on the night before his death, coupled with a quantity of the liquor, which was villainous stuff. Sergt. Syms then set out in chase of Lamarche, and had to cross in to Northern Ontario, where he found the man working in a lumber camp, placed him under arrest, and had him convicted on two charges of selling liquor.

AN EPOCH IN THE RAILWAY HISTORY OF CANADA

The recent appointment of Sir Henry Thornton as President of the Canadian National Railways, and his coming to Canada to take up the stupendous task of managing the greatest single railway system in the world, marks an epoch in the railway history of Canada.

Canada has adopted the policy of public ownership and operation of miles of railway, which formerly comprised a number of separate systems, owned under its own management, namely, the Canadian Northern, Grand Trunk Pacific and Grand Trunk Railway System, together with the interests of Government Railways comprising the Intercolonial Railway, Prince Edward Island Railway and the National Transcontinental Railway. On May 20th the first meeting of the new Board of Directors was held at Ottawa, when the various systems were amalgamated into the consolidated system of Canadian National Railways, and all placed under one President and one Board of Directors.

In this far-flung system, the people of Canada own 22,000 miles of railway lines, touching every important city and seaport in the Dominion, but also a telegraph and cable service reaching to the most isolated lines, 75,000 points in Canada, United States and Mexico. A fleet of merchant ships comprising the Canadian Government Merchant Marine, connecting Canadian products over the seven seas; a fleet of modern steamships and cars operating up and down the Pacific Coast; freighters and passenger boats on the Great Lakes; a chain of palatial hotels; the Canadian National Express Company, and other properties throughout the country, which represent a very large investment from which the new Directors hope in the future to derive. Canada will eventually own the whole lot.

Sir Henry Thornton, the newly appointed President, comes to Canada with an enviable record of signal success in the operation of railways, and is one of the most important railway executives in the world both in Europe and on the continent. Heir to make the National Railways a success by the co-operation of the people of Canada is necessary, and in Sir Henry they have true Canadian to assist in making this property the greatest national asset.

Doubtless, at this time it will be of interest to know something of the early history and upbuilding of the roads now embraced in the Canadian National Railways. It must be remembered that it is but a few hundred years ago since the first stretch of railway in Canada was built.

In 1832, a charter was granted to the company of Messrs. Champlain and St. Lawrente Railroad for a portage road 16 miles long from La Prairie on the St. Lawrence to St. Johns on the Richelieu, to facilitate the handling of traffic between Montreal and New York. In 1836, this line was opened for traffic. The rails, unlike the solid steel ones of to-day, were of timber with iron plate on the upper surface, and the cruddy construction of cars was drawn by horses.

In 1837 the proprietors imported an engine and engineer, the first to be used in Canada, a high pressure engine that travelled at less than twenty miles an hour.

In 1847 it was decided to build a road from Montreal to Toronto and replace the earlier stage route around the rapids. These plans made the first connecting Montreal with the outer world, were nearly twenty years later absorbed by the Grand Trunk System.

In 1852 the rails were extended to Lake Lambert opposite Lachine and southward to Rouse's Point, on Lake Champlain. While this considerably shortened the trip to New York, it was still necessary to change cars at two charges—first, the trip across the ferry to St. Lambert, thence by train to Lake Champlain, and a second change to the boat on the opposite side down Lake Champlain and the Hudson River. In this year the act to incorporate the Grand Trunk of Canada was passed, and the consolidation of various railways into one

THORNTON GUEST AT MONTREAL BANQUET

NEW HEAD OF NATIONAL RAILWAYS OUTLINES HIS PLANS IN GENERAL WAY

Warns Politicians to Keep Hands Off—Aim of Board is to Reduce Expenses and Increase Revenue—Wants to Serve the Country as a Whole

MONTREAL, Quebec, December 5.—It is with a feeling of affirmation that I rise, at first to thank Mr. Beatty for the generous and kindly words he has spoken with respect to the Canadian National Railways and myself, and, secondly, to thank you all for the cordial way in which you have received his statements. The fact that the President of the Canadian Pacific Railway has done me the honor of proposing my health is in itself a compliment which any railway man might appreciate. For me in the transportation industry, regard the Canadian Pacific Railway as one of the outstanding and one of the magnificent railways. Its original vision was courageous and statesmanlike, and its subsequent administration has reflected credit upon all who have been connected with it. Those of us who are charged with the responsibility of organizing into one entity and working as one unit the Canadian National Railways succeed in approaching the enviable record of the Canadian Pacific Railway, but we have more than met our responsibility.

The Canadian Pacific Railway has been, and, I am sure, is the pride of the people of Canada, and much of the prosperity of the Dominion is due to the efforts of its officers and staff. We shall undoubtedly be rivals, and it is good that it should be so. But I feel certain that our rivalry will only reflect itself in an effort to furnish to the people of Canada adequate and efficient transportation at reasonable cost.

I have always envied the Prophet Daniel when he appeared upon one occasion at a dinner, the result of which promised to be unpleasant to the principal guest; and, with whatever delight the lions may have looked forward to the dish which was about to be set before them, Daniel, at least, as the honored guest, had the satisfaction of knowing that he would, if he called upon the Speaker after the conclusion of the feast, depart from the pleasure of meeting those whom I hope will soon become Canadian friends, I should have preferred to make no public speeches until I had been in Canada for at least a year. At the expiration of that time my feeds, whatever they may be, would have spoken with more authority than any statements I can make, tonight. For words are easy of pronouncement, but actions speak with greater eloquence.

Let me frankly say that I have not the intimate acquaintance with Canada and its transportation needs which many of you possess, and it would be folly for me to attempt a detailed study of the position, to speak in other than somewhat general terms. The amalgamation of the constituent railways now known as the Canadian National Railways has for the last few months presented important financial position, although the position is not today what any one of us would like it to be, I believe that the position is improving, shows that it will yield to treatment, and reflects much credit upon those who, until the appointment of the present administration, were charged with the administration of the constituent properties.

MR. MIKEL ADDRESSES LIONS' CLUB

Gives Further Information Regarding the U.E.L. Celebration

A goodly number of the members of the Lions Club were today in attendance at the weekly luncheon at the Chamber of Commerce building. Club Norman Neilson occupied the chair. After some general business had been transacted, an address was given. Mr. Mikel, K.C., the speaker of the day, spoke of the proposed 150th celebration of the settling of the United Empire Loyalists in Canada. This celebration will be held in 1934, and every effort is being made to have it in Belleville. Mr. Mikel in his address gave a graphic resume of the settlement of the Empire Loyalists upon the shores of the Bay of Quinte. They made great sacrifices in those early days, as there were no houses, roads, schools or churches. It is proposed to commemorate the event and he thought Belleville was the proper place to hold the celebration. Many prominent men of England, United States and other countries have signified their intention of being present at the event wherever it is held. It will mean much for the city where it is held. If it is held in Belleville it would be a great advertising medium for the city. He had already received considerable assistance from organizations, etc., in regard to the celebration and he would do all in his power to have it held here.

A vote of thanks tendered to Mr Mikel for his address was cordially acknowledged.

CHARGE FARMERS WITH THEFT OF LIQUOR

Six Port Rowan Farmers Alleged to Have Been "Wrecking Crew" of "City of Dresden"

Simcoe, Ont., Dec. 5.—Inspector Edmunds, Provincial Constable Thomas Moran, and Inspector Ward spent all last week at the Cove, six miles off Port Rowan, where the City of Dresden foundered two weeks ago. Four cases of liquor from the cargo of the wrecked ship were picked off Long Point shore and eighteen cases of whiskey were discovered in the nearby swamp. As a sequel of their investigations, six Port Rowan farmers, Charles Brown, Cralland Franklin, Roy Perrie, Robert Rockefeller, Wm. Franklin and George Hodges appeared before Magistrate Guinn here this morning charged with stealing from a wreck, contrary to the criminal code. The cases were adjourned one week and Crown Attorney Kelly, K.C., will likely apply for another week's adjournment on account of the difficulty in securing Crown witnesses.

The Crown Attorney has accertained that the $500 cargo of liquor was shipped from Belleville on the order of a Montreal firm, and was consigned to Morley Gilbert, Dresden, sent a doctor's certificate, but no accompanying affidavit and a bench summons was issued against George Hodges and Delbert Rockefeller, whose wife was one of the heroines of the disaster, were served in court and granted time to plead. Roy Perrie and Wm. Franklin elected for trial by jury. The whole district moved up to Simcoe for to-day's trial and were disappointed at the adjournment.

Inspector Edmunds stated that the law will continue combing the swamp and sands for another month.

INTERNATIONAL COMMISSION TO CONTROL STRAITS

Lausanne, Dec. 5th.—The entente plan for keeping open the straits of Dardanelles and Bosphorus in time of peace and war provides for the appointment of an international commission of control, consisted of the great powers including the United States as well as Turkey and the countries bordering on the Black Sea. The League of Great Britain acting for the Allies presented the details of this project. The chance in front on the part of the Turkish delegates was forecast while the conference was in session. The Turkish spokesman assailed the authorities over the Turkish position on the control of the straits would probably be found to be nearer to the allied plan than to the Russian.

Lausanne, Dec. 6.—The change of the attitude of the Turks is because they suddenly realize the Russian plan for the control of the Straits by the Turkish Navy would leave Turkey free to build a navy. The Allied control plan provides a scheme for limiting the number of warships to be allowed on the waters under control and gives Turkey and the Black Sea countries the right to say how many warships may remain in their ports. It suggests the demilitarization of the Straits. Foreign Minister Tritcherin opposed the Allied plan today and the Conference adjourned until Friday to give the Turks a chance to study the proposal.

This is in addition to the request for a referendum on the government sale of liquor for exchequer purposes.

When the County Council assembled on Tuesday afternoon, nearly all members were in attendance; Warden Kells presided.

Warden's Address

The Warden in addressing the members stated he was pleased to see the Councillors in their places. During the year everything had been satisfactory and every effort was made to keep the finances of the County within the estimates. Provinces had given us a bountiful harvest and prices were fair, which would help to pay the taxes which were to be laid. He hoped the proceedings of this session would be harmonious. There was a new member in the Council, Mr. Nicol, who takes the place of Mr. John Wood. His Honor referred to the County's territory and paid to those who were in good condition. In conclusion he invited all the members to be his guests to tea at the Y.M.C.A. Quinte on Friday evening.

G. E. Loyalist Anniversary.

Minutes of Friday evening's sitting of June session were read and confirmed.

Mr. W. C. Mikel, K. C., addressed the Council relative to the 150th anniversary of the U. E. Loyalists being commemorated in Belleville. He said others were doing their utmost to hold the celebration here and if there is more interest shown, a number of important personages present from Canada and the United States. He thought Belleville the commemoration of a great event and he asked the Council to pass a resolution endorsing the scheme.

Warden Kells said the Council could no doubt deal with the matter in the proper time. He also thanked Mr. Mikel for placing the matter before the Council.

An Invitation

An invitation was read from Col. R. Vasilee, Commanding Officer of the Argyll Light Infantry, to the members of the Council to attend the annual inspection of the infantry as accepted with thanks.

No Action Taken.

A communication was read from the Southern Ontario Relief Council re, intimating that the Council make a grant outal to one-half mill at the assessment of the County. One million dollars was needed for the fire sufferers.

Dr. Embury stated that various organizations throughout this county and country had contributed liberally and moved, seconded by Mr. Gowsell that no action be taken in the matter. Mr. Walsh thought that the Government should help the fire sufferers. The amount asked from the County was too much.

The motion of Dr. Embury prevailed.

Flagman Wanted.

A communication was read from Mr. W. H. Wilkes, Secy. and Solicitor Township, relative to the proposed removal of a flagman from the railway crossing on the highway at Corbyville, the Belleville Cemetery.

Mr. W. A. Reid stated that the Township of Sidney was helping in this matter. It was a crossing where over 3,000 vehicles passed in a week. He moved, seconded by Mr. Connell, that a committee of the Council wait on the request for a flagman being retained at this crossing. The motion on motion was taken in the matter of Mr. A. C. Hawkes of Marlbank, who asked compensation to the extent of $75.35 for damages to his car which went into a ditch on a road some 5 miles north of Marlbank. Mr. Hawkes claimed there was a sharp turn in the road and no fence or railing.

Mr. C. A. Reid, moved, seconded by Mr. C. H. Ketcheson that the Municipality of the County of Hastings urge the United Empire Loyalists' Association of Canada, to hold the celebration of the 150th anniversary of the settlement of Upper Canada by the United Empire Loyalists in Belleville, and undertake to give every effort to make the celebration a success—Carried.

Council adjourned until Wednesday morning.

Wednesday Morning Session.

Council resumed at 10.30, Warden Kells presiding.

Minutes of Tuesday's afternoon session were read and confirmed.

A petition communication was read from Miss Loretta Dromeau, at Bird Creek, a school teacher, relative to a complaint she had against Mr. Collins, school inspector of North Hastings. She claimed she was asked to teach a school and after she arrived another teacher was engaged.

Mr. W. E. Wiggins: The one teacher is qualified, whereas the other has not attended Summer School, and there has been an injustice in the matter by some one.

The matter was laid over for further consideration until School Inspector Collins would be present.

Peddler's License.

Mr. Harry Potter addressed the Council, stating that he took out a county license for peddling whilst others living outside the county collected in his territory and paid no license. The speaker's stock in trade was groceries and some clothing. He asked that his license fee be refunded.

Mr. W. C. Thompson was of the opinion that any person who had taken a license for peddling should be protected from those who peddle without a license. Some, he understood, Mr. Cranston, that Mr. Potter be refunded what he had paid.

Mr. Ketcheson thought that if the motion prevailed it would cause trouble. In some discussion which prevailed it was shown that peddlers who sold goods made in Ontario were not compelled to take out a license.

Mr. Potter stated that he sold

O.T.A. CONVICTION IS QUASHED

Interesting O.T.A. Case at Peterboro Fails in Court of Appeal

Peterboro, Ont., Dec. 5.—In judgment delivered recently, Judge Hoyles quashed the conviction of Henry Servoss, of Hastings, who was fined $100 and costs, the option of three months in jail, on a charge of having liquor in a place other than his private dwelling. Evidence was received at the hotel which had contained liquor was picked up in the roadway near where Servoss lived, and a bottle and bung. The bottle contained rye than a teaspoonful of liquor. When the case was heard in the police court, the bung was picked up near the fence and placed in the jube of bottle, etc. that had been found in the car as a result of the collision. Judge Hoyles held that there was nothing to show that the bottle had ever been the property of Servoss or that it had ever been in his car.

Wild rumors which went the rounds here last night to the effect that "The Warrender," schooner and her cargo of 1,200 tons of hard coal for this city had drifted across the bay here during the high wind which was blowing Tuesday evening, are wholly unfounded.

The "Warrender" was towed into Charlotte here Tuesday, but owing to the low water, went aground, and is still very much aground. The vessel is in no danger whatever, but might well have taken the schooner in tow and the slack somewhat, getting her afloat to the bay, had she not been aground.

Unless the wind changes, or leaves, so that the boat may be towed into dock, it is feared that it will be necessary to lighten her load considerably, so she have her to free in and remove her cargo over the ice. The water in the bay and harbor is very low at the present time.

OFFICERS COMB NORTH COUNTRY

Search For Two Boys Who Are Alleged to Have Stolen Corbyville Motor Car

Police officers of Trenton, and Belleville, also the Provincial Police officers of this city, are in the neighborhood of Coe Hill today, in pursuit of the two boys who are alleged to have taken the Cherokee touring car from the garage of Mr. Matthew Jones, 35b, Concession of Thurlow, near Corbyville, during Monday night. The tracks of the car were traced northward as far as the Madoc Provincial road on Tuesday, and it is believed that the duo have hit the trail for Coe Hill, where one of the boys has relatives.

One of the boys who are alleged to have stolen the car, has been employed as a mechanic in a Trenton garage during the past summer, and some two years ago was employed with Mr. Jones. On Monday, a truck, and the youth were missing from the Trenton garage, where he was employed, and the abandoned truck was found at Corbyville on the commission. When the truck broke down, it is believed that the boys broke into the garage of Mr. Jones machine, and made off. Three good robes which were in the garage are also missing.

The ages of the boys, who are believed to have committed the offense are 16 and 18 years respectively, are both reside at Trenton.

MANY PERSONS SECURE WORK

Annual Report of Local Employment Office Shows Excellent Work Achieved

When Superintendent L. P. Greer of the local office of the Employment Service of Canada, presents his annual report, which will deal with the year ending November 30 to the Provincial Minister of Labor, Hon. Peter Smith, improvement in business which has been noted from time to time during the year, with the assistance of his employed and the demand for skilled and unskilled labor as the season advanced, will be fully manifested.

Hundreds Assisted

During the year the number of men, women and boys who obtained work, permanent or temporary, through the local office of the Employment Service was 1715, which does not include women who secured work on farms with their husbands. The total placements in the previous year were 1250 which shows a gain of 445 for the year just ending.

While the satisfactory showing of the local office is due to some extent to the co-operation of employers with the service, Mr. Greer considers that the attendant Green stated, was brought about by the change for the better in business conditions.

Statistics in Report

	Placements
Boys' Department	122
Mens' Industrial Department	1,000
Farm Department	160
Out-of-Town Department	32
Casual Department	292
Womens' Section (Domestic)	142
Womens' Section (Clerical)	61
Men and women securing work for periods of one, two or three days's duration	226
Total Placements	1705

The farmers of Ontario were well satisfied with the service they were receiving and said that there were few complaints from farm workers over wages and conditions provided by farmers employers. Wages on those who took work on the farm were hired for the year and under a contract.

During the year there were no severe reductions in wages of skilled and unskilled workers. Wages exhibited trades in mechanics were increased in different localities through a shortage of labor. The wages of unskilled workers were uncertain, being determined by supply and demand here in the agents, when generally labor was plentiful, and rising during the summer and fall as it became more scarce.

ANNIVERSARY OF CANADIAN CLUB

To-day is Thirtieth Anniversary of Foundation of Well-Known Club

Today is the thirtieth anniversary of the founding of the Canadian Club movement, and the child of the founders has indeed grown to manhood. More than one hundred clubs have been organized to date, some of them having a roster of over 2,000 members, to promote Canadianism and uphold British ideals.

It is interesting to note that one of the original founders, Lt.-Col. C. B. McCullough, now the Honorary President of the Association of Canadian Clubs, is a former resident of Belleville. The Women's Canadian Club here is one of the results of the growth of this movement.

Lt.-Col. McCullough says in a world wide message to Canadian Clubs that the various Clubs in existence today have indeed served as a means to fortify the hearts, enlarge the understanding and increase the ability of Canadians in Canada. He states that the Clubs are the "universities of the people," and they must continue their unselfish contributions towards the voices of men and women of outstanding ability and constructive vision.

In foreign countries, the Club has been firmly established at the following: London, New York, Boston, Buffalo, Detroit, Chicago, Seattle, London, England, Barbados, B.W.I., and Shanghai, China. Before many years existing New York City will find adequate surroundings and a spirit of hospitality in the Canadian Club headquarters at the Biltmore hotel. Many of us have taken advantage of the opportunity and free Canadian spirit provided here and it must be a great source of satisfaction to those of the original founders now living, that their initial plans have been achieved.

Little Phyllis Wells, aged 10 years, was struck by a motor car last night, thrown to the pavement, and rather severely injured. The accident occurred in the corner of Bridge and Charles streets, when a motor car driven by Eugene La Chef, Ketcheson's main farm and residence, but as a matter of fact north of the house. The building is a total loss.

Sir Henry Thornton

I should be wanting in observation and appreciation if I did not take advantage of the opportunity to thank Sir Joseph Flavelle, Mr. Hanna, Mr. Kelly, their officers, and their associates on the former Board of Directors, for the excellent spade-work they have already done, and the zeal and efficiency with which they executed their responsibilities. I hope that those of us who will follow the trail they have so ably blazed may still count upon their valued advice and support.

I am not concerned with the events and circumstances which brought the Government of Canada to take over the National Railway System. We are confronted by a condition, not a theory, and I must accept things as I find them. Whatever the reasons may have been, the people of Canada have undoubtedly got an adventure which has not been conspicuously successful elsewhere. But I emphatically deny that this forms any reason for failure here, providing certain basic principles are qualitatively maintained.

There is a distinction, if not a difference, between the Government railways of Canada and government railroads elsewhere. In Canada, as I understand the position, the Government is the sole shareholder in these various properties, or at least sufficiently controls the voting power to approach that of a single shareholder. And the Government has elected to administer the National Railways in substantially the same way as though they were privately owned. The only difference between our railways and private railways is that, so far as we are concerned, there is substantially but one shareholder to deal with, namely, the Government, and on private railways there are perhaps several thousands of shareholders.

Experiments in government owned railways elsewhere have taken the form of directly operating the railways by officers and men who were themselves servants of the government rather than the servants of the railway. Now this distinction is obviously important, as well as vital, and it certainly tends to make the difficulties of administrative influences from the administration of our railways easier than might otherwise be the case.

Much has been said about the dangers of political interference with the railways, and this is at least one subject upon which I can speak with emphasis and authority. The existence of such dangers is one of the reasons which is paid for a democratic form of government; and, generally speaking, there are two things in every country which, in the minds of at least fifty per cent. of the population, afford reasonable grounds for complaint. One is the weather and the other is the Government. But in a democracy the people get the kind of government they elect to office, and if the weather is disagreeable, the Dominion of Canada provides a great variety of climates, any one of which can easily be reached by those who avail themselves of the services of the Canadian National Railways. Perhaps I should be generous and inform you that the Canadian Pacific Railway has also a passenger service.

Politicians are much maligned. In earlier days they were designated as statesmen; just as fifteen or twenty years ago anyone who acquired a fortune was considered a captain of industry, while today opulence is generally looked down upon as an indication of profiteering. However all this may be, we all recognise that politicians do exist. And presumably because they exist, they are essential in our scheme of government. But let it be emphatically understood, now and for once and for all, that there is to be no political interference, direct or indirect, in the administration and working of the Canadian National Railways. I cannot put it any more forcefully without transgressing the rules of polite speech. I don't know of any words which would make this point more clear. I should unhesitatingly employ them. The Prime Minister has solemnly assured me that there is to be no political interference, and it was with this distinct understanding that I accepted the post which the Government has done me the honor to offer. This assurance is the only assurance that any government, irrespective of political complexion, would be justified to make under similar circumstances. It is vital to the success of our railways and any other venture with inevitable disaster. From time to time the din of battle and the clash of political arms lead one at least to suspect that there are political disturbances going on in the land, and I have reason to believe that some echoing of the kind is going on at the moment, or has taken place during the last few days. With three peripheral political upheavals neither I nor any officer of the Canadian National Railways have nor should have any concern, other than the interest which every patriotic citizen should take in what is going on about him. Our job is to devote ourselves entirely and with tranquility to rendering to the people of Canada an honest and efficient railway service.

I think I can speak with authority for myself, when I say that without fear and without favor, the Canadian National Railways are to be operated for the people by the people and for the people, and, moreover, for all of the people of the Dominion. I know that political interference proceeds it self in many seductive disguises, and sometimes tends to make itself felt in many unknown ways. Of all this I am fully aware, but let me again repeat that there is to be no political interference or influence in the administration of the Canadian National Railways. And while I am on the subject, let me go one step further. Constructive criticism born of a desire to improve conditions, is helpful and will be welcome. Destructive criticism which are intended to be destructive may be ignored. Any individual who has a grievance will have my job better will be regarded as a friend. Every opportunity will be given for a frank discussion before decisions are made, but made they must be, with firmness, courage and no undue waste of time. Within once made they must be maintained. Any other policy will reduce your railways to a condition where there will be no job to kick or scoff to damn. Therefore, the railway administration must be a unit and in its name, and in the interest of efficient management no interference of any sort can be tolerated.

Perhaps no less dangerous than political interference is what may be called pernicious sectional pride. The Dominion, considered from its territory and the aspirations and desires of different sections are not always ideally united. Indeed, it has to time that may even conflict. It will be my conscientious effort to meet the reason able demands of all sections of the Dominion and contribute to the utmost to their development. Every request will be received with sympathy, and my first thought shall be, not how to justify a refusal, but, on the other hand, how to meet favorably any appeal. If I may paraphrase the words of Lincoln, I would say that you can please all of the people some of the time and some of the people all of the time, but it is quite impossible to please all of the people all of the time. Decisions will undoubtedly have to be made which will be distasteful to certain sections of the Dominion. I only hope that it will be possible to reduce decisions of this character to a negligible number. It must be obvious to anyone that while recognizing in full sympathy the requirements of all sections of the Dominion, the National Railways as a whole cannot be sacrificed to meet the wishes of any section of the Dominion. Whatever disagreement we may have, I hope it will be understood that any decision will be made in order all of our problems with malice toward none and charity toward all.

There are four factors which constitute the sum of successful railway administration: First, adequate net receipts; second, the development of the property to meet the burdens of future traffic; third, the relations between the railway and its men; fourth, the relations between the railway and its clientele.

The activities of any railway may be classified under one or the other of these headings. The first two are largely technical. Satisfactory operation depends upon a strong organization, capable and loyal officers, together with intelligent and enlightened administration, and with these things, and barring accidents, satisfactory net results will almost surely result. The third and fourth, which deal with the development of the country, involves wisdom and forethought.

The Canadian National Railways should be adequately to meet its traffic responsibilities, is hindering the progress of the country which it serves. The relations between the company and its men involve chiefly the human element, and in the last respect, government worked railways have always been particularly vulnerable. I believe that every employee of every industry, irrespective of its character should receive that minimum wage which will enable him to live in decency, in comfort and under proper sanitary conditions and to educate and bring up his children as self respecting members of society. Any other policy makes for social unrest and if carried on long enough is likely to create political upheavals. The wage I have indicated represents the minimum to be received. How much greater the wage may depends upon the condition of the industry, the value of the service rendered and other similar factors. Labor troubles usually disappear if they are caught when they are young, that is to say, when they are in a plastic condition. Delay to deal promptly and firmly of complaints is an effective guarantee of tranquility. If, on the other hand, attention is not given to such matters until they become festering sores and both sides have delivered ultimatums, the solution becomes correspondingly difficult. It is my desire that all officers of the Canadian National Railways in their respective capacities, should be easily accessible to their men and should deal promptly with complaints. I am sure that there already exists a kindly feeling between our officers and their men and I wish this spirit to be carried through our railway from Halifax to Vancouver and that contentment and comfort amongst the men may manifest itself in smiles and goodwill and that the Canadian National Railways shall be known as the smiling railway. With respect to the public the same policy will be followed as with respect to the men. Everything that is asked, of course cannot be granted, but any complaint or any request for the use of development and every effort will be made to meet the demands of the public in the matter of increased traffic. It must, of course, be abundantly evident to all that your railways will be called upon to bear a heavy burden upon your pockets if freight rates are continuously lowered and wages continuously raised and I take it that it is the desire of the people of Canada that the Canadian National Railways be not only self supporting Canada and the burden on the purse of the taxpayers stopped as quickly as possible, but should be no fundamental reason why this should not be done in a reasonable time without undue hardship or hesitation to offer the men on the railway or the travelling public. But this policy cannot be carried out if the railways are to be guarded as a "Christmas tree and the Chairman as the sort of glorified Santa Claus. For much I might personally like to play that role.

We shall soon have to make some announcement with respect to the location of the general headquarters of the National System and the form of organization under which the railways are to be administered in so far as the line is concerned. This is a thing to say to-day, excepting what I have already said, namely, that the headquarters will be located at such point from which the Canadian National Railways can be most efficiently and consequently most economically worked, having regard to all of the circumstances.

I am sure that whatever may be the decision arrived at, in the patriotic citizens of the Dominion would not wish me to be influenced upon any other consideration. Whatever decision is reached is bound to involve a certain degree of disappointment to some but I hope and believe that it will be accepted by all without ill and friendly spirit. In so far as our relations with the Canadian National Railways from the point of view of mileage is excelled by no other railway system in the world, parties and individuals, and embraces a variety of climates, and industries unequalled by any country. Whatever organization is adopted, it is essential that in each one of the principal divisions of which the property may be divided, there should be an executive officer, with a full staff capable of approaching the public and promptly with the reasonable demands of the public, that is to say, by an organization more adequate to preserve a close and quick contact between the railway on the one hand and the public on the other. There must be centralization with respect to policies, but decentralization with respect to details in order that we may go beyond the wit of man to devise an organization which will adequately meet this cardinal requirement, and at the same time preserve that cohesion which is essential to economical management. We are engaged in a study of the position, and there is of course, pressing need to announce at an early date an organization for the quarters of the system, the chairman of the organization, and its principal officers, and this will be done in due time. I should be lacking in appreciation if I did not take advantage of this opportunity to thank the Canadian friends for the kind and hospitable hands which they have extended to me. It is refreshing to meet and feel how many there are who wish the experiment upon which we have embarked to succeed, and let me also to-night, particularly thank the Canadian Press for their kind words of welcome and for the voices their sympathetic editorials. It is right that the people of Canada should be as critical as they please while with respect to all matters of importance relating to their railways and the medium of communication must of course be the press. I therefore wish it to be understood that I shall always be glad to meet the representatives of the press and to take them as fully into my confidence as the welfare of the railway will permit.

I have said our first and most pressing objective is to stop the drain on the purse of the taxpayers, resultant from the National Railways. We shall do materially better this year than in previous years, and will more than meet interest requirements. Roughly speaking and without taking into consideration the amounts which the government is going to find next year in the past to meet deficits in operating expenses and the estimated requirements of capital out, National Railways must earn roughly forty million dollars net annually to stop any further advances from the Government, that is to say to stop the drain on the taxpayers and it will be a satisfactory day for me when I can say respective capacities, should be easily to their railways have ceased to be a drain on the public purse. How soon this can be brought about I hesitate to say but I will go so far as to indicate that it may not be so far distant as most people might imagine.

The accomplishment means an increase in gross receipts, and reduction in expenses. I am inclined to think that the latter will be more easy of accomplishment than the former because the former is involved with the whole question of the Dominion development, and the large role to the question of immigration, a subject on which I should like to say a few words.

Most thoughtful people in Canada judging from the public expressions I have heard, feel that we have but one problem in Canada namely that of increasing the population, and I think this is largely correct. If the Dominion is to grow as we should and if we are to enjoy all of the advantages which follow in the train of development we in Canada must hasten ourselves vigorously to the question of immigration. By immigration I do not mean throwing down the barriers and making the mistake which was made in past decades in the United States which resulted in admitting every immigrant that chose to come to the States, but I just how the details of the plan is to be developed I am certainly not in a position to say tonight. But at any rate I am convinced that we must sedately important to justify the undivided attention and energy of some capable individual relatively adequate staff. How soon the Canadian National Railways will become self supporting depends largely on what is done in the matter of immigration. In conclusion, I want to thank the Board of Trade of Montreal for their kindness and hospitality in giving me an opportunity to meet so many representative citizens of the Dominion and to thank each of you who have patiently listened to what I am afraid must of necessity have been a somewhat rambling discourse, full of generalization and characterized by not any particularity whatever. But if I have said had I spoken a year hence I might have gone much more to the point. Under the circumstances, I am not so foolish as to imagine that single handed I can solve the difficult railway problems which are confronting not only the board and myself, but every citizen of Canada. Nor am I so silly as to suppose that if these I could be solved single handed I am the only one who could do it. It happens, however, that I have been called to tackle the job. I have gone into it with a full knowledge of the difficulties which lie before me. I am not through. But success will only be achieved if I succeed in securing the co-operation of the Canadian National Railways staff you and they are justified in placing your confidence in the officer who admits to the property and myself. It will require a high degree of loyalty and

REVIEW OF EVENTS IN WASHINGTON

A Digest of Affairs That Have Occupied the Legislators of the Republic to the South

Washington, December 5.—Can and development of the country's natural resources under control of the Interior Department have contributed in great measure to national stabilization and prosperity, Secretary Fall declared today in his annual report. The Secretary listed the more outstanding of these contributions as opportunities for home making upon public lands by returned soldiers and other citizens; the discovery of new oil fields; development of existing fields and increasing production of oil and its products; the exploitation of coal deposits, and the opening of mines in the western States.

Incidentally, the Interior Secretary declared, those developments have resulted in very substantial cash returns to the Federal Treasury and in the various states in which these mineral resources have been developed under leasing laws.

The outstanding administrative accomplishment of the department during the fiscal year ended last June 30, was declared to be the reaching almost of current work in both the Land Office and the Pension Office. The expenditure of final homestead proofs is current in the former office, a situation which has not existed for many years, the Secretary said. This, he added, has already resulted in placing in the hands of the people assets valued at more than $80,000,000 and has been done without increase in force of that office and in the face of greatly increasing work.

Wider extension of the reclamation policy in former arid lands of the West was recommended in the report, which showed that while funds were restricted for the work the achievements of the Reclamation Service justified the continuation of the reclamation policy. One new irrigation project was started despite lack of funds, and the total value of crops raised on reclaimed lands was estimated at more than $63,000,000. The benefits in the way of making homes, increase of food production and addition to the national wealth by the reclamation of lands make that work of great value in return to prosperity, the report asserted.

Education of Indians, which falls to the lot of the Interior Department, has been greatly promoted, the report declared. The attendance at Indian schools for the past year was 3,000 greater than in any previous year. A special effort to provide greater health facilities to the Indian through more hospitals and more extensive nursing service was made.

More than 30,000 pensions claims were disposed of during the year by the Bureau of Pensions, and 99,000 applications for pensions, the accumulation in March 1921, were handled, practically defeating that work up to date. The total number of pensioners on the rolls at the end of the fiscal year was 547,016 being 19,037 less than the previous year. The amount disbursed for pensions was $333,807,853. Increasing efficiency in this service was attested to by the decrease in the cost of adjudication and payment.

A record breaking number of applications for patents in the country was received by the Patent Office, more than 113,000. This has caused great need of increased office forces, and if the increase in the work continues at the rate of the past three years, the Director reported, it may be necessary further to augment the number of employes. The Patent Office is a self-supporting institution, Mr. Fall pointed out, adding that last year the receipts of the office were $172,000 greater than expenses.

The playgrounds of the nation, its National Parks and monuments, were visited by a record breaking number of persons. More than 210,000 citizens of every state and territory in the union, its possessions and many foreign countries viewed the wonders of nature preserved in these parks.

Provision for storage of oil drawn from government oil wells in the West, to allow for keeping greater quantities of crude oil, was recommended in the report, in order that the government, which is forced to sell its oil royalties monthly, may take advantage of better markets by holding back its stocks. Provision for more storage tanks, such as private companies have, in the fields, is absolutely necessary, it was said. Under this system, Mr. Fall stated, the government's oils tend to beat down the price in periods of depression, to the injury of the consumer. To the extent that the government is obliged to take part in business, it should depend its influence toward stabilization rather than toward demoralization of the industry, he said.

Pointing out the government takes its royalties from oil land leases in the form of crude oil, Mr. Fall said returns from this source during the year amounted to 27,800,000, while in the fiscal year $22,-000,000 was received by the Indian tribes from royalties on oil produced from Indian owned lands.

Reports of the Governors of Alaska and Hawaii, summarized in the Interior report, review the progress of the two territories during the year.

Governor Bone, of Alaska, noted that a steady increase in population and exports foreshadowed returning prosperity and said that with encouragement a greater field of immigration might be set in. He added that however, until mining was inaugurated on a large scale and industries started the population could not be expected to increase greatly. The Governor submitted a long list of recommendations among them jurisdiction over the whole of Alaska excepting the fisheries be vested in the Interior Department; that boards license and rates be built to the Alaska Railroad; that all lawenforcing agencies be consolidated under the Department of Justice; that control of the fisheries be taken over by the Bureau of Fisheries of the Department of Commerce, and the formulation of a colonization plan.

Governor Farrington, of Hawaii, reported that during the twelve months ended last June the Pacific territory passed through one of the most critical financial periods in its history and that while general business conditions had improved the agricultural labor situation still was serious. One of the foremost of his recommendations was passage by Congress of the Hawaii emergency labor resolution or some similar legislation to provide workers and at the same time bring the racial population of the territory more nearly into balance.

Production of helium, the noninflammable gas substituted for hydrogen in lighter-than-air craft, is under the jurisdiction of the Interior Department and the Secretary declared notable progress has been made by the Bureau of Mines in perfecting methods of separating helium from natural gas, in which it occurs.

The most serious situation facing the Department is the low scale of salaries, the Secretary declared. The force of the bureaus of the department was organized in 1812 and another in 1832 and since those dates the salary schedule for employes has not been revised. Because employes can earn more in other departments and in outside industries, the loss and turnover has become distressing. Speedy legislation to increase salaries is sorely needed, he said.

CUBA HAS ANOTHER VOODOO MYSTERY

Camagney, Cuba, Dec. 4.—Failure to discover any trace of Cora Lines, the little white girl who was stolen by a negro from the thatched hut of her parents on the Yamanqueres plantation, near Santa Cruz del Sur, early in November has given rise to another voodoo sensation.

Nobody doubts but that the child has been sacrificed on a rude jungle altar in some gruesome African Moloch, and fantastic tales are being told of the secret practices of one of the native Haitien negroes who, with two Cuban blacks, are under arrest as suspects in the kidnaping mystery. The arrest has been interested by the publication of reports from Palmas that the innocent population of that district is trembling in evidences of the power of negro sorcery. The witch doctors are protected in their rites, it is charged, by influential elements who, in return, claim their support at the polls.

YACHT TO TAKE SWEDISH SALESMEN TO SOUTH AMERICA

Stockholm, Dec. 5.—A new Viking vessel, from Sweden, manned with expert salesmen armed with literature on up-to-date railroad engines, will sail shortly for South America.

This unique way of finding new markets for their products has been devised by Swedish locomotive builders, who have just delivered the ten hundredth locomotive on an order from the Russian Soviet. A fine steam yacht of 500 tons has been purchased in Spain, and will be fitted out for the expedition. A commander of the Swedish Navy has been secured to serve as skipper, and his crew will include several of the men who have just completed a round-the-world cruise as a sailing yacht.

The president of the company, together with several of his technical experts, will start the work of the expedition. It is expected that most of the South American republics will be visited.

Swedish locomotives have formed a big item in Sweden's exports to Russia, and shipments are continuing, though the number originally ordered by the Soviet has been reduced.

Montreal, Dec. 5.—During a meeting of the City Council yesterday, Mayor Martin referred to the suspicious nature of fires that have destroyed Catholic institutions in and about Montreal. He had received, he said, several anonymous letters signed with the initials "K.K.K." They were of a literate nature inasmuch as they contained veiled warnings that other Catholic buildings would disappear in the same way.

THE SAFETY OF LAKE SAILORS

The Toronto papers have been publishing editorials lately, which dealt with the fact that boats on the lakes are loaded as heavily in the late fall as they are in the summer months, thereby causing them to be unable to weather the heavy gales. These papers maintain that the law should decree that all vessels should carry less cargo in the late autumn. There is a certain amount of truth in these statements, as at this season of the year vessels become heavily laden with ice and are sunk still lower in the water, rendering them an easier prey to the elements. There is an added danger also, as the water is heavier at this season and waves breaking over a ship cause greater damage than the lighter summer seas.

But that is not the only thing to make danger to the situation. Are these boats undermanned? Take, for instance, the case of the Katie Eccles. She is a two masted schooner capable of carrying a load of two hundred and fifty tons. She carried a crew of three, one man, a boy, and a woman cook. This woman cook is the mother of three children, according to her own story, took her spell at the wheel, handled ropes and sails and took soundings, on the last trip of the ill-fated vessel. This does not seem in keeping with our ideas of a woman's sphere. Now a vessel trading across Lake Ontario has often to make runs exceeding twenty-four hours, and how can a crew of three handle such a craft, especially if one only of the three is a man? It does seem a case of a boat being pitifully undermanned.

If course the woman was a heroine and was able to assist in a way that was effective. Supposing she had been an ordinary woman, and could not have reared such skilled assistance, the vessel might not have been able to reach shelter; and today there would have been mourning in three households, and in one of them there would be three little motherless kiddies. Mrs. Lloyd is indeed a heroine and her name should go down in marine annals as one of our illustrious Canadian daughters. Mrs. Lloyd in her modest way claims the vessel was fully manned. This might be true in fact, but it is hard to be convinced of the fact. It does appear that we need more legislation to prevent vessels from sailing with too heavy loads and with too small crews. We cannot afford to lose our sailors at the rate we have been doing the last few years.

THE LANARK BY-ELECTION

Following the most intensive election campaign ever waged in the county of Lanark, Hon. Dr. H. F. Preston at the polls in Lanark Monday is indeed a deserved one, in view of the tremendous organization efforts of the Government, supervised, of course, by Hon. T. A. Low, the Liberal organizer. The political machine of the King-Gouin Government confidently expected to win the seat, but the verdict of the staid electors of Lanark has decreed against it and the tactics employed.

The Gouin Quebec members have been relentlessly hoping for extra representation from Ontario, as they know that there is a disintegration of Progressive in the province. The Drury, although nominally in power, have been smarting under the humiliation of playing second fiddle to the Progressives, and the fact that recently a Progressive member has forsaken his party and joined their ranks, together with the unrest in the United Farmers' organizations in Ontario and the West, has strengthened their belief that a by-election victory in Lanark would have a wonderful effect.

Hon. Dr. Preston had not at his disposal the same organization advantages of the late Hon. J. A. Stewart, the former member for the riding, but the traditions of the county have been asserted and a victory achieved with a majority of over 1,350 votes. Then it must be considered that the late Mr. Stewart was a Union Government candidate, and that Mr. Anderson, a Progressive, was also in the field, and polled over 7,000 votes; but in the present campaign a straight party election took place with the Progressive vote well distributed, but doubtless preponderantly toward Mr. Findlay, the defeated Liberal candidate.

The intelligence of the people has not been tricked by a Government, that has failed to carry out pledges of the general election campaign. It has not been forgotten by the majority of Lanark electors that while Liberal speakers have been preaching free trade in the West, Hon. Ernest Lapointe has been preaching protection in the East, and that while the Government claims to have revised the tariff downwards, the average rate of duty this year is approximately 18 per cent., while under the last year of the Meighen Government the rate was 13.7 per cent.

No Liberal landslide has been started by Monday's result, but Mr. King's majority position will gradually become more precarious and must indeed cause him to feel rather uneasy.

PASSING COMMENT

o o o

It is foolish as well as impossible to dispute the right of way with a five-ton truck.

o o o

Some Progressive members seem to have taken a risk in haste to repent at leisure.

o o o

Toronto husbands complain that their wives are sending their last season's fur coats to the North Ontario fire sufferers and are demanding new ones.

o o o

About the only way to get some people to go to church would be to pass a law against it.

o o o

Our own notion is that divorce lawyers would starve to death if all husbands helped with the supper dishes.

o o o

According to railway reports there are twice as many women travelling these days as there are men. That's natural—the men have to keep at work to keep the home fires burning.

o o o

With a passed dividend, the reserve reduced by half a million dollars, and subsidiary enterprises proving a constant drain, long faces are sure to follow the annual report of the Western Grain Growers, Limited.

o o o

The British Labor party has proved the wisdom of "broadening out." It has doctors, lawyers, authors, school teachers, journalists and even employers in its ranks. The narrow idea of occupational groups has no place in its working creed.

HERE AND THERE

THE TREES DON'T STRIKE.

One day, this summer, after reading all the news about the coal and railway strikes, I happened to be taking a ramble through the woodlot. In the course of my walk I passed several fine piles of all-body maple stovewood that was cut last spring and is seasoning properly for use next winter. It is true that we only meant to use it in the kitchen stove, but if there is any shortage we will not find it necessary to burn the furniture or tear up the floors to get fuel to keep us warm. We went through a winter in the war without using the coal stove, and can do it again. Of course coal is handier to use, and needs less attention, but it the coal operators and their employees will quarrel it doesn't mean so much to us as it does to city people. The woodlot is a kind of insurance for the home that is worth keeping up. A hankering for fuel will stimulate reforestation in the country, for many farmers already realize that it is not safe to be entirely dependent on outside supplies of fuel. It will also promote the development of electricity for the transportation companies, and all users of power see the danger of being entirely dependent on coal. Therefore in time will be found the wisdom of developing such supply, which is in danger of being used too rapidly in our modern enterprises. So that we can see that even strikes may serve useful purposes never dreamed of by those who promote them. If we haven't sense enough to practise reforestation and conservation Providence makes use of our struggles and foolishness to lead us to the right course.—Peter MacArthur.

A THOUSAND MILLION FISH EGGS COLLECTED.

Fish eggs of different species to the number of more than 1,122,000,000 were collected by the hatcheries branch of the Department of Marine and Fisheries during 1921, according to a report made by the Deputy Minister of Fisheries. In addition to the eggs collected by the department, 600,650 rainbow trout eggs and 980,000 speckled trout eggs were purchased from commercial firms; 567,000 rainbow trout eggs, 590,000 cultus trout eggs, 600,000 speckled trout eggs, and 85,000 brown trout eggs were received from federal and state departments of the United States in exchange for Atlantic salmon eggs.

Under an arrangement between the Canadian and United States Governments, the officers of the United States hatchery at Cape Vincent, N.Y., collected whitefish and lake herring eggs in Canadian waters on the Ontario side of the international boundary line. Of these eggs, 28,215,000 were placed in the Kingsville, Ontario, hatchery. The Dominion Department is also indebted to the Ontario Department of Game and Fisheries for 18,750,000 pickerel eggs collected in Hay Bay, Bay of Quinte. These eggs were placed in the hatchery at Thurlow, Ontario, and a portion of the resulting fry were placed at the disposal of the provincial department for stocking waters that are not as readily accessible from its own hatcheries.

A surplus collection of 1,568,000 salmon trout eggs included in the above statement, at Dominion collecting stations from the hatchery at Wiarton, was turned over to the provincial hatchery at Sault Ste Marie.

These eggs were hatched in the fish hatcheries in different parts of Canada and the fry planted in the waters in which are in process of being restocked or where new species are being introduced.

COME HOME.

Come home.
Would I could send my spirit o'er the deep,
Would I could wing it like a bird to thee,
To commune with thy thoughts, to fill thy sleep
With these unwearying words of melody,
Brother, come home.

Come home.
Come to the hearts that here thee, to the eyes
That turn in brightness but to gladden thine;
Come where fond thoughts like holiest incense rise,
Where cherished memory rears her altar's shrine,
Brother, come home.

Come home.
Come to the hearthstone of thy earlier days
Come to the ark, like the o'er-wearied dove,
Come with the symbols of thy heart's warm rays,
Come to the fireside of thy love,
Brother, come home.

Come home.
It is not home without thee; the lone seat
Is still unclaimed where thou wert wont to be;
In every echo of returning feet
In vain we list for what should herald thee,
Brother, come home.

PRESS OPINIONS

SIR HENRY'S FREE HAND.

Toronto Telegram.

Sir Henry Thornton arrived in New York yesterday. He will be in plenty of time to take the Toronto viaduct under consideration, but a conference to deal with problems such as the electrification of the Toronto & Eastern or the building of a connection for which funds have already been advertised.

This might make it appear that the new president is to be a handy man who can be used as an excuse for those things the Government does not want to do and as a rubber stamp for those things the Government wants to do.

But such, of course, can never be the case. Hasn't the Premier declared that Sir Henry Thornton is to have a free hand to make a success of his much-lauded National Railways?

LITTLE TROUBLES OF THE RICH.

Toronto Telegram.

Quebec Province has made a profit of four million dollars on her liquor business. But, from the point of view of capitalists lurks in the mind of the habitant that an additional four million has leaked into the pockets where there by the Government.

So Quebec's prosperity may yet prove the political ruin of Premier Taschereau. The discontent that grows with great riches is sometimes quite as dangerous as the discontent that accompanies extreme poverty.

NEW LEADERS NEEDED

Kingston Whig

The world is undergoing new leadership. There is more than a passing coincidence in the fact that the downfall of Lloyd George in England, the overthrow of the Facta government in Italy, the ousting of Wirth in Germany, and the recent upset by the election in the United States, all should have occurred within the short space of a month. These political upheavals may be unrelated in effect, but in cause they are one—dissatisfaction over the present conditions.

The old order is changing, whether for better or worse time alone will tell. Dissatisfied with conditions that now obtain, the people are milling around, much after the fashion of cattle in a stock-yard, intent on getting somewhere, but with no particular object in view. It is not crises as this that challenge leadership; it is of such situations that are born the rulers of the heights of an Alexander, a Caesar, a Cromwell or a Lincoln.

But there were those who looked ahead, not behind. They built anew for to-morrow in preference to salvaging the wreckage of yesterday. Here was the failure of erstwhile leaders to accept the spirit of progressiveness which is the ruling and dominant trend of this age, that has led to their downfall and involved the world in such confusion. The world at heart is not radical. But if so-called leaders cannot vision anything in the future that is reflected by the conservatism of the past, there is grave danger that they will drive the people into political and economic experiments which otherwise would never be accepted.

What the world most needs now is leaders—strong men with strong convictions and unquestionable courage—men who can interpret the spirit of to-day rather than reflect the beliefs of yesterday.

THE CANADIAN HORTICULTURAL COUNCIL.

The executive of the Canadian Horticultural Council held a meeting in Ottawa on December 1. Business was taken up was the consideration and presentation to the Minister of Agriculture of the report of the Plant Registration Committee. This Committee, consisting of Messrs. W. T. Macoun, Dominion Horticulturist, H. L. Moore, Islington, Ont.; J. E. Carter, Guelph, Ont.; S. F. Davidson, Fonthill, Ont.; and F. E. Buck, Counsel, B.C., have drawn up a complete plan for the organization of a Plant Registration Bureau that will provide for the recording and registration of new varieties of herbaceous, horticultural plants, shrubs and trees. The plan provides for (a) recording new varieties, thus giving priority of name, and (b) the registration of new varieties that are shown, after investigation, to possess outstanding merit.

The report of the committee was laid before the Hon. Mr. Motherwell, Minister of Agriculture, to whom an appeal was made for financial assistance to carry on the proposed Registration Bureau. The Minister at once expressed his approval of the idea and assured the directors that so far as it was possible for him to do, he would secure them the necessary assistance.

The executive had laid before them an offer from Mr. J. E. Carter, secretary of the Registration Committee, to donate $100 annually to be used for the purchase of a medal to be known as the Carter Medal, to be awarded to the person who, in the opinion of the Council, has done the most valuable work for the advancement of horticulture in Canada during the year. Mr. Carter's offer was gratefully accepted and a committee will be appointed to decide to whom this medal shall be awarded for the year 1922.—Canadian Horticultural Council, Ottawa, December, 1922.

Woman's Sphere

THE SHOW.

By Emmeline Stuart Godfrey.

Like a soft mantle—spotless, gilt-tasing, pure—
Descends the Snow upon earth's frozen breast;
Flake upon flake unerring, gentle, sure,
Inviting weary nature to her rest.

Carressingly it falls upon the world
Deserted of the quiet nibbling sheep;
The undulating meadow, fold on fold,
Beneath its warm, enchantment sinks to sleep.

The coppice gleams beneath its crystal crown,
It wreathes the branches of the gaunt abodes;
Into the ruts where earth is bare and brown
With benediction pure the snow-flake steals.

The midnight stars are trembling in delight
As, gleaming down upon the stainless Snow
They tell their secret to the silent night—
The secret that no mortal man may know.

Whiter than Summer cloud or seagull's wing
Descends the Snow on our polluted earth,
With sure, protecting promise of the Spring,
And life resurgent after Winter dearth.

DETAILED WORK IS DONE BY WOMEN

Woman have a genius for details while men 'go in for what they call "broad lines", writes Elizabeth Banks in the London Evening News. To think out and work out well the details and little things of life requires hard labor, and that is one of the reasons why I contend that the majority of women work harder than the majority of men.

If I were to be put on trial for a serious crime where my life or my liberty was in danger, I would much prefer to be defended by a good woman lawyer than an equally good man lawyer, for I would know that the woman would be more likely to consider the "little things" in connection with my case.

The woman trickster, the woman liar in the witness-box, is harder to discover and to trap than the man in similar case, because she has more carefully prepared her whys and wherefores, worked harder at them long in advance. British and American judges will bear me out in this statement. In attaining either to the heights of righteousness or the depths of wickedness, woman works harder than man.

The details of life make men mad, hence the reason why women rather wives repeat their day's worries with advice and also demand that their husbands shall give them advice on mental dates. The wise woman avoids these details. Men like to marry widows because widows have seldom in these matters.

It is difficult to make a woman retire from a position of power and stay there with a pension. Witness the women teachers in Great Britain and Canada who are allowed to retire at a certain age but protest that they wish to keep on! Actresses, too, cannot be longer before the public than do actors. It may be said that their vanity makes them do it, but my belief is that some often it is their passion for work.

The most difficult, intricate, and complicated work of the world is usually left for women, also dullest work. When women enter new professions they have a tendency to speed up the men.

LUCANIAN EGGS

Break some macaroni in 1-inch pieces, enough to make one good cupful when cooked. Cook in boiling salted water for 20 minutes, drain and pour cold water over it and drain again. Add five hard-boiled eggs cut in eighths lengthwise; mix with 2 cups of white sauce seasoned with onion juice and anchovy sauce. Turn into a baking dish, cover with cracker crumbs and dot with butter. Bake for 20 minutes in a hot oven.

NEW LAMPSHADES

Lampshades are appearing in every multiplying variety, and the most grotesque designs are seen. Even the dot in colours which surpass Joseph's coat. It is easy to understand this popularity, if it is remembered that a lampshade of the right sort can add just the finishing touch to a room.

Many shades can be made fairly easily at home. All that is required are some pieces of silk taken from the family rag bag, with similar to that used in making hats, and a pair of small pliers. The shape is first constructed with the wire. This is a little difficult, but the difficulties vanish with a little practice, and very credible results can be obtained. The silk is then sewn on in patterns of a plain character alternating with plain colours; or any other design adapted to suit the general scheme of the room.

THE LAND OF COUNTERPANE.

When I was sick and lay a-bed,
I had two pillows at my head,
And all my toys beside me lay
To keep me happy all the day.

And sometimes for an hour or so
I watched me leaden soldiers go,
With during uniforms and drills,
Among the bed-clothes, through the hills;

And sometimes sent my ships in fleets
All up and down among the sheets;
Or brought my trees and horses out,
And planted cities all about.

I was the giant great and still
That sits upon the pillows hill,
And sees before him, dale and plain,
The pleasant land of counterpane.
—Robert Louis Stevenson.

YOUNG WOMEN WHO SUFFER

Letter Points Way Towards Relief—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Toronto, Ontario—"I suffered from the time I was a schoolgirl until I had taken your Vegetable Compound. I was in my left side and with cramps, growing worse each year until I was all run down. I was so bad at times that I was unfit for work. I tried several doctors and patent medicines and was only relieved for a time. Some of the doctors wanted to have an operation, but my father objected. Finally I learned through a friend of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and thankful I am that I tried it. I am relieved from pain and cramps and so as if it has saved my life. You may use my letter to help other women as I am glad to recommend the medicine."—Mrs. H. A. LINKED LIVES

By

D. Kinmount Roy

The objects that met his gaze were not calculated to inspire cheerfulness. Skeletons of animals were showing through the bog mist, and not far from where he fell a human hand, or what was left of it, protruded threateningly. It stood like a warning against evil things still upon the shrunken fingers, and the sight of it sent a shivver through the miserable creature. It was better than the cold of the atmosphere, but a deadly chill, as though all the sprites of life had been arrested by a sudden hand of terror. He shouted until he was hoarse, but no human sound answered him, only the sea-birds rose clamorously, and circled round and round; then, exhausted at last, he lay still, cursing himself for his folly, and wondering what miracle could deliver him this time from his unpleasant adventure.

The sun sank in the west, and the stark came out in their twinking myriads; then Kinkman had no eyes for the glory of the stars—with his own well-laid schemes in tatters, and money—yes, money!—to want. He was a master of villainy, and had almost under his hand the finest piece of business of his life; and to have it all come to an end in a sand-hole!—and to lay his bones with goats and the fool fellow near by (whose name he had in vain tried to reach) was maddening to think of.

If he was to die now, he would die a fool's death, and it was not much to be thankful for, but it was something. He hated the sea; it was so terrible when it showed its indifference to men's and plans; so absolutely beyond control; so reckless of human concerns, and yet there always seemed some mysterious accounting of them no more than of the small feather borne upon the blast. The tide was coming in, and he noticed a thought himself out of its reach fly between the rocks and mimicer the sight of the foam filled him with a kind of malicious delight. If his end was to be drawn up, ghostlessly, he would rather, after all, die in the shifting sands than under mountains of the vast and wandering deep, whose foam fingers seemed so impatient to reach him. At length, exhausted and well-nigh hopeless, he lay still. Soon visions from above caused him.

"Below there!" a man shouted in stentorian tones.

So the old bird's alive, and as presentnatured as ever!" the man commented to his fellows, while they all laughed boisterously.

Kinkman was furious, but he was also helpless, and far too accomplished a hypocrite not to conceal his wrath. The men had no wish to linger longer than might be, and, without further parley threw him a rope, which he secured eagerly and fastened around his body; but instead of getting the signal to be drawn up, he crawled forward, across-wise, to where he had seen the fellow-creature who had come to his aid. The night had fallen, but the stars were bright; still, the shadows cast by the cliffs on the sand made his search very difficult. Eagerly he groped about until his fingers closed upon the rings, which he promptly transferred to his own pocket. The man grew impatient, and jerked the rope roughly, but his composure was not to be ruffled again that night; he gave the signal, and was soon hauled up, and safe from harm once more.

It was about six weeks after this that Kinkman was safely piloted through the labyrinth of the marshes and left to his own devices. He was heartily glad to regain his liberty, although he had been kindly treated—indeed, he had skilfully planned the retreat to serve his own ends. Now he was free!—free!—to go like to the thread of his purse, and complete them if he could—yes, if he could, for there were many and great difficulties in the way, and he was not much better than Kinkman. He was no lawyer to be a peddler, but an artist, and he possessed that with his own hands and hooks and what-not, it would be strange if he could not make a success of this thing. Accordingly his object was to reach the town of Whitford, as the most likely centre of news; but, with the sunning of his face, he doubled back on his trail, and wandered far afield before he ventured to show himself in public once.

The day before he made his reappearance, two travellers of some consequence rode into the little town; their servants had arrived a day in advance, and their coming created a tiny ripple of interest, just as the town was capable of doing in its usual quiet after a more than usually exciting noise. They took up their quarters at the famous hostelry of the 'White Hart,' the pride of Whitford; for though no one pretended that it was so old as St. Patrick, or even Dick Whittington, it was never disputed that it had played a very conspicuous part in the picturesque history of the country. Spanish dons, French marshals, Royal Dukes and even crowned heads had all been lodged under its roof at one time or other, had testified to the quality of its wines, praised its cuisine, and went their way to spread its fame. Dick, as he was the local tradition. Our travellers, however, seemed strangely oblivious of the interest attaching to their ancient establishment and concerned themselves mainly with the condition of their horses and the prospects of their soon being able to continue their journey.

SAVE THE PLUMBER'S BILL

Don't run off to the plumber the next time your sink is stopped up—which it never should be if you use a sink tidy—clear out the stoppage yourself by suction. Just turn the tap on and the sink is three-parts full, then cork off, and putting the palm of your hand flat over the hole lift hand up and down very quickly. This will soon make the water run away. Then flush pipe out with hot soda water.

AUNT LIZZIE TAKES A HINT

"I'm sorry, but I can't go," Mrs. Brown sighed. "You know Aunt Lizzie couldn't be hired to get into the car, and some one will have to stay home with her."

"Oh, bother Aunt Lizzie!" Dick cried.

His mother smiled at his impatience. "She is a bother sometimes," she admitted. "You know I'd love to go with you and Daddy and Sister, but I just couldn't leave her alone."

"Oh, shoot, I wish she would go home where she belongs. You never get any fun while she's here."

"Why, Dick, that's no way to talk. You know when Daddy was a boy she lived and brought him up, and she's been just like a mother to him ever since."

"But she isn't my mother," Dick broke in.

Not noticing the interruption, his mother continued, "Then, she's awfully rich, you know. She may leave us a million some day, and then you'll be glad you haven't been mean to her."

Dick made no reply. It was a dirty shame. Mother never got to go anywhere. She just waited land and food on that crabbed old Aunt Lizzie. She wasn't any relation to them, either. She may have been good to Dad when he was a kid, but she had caused him enough worry since to make up for it. And as for leaving them 6 million bucks, they had earned that several times over, putting up with her cranky ways. The worst part of it was that she had declared that she would never ride in that "heathenish car," so every time they took a ride some one had to stay home with her. Dick saw to it that he didn't have to stay often.

Dick had an idea. "It may not work but- It wouldn't hurt to try," he thought. Aunt Lizzie was seated in the library before the fire. Dick stood in the hall near the door. He spoke loudly, addressing the picture of Sir Galahad. "No Mother can't go. She

Use Two Washers

Two of these we here are enough. They should be slipped on the shaft tight against the propeller, which can now be attached to the motor base by slipping the shaft through the little eyelet in the propeller hanger, as shown in the drawing.

A strip of rubber gives the power to fly the model. This can be had at a toy store or model supply house. It should be two feet long, three-sixteenths inch wide, and half that in thickness. The ends should be tied together in a double knot. It is attached at the rear with a wire "pin" hook, as shown in the illustration. The drawing also shows how the rubber passes through the wire "can" and hooks on the propeller shaft at the front. The propeller is ready to wind.

WOMEN JURORS STAY WITH CASE

Unpleasant Case and Were Given Opportunity to Relinquish Duties

London, Dec. 4 (Canadian Press).—A delicate question with reference to women jurors arose in a divorce trial in the King's Bench Division here. The action was for damages for alleged misconduct with a woman. The women on the jury when the case was called for trial.

It was found that the plaintiff said it was a case that it was not desirable that women should have to hear if they did not wish to do so and her and counsel for the defendant had agreed that the women should be discharged from the jury, in a consultation with the judge.

Justice McCardie, the presiding Judge, said that a question of principle was involved as to whether women were to be jurors only when a case was pleasant.

Counsel for the plaintiff said he did not think the women could claim to be released as a right, but if the parties in the case retarded it desirable, and the presiding Judge agreed, they could be excused as a matter of grace.

Addressing the three women of the jury, the Judge said: "The question at issue in this case involves relations between two men. It will involve sexual points of the gravest indelicacy—questions which even men would hesitate to discuss among themselves. If the ladies of the jury, or any of them, desire to retire from that body so be it, but if the ladies prefer that their places be taken by men I will assent to that request."

One woman at once left the jury box, but the other two remained. His Lordship remarked that it was a very brief respect for the courage of these two ladies." The Court then showed the two cases of relation of the pleadings in the case that he had marked in pencil, and then one of them remarked: "We think that if we are called at all we ought to sit whatever the case be."

Justice McCardie: "I shall not express a view either way. I know it raises a very serious question, and one as to the privileges but as to the duty of a juror. On the other hand, there is a question as to how far it is wise to maintain the ideal of many men that women are purer and more dignified in the eyes of men if they are ignorant of the grim facts to which I have referred."

Then arose addressing the two women jurors, his Lordship said: "If you desire to retire I think that what that I wish you to do otherwise than as your conscience dictates. Do you both desire to remain, whatever the consequences?"

One of the two replied: "Yes, my Lord."

Thereupon the Judge remarked that there were other women in court, and they would have gathered that the case was of extremely unpleasant character. Those who did not wish to remain would be free to leave. "If they feel it their duty to remain," he added, "they will do so without my disapproval." There were three women in court. Two of them left, but one remained.

Then the trial was begun.

"WHAT YOUR HUSBAND NEEDS"

"One night my husband came home looking as if all had gone out that I thought he would faint. I knew then he had something wrong with him for some time, but I could not get him to tell me what it was. Finally he confessed he was tired and sore all over. I made him go to bed. Next morning he insisted upon going to work although I begged him staying but will. I knew that his trouble was partly due to worry, because for some months before he had been out of work. This put us so heavily in debt that the grocer and butcher refused to give us more credit. It was being out of work that worried my husband. He wouldn't eat because he was afraid there would not be enough food for the children. We were so poor that we had to keep the children from school because they had no clothes. I knew that I could only get my husband strong and well again everything would be all right. He is a carpenter by trade and, when in good health earns good wages and he is always sober and industrious. But I knew that it was useless for me say man to do good work when he was ill and worried. I decided to speak to our old family doctor. He had retired from practice. When I explained how we were situated he gladly offered to do all he could to help us, although he didn't like to interfere with the new doctor's practice. Finally he said, 'What your husband needs is good tonic and I know of nothing better than Carnol.' I thought that if our old family doctor recommends Carnol it must be all right. On my way home I got a bottle and before the whole bottle had been used, my husband was a changed man. After he had taken four bottles his appetite returned, he had more energy, that tired look in his eyes disappeared and the most important his wages have been more than doubled and he is now superintendent of the whole working shop in which he formerly worked as a carpenter. Thanks to Carnol our troubles are over and we are once more a happy and contented family."

Carnol is sold by your druggist, and if you can conscientiously say, after you have tried it, that it hasn't done you any good, return the empty bottle to him and he will refund your money.

SIKI'S STORY BRANDED AS LIE

Siki, Champion Heavyweight Liar of the World Says Hellers, His Manager

Paris, Dec. 5.—The declaration that Battling Siki is "a much greater liar than he ever was a fighter," and that no one "can take away his title as champion heavyweight liar of the world," was the only comment which M. Hellers, manager of the Senegalese, made to newspaper correspondents this morning when confronted with Siki's confession concerning the Carpentier bout, as published in some of the morning papers. M. Hellers added that he would defend himself to the limit, and defied M. Deame, the Senegalese Deputy, to produce any proof of the alleged frame-up beyond the unsupported word of Siki.

M. Hellers has been ailing for several days, but he rose from his sick bed last evening to attend a meeting of the French Boxing Federation. He has a bad cold, and his physician has ordered him to remain indoors. The publication of Siki's charges has created a sensation in France.

"It's a Lie," Says Deseange.

"It is an infamous lie," said Francois Deseange, manager of George Carpentier, today, when shown the declaration by Battling Siki that his championship match with Carpentier was to have been a "frame-up." "I was sure Carpentier would knock this negro out in the first round," Deseange declared. "Do you suppose I would let this clumsy, fatuous stay four rounds with my champion?"

"Deputy Deagne is making electoral propaganda of this stuff. It will go best at the next election with his Senegalese electors, but it may not go so big in the courts when the Deputy is asked to prove his charges. I absolutely defy Deagne to show the slightest atom of proof connecting me with this alleged frameup."

"I have never met Siki in my life. He was pointed out to me one evening in a Montmartre bar-room, but his condition was such that it convinced me there was no possible chance of him defeating Carpentier. I would have refused to enter any agreement to let him stay four rounds, even had it been proposed to me.

"The ambition of Carpenter and myself for the rest of our pugilistic life," he continued, "was to get this negro once more into the ring with Georges, to get a revenge match. It would have been a suicidal policy on our part to work for his disqualification.

"Georges doesn't want any titles which he does not earn in the ring; thus, we intend leaving for America next March or April to challenge Harry Greb, who is much more qualified than Siki to wear the title of champion."

WALLACE ARRIVES FOR FRIDAY'S BOUT

Philadelphia's Pride Versus Bobby Eber of Hamilton Should be Interesting Scrap

Patsy Wallace, the pride of Philadelphia, who on Friday night meets Bobby Eber, the idol of Hamilton, Ont., at Coliseum, Toronto, in a ten-round bout for the Canadian bantam championship, will arrive on the battle ground this morning. Wallace and his manager, Herman Taylor, left the Quaker City last night. He is in better shape for his encounter with Eber than he has been for any bout that he has fought in many moons, according to his new manager, who in a letter to Matchmaker Brown says that Toronto fans will see a much improved boy in Wallace. Taylor affirms that he is a harder hitter and a cleverer boxer than when he met Jimmy Wilde and that he showed this in his recent bout with Pancho Villa, which he gave that redoubtable rangler a boxing lesson. Taylor thinks as well of his protege's chances that he has accepted an offer to box Villa at the Rowland Rink in New York one month after the championship. This is quite a task for the sturdy little Wallace to undertake to meet one champion at 118 pounds and two weeks later box a title holder in another class at 112.

Eber weighed in 121 pounds yesterday and his manager, Walter Obermeyer, is breathing easier. He said he had to do some hard work to get off the remaining three pounds but it is not anticipated that he will have to resort to artificial means to do the trick by tomorrow o'clock on Friday afternoon.

BUFFALO TO HAVE POLO UNDER GLASS

Buffalo, Dec. 4.—The horse is finding its way back to popularity in this part of the country as an adjunct to sport. Five polo-fours, five new horse shows, a hunt club and a saddle and bridle club with five acres of stables and grounds, are among the more recent additions to pastimes in which equestrianism figures.

The club house of the Saddle and Bridle Club, located on the site occupied by the Pan-American exposition, is said to be one of the largest privately owned riding enclosure in the United States. It is of the Tudor style of architecture, the stables surrounding a huge enclosed ring under a glass roof. Polo will be played in the ring during the winter months.

The horse shows scheduled for next year are the Erie county fair, the Hunt Club show in September, the Genesee County show at Batavia, Troop A show at Genesee and Troop I show here. Avon and Rochester also will hold horse shows next season.

EXCELSIORS WIN AT BOWLING

The Excelsiors got away to a very fast start in their first game against the Cubics last night but they strengthened up in the second string and carried the Cubics to their opponents for the remainder of the evening. Melvin bowling for the Cubics turned in a very creditable game, G. Woolley of the Excelsiors was a close second with 547.

The Cubics rolled a total of 2293 as against 2766 for the Excelsiors but under the point system in vogue the Excelsiors are credited with two points for winning two out of three strings.

HOWLEY BUSY PICKING WINNERS

Louisville, Ky., Dec. 5.—It was announced tonight that the Toronto Club had bought Sam Hymon, pitcher, from the Detroit Club. It was subject to waiver, Hymon was the Georgetown College star who went to the Tigers last summer. He was sent to Omaha for seasoning, and pitched seven very creditable games out there.

It was rumored, but not confirmed, that the Leafs had entered into a deal with the Pittsfield Club, of the Eastern league, whereby Infielders Ommen and Bingo had been traded for Outfielder Cates, of the Berkshire team.

"Well have other deals to announce soon," said Howley. "We've got a big pitcher rebuilding, and I'm going to have a team that will be a winner. There is no doubt whatever of Eddie Onslow's returning to the club. That's all public about him being disqualified and he wanted to play but my other manager, He's perfectly willing to return and don't want to be a manager for this season."

Monty Lee added that Onslow had signed a playing contract for the season calling for a salary equivalent to what he received as playing manager last year.

OULETTE STAYS WITH LINDSAY

Will Turn Out as First Pitcher for Lindsay Nine Next Season

Mr. Jack Oulette, for two years past first pitcher for the Lindsay Greyhinds, has definitely stated that he will stay for the Birds again next season, or no other team in the Central Ontario League.

Oulette's name has been connected with the Belleville Club for months past, but he likes the Greyhinds the best, and so his name is at Peneton Falls, he naturally wishes to remain here. Oulette has rendered good service to Lindsay in two seasons past, and there are hundreds of fans who look for him to don the grey uniform of the Birds again in 1923. He is surely the best right-hander in the league and with the right kind of support would have carried the Birds to the top rung of the ladder this season.

RECORD BROKEN AT DOMENICO'S

The F. and C. made a new alley record when the Exer Ready refit chose to defeat before the Knights in a league fixture at Domenico's Alleys last night. The Exer Ready rolled a strong game and the Knights had to make a new alley record to trim them. T. Barrer rolled the high single of 273 and 638 for the three strings.

FRONTENACS TURN OUT.

Kingston, Dec. 5.—The aspirants for a place on the intermediate O.H.A. senior Frontenac hockey teams are making out at Queen's grounds this evening, and with the number and calibre of the would-be puck chasers, there will be all kinds of material for "Jack" Powell to choose his team from.

LOU MARSH WINS BET

The Toronto Star's Lou Marsh received his fortunes on Saturday. He placed a wager that Queen's would defeat Edmonton by ten points. Lou would like to have seen Edmonton win and Queen's humbled for the way the Tricolor upset his predictions up to the second of December. He said: "I think that Queen's "murder" the Canadian rugby rules by getting away with a lot of interference that the officials cannot see. However, that is all in the game. Many a rugby championship has gone to Toronto by systems of interference play.

TRULY A VETERAN

"Kingston Whig" of Tuesday contains a cut of a veteran Rugby player, who attended the Queen's-Edmonton game on Saturday last. This man is James M. Farrell.

It also states that Mr. Farrell who is of the loyal firm Mikle, Farrell and Day was the oldest veteran at the game, and has had the honor of being a member of three teams which won the Canadian rugby championships. He was on the Osgoode Hall team which won in 1901 and 1902, and on the Queen's team of 1903. His brother, Dr. T. Hoey Farrell, Utica, N. Y., was centre half on the Queen's champions of 1902.

FIRE DESTROYS MILL

ALSO ELECTRIC PLANT

Kingston, Ont., Dec. 5.—Fire which broke out shortly after midnight last night destroyed the feed mill and electric light plant at Tamworth, owned by A. B. Carscallen, doing damage estimated at $12,000.

Workmen had been operating the electric light plant until 11.30 and when they left the mill everything was in good shape, less than an hour later the entire plant was in flames and despite heroic work by neighbors, the frame, steel-covered bottling was a mass of ruins. As a result the town of Tamworth will see without lights till the mill can be rebuilt, which will be a month at least. There was $5,000 insurance on the plant and contents.

LARGE CITY WITHOUT NEWS

(Canadian Press.)

London, Dec. 2.—Imagine a city of 120,000 population being without a newspaper for over a week, not even a weekly newspaper—practically cut off from the world from that period—Imagine it in the months of August and September. Perth was not only cut off from news of the world outside but from that of a large area around the neighboring states in the Common wealth during this blank period.

The cause was the strike of the mechanical staffs of the papers. It arose over what at first was regarded as a comparatively small dispute in the printing industry, but it suddenly developed into a deadlock. The mechanical staffs of the West Australian and the Daily News ceased work, and were the only daily newspaper. The Sunday Weekly and two mid-weekly journals were involved, and a population of 120,000 persons was thrown back into the position of the earliest settlers, before the cable and land telegraph linked them with their fellows beyond their borders.

In the middle of September the men in the street in Perth was ignorant of the trend of the reparations struggle in Europe, knew little or nothing of Ireland's troubles, or of the Greco-Turk clash. Worse still to him, he could learn nothing, except by personally interrogating others, of the form of the horses then in active preparation for the Eastern States racing carnivals.

The only newspaper available which had a telegraphic service was the Kalgoorlie Miner, which was published nearly 400 miles away from the Western Australian capital. This had a very limited circulation in Perth and the proprietors, avoiding any possibility of being made parties to the dispute between the printers and publishers in the metropolis, were not trying to obtain a Perth circulation.

The strike ended on September 21.

CANAL NEWS

Will as the water was let out of the Canal on Sunday during the installation of the new electric valves at the cement bridge, there was a wild rush made by the boys for the Paper Mill Locks where the fish are found on such occasions. There were hundreds of eels, catfish and bass flopping around in the mud and everybody who liked fish got their share. No one ever goes hungry around Campbellford, there is always "something doing."

GENERAL

Richard Cole has announced his intention of staying in the field for Councillor for 1923. Dick represents Ward 3 and has looked after the interests of the people right through the year, saving the ratepayers a lot of money in connection with the Welling-ton street sewer in which he was the means of getting a cut of from $3.00 to $2.00 a foot, which was quite an item as these affairs are generally slapped through.

OBITUARY

MRS. JEAN DINWOODIE

The funeral of the late Mrs. Jean Dinwoodie took place at Campbellford on Monday on the arrival of the Grand Trunk train from Peterboro and was largely attended. The floral tributes were beautiful showing the esteem in which the deceased lady was held. The pall-bearers were Messrs. W. J. Armstrong, C. L. Owens, Fred Wood, J. Walkinshaw, J. D. Cummings, Charles Bedford. The Rev. Mr. McIntosh, of the Presbyterian Church conducted the services at the graveside and the remains were laid to rest in Mount Pleasant cemetery. Mrs. Dinwoodie was the widow of James Dinwoodie, first reeve of Campbellford, she was born in Scotland, the daughter of the late Commander Robert Cook, of the Royal Navy, coming to Canada in 1851. She was a former resident of Campbellford but had resided with her daughter, Mrs. W. W. Cummings, of Toronto, for the past 12 years.

ENGLAND DRINKING LESS WINE THAN BEFORE THE WAR

London, Dec. 2—Luncheon markets have been flooded recently by large shipments of champagnes and wines from the continent and Spain; which, however, find no ready sale here. The wine shops of England are already overstocked with pre-war supplies which the merchants are unable to dispose of. Most of these stocks were purchased during the war, or just after, and at high prices, with the result that the dealers are unwilling to lose their profit in order to get rid of the stocks.

Light wines, which includes claret, sauternes and burgundy, average on an average of four shillings six pence (about one dollar) a quart, as compared with two or three shillings before the war, and the heavier wines are bringing more than double their former prices. Champagnes cost almost one pound sterling a quart at the present time, but vary widely according to the vintage.

The new stocks being offered by the wine growing nations may be purchased at prices which are even below those which prevailed before the war.

Consumption of wine in the British Isles, to increase the difficulties of the dealers, has dropped to almost half of what it was in 1913. Hotels and restaurants complain of the slump, and wine lists nowadays contain only the most popular brands, and these are called at only moderate figures.

The troubles of the wine dealers, however, do not extend to the whole manufacture. Despite the loss of a considerable export trade to the United States, France's distilleries have increased their output and a ready market awaits the product. In many of the more popular brands the retail dealers are unable to keep a supply on hand, and the mail order business of the distiller has doubled within the last two years.

The output of whiskey is richer than ever before, twelve shillings ($2.50) a quart being asked for the best grades.

The.... Public!

Has to a great extent, come to the realization that glasses are only a part of ocular service. Glasses must not be picked from a tray ready to wear. Before a prescription can be written there must be a thorough examination made by a competent professional man, who has secured special training for this work. Our ocular service is not a merchandising business; our examination is not only thorough but is careful, and is backed by 29 years' daily practice and the most modern scientific instruments.

THAT CHRISTMAS REQUEST ONCE AGAIN

It does seem that we are telling an old old story, and making a request that has often been made before, then when we bring up the much used, and time-worn request to say your Christmas parcels early and to mail them early too. These requests, made regularly year after year fall on many deaf ears. No reason can be assigned that will cover all such cases of procrastination. However, we remain to say that one good way to get into the true spirit of Christmas giving until we get a little touch of winter and snow. A green Christmas does not seem like a real Christmas in Canada. Then until we get the inspiration it is really difficult to go down town in "cold blood" and do our Christmas shopping. Then too, if we get the insuration and do not have the cash, difficulties again loom up and shopping expeditions are again postponed.

Nevertheless, if we consider as a moral obligation our Christmas shopping duties, it would be far better for all concerned. Then after we have purchased our gifts, our duties are not wholly fulfilled in regard to cotton deliveries, until some have been mailed. There is a certain necessity for handling mail at our local office, and beyond this we cannot go. Thus mail matter by over and before time, delayed. A late Christmas gift is only half appreciated. We here quote Postmaster Gilfer:

"Remember that thousands of OTHER people are mailing an unusual number of letters and parcels, at this season, and if they all pile up together the last few days it is impossible to get everything handled and delivered on time, then SOMEBODY is bound to be disappointed. Mail all matter early and see that your friends get your Christmas Greetings before the day's festivities are over."

J. WESLEY BOYD

The remains of the late J. Wesley Boyd, who passed away early Tuesday morning, at the residence of his sister, in Wellington, Prince Edward County, were taken to his late residence at Allisonville, from which place the funeral will be held.

The death of the late Wesley Boyd, came as a great shock to his many friends, as he had not been ill for long, having fractured his wrist, while cranking a motor car in Picton recently. The fracture proved to be a very bad one, however, and the splintered bone protruded through the flesh, blood poisoning set in the wound, and ultimately caused death.

Deceased was at one time a resident of this city, but had recently

Barrie, Ont.—"I was suffering from a rundown system some time ago, was unfit to perform my daily duties, and was advised to try Dr Pierce's Favorite Prescription. I tried it, took two bottles, and was restored to my natural strength. I cannot praise Dr. Pierce's medicine too highly and will be willing to write to any one sending a stamped envelope."—Mrs. A. E. Bishop, R. R. No. 1.

Mothers, Advice for You!

London, Ont.—"I wish I could tell all the women in the world who suffer with woman's trouble, what a wonderful medicine Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is. My earliest recollection with its use dates from my first expectancy. I became dropsical and my people were quite alarmed about my condition. The doctor's medicine did not seem to reach my trouble at all so my husband urged me to try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and to please him I did. Before I had finished the second bottle the dizziness and dropsy left me and I felt in absolutely perfect health. I had no further trouble from that time on. I afterwards took Favorite Prescription whenever in a nervous or run-down condition and it always strengthened and built me up."—Mrs. Ida Stoddart, 651 Dundas St.

COUNTY COUNCIL

county constable that one of the peddlers was peddling without a license.

Mr. C. B. McGuire thought Mr. Potter had a grievance. Villages in the county should be protected in this matter. The By-law should be enforced.

Mr. W. E. Wiggins—The bylaw is conflicting in some of its clauses and this was shown by Mr. E. G. Potter when he had a case of a peddler.

Mr. Burns—The Owen Blend Company's agent was fined $40 for not having a license. This was at Madoc.

Mr. S. B. Rollins—All peddlers should pay a license to help keep up the expenses of the County. We should enforce with the Bylaw and make all pay a license.

Mr. J. V. Wabb thought that some of the rates in the bylaw were excessive.

Mr. Potter—I would not object to paying a license if others who peddle pay a license.

Mr. C. B. Aubart, Reeve of Marmora village, spoke in favor of the bylaw being standard to some extent.

Mr. H. Ketcheson—There has no doubt been a injustice in Mr. Potter's case and I would support the motion.

Dr. Eshelby—The villages must be protected and the Bylaw upheld. Enforce the Bylaw.

Mr. Mitchell—Our County Constable should enforce the law. If not too late we should go after those who have peddled and not paid a license and collect the license. It was not the duty of Mr. Potter to see that the Bylaw is enforced.

Mr. McGuire—We should not pronounce our Bylaw illegal. Let us not offer those who have not paid a license.

Mr. Wemilton—Mr. Potter has performed a hard task. If our Bylaw is not right then it should be made right.

Mr. W. A. Reid was of the opinion that the County Constable should receive the law is enforced in regard to this matter.

Mr. Aubart—If Mr. Potter gets a refund others who have paid a license will ask for the same.

Mr. S. B. Rollins—We will make a mistake if we refund any license paid.

The motion of Mr. Thompson was referred to Wm. and Messrs. Committee for further consideration.

At noon Warden Reid left the chair.

Vienna, Dec. 5—Ghouls have become so active in the great cemeteries of Vienna, according to the press, that police guards now patrol these resting places day and night every night, accompanied by dogs.

The grave robbers are disinterring newly buried bodies and robbing them of clothing, the little jewelry souvenirs that bring families have sent with loved ones to the grave, of gold filled teeth, and even shearing the tresses of women.

Ten a general merchant at Allisonville.

Mrs. Robert Colling of this city is a sister and Mrs. (Hon.) Nelson Parmenter another sister.

Mrs. Boyd who survives is a sister of Mr. D'Arcy Young.

BRITISH DUPED GERMANY?

Berlin, Dec. 6th.—The memoirs of Count Von Moltke just issued by his widow, gives the impression that England deliberately duped Germany — delaying mobilization by tentatively indicating that she would observe neutrality in the event that Germany desisted from a naval attack on the north coast of France.

UNIQUE EXHIBIT AT CHICAGO

Fargo, N.D., Dec. 5.—A hog doesn't root from pure perversity, just because he wants to give his front yard the appearance of no man's land between the trenches. He is merely seeking in his blind piggish way to satisfy his aspirations for some intelligent necessary to his physical well being, which is lacking from his daily diet.

This and many more things concerning pigs are being brought out in the unique exhibit North Dakota Experiment Station exhibit "The Northern Pig and His Pasture," exhibited at the Chicago Grain and Stock Show, Chicago, Dec. 2-9, according to H. L. Walster, agronomist of the state agricultural college here.

The main aim of the exhibit is to show that the farmers of various districts constantly supposed to raise anything but wheat, can produce hogs, "and let them do all the harvesting," according to Mr. Walster.

Colored enlarged pictures and graphic diagrams show how the hog can be fitted himself by the "cleaning off" of Canadian field peas and Dakota white flint corn and also the value of alfalfa as a hog pasture is supplemented by a grain ration. With such food the hog finds it unnecessary to root, the agronomist says. Results of five years' experiment along this line are shown.

The whole exhibit is a "dramatization of The Northern Pig from Birth to Market", a bulletin recently written by H. Sheppard. In this bulletin Mr. Sheppard emphasizes the need for understanding and kind treatment of the young pig.

None of the pigs in the nursery rhyme had more definite personality than the one at Belleville, according to the bulletin. If they misbehave, "chloupp their ears," it advises. This "may not hurt them but they do not like it, according to the bulletin. But "don't frighten a hog, and banner the hog raiser," are two principles which are insisted upon.

This considerateness is in line with the policy of the agricultural college here throughout. "Treat a cow as you would a lady," says a motto in the office of the dairying department.

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 7, 1922

ROADS AND BRIDGES REPORT PRESENTED

MONEY SPENT ON BRIDGES

Committee Did Not Exceed the Estimates Allotted

Mr. Walter E. Wiggins, Chairman of County Roads and Bridges Committee presented the following report:

His Honor, the Warden and Members of the County Council of the County of Hastings.

Gentlemen:—During the year 1922 and since your last session, the work done on your Provincial County and County roads and bridges, as per estimates submitted by your Board and passed by your Honorable body of the June Session of Council, has progressed very satisfactorily. The work on Provincial County roads was left in the hands of your special Provincial County Roads committee and their report will be submitted at this session. The bridges were also left entirely with the special Bridge Committee and I believe all work recommended and passed has been completed. After the June session, one bridge in Tyendinaga Township broke down and subsequently through some oversight your committee did not inspect this bridge last spring, but it was a wooden structure (almost new) and was considered safe. This I believe was the only bridge, we discovered last spring and we are very thankful to report that no accident happened and that no person was injured when it broke down and fell into the river. The Bridge Committee at once took charge and saw will be referred to in their report.

County Roads.

First I wish to express my sincere appreciation for the manner in which your Superintendent, Mr. Fox, and the assistant, Mr. McLaren, have on deserved to assist your Chairman in the discharge of his duties, always being ready and willing to further the interests of the County and given their services freely to assist you Chairman in looking after same.

I also wish to thank the member of this Council for their assistance in any matter that was referred to them in their general township.

During the season, I have found that the work in the County are we supervised and personal touch is being kept by your Superintendent and his Assistant on all the works under progress. The said of Foreman and all men who appear to have a thorough knowledge of the work and, we believe, are trying to get the best results for the money expended and to show 100 cents worth of improvement for every dollar expended, for every labor also been instructed re-accurate and correct returns, and I believe these instructions are being carried out.

I am pleased to report that all work recommended by your Chairman last spring has practically been completed satisfactorily by the Provincial Engineer and your Chairman. The mileage built and repaired and the number of culverts and bridges built was as follows:

Macadam

	Constructed
	Pro. County Rd.	County Rd.
	Miles	Miles
Gravel	2	9
Macadam	1.4	1.4
	Re-surfaced.
Crushed stone	11.1	14.4
Gravel	10.2	20.5
Graded roads	2.5
Bridges built	2	4
Culverts	21	31

Amount Expended to Date

County Roads	$62,469.21
Pro. County	50,286.64
Unapproved Co. Rd.	6,270.20
TOTAL	$119,026.75

The work this season has been kept within the estimate except perhaps a little at Point Pleasant which of course is often $10.00 spent to save $50.000, and is absolutely necessary for the maintenance of the roads, and your Superintendent and Assistant deserve great credit for the way they have attended to all parts of work this season.

During the fall, the unveiled bridge over the C.N.R. in Thurlow Township was deemed unsafe for public traffic, and your Superintendent and Chairman of Roads together, with the Chairman of Bridges and Finance, met with the Grand Trunk Engineer at the bridge and they have decided to have same filled in until such time (as) if ever, it is needed for railroad purposes, carrying to have the work done by the Pease Hall, Belleville, Dec. 5, 1922.

Chairman.

BELLEVILLE HIGH SCHOOL GIRLS GIVE EXHIBITION

Physical Training Class Entertain Large Crowd at the Y.M.C.A. Last Night—Exercises and Dances Show Excellent Training and Demonstrate What Clever Pupils Can Do—Clowns Give an Excellent Account of Themselves

Last night at the Y.M.C.A. gym the girls of the Belleville High school, who have been so ably trained by Miss Merry and Mr. Keeler, gave their annual Physical Training display. It was an unusual success in every sense of the word and citizens who do not avail themselves of the opportunity of witnessing this display this evening or tomorrow evening are indeed missing a treat.

The ensemble dancing was especially good, and the costumes were particularly attractive. The gymnastics also were well executed. Some of the young ladies have been studying dancing under Prof. Johnstone, and volunteered to give individual numbers. Miss Merry took advantage of these offers, and she and the girls organized pretty costumes, and worked out pretty routines for the presentation of these numbers. The musical accompaniments were very appropriate and were excellently rendered.

To relieve the serious and classical atmosphere, three clowns, Charlie Keeler, as a gentleman who has seen more prosperous days, Cecil Facer as a lady clown, and "Twig" Woodley as an out-and-out clown of the circus variety, entertained the audience in a delightfully different way. These three will cause the professional clowns to look to their laurels. They are good from start to finish. Some of the skits they gave were the equal of professional vaudeville presentations. Miss Kitty Johnstone executed a very pretty skirt dance which was good. The work of an artist. Miss Ida Falwell executed two dances, the Sailor's Hom Pipe, and the Spanish Fan dance. The graceful execution of these difficult dances created a great deal of hearty appreciation on the part of those present. Miss Helen Potter also gave a very beautiful dance, the "Song of the Bells." Miss Dorothy young artist also deserves great praise for her work.

Other interesting dances were "The Lily Maids," "The Gay Little Dutch Girl," "The Weaver," "Sword Dance," "The Dainties," "Poppies," "Schuttleties," "Spanish Dance," "Japanese Dance," "Irish Lilt," and "The Gavotte."

The marches and the Grand Wand Drill, as well as the swinging of Indian clubs, were all well done.

The Boxer Law skit and also the telescope skit staged by the clowns were very cleverly put across. Many of the girls whose names are not mentioned did excellent work and were very clever and graceful dancers. Nearly all of them deserve special mention.

Again we can only repeat, said we said at the start, anyone who misses this exhibition of remarkably clever home talent, is missing a rare treat.

NEW VARIETY OF APPLE DISCOVERED IN QUEBEC

Montreal, Dec. 6.—Much enthusiasm was evoked at the annual meeting of the Pomological and Fruit Growing Society of the Province of Quebec at MacDonald College, St. Anne's, today by the announcement of the discovery at Abbotsford of a seedless and coreless variety of Fameuse apples. Banbrass was suspended for some time while the apple growers assembled, examined and tested specimens. Prof. F. C. Steer, of the Amherst, Mass., Horticultural College, examined the fruit and pronounced evidently Fameuse in every essential detail. The discoverer said he had made his discovery purely by accident.

LAKE NAVIGATORS MOVING VERY CAUTIOUSLY

Sault Ste Marie, Dec. 7.—With all the locks removed and snow falling fast, shipping moved very carefully during the night but most of the vessels continued. The captains of the boats passing through the locks this morning said that there was very little wind during the night but they had to move very cautiously.

BARN BURNED AT ZION HILL

Contents Also Destroyed With Barn at 6 a.m. Today—Origin of Fire Unknown

Fire completely destroyed the barn and all the contents of the barn on the farm owned by Mr. William Tufts, butcher, of Holloway. The farm, which is situated about three and a half or four miles north east of Foxboro, has been leased to Mr. Edward Hess and he is the owner of the loss property, which was completely consumed with the barn. While it is supposed by the occupants as to the extent of the loss of the contents, it is believed that the stock was not a large one.

The origin of the fire is unknown, and when it was noticed this morning by a neighbor, about five and six a.m., it had gained considerable headway. The neighbor spread the alarm, and the farm is situated near what is known as Zion's Hill.

UNITED EMPIRE LOYALISTS' CELEBRATION.

A. L. Mitchell, Assistant Archivist of the Public Archives of Canada, writes: "The U. E. Loyalist Celebration was a success. That is every time away yet, but oh, who could not wish to be there. If still at this post of duty, I will certainly hope to be with you."

IRISH REBELS ACTIVE

Cork, Dec. 7.—Two hundred rebels captured the barracks at Ballyvadlea yesterday, killing one man and wounding 15. They took 90 prisoners, but released them after taking all their equipment.

CANADIAN INDUSTRIAL POSITION IMPROVES

In Spite of the Dropping Demand in Seasonable Activities, There Are More Men Employed

Ottawa, Dec. 7.—The returns from 6,000 firms spread over Canada showed that you November by they had 9,410 more persons employed than at the first of the month before. The upward movement started last April and has been going upward ever since. It is all the more marked this month as there was a big falling off in the construction industries which has been more than offset by the increases in other lines. Activity in manufacturing industries as a whole logging, mining, transportation and trade thrushes increased considerably.

THAT KING GEORGE OPEN IRISH PARLIAMENT IS RUMOR ONLY

London, Dec. 7.—The suggestion that King George open formally the new Irish Parliament seems to be based partly on surmise and partly on private rumors. However, it is safe to say that if Ireland intimated that such a visit would be welcome the sovereign would acquiesce. However it is regarded as unlikely that the King would take the initiative.

CORBYVILLE CAR STILL MISSING

Believed to Have Gone Over Culvert Near Holloway, but Proceeded

At 8 a.m. today, the two boys who are alleged to have stolen the cherry car at Corbyville, were still at large. At 9.30 a.m. Mr. Jones, formerly owner of the car, had no trace of the car either, as he called both the city police office and the Provincial officers to know if they had located the car.

It is reported that the car went over the end of a culvert near Holloway, on Wednesday, but it was necessary for them to secure the services of a farmer to help them out of the ditch. They were unable to find him, who of course did not know that they had taken the car.

Mr. Jones will leave for the north country today in an effort to find his car.

KINGSTON HAS WELCOME FOR MR. SPRIGGS

The following article appeared in the Kingston Standard and shows that Belleville lost a popular man in the person of Mr. Spriggs:

Mr. W. A. G. Spriggs, the new manager of the Kingston branch of the Bell Telephone Co., has received his new duties on the first of the month. Mr. Spriggs is well known in this city as a most efficient body by his numerous friends.

A good many years ago Mr. Spriggs started out in the telephone business as a messenger boy here, and has remained at telephone work ever since. He held responsible positions at Denver, Col., and Kansas City, Mo., and then returned to Kingston where he carried on an extensive contracting business for some time. He gave up this business, however, and went to Perth, Ont., as assistant manager of the Bell Telephone Co., but his term there was interrupted by the war. Mr. Spriggs was one of the officers of the 21st battalion during the war. He returned to Perth in 1919 as manager and was transferred from there two years later to the more important office at Belleville. He is now coming from Belleville back to his original starting point in Kingston but this time as manager of the office where he started as a boy.

He has the best wishes of his many friends here for success in his new position."

NATURAL GAS FLOW INVESTIGATED AT STIRLING

Provincial Inspector Visits the Village and Inspects the Surrounding Territory

Traces of Gas and Oil Were Found Over 60 Years Ago in Hastings County

A representative of the Ontario Government visited Stirling last week and carefully investigated the natural gas discovery made there some weeks ago.

The well near the High School building was first examined by the Inspector. At the present time gas is still flowing from this well although it first has to filter through sixty feet of water. There is a half-inch pipe in the wellcapping and when lighted, the gas burns until extinguished.

Accompanied by Robert Cooke, M.P.P. for North Hastings, the government official traversed the territory in all visible unless drilling operations were extended to a two thousand foot level, and even then a dry well might be the result.

The Board of Education, who control the property upon which the gas was recently discovered, are of the opinion, now that further experimental drilling is necessary, that the find should be developed by private interests. This is also the attitude of the Village Council, in view of the large expense involved. Private citizens could, by means of a subscription list, raise sufficient funds to cover the proposed operation requirements. However, the matter of development is not finally settled and will be discussed fully at a later date.

Parties engaged in drilling for a water supply near the High School have offered to drill 500 feet for $1,050, but the government inspector was of the opinion that a greater depth, of, at least 1,000 feet, would be necessary. Drilling equipment to accomplish this would be very expensive, and even if successful, the matter would still be in the experimental stage. However, as the general situation seems favorable, the matter will be further investigated, and probably financed with local capital.

Older citizens in this vicinity will likely remember that nearly sixty years ago a company was engaged in drilling for gas and oil near Glasford ton, in Sidney township. Traces of oil were discovered, but operations were eventually suspended by the company, as a rumor spread throughout the country that there was no drill attached to the drilling apparatus, and consequently local confidence and financial support was lost to the promoters.

Near Melrose, in East Hastings, traces of oil existed some two or three years ago. Options on areas of land were obtained but nothing further has developed as yet.

ENRICO CARUSO MEMORIAL CANDLE

Expected to Last 18 Centuries—Will be Shipped To Italy

(Canadian Press Despatch)

New York, Dec. 7.—A candle of chemically treated bees-wax, five feet in circumference at the base and sixteen feet high, known as the Enrico Caruso Memorial, has just been completed here at a cost of $3,700 and is being given by the New York Orphan Asylum, of which Caruso was a generous benefactor, as a token of remembrance. It will be shipped to Pompei, Italy for the church that Caruso last worshipped in. It will burn twenty-four hours each day, All Saint's Day. It is expected to last 18 centuries.

MOTOR TRAFFIC IS DISCUSSED

County Councillors Consider Questions Submitted to Them

At this morning's session of the County Council the question of the time was taken up in discussing some questions submitted to that body relative to the regulating of motor traffic on the highways of municipalities. The questions submitted were discussed at some length and the trend of opinion was that many cars are driven in a reckless manner which caused many accidents which might be avoided. The questions submitted and answers asked for were as follows:

1st. Should Police be displayed on all driven vehicles after dark?

Mr. Vermilyea spoke in support of having lights displayed on all vehicles after dark.

A number of the Councillors thought that in the country this could not be well carried out, and the answer to the question was no.

2nd. Should the present speed allowed for auto travel be increased or decreased?

Mr. Vermilyea—It should be reduced. Twenty-five miles an hour was too fast for cars to be driven. If a motorist wants to travel faster than 20 miles an hour take a train the speaker said. Hudson Bleecker was not alive to always on account of some drivers of cars. He moved that the speed limit be 15 miles in incorporated municipalities and 20 miles an hour on highways.

Mr. Vermilyea stated that human life was not safe on the roads at present.

Mr. McGuire moved in amendment that 25 miles be the speed on highways.

Dr. Embury spoke on the enforcing of the law. There was too much reckless driving. Human life must be protected.

The motion of Mr. Vermilyea prevailed.

3rd. Should the speed of heavy laden motor trucks be increased or decreased?

The speed of motor trucks at present is fixed at 10 miles per hour for 4 ton vehicles and 8 miles for trucks with a capacity over 4 tons.

A motion prevailed that this clause remain as it is.

4th. The present maximum for trucks is 12 tons. Should this be decreased?

The general impression was the maximum should be decreased.

Mr. Clare, Thurlow, of Hungerford stated that a heavy laden truck had worked havoc on the township road. Travel should be uniformed by the law.

After some discussion the motion prevailed that the maximum be 8 tons for motor and loads.

Mr. Clare thought it would be a good idea if the County had a By-law regulating the width of tires on wagons.

5th. Would your Council recommend that all drivers of motor vehicles be required to produce a license.

ANOTHER CAR STOLEN AT PICTON

Grey-Dort Touring Car Taken From Front of Globe Hotel Last Evening

At 8 p.m. last night, Sergeant A. Harman, of the city police force, received a telephone message from Provincial Constable at Picton, informing the local police department of the theft of a motor car from that town last evening.

This car, for which the local officers were on the watch, is a Grey Dort touring car, a 1923 model with 17-6-987 and serial number 23-1-1-1 in a 1923 model.

At 3 a.m. this morning the owner of the car called personally at the Police station here, to ascertain whether or not the officers had seen the car. He stated that he had left the machine standing in front of the Globe Hotel, with the engine running, and that two young men climbed into it and drove away. Later, they required the road to Trenton. N [illegible] of the car had been found at [illegible] Picton.

Bank of Montreal 105th Annual Meeting

Sir Vincent Meredith, President, Reviews Outstanding Developments of Past Year—General Outlook in Canada

Sir Frederick Williams-Taylor, General Manager, deals with Canada's Economic Position and Progress of Bank

The annual meeting of the Bank of Montreal was marked by especially interesting announcements by the President and General Manager, Sir Vincent Meredith, Bart., the Prime Minister in his address referred particularly to the conditions that prevailed throughout the world. The President also made reference to the revision of the Bank Act, and to the subscription of the Merchants Bank. Before beginning his annual address, Sir Vincent also took occasion to pay special tribute to the memory of the late B. H. Angus, who had served for over 30 years as a director of the Bank and who also for some years had acted as General Manager.

Sir Frederick Williams-Taylor, the General Manager, dealt more particularly with the affairs of the Bank, but laid special emphasis on the economic position of Canada. Sir Frederick also referred to the exchange problem and reviewed the general features of the annual statement of the bank.

Features of President's Address.

Sir Vincent Meredith, Bart., in his address to shareholders, said in part:

"The banking year just closed has required constant vigilance and it may be said to be in a position to inform you that, while our profits on the basis of capital employed have been very large as those of the immediately preceding years, as was to be expected, with lessened activity in business generally, coupled with increased taxation, we have been fortunate in excluding serious losses, and the liquid position and great strength of the bank remain unimpaired.

"Since your last annual meeting, the Merchants Bank has been absorbed by the Bank of Montreal, and the incidents connected with this transaction it is not necessary to refer to, with the criticism it evoked, further than to say that, in accordance with the principle action of your directors, subsequently ratified by you, avoided a situation that might otherwise have proved serious to the country at large, and secured the shareholders of that institution from losses greater than were suffered.

Bank Act,

Referring to the revision of the Bank Act, Sir Vincent said—

"The Bank Charters expire on July 1st, 1923, and unless the Government deem proper to extend them for another year, a revision of the Bank Act will occur at the approaching session of Parliament.

"The subject is already engaging attention in the press and elsewhere. Some suggested changes are so radical that alarm might well be caused but for the conviction that caution, the lessons of the past and the sound sense of Parliament will interpose against their acceptance. It is well to learn of any parliamentary or any other enactment that will wholly provide against the errors or misjudgments of those who conduct affairs of any business.

"The Banking system of Canada is the product of long experience. It has operated to the advantage of the people, despite an occasional failure from which, however, no country and no plan has been free. I can confidently claim that to venture upon radical changes in our Banking system is to incur grave danger to the stability of trade and to impair the high credit structure of the country, and I know of nothing more certain to arrest the development and progress of both than rash experiments in the uncertain of banking and currency."

Farmers' Business.

Dealing with farmers' business, the President made a special reference, saying:—

"Statements have been made in the public press by un-informed people that debtors, especially in the West are being subjected to undue pressure by the Banks, Loan Companies and other lenders. So far as this Bank is concerned, every consideration and great latitude have been given to debtors who, through bad harvests or other mischance, have been unable to meet their obligations. This is and at all times has been the policy of this Bank, and I may state that policy been more forcibly impressed upon our Managers than during recent critical years.

"Banks are business, not benevolent, institutions. They are expected to pay their shareholders a reasonable return on their investment, which includes the Rest Account and the accumulation of many years—as well as the Capital of the Bank. The rate of dividend is not disproportionate to that investment and certainly has not proved excessive when compare capital to seek the banking field. It is a matter of fact, the distribution to shareholders in Canadian Banks is substantially less than that made by Banking institutions in Great Britain or the United States.

General Situation.

In conclusion, Sir Vincent summed up the general situation as follows:—

"The crisis of 1920-1 has passed into history. The fact that the depression was world-wide makes it highly improbable that the return to normal will be other than slow. We have experienced a more sudden and severe depression of trade than our generation had ever known, and though conditions, including the agricultural results, are undoubtedly more favorable, prudent business men will not build up an unduly speculative position in the lessons of 1920. The outlook, as I see it, is for reasonably satisfactory conditions in most lines of business, though there can be no great trade boom without a further important expansion of foreign commerce and this unfortunately is not yet in sight."

General Manager's Address.

Sir Frederick Williams-Taylor, the General Manager, in his annual address to shareholders said—

"The one hundred and fifth annual statement of this Bank, since many changes as compared with a year ago, have changes not result in part of incidental variations in what might be termed normal fluctuations, is also in larger measure of the absorption of the Merchants Bank of Canada, which, I am gratified to say, has been effected with scarcely a ripple on the surface of our affairs.

"Speaking in general terms, the interests of your liabilities to our shareholders and depositors is balanced by a corresponding increase in our assets, while our liquid position remains as strong as ever and the status of the Bank as a whole enhanced through the acquisition of many branches, as well as in other ways, from all of which we shall presently derive the benefit in increased earning power.

"It is trite, yet undeniable, to remark that in Canada, as elsewhere, trade generally has not been good. Bankers, more distantly than others, receive late the detailed results of this condition, which in large measure is brought home to them in lessened or diminished profits. In the case of the Bank of Montreal losses are moderate as they have been, it must of necessity be that there has come for four of the eight names submitted. The four receiving the highest number of votes are declared elected.

The election is thus absolutely secret and makes every member eligible for nomination to the directorate.

The final election will be held next week, the polls closing at 4 p.m. Dec. 13. Ballots to be sent by mail or taken personally to the Chamber of Commerce office at any time prior to the hour named.

The Chamber of Commerce annual meeting will be held as soon as possible after the final election. At this meeting the annual financial statement will be read and the president and the manager will present a report of the work accomplished during the past year.

Messrs. Jamieson Bone, J. G. Moffet, H. W. Ackerman, Nevil Macdonald and Arthur McGee were elected a year ago for a two-year term. The new directors for the ensuing year will be elected at the annual meeting.

EXODUS FROM THE WEST

Winnipeg, Man., Dec. 6th.—Beginning today there was given an exceptionally busy time, this morning at the Canadian Pacific Railway station, here, prior to the departure of the eastbound train which left in two sections carrying approximately two hundred and fifty overseas passengers as well as many others who were returning east for the Christmas season. An interesting feature in connection with the overseas passengers was the fact that they were mostly all Old Country people who have become Canadians and are forgiving home with their families for the first time. The overseas passengers will occupy the cars on the dayside reserved for the "Melita" Saturday morning at 9 o'clock at St. John. In addition to those who left this morning for the "Melita" there were many enroute to Portland and Halifax by way of Montreal and St. John where they will make connections with the steamers for these ports. Many others have already left for St. John extending several days at various points enroute.

The annual nominations for the Board of Directors for the Belleville Chamber of Commerce are being held this week. The nominations will close to-morrow night, Dec. 8th at 8 p.m. Bank nomination ballots have been sent out from the manager's office and are now in the hands of the members.

There are in all nine directors of the Chamber of Commerce. Of these, five are elected a year to serve for a term of two years. The other four were elected in December, 1920, for a similar two-year period. These latter four have not completed their term of office. They are Messrs. H. F. Ketcheson, W. B. Dyer, C. M. Reid and H. E. Fairchild. Mr. Fairfield, it should be mentioned, was elected to fill a vacancy occasioned by the death of D. U. Sinclair. Each one of the retiring directors are eligible for re-nomination and re-election.

The system of election carried out by the Chamber of Commerce is the most democratic imaginable. First, the nominees, by secret ballot, are put in nomination, four on each ballot paper, for the office of director. The election committee, or the scrutineers count the ballots and the eight who receive the highest number of nominations are then taken as nominees. The eight names are then sent out on the final or second ballot and the names vote for four of the eight names submitted. The four

CANADIAN APPLES AT IMPERIAL FRUIT SHOW

London, Dec. 5.—Messrs. H. Lane and Son, Berwick, Nova Scotia, with a magnificent collection of Cox's pippins, were placed first, securing the gold medal in the class for sets shown at the recent Imperial Fruit Show, at the Crystal Palace. The Provincial and Fruit Growing Society of the Province of Quebec, Chateauguay Basin, were awarded the second prize for a very fine display of "Snows." Another fine display of Cox's in this class was that of Mr. Stark, of Groton, N. C., who was highly commended and received a prize for the best entry from British Columbia in the Empire section.

In the second class, that for any ordinary variety, Messrs. H. L. Morse's Sons received another award, securing the premier honour, the second and third prizes going to English competitors.

The Overseas section afforded the growers of Canada another opportunity of demonstrating the resources of their orchards, and visitors were particularly impressed by the numerous fine boxes of Fameuse Associations. There were fourteen classes for apples and this Association secured the premier gold medal award in eleven, devoted to the following varieties: Wealthy, Snow, McIntosh, Red, Golden Russet, Spy, Blenheim Orange, Jonathan Greening, Newton Pippin and Stark. The prizes were all silver medals. The competition would doubtless have been longer, but British Columbia made a large and fine showing was monopolizing the excellence of the fruit exhibited.

In the class for Cox's Orange Pippin, Robert Stark, of Creston, B. C., secured the first prize, the Berwick Company, Nova Scotia, being placed second. Stark also gained the premier award in the class for "any other variety" with an splendid specimen of the "Winter Banana," an apple which attracted considerable attention from visitors. F. A. Dykeman, of Berwick, N. S., was second with a fine collection of Gravensteins which also gained the award for the best exhibit from Nova Scotia in this section. The Occidental Fruit Company, Kelowna, B. C., was awarded the first class for the Scottsburg variety and secured the gold medal.

It was unfortunate that the exhibit of the United Fruit Companies of Nova Scotia arrived too late for the competition, but the apples were given prominence and enhanced the appearance of the Overseas display.

In addition to the excellence of the fruit, a feature of the whole Canadian exhibit that provoked favourable comment was the efficiency shown in the grading and packing of the fruit. There was, of course, regret that British Columbia was not more largely represented, but the display as obtained the high reputation of the apple growing province fully sustained the honours of former years, for which there was no place, were not equal to the apples for exhibition purposes, the majority having suffered in course of transit.

P. J. Carey, the orchard demonstrator to the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa, was one of the judges, and J. Forsyth Smith, Canadian Fruit Trades Commissioner, was in attendance at the exhibition watching the interests of growers in the Dominion. In addition to the awards entered for competition, the Ontario Government arranged a stand upon which the provinces that fruit exercise were effectively displayed.

LARGEST HOTEL IN BRITISH EMPIRE WILL BE OPENED

Ten Thousand Invitations Issued for Banquet and Dance on Dec. 20th—

Montreal, Dec. 7th.—The new Mount Royal Hotel, the largest in the British Empire, will be officially opened on December 20th. The occasion will be marked by a big banquet and dance in the new premises, for which approximately 10,000 invitations have been issued by the officials of the company. It is expected that many prominent guests will be included in the gathering, and a special programme is being drawn up for the function, full particulars of which will be given out later.

Mr. Vernon G. Cardy, a native of Galt, Ontario, who was appointed manager of the new hotel some time ago, is to have capable assistance in the administration. Two assistant managers, Mr. H. V. Shaul and Mr. Alfred C. Ray, have now been named. Mr. Shaul was for twelve years with the Plaza Hotel, New York, and Mr. Ray spent nine years with the Vanderbilt Hotel in that city. Prior to that Mr. Ray was engaged in the Condado Vanderbilt, San Juan, Porto Rico, and with the Ritz system in Europe. Two assistants to the managers have also been appointed, these being Messrs. George Morasette who was eight years with the Chateau Laurier at Ottawa, and Charles Weldon, son of Mr. W. S. Weldon, Collector of Customs in Montreal, who was for three years with the King Edward in Toronto. Other members of the staff have also been nominated and are arriving in the city daily.

The building will be completely ready for occupation on the opening date, and nurses have already been laid in some of the bedrooms. The fact that 13,000 grains of furniture are now in course of unpacking serves to indicate the enormous amount of work to be done before the opening ceremonies.

MANY REBUILTATIONS.

The hotel officials state that demands for accommodation have already exceeded all expectations, and many reservations have been pouring in for weeks past. Nine conventions have been booked up to date, two of which will be held in January. Many requests have also been received for tables on New Year's Eve, when a special programme of attractions will be provided and souvenirs given.

BAZAAR AT ST. ANDREWS

A very enjoyable and successful bazaar was held this afternoon under the auspices of the ladies of St. Andrew's Church. Home cooking, candy and fancy and useful articles were attractively displayed in the different booths, and there was a decorated Christmas tree for the children, also tea-rooms where the ladies served tea and refreshments.

BANK FAILURE EMBARRASSES THE DANISH NOBILITY

Copenhagen, Dec. 7.—Dowager Queen Alexandra, of England, and her brother Prince Valdemar, uncle of the King of Denmark, are reported to have lost large sums of money through the failure of the Landsmands Bank. Many members of the Danish nobility, as well as other people of wealth, have been victims of this financial disaster.

According to a local newspaper, Prince Valdemar has been compelled to discharge most of his servants and to close Yellow Palace, his elaborate town residence, and has accepted a friend's invitation for a year's cruise around the world on a yacht.

NEGRO HAS HYDROPHOBIA

Gave Police a Merry Chase of Five Miles

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Chatham, Ont., Dec. 7.—Alfred Baynard, a negro, was placed on a padded cell at the county jail last night, suffering from what the doctors are inclined to believe to be a form of hydrophobia. Frothing at the mouth and shrieking oaths, Baynard, naked, gave a posse of farmers a chase of five miles before he was captured. He was bound with ropes until the arrival of the police officers and brought to the county jail.

EXHAUSTED LAND BIRDS FIND HAVEN AT SEA

American land birds, blown out to sea by unfavorable winds, sought safety on the decks of the Cunard liner Scythia on her last trip from New York and stayed on board until she docked in Liverpool. When misfortune overtook the feathered travellers they were migrating, probably from the fourth Atlantic states to the warm lands bordering on the caribbean. Now many of them again are free, but in England, thousands of miles from their destination, and some who were supposed to be wise in bird lore have suspected been able to give satisfactory answers to the questions of interested passengers as to whether the birds would still endeavor to reach their winter haunts in the West Indies, or join the robins and linnets of England in their winter flight to southern France and northern Africa.

The great flock, several thousand in number, settled on the Scythia's decks when the steamer was about 400 miles from the American shore, and transformed her into a floating aviary. Wild canaries, robins, linnets, thrushes, sand pipers and finches, flattered around the decks, perched on the railing, and even penetrated the lounge and engine room. The passengers and crew cared for them, giving them warmth, food and shelter, but even so many of the smaller birds died from exhaustion. Three owls and a score of pigeons were easily captured.

Old sea travellers say they never have known birds to alight before in such large numbers on a single ship.

ONE THOUSAND COAL MINERS ON STRIKE IN ALBERTA

Have Been Ordered to Resume Work To-day, But May Disobey Instructions

Calgary, Alta., Dec. 6.—Approximately one thousand miners employed in eight coal mines in the Drumheller Valley went on strike today, alleging intimidation of a miner by officials of the Newcastle Mine.

President William Sherman, of District 18, United Mine Workers, has reserved the term to return to work tomorrow morning, and to meet to-night and see if they can arrive at a satisfactory solution. As the matter stands tonight, local mine officials are not sure whether the miners will return to work to-morrow.

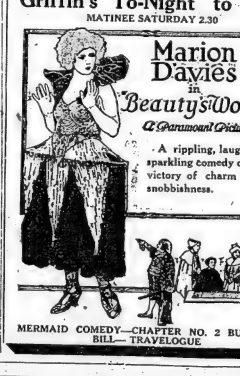

London, Dec. 7.—The presentation of British Parliament will resume Dec. 15, Prime Minister Bonar Law told the House of Commons today.

KILLING THE GOOSE

The Drury Government is thing to itself much credit for the unparalleled receipts from sales of timber and pulp limits and crown lands during the last fiscal year. The total, $4,000,000, is nearly a half million greater than in the previous year, which was the record up to that time, and is certainly impressive. Revenues from the public domain constitute one of the greatest resources of the province.

But what of the future? In the fiscal year, ending October 31, the department of land and forests disposed of 41 timber and pulpwood limits, involving an area of 600 square miles. Those who are concerned only with the present may contend that alienation of 600 miles of provincial timber area is fine business. Those who have an eye for the future will pause to consider what the outcome must be.

The Kitchener News-Record (Liberal) points the moral thus:

"The man who has worked, earned, saved and invested in his early life may, when he attains his prime, indulge in leisurely, European trips and extravagant living, but if in so doing he consumes his capital, such a course means the House of Refuge eventually. It will be for the members of the Legislature to inquire, at the present time and in no uncertain, whether or not Ontario is using up her capital in order that the Government indulge in expenditures that, it must be admitted, are already exceedingly great."

AN AGRICULTURAL TAX

The battle is to be renewed against the beet sugar excise which Hon. Mr. Fielding invented as a feature of his first budget in the King Government. It will be recalled that announcement of a tax of 45 cents per hundred pounds was greeted with sharp protest from Hamilton, Kent, Essex and Middlesex, the counties chiefly interested. Curiously enough, the delegation which soon afterward waited upon Mr. Fielding was composed of a Liberal Senator, Article McCoig, of Kent, and Dewbury of the Progressive group, B. W. Fansher, East Lambton; J. D. Drummond, West Middlesex, and R. Gilroy, of Alvinston, one of Mr. Fansher's supporters. It was declared by both producers and manufacturers that neither could absorb the new tax under existing adverse conditions in the industry. Subsequently, Mr. Fielding, in making various alterations in the budget, cut the tax in two, and deferred the date of its operation. The season has not been a very good one, however. Acreage has been reduced, and the yield has been light, even in proportion. Furthermore, the industry is interested in a co-operative company, the Peninsular, which is erecting a factory at Petrolea. Anxious about the outcome, in case the tax is persisted in, the Ontario Beet Growers, meeting in Toronto, recently now appointed a delegation to go to Ottawa again and see if Mr. Fielding, now that he is making so much money out of the sales tax, under imperfect trade conditions, will not abolish the beet sugar tax altogether. This time, the delegation is to be composed of H. J. French, of Dresden; Mr. Gilroy, and J. L. Dougherty, who is treasurer of the Peninsular Company.

Members who protested in the House against this new excise made a point of the fact that in digging up what was intended to be a new source of revenue, the finance minister had imposed a direct tax on agricultural industry.

THE BANQUET TO MR. ROBB

On Monday next, Belleville will have the honor of entertaining Mr. W. D. Robb, a man who has the interests of this city at heart, and who now occupies a very prominent position in our National Railway System. Up until a few days ago Mr. Robb occupied the position of first executive of this great system, managing the time of Mr. Robb's residence in Belleville he made many friends whom he has not forgotten, and his return to the city on Monday will be an event of a splendid importance. Whether very illustrious guests will be Sir Henry Thornton, who has, within the last week, assumed his duties at head of the National Railways. These men will have important messages to deliver to the citizens. The importance of the whole procedure cannot be overestimated. It is indeed a wonderful opportunity for the city to be brought before the attention of the new chief executive of the Canadian National.

Citizens who can, and do not, attend this function will be relinquishing an opportunity that is not often presented to them. This is a function that should advertise our city to the whole Dominion and it is

HERE AND THERE

AN ELEPHANT'S MEMORY.

A gentleman who crossed the Atlantic a few years since found himself a fellow-passenger with a large female elephant. The voyage was long and tedious. To while away the time he often visited the elephant's quarters, and at dinner filled his pockets with biscuits, which he refused from the table to carry to the sagacious quadruped, who soon learned to expect and fish among his pockets for the same. At his coming she would throw out her trunk and show signs of gratitude and pleasure.

But at length land was reached, and business care left little time for thought of his huge friend. Several years after, elephants were quartered in Central Park, New York, for the winter, and several children of the household desired to visit them. He accompanied them, and obtained permission of the keeper to go into the building, where they were kept tied to heavy posts.

As soon as he entered one elephant at once became restless, threw out her trunk, tossed her ears, stamped her feet, etc. The keeper asked, "Have you ever had anything to do with elephants?" "No," was the reply. Then his voyage was recalled. "That is it," said the keeper; "you can go to her without danger." It was the elephant that came over on the same vessel.

He went to Sicilia, as the keeper called her, and she became quiet, and expressed her pleasure. From an apple-woman near he procured fruit and filled his pockets. She remembered the old trick, and down went the trunk, as in the old days, and every one was found. The keeper said, "You can visit her any time. She will never forget you."—Belleville Canadian.

TREE REPAIRING.

An interesting bulletin entitled "Tree Repairing" has been issued by the Forestry Branch, Department of the Interior, Ottawa. It describes and illustrates the different methods of repairing trees, dealing chiefly with the filling of cavities and the bolting of trees that have split at the crotch. The bulletin gives a great deal of useful information on the subject. Tree repairing is a science in itself and nowadays, especially in the eastern section of this country and the United States, men specially trained for the work operate on trees such as dentists operate on the teeth, cleaning out the cavities and filling them with concrete or asphalt, bolting together trees that threaten to split in two, fixing up trees that have been damaged by wind, lightning, loose stock or the carelessness of man. Tree repairing has become a profession and at least one school has been established for teaching the work. Anyone who has a working knowledge of the business could acquire a good deal of information from the bulletin mentioned. It is free for the asking from the Director of Forestry, Department of the Interior, Ottawa.

A LITTLE BIT OF LOVE.

Do you know the world is sighing,
That many a heart is crying,
And even we babes are dying,
All for a little bit of love?

Do you know many are drifting
For want of a hand uplifting,
Carelessly, blindly drifting?
Oh! for a little bit of love.

Do you know, he who is striving,
On lust and gold to be thriving,
On the downward path is diving?
Is there a little bit of love?

Do you know your coins that glitter
By tomorrow may be bitter,
Then, when the cold world doth titter,
You'll need a little bit of love.

Do you know, the world, when needed,
Shall have all its cruel wrongs mended,
And the sore things transcended,
Shall be these little bits of love?

So give the lonely and erring,
Where'er they chance to be faring,
Some token of love unsparing;
Then the world shall rise with His love.

PRESS OPINIONS

LICENSE ALL MOTOR DRIVERS

(Toronto Telegram)

Sir Thomas White's letter calling attention to the more serious menace is the reminder that advancing civilization brings dangers that require new methods of treatment.

The motor, starting is as the eliminator of distance, is becoming the slaughter of human life. Every day brings its casualty list. To-day it is a stranger whose name appears; to-morrow, may be a friend; the next day a member of your own family.

The number of motors on the streets increases daily and the menace increases with growing numbers. For it is safe to assume that the ratio of fools to the number of cars will continue to hold.

The Legislatures, courts and police are looked to for protection. They, to be effective, must have public support behind them. They may not find the proper cure at first. But they should keep on experimenting. And the first move to be thoroughly tried out should be the licensing of everyone who drives a car along the city streets.

A WEEK OF IMPORTANCE

(Kingston Whig)

The present week will be one of historic importance in the annals of Great Britain, and particularly in the history of Ireland. On Thursday the newly elected parliament, with its overwhelming majority of Conservatives strongly entrenched as the government party, will meet, for one purpose only, that of approving the Irish constitution, and putting it into effect. The constitution has already been approved by the representatives of the people of Ireland who sit in the Dail Eireann, and the only remaining step is its ratification by the British parliament. As Bonar Law has already given his pledge that he would do all in his power to put it into effect, and as the Lloyd George supporters are committed to favour it, there can be only one result, and the constitution is sure to be approved and ratified exactly as the Irish people of themselves framed it. Although there are on the Tory benches a number of "die-hards" who, in their opposition to Home Rule and all against any measure of home rule or self-government being given to Ireland, these will probably remain quietly in their places and vote at the crack of the party whip, rather than imperil the existence of the new formed government.

That the British government will be ready to ratify an Irish constitution, framed and passed by the Irish leaders themselves, is a splendid tribute to the future of Ireland. It shows that the British leaders are sincere in their desire to give the people of Ireland the most possible form of government compatible wit the safety of the Empire.

SOUTH AFRICA MAY PRODUCE MUCH COTTON

Johannesburg, Dec. 7.—The cotton industry in South Africa is rapidly coming to the notice of the world, and already it is supplying a considerable quantity of the wool in cloth manufactured in England. Experts estimate that there are 1,000,000 acres of good land available in the Transvaal, Swaziland and Zululand for cotton growing which would yield annually crops worth $15,000,000 annually, and at the same time solve the unemployment problem of the country.

The possibilities of cotton growing are evidenced by the fact that in 1918 the crop totalled 12,000 pounds of lint, while in 1921 it was estimated at 2,000,000 pounds.

Practically all of the crop is being shipped to England, where it finds a ready market because of its fine texture.

WHAT MADE ME HAPPY

"I was congratulating myself that I had passed the street corner without catching a cold, when I got one at the beginning of last May. It was because I was run down. Being run down I had some trouble in getting rid of this cold. I was a nervous wreck. I would wake up regularly morning after morning with the terrible certainty would take it. Although we were comfortably off, I felt sure my husband was going to lose everything. The children worried me. If they made the least noise, I would get into a terrible temper. I would scold them as that I am sure they hated me. I would be mad with myself after it was over and make up my mind never to let it happen again. I would go to bed at night and begin to think and picture dreadful things which might happen to me and my family. I would lay awake for hours, sometimes until daylight, until I was so weak that I could scarcely lift my head. I would waken next day just as tired as when I lid down. After a while I got so that I didn't care what happened. The children annoyed me and I wouldn't have cared if they had left me for good. I felt that I was only a matter of time before I would lose my mind. I knew that my symptoms were due to a run down condition and that if I could only get something to build me up, I might be all right. I knew that there must be some good tonics but most of them made such foolish claims that I was afraid of them. Happening one day to run across a leaflet about Carnol, I was impressed with the moderate way this preparation was described, so I made up my mind I would try it. I did and today I am the happiest and healthiest woman living. I haven't a care in the world. Instead of running away from me, my children are now with me all the time. My husband tells me that my disposition is as near an angel's as any human being's can be, but of course he is prejudiced. I don't believe I have a nerve in my body now."

Carnol is sold by your druggist, and if you can conscientiously say, after you have taken it, that it hasn't done you any good, return the empty bottle to him and he will refund your money. 6-22

ENGLISH FARMERS TOLD TO EXPECT HARD TIMES

London, Dec. 5.—"Agriculture cannot be made to pay any longer in England on the lines followed in the past under present conditions," said Sir Arthur Boscawen in the last speech he made as Minister of Agriculture, while he was talking to the members of the Farmers' Union about the hard times that were inevitably in store for the majority of them. Premier Lloyd George handed in the resignation of the King and Sir Arthur automatically became an ex-Minister.

His speech, as he said, "had been contained only "cold comfort for those who had to get their livings from the land." Some farmers, he prophesied would go under, and there would be acute distress in the agricultural districts before prosperity could return.

"There may be a future for the large farmer," he said, "and live-stock farming generally may be able to pay fairly well in time, but for the arable farmers—the worst grievers—I can see only a gloomy outlook." Referring to the views of one of his predecessors in office, he added, "Albyn probably was right in thinking that much arable land will be sown grass; that is the natural process

According to his own survey of the state of agriculture, its future seemed to lie in large farms in favorable districts, cultivated as cheaply as possible, with patches of intensively cultivated land.

"What can the government do?" he asked, "Here are only two remedies—protection or subsidies."

The farmers showed plainly which of the two remedies they preferred by cheering loudly the mention of "protection," and greeting "subsidies" with murmurs eerie of disfavor. But Sir Arthur would not allow the poor farmers to comfort themselves with any false hopes.

"It would be dishonest to suggest," he declared "that at the present time higher remedy is practical. The agricultural interests have a comparatively small representation in the House of Commons, which is permanently urban in character. The Government may adopt some palliatives, but it will insist that agriculture must work out its own salvation on an economic basis."

MINT PASTE FOR CHRISTMAS CANDY

(By Mrs. Aylmer Macpherson.)

Two cups sugar, 2 tablespoons lemon juice, 1½ envelopes granulated gelatine (green coloring), 4 tablespoons creme de menthe, few grains salt. Soak gelatine in two-thirds cup of cold water for 10 minutes. Put sugar and two-thirds cup of water in saucepan, bring to the boiling point and let boil 20 minutes. Remove from the fire, add other ingredients and color green. Turn into a pan (first rinsed in cold water) to one inch in thickness. When set remove to a board, cut in cubes, and roll in powdered sugar. These are delicious for "after-dinner" candy at Christmas time.

KEEPING HOUSE WITHOUT SERVANTS

Mrs. Nestyred of 1922 is learning to scrub her own floors, wash the dishes, cook the meals and keep her home spotless without the assistance of servants.

She is not doing it because she likes it—necessarily—but simply because she has emptied her pocketbook paying for vain advertisements for a maid.

The would-be domestic's position is one of the happiest. Prospective employers are prepared to give her almost everything up to piano lessons if she will consent to be a simple menial. All manner of alluring promises are made and the cunning which the domestic receives recalls vividly the position of an apartment hunter when he is being interviewed by the owner.

A daily scan of the advertising columns of local newspapers under the heading "Female Help Wanted" indicates that no less than seventy-five per cent. of the advertisements are for domestics. The keenness of the competition to secure help is illustrated by the inducements which are listed.

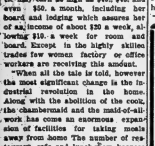

For instance one reads:—
All washing given out;
High wages.
Every night out.
Two afternoons weekly off.
No children in family.
No cooking.
Many other servants kept.
Good home.

What They Earn.

The scale of wages being offered generally is well above that paid to girls employed in factories and even in offices. A really first-class domestic may earn as high as $40, $45, and even $50, a month, including her board and lodging which assumes value of an income of about $20 a week, allowing $10 a week for room and board. Except in the highly skilled trades few women factory or office workers are receiving this amount.

"When all the talk is told, however the most significant change is the industrial revolution in the home. Along with the abolition of the cook, the chambermaid and the maid-of-all-work has come an enormous expansion of facilities for taking meals away from home. The number of restaurant, cafe and lunch-room keepers has gone up nearly 45 per cent. in the last five years. It is evident that the family which has discharged Mary Ann and bought an electric toaster goes out for its dinners quite frequently.

"An age is dead: An age is born. The shadow moves on the dial. Of all the new things given us the world by the United States, the well-to-do Servantless house holds perhaps the biggest significance."

THE TRYANNY OF THE MODERN CHILD

"Look at me."

The children of the present day demand the whole attention not only of their mothers and nurses, but also of any unlucky visitor who happens to be in the house.

One very cold day I was having a fireside chat with an old friend when the little daughter bounced into the room and asked, or rather ordered, us to come out in the garden and watch her swing. With a faint murmur of protest her mother rose and asked me, apologetically, if I would mind coming too. With an insincere "Oh, delighted, of course!" I followed Mary and her daughter into the damp and chilly garden, and there we stood over half an hour, watching Mary swing!

This perpetual cry of "Look at me" is most trying when you visit a friend with whom you have plenty to discuss. Any child is annoying for a short time, but to watch the self-conscious antics of a modern child when you are burning to talk with someone is a little annoying, to put it mildly!

It appears nowadays that it is humorous to let small children have their own way and manage their mothers and their mothers' friends. Remarks such as "Now we'll play what I want, or else I shall scream" are now met with peals of laughter, and are considered really funny. The child who contradicts her mother, criticises the food at a tea-party, manages and plans the stables for her own pleasure, is the object of as keen interest as the child who, by refusing her own mind, having a strong personality.

There are more "bossy" girls than boys or else it is that boys, being less self-conscious, do not show it so often, and merely carry out their own desires unobtrusively. Whatever may be the reason, it is the small girl nowadays who is most objectionable in demanding our constant attention.

Perhaps it is that Eve, even at the tender age of four, realises she must make the most of her charms if she is to secure her ends. Therefore she seeks by attracting the attention of all and sundry, hoping to find some appreciation, and even if she fails to find appreciation she can at least toddle off to bed happy in the knowledge that—at any rate—she has "created a stir!"

Acids In Stomach Make Food Sour

CAUSE INDIGESTION

"Experience has taught me that most people who complain of stomach trouble and indigestion, gases stomachache that are perfectly healthy and normal," says a well known authority. The real trouble, which causes all the sourness, gas and pain, is excessive acid in the stomach. This acid irritates the delicate stomach lining, sours and ferments the food before the point of digestion is reached. Artificial digestents are not needed in such cases. They give only temporary relief, do not correct the cause and often set up a habit. A better plan, if you suffer after eating, is to drink a glass of hot Magnesia water made from 4 teaspoonfuls or four tablets of pure Bisurated Magnesia which can be obtained from any reliable druggist. This quickly neutralizes the acid, sweetens the stomach and your meal digests naturally without pain. Try this for a few weeks and see if your stomach does not feel one hundred per cent. better.

LINKED LIVES

By

D. Kinmount Roy

The elder of the two men was evidently a clergyman, although for the present he is concealed by "Burnett" from his name and wore a sort of clerical undress uniform. He had a firm, easy seat in the "Middle, and looked like a man who had followed hounds in his day and to whom a cross-country gallop would be a pleasant exercise. His companion was comparatively young, the captain of a crack cavalry regiment,' hardened by foreign service and by active outfrough. All these small items filtered out through their servants, and were very fairly discussed about the stables.

The Reverend Frederick Barrington was innocent of any intention to mislead or to conceal the clerical character he had been shorn of with our armies, and had ministered to dying men under the stars and spoiled drifting snows, and had learned in that rough school how little external respect what men were face to face with supreme issues.

But the times were full of peril, spies were plentiful, and England's danger lay in her colours and attempting concealment of his type character for a purpose.

"I like a parson," said one of the men in the stables as he rubbed down the horses; "I likes a parson as is a parson, as has coat tails, as you can tell he is a parson: that's what I likes!"

"By St. Patrick!" said his companion, "your loiks and don't loiks are like Dinnis O'Connor's grand relations, two hundred and one, and all alive and kicking! Ough and sure, divil a bit do I care for coat tails, one way or the other! Riverence or no riverence, he's a rale gintilman, and has a fine seat in the saddle and can ride to hounds, or Mick Mollorey is mistaken intirely!"

"Well then," snapped one of Mick's companions, with a Saxon's fine contempt for things Irish, "finer birds than he have been strung at Tyburn—and serve them right, say I!"

Ye 'nation'l screamed Mick in a passion, rushing at the Englishman without a moment's warning; 'ye murderin' villain! Ye' come here with a cloak of hypocrisy to swear away the life of an indicent gintilman!'

Walter was more amused at the storm he had raised than resentful of Mick's onslaught, and being an excellent boxer the science of force came naturally to him at the moment, while poor Mick danced about him, his arms working like a windmill and his tongue wagging time in his native Erse. It was too much for the Englishman's scene of humour, and in spite of himself he gave way to a burst of laughter, in which Mick at length, puzzled and shamefaced, had to join perforce.

Just then Kinkman, who had picked up a horse somewhere, rode into the yard, and Mick's attention was diverted to business. Kinkman dismounted awkwardly; he was evidently no horseman, and Mick was at once conflicted against him; moreover, he insisted on carrying his saddle-bags into the house himself, which excited suspicions and suspicions in the minds of both men; soon their late quarrel was forgotten in their joint interest in the newcomer.

Kinkman, having disposed of his property to his liking, entered the dining-room where Frederick Barrington and Captain Marchmont were already seated at table. It was early spring, as we know, and the evenings and mornings were still chilly; and 'logs blazed upon the hearths at either end of the spacious apartment. The candles were also lighted and, though numerous, made little impression on the darkness, and but for the cheery glow of the fires the room would have been in semi-darkness, as indeed it was according to our modern notions.

Barrington and Marchmont took no notice of the newcomer, who was placed some distance from them, and they continued their conversation as though they were alone.

'I am sorry for the young Glenmore,' the captain was saying; 'we are all sorry for him: he is the best fellow in the world, and the bravest man alive.'

'That is saying much,' remarked Barrington, smiling and looking at his companion.

'Yes, it is saying something; but it is quite true: there are many brave men, but Glenmore is superbly brave, and so is not for the need of constant service, he might become morose to some degree; but he is a soldier every inch of him, and could be give his whole attention to the profession of arms he would undoubtedly rise to distinction. Wellington has noticed him more than once, and if there is a brilliant piece of work on hand you may be sure Glenmore is in it.'

'Who has the old place now?' Barrington asked.

'One Hardcastle,' •

'Hardcastle, Hardcastle,' Barrington mused. 'I am sorry looking out for with the name—they was a man of that name in the north, when I was a good deal younger than I am to-day' and he smiled pleasantly at his confession; 'it cannot well be the same: the fellow I mean was not exactly a man of low origin, but he had low instincts; he was considered cunning, underhand and greedy of gain, always looking out for himself, and singularly lacking in generous impulses. My mother had a horror of him, and my father—well, you know my father was strong in his dislikes, and he always said such men should be hanged in advance, to prevent them doing mischief.'

A SAFETY POEM

He started for his work,
Whistling, blithe and gay,
And he was full determined
To do his bit that day.
And on his lips he felt his Wife's and babe's warm kiss,
And he looked so straight and tall
Before the day was over
He got careless in his ways,
He should have known lots better,
He, you know, it never pays,
And now he never feels
The thrills of joy or bliss,
For he has spent his life
And his family never knows
One-half the joys of living,
For each one has to hustle
To make what he'd been giving
With father helpless as he is,
His earnings now they miss,
And every day they file to work—
So you must be very careful,
And start each morning right,
And give carelessness, your enemy
The hardest kind of fight.
So pay good heed to Safety Hints,
So never a point you you miss,
Or you will have a monument—

TOM MISSES AN ADVENTURE

Just as though in answer to his wish a young man came around the hedge. "Gee, here's a peach of a specimen," he cried. "Here, kitty, kitty, kitty."

Tom merely looked bored and sleepy. He was too fat to get much excited when people called "kitty." The young man stole softly up to Tom and petted him. "Nice kitty," he said. "Pretty kitty."

Tom rubbed against him affectionately. Now this was something like it! He wanted to be petted and talked to. He liked this young man.

Suddenly the young man grabbed Tom up in his arms and tore down the street with him. At the corner he came to a machine. Dumping Tom in the back seat he quickly climbed in beside the driver, and in a minute they were tearing down the street.

Tom had never been so thrilled in his life. He discovered several other cats in the machine with him. They were all scared, but Tom was not the least bit. He hadn't had so much fun since he had lived with Old Miss Brown. This was excitement, indeed! He drew himself up on the seat and prepared to enjoy himself.

Suddenly the machine tore around the corner and there was a terrific bump. Tom was bounced right out of the car. Of course he lit on his feet, so he wasn't hurt, but oh, how disappointed he was. The car never stopped. Tom called and called and ran down the road after the car, but they never stopped him. Gone everything with disappointment, he turned and slowly walked back to old Miss Brown's. There wasn't anything else to do.

When the machine drew up in front of the Biology laboratory the young man started unloading the cats. "Why, the very best one of all got away," cried Tom's friend. I ought to have chloroformed him as soon as I got him."

NEW STADIUM FOR TORONTO

Will be on City Side and Will Seat 25,000—Pro. Ball and Rugby Will be Played There

It seems to be almost certain in Toronto, that there will be a new ball park on the city side shortly. President Lawrence Solman, of the Toronto Club, has been negotiating with the Harbor Commissioners ever since last July for a site on the new land at the foot of York Street. This the Commissioners have refused to rent to the Toronto Club, but at a meeting yesterday it was practically decided to let the Toronto Ball Club have a site between Bathurst and Spadina Avenue on the lake front, on the new reclaimed land. No agreement has yet been signed, but arrangements have been agreed upon.

Buildings built on the Harbor Commission land must meet with the approval of that Board. With this in mind, Chief Engineer, Cousins, of the Harbor Commission, who goes to New York this week, will look over the new Yankee ball park and thresh out an idea of just how much land will be required by the Toronto Ball Club for playing field, stands and parking space. The stand will be built to accommodate a rugby crowd as well as it is planned to play rugby games at the new stadium. It is planned to build a stand to seat 25,000.

WALLACE CONFIDENT.

Taylor had this to say regarding the great form shown by his debonair, diminutive "find" in his recent bout with Pancho Villa, and evidently he means figure that a boxer from Hamilton, in the finish, will have much of a chance with a boy capable of entertaining a world's championship. Mr. Taylor may have did. different notions about 10.30 tomorrow night.

ICE MAKING AT THE RINK

Skating by Saturday if Wintry Weather Continues

If the wintry weather of the past two days continues, the young folks of Belleville will be able to have their first skate on the rink here by Saturday next. At least that was the opinion of Coach Jack Marks, of the Junior and Intermediate hockey squads here, when seen this morning. Incidentally, Jack expects to have his hockey players on the steel runners for the first time this season on Monday evening next.

First operations of ice making were commenced Wednesday morning, which proved to be an ideal day for ice manufacture. Two carpenters are busily engaged erecting additional seating room in the rink. The two dressing rooms are being torn down, and seats will replace them. A band stand will be erected at the far end of the rink and the new dressing room will be erected underneath the stair.

MEDALS FOR QUEEN'S PLAYERS

At a regular meeting of the city council of Kingston held this week, Ald. Angrove moved, seconded by Ald. O'Connor, that the Finance Committee be requested to furnish sufficient funds to provide for the purchase of suitable tokens for the members of Queen's rugby team, in recognition of their winning the Intercollegiate title, and the Dominion championship. Ald. Angrove felt that the team had done much for Kingston, and it was but fitting that they should be recognized.

The motion was unanimously carried, and Ald. Graham stated that as Queen's won their title during Mayor Corbett's term of office, he should present the tokens. This was agreed upon, and the presentations will be made as soon as possible.

Mrs. Bruce Taylor is entertaining at a dance on Friday evening in honor of the Queen's football team.

SIKI ADVISED TO GO HOME

Carpentier Denies "Frame Up" Story and Displays Damaged Knuckles to Strengthen Statements

Paris, Dec. 6.—Georges Carpentier in newspaper interviews today added his protestations to those of Francois Descamps, his manager, to the assertion of Battling Siki that the boxers' recent meeting was to have been framed.

Carpentier's chief argument in his efforts to discredit the statements of the Senegalese is to show his badly damaged knuckles and to exhibit X-Ray photographs of his hands, taken after the fight which show that all the metacarpal bones were broken.

"Does that look like a fake fight?" queried Carpentier. He also asked whether it was likely that he would prearrange a frame-up for a bout he was so sure of winning that he actually lost it by overconfidence. The former champion asserted that since his defeat his one ambition has been to meet Siki again and re-establish his reputation.

PLEASANT WORDS.

An interesting scene in the latest sporting drama was enacted in the office of the newspaper L'Auto last evening when Siki and his former manager, Mr. Hellers, meeting by accident, had a heated passage of words over the charges, the truth of which Hellers denies. The argument, which took place in the presence of the astounded newspaper staff, ended where it began.

Siki told L'Auto that he had been received yesterday afternoon at the Ministery of the Colonies by an official who recommended to him that he return to Senegal. Siki did not say if he intended to follow this advice, confining himself to declaring that he planned to abandon boxing and take up some other occupation.

CAN THE OUTFIT.

New York, Dec. 6.—Georges Carpentier and Battling Siki and their managers, Francois Descamps and M. Hellers, will be barred permanently from boxing in this state if the charges of alleged collusion in their recent bout in Europe are sustained, Chairman Muldoon of the State Athletic Commission declared today. Siki is now under suspension here through an agreement with the French Boxing Federation.

AURA LEE BLANK PARKDALE CANOE CLUB

Aura Lee eliminated Parkdale Canoe Club from the S.P.A. series last night, defeating the Westend Paddlers in 6 and outplaying their opponents by about that margin. It was just a fair exhibition of hockey, due partly to the none too good condition of the players and partly to the fact that it was really the first time either team had played together. Murray Rutherford and Eldie Redden, of Aura Lee, were the only two players with senior experience this year in the game, and incidentally they were the only members of last season's Aura Lee team to line up with the Avenue Road club. And they were the stars of the game.

WILL TORONTO HAVE MAJOR LEAGUE TEAM?

President Ban Johnson of American League Designates Rumor as "Pure Bunk"

Chicago, Dec. 6.—News of the proposed option of a Toronto syndicate to take over the Boston American League Baseball Club and to transfer the team to that city was received with surprise at the American League offices here. It was said that nothing was known of this proposition, President Johnson, of the League, is at Excelsior Springs, Mo., and it was impossible to confirm the report that he has given his approval to the move.

In baseball circles here it was said that Frank Chance, former manager of the Chicago Nationals, and his friend, Barney Oldfield, the automobile racer, were on their way here from the coast, and may be coming to confer with Mr. Johnson regarding the Boston Club.

Ban Johnson, president of the American League here, today characterized as "pure bunk" a report that a Toronto syndicate had obtained an option on the franchise of the Boston American League club.

Mr. Ban Johnson said he received a telegram several months ago from a Toronto man, unknown to him, inquiring whether some major league club could be purchased for Toronto.

The American League President replied such a purchase was very improbable since the deal would have first to be approved by the presidents of all sixteen clubs in the American and National Leagues.

"GUNNER" ARNOTT OUT WITH PRESTON

Preston, Dec. 6.—Hockey players worked out at Hamilton Arena this afternoon and the players took to the ice the same as a duck does to water. It was the first time of the season that the players donned their skates, but an hour workout did not seem too strenuous and the boys travelled at a fast clip throughout.

The team will return to Hamilton again the forepart of next week and by the middle of next week there will be ice at the local arena. The players motored to and from Hamilton. Those who made the trip are: Rodgers, Skelley, Schiegel, Clarke, Arnott, Fischer, Enger, Krauss and Woolley. Several of the other players were unable to make the trip.

ST. PAT'S WIN AGAIN

Teams:

MUSIC and DRAMA

MORRISON DAVIES HAS CHARMING STORY IN "BEAUTY'S WORTH"

Music sprightly than in "Kachan Queen," more entrancingly beautiful than in "The Bride's Play" is Marie Davies in her newest Paramount picture, "Beauty's Worth," which is the feature attraction at Griffin's tonight and Saturday, matinee daily.

"Beauty's Worth" which was directed by Robert G. Vignola, delightfully pictures the transition of a quiet and shy little Quakeress, into a supremely gowned and much sought after society belle. Miss Davies, the role of the Quakeress, proves that she can be as lovely in severe and attractive garb as in the latest creations of Paris and New York.

The change wrought in Prudence Cole (Miss Davies) is the work of the handiwork of a famous artist, Cheyre Kerrin (Forrest Stanley), who, it appears in the girl a rare beauty, of which others, and especially the young man whom she loves, have no idea. He astounds the guests at fashionable hotel by presenting Prudence in a charade performance that is as artistic and exotic as anything ever seen on stage or screen.

Besides Mr. Stanley (those who support the star are, Jane Elridge, Truly Shattuck, Lydia Yeamens Titus, Helen Cooley, Antrim Short, Thomas Jefferson, Martha Mattox, Allen Manning and John and Gordon Dobley, a cast that is about as good as could be assembled. The story which was written by Sophie Kerr, appeared in The Saturday Evening Post.

"For Lando's Sakes" a two-reel Mermaid comedy, a Travelogue, an Chapter Two of the thrilling Westerplay, "Buffalo Bill" starring Al Record, are announced for exhibition on the same program.

"HUMAN HEARTS" STAGE HIT OF DECADE AT REGEN

"Beneath the spreading chestnut tree
The village smithy stands,
The smith a mighty man is he,
With large and sinewy hands——"

Longfellow thus immortalized the man of the anvil in verses that will ring in school rafters as long as there are school's and graduating exercises.

A decade or so ago Hal Reid, playwright and publicist, made out a hero of the village blacksmith by writing a stirring drama around just such a man. That play was "Human Hearts," which achieved immediate popularity and was one of the well known melodramas of its time, one existing even "Way Down East," "Last Lynne," and other such have-lives.

Now Universal has made a screen hero of the blacksmith in a feature adaptation of Hal Reid's play. Henry Peters, one of the most rugged characters of the screen, was selected to play the leading role. Advance reports indicate he has made the anvil a mighty man indeed. The story covering the wholesome romance and the dramatic climaxes in the life of a Tom Logan, small town blacksmith. It is said to be filled with thrills, love interest and gripping suspense.

"Human Hearts" is the feature attraction at the Regen tonight to Saturday, matinee daily.

King Baggot, director of the picture, had planned the role of Tom Logan in stock many times, and he has always declared the play his favorite heroes, he has given it the best of his care in the selection of the cast. Among the favorites chosen for important roles are Russell Simpson, Gertrude Claire, George Hackathorn, George W. Wist, Henrietta Haynes, Ramsey Wallace, Mary Philbin, Hoot Gibson, Kate and Sidie Edwards.

Sidie Edwards will be recalled by many of the older generation as one of the foremost comedians on the stage. His antics always kept a theatre in an uproar, and he keeps up his record in this production.

A two-reel Century comedy and other selected plays are being exhibited on the same program. Regular prices will prevail during the engagement.

WHAT OF MEXICO AFTER 2 YEARS OF OBREGON?

Mexico City, Dec. 7.—A military situation that is decidedly better; an economic situation that is without doubt worse, and an international situation that is in status quo. These are the terms used by impartial observers here to describe conditions in Mexico as they were on December 1 when President Obregon completed the second year of his administration.

Combined optimism and pessimism are expressed by persons who, during the past 24 months, have watched General Alvaro Obregon, the revolutionary successor of President Carranza, unfold his program of national reconstruction which, according to him and his adherents, is to lift Mexico from factionism and revolution to a place of dignity and credit among the nations of the world.

It cannot be denied that Mexico today is more at peace than at any time during the past decade. Rebel leaders of importance have either faced the firing squad or have died in battle. General Francisco Murguia, the most pretentious rebel, was executed last October following his capture at Tepehuanes, Durango, by federal forces. His death was closely followed by that of General Juan Carrasco, who for many months had terrorized the west coast of Mexico and in the state of Sinaloa. The elimination of these two revolutionists had a salutary effect upon the lesser rebel chiefs who, according to war office statements, have made requests for amnesty in large numbers. Each case is being decided upon its individual merits.

Mexico as yet is not wholly at peace. Every state harbors its disgruntled elements which at times adopt harrassing tactics, such as burning bridges, blowing up trains and pillaging haciendas. Maria Ferrer heads one of these guerrilla forces in Guerrero, Nicasio Aleman and others are heard from frequently in Veracruz; Pueblo, Jalisco, Hidalgo, Michoacan and Guerrero each has its well known malcontents. The northern tier of states—Tamaulipas, Coahuila and Chihuahua—are reports outbreaks, but these are said by federal authorities to be inspired by rebels operating from the United States side of the international boundary. Among those cited as the chief conspirators are Gonzalez Aguilar, Pablo Gonzales, Esteban Canto and Manuel Pelaez. All these are known, from time to time to have had the past few months have disclaimed any intention to start trouble in Mexico.

The army has been reduced to approximately 50,000 men, and the war office budget for 1923 shows a material reduction from that for 1922. Trains are running everywhere and the highways are being opened. These facts are pointed to by friends of President Obregon as substantial proof of the assertion that the era of nation-wide peace is near at hand.

Economically, Mexico is in not so good condition as it was a year ago. The absence of United States recognition has withheld the anticipated influx of foreign capital, and business idles a virtual standstill. Money is tight and banks are loaning only on gilt-edged security. The general economic situation in Mexico has shown no improvement during the month of October, and conditions are somewhat worse," says a report to the United States department of commerce by John P. Bullock, acting trade commissioner in Mexico, covering the current month. "This situation is due to the gradual decrease in the purchasing power of the population and the low state of general production. Up to the end of October the national congress and failed to pass any legislation which would have a remedial effect on existing economic conditions. This, with the exception of certain labor laws by several of the states, is causing some apprehension. The agrarian policy of the administration continues to be unsettled, though mild up, there is a general lack of confidence in commercial circles that is reflected in decreased sales and production.

The most optimistic note in the economic situation arises from the agreement reached last June in New York between Secretary de la Huerta and representative of the foreign creditors. The treasury department says that the 12,000,000 pesos necessary for the initial payment on account due January 2, is now on deposit and that the remainder of the 25,000,000 pesos to be paid in that year will be available on the prescribed dates. If Mexico meets these payments promptly, financial circles admit that business stability will be greatly increased.

The past year has seen no forward steps taken toward recognition of Mexico by the United States, Great Britain or France. In fact, the decided which has existed ever since Secretary Hughes made his famous demand that American, rights in Mexico be secured by treaty, has merely been intensified. President Obregon and the foreign office have reiterated that no sign such a treaty would stultify President Obregon has a congress, elected last September, that is distinctly favorable to him in the lower house and not openly antagonistic in the senate. The chamber of deputies ratified without dissenting vote the plan which the chief executive either has submitted or plans to submit. Among these are a regulation of Articles 27, 123, in the form of the agreement in international law, and an amendment to Article 127 dealing with labor, and numerous other measures concerned with domestic reconstruction.

Despite rumors of disagreement and personal jealousies, the "Big Three" still continue to direct the main the destinies of the republic. President Obregon, Secretary of Interior Calles and Secretary of the Treasury de la Huerta have maintained throughout the past two years the same co-operation and cohesion that swept Carranza from power, aroused de la Huerta's presidential ambitions and eventually seated Obregon at the head of government. The cabinet changes, however, has not remained intact. General Antonio Villarreal resigned from the agriculture portfolio and that department is now headed by Ramon de Negri, subsecretary. General Francisco Serrano is secretary of war, succeeding General Enrique Estrada, and Miguel Alessio Robles replaced Rafael Zubaran Capmany, resigned. General Amaro Aguirre is at the head of the department of communications, succeeding, at different times, to a number of speculators. Labor unions have enlarged their sphere greatly during the past year, and strikes have been frequent.

What, then, of Mexico at the end of two years of Obregon? His friends point to the general peaceful situation, to the lack of hostile agitation and to the reduction of the army as the substantial accomplishments of the administration. His critics declare that the present peace is merely on the surface, and that all that is needed is a rebel leader of sufficient importance to cast the nation once more into internal warfare. Business conditions cannot exist much longer as they are at present, they assert, and they are gloomy in their predictions for the future.

Meanwhile General Obregon, ex-fogfer excellent health after several months of illness, betrays no anxiety and apparently is confident, to use his words in addressing congress recently, that "the situation generally of the nation indicates clearly that it is developing normally along the road to prosperity in accordance with its political and social principles established by the Constitution of 1917, provided an impregnable safeguard for the dignity and autonomy of the republic."

Twenty-six nations have now recognized the Obregon regime, including Germany, China, Japan, Italy, Holland, Sweden and virtually all of the South and Central American countries.

The ladies of St. Andrew's Guild hold their annual Xmas sale of fancy work and home-made cooking in the church parlors yesterday afternoon. A very favorable report of the gathering present and of the sales had been given.

Mr. Eben James and C. R. Wright of the Canadian Dyes, Ltd., are in Montreal this week. Mr. Wright stopped off at Kingston on Tuesday where he lectured to some students of Queen's University on the subject of dyes and dye products. He later joined Mr. James in Montreal, where they are receiving large orders for their various dyes.

Mr. Randall Bonter was taken ill some days ago and is lying in a serious condition at the home of his son, H. R. Bonter, Lone Ave. The latest report is that his condition is unchanged.

THE STAMP TAX ON RECEIPTS EFFECTIVE JAN. 1ST

The King Government Will Compel All People Doing Business in Canada to Stamp Every Acknowledgement in Writing of Payment of Sums of $10.00 and Upwards—Disagreeable Tax of Two Cents on all Such Receipts

Ottawa, Dec. 7th—It has been recently brought to the attention of citizens in general that the new King Government stamp tax on receipts, is to come into effect on Jan. 1st next. This is one of the most unpopular of the many unpopular new taxes imposed by the Government's legislation after the Fielding Budget was brought down last May. The tax is a two cent stamp on all receipts given in acknowledgement of payment of sums of ten dollars and upwards. The tax is not a graduated one like the new tax on cheques. While in the case of receipts a two cent stamp is to be affixed to each instrument regardless of the amount involved.

Preparations are being made for the collection and the collection of the revenue from that source. According to the statute, the only receipts exempted from taxation are those given by the Dominion and Provincial Governments and those which, like vouchers, already are taxable under another section of the Revenue Act. Receipts given by way of stipulation in acknowledgment of payment of local taxes, those given by corporations pertaining to shares, and those by individuals, apparently, would all be subject to the tax. The working out of the regulations governing the operation of this feature of the taxation legislation, however, involves the settlement of some nice questions and is not yet completed.

The tax on receipts, like the heavy increase in the sale of and the consumption on cheques, serves to measure the futility or insincerity of Liberal pre-election promises to lighten the burden of taxation. However, there is one consolation, the receipt tax, like that on cheques is payable in stamps. It may therefore, like the taxes on cheques, give Hon. Charles Murphy, the post-master-General, another opportunity to rejoice over the increased revenue his department is collecting from the public.

TURKS ASK FOR GUARANTEES

Have a Long List of Requests to Make Regarding the Straits

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Lausanne, Dec. 8.—In presenting the counter suggestions concerning the control of the Straits of the Dardanelles and the Bosphorus to the Near East Conference today the Turks ask guarantees against surprise attacks from land or sea, which attacks might threaten the security of the Straits, limitation of naval forces bound for the Black Sea, so that they will not constitute a danger to the same, sending between the two straits to the Black Sea, interdiction upon the maintenance of the warships in the Black Sea and the liberty of passage for merchant men in time of peace and for war.

Y.M.C.A. SHOW AGAIN PLEASES

Larger Crowd Than on Opening Night—Final Presentation This Evening

At the Y.M.C.A. last evening, the High School Girls' Gymnasium display, and the various dances were repeated before a larger audience than they were greeted with on the opening night, although the crowd at the opening night was a record. The people are being told about the good show which the girls are presenting and this, the best form of advertising is largely responsible for the big crowds. It is expected that they will pack them in tonight, as this will be their final appearance, and will be the last opportunity of seeing some thing worth while.

The gymnastic stunts, drills, and dances were excellently executed, and reflect much credit upon the young ones. Miss Merry and Mr. Charlie Keeler, their instructors.

Harold Woodley, Charlie Keeler and "Cesso" Facey, the "Woman in the Case," introduces all sorts of circus stunts, and kick into everything as they are the three clowns. The girls supply the classical end of the bill.

"The two vaudeville "clown" skits are funny. One might be termed the, "Philip Whey," as the results attach the name as the proverbial "Niagara Falls through the cook stove business." The other is the restaurant scene where the "dumb waiter blows up."

"The Spirit of Springtime," was cleverly murdered by four cave men in native costume, with whole pieces pantomime by "Cwiz" Woodley.

Same show tonight.

Sills' Orchestra supplied the music for the dancing. A dainty lunch was served.

FOUR IRISH REPUBLICANS EXECUTED BY FREE STATE

Were Shot This Morning in Reprisal for the Shooting Yesterday of Senator Hales—New Government Functions Quickly and in Drastic Manner

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Dublin, Dec. 8.—Rory O'Connor, Liam Mellowes, Joseph McKelvey and Richard Barrett were executed this morning at Mount Joy prison as reprisal for the killing of Sean Hales. he deputy shot yesterday, and as a solemn warning to those associated with them in a "conspiracy of assassination against" representatives of the Irish people," according to an official army announcement here today.

It is intimated that the Irish Free State Government is determined to put an end to all armed rebellion as quickly as possible and has decided on most drastic measures to that end. Rory O'Connor and Liam Mellowes were the leaders of the band of insurgents that held the Four Courts Building in the stand against the Free State troops last June and were taken prisoners when the building was captured after a three-day seige.

Irish Rebels Hung, Not Shot

Dublin, Dec. 8th, 3 p.m.—The prisoners were tried by military court martial during the night and were found guilty and sentenced to death. The sentences were carried out at nine-thirty this morning. Three priests were present. They were marched blindfolded to the place of execution. O'Connor had to be assisted to the scaffold.

IRISH REPUBLICANS MAKE WILD THREAT

London, Dec. 8.—The Irish republican, says despatch to the Evening Standard, have issued a manifesto describing Timothy Healy, Governor General of the Free State as a life long enemy of Ireland and adds, "The fight will go on as long as there is a man in Ireland, it is war to death."

APPROVED ROAD IS DISCUSSED

Members of County Council Consider the County is Not Getting Its Full Government Appropriation

The County Council met at 2 o'clock Thursday afternoon, Warden Kelly presiding.

Reports.

Mr. Richardson presented a report from the Provincial-County Highway Committee.

The appropriation of money which the Council made for the Provincial-County highway system has been expended under the supervision of the superintendent and his assistant. This work has been inspected and found satisfactory.

The balance of the various roads are as follows:

	Constructed	Re-surfaced
Gravel	2	10.2
Macadam	5.3
Crushed Stone		11.4
Graded	2.5

Bridges built, 2; culverts, 39.

The total amount spent was $50,886.69. The percentage due on this from the Department is about $30,172.05.

This system of roads shows great improvement. The superintendent and his assistants are to be commended for the manner in which they carried out the instructions of the committee. At the suggestion of the Departmental engineer, it would be considered advisable to have the right of way on this system widened out to the proper width.

The very favorable weather has kept the roads in good condition for the coming winter.

Road Machinery.

Mr. Burns presented a report relative to the purchasing of machinery during the past season.

Road machinery purchased in this present year cost $5,150.00, repairs and equipment being $3,207.05, making a total cost of $8,358.65. There was a credit of $490.00, leaving a net expenditure for 1922 of $7,954.65.

Expenditures in 1921 were $35,912.39, said Chairman Burns of the Purchasing Committee.

Mr. Ashart, Reeve of Marmora village, presented a comprehensive report relative to his attending a convention at Toronto called by the Hon. Minister of Education, to consider matters appertaining to education in general, and especially secondary education.

Approved Roads.

Considerable discussion took place in regard to a matter raised by Mr. Walsh, Reeve of Tyendinaga, relative to the County of Hastings not getting the Government grant on certain approved roads in the county. His contention was that the Government grant covered only a few thousand dollars.

Mr. Wiggins said the roads were marked as approved on a map furnished the county by the Department of Highways.

Mr. Clare—The Minister said the roads had never been approved.

Mr. Sills—There is a by-law making the roads approved roads and we will get our 40 per cent; from the Government. The Department has been fair with this county. We need not have lost any money if the roads had been approved roads. We should, however, pass no such by-laws until we have the approval of the Department. He could not blame the Department in this matter.

Ways and Means Committee report, Mr. S. B. Rollins in the chair.

WORLD LEAGUE AGAINST LIQUOR

Delegates From Foreign Countries Address Small Audience on World-Wide Prohibition

Some sixty or seventy local citizens congregated at the City Hall last night, the occasion of the visit of the delegates to the World's Conference in the campaign known as The World League Against Alcohol

The following were present. They were: Rev. T. M. Harwood of New Mexico, Rev. William Stewart, M.A., Editor of Press; Mr. Wilbur Crafts, Alfred Horsfell of Australia; Monsieur Gustav Cauvin, Newspaper publisher Paris; Dr. Ferdinand, Sec. General of Ethonia; Rev. Franklin Albrecht, Methodist minister from Spain; Mr. W. Lee, of the Dominion Alliance; and Mr. George Jeanden of Belleville was the chairman of the meeting.

The delegates were welcomed to the city by His Worship Mayor C. C. Hanna. After the meeting, a vote of thanks was extended to the delegates by Hon Thomas Deyell, K.C., and seconded by Mr. George Woodley.

The delegate from France and from there could not speak the English language, and spoke through interpreters. Rev. Mr. Harwood acted as interpreter for the Spanish delegate, and the representative from Switzerland translated the speech of Swedenman.

Rev. Franklin Albrecha, in a short speech explained that the Government of his country formerly had plenties of Ireland to buy Spanish wine, as an example of the drastic steps that the country had taken as a result of the drinking of liquor, not only individuals, but families and the state as a result of being directly effected as a result.

The delegate from Switzerland stated that his country formerly had exceptionally poisonous, and that in almost every home this deadly beverage was being manufactured for home consumption.

Rev. Mr. Harwood, the New Mexico delegate, stated that he had enjoyed what he termed a glorious week in Toronto, but regretted that the crowd which greeted him last night was the smallest they had addressed on their tour. "Prohibition is a direct result of Christianity," said Mr. Harwood, "and we are now thankful that the greatest unsporting missionaries in foreign countries, are busily carry a cargo of liquor, on the same boat to undo the work of the missionary." This was a common practice in the old days. The speaker pointed out that they, in the U.S.A. were truly handicapped by the work of a number of the foreigners, but "are by no means defeated," and are there to stay and hold what they have gained. "Few states in the union would repeal the dry law in the U.S.A. today, were a vote taken," said the speaker, "and New Mexico, especially, was strong for Yesterday." Prohibition in New Mexico will soon be petrified," was this speaker's closing words.

STOLEN CARS ARE RECOVERED

Two Trenton Youths Alleged to Have Stolen One Truck and Two Motor Cars

Another attempt at car theft in this district has failed dismally, for the two boys who started their romantic career of the past few days, on Monday, by stealing a motor truck from a Trenton garage, and later stealing two other cars, managed to run entirely just outside the town of Trenton last night, by the police officers.

Provincial Detective Attorney W. Carnew received the word of their capture this morning, and at 11 a.m. left for Trenton to bring the two boys with him to receive their preliminary trial this morning before Police Magistrate O'Rourke.

The story is an unusual one. On Monday last, a motor truck, and an employee of a Trenton garage disappeared simultaneously, and of course the police officers were put on the trail. On Monday night, the drive shed on the land of Mr. Matthew Jones, near Corbyville, was broken into, and his Chevrolet car stolen, and driven away. The car was found on the Kingston Provincial road, and it was later found that the car had gone over the end of a culvert near Consecon, and had been delayed there for some time, the services of a nearby farmer having been called into get the car back on the road in a position to proceed. The farmer of course did not know that the car was stolen.

On Wednesday evening, a Grey Dort touring car which had been left standing on the street in front of the Queen's with the engine running, was stolen also, and the arrest last night of the two boys was the whole matter.

The truck stolen at Trenton was driven to Corbyville, where it broke down, was abandoned, and was later discovered by the police officers of this city. Then it was said the car proceeded up to the Jones garage and took Dr. Chez. This car they drove to Holloway, Foxboro, Stirling, and coming back to Trenton, over into Prince Edward County and over to Picton. At Picton, the car developed out, and was abandoned, and the Grey Dort taken. On Thursday afternoon, the Grey Dort was found standing on Dundas street, and last night the boys were arrested.

The Chevrolet car is in very bad shape, being seriously torn up. Mr. Chris Lewis, who towed the car in, states that it is in a bad condition, and that in fact the cylinder head would crack if heat be applied. The other car and the truck have not fared so badly both being are in fair autoen years of age, it is believed.

T. H. THOMPSON M. P. SPEAKS.

After expressing his thanks for the support of the electors of the township at the last general election, Mr. Thompson proceeded to analyze the conduct of the affairs of the Country, under the King Government. It was the experience of practically all Governments in different countries holding the reins of office at the close of the Great War, to overthrown. That fate had not contributed to prevent as an aftermath of the war, occasioned by unsound policy of business generally and the lack of confidence of a restless people. The King-Drury Administration had improved matters and their efforts to grapple with a view of curtailment in general expenditure were highly commendable. The National Debt has greatly increased and if our Dominion Commissioner was not unusually circumscribed, we will be near to the point of sacrificing the Country's Equidity. Expenditure on the Soldiers' Settlement and the debt figures to increase tremendously. Cabinet Ministers have been joyriding throughout the country during the session closed, and a platform of broken promises has been in vogue at the Council.

The labor troubles relative to the Nova Scotia coal strike had been mismanaged by the Government and there was unnecessary expenditure of over six hundred thousand dollars to be satisfactorily explained by the Minister of Labor. A board of Conciliation had been appointed to deal with the matter, but nothing had been heard thereof by the personnel of such board. D'Arcy Scott and J. E. Smith, two prominent Liberal organizers, were the Liberal party to investigate this strike and their findings had been most unsatisfactory and had ultimately caused the King Government to call out the militia at a cost to the country of $60,000. The Labor Movement in the Lanark by-election had no confidence in a government adopting the

BOOK REVIEW

Latest Novels Analyzed and Opinions Given as to Their Merits

"The Great War As I Saw It", by Capus Frederick George Scrimger, C.M.G., D.S.O.—Publishers, F. D. Goodchild Co., Toronto, $2.00

I hardly know what to say about either the author or the book; both are wonderful. Of all the stories I have had the pleasure of reading about the Great War and humorous incidents connected with it, I unhesitating say, this is the best. The different and forcible manner in which Canon Scott conveys to our mind vivid pictures of battlefields, soldiers and camps cannot be praised too highly. He produces before us in this great collection of reminiscences an exact replica of the atmosphere in which, to use his own words, "Our glorious men played their part in the deliverance of the world". This great and Beloved Padre has very generously dedicated all royalties received from the sale of this book to the Red Cross Society for the benefit of Tubercular Soldiers.

"O England of our fathers and England of our sons!
"Above the roar of battling hosts, the thunder of the guns,"
"A mother's voice was calling us, we heard it oversea,"
"The blood which thou didst give us, is the blood we spill for thee."

"The Balance"—By William Dana Orcutt. Publishers—Longmans, Green & Co., Toronto.

A tense and vibrating love story centered around a stirring fight of Labour against Capital. The author knows how to use many ideals and opinions which provoke discussion but this does not destroy the effectiveness of the book nor impair the strength of the plot.

The story is about a young officer, who returning from France at the close of the Great War, finds himself a misfit and quits out of place in the ever changing and entirely new world in which he finds himself. His father, a prominent manufacturer, is a member of the old school of domineering methods and oppressive ways in keeping his employees under his control. His son takes the new democratic spirit back home with him and they soon find themselves at sword-points, the father symbolic of the old school—the son, the new.

The theme provides an exciting plot, a strike, a forgery and a murder all intermingled with an absorbing love story which finally ends with an unusual solution of the eternal triangle.

Read it—it's a good book.

"Chalk-Talks"—By J. W. Bengough. Publishers—Musson, Toronto, $1.50.

This series of platform addresses on various topics with reproductions of the impromptu drawings with which they were illustrated, compiled by that well known cartoonist Bengough, is not only quite amusing but educational as well. He tells us of how he became a cartoonist and some amusing incidents when having caricatured several super-sensitive politicians, who had no sense of humour, once, in a city in Nova Scotia he had to make a hasty back-door getaway to avoid meeting the angered subjects of his sardonic sketches. His talks on "The Social Question," "Suffrage," and "Free Trade" briefly interspersed with illustrative cartoons are highly amusing and extremely interesting.

Many of us who have had the pleasure of seeing Mr. Bengough do some of his sketches will undoubtedly recognize many of the illustrations in the book and laugh once more reminiscently at his amusing cartoons.

"The Evil Shepherd"—By E. Phillips Oppenheim, Publishers—McClelland and Stewart, Toronto, 1922. $1.50.

Another one of Oppenheim's thrilling novels that grips the attention and imagination of the reader and focuses his mind upon the "sure-enough" final climax that he so often expects, but never gets and which lets us down to a soothing finish, replete with a pleasant "and they lived happily ever afterwards."

Francis Lodsam, a brilliant and highly successful young criminal lawyer, defends and obtains the acquittal of a man, charged with murder. Later, at an informal dinner given by Hilditch, the acquitted murderer, Lodsam is told the truth of the case, of how the murder was committed and secrets of the past life of the man, to convince him that he has done wrong in defending the criminal so as to allow him to prey upon society again and to continue his life of lawlessness. Lodsam vows that he will never defend another man, unless he is sure that the man is innocent. He then in place of being the benefactor of the criminals and their lawyers becomes their arch-enemy and devotes his talents to the tracking down and bringing to justice of all crime and criminals. In this role he comes across a millionaire philanthropist and patron of art, known the world over as a great sponsor of clean sport; whose daughter, the wife of the man he successfully defended for murder, had borne. Later his wrongly accused wife millionaire sportsman or being a great criminal and endeavours to trace to his door, several atrocious crimes committed in the neighborhood.

This book is just what we might expect from the author, a gripping tale of mystery, filled with complications and holding with a carefully planned climax that excites and holds one's interest to the very end.

If you want a book to bed early, don't start this book, for if you do you won't want to leave it until you have read to the end of the very last page.

"Certain People of Importance"—By Kathleen Norris. Publishers—S. B. Gundy Co., Toronto, 1922. $2.00.

This absorbingly interesting novel of American home life by Kathleen Norris, completely eclipses in literary style and painstaking effort any of the books she has yet done. The success of her books "Lucretia Lombard" and "The Story of Julia Page," have undoubtedly set a place in the front ranks of the prominent and successful novel writers of to-day but assured for her an audience of book-reading public that could only be acquired by constant and masterly labour and by producing the quality of books she has already given us. Although her husband, Frank Norris in his books has that faculty of grasping the readers' attention at an early stage and retaining it until the climax is reached he has left closely plotted detail work which is so characteristic of almost all Kathleen Norris' novels.

"Certain People of importance," deals with the whole American home life of to-day pictured before us on a huge stage. Commencing away back in 1760 the story carries us through the line of descent of the Crabtree family, who, rising to fame and fortune, the family in the third generation finally arrives at the obscurity from which it sprang. Its plots, its emotions, its loves, its sorrows, all a part of the great American home life of to-day. It shows us pictures of false ideals meritorious splendour, pettiness and egotism, all of which brought vividly before us in one, broad sweep of the home life typical of too many people of to-day. The book is built on abroad, general lines and is a treat to the Egotist, the debutante, and the so-called "social butterfly".

The author spent about two years constructing the novel and as settled as shown by the author who refused the sum of thirty thousand dollars for the serial rights to the book since Mrs. Norris knew that to sacrifice her story to the serial limitations of a magazine, only about one fifth of the public would receive the benefit of her painstaking efforts.

The book will undoubtedly receive a second printing soon as there will not be enough in the 100,000 copies which the first printing calls for to satisfy the demands, which will most surely be created.

ROLLER BEARINGS SHOW LITTLE WEAR

Philadelphia, Dec. 7.—The Pennsylvania Railway Company is experimenting with roller bearings for passenger coaches similar to those adopted by the State Railways of Sweden. For about a year six "P-70" coaches on the Pennsylvania have been in operation with carrel shaped roller bearings, but according to mechanical experts of the company, there has not been sufficient time to draw definite conclusions from the test. It is said by the company that so far the bearings have shown very little wear.

One of the things expected to be accomplished in equipping railroad stock with roller bearings is the lessening of the tractive effort required to start a train which would result, according to railroad authorities, in a saving of fuel.

RHEUMATISM?

Health is the Most Valuable Asset You Have. You cannot Afford to Neglect it

Crofton, B. C.—"I was troubled for years with inflammatory rheumatism and rheumatic fever, I tried several cures for rheumatism, but did not receive any benefit from any of them. My friend had been in the hospital for 12 months, being unable to walk. A friend advised me to try Dr. Pierce's Anuric Tablets. After taking the first bottle I began to improve, and after taking the bottles I had no more rheumatism. I think Dr. Pierce's Anuric is the most wonderful medicine that any one can take for rheumatism. I have recommended these tablets to several of my friends and they, too, have all been benefited by them."—Melville Collinson.

People are realizing that the kidneys, just as do the bowels, need to be flushed occasionally. The kidneys are an eliminative organ and are constantly working, separating the poisons from the blood. Uric acid backs up into the system, causing rheumatism, neuralgia, dropsy and many other serious disturbances.

This can be overcome by stimulating the kidneys to increased action, and because of its tonic effect on these organs any one would do well to get Dr. Pierce's Anuric Tablets which are to be had nowadays at almost any drug store or send 10c to Dr. Pierce's Laboratory in Bridgeburg, Ont. for trial package and write for free, confidential, medical advice.

ONTARIO MOTHER HELPS DAUGHTER

Mothers—watch your daughter's health. From the time she reaches the age of twelve until womanhood is established she needs your care and advice. Many women have suffered years of ill-health through lack of such care during this time.

She does not have the least bit of trouble now and we both recommend your medicine. She works in a candy shop now and seems well and strong. o the degradation of his small country alone the repeal of Prohibition. This country would be bad enough but the people repealed it. Since its repeal, the distilleries have been working overtime and drinking has been greatly increased, the people being forced to drink, there being a fine provided for the people by a certain minimum of gallons were not consumed in a set period of time. Crime, disease, insanity, etc., has increased greatly, and the cause of the repeal of prohibition was the result of the direct work of the liquor interests of Spain and France

Monsieur Gauvin, from France told of the 500,000 saloons in France and the great work they are doing towards the undoing of the French population. In France there are 120,000 alcoholic deaths per year.

Major Dr. Horsfell from Australia spoke of the great work and the success of which were that the people of Canada should go beyond their own borders in the great fight against alcoholism, as it was her duty as a great nation to do so.

Rev. William Stuart of London, England, intimated that the delegates were in Canada after information on the prohibition subject, the picture of which had been so falsely painted for them in their own countries. The delegates were after the facts of the case, and are not shaken by the practical results of prohibition in the western world. Drunkenness in any country, Rev. Stuart explained was not only injurious to the individual, but had an effect of causing carelessness throughout the whole fabric of society. Utter will have to take action act in the near future, if the prophecy of this speaker may be believed, as the results of the statements of this country are prohibitionists. Terrible pictures were painted of the evils of Canada by the speakers of English cities as a result of the ravages of alcohol.

"It is little wonder that we grew tired of the coalition government over in England," said the Speaker, "For prohibitionist as Lloyd George was and is, it was tiresome to see pictures of the little Welshman, standing with his arm of a brewer about his neck."

ST ANDREW'S BAZAAR A GREAT SUCCESS

The bazaar and Christmas sale held yesterday afternoon under the auspices of the ladies of St. Andrew's church proved a great success; fancy goods, candy, etc., disappearing rapidly as the crowd passed through the rooms. The displays were exceptionally good and the booths were very prettily arranged. The color scheme of the whole bazaar was carried out in yellow.

In charge of the fancy work booth were Mrs. Holland and Mrs. Ramsden; Mrs. Naylor had charge of the housekeeping table and Mrs. Walker and Mrs. Lewis, the candy table; Mrs. Fletcher presided over the apron booth. In the tea room were Mrs. Black and Mrs. Kinnear. The Christmas tree, covered with little fancy "oranges" filled with popcorn, etc., was in charge of the C.G.I.T. girls. The proceeds from the bazaar amounted to $550.

ORGANIZATION IN ONTARIO

The second annual meeting of the Ontario Liberal-Conservative Association, held at the King Edward in Toronto, recently, proved an unusually useful session. Speech-making was cut down to a minimum, someone suggesting that even in a campaign the proper proportion was about one per cent. to 99 per cent. of organization work. Mr. J. R. MacNicol, secretary, was able to report that a majority of provincial riding associations had sent in complete lists of their officers, with subdivisions chairmen. Mr. E. F. Dennis, of London, president of the Western District, gave a good account of the situation in his large group of counties, and intimated that, with colleagues, he proposed to keep all the district associations up, and see that organization is pushed ahead. Conservative members of Parliament and the Legislature and other workers in attendance gave satisfactory reports and were unanimous as to the advisability of getting everything shipshape in the constituencies. W. C. Mikel, K.C., of Belleville, treasurer, proposed a campaign for 10,000 membership in the association. Capt. J. E. Thompson, M.P.P., Toronto, provincial president, reviewed the work of the year, noting that riding organizations had appreciated organization assistance which the executive had been able to render. He reported prospects in Toronto and the Yorks most excellent for a solid return to Conservatism at the coming general election. From riding after riding, representatives rose to tell of rising support for the party, and even mentioning individual Liberals who had cast in their lot with the Conservatives. There was a widespread impression that support is gradually falling away from the U.F.O. organization, largely due to dissatisfaction with the Government and partly, no doubt, for reasons connected with the business side of the organization. Though not even a convention was held this year, a business gathering of about 500, including many ladies, and the spirit throughout the day's session was one of unmistakable enthusiasm and confidence.

SNOW AND BUSINESS

The Lindsay Daily Post under the above caption has an editorial appearing in Wednesday's paper, which suggests to us similar lines of thought.

Although the connection between the two is hard to follow, it is nevertheless a fact that a connection does exist. A local merchant dealing in dry goods and men's wear, stated recently that if there was no snow until after the New Year, he was certain of a poor sale of winter wear. His reason explaining the fact was that if a man wore his old coat until the New Year, he would reason with himself that there were only two months of winter left and that he would make the old coat do him. Now, strange as it may seem, he said, "if we have no snow in December, many men will wear out their overcoat." This explanation is more or less true of other lines of business, too, it appears upon investigation. Commenting on this question The Post says:

"Lindsay merchants have been saying during the past few weeks that business would be better if there was snow. Just why snow is needed to boost business is a little hard to say, but it may be that people do not realize that winter is here, and do not begin the purchase of winter goods and clothing until they have had the material evidence of a blanket of snow to mark the change of season.

"The autumn has been one of the most remarkable on record. Shrubs of many kinds have budded a second time, grass remained green right up to heavy frost, summer birds have remained with us, and farmers have been able to carry on outdoor work up to a week ago. The season ends with bright prospects for the future. It would not be surprising, therefore, if there should be a spurt in business, in the national outlook by next spring. It would be foolish, however, to expect anything except a period of hard work and small profits. These appear to be the lot of man for a considerable time to come."

PASSING COMMENT

Premier Mussolini of Italy is endangering his popularity. He is advocating work for everybody.

o o o

Premier Mussolini of Italy is endangering his popularity with a hat-pin. The next thing will be that he will be hit over the head with curling tongs.

o o o

Though General Haig asserts there were no "shock" troops in the British army, the actual fact is that it had a most shocking effect on the Germans.

o o o

Sir Henry Thornton's speech is optimistic respecting the future of the National Railways, and the Directors, headed by Mr. Hanna, has, in two years, reduced an operating deficit of $30,000,000 to an operating surplus for this year. If Sir Henry can, in two more years, gain $30,000,000 on the interest deficit of about $60,000,000, he will be entitled to a national monument.

A woodlot on every farm, maintained under the rules of scientific forestry, drawn upon for fuel annually, would make about half of the population of Canada wholly independent of the coal miners and the coal mine operators in the matter of keeping the home fires burning.

The British Government is the only one which has taken any steps to fulfil the Washington agreement for naval reduction. Washington was the leader in making the agreement; in fact, presented a Treaty at the conference and virtually told the nations to sign on the dotted line. But Washington is still using the forgnette on the other signatories.

Hamilton is forming a Young Men's Liberal-Conservative Club, which will be addressed by Hon. Arthur Meighen in the near future. Nearly every city and town in the Province is ripe for the formation or promotion of these Clubs, under the direction of the government in Queen's Park and on Parliament Hill.

HERE AND THERE

SMELLS OF THE FOREST.

Surely of all smells in the world the smell of many trees is the sweetest and most fortifying. The sea has a rousing, stimulating sort of odor that carries with it a fine sentiment of open water and tall ships; but the smell of a forest, which comes nearest to this in tonic quality impresses it by many degrees in the quality of softness. Again, the smell of the sea has little variety, but the smell of a forest is infinitely changeful; it varies with the hour of the day, not in strength merely, but in character; and the different sorts of trees as you go from one zone of the wood to another seem to live among different kinds of atmosphere.—R. L. Stevenson.

ARCHIMEDES.

Archimedes was a great mathematician.

A mathematician is one who knows a great deal about arithmetic, and how to figure about machines and things. Archimedes knew all about circles, cones, and cubes. He could find out how to say problem. Archimedes invented several machines. One of them was used to draw water. It was made like a large screw. The screw turned in the water and raised it.

Archimedes spent all of his time in studying and working problems in arithmetic. He made many discoveries too.

Archimedes lived in Syracuse, in Sicily, about 250 years before Christ. The king of Sicily was named Hiero. Hiero ordered a goldsmith to make him a crown of pure gold. When the crown was finished, Hiero suspected that the goldsmith deceived him. He told Archimedes to find out if the crown was of real gold.

Archimedes took it home and thought about it for a long time. One day he went down town to a bathhouse to bathe. He filled his bathtub full. When he put into the water it overflowed and ran on to the floor. An idea struck Archimedes. He saw that as much water ran out of the tub as was equal to the size of his body. He then knew that if he put the crown into a vessel full of water, as much water would run out as was equal to the size of the crown. He was so excited with this idea that he ran home without stopping to dress. As he ran through the streets, he cried, "Eureka! Eureka!" That is a Greek word and it means, "I have found it."

When he reached home he filled a vessel with water and then put the crown into it. He saved the water that ran over, in another vessel. He weighed the crown. Then he took a lump of pure gold that weighed the same as the crown. He put this in another vessel filled with water and noted what was out, the same as he had the crown weighed in. Now if the crown were pure gold, the water which ran over from both vessels must weigh the same. But it did not. So Archimedes knew that the crown was not pure gold.

What is true of this is true of all things, and this discovery was important. It shows that anything held under water weighs less. The weight lost is equal to the weight of the water that runs over. The truth is called the "law of specific gravity."

The Roman army once tried to take Syracuse. Archimedes invented a machine that lifted the ships out of the water and let them fall back and sink.

It is also said that he used large burning glasses to set the ships on fire. But this is doubtful.

Finally the Romans took Syracuse. The Roman soldiers ran through the city killing the people. The Roman general told the soldiers not to kill Archimedes, but to bring him alive. A soldier went to Archimedes' house. Archimedes was so busy solving a problem that he did not know the city was taken. The soldier told Archimedes to come with him. Archimedes said he wanted to solve the problem first. The soldier refused to wait and killed Archimedes. The Roman general was sorry Archimedes was killed. He buried him and put a monument over his grave. Archimedes was 74 years old when he died.—Times.

ENVY.

We wandered in the country, did the little boy and I—
But this was in the summer when the days were warm and dry,
We strolled along the brooklet, and we sat upon a log;
And I told him how a pollywog at last became a frog.

I pointed out the tadpoles as they wiggled in and out,
Explaining to him how the transformation came about;
And he looked upon the wrigglers with a look of glad surprise,
And the light of speculation was a-shining in his eyes.

"Why do they wiggle so?" he asked, and frowned a puzzled frown,
"Because," I said, "until they're frogs they never can sit down,
Until their tails drop off and till their legs begin to sprout
There's nothing else for them to do but wiggle all about."

"I wish," exclaimed the youngster, as he shied a skipping stone,
"That little boys were tadpoles—till they were fully grown!
I'd wiggle in the river and you'd croak upon the bank,
And you could never spank me—'cause there'd be no place to spank!"

MUSIC and DRAMA

"HUMAN HEARTS" BETTER AS FILM THAN ON STAGE

The mere fact that a stage play scores a great success is no certain indication that a screen presentation can duplicate the feat, in fact the odds are against it, therefore, when the film version exceeds the excellence of the original it is a real triumph for the producer. Universal can well be proud of "Human Hearts," the picturized version of Hal Reid's eminent stage success, which swept the country a decade or so ago. It opened a two weeks' run at the Regent Theatre last night and won the unanimous commendation of the large audience.

House Peters, one of the finest emotional actors in pictures today, brings to the role of Tom Logan a sympathetic understanding and dramatic ability of such a high order that the characterization will be termed a masterpiece of emotional acting.

Edith Hallor's work as the city siren will be worth watching, as her portrayal womanly solitudes and coyness, as well as hard heartedness and bitterness, in a finished style one sees all too seldom.

Others deserving special mention in the large cast are Russell Simpson as Logan, Gertrude Claire as Aunt Sally, George Hackathorne as Jimmy Logan, Mary Philbin as Ruth, Suita Edwards in the comedy relief part of the village cutup. The picture was directed by King Baggot and it is of interest to know that it was the same Reid play that played the role of Tom Logan in a sketchy photoplay of "Human Hearts" many years ago.

"Human Hearts" proves beyond question that it is possible to make pictures that one can see without being offended by stretched moral view-points. It leaves you with a clean taste in the mouth and a new respect for the cinema art.

"Apartments Wanted" a highly amusing comedy, a beautiful Travelogue, and a new Vodvil Movetes preceded the exhibition of the feature offering.

NEW MARION DAVIES VEHICLE

Youth's judgments are often harsh and its standards narrow. That is why a young man so often looks for the smartly dressed among accents, fondly believing that therein lies charm and personality. Never has this fallacy been more ably exhibited than in "Beauty's Worth," starring Marion Davies, which opened at Griffin's Theatre last night. In this Sophie Kerr story Miss Davies, ever good to look upon, ever

There's the cork of Gibraltar.
But where is the city's name?

vivacious and exuberant, has the part of Prudence Cole, a young Quakeress—a role quite unlike anything else the star has ever done. Dressed always in the demure gray of her sect, Prudence is oblivious to the fact that her clothes entice the young men to shun her, particularly Henry Garrison, whom she fancies.

Henry sees Prudence as an old-fashioned and dull girl. He seems her. Then, when she is "made over" by a noted artist into one of the smartest looking girls, Henry falls in love with her. It is her gowns, not her, that he loves.

"Beauty's Worth" is a picturesque and appealing love story, the real love for Prudence being another—not Henry's. The picture was directed by Robert G. Vignola, the scenario being Luther Reed's work, Joseph Urban settings are strikingly beautiful enhancements to the photoplay, Forrest Stanley, Jane Evelidge, Truly Shattuck, Hallam Cooley, Antrim Short and others are in the excellent cast.

PRAISE FOR THE GRAND TRUNK

In the Grand Trunk Railway System, employers and employees work together to reach the highest possible standard of efficiency. The result of this splendid spirit of co-operation is a railway service as near perfection as modern methods can make it. That the travelling public appreciates this effort in their behalf is shown by numberless letters to the G.T.R. officials, expressive of their pleasure and appreciation. Here is an extract from an unsolicited letter written to the management by a prominent New Yorker: "Had a most comfortable ride from Montreal to Toronto. The train went at a uniform speed and the report, the road-bed was better, it seems to me, than any road I have been on of late, and you know I travel more or less on the crack roads of this country. What was most noticeable was the broken—the absence of awful shocks and jars, and the smooth running of the train. You are to be congratulated on the manner in which passenger trains are handled—seemingly a distinctive feature with you."

NEWS FROM TRENTON

The interior of the Canadian Northern Railway Station is undergoing a renovation.

Mrs. Fred Shearer of Toronto, (nee Anita Ward) with her infant son, Robert Austin, is visiting her parents, Dr. and Mrs. J. F. Ward, Division St.

Mr. Dorin of the Auto-Inductor Co. of Grand Rapids, Mich., has leased from the town of Trenton the store building on Ontario Street, East Trenton. Trenton will be headquarters for the Manufacture and Sales Dept. for Canada.

The expert business now being handled from Grand Rapids will in the near future be transferred to the Trenton branch.

This is another industrial boost for our city. The site is an ideal one, being centrally located near the C. P. R. and C. N. R. Railroads. The company intends to take immediate possession and will employ from 75 to 100 hands.

The Auto-Inductor is a combination of stop signal and arrow indicator operated from the brake and driving wheel respectively and also acts as a tail light.

Mrs. C. M. Foster, Queen Street was the hostess of an enjoyable meeting of the W. M. S. of King St. Methodist Church Monday afternoon, Dec. 4th. The program was the Christmas number.

Several of our merchants are assuming the Christmas spirit by decorating their show windows and cases; and thereby making their stores the more attractive to would-be shoppers. Some are already very optimistic, others awaiting for the last few days when we all must take the head off our pocket books.

Mrs. Jim Ford of Frankford spent Thursday in Trenton visiting friends.

The bride was very becomingly attired in a brown velvet gown with hat to match, and carried a beautiful bouquet of pink roses. Her attendant wore Henna Crepe de Chine with hat corresponding, and carried mixed chrysanthemums. The groom's present to the bride was a handsome wrist watch, to the bridesmaid a ring set with onyx and pearl, and to the best man a signet ring. Sailed the Lakes for Many Years

Lake Ontario crisscrossed with the house, stout schooners, carrying Ontario barley to make American beer, sailing craft battling with November gales, and sea sailors yarning in their winter shelters in crowded lake harbors—those were the days.

A living link with the romance that is past is Captain Richard Clarke, centenarian, of Port Hope.

Until one has met a person whose recollections of long experiences are so vivid, it is difficult to realize that Captain Clarke's world was ever a pulsating reality.

Traveling by rail along the lake, white lighthouses are seen on the bays of many a deserted harbor. As many as a hundred merchant craft once sailed out many of these ports in the old days.

Like a heart of oak, persisting into the days of the superdreadnought, Captain Clarke calls up in his way-hale, weather-beaten appearance the days of sailing fleets and bustling harbors.

Born at Buckshotsleigh, in Devon, on December 5, 1821, Richard Clarke sailed the high seas from his eighteenth year and Lake Ontario from his thirtieth year. His active career has been from "fore-and-aft" craft to steel barge. His mind still follows the sea, of which Lake Ontario is but a beloved part.

Signing his name for the Toronto Sunday World, he spoke of the uselessness of speculating to one a hundred years young and thus proceeded to tell stories of ninety years ago.

Playing truant from the school conducted by his own pastor, Rev. Mr. Lowance, young Clarke and his chums used to sing as they ran away:

"Farewell, Topsay, farewell, boozing,
Fare you well, Rev. Mr. Lowance;
Farewell, church, and farewell steeple;
And fare you well, all Buckshaleigh people."

Thus he saw the local hunt, the lords' annual banquet and sports and royal birthday celebrations.

"The holiday of my life was when I drove the village band to Lord Newman's on young Queen Victoria's first birthday after her accession," he said. "My greatest eye-opener was the train that took me from my ship at London to Exeter, but I have seen all the great inventions since then."

After sailing the Mediterranean and Black Sea ports many times, he crossed the Atlantic in 1851 to try fresh-water sailing. It was the height of the grain and lumber trade across Lake Ontario, and speedily he became master, then part-owner and owner of most ships.

Captain Clarke docked in Toronto on time to attend the debate of the Union Legislature in the Front Street buildings when the bill to charter the Grand Trunk Railway was passed. Later he carried stone for the line to Toronto and Frenchman's Bay.

His first intimation of the Fenian raid was to hear a sentry pacing the wharf beside his vessel in Brockville harbor on a Sunday morning. Carrying coal from Oswego and lumber and grain to Montreal from Port Hope, Cobourg and smaller harbors, he spent a busy half century, and then retired.

"I have always had good health," he said. "I have had to stay in my chair most of the time for the past two years, since the rheumatism came. I never drank and I quit smoking when my first child was born. I always get up early and go to bed early."

Captain Clarke has many descendants—but his wife, aged 94 years, and he are the only occupants of their tidy, comfortable home. They are quite able to look after the house. His centenary came last December and the day was made the official visits and addresses from the Town Council and the Methodist Quarterly Board. Many friends called and the house was filled with flowers, but the host found time that day to write, without spectacles, one hundred postcards to friends who had sent greetings.

Port Hope he considers a particularly healthy town, being hilly and dry, and near the open water, even if it is not as salty as in his days when, in the marshes below the town, clustered the tiny home of many an Old Country sailor and his family.

That was two generations ago. Port Hope people do not now go down to the lake in ships. The lighthouse is there, but the railroad straphangs is more important to-day. Only one other shipowner and sailor is following—Captain Joseph Braund. The so-called "last sailors" in most ports except for the oldest of them all, and his memories of the "Bristol," "Agnes Hope," "Stafford" and "John Stevenson"—last of the vessels which made Port Hope a port in reality as well as in name.

Fleet of Oil Burners Planned.

The Canadian Chamber of Commerce announces a plan to run oil-burning steamers on a regular schedule between England and Canada. There will be eight vessels of 12,000 tons' dead-weight, carrying 600 first-class and 1,000 second-class passengers, and making 16 knots. The service is later to be extended to all parts of the Empire, making it possible to go from Liverpool to Sydney via Halifax and across Canada by rail in 30 days; it now takes 30 days.

Ontario's Electric Scheme.

After an investigation covering 23,000 farms, it is estimated by the Ontario Government that at least ten thousand farms will install electricity for lighting and power purposes as soon as the necessary transmission lines are provided. It is the intention to construct 1,000 miles of these lines during the next five years.

SCIENTIST DISCUSSES THE PROBABILITY OF LIFE ON PLANET VENUS

Boston, Dec. 8.—The existence of life on the planet Venus may be considered highly probable, Dr. Harlow Shapley, director of the Harvard Observatory, said in a recent lecture here. He added that the question of life on Mars was controversial, but that its small mass and its great distance from the sun counted heavily against the probability of life there.

"Venus," he said, "is comparable to the earth in many ways and if, as is likely, living organisms develop wherever conditions are suitable over a sufficient interval of time, then it may be considered that life on Venus is highly probable. On no other bodies in the solar system, however, are conditions at all favorable for the existence of protoplasm."

Dr. Shapley said that accepting the tidal evolution theory of a planetary system, even for stars otherwise favorably located, an encounter of just the right sort with another star was necessary for the birth of a planetary system.

"And once such a family is born," he continued, "other stars must not disturb the family, and the star's light intensity must remain reasonably uniform for the enormous interval of time required for the crustal evolution which must precede animate origins.

"Nevertheless, it appears probable that among the thousands of millions of stars there are here and there planets that conform to the requirements. Although the animal man is probably not duplicated in the universe, there are doubtless numerous other living earths, and the chance that their life phenomena surpass in intricacy and 'thickness' those on the earth is as good as the chance that they fall below our level."

The search for habitable worlds, he said, was largely a search for conditions suitable for the existence of water in a liquid form. This, he added, was an absolute necessity for the development of life such as that on the earth, and a definite chemical constitution for air, land and water also was necessary. A planet's days and nights, therefore, must not be so long as to prevent the existence of water in a liquid form.

"It seems certain," he said, "that some water exists on Mars at times in a liquid form. The average astronomical opinion is that low forms of organisms may exist on Mars, that high forms are very improbable, and that beings physically comparable with man are absolutely impossible."

SIR THOMAS WHITE DECLARES WAR ON RECKLESS AUTOISTS

Toronto, Dec. 6.—The tremendous proportions which the problem of motor traffic regulation has assumed throughout the Province and the proposed upon the Motor Vehicle Committee of the Ontario Legislature when it sat yesterday at the Parliament Buildings. The medicm for the presentation was Sir Thomas White, Minister of Finance in the Border Cabinet, and he argued strongly for regulations which would ensure to the pedestrian the priority in traffic matters which is legally his and also for a recognition of the proposition that the time has passed when the owner of a motor car can expect to be able to use it at all times and for all purposes.

In the opinion of Sir Thomas, expressed to the members of the committee, the time is rapidly approaching at which the city streets will be inadequate for the accommodation of the motor traffic which they will be called upon to bear. The only solution for the situation which he saw, accordingly, was that limitations should be placed upon the use of motor vehicles, their employment for certain purposes at particular hours during the day being banned. He would also abolish "parking" upon the city streets, declaring it to be a practice which resulted in thoroughfares being blockaded and monopolized to too great an extent.

Speed Law for Province

So far as the immediate regulation of traffic with a view to lessening the present terrific toll of motor deaths was concerned, Sir Thomas White had several suggestions. He would have, primarily, a speed law covering the Province as a whole and modified where necessary to meet the requirements of particular cities. He would further have every driver licensed, thus abolishing the driving of cars by minors and children. Then, finally, he would have more rigid punishment for traffic offenders, such as imprisonment for jail terms for persistent violators of speed laws, the discontinuance of the practice of settling cases out of court, and such as, possibly, the suspending of a guilty person's car. He was fully of the opinion that a special division of the provincial police force might devote its time exclusively to the enforcement of the motor vehicle law, although he emphasized that such enforcement should not be carried out in a vindictive spirit.

The committee, of which Hon. F. C. Biggs is chairman, gave Sir Thomas close attention during his remarks. Certain of his points, they declared, had already been provided for in the new sections of the proposed Provincial Act already drafted. Full consideration to the other suggestions would, they promised, be given.

PROVINCIAL REPORT ON FARM CONDITIONS

Brant says: "There have been far less roots hauled since winter set in as farmers are reluctant to sell at the lower prices prevailing.

Peel has a place in the front rank of Thisers at alfalfa seed, six of the eight first prizes in this line at the recent Royal Show held in Toronto having been awarded to growers from that county. Growers there have a considerable quantity of first-class seed on hand.

Frontenac puts the local yield of honey at about ten per cent. below the average per colony.

Eastern says the farmer's income this year falls below normal. The consequent result is reflected in the many lines of business. However, the men of the county are confident of the future. Every farmer is feeling the normal number of cattle of previous years. The demand for young cattle, brood sows, and herd bulls is very good, but at prices corresponding to the farmer's buying power."

Peel and Waterloo also state that a number of cattle are being brought in for feeding. Kenora says that some farmers went to Winnipeg and brought back cattle to take up the surplus fodder. One farmer secured 79 head at prices ranging from 1½ to 3¼ cents a pound.

Brant says: "A very large number of cattle have been shipped in to this county this fall, for feeding. One dealer alone who pretty well supplies the district north of Paris has sent in over sixteen carloads. Feeders recently have been sold at about 5½c and dairy cows, while at the same time fairly good butcher cattle are bought locally at from 6c to 7c. Cattle fitted for the Winter Fair recently sold at 10½c per pound, while lambs for a similar purpose sold at 14c. This of course is above the market price."

Halton reports an increase of ten per cent. in the price of milk paid producers.

Leeds states that many cheese factories have shut down for the winter, but that a few are running over the week-ends.

Fresh cows are selling in the Fort William district at from $50 to $110, and there is no demand for calves.

Grey says: "Considerable interest is being taken in the hog grading work, and we find everywhere farmers are asking for information, and breeding stock of the approved bacon type."

Some heavy shipments of hogs were made last week from South Simcoe, prices running around $10 a cwt.

Turkey Days were held in Napanee on the 29th and 30th of November. It is estimated that 195 tons of dressed poultry of all classes, valued approximately at $72,000, were sold on the markets during the two days.

RUSSIA READY TO DISARM

Moscow, Dec. 5—Minister of War Trotsky and Leo Kamenoff, president of the Moscow Soviet in recent public addresses in this city, repeated previous assurances as to Russia's readiness to reduce her army providing other states would do the same thing.

The occasion was a gathering of delegates to the Third Internationale. Trotsky announced that the Soviet government is ready and eager to cut its armed forces in half, or even to one tenth of the present strength, provided other countries would agree to similar reductions." The war minister expressed the hope that the outcome of the disarmament conference to be held in Moscow within a month would result in a reduction of the armies of the Balkan states.

Kamenoff said he had a message to the world. "Russia," he declared, "is indeed eager for peace and is prepared at any time to reduce her fighting forces, if given guarantees by other countries. But in making these proposals," he continued, "it must be understood that because of our strength we would refuse any proposals which might tend to humiliate Soviet Russia."

"This is no idle boast and day by day we are showing greater strength in Communism, greater constructive ability in reorganization of the country and in reestablishing ourselves."

A review of the Red Army followed these speeches. The troops defiled past a large reviewing stand. The Moscow garrison headed the parade and included cavalry, heavy and light artillery, machine gun outfits, tanks, armored cars and anti-aircraft guns; then there followed droves of factory and railroad workers armed with rifles, thousands of trade unionists, and many children.

The parade has been described as the greatest military turnout ever attempted by the Soviet Government. It is estimated that over half a million persons passed in review.

BABY SWALLOWED SAFETY PIN

Dr. H. D. Veitch, Toronto, at St. Michael's Hospital performed a delicate operation upon one-year-old Fergus O'Connor, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fergus J. O'Connor, 74 Shannon Street, Lindsay. The baby swallowed an open safety pin, which became lodged in the larynx.

Dr. W. P. O'Brien, who was called in after Mr. O'Connor discovered the baby had swallowed the safety pin, had the child removed to the hospital. An X-ray examination showed the location of the pin which was successfully removed with serious results.

Association of Life Insurance Presidents In Convention in New York This Week, Many Interesting Reports Are Presented

New York, Dec. 7.—The purchasing power of the people of the United States has increased materially the current year, according to the statistics of 138 life insurance companies who contributed their statistics of new life insurance to the Sixteenth Annual Convention of the Association of Life Insurance Presidents here this afternoon. These 138 companies wrote 36 per cent. of the new life insurance business last year and their reports as to this year are, therefore regarded as indicative of national business conditions.

These companies show that a total of $9,200,000,000 of new life insurance is being bought this year, an increase of $600,000,000 over 1921. This is an increase of about seven per cent. over the new business of 1921. This year's production will place the total old line life insurance in force on American lives at the end of 1922 well beyond $50,000,000.

This survey of these new business produced in the United States this year was presented by Dr. Frank H. Davis, Second Vice-President of the Equitable Life Assurance Society of New York, who said:

"A record of the current sales of life insurance is now considered a necessary factor in constructing a satisfactory barometer of national business conditions. As approximation of this year's business, therefore, must be of especial interest as measuring the recovery from general economic depression.

"To secure as accurate a survey of this year's situation as possible all of the life insurance companies writing business last year were requested to submit estimates of this year's business based upon ten months' actual and two months' approximated business. Reports have been received from 138 companies, which wrote 81 per cent. of the total new business written during 1921. These reports show a $9,150,000. Applying to the 2 per cent. not heard from the same ratio for new business as experienced by the 98 per cent. heard from it is estimated that the total insurance written during 1922 in all American companies will amount to $9,200,000,000 as against $8,700,000,000 for last year.

"Thus the American people during the present year will have bought six hundred dollars more new life insurance than they did in 1921, an increase of nearly 7 per cent. over last year. Nineteen twenty contains 366 hundred dollars more new life insurance production, for in those twelve months the American people purchased more than ten billion dollars of new life insurance. Last year's production was 13 per cent. short of that amount while this year's new life insurance represents due to the record of 1920, furnishing irrefutable evidence that the country's recovery from the post-war business depression has been progressed as to indicate a largely increased purchasing power generally on the part of the American people.

"Striking significance attaches to the new life insurance production of 1922 when a year's results are figured with a background of prior accomplishment. Add the nine and one-third billion dollars of insurance written making due allowance for lapsings from terminations, maturities, lapses, surrenders and other deductions, to the forty-six billion dollars in force on American lives at the close of last year, and you will bring the total old line life insurance protection in this country well past the fifty billion dollar mark.

"Compare the amount of life insurance now in force with the situation a decade or two ago and you can avoid increase of life insurance protection in recent years appears impossible. Twenty years ago at the close of 1902, the total life insurance in force was $10,200,000,000. During each of the last three years the amount produced annually has nearly reached that total. Ten years later, at the close of 1912, insurance in force amounted to $19,500,000,000, nor nearly double the amount in force at the beginning of that decade. For the first few years of the last decade the increase was at about the same rate, and at the end of 1916 we find $34,000,000 of life insurance in force. Since 1916, however, increases have been made by leaps and bounds, and the 50 billion dollars or more in force at the end of 1922 will represent nearly double the amount in force six years ago and almost five times the amount in force twenty years ago.

"A similar increase in the number of policies in force appears during the same periods. In 1920 there were 18 million policies outstanding. In 1912 there were 35 million, while at the end of this year there will be more than 78 million policies in force.

"This 50 billion dollars of life insurance in force is guaranteed into 19 million ordinary policies and 59 million industrial policies. Forty-one billion dollars of it represents ordinary policies, averaging $2,150 per policy. Nine billion dollars of it represents industrial policies, averaging $153 per policy. You get a better notion of the actual amount per policy to-day by considering only new insurance issued. Twenty years ago, in 1902, the amount of ordinary new life insurance production was $1,700,000,000 and the number of policies 800,000, being $1,745 per policy. This year's policies, averaging $2,400 per policy. Simultaneous, we find our country's life insurance estate increasing the expanding of its benefits to many more people each year, but, what is of especial significance, we find that the individual policyholder taking out more insurance per policy each year."

New York, Dec. 7.—Continuance of the nationwide demand for more liberal supplies of food production is absorbing over half of the current investment funds of life insurance companies, according to a survey submitted at the Sixteenth Annual Convention of the Association of Life Insurance Presidents here today. In presenting these original statistics showing the life insurance investment record, extending up to November first of this year, President William W. McClench, of the Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Company of Springfield, also stated that steam railroad securities had assumed a firmer position among the investments of the first ten months of 1922, making a total of $226,000,000 as compared to city bonds acquisitions in the 22 months ending with November first of this year.

The same companies, said the speaker had added $202,000,000 to their farm mortgage loans in the United States in 1921 and $112,000,000 more up to November first of this year, making a total increase of $332,000,000 in farm mortgages in 22 months.

The farm mortgage loans held by American life insurance companies have doubled in less than five years and the total, $1,418,000,000, is now in excess of the companies' loans on city property which total $1,350,000,000.

"The combined city and farm mortgage holding of the life insurance companies are now far ahead of their investment in railroad securities. At the end of 1911, the speaker said, the railroad securities held by approximately the same companies amounted to $1,383,000,000, or 35½ per cent. of their assets; ten years later, at the end of 1921, the holdings in railroad securities amounted to $1,799,000,000 or only 20½ per cent. of their total assets. By the end of 1911 the city and farm mortgage loans of the companies to gether amounted to $2,220,000,000, or 57 per cent. of their total admitted assets at the end of 1921 the total mortgage loans had risen to $3,249,000,000, or 37

FOR THE HOME NEEDLEWOMAN

In making buttonholes in material that frays easily mark, each button hole on the cloth and run a row of machine stitching along each side of the mark. Then with buttonhole scissors cut between the rows of stitching and finish in the usual way. The buttonhole will last twice as long with this foundation and will have a neater appearance than without it. Or mark the buttonhole in tacking, then proceed to work the usual buttonhole stitch along each side of the tacking thread until the buttonhole is completed. Cut with a pair of sharp scissors and cut down the centre.

NEW EFFECTS IN COATS

The one-sided effect and the single fastening are two features which have been emphasized in the modes of the season, and they are not confined to frocks alone. One sees them in coats of formal as well as informal aspect, and from present indications this one-sided line will be in evidence in the coats for early spring.

It is particularly smart effect when the coat is of two contrasting materials or of cloth and fur combined. One of the most striking models of this type was seen recently at one of the smart restaurants. The body of the coat was of black velvet made on long, slender lines and with one side draped quite far over, as in the model sketched. Long black fur sleeves were of ermine and this fur also formed a wide soft collar. Concealing the fastening is a rosette of ermine fringed with monkey skin.

A coat like this has inflated possibilities. For if one wishes a less conspicuous garment, squirrel may be substituted for ermine. Other suggestions are brown voldrye or bolivia with beige cameel or deep henna velour with beaver.

A PEELED BIRCH TREE

Defaced it stands! I do not know your name,
Who peeled this birch-bark tree, but ah, the shame!
You wanted on a bit of bark to send
A maudlin little message to a friend?
To make a napkin ring, or some such trash?
And so with pocketknife you needs must gash
A ghastly wound, and peel a birch-bark tree,
Out of my thoughts, Oh you, who e'er
you be!

THE IMPORTANCE OF DRESSING WITH CARE

Untidy clothes have a most depressing effect upon both the wearer and the looker-on. It is an attitude of indifference which antagonizes.

The woman who neglects her clothes, fails to brush them, put them carefully upon their hangers, fold them away, among sweet-smelling paper or muslin covers, or otherwise care for them, will look shabby and badly turned-out, however much she may pay for them.

It is also a very uneconomical habit to treat one's clothes casually, for they very soon retaliate by wearing out quickly, and getting all out of shape.

Mud stains should be promptly attended to, and all dust removed, as it left it penetrates right into the material, and takes off all freshness from its appearance.

Creases and wrinkles give away any garment, and coat-frocks, and coats and skirts should be wiped over with a damp cloth from time to time. A good pressing, too, with a hot iron and thick cloth, is helpful in many general appearance, and if done consistently will add many months' life to their wearable qualities.

Laddering stockings and down-at-the-heel footwear give away any woman, lady, and it is very interesting to a student of psychology to see—as one so often does—women walking about in the smartest of hats and furs, yet wearing stockings obviously darned, or, worse still, needing attention, and wearable smart shoes, hopelessly down at the heels, or very badly out of shape.

Shoe-lace laces should always be put on their trees when taken off, and stockings will last much longer if given a rest, and not worn continuously. This latter advice applies also to gloves.

Velour coats and hats are again popular, and if looking at all shabby should be treated with a little powdered magnesia. It should be applied with a soft cloth, and left on for two or three hours before being brushed off.

Careful attention to all the little details of dress amply repay the woman who does not want to look shabby, and it should be remembered that shabbiness not only denotes carelessness, but a depressed and slightly morbid mental outlook.

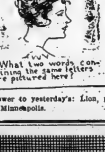

We have no right to depress our friends, and we have certainly no right to depress other people.—J. C., in The Daily Sketch.

LINKED LIVES

By

D. Kinmount Roy

Both men laughed heartily: it was the first sign of lighter mood they had shown since their arrival, and the old waiter, who never left distinguished guests to others, hailed it as a sign that the air of exclusiveness which surrounded them was not quite impenetrable. Kinkman ate slowly, reading, or seemed to read, a newspaper propped up before him, and listening for the first word. It was a wonderful providence, he told himself, that had brought him to them at that moment. He was well pleased with his good fortune, and ordered a bottle of wine on the strength of it.

"It is, no doubt, the same man," Captain Marchmont continued. "In fact, I feel quite sure of it in the points of character you mention are so much alike. I have heard quite recently that he makes little headway in the country, although by some means he is master of Fosseway'."

"Where did this murder which involved the old lord occur?" Barrington asked. Kinkman at the moment was pouring out a glass of wine and by some carelessness upset the glass, spilling the wine upon the cloth. He pushed back the chair, expressing great contrition, and changed his seat. The steward brought him to the side of the table nearest to the two gentlemen, but as the fire was inconveniently near on that side he requested the servant to move the screen which stood near into such a position as to shelter him from the heat. The screen not only protected him from the heat of the fire, but also from the observation of the men at the other end of the room. It was Kinkman's fancy to have it thus; but as far from noticing him, neither Barrington nor the captain showed the slightest sign of being even aware of his presence.

"Where did the murder which involved the old lord occur?" Barrington had asked. 'On the estate.' March mont answered; 'in fact, not more than half a mile from the Hall."

"A most grievous and horrible thing, surely," Barrington remarked thoughtfully, 'and it may go undiscovered for all time. I have had some strange confidences of dying men, who carried with them secrets of frightful crimes, and only confessed at the very end when face to face with the future world.

"It was perfectly horrible,' Marchmont said, pushing back his chair from the table, 'and Masterman—you remember Masterman?—well, he says the whole county has been again startled over another mysterious event in the same neighbourhood. This time it is the abduction of a lady, and no trace of her can be found. Her guardian, an old soldier, is also missing, and it was thought murder had probably been committed.'

'Lately?' queried Barrington.

'Oh no, at least it was last autumn, and no trace has yet been found of either, it seems. Hardcastle's son says he will unearth the mystery, if it takes him the rest of his life.'

'They'd fancy he is not much like his father,' Barrington said, with a gleam of satisfaction.

'Not in the least,' Marchmont answered; 'he has certainly sown a plentiful crop of wild oats, but I hear that since this abduction he has been another man, working on the case as if his life depended upon it, very much to the disgust of the old Squire.'

The two rose to leave the room as a man entered with the hotel register—Kinkman had omitted to write his name in the visitors' book: such an omission was unusual, and could not be overlooked. But Kinkman had no intention of leaving any clue behind him, nor even his signature under any of his numerous aliases. He explained to the man, with regret, his inability to write, owing to his having sprained his wrist a short time before. It was quite a serious inconvenience to him, and several sketches which he hoped to have taken must be omitted in consequence.

Under these circumstances, there was no other way than for the man to write the name, Harold Jenkins, at his dictation; the he did with great care, deeply lamenting that His Honour had been deprived of the privilege of inscribing his name with his own hand among those of celebrities whose signatures testified to their having been present under that roof.

With the book before him, it was easy to learn the names of the gentlemen who had been so conveniently communicative. He dismissed the man, with a downer which was quite impressive to the recipient, and congratulated himself on the return of his old-time luck. This would be two thought, he told himself, he would in that out-of-the-way corner have heard the news so precious and necessary to his plans, and at a moment when he thought himself so far from success!

Just what had happened after he got away from MacAlpin was still in obscurity, but the essential point in his favour was that Hardcastle thought he had succeeded, and while such was his belief he could claim the full reward of his villainy, although he had failed to accomplish all he had undertaken. In fact,'the Squire had not bound him to any particular plan: his undertaking was simply to get rid of the girl, and he certainly had succeeded so far, for according to what he had just heard she had vanished as completely as though the ground had opened and swallowed her up. Nearly a year had gone, and no trace of her had been found. There certainly was something puzzling and rather disconcerting about it. He remembered several shots had been fired: how many he could not recall. What if one of them had taken effect by chance and Oona had succumbed, and MacAlpin and Graham been afraid or unwilling to make the matter known? The news was good—good!—but it might have been better—much better. Still, that was past, and it was no part of Kinkman's nature to lament over what might have been: the present and actual had always been enough to tax his wits.

COLETTE'S SENIOR CALL

"I wish mother would let me do my hair up," thought Colette, looking seriously at Yolanda Mand, who was seated on the dresser. "I guess I'd better put you away, too, Yolanda Mand," she said. "I bet that has a college senior for a friend shouldn't be playing with dolls."

Carefully she placed the big doll in the bottom drawer of her dresser and ran off downstairs to ask her mother if she might do her hair up.

"You know Miss Boynton asked me to come up and bring my sewing," she explained importantly.

"Well, maybe, just for to-night then," her mother granted, "but you can't wear it to school that way. You're too young."

"And, Mother," Colette asked, "what can I take to-morrow? She said for me to bring my sewing."

"Why don't you take that new dress you are making for Yolanda Mand?"

"Oh, Mother! Sew on a doll dress before Miss Boynton! Why she'd think I was in my second childhood.'

Colette's mother smiled, but she did not tell her daughter that she was more likely to think she was still in her first. "Well, you can work on that towel I'm embroidering if you want to," she said.

At seven-thirty sharp a very grown-up girl called at the senior dormitory and rang for Miss Boynton. Sarah Boynton looked surprised as she ushered Colette into her room. Colette was surprised, too. For there on the bed was a big doll, for all the world like Yolanda Mand, and Miss Boynton was sitting on the floor munching fudge and industriously working on a frilly doll dress.

Colette sat on the edge of the bed and embroidered her mother's towel. She felt rather uncomfortable.

"My, how terribly 'grown-up you are,' laughed Miss Boynton. "I'm dressing this doll for my little sister for Christmas. You reminded me so much of her that I asked you to help with the fun. But I was mistaken. You don't act like her a bit, and you don't look like her, either, with your half all done up like that."

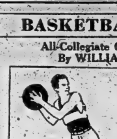

Colette's towel fell unheeded to the floor, and she stepped on it as she jumped to her feet. "My hair's awfully uncomfortable up like this," she confessed. "Do you care if I take it down? Gee, but that fudge is great!" She grabbed two pieces.

Miss Boynton laughed merrily. "I guess I was mistaken again," she said. "You are like her, after all."

BASKETBALL LESSONS

All-Collegiate Center, 1919, '20, '21
By WILLIAM C. GRAVE

No. 2. Handling the Ball

Ability to handle a basketball is the only difference between a good player and a poor one. A boy must have every other qualification, but if his cannot handle the ball properly, he can never be any good.

Just as a group of boys will play catch in baseball or throw forward passes in football, so can you learn to handle a basketball. Get some friends and throw the ball to each other.

Catch Like Baseball

The ball is caught the same way as a baseball. Catch it in the hands and not the arms and body, as one catches a football. If the pass is directed to you, extend the arms so that the hands will reach ahead for the ball. Then the moment the ball is about to hit the hands, draw them back and let the ball gently follow. You have all caught a hard-thrown baseball. The same principle is found in basketball. No matter where the pass is, whether high, low or to either side, catch it in the hands.

Two hands are always used in catching the ball. So also must two hands be used in passing the ball. A one-hand pass is slower and is seldom accurate. Also learn to pass the ball from the same position in which it was caught. If the ball is caught to the right side, pass from that side. If it is caught to the left, pass from there.

Pass the ball directly at the man if he is standing still. But if the man is running, the ball should be passed in advance of him, so that he will not be forced to slow his speed to wait for the ball.

Bounding Pass Is Slow

Many times a bounding pass must be used. Use this only when absolutely necessary, because it is slower than a direct pass, and much harder to control. If an opponent is between you and the man to whom you wish to pass, you may bounce it past this opponent. However, never use it when a direct pass may be made.

The speed with which the ball is thrown is determined by the distance of the man to receive the ball. If he is close, gently toss the ball, so that he may have ample opportunity to catch. Never pass more than fifteen feet. A long passing game is seldom successful, for the opposition has too much time in which to size up the play, and, therefore, they can interrupt the ball quite easily. A short passing game that causes the ball to fly around with lightning speed will bewilder any opposing team and bring victory. It can only be accomplished by continual practice, however, so the more you practice, the more your game will improve.

INDIAN SUMMER

Along the line of smoky hills
The crimson forest stands.
And all the day the blue-jay calls
Throughout the autumn lands.

Now by the brook the maple leans,
With all his glory spread;
And all the sumacs on the hills
Have turned their green to red.

Now by great marshes wrapt in mist,
Or past some river's mouth,
Throughout the long still autumn day
Wild birds are flying south.

Shakespeare Was Censored

Shortly before the war Sir Sidney Lee, the great Shakespearian authority, received from Spain the Second Folio of 1632 with the request that he should examine it and describe it to the English public. Only lately has Sir Sidney had the opportunity to comply with this request and the result is a communication to the London Times. The folio is unique in this respect, that within a few years after Shakespeare's death it was censored and expurgated by the officers of the Spanish Inquisition, who struck out passages of which they did not approve on political, religious or moral grounds, and the surprising thing seems to be that they expurgated it so easily. The plays were sent from England to the English college at Valladolid, which was christened St. Albans and founded by the Jesuit Father Parsons. His agent in London was to train young Englishmen for the priesthood under the instruction of suitable Spaniards so that they might return to the realm and later on and try to reconvert the people to the Roman Catholic faith.

Shakespeare abounds in ribaldries at the expense of popes, cardinals and nuns, and these of course were duly removed. Sir Sidney says that the censor's forbearance lends small support to the claim put forward by some modern Catholic writers that Shakespeare's religion was the same as their own and he believes that the Spanish censor, who was a Basilian named Julian Sanchez, considered the question of Shakespeare's personal creed not at all this conciliatory mood was doubtless due to the tolerance commonly bestowed at the Courts by the consent of the Holy Office on dramatic performances. The contemporary native drama was enjoying unusual popularity throughout the orthodox cities of the peninsula.

Certainly this alien Spaniard was much more lenient and understanding in his treatment of Shakespeare than were Shakespeare's own countrymen. Dr. Bowdler and Nahum Tate, both of whom are remembered chiefly because of their efforts to improve and correct his writings. Only a single play did he wholly condemn and that, as might be surmised, was "Measure for Measure." Nineteen of the thirty-six are left untouched, and we wonder what theologian or modern uplifter in Sanchez's position would have been as tolerant? Seven of the fourteen comedies are left untouched, five of the ten histories and eight of the twelve tragedies. The unexpurgated pieces are: "Two Gentlemen of Verona," "Merry Wives," "Comedy of Errors," "Midsummer Night's Dream," "Taming of the Shrew," "Twelfth Night," "Winter's Tale," "Richard II," 3, "Henry IV.," 1, "Henry V.," 3, "Henry VII.," "Richard III," "Coriolanus," "Titus Andronicus," "Timon of Athens," "Romeo and Juliet," "Julius Caesar," "Othello," "Anthony and Cleopatra," and "Cymbeline."

Four comedies, "The Merry Wives of Windsor," "The Comedy of Errors," "Much Ado," and "The Merchant of Venice," received a special mark of commendation. At the end of the text of each of these plays the Inquisitor has inserted the word "good." "The Merry Wives" and "The Comedy of Errors" are wholly untouched, and "Much Ado" and the "Merchant" come off scot free, save for the deletion of a few lines comedy of some frank remarks by Margaret, Hero's waiting woman, with the addressing her mistress for her wedding, and the deletion from "The Merchant" of a licentious reflection on the Jew when he is lamenting his daughter's elopement. The rest of the comedies are badly mutilated. In "The Tempest" only two expressions are inked out, viz.: "a most unlucky wench," and the epithet "holiday" in the phrase a "holiday fool." In "Love's Labor Lost," Boyet's free jesting with Rosaline, the lady in waiting and the French princess, is scored through, and "Saint Cupid" is deprived of his canonization by the erasure of the word "Saint"; nor is "Saint Jaques" allowed to retain his pretty when the Princess couples him with "Saint Cupid." In "As You Like It" Rosalind's remark about Orlando, that "his blushing is as full of sanctity as the touch of holy bread," disappears, like the Clown's remark in "All's Well" "as the nun's lips to the friar's mouth," when the speaker is Jessica, against the harmonies of nature.

Sir Auckland Geddes Was Anything But Beloved by British House of Commons

Whenever the former assistant professor of anatomy in the medical faculty of McGill University, Montreal, Canada, commenced to lecture the House of Commons, the most exquisite members of that celebrated club used to writhe and feel acute like small boys in the force of the superior taskmasters at Eton, or Rugby, or Winchester. For they used to loathe him and his manner! More unpopular than his brother, the business man and engineer, if that were possible. No. Particularly his manner at all, old thing. In fact, Bill Bean, a most unparliamentary and frightfully improper manner, and all that sort of thing, old top. Frightfull Jolly beastly! Meanwhile, the lecture (alias a speech) would go on for the most benevolently authoritative and disconcerting manner—Sir Geddes manner.

Dr. Geddes has been "doctored" again, this time by the University of Toronto, only it was his Excellency, Rt. Hon. Sir Auckland Campbell Geddes, M.D., D.C.L., F.C.K.C.B., His Britannic Majesty's Ambassador pl to the United States. Like Sir Robert Borden, popular Chancellor of the Exchequer, Sir Auckland is a product of John Watson's College, Edinburgh. His further training was in medicine, and so he never acquired quite the Oxford manner, getting no nearer to the universities" than Edinburgh, November the Commons hated him.

But he was a soldier in the South African campaigns with the 3rd Highland Light Infantry, and in the Great War proved his quality as an administrator, as director of recruiting and director of national service before entering the Cabinet and taking up his course as lecturer on local government, reconstruction and trade in the House of Commons, as Minister in charge successively of those vital departments of after-war Government. When he left for Washington the Commoners, whether at his own Unionist stripe, or of opposing parties, cared little that he had been promoted, so long as he had gone. His unpopularity with them, however, was not so great that they could deny his solid merits and good-will. In honoring him the University of Toronto recognized brilliant services and abilities.

Wonder Weighing Machine.

In the gold room of the Bank of England stands the most remarkable balance in the world. This huge pair of scales is seven feet high and weighs almost two tons.

Place in the scale pan a huge gold bar that two men can scarcely lift, and the great balancer will give its weight to a minute fraction of a grain.

In addition to being able to deal accurately with heavy weights, it is so delicate that even a fly crawling over the pan will cause the pointer to move more than a hand's breath. It will weigh a quarter of an ton of gold or a single cigarette paper with equal ease.

The cost of this machine ran into many thousands of pounds, for every part had to be made with the most minute accuracy.

The slightest trace of moisture would throw the whole machine out, and even dust invisible to the eye would affect its accuracy, for the balance would register the weight of the dust as well as that of the gold.

Picture on a Pin's Head.

What is undoubtedly one of the smallest engravings in the world has been made by Mr. C. Hadley, a former Government engraver, of Washington.

It is a picture of the United States capitol cut on the gold head of a pin. Three days were spent in getting a finely polished surface on the pin-head, and the engraving took four months to complete.

So small is the picture, which was stippled out with fine diamond points under a powerful glass, that it can only be seen through a microscope.

The details—doors, windows, columns, and so on—are all perfect.

Mulching Paper.

Weeding would become a lost art if the use of mulching paper could be applied to all gardens as successfully as it is in growing pineapples, says an article in Popular Mechanics. In this case the strips of paper are rolled out where the young plants are planted, and slits are cut in the paper through which the pineapple suckers are planted.

ASSOCIATION OF LIFE INSURANCE PRESIDENTS

cause they take many people still to die prime of life and at the height of their usefulness. The prevention of these deaths represents the real problem of the public health movement of the present time and of the immediate future. They are the chief source of the life waste in 1922.

"There is first, of all brief disease, which has, in recent years, become the most important of the causes of death. We estimate that this year there will be in Continental United States and in Canada in round numbers about 180,000 deaths from this condition. Among the insured we may count on approximately 27,000 such deaths this year. It is altogether a mistake to suppose that these fatalities are limited to old people. In fact among the insured about 5 per cent. of these deaths are among children under 15 years of age and fully 30 per cent. of them involve persons under 30 years of age. The average age at death from heart disease among insured persons is 56 years. There is also a great deal of early mortality from Bright's disease, although not to the same extent as from heart disease. Twenty-seven per cent. of all the deaths from this cause among insured persons are among those under 50 years and the average at death is 58 years. Finally, cerebral hemorrhage which is presumably a disease of old age, shows fifteen per cent. of all its fatalities under age 50. These three conditions when combined account for 28 per cent. of all the deaths that occur each year. Together they reduce the life span a total of about 1 years. For each one of these deaths, there are a considerable number of cases of prolonged and serious illness and of protracted disability.

"The insurance medical examination puts into our hands an opportunity for health service which we have not developed at all," said Dr. Knight. "Every year the records of our companies show from 7 to 10 per cent. of applicants rejected or postponed for insurance. We should, I believe, work out a way for informing rejected and postponed applicants of the causes for rejection or postponement, in every case where we can safely do so." Dr. Knight also advocated periodical physical examinations of policyholders, already adopted by a few life insurance companies. "These two activities," said Dr. Knight, "would seem to me to make at the present time a good beginning which not one or two companies, but all companies, might well undertake. They are works whose benefits are demonstrately, quickly visible; they appeal to the individual sense of gratitude; for health given, for service rendered they make good-will for insurance institutions. In this latter respect, periodical medical examinations more than pay for themselves.

"Such a program, if carried out effectively, will influence the mortality from the so-called degenerative diseases; it will pave the way for the development of this form of health service by official health organizations and by employers in industrial establishments. Things, obviously, in the field for the near future and the insurance companies can blaze the trail. Nothing can stop further increase in our control of the communicable diseases; the immediate necessity for action against them assures the continuation of that work. It is in the field of hygiene of the person that the great future of health work lies. How great is the stake, is indicated by the possibility of adding ten years to the average duration of human life. Nor is this an idle conjecture. The expectation of life at birth is, in America, at the present time between 54 and 55 years. In New Zealand, on the other hand, where conditions of life are apparently most favorable, the expectation is well over 60 years. By combining the best mortality conditions in the various parts of the world into a hypothetical life table, a life expectation of 65 years is obtained. This means that with the medical and sanitary knowledge we have, expectation of life can be made 65 years be establishing among us the best conditions of mortality now prevailing in various parts of the world. That is a goal worth striving for, if we realize that every year of added life is of an added money net increase of $500 to the nation's wealth quite apart from the immeasurable gains and the added happiness of many families, which might otherwise be broken. The cost of the attainment of this result will be covered many times. It is most encouraging that such expenditures as have been incurred by life insurance companies in their attack on disease have paid good dividends. The outlook for the future is even brighter. The position of the companies is strategic their opportunities are great, their responsibility is obvious and definite."

New York, Dec. 8.—"Life insurance companies have been largely instrumental in establishing the farm mortgage as a premier investment in the United States for safety and reliability of income," said Vice-President William Kingsley of the Penn Mutual Life Insurance Co., of Philadelphia, at the Sixteenth Annual Convention of the Association of Life Insurance Presidents here this afternoon. Mr. Kingsley, who spoke on the topic "Farm Mortgages in the Pulse of Agricultural Health," explained that the total farm mortgage indebtedness in the United States has been estimated at but 12 per cent. of the total value of farm lands and buildings and that 60 per cent. of the farms are unincumbered. Mr. Kingsley said:

"Agriculture is then carrying a much smaller burden of indebtedness than any other business and has with good but limited buffer than any of our American industry on account this smaller burden of debt. It is the basic industry of the nation and of the farm home is the nucleus of the nation. The great agricultural areas of America have been improved and their life made better through the helpful application of life insurance funds throughout a period of more than fifty years.

"Referring to statistics applying to life insurance companies whose assets comprise about 90 per cent. of the total assets of all the American companies, Mr. Kingsley said that in the seven years ended with 1921, investments in farm mortgages had jumped from $000,000,000 to $1,300,000,000, and that for the first time the companies' loans on farm property had come to exceed their investments in city mortgages. In the current year up to November first, farm mortgages increased over $112,000,000, making the up-to-date total holdings of the life insurance companies in this class of security $1,418,000,000.

Mr. Kingsley predicted the likelihood of greater increases in investments in mortgage loans, especially farm loans. He said: "At the present time about 11 per cent. of the life insurance companies' admitted assets are invested in United States Government bonds. As the necessity for further investment in Government securities has now terminated, there will undoubtedly be a yet greater increase in insurance company holdings of mortgages, and particularly of mortgages secured by farm properties."

"The only geographical sections which show decreases in farm loans held by life companies during the seven-year period from 1921 to 1921 are the New England and Middle Atlantic States, and these decreases were of negligible amount," said Mr. Kingsley. "The greatest increase, $223,000,000, or over 48 per cent. of the total increase in farm mortgage investments, was in the Northwestern section. The Southwest, with $170,000,000 or nearly 38 per cent., was next in importance followed by the Central Northern, with $61,000,000 or nearly 16 per cent. It will thus be seen that nearly 75 per cent. of the total increase in farm mortgage loans in the great agricultural sections of the Northwest and Southwest; and when the population, farm values and aggregate farm loans of these sections increased approximately 50 per cent in ten years, the farm loans of life insurance companies increased 75 per cent. in seven years, in rate per cent. of increase of 1921 farm loans over the amounts in 1914 of the different sections, however, neither Northwest nor Southwest stands first. The greatest relative increase occurred in the Gulf and Mississippi Valley States, where farm mortgage loans of life insurance companies in 1921 exceeded those of 1914 by more than 233 per cent. The South Atlantic States follow with an increase of 232 per cent.; the Northwestern, 216; and 54 per cent. increase the Southwest with 90.55 per cent.; the Pacific fifth, with 84.62 per cent.; the Central Northern sixth, with 55.29 per cent. That the States south of the Potomac and Ohio and east of the Mississippi show by far the most rapid increase in farm mortgage investments of life insurance companies of any section of the country. These gains comport generally with the marked improvement which has characterized agricultural conditions in the Southern States during the past decade."

The geographical distribution of the outstanding farm mortgage loans of life insurance companies at the end of 1921 was stated to be as follows:

	Amount of Farm Loans
Northwestern	$701,747,847
Southwestern	357,474,231
Central Northern	191,257,187
Gulf & Mississippi Valley	65,588,251
South Atlantic	61,730,476
Pacific	30,695,958
Middle Atlantic	172,097
Territories & Foreign	373,126
New England	28,472
Total	$1,303,611,227

ABOUT SWEET CLOVER

Hints Regarding the Cutting, Curing and Siloing.

Should Be Cut Before Blooming—Is Filling the 80th Tramp Wolf—Singer Recommend the Use of Soil—Old Dobbin Steals a March on the Tractor.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

Sweet clover should be cut for hay in the green, sappy state just before blooming; if cut for hay, great care should be taken to properly cure it, as would seem that the best method is for soil it in the field and dry it thoroughly before drawing it to the silo. Wet, damp or poorly-cured hay provides ideal conditions for the development of mould.

As sweet clover hay is difficult to cure under the best conditions a very good means of preserving it would seem to be in the form of silage. Our experience of the past season, however, has revealed the fact that certain precautions are necessary in making silage if it is to come out of the silo green, succulent, and free from mould.

When to Cut for Silage.

Sweet clover for silage should be cut at the same time as for hay, i.e., just before blooming. The binder should be followed as closely as possible with the waggons and the sweet clover put into the silo at once. It should not be left lying on the ground for even a day, especially during hot, dry weather. The knives of the cutting box should be set to cut the sweet clover as fine as possible. If for any reason the feed seems dry a stream of water should be run into the cutting box, for it is essential to have the sweet clover well moistened so that it can be well packed in the silo.

Clover Should Be Carefully Tramped.

One of the most important steps in the making of good silage is to be sure that it is spread evenly and tramped thoroughly in the silo. Seventy per cent. of the failures in making first-class silage last year were due to insufficient packing. At least two men—preferably more—are necessary to properly tramp sweet clover in the silo. Great care should be taken to see that it is particularly well tramped around the edge. Neglect to properly pack the silage was quite apparent throughout the country this spring, and it was not always in ratio to the number of men in the silo. One farmer said he had two men in his silo while it was being filled last summer, and if he would not explain why one half of the silage was rotten from the top to the bottom, and that on the opposite side from the blower pipe. The condition was easily explained. One man tramped it was realized that the two men had stood on either side of where the cut feed was blown in, and had simply packed it over to the sides and had did not bother tramping at all. Because sweet clover has a holler stem and has not the weight that cut corn has it requires to be packed more firmly to prevent the development of mould.

Some Farmers Recommend the Use of Salt.

The use of salt either in curing the hay or in the silo is strongly recommended by some farmers, and the sweet clover is not being handled under the most favorable conditions it would probably pay the curing of the fodder.

In conclusion, it may be well to sum up the four important steps that must be followed if the sweet clover is going to be ensilaged in the best possible manner.

(1) It should be cut before blossoming.

(2) It should not be allowed to lie in the field after being cut.

(3) It should not be cut fine.

(4) It should be tramped well.—Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph.

Old Dobbin Steals March on Tractor.

"Tractor manufacturers and horse breeders' associations may view the relative merits of tractors and horses as sources of farm power with all the sagacity of which they are capable," declares O. A. Pond, in charge of the cost accounting section at Minnesota University Farm, "but the farmer who has both available keeps his eye steadfastly on the relative prices of horse-feed and gas and adjusts his power supply accordingly."

Recently authorized data collected showed but 298 hours of use per tractor in 1921 as compared with 413 hours the year previous, a decrease of 28 per cent. The use of horse labor, on the other hand, increased an average of 610 hours per farm during the same period.

The fact that tractor fuel declined only 19 per cent. in price while horse feed decreased 55 per cent. partly explains the change.

In the Orchard.

The foliage of stone fruits, as cherry, plum, and peach, is on the whole quite tender, and the arsenical sprays should be employed with caution. Arsenate of lead is less likely to do harm—though more than two applications, especially to peach, may cause shotholing, dropping of leaves, and burning of fruit.

The care of the home orchard provides for many pleasant, congenial and profitable occupations for those who enjoy seeing things grow.

Important In Chicken Yard.

The health of our family depends largely upon the kind of feed that is given them and the way it is served. It is just as important to feed right in the chicken yard. Here the right kind of feed and see that it is not infested in any way.

SKINNING AN ANIMAL

How to Get the Best Out of a Hide.

Skin While the Carcass Is Warm—Have the Knife Sharp—Avoid Wrinkling — Cut Carefully Along the Legs.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

During the autumn season, considerable farm butchering is done, and in the operation many good hides are spoiled in the skinning. To do a good job easily select a clean hard spot in the shelter of a tree or in a building where the light is good. A block and tackle or other hoist arrangement should be rigged in a convenient position.

Skin While Carcass Is Warm.

The animal should be clean; if not it will be different to keep the hide and carcass in proper condition. The skinning should start immediately the animal is dead, and the more quickly it is done while the animal is warm the more easily the hide will come off. Make sure that the knife is sharp. After stunning and sticking the animal it should be suspended to facilitate bleeding. When in the suspended position the operator should begin skinning the hind cheeks and face. When skinning over the face leave the flesh on the head. The presence of meat on the hide is an objection. The head is removed from the neck at the atlas joint, or end of the spinal column. The horns should not be removed from the skull. With the head out of the way the animal should be completely lowered and placed breast up, being held in this position by a spiked stick between brisket and floor. The legs should then be skinned out and the feet removed.

Avoid Forming of Wrinkles.

After removing the feet the hide should be ripped down the belly from the stitking cut to the tail. The sides should then be skinned by working forward to the brisket and then back to the inside of the hind leg, close to the tail. The free hand should be used to lift away, pulling outward and upward against the knife. Care should be taken to prevent the formation of wrinkles under the hide as it is being removed. The hide should be skinned off nearly to the back bone, leaving it attached at the thighs and shoulders. Change the prop over to the other side of brisket and skin the other side in the same manner. Cut Carefully About the Legs.

For the cut at the front legs start in the center, cutting the skin well forward at the brisket and in advance of the front legs, cut down to the junction of the fore leg and body and slowly, free the inside of it by means the cut made when skinning the shin. In skinning the hind legs start at the center line about six inches from the tail and split the skin in straight line to the hock. Skin over the rump and thighs. At this stage it is necessary to cut above the hock joints and raise the carcass so that the shoulder will rest flat on the floor. Split the skin on the under side of the tail and skin out the tail bone to the end.

Skin Away From Tail and Legs.

Skin the hide carefully away from the base of the tail and strip from the legs and back, using the fat or a blunt instrument such as a knife handle, shining since a dull back of a cleaver. Be careful and do not cut the hide since each cut reduces the value. When skinned down to the shoulders the carcass is hoisted clear of the floor and the skinning completed down over the neck. Split the head by cutting lengthwise and skin away from each side in. The following is from the Department of Agriculture, Toronto.

Cheap Ice For the Farmer.

Farmers who have not already done so should prepare to lay by a store of ice for cooling purposes and for household use next summer. The cost of harvesting and storing ice by one's self was by cutting lengthwise and cross cuts, and iron bars for pushing the blocks of ice around.

A rough board enclosure ten feet square and eight feet high will hold sufficient ice to provide fifty pounds per day for 120 days after delivery, for a reasonable amount of wastage. An important fact to be remembered is that the smaller the quantity of ice stored the larger is the proportion of the boards and the ice, which should always be filled with sawdust. This should be similarly covered. The enclosure should be sawdust. The soil beneath the enclosure is important, as if it is of a very gravel under the sawdust is advisable.

If sawdust is not obtainable, planer mill shavings will serve. If neither is to be had, two feet of marsh hay or any wild hay will answer. The roughest kind of a shed that will resist the weather is all that is required.

FEW HORSE-DRAWN VEHICLES

Carriage and Wagon Builders Have Almost Given Up That Branch of the Business.

The members of a firm formerly prominent in selling horse-drawn vehicles on the Pacific coast give some interesting figures showing how the carriage and wagon builders have lost business, due to the inroads of the automobile industry in the transportation field.

It seems that there were 14,000 buggies sold in Los Angeles county alone in 1906, and 6,500 wagons. Two years later the first motorcar appeared and business thereafter declined steadily. It is doubtful if 100 buggies a year are sold now in California. Salesmen working in rural districts used to sell an average of two buggies a day and more sets of harness. One prominent wagon builder sold 20,000,000 worth of horse-drawn vehicles in 1896. In 1905 they stopped manufacturing these and concentrated their production for cities on motorcars, which they had gradually developed as their wagon trade decreased.

Not all firms were so far-sighted or fortunate, however, and many once active firms formerly manufactured thousands of horse-drawn vehicles are but a memory. Most wagon builders of progressive mind installed motorcar departments and are now reaping a harvest as manufacturers of special truck and van bodies to be fitted to standardized motor truck chassis, work for which their mechanical equipment, working forces and experience are particularly well adapted.

MOTOR FUEL SUPPLY SHORT

Gasoline Cannot Be Relied On to Fill Demand—Alcohol the Coming Power.

Mineral oils vary very much in their make-up. Those of Mexico are particularly rich in the heavier ingredients and are therefore excellently adapted for use as fuel. The lighter oils yield more kerosene and gasoline.

The prospect of gasoline supply of Americans reason for anxiety. It has been increased enormously within the last ten years, but the growth of the output has been only one-third so great as the growth of the automobile production. There are now 7,000,000 automobiles in the United States; by the end of the present year there will be 10,000,000.

Nothing is more certain than that the supply of gasoline will not keep pace with the increasing demand. We shall have to look to coal tar as a source of motor fuel. Already "benzol," a by-product of the distillation of bituminous coal, is being used for this purpose in considerable quantities. Another fuel available (if carburetors and motors are redesigned) is alcohol, which can be obtained in unlimited quantities from molasses, unmarketable potatoes, and all sorts of vegetable wastes.

Watching Life of Plants.

From fuller information now at hand in regard to the machine by aid of which the Indian scientist, Sir J. C. Bose, has been making visible in London the lagrowth of plants, shows that he does more than make visible what everybody already knew—that plants increase in size. He has revealed that the growth of a plant is by no means steady or continuous—that it is subject to many of the influences besides mere nutriment that affect the growth of animals. In short, the machine, which is called a crescograph and magnifies movement many million times, proves that plants are much more alive than it is customary to credit them with being, and it is not an altogether fanciful notion that when the facts in relation to plant life become better known, something of consideration for their "feelings" and something of compassion about treating them cruelly may develop.

Pharmacy Popular.

Pharmacy is a popular pursuit among the women of South Africa, according to a T. W. O. A. leader in that country, because it is a protected profession and is conducted usually in South American girls have not gone into public life and into the business of the world and the trades as North American girls have and still consider, as a rule, only the so-called protected lines of work. They teach and sew and a few have become nurses and physicians, but most women who take up any profession train for nursing, medicine or pharmacy. Chemistry is also a popular study.

Rather Embarrassing.

We had just moved into a new house. I was dressing when the doctor and mother went to the door. Sure enough it was the young man I was trying to avoid. But instead of saying I was not at home, mother said: "Oh, but I must show you our new house." Everything was lovely until approaching the closet, where I was crouched down on the floor, full dressed, mother said: "This is where we keep all our dirty and soiled rush," and opened the door.

LOCAL REGIMENT IS INSPECTED

Major-General Elmsley Inspecting Officer for the Occasion

At the armouries last night the annual inspection of the Argyll Light Infantry took place and was witnessed by a goodly number of spectators. The inspecting officer was Major-General J. E. Elmsley, C.B., C.M.G., D.S.O., Commanding Officer military district No. 3.

Lieut.-Col. R. Vanderwater, D. S. O., the commanding officer of the regiment, was in command with Adj. Major McManus second in command. Pending the arrival of the inspecting officers the Battalion was drawn up and was drilled to some extent. Shortly after 8 o'clock Major General Elmsley, accompanied by Paymaster Lt.-Col. Foulis and Major S. E. Vermilyea arrived at the armouries and were accorded the general salute. The officers and men of the infantry looked smart, presenting a fine military appearance. The regiment as a whole was first inspected and put through various manoeuvres which were well executed. Following this the march past took place, Major-General Elmsley taking the salute from the south side of the armouries. Following this each of the four companies was put through a drill. The inspection throughout appeared to be most successful. The officers in command of the Infantry and the various companies were as follows:

RESULT OF PRELIMINARY ELECTIONS

Eight Nominees Are Now Selected to Fill Four Vacancies in C. of C. Board

No less than sixty-three candidates were nominated in the Chamber of Commerce primary elections that were concluded at four o'clock yesterday afternoon. A remarkably large vote was polled, indicating keen interest on the part of the members to secure an able and vigorous directorate.

The eight who received the highest number of votes and whose names will go on the ballot for the final election next week are in alphabetical order, as follows:

ADJOURNED MEETING OF RATEPAYERS

Many Matters Discussed—Irregularities in High Land Avenue Sewer—

Last night in the City Hall an adjourned meeting of the Ratepayers' Association took place. W. H. Panter presided and the meeting was declared to be informal. About forty members were present. Capt. Hunter took over the duties of secretary.

The audited financial statement was read and the meeting received and approved of same.

There was considerable discussion in connection with the injustice of the Provincial charge of 30% of the cost of upkeep of suburban roads leading into the city. It was learned from communications that the 1921 city council took this matter up with the Provincial body with no results. The matter was allowed to drop, after a few points were brought out. Mr. G. A. Bennett stated that Mr. Ramey always assists but is very ordinary. The idea lies in the fact that Belleville is an incorporated city says Mr. W. A. Woolley. Ottawa is still a town, but with a larger population, and does not pay this tax.

The Highland Ave., (formerly Consecon) sewer was discussed. A report from Ald. Patterson stated that serious irregularities existed and that an unusual, approximate $1,000 was overpaid to the contractor, Mr. Bumbaree. Mr. W. A. Woolley made a motion that the matter request the engineer to furnish a report on the efficiency and thoroughness of this work, and to secure from the contractor a refund of any overpayment. This report from the council will be taken up at a regular meeting of the ratepayers which it is proposed to have Ald. Patterson, late engineer J. H. Mills, and engineer Bumbaree present. Mr. Chas. Sam Treverton seconded the motion.

Fixed assessments came in for a great deal of discussion. It was pointed out that only two of the many fixed assessments in the city were made by by-law and that was the Meade Manufacturing Works Ltd., with two years to run, and Graham's Ltd., with three years to run. All other fixed assessments were by resolution only. Dr. Farley moved and C. H. Bronson seconded that all fixed assessments be fixed by by-law be accepted and that a copy of this motion be sent to the city council.

Other matters and amendments to the above were discussed and possible motions were made but no other business matriculated.

CATHOLIC CHURCH PRIESTHOOD IS NOT SPLIT

Ottawa, Dec. 9.—The report that the Catholic church in France is faced with a split in the priesthood on the question of marriage of priests is an abominable calumny, declared Rev. Father Louis Lejeune of the University of Ottawa before the congregation of the Blessed Sacrament yesterday. "I, as native of Brittany, can stand up and say that there is no split."

THE COAL QUESTION

Many Disquieting Rumors Going About City—Most of Them Unfounded

On the streets many and varied tales of the coal situation are heard, such as that hard coal is to be had in quantities in nearby towns for $15.00 a ton, that coal is being shipped out of Belleville to be sold in larger cities for higher prices, etc., etc. The Intelligencer has made inquiries into the matter, and has found that such rumors are entirely in error. Our coal dealers have been characterized by some, as being scoundrels and profiteers. From what the Intelligencer can learn the people of Belleville have had fair treatment as to prices although the supply of hard coal in the city is not quite as to create an alarming situation.

No hard coal has been shipped out of Belleville and vicinity that has been purchased for Belleville. Coal has been sent to Point Anne which undoubtedly always procures its coal through Belleville dealers.

Certain coal has been transhipped from vessels to barges at the docks in the harbor to cars over the government dock here, and delivered to the flailways for delivery in consumption, but these transactions have been entirely separate and apart from any deal in coal that was handled by dealers in Belleville for local consumption. It is true that a local dealer handled the transaction but he was done according to instructions and orders received from Federal authorities at Ottawa. This coal could easily have been transhipped at Cobourg or Kingston, thus taking work from Belleville.

It is true that Kingston has ordered and will probably secure 10,000 tons of coal. This business deal was put through by Kingston men with the Ogdensburg Towing and Coal Company. Belleville has tried to do the same and results may be obtained but the coal will be rail coal.

The mayor and fuel controller with have been alive to the situation and are doing good work. These men do not want Belleville dealers to be forced to buy coal through brokers.

Yesterday Mayor Hanna was questioned re three cars of coal, now at Deseronto, $16.25 a ton, Belleville. This was through brokers and would mean $15.50 a ton delivered.

The situation is acute, but no good purposes will be served, by starting rumors, or passing them on. The Ottawa will do better to keep behind the coal dealers, and assist them, as long as they continue to do their best. It is not the intention of this paper to eulogize the coal dealers of this city, for coal can be secured where they have played squarely. If any citizen feels that such is not the case the Intelligencer would be glad to be placed in possession of the facts and they will be fully investigated.

WARDEN'S BANQUET WAS | ENJOYABLE FUNCTION

Henry Kells, Esq., Warden of Hastings County, and Reeve of Madoc Township, Was Caned by Brother Municipal Officers—Excellent Get-together

Banquet at Hotel Quinte Given by Warden, Where Fine Speeches are Heard

Hotel Quinte was the scene of a real good time, last night, where, as one of the chief speakers of the evening said, "Everything was just right," when members of the County Council, Belleville City Council, officials and friends, were the guests of Henry Kells, Warden of the county of Hastings, at his banquet.

Expressions of regret, at their inability to be present, were sent by Mr. R. Masson, K.C., Solicitor for Belleville and for the county, Mr. W. Carnew, K.C., County Crown Attorney, Mr. H. W. Ackerman, Mr. James Bone, Mr. F. D. Diamond, and Mr. R. J. Graham.

The guests sat in to the banquet shortly after 8 P. M. and did justice to a regular meal, from soup to nuts, and during the dinner, snappy songs were handled by the happy guests, accompanied by the orchestra from the Graves Music Co., and led by Mr. Harry McKay.

Mr. W. H. Nugent, County Clerk, was the toast master, and he handled this important position very efficiently.

Among those who sat on either side of Warden Kells at the head table, were the members of the Provincial Government, Clerk of Commerce officials and Mayor Hanna and members of the city council.

During the evening, between toasts and the various speeches, Jolly Hastingsonians" were sung with much fervour.

Mr. W. H. Nugent, chairman, in his opening remarks, thanked those present for the honor of being selected to fill such an important office as toastmaster. "Warden Kells," said he, "Has gone the limit to make this banquet a success." The chairman was loud in his praise for Warden Kells, classing him as a most efficient and popular official.

Reeve Walter Wiggins of Faraday township, in a neat speech, conferred the honour, usually conferred upon Wardens at the conclusion of their term of office. Mr. Wiggins stated that in his work with Warden Kells, he had always found him efficient and popular. Warden Kells was then presented with a gold headed cane.

Ex-Warden J. G. Sills of Hastings County, maintained that Hastings was one of the greatest counties in the Province, in agriculture, minerals and other ways. Belleville was also lauded as possessing a number of the greatest industries in the province.

Mayor J. V. Wahn of Tyendinaga also spoke a few words of praise for the county and its Warden.

WARDEN KELLS

"For He's a Jolly Good Fellow."

"I have been greatly impressed by the words expressed by the previous speakers. I will always look back with a great deal of pleasure to this hour. I wish to thank every person present for the honour conferred upon me to-night. The purpose of the banquet to-night, was to draw the residents of the county and the surrounding villages closer together, I am always at home in Belleville, where friendship exists against a regret that number of citizens who were unable to attend this banquet. I appreciate your kindness, and I thank you once more."

The toast to Municipal Institutions was proposed by Ex-Warden Dr. A. T. Embury, Reeve of Brancroft. Dr. Embury in opening, stated that this toast was really a toast, proposed to vindicate sympathy in municipal institutions.

"This is one of the best things possible for our community, dispelling aloofness between city and county people. It is of importance for the unbiased, municipal officials.

Mr. W. C. Mikel, K.C., in responding to the toast, expressed his appreciation for Warden Henry Kells, having known him for years. "Everything tonight is just right," said Mr. Mikel. "Municipal institutions are very imperative in a country, because municipal legislation is constantly in touch with everyone in thecountry.

There were four periods of Municipal Institutions. First the French System, secondly British System which was principally Military, this, after the American Revolution, the town meeting or U.E.L. System. This period commenced when the U. E. Loyalists migrated from New York city to Canada. Municipal Institutions commenced right here in this district.

These people came into a country with nothing but its native forests, and hacked out their homes, and began their meetings, simple as they were, which began municipal institution proceedings of today. The township of Sidney has the record of the proceedings of a town meeting held in, 1791. Adolphustown preserves a similar record from the year 1794. The sacrifices and achievements of the U. E. Loyalists, made British North America, and made possible municipal institutions. They threw their ALL away for the sake of a principle. The last period of Municipal institutions commenced in 1850, and marked the beginning of our present system of government.

Mayor Charles Hanna stated that municipal workers were either worshipped or hated. He was a man who knew there is work to be done, but a shirker when there is a speech to be made. Warden Kells was the fortunate of Warden Kells to the city council. We wish to be associated with the county officials.

Mr. P. E. O'Flynn hoped that Warden Kells would not require the case with which he was put through second-ed, as an aid in walking, for a long time. Municipal Institutions were the two bodies of Democracy, upon these men represent Democracy, in the most local manner possible. Mr. O'Flynn, who has had 27 years experience in municipal work, was in a splendid position to speak on this subject.

Mr. W. E. Tummon of Tweed then rendered a song, "She's the Last For Me" in his usual good voice. Mr. Tummon played the accompaniment on the piano.

The toast to the Dominion Parliament was proposed by His Honor Judge Wills.

JUDGE WILLS

"It is a pleasure to see the spirit of fellowship exhibited here. We have the greatest respect for our members in the Dominion Parliament. Our representative men have gone out into the world, and made names for themselves and for Canada. Having as a Nova Scotian is a typical example." Mr. Guss Porter, K.C., M.P., on behalf of the Dominion Parliament, thanked those present for the sentiments shown in which the provincial body was received. After heartily congratulating Warden Kells, Mr. Porter spoke in appreciation of Agnes McPoe, member of The Board of Education, for gracing the banquet with her presence. Having an association of 25 years with parliament causes me to be rather cautious, present for the honour conferred upon me to-night. The purpose of the banquet to-night, was to draw the residents of the county and the surrounding villages closer together, I am always at home in Belleville, where friendship exists against a regret that number of citizens who were unable to attend this banquet. I appreciate your kindness, and I thank you once more."

try on the face of the earth where a dollar is worth a 100 cents. Our railways and canal systems, are not surpassed on the North American Continent, according to our population. Each department has a particular duty to perform, and there are 14 such departments.

The Department of Immigration great work. We have not a heterogeneous population, but a population growing up in a virile and industrious manner, with the laws of the country.

Our Department of Justice sees to it that our law is carried out to the letter, especially the criminal law. So with all departments, and though one sentiment better than another, we might congratulate ourselves upon the work accomplished by our parliaments. Our form of Government is as good as any country has ever devised, and better than many countries have in vogue.

T. H. THOMPSON

T. H. Thompson, M. P., was loud in his praise for Warden Kells, who has rendered such valuable services to the country, and expressed his pleasure at seeing such a splendid ex-soldier function. Mr. Thompson heartily agreed with the statements of Mr. Porter with regard to the work of the Dominion Parliament.

Mr. John McIntosh then sang the good old Scotch song "The Bonnie Banks of Loch Lomond," as only a typical Scotchman can.

Mr. James Clark in rising to propose the toast to the Ontario Legislature, expressed the honour felt by him in proposing a toast to such a wonderful province, the banner province of the Dominion, from any standpoint.

Mr. H. K. Denyes, M.L.A., responded to this toast, recalling the memories of Sir Mackenzie Bowell, and Mr. Thomas Wills, at the old time banquets, and their spicy speeches. These well known men were classed by the speaker as two of the greatest men who ever lived in Hastings county. Mr. Denyes was not sure whether the U.F.O., a new political government would stay or not, some of them do not stay always.

Mr. W. H. Ireland, M.L.A., expressed delight at being present to honour the Warden of the banner county, and hoped that all the municipal officials would get an acclamation.

Mr. H. C. McKay rendered a solo, "Flower Of Allan," in fine voice, Mrs. Barnett accompanying on the piano.

Mr. C. S. Rollins proposed the toast to the visitors, and in a few words paid high tribute to the work of Warden Kells.

Mr. W. J. Hill, in a few well chosen words responded to this toast, and congratulated Warden Kells upon his highest terms of him. Mr. J. D. Bankier, favored the guests with a vocal solo, which was one of the hits of the evening. Mr. Bankier possesses a pleasing tenor voice.

Mr. Jack Lill, who was called upon for a few words, thanked Warden Kells for the invitation to his banquet and expressed his pleasure at having been present.

Owing to the late hour, it was regretfully that the toast to the City of Belleville and the Chamber of Commerce, had to be omitted. The names of Mr. Gwen Hertig, Mr. George Catrom and Mr. H. F. Ketcheson were associated with this toast.

The happy gathering broke up about midnight with the singing of Auld Lang Syne.

MUSIC and DRAMA

FILM SHOWS VALUE OF STYLE

"As good be out of the world as out of the fashion," warned Colley Cibber years ago. The truth of this is amply borne out in "Beauty's Worth," the Second Cosmopolitan Production starring Marion Davies, which is the feature attraction at Griffin's Theatre. In this romantic picture, directed by Robert G. Vignola, the star has the role of a quiet, shy Quakeress whose beauty is obscured by her old-fashioned and severe garb. It is a noted artist who sees beauty in her dress and how to win man's hearts.

The charming picture is based on the story by Sophie Kerr. Forrest Stanley, June Elvidge, Truly Shattuck and other noted players are in the cast.

"For Land's Sake," a highly amusing Mermaid comedy, Pathe News, a novel Bray pictograph and Art Accord in the second chapter of the popular adventure play "Buffalo Bill" are being exhibited on the same program.

"HUMAN HEART" DRAWING LARGE CROWDS AT REGENT

"Human Hearts", the Universal-Jewel attraction, starring House Peters, which is being exhibited twice tonight at the Regent Theatre, is an intensely appealing story of family life as it really is in the smaller cities of the country. It is a play that brings tears to the eyes, yet with a vein of comedy running through that brings a smile to wipe away the tears. Presented by a stellar cast it is a production that is certain to go down in Universal history as one of the most appealing pictures of the year.

A new Vodevil Movies, "Apartments Wanted" a funny two-reel Century comedy, are being exhibited on the same program.

MARSHAL NEILAN WILL PRESENT INNOVATION

Marshall Neilan's latest First National feature, "Bits of Life," which comes to Griffin's Theatre Monday, is another innovation in motion picture production.

Offering as it does four separate and distinct stories, "Bits of Life" presents the short story magazine idea on the screen in a manner never before attempted. Each story has a different type of plot, the first episode disclosing a mystery, the second a heart-throb, the third a melodrama and the fourth a farce which is expected to send the patrons into a gale of laugh. In selecting his four stories, Mr. Neilan drew from the works of writers who were peculiarly identified with the respective type of plot they offer in this picture.

The cast includes the largest assemblage of noted players ever offered in one Neilan picture, with such favorites as Wesley Barry, John Bowers, Lon Chaney, Rockcliffe, Fellowes, James Bradbury, Jr., Harriett Hammond, Fred Kirsten, Anna May Wong, Noah Beery and several other very popular actors and actresses.

The entire production was staged under Mr. Neilan's personal direction. The contributing authors are Hugh Wiley, Walter Trumbull, Thomas H. Morrow and Marshall Neilan.

RAILROAD CREW IS USED IN PHOTOPLAY

For one scene in "Steelheart", by William Duncan production which will be shown at the Regent this Monday to Wednesday, the star director filmed a scene showing a group of laborers laying a roadbed of a railroad. The men used formed a crew of the Cuzy Lumber railroad employees. They were finishing a spur recently made by the road.

The story of "Steelheart" is one of the latest Mutt and Jeff comedies, in which Mutt and Jeff's Honeymoon." This brand new comedy with music, of which so much has been heard from during the past few weeks, comes to Griffin's Opera House next Friday night, December 15th, for one night only. It is in two parts and six scenes and written by Nat Leroy. Twenty-five exclusive and extr. compelling song hits will be introduced. This is said to be the best of the Mutt and Jeff series offered their far, exceeding in point of humor and gayety any of the previous adventures and escapades of the beloved and famous twain.

Heard-Hearted Man.

Ambitious Maiden—"I think it is awfully mean. The editor sent my beautiful and pathetic story back without reading it."

Fond Mother—"Dear me! How do you know?"

Ambitious Maiden—"I've looked all through every page and there isn't a teardrop anywhere."

"MUTT AND JEFF" HERE FRIDAY

What promises to be an event extraordinary and one sure to establish a new precedent in the way of genuine merriment, surprises, laughter, fun, revelry and all-round entertainment is the announcement for presentation on the same program.

ROWING POPULAR IN OTTAWA

(Canadian Press.)

Ottawa, Dec. 9.—Judging by the enthusiasm shown at the annual meeting of the Ottawa Rowing Club, the 1923 season promises to be a big year at the famous Earnscliffe clubhouse. Nearly one hundred members pledged themselves to this end and while there was a deficit something like $700 on the balance sheet, one of the honorary members promised to take care of this singlehanded.

President Louis Fournier, the medal-pilot of last season, was re-elected, despite a plea that he be allowed to retire. Harvey Pulford, regarded as one of Canada's oarsmen, was elected a life member. A membership campaign is to be put on in the Spring.

Ottawa seemed will take the water next year with one of the finest executives that the Red and Blue has mustered in recent years. P. D. Ross is again honorary president. The active officers are Mr. Louis Fournier, president, Gordon Dunlop and Felix Bowden was elected vice-presidents, while J. Wade and H. At the conclusion of the inspection the presenting of medals took place, the regiment being drawn up in a hollow square. Names of those presented with the Colonion auxiliary long service medals by Major General J. E. Elmsley C.B., C.M.G., D.S.O., commanding officer military district No. 3, were as follows:

Lieut. W. A. Elliott, Sergt. W. Stanley, Sergt. J. Scott, Sergt. G. E. Dobbs, Sergt. Chas. Lloyd, Sergt. W. A. Lloyd, Sergt. H. A. Thompson, Sergt. F. C. Sharpe, Bandsman D. Brown, Pioneer R. H. Day.

At the conclusion of the inspecting ceremony a reception was held in the officers' quarters and was attended by a number of invited guests. The regimental band was present and dispensed a number of pleasing selections.

A man walking along the street where a deaf lady lived suddenly saw that her house was on fire. Rushing up the steps, he rang the bell. When she came to the door, he said:

"Madam, your house is on fire."

"What did you say?"

"I said your house was on fire."

"Pardon me, but what did you say?"

"Your house is on fire; flames are bursting from the roof. I say your house is on fire."

"Oh, yes, and is that all?"

"Well, that's all can think of."

PREPARE FOR THE FRAY

At the Ontario Liberal-Conservative meeting in Toronto, recently, more than one speaker mentioned the possibility of Premier Drury taking it into his head to go to the people during or at the close of the session, which is to open about the middle of January. Certainly the Government will not call an election at a time to suit the Conservatives, if it can help it. That is one reason for early organization. Another is that many candidates are not well known throughout an entire riding, and time is required for them to get about. .

With the growing tendency to use one riding organization, rather than one for provincial and another for federal purposes, there is no real reason for deferring completion of organization because of expected changes in redistribution of seats. It was pointed out at the meeting in Toronto that when chairmen of municipalities and subdivisions are appointed and working, no redistribution can upset what has been done, because the municipalities and subdivisions of a constituency absorbed must fall into one or other of the remaining ridings.

Mr. Wilson, of Ridgeway, provincial candidate in Niagara Falls, was introduced by Dr. C. J. Musgrove as "first candidate named in the province" for the coming campaign. Mr. M. McKnight, of Dunboyne, has been well on to a year in the field, however, in East Elgin, and his ability highly praised by representatives from that county. Mr. W. R. Dawson, of Inwood, has been named for some months back, in East Lambton. His organization is proceeding well, and includes formation of a number of Women's Conservative Clubs. From now on, the list will no doubt grow rapidly.

The gist of the Toronto meeting was that while the Drury Government has done much to contribute to its own downfall next year—such as boosting the provincial debt from $97,000,000 to $207,000,000 in just two years—and while the province is ripe for return to stable and sane rule such as enjoyed under Sir James Whitney, the party cannot take advantage of the situation without organization, and an ounce of effort or a dollar expended now is worth ten times the amount just before election day.

COINAGE AND STAMPS

The Kingston Standard editorially comes out with a hearty criticism of the new five-cent coin that we have recently produced in our mint at Ottawa. They state that it is generally understood that the mint authorities are satisfied with the coin and that these authorities have assumed that the public feels the same way about it. In this assumption they are in error, the Standard thinks, and we concur with the views of the Standard. The coins are causing some confusion owing to their being similar in size to quarters, and as for their designs, they are very poor indeed, showing that the designers had a very scanty idea of artistic features. But it appears that we will have to put up with them.

Regarding stamps, complaints have been numerous because of the fact that various denominations closely resemble each other in color. Previous to the latest issue we could distinguish stamps by their colors; now we must look for their distinguishing numerals. These numbers are small and not easily made out. A great many people wonder why the stamps are not marked in large, plain figures in the centre and then the designs built around these figures. This would obviate all difficulties in quickly recognizing their values. The small numerals in the corners now must cause much work in checking by postal clerks, with colors so similar. These in themselves are only minor difficulties and are not probably worthy of extended discussion but they could be remedied very easily. We have enough unavoidable burdens imposed on us all, therefore it does seem a shame when these little ones can be so easily corrected, that the powers-that-be do not take up the matter.

There are few farms that have not some corners, hill or ravines, or other unfillable ground, where trees might be the only crop. It is a selfish argument with some, that the planter of a tree does not live long enough to benefit by it. The Dominion Government now emphasizes the repatriating of Canadians from the United States as a cardinal feature of immigration policy. If the King Cabinet decides on further lowering of our tariff bars, to furnish fresh work for American workmen, it will do more expatriating than repatriating.

HERE AND THERE

A HOMELY MIXED CLUB.

Mr. G. Bernard Shaw is among the distinguished lecturers who are visiting the Emerson Club this autumn. He is a near neighbor of the members who forgather in an old house in the Adelphi a few paces from the Buckingham Water Gate, a house unique in still possessing relics of the pump from which the inhabitants of the Adelphi drew water before the days of water rates. The club is not as ancient as its domicile, but it lays claim to be the second oldest club of its kind in London, with a history going back nearly twenty years. Of this it is proud, for those who have experience of mixed clubs will know that for various reasons their lives are often of short duration.

BAND OF ELK IN NORTHERN SASKATCHEWAN.

An interesting sight upon the game that still exists in the wooded and as yet unsettled portions of Saskatchewan, is given in recent reports of M. D. McCloskey, B.L.S., who has been making investigational surveys for the Topographical Surveys Branch, Department of the Interior, in an area some 50 miles by 90 miles in extent, situated directly north and northwest of Prince Albert.

Mr. McCloskey reports that in the Candle Lake district, only some fifty miles northwest of the town of Prince Albert, there is a large band of elk, that is probably the largest band in Canada.

Moose were numerous about thirty-five miles north of the town and in the swampy areas, and caribou were seen in the vicinity of Birchbark Lake.

JUSTICE.

They called him a hero, a regular guy,
When clothed in the cloth of the King,
Quite ready to fight and, if need be, to die,
For freedom and all it might bring.
But those were the days when they needed him much
When Britons were British and proved themselves such.

They said for his wife and his kids they would care.
If only he'd shoulder a gun;
No matter what happened to him over there,
While fighting and battling the Hun,
They'd certainly do what was honest and right
And if he returned they would sure treat him white.

And as he went merrily over the foam,
Fit, hearty and hale, in his prime,
He'd faith in his fellows quite comfy at home,
Who promised to play the sublime,
And see him alright if he ever came back,
So long as he stood by the Union Jack.

And now he is home. What a change, to be sure;
It fills one's called a hero today;
But only a wreck when no doctor can cure,
Shell-shocked, out of work, and no pay.
Oh, yes, they will find him a job with a pick,
But what is the use when the fellow's too sick.

Oh, no, he don't have any pension at all,
He still has his head, limbs and speech;
He also possesses a lusty and soul,
And, yes, there is breath within reach.
So why should they worry 'bout him any more,
He "couldn't contract common ills" at the War.

Now if he had never set sail overseas,
But soldiered at home like a shel,
He might have caught cold from a soft summer breeze
While sleeping the sleep of the cool.
If toothache had followed and swollen his face,
He might have got fifty per cent. in that case.

Oh, where is the justice we Britons adore,
The justice for which thousands died,
The justice he fought for and won in the War,
The justice he now is denied?
Oh, Canada, is there no justice at all
For men who proved true when thou sounded the call?

ENTERING THE ROCKY MOUNTAINS.

The mountain tops are showing in the dawn,
In tertiary colors struggling through the mist;
A fairy view keeps opening to our eyes,
At round the curves the many coaches twist.

Along the pleasant valley of the Bow—
A river setting source from mountain tip,
We pass between the solid ancient walls,
And try the page of history to rip—

From out the massive peaks of greyish stone
That flaunting throw themselves athwart the sky;
So turbulent the scene in days of old,
But now serene and peacefully they lie.

Mute sentinels that guard the inner range
Which, seeing first, would so transfix the eye,
That lesser heights, and less majestic scenes
We'd barely glanced at as we passed them by.

O lovely, peaceful valley of the Bow,
You guide us to a home of giants rare!
For beauty and for worth in life they give,
There's nothing in this world beyond compare.

PRESS OPINIONS

TOO MANY "REVELATIONS" LOOK BAD

(Financial Post)

There are too many mouldy spots in municipal affairs throughout Canada. Ford City, St. Boniface, Cobourg, Oshawa and Nor' Toronto, are a few of the communities where there have been unpleasant revelations of late concerning the conditions of civic accounts and records. These revelations have been brought about in most cases as the result of audits by outside accountants. Probably dozens of other communities are living in fancied ignorance of similar conditions.

All of these exposures emphasize the need for attracting a municipal life the best brains available. And in competition with private business, cities and towns must be prepared to pay higher salaries to get the right civic officers. Low salaries in the end attract only inexperience and inefficiency.

Many towns and villages cannot hope to pay salaries sufficient to attract highly trained men. To the smaller municipalities in particular there is value and profit in such a course of training as has been worked out in Saskatchewan for municipal officers. Such training makes better municipal men; it is appreciated by the treasurers and clerks themselves. Other provinces should follow suit. Improper accounting places temptation in the way of honest men and reflects upon the entire superstructure of municipal credit. The way out is to give municipal officers opportunity to study modern and approved systems; to pay them adequate salaries and to provide necessary examination and control by provincial bureaus of municipal accounting and reporting.

They find it easy to drive, easy to park, economical to run, and comparable in the beauty and richness of its appointments with cars much higher in price.

God rest ye, little children, let nothing you affright,

When Christ, the Child of Nazareth, was born on Christmas Day.

God rest ye, all good Christians; upon

The Lord of all good Christians was

Now all your sorrows He doth heal,

LIFE WAS MISERY !

"I was reading the other day about Nervarentia, about the large number of people who were troubled with this disease. It's fact. Just what my wife had. She felt miserable all the time and was constantly depressed. She would waken in the morning and tell me that something dreadful was going to happen that day. Life was nothing, short of misery for her. We were so depressed that I expected she would lose her mind and have to go to a sanitarium and I kept wondering how I would get the money to pay for her. She could not eat and had no appetite for food. She was irritable and cranky most of the time. If she was crossed in any way, she would immediately right herself up into a violent temper. Nervarentia we became she had always had a kind and gentle disposition and nothing which was said or done seemed to irritate her. I spoke to our family doctor about her and he said that her trouble was imagination and that if she would try and forget about her depression and look on the bright side of life she would be all right. Of course I didn't dare tell her this because I knew she would get into one of her tempers. When she got over these fits of temper, she was always weak and ill and more depressed than ever. The doctor said a tonic might help her and gave me a prescription but this did not do her any good. She tried all kinds of other tonics with the same result. Carnol was recommended to me and I wish to state that it is the leader of all tonics. Since taking it my wife has changed completely. Now she is always ready for her meals and work is no burden. It is a pleasure for me to recommend Carnol to anyone who is in need of a tonic or a body builder. Excuse me for writing this letter but I want you to accept my thanks for that wonderful tonic known as Carnol." — Mr. J. M., Toronto.

SPENDING XMAS AT HOME IS BEST

The honorary organizing secretary of the Parents' National Educational Union, makes a protest against the modern fashion of spending Christmas in pleasure-seeking crowds away from home in hotels and as winter resorts.

"Surely," she says, "among all these delightful opportunities for pleasure-seeking, there is much that is lost. From the point of view of the busy mother, it may be the easier way of spending the children's holidays—housekeeping is simplified and the children are happy without any trouble on our part. But the matter goes deeper. Our boys and girls, who are away from home lose any sense of what home is, and parents are apt to miss the opportunities for strengthening that most precious of all possessions—their children's friendship.

"Even if there were family jars and quarrels among the family gathering pictured by Dickens, with their tiresomely critical maiden aunts and irritable old uncles, there were also many always had a kind and gentle disposition and nothing which was said or done seemed to irritate her. I spoke to our family doctor about her and he said that her trouble was imagination and that if she would try and forget about her depression and look on the bright side of life she would be all right. LINKED LIVES

By

D. Kinmount Roy

And now, although there were important gaps in his knowledge of what had happened, the fact that the way was clear for him to claim the large reward Hardcastle had offered blinded him to all sense of danger or chance of failure.

In this happy frame of mind he retired for the night; he determined to seek his son, and to wait until the appointed time when he could claim the fulfilment of the Squire's pledges, and then retire to some quiet spot where, not only secure against want, but wealthy, he could end his days in peace and comfort.

CHAPTER XI
AN ANXIOUS MOMENT

When MacAlpin left the cave in possession of Oona and Alan Graham, it was with the understanding that he would not return for some days—in fact, not till all danger of discovery was past.

He had made preparations for such a contingency, not knowing how events might turn out, and determined that their plans should not be foiled either by his own or their impatience for escape from their strange hiding-place.

It was Graham's task to make this as much more clear to Oona as best he could, but MacAlpin had not taken the old man's self-confidence into much which was of chief importance, and, for that matter, MacAlpin was not himself aware in that moment of several links in Oona's lifestory of greatest interest and value.

He knew the Squire to be resourceful, wily, daring and unscrupulous; perhaps in his anxiety for the girl's safety he exaggerated these unpleasant qualities in his old friend. He sometimes blamed himself for throwing down the gauntlet of open defiance to such an opponent. It might have been wiser, he told himself, to meet craft with craft, and worst the master of Fosseway at his own game. But MacAlpin knew his own limitations, and was aware that he could not match his homely wits against the subtle brains of the Squire with any chance of success. To do so would be like David's going forth in Saul's armour to do battle with Goliath of Gath. Hardcastle, however, with all his cleverness, was as likely as not to be the victim of his own conceit: he had so long compelled circumstances, and caused others to bow to his will, that he was in no mood at this crisis to accept defeat.

Whether Hardcastle a talker of honour in a high-sounding way, for he loved on occasion the glamour of words and the stimulus of ideas that made no demands on a man's life or intercession; nothing more not amiss once in a way; but it was a stupid thing to be the slave of phrases and fancies about honour when a man's interests were at stake, and when a lie served his purpose much better.

MacAlpin was clearly no match for the Squire in such a battle of wits, but in his own way, but he had never acquired the art of lying; lying had always appeared to him a mean vice, the vice of cowards, and something that a brave man should scorn. He often wondered how he came into Hardcastle's life at all; and how, having done so, he had not sooner found freedom. But they had been boys together, and the Squire in his youth was an excellent companion, original and vivacious, and MacAlpin found there his own interests or pleasures were not crossed. And then young people are not very discerning, and now—he ought to be—tolerant of the foibles of their friends.

It was hard to imagine Eric Hardcastle in his youth and in later years, one and the same person,except that his personal interests, both as boy and as man, was a marked characteristic in his dealings with others. He started in life with a fair equipment, and it is safe to suppose that the soil which grew weeds in such profusion might have produced fruit and flowers under a certain untruthfulness of disposition which matched strangely with his keen, vigorous intellect.

It was only by a great effort, as we know, and under the double stimulus of saving a wronged man and a helpless girl about to fall into the snares of their relentless enemy that MacAlpin finally threw down the gage of battle to the heartless old schemer.

In planning the cave as a retreat, he had taken Graham into confidence, with the result, as we know, that the place was well provisioned and was supplied with many rude comforts, conveyed there at odd times and at great risk and toil.

Sandy was doing well, and to all appearance recovering rapidly from his injuries; and MacAlpin's heart was greatly lightened by this, so that he sang more than ever, and his songs were full of cheerfulness.

Sandy could not sing; but to hear his father pour out the Kirk songs was delightful to the boy. One evening after prayers Sandy said: 'He 'maun ken a' our names for by noo, faither!' 'Why, laddie?' Donald asked, laying his hand tenderly on the boy's head. 'Cause ye tell Him ane an ither!' 'He kent a' our names, laddie, before we left Him.'

'I never tell Him my sin name,' the boy said, a little anxiously, 'but I am glad He kens it. Will He no' forget it failley?'

'Na, laddie, He never forgets. We hae cost Him sae muckle, and He has been sae long patient, wi' us and mindfu' o' a sinners—'

'And the pedlar, faither?' the boy queried.

'Yes, the pedlar too, Sandy, if he'll hearken.'

THE RETURN OF THE SPRUCE TREE

Far in the north woods there once grew a beautiful spruce tree, tall, straight, and perfect in every way. Because of its unusual beauty the forest ranger loved it above every other tree in the forest.

One day the lumbermen came into the forest and cut down the forest ranger's favorite. As the cruel axes cut into his very heart, the spruce tree thought only of his dear friend, the forest ranger. There he stood, watching every blow, his face pale, and he, too, were suffering with the spruce tree.

"If I could only make him understand that I will come back," sighed the spruce tree, "then he would not feel so sad. But humans are such stupid things; they can never understand us trees. I will come back, though," he promised himself. "Some day I will come back and surprise him, and then he will be happy again."

Then, bidding his friend goodbye, the spruce tree went out into the world. He traveled many, many miles before he finally stopped in a large factory. It was humming here among all the strange people and things, and how often he longed for the lovely fresh north woods. Then he thought of the forest ranger and how lonely he must be without him, and every day he planned how he would go back sometime.

It was many years before an opportunity came to him. First he was stored away in the factory for ever so long. Then one day he was taken out and boiled, then with acids and pounded, then boiled and pounded some more. Finally when he was allowed to stretch out and dry all the kinks from himself he was so changed. He was beautiful, smooth, and white. Then he was cut up and folded into lovely sheets of writing paper.

The spruce tree was very happy. He knew he would be beautiful for the sake of his friend the forest ranger. How proud he would be of him now. His friend had always thought him beautiful, but he was far lovelier now than he had ever been when he was growing in the forest primeval.

Then one day a chance came to him to return to the far north woods and to his dear friend. He was placed in a large envelope and in small black letters the name of his friend was printed on the envelope. My, how happy he was at last! How glad his friend would be to see him! He was so impatient

He could hardly contain himself. The train went so slowly, and it was such a long, long way.

At last he reached the far north and was finally in the hands of his old friend. He had not changed a bit. The made-over tree snuggled down in his hand.

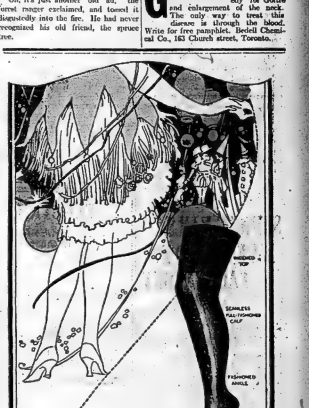

"Oh, it's just another old ad," the forest ranger exclaimed, and tossed it disagreeably into the fire. He had never presented his old friend, the spruce tree.

SHINGLE NAILS ARE TESTED IN LABORATORY

Few people associate the word "research" with such ordinary things as nails, but it is declared by the Forest Products Laboratories of the Canada Forestry Branch, Department of the Interior, that carefully conducted experiments are having an influence on the manufacture of such articles. The selection of the best available nail for fixing shingles is likely to be determined by tests made at the Laboratories at Montreal, to find the holding power and rust-resisting qualities of different types of shingle nails on the market. One of the most promising appears to be a Canadian-made cut nail which held more firmly than any other and had a better galvanized coating. These nails were cheaper per barrel than imported nails, but as each nail contained a little more metal the number per barrel was somewhat smaller. The work of testing nails might seem outside the scope of the Forest Products Laboratories of Canada, but it is a natural sequel to their series of tests on the nail-holding qualities of Canadian woods.

A WOMAN'S RIGHT TO GOOD HEALTH

It Can Be Hers If She Keeps Her Blood in Good Condition

To every woman belongs the right to enjoy a healthy active life. Nine out of ten suffer, often in silence, from splitting headaches, torturing backaches or some other of the many evils that follow anaemia or bloodlessness.

That is why one sees so many women with pale, thin cheeks, dull eyes and drooping figure—all signs that the blood is out of order. These women should win the right to be well by refreshing their bodies with the rich blood of health that so promptly transforms them into healthy, attractive women.

There is no other medicine can supply this rich, red blood so speedily and so surely as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Through this medicine thousands of tired, suffering women have found new health. For example, Mrs. F. Lane, Paris, Ont., says:—"A few years ago I was in a badly run down condition. My appetite was poor, I fell off in weight, and could with difficulty do my housework. Nothing I took seemed to do me any good until a neighbor advised me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I had only taken a few boxes of the pills when I began to feel stronger and I continued using them until I had taken ten boxes, when I felt as well as ever I did, and had regained my lost weight. My husband and children have also used the pills with good results, and I would advise any one who is rundown to give them a fair trial."

You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail post paid at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

WAR SCARRED GENERAL RUNS RESTAURANT

(Canadian Press)

London, Dec. 5—Behind a dark during business hours in an unpretentious but spotlessly clean restaurant in Marlborough Court, Carnaby street, London, stands the proprietor, no less a personage than Brig.-General W. B. Hulke, D.S.O., one of the heroes of the Great War. The restaurant was recently opened by the General. It is appropriately named "The Venture," and so far it is not known whether it may prove a profitable one or not. Its proprietor, however, seems to have faith in it, and this is a big part of the battle.

When the war began, Brig.-General Hulke was a retired officer, farming in British Columbia. He left everything in Canada and went to France, where he had a brizade in the 38th Division. He was wounded in the knee, and, in fact, only recently ceased to be under medical treatment.

"My property, which deteriorated during the war, is over in Canada waiting to be sold," General Hulke told an interviewer here recently. "I cannot climb and jump now, because of my knee, and like tens of thousands of others, I cast around to look for a means of livelihood. My wife is assisted by Mrs. Wailes, the wife of a Colonel; my daughter is an ex-soldier and, perhaps, our circumstances have impressed me with the need of a place where people of refinement may obtain lunch, tea or supper served on lines akin to their home life, at reasonable prices."

Simply decorated, "The Venture," with tables covered with snowy white table cloths, with serviettes, serves really well-cooked and substantial lunch for 1 shilling and 6 pence. The General is not too disinclined to go and obtain for a customer a bottle of Guinness, if asked.

THE indomitable folk of Northern Ontario deserve your practical sympathy. Remember, eighteen hundred families have been burned out—and must start all over again. These wonderfully rich farms, mines and aggressive young towns will re-build and come back to their own—but it takes time. And in the meanwhile they must live, they must have temporary shelter and there's nobody to give it to them if we don't.

Make Christmas come back again

Picture a Christmas in a nearly bare shack in a burned out town in a Northern winter. Hundreds of children up there, remember. Make a money contribution now and show your northern fellow citizens that the Christmas spirit lives and has a real meaning in Ontario. All they ask is bare necessities—they deserve at least that much.

Now it is up to you—every public spirited citizen and charitable organization Spare one dollar, five dollars, one hundred dollars or whatever you can. Spare something from your Christmas cheer. Make Christmas up there a little less than a grim tragedy. Remember, not comforts, but bare necessities in the grip of a northern winter, is all that they ask. Send today? Make cheques payable to—

December Weather Creates Record

Toronto, Dec. 9.—A weather record without equal for half a century has been established this month, according to figures obtained from A. J. Connor, climatologist, in the meteorological service of Canada. To most people whose memory extends back some distance, the mild days of the present season have appeared in sharp contrast with the cold, snow-laden times of the early eighties. In fact, popular opinion expresses itself to the effect that the winters of Canada are getting warmer. It is interesting to hear what Mr. Connor has to say on these matters.

"On December 30, 1875," he remarked, "there was a registration here of a maximum of 61 degrees. On no December day known then, and on no December day since, so far as our records go, has there been such a high temperature in December until the first day of this month, when the registration was officially recorded at 60.5."

"It is said that the winters of Canada are growing milder. Is this a fact," Mr. Connor was asked.

"They may be warmer at short periods," was his reply, "but taken over a long period, 1ild is not the case. Some time ago Sir Frederic Stupart spent a good deal of time getting data on this matter. We even looked up the letters of the Jesuit Fathers to get the earliest possible records, and while there are short periods of variation, a sort of irregular pulsation, you might say, just like the heart may palsate irregularly, it is not the case that the weather is growing milder except those fluctuations. There are variations every fifteen, twenty or thirty years, not regularly occurring, but coming and going when the season may be warmer or colder for a few years, but the best authorities show that there is remarkable uniformity taking one century with another."

BELLEVILLE DOCTOR CLAIMS DIABETES CURE

Son of J. D. Collip of This City, Now a Professor at the University of Alberta, Shares Honors With Toronto Physicians

Dr. J. B. Collip, son of Mr. J. D. Collip of Belleville, has recently achieved fame in Alberta medical circles. A report from the West we print below:

"Dr. Collip must share with Dotson Banting and Best of Toronto the honors for the discovery of this new and wonderful cure, in the consumption of the University authorities, for he spent a year in Toronto, working with these physicians, and finally succeeding in isolating the serum obtained from the pancreas of a pig.

Dr. Collip returned to the University of Alberta and in the Provincial laboratory, fine equipped his research work with Dr. Herbert Jamieson.

"A number of diabetic cases have been under observation in the University Hospital, Dr. Herbert Jamieson doing the diazinsin and Prof. Collip the 'experimental work.'"

OUR GUEST TO-DAY

W. D. ROBB

SIR JOSEPH FLAVELLE GUEST OF ROTARY CLUB

Mr. W. D. Robb, Dr. D. Bruce Taylor, Rev. Geo. Adams and Many Other Distinguished Guests Present

Individualism and Initiative Counts—Don't Depend on Others—Don't Expect the Government to Work Miracles—Everyone Must Work

A full attendance of Rotarians and a large number of distinguished visitors attended the regular meeting today and listened to an inspiring message from Sir Joseph Flavelle, Mr. W. D. Robb was present and said a few words to the Club. Among those present were noted, The Rev. Geo. Adams, Montreal; Dr. D. Bruce Taylor, Principal Queen's University, Kingston; Rev. Mr. McIlvride, Winnipeg; Mr. J. E. Baker, Chicago; Mr. Geo. Gardiner, Montreal; W. H. Dubois, Tweed; Rev. F. E. Mahaf, Mr. F. E. O'Flynn, Mayor Hanna, Mr. Hill, Southbridge, Mass.; Mr. W. H. Depew and the Rev. Mr. Smart, of Queen's University, Kingston; and representatives from the local banking institutions.

In introducing Mr. Robb, President W. B. Deacon said a few words and following this the assemblage sang "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow" and three cheers and a tiger were given for Mr. Robb, stated that he had always been in Belleville. Whatever success attended his work after leaving Belleville he felt was due to the inspiration and to influences felt and received while here. All his children had been born here. Thus as long as he lived, Belleville would occupy a very sacred spot in his heart. He said Belleville people stated he did not look a day older than when he left. He also sounded good said Mr. Robb, but he knew they were stretching the truth, in that as it may Mr. Robb progressed a very youthful appearance.

President W. B. Deacon briefly introduced Sir Joseph Flavelle, the speaker of the day. For him too a very hearty "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow" was sung and three cheers and a tiger given.

Sir Joseph stated that as a boy leaving Toronto and going to the large cities he was impressed with the "gang" spirit of boys. They all stuck together to gain their ends and did not rely on individual effort. As he grew he saw the same thing in men forming groups and combines. Sir Joseph wanted to stress one factor, individualism. He did not mean the selfish variety but the broader acceptance of the term which was given in clear thinking and initiative. We all had to develop individualism, it was a personal responsibility. He sketched the story of a young European monarch being taught to ride horseback. At the end of a strenuous morning he was confronted by a very serious old uncle. His instructor said, "throw your heart across the rest will follow."

He sketched the early college life of some prominent Scotsmen, and told of their early struggles against almost overwhelming odds. Sir Robert Nichol was one of these boys. He lived on 5d for twenty weeks. He went without food though a winter, ate cheese and crackers, and drank treacle and water. Sir Joseph said he was not recommending a diet, but was recalling a character.

Examples of spartan courage were given today. Sir Joseph while driving in his car from Oakville to Toronto one day picked up a man. He turned out to be a returned soldier who had forgotten his job. He could not find work in Toronto but had been promised work in the Dome mines in the extreme northern section of New Ontario. The soldier had a running sore on his back, and had six children, the oldest being only 13. His wife was blinded in the Halifax explosion. The youngest child was born one day after the physicians had removed her eye balls. Yet this wife carried on and did her work as other women did. She was happy and the family were glad to go north and continue the struggle. This woman did not lie down and claim she was part of the war wreckage. She carried on, earned, cooked and cleaned and demonstrated living in that home had not been learned.

Still outside the world over was lacking. The people wanted the government to do everything. Manufacturers wanted the government to develop export markets, the Westerners wanted wheat boards, control of prices, etc. Labor wanted shorter hours, steady jobs, minimum wages and to be delivered from the tyranny of private enterprise.

Most of what a man has to do in this

C OF C MANAGERS IN SESSION

Leading Officials in Chamber of Commerce Movement, Met Here Saturday

An important and interesting convention of the presidents, managers, secretaries and other high officials of the Chambers of Commerce and Boards of Trade of Ontario was held at the Chamber of Commerce Building here on Saturday. Among those present were Messrs. H. A. Cowe, President Sarnia Chamber of Commerce; Geo. P. Fraser, Manager Sarnia Chamber of Commerce; W. H. Wood, Manager Brantford Chamber of Commerce; W. R. Jandon, Manager Chatham Chamber of Commerce; M. M. Maxwell, Manager St. Catharines Chamber of Commerce; J. J. Duffus, President, Peterboro Chamber of Commerce; A. E. Lewis, Secretary Brockville Board of Trade; Col. F. F. Healey, Manager Hamilton Chamber of Commerce; E. Ryrie, Hon. President, Lindsay Board of Trade. There were in addition the President and Directors of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce.

Mr. H. A. Cowe, of Sarnia, was elected chairman for the day and made a very capable presiding officer.

Among the topics considered were a number that were of interest to the general public as well as to those more intimately associated with the Chamber of Commerce work.

"How far should the secretary or collection of Chamber of Commerce does?" was a question propounded by Mr. Geo. P. Fraser, of Sarnia. During the subsequent discussion it appeared to be the consensus of opinion that the secretary should take no direct part whatever in such work owing to the opportunity it gave for misunderstanding and causing ill-feeling.

Another question that gave rise to a prolonged discussion was the relation of Chambers of Commerce to the Ontario Associated Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce The opinions brought out in the subsequent discussions were that the Provincial body was slow in producing results and that many Chambers and other matters submitted to it were not followed up in a forcible manner. The suggestion was made that the larger bodies have more adequate finances, more frequent meeting of the committees and a more workable form of central government.

Several speakers, including Col. Healey of the Hamilton Chamber of Commerce, were of the opinion that the time was ripe for the new formation of a Dominion Chamber of Commerce and a recommendation was passed that representations should be taken to bring about this result.

Other matters discussed were the issuance of motor licenses, the securing of the co-operation of the general citizenship, in changing the methods of the boards of trade and chambers of commerce in bringing about a greater interest in the community and progressive effort in securing new membership. The next meeting will be held in Stratford where the quarterly convention will be held in the month of February.

A noon-day luncheon was held at the Hotel Quinte where addresses were delivered by His Worship Mayor Hanna, Ll.-Col. W. N. Ponton, Ex-President Ontario Associated Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce; Mr. Cowe of Sarnia; Mr. John Elliott, Ex-President Ontario Associated Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce; Mr. Duffus, Peterborough; Mr. Ryrie of Lindsay, and others. The delegates greatly appreciated their reception at Belleville and the efficient way that had been made for their reception and entertainment.

Vice-President and General Manager of the Grand Trunk Railway System is Given the Freedom of the City

Leading Railway Officials and Many Prominent Men Attend To-day's Functions

Reception at the Armouries This Afternoon—Complimentary Banquet at Hotel Quinte To-night—Sir Henry Thornton Will Arrive This Afternoon To Be Present

The City of Belleville welcomes to-day, one of her old boys, Mr. W. D. Robb, Vice-President and General Manager of the Grand Trunk Railway System. Rising from the ranks of railwaydom to the responsible position he now occupies is an achievement that is worthy of the highest commendation of all citizens, and Bellevillians particularly, are indeed pleased to be privileged to do him honor. Only through sheer merit and strict application, has the elevation of W. D. Robb to the Vice-Presidency been made possible, and the fact that one of Belleville's sons has so bountifully succeeded, engenders in the citizens a feeling of great pride.

Mr. Robb, accompanied by Mrs. Robb and their daughter, arrived via Grand Trunk, early this morning, from the East. His private car was detached from the early express and placed conveniently on a siding in the local yards.

Some personal friends boarded this car and part of the morning was spent privately with them. An impression of the Grand Trunk' shops and roundhouses than followed. This afternoon the terminal buildings were thrown open to the public and many people took advantage of the opportunity of more closely familiarizing themselves with the general lay-out and working conditions prevailing in these G. T. institutions, which mean so much to the welfare of this city.

The staffs of the various Departments were well prepared for this inspection feature and were eulogized by many upon the appearance and general conditions of the terminal. The person attending were appointed by the Grand Trunk authorities to pilot visitors through the shops and roundhouses. This feature was a great convenience and was much appreciated. Station buildings and other structures were decorated with bunting, flags, and Xmas trees and quantities of evergreens were tastefully festooned and entwined in conspicuous places. The welcome sign out, and even the most fastidious could raise no objection to the general decoration scheme as exemplified by the painstaking

RAILWAY DIRECTORS DENY CHARGES MADE BY SIR HENRY DRAYTON

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Dec. 11.—Directors of the Canadian National Railways today deplied the charge of Sir Henry Drayton made Saturday night before the central Conservatives here, that they were astute politicians.

"I did not seek the position," said R. P. Bouth, who was described by Sir Henry as an authority on fuel, and a friend of Hon. P. C. Larkin, an adept in politics. "Surely Major Graham Bell and I can hardly come within that category," said Gerard Ruel. "I would prefer critics to wait and judge me on my record."

COAL SITUATION AT PICTON RELIEVED

Steamer Arrives With 2,100 Tons Assorted Sizes

Picton, Ont., Dec. 11.—Yesterday morning the steamship "Arigon," piloted by Captain M. Heffernan broke through the ice-covered channel in the Bay and moored at Hepburns dock. The vessel is loaded with 2100 tons of egg, stove and chestnut anthracite, which will alleviate the local coal shortage.

The run from the Oswego trestles across the lake was uneventful, but heavy seas were encountered through the last 30 miles. The decks of the "Arigon" is of steel, the best craneage her way through the bay ice without any difficulty. Considerable anxiety was occasioned previous to the trip, as the ice is from four to 12 inches in thickness. However under the expert seamanship of Capt. Heffernan, who is thoroughly acquainted with inland navigation in these waters, the vessel was brought safely into port and according to state, Pictonians are greatly relieved in mind and body, and are deeply grateful to the Captain and to the local consignees of the cargo, for the strenuous efforts put forth to supply the citizens.

The "Arigon" will be commissioned to the discharge of her cargo, she laid up in Picton harbor until the opening of navigation next season.

Railway News

Toronto.—It is announced that Mr. S. B. Bell, C. P. R. city passenger agent, under District Passenger Agent William Pullen, has been promoted to the post of assistant passenger agent, at Fulton. Pullen now has two assistants in his territory.

Medicine Hat, Alberta.—An expenditure of about $40,000 is reported by the extension to Bassano of the Canadian Pacific Railway roundhouse and the construction of the company's mechanical coaling plant, and this sum is about equally divided between these two improvements. In both instances the work has given much employment to local men and there is still a considerable amount of inside work to be done in connection with the extension to the roundhouse.

Renfrew, Ontario—Mr. Ed. Williams, Canadian Pacific Railway baggage master, who in addition to his regular duties, takes care of the flower garden which attracts so much favorable comment from travellers over the line, has secured another triumph. Mr. Williams has already notified that his plot has been awarded second prize in the Quebec district, all of the depot garden having been recently judged by an official of the road. During the last few years Mr. Williams has carried off a number of first prizes but the competition is growing keener year by year.

St. Thomas, Ontario.—Work has been commenced on the construction of an extension to the present C.P.R. yards east of the city, in the form of an 800-foot repair track at an expenditure of approximately $16,000. The grading work which is being done by Frank and Son of Port Stanley was started recently. The extension is necessary to cope with the increased business and also to facilitate the repairing of cars. It is understood that the addition of the new tracks will result in the employment of more employees being added to the C.P.R. repair gang.

A small track about 80 feet long will also be erected alongside the new tracks to be used in case of an emergency. The new track will start at lehat forty cars. Four teams and about twenty men are engaged in grading this work to completion.

Belfast, Ireland—For the first time on record a Canadian-bound steamer sailed from Belfast Lough conveying mails direct from the Northern capital. The vessel was the Canadian Pacific Railway Company's S.S. "Metagama," which, incidentally, was built in Belfast. The vessel anchored off Kilroot and by means of mail, together with some 100 emigrants from Ulster, were conveyed to it by the Harbor Commissioners' tug "Hopeful."

Before it had been the practice to ship the mails to Liverpool and there sort out those which they were later posted, sorting on board, dispatched, but, owing to the protests from the secretary of the Post Office in London, the present system was introduced.

One of the passengers was a five-year-old child, from Dublin, whose parents are in Canada. The little one was in charge of a matron who landed it over to the matron of the "Metagama."

A Belfast "Telegraph" representative was shown over the "Metagama," and saw something of the excellent arrangements made for the comfort of passengers.

London, England — Major A. Dwan Moore, London Manager of the C.P.R. THE FEEDING OF LAMBS

How to Raise Sheep From Day of Birth.

Mother's Milk the Best Food—When and How to Feed Grain—Cause for Failure With Lambs—Reasons for Success.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

Mother's milk is the best and best food for lambs. If this is not available, then the milk of goats or cows may be used. If the ewe or mother sheep has been well fed on oats, bran, clover and few roots for at least a month before the birth of the lamb, there is little likelihood of a milk shortage for one lamb. Lambs that have sunken mothers may require some assistance to obtain nourishment. The mother sheep can be held by hand or tied with a halter while the lamb nurses. This is usually not necessary for more than two or three days. The transfer of lambs from one ewe to another can be made at birth or while the lamb is still very young by feeding the ewe, who by nature becomes fairly on the scent of the lamb, to identify her offspring as her own. This should not be done after a day old, and it is desirable to have the ewe feed a second time with the two lambs together until they have become familiar with each other's voice and ability to identify. If a ewe loses her lamb and it is desired to have her adopt and feed another one, such can be done by skinning the dead lamb and placing such on the back of the one that is to be fed. This should adopt. This must, however, be done in a comparatively short time after getting a slit in each corner of the pelt through which the legs of the living lamb may be passed, it is easy to keep the skin in place for a few days. Such lambs frequently do not get sufficient milk for best development, and again, the strong lamb will get more than its share. Close attention is necessary to make such adjustment as will insure the lambs getting a fair share. When lambs are not getting all the milk that they need from their mothers, provision should be made to supplement such by feeding the lambs to drink cow's milk from bottle or pail.

Grain Feeding.

When the lambs are two or three weeks old they will start nibbling at grain, if not at grass. At this time, they should be encouraged to feed by way of placing choice bits of feeder and grain in a small trough in such a way that one can get it without being disturbed by the older sheep. Clover, ground oats, crushed barley and oil cake meal are very desirable concentrates for lambs. Pasture water and salt should always be available in the pens, yards or pasture. The amount of grain to feed will depend largely upon the use that is to be desired to be made of the lambs. Lambs for the "hot house lamb" trade require liberal grain feeding, while those for good grain feeding, while those for breeding, or ordinary markets should be limited within the bounds of profitable feeding. With lambs for export, oats are sometimes of secondary importance, and the grain feeding is more liberal than it is with the lambs of the breeding or market type. Lambs that are grain fed from the beginning will reach weights six or eight weeks earlier than those not receiving grain until the commencement of the fattening period. When grain feeding is too liberal either before or after weaning, the lambs will not eat as much the grain feeds, and not as much grass or other roughage as is in keeping with profitable feeding. The amount of grain to be fed must be determined by the age of the lamb, the purpose for which it is being fed, and the course feeds available. Grain feeding at the time that the lambs begin to feed is a profitable practice if the amount of grain fed per day does not reduce the lamb's appetite for grass and other roughage feeds. During the fattening period, the quantity of grain fed per lamb should generally not exceed one and a half pounds per day if the feeding is to be profitable. Good pasture grass, clovers, or rape should be sufficiently liberally to all lambs fattened for the ordinary market or breeding. With hot house lambs, the coarse food is limited, grains and milk are largely depended on for rapid gains.

Causes of Failure In Lamb Feeding.

1. Ewes not properly fed during pregnancy or after.
2. No supplementary feeds for the lambs.
3. Failure to properly dock and alter lambs.
4. No provisions against failure of pasture.
5. No protection from other stock.
6. Pastures infested with ages or larvae of stomach worm.
7. Failure to dip and destroy ticks and lice.

MUSIC and DRAMA

FILM STAR FIGHTS WAY OUT OF HOUSE

In one scene of "Steelheart," which is the feature attraction at the Regent tonight to Wednesday, matinee daily, the daredevil of the screen, William Duncan, surprises the members of his company by putting a bullet through the center of a pane of glass. In the sequence, he is required to fight against odds, is overpowered and the lights extinguished in the room. A female accomplice of one of the desperados enters the room with a lamp and Duncan, grabbing it, hides and fires at the window. Before he made the scene Duncan had to hit that pane of glass right in the middle and I dare you in struggle to attempt to prevent me." This was in order to get real action on the part of his fellow players. The men hid their best, hitting at the lamp, not the wrong one, and like, but at the proper moment Duncan fired his shot and the bullet landed in the very centre of the pane. It is thought this will say that Duncan takes long and makes his escape.

"Steelheart" is filled with many exciting outdoor situations and is filled almost a wealth of beautiful scenery which makes it a veritable treasure as well as a highly entertaining story. Edith Johnson is costarring with Mr. Duncan.

A Herald Head comedy, For News, and a new chapter of the popular serial "Hidden Hand Crusoe," are being exhibited in addition to the feature offering.

"BITS OF LIFE" A NEW TYPE OF PICTURE

Marshall Neilan's latest feature production, "Bits of Life," which is heralded as a genuine novelty in motion picture entertainment, their motion picture entertainment, their months Theatre tonight for an engagement of three days.

The new Neilan production, which is released through Associated First National, offers four episodes in a manner which, it is claimed, has not before been attempted on the screen, three of the four scenarios being adaptations of well known stories by well known magazine writers.

The initial episode is taken from "The Bad Samaritan," a short story by Regular Marshall Neilan and Clarence McMurrow. The second story is a picturization of Walter Trumbull's tale of "Those Who Walk in Hell Everything," which appeared in "Smart Set." The third episode is an adaptation of Will Irwin's "Hop," which originally appeared in the "Saturday Evening Post." For the final episode Mr. Neilan presents his own story, "The Strange Adventure," written especially by for this picture.

The four stories are so combined that a continuous theme of great dramatic construction is displayed leading up to a final punch.

Although the magazine or short story idea in general is nothing new to the home before, it is pointed out that the manner in which Mr. Neilan handles the presentation of this idea displays something entirely novel in the way of entertainment.

The largest cast of prominent players ever assembled in a Neilan production is offered in this picture, including Wesley Barry, Lon Chaney, Noah Beery, Harriett Hammond, Rockcliffe Fellowes, James Bradbury, Jr., Burton, Tod Sloan, Anna May Wong, John Bowers and others of equal popularity.

A good Vitagraph comedy titled "A Charmed Life," the first of the Jack London adventure stories, each two reel chapter complete, and a Travelogue are announced for presentation on the same program.

THANKSGIVING DAY IN PRISON

U. S. Thanksgiving was a big day to inmates of the California State Prison at San Quentin. Men laid their worries aside to celebrate. The great event of the day was the night annual field and track meet. A 22 yard-old "filler" won the 50-yard dash. He had undergone an operation in which new glands were given to him. Seven of the prisoners who elected their fellow convicts are doomed to the electric chair shortly.

SARNIA SQUAD BEAT OAKWOOD

Find No Trouble in Ousting Toronto Boys 13-2 on Icy Field

By defeating Oakwood Collegiate by 13 to 2 at Varsity Stadium on Saturday afternoon, the Sarnia Collegiate team won the O.R.F.U. intermediate title for the third successive year, and became the first holders of The Mail and Empire trophy, which is emblematic of the championship. The game was a good one despite the fact that the field was almost completely covered with a thin coating of ice, which made the footing very tricky, although an attempt had been made to make the field more suitable by sprinkling sand on top of the ice. This was successful to a considerable degree, but runners, playing on top here, had great difficulty in overcoming the handicap.

The better team won the game, there is no doubt about it, Oakwood put up a great game against their more experienced opponents, Six of the winners' points resulted from a fumble by Abbey on his own goal line with less than five seconds to play in the first half. This gave Sarnia a 7 to 0 lead at the interval, and also shattered the Oakwood morale to a certain extent. At the start of the game hardly any one expected an Oakwood victory, and the boys' stubborn fight in the first two quarter left the issue in doubt until the fatal time. This gave the visitors a good lead, and soon after the teams resumed in the third quarter Hayes romped fesity yards for another touch which gave the champions a safe margin.

While Sarnia had won the title for two years previous, they had never played in Toronto, and there was more than passing interest on the ability of Jack Norton's squad, particularly as such glowing reports have come out of the West regarding the team. The unwitnessing Sarnia's exhibition on Saturday it was seen that three state wrote, have been greatly exaggerated and the aggregation is one of the best Junior teams that has played in Toronto. They would provide a real battle if matched with St. Aidan' and high teams would have lots of supporters. Judging from Saturday's play, the Sarnia team follows the open style of play, and as an account of the bad under-foot conditions, they were unable to show their best.

The Teams.

Sarnia—Flying wing, Johnston halves, Hanna, Hayes, and McKay; quarter, Simpson; scrap, Richardson (captain); insides, Vanhaver and Park; middles, Pugh and Brownawinsides, Carwyn and Rooney; subs, Carwy, Robinson, Workman, Randolph, Maitland and S. Robinson.

Oakwood—Flying wing, Bryant halves, Abbey, Taylor, Montgomery quarter, Scarlet; snap, Smith; insides Crowe (captain), Curry; middles, Morgan, Dundas; outsides, Hannay and Cole; subs., Maxwell, Standish Robertson, Conboy, Gibson, Billings, Dodds and Hancock.

Referee—Reg. DeGruchy.

Umpire—Bob Armstrong.

Head linesman—Harold Bailey.

WILL BELLEVILLE HAVE NEW LEAGUE?

Efforts Being Made to Have Hockey League Separate From O. H. A.

It will come as rather a surprise to many hockey fans in Belleville to know that Belleville may be in another league this season besides the O.H.A. Arrangements are being made for the formation of a league comprising Belleville, Napanee, and two teams from Kingston, one of these two being from Queen's University.

Mr. Jack Derry, of Napanee, who is one of the prime movers of the proposed new league, was in Kingston on Thursday last, to broach the subject to hockey men there and before he left the city he was practically assured of one team at least. Mr. William Palmer, manager of the I.C.B.A. team, champions of the Kingston City League last year, was approached on the matter and seemed quite enthused over the plan but he would not yet definitely say as to whether the Irishmen will enter the league or not. The other team from Queen's may be entered soon, but should Queen's not care to enter, there would only be one team from Kingston.

Mr. Derry was in Belleville Friday and interviewed the Belleville hockey men about the subject and they are quite enthusiastic over the formation of a league of the nature proposed, it likely that a team will be entered next year from Belleville in the league.

ANNUAL MEETING HELD SATURDAY

C. R. U. Officials Uphold Canadian Rules—R. G. Johnston President-Elect

At the annual meeting of the Interprovincial Rugby Union, better known as the Big Four, at the Military Institute Saturday afternoon, the delegates decided to send a resolution to the Canadian Rugby Union expressing their appreciation of the present playing code and asking that no changes be made. The Big Four believes the rules are fine and would make no radical changes. In fact, they believe the tendency is to believe too much in the U.S. style and are of the opinion that the teams across the border have much to learn from the Canadian code.

The delegates in attendance were: President Dr. Lawson, Toronto; First Vice-Pres., R. G. Johnston, Montreal; Second Vice-Pres. R. E. Dixon, Hamilton; Secretary-Treasurer J. J. Dolan, Toronto; Executive Committee, Harris Ardiel, of Toronto, representing Montreal; F. Laidlaw, Toronto; T. F. Cluney, Ottawa; A. Birtzler, representing Ottawa Collegiate; J. McKenzie, Ottawa; George Ballard, Hamilton; Dr. Gibson, Montreal.

Mr. Johnston, of Montreal, spoke in glowing terms of the support given by the teams as well as the Big Four as a body, to the Arbes benefit game in Montreal. He also spoke in praise of Howard Crawford, of Argonauts, for his splendid work in this connection. Conacher was the first player to visit Arbes in the hospital after the accident, and it was he who suggested the idea of a benefit game. Messrs. Burtzler, McKenzie and Dolan were congratulated on their efforts towards making the interscholastic series successful. The Interprovincial Dolan Trophy was presented to Ottawa Collegiate last Wednesday by Dr. McKenzie.

The new officers elected for 1923 are: President, R. G. Johnston, Montreal, First Vice-Pres., R. E. Dixon, Hamilton; Second Vice-Pres., T. F. Cluney, Ottawa. The secretary-treasurer will be appointed by the president and the executive will also be selected. The matter of drawing up the schedule for next season was left gone into and required much time.

ST. PATS RECEIVE BAD TRIMMING

Edmonston, Dec. 10.—Edmonston Eskimos handed a severe beating to the Toronto St. Patrick's here Saturday night, the score being 11 to 7. In the first ten minutes of play the Eskimos let loose a burst of speed and lightning combination play that resulted in five goals in succession. Then the Eskimos threw their whole squad of substitutes into the game, Simpson being the only regular to remain on the ice, and the St. Patrick's were held scoreless until the end of the period. In the second period the regular players returned to the game for a brief spell and added three goals.

Saginaw, Mich., Dec. 10.—James Moorcroft of Gladstone Athletic Club of Toronto, and wearing the maple leaf of the Dominion, won the second annual Saginaw world championship race here, negotiating the four and one-tenth miles in 22 minutes 21 4-5 seconds.

Moorcroft was in front or near there all of the journey. Bargley of of Ypsilanti Normal was close us and with one from Saginaw and one from Belleville and one or two Kingston teams the league should enjoy a great deal of popularity.

FINNEGAN HILLS RETURNS HOME

The Pastures Abroad Were Not So Green, and Now "Finnegan" is Singing "Home, Sweet Home"

The Port Hope Guide announces that there have been two very welcome arrivals in Port Hope recently. First Capt. Peacock with his welcome Murphy rolled in with four hundred tons of anthracite coal and second, Wilfrid Hills of hockey fame returned from Calgary and now joy reigns supreme in Port Hope. The end, of course, is not in history, but our own Finnegan Hills, the idol of the local fans, gave us all a pleasant surprise when he stepped off the train last night. Finnegan had some tempting offer from the Calgary Club to those his lot in with the professionals and he decided to look the situation over and about ten days ago left for that city. The fields were not half as green as pictured and now Finnegan Hills, the idol of the local fans, gave us all a pleasant surprise when he stepped off the train last night. Finnegan had some tempting offer from the Calgary Club to those his lot in with the professionals and he decided to look the situation over and about ten days ago left for that city. The fields were not half as green as pictured and now Finnegan Hills did the old song "There's No Place Like Home" appeal so strongly to the Ontario's native man. So Finnegan is back to take his place on the forward line with the Intermediate team; he is glad to be with us again and every Port Hope is delighted to welcome him.

Charlie Barber's team is working out on the brewery pond today. Charlie says this skipping and chasing each other in the Drill Shed may be alright but he prefers to have his men right on the ice with sticks and puck. Some team Charlie has gathered together.

WILL MURRAY RETURN?

Peterboro Examiner believes that no "Mickey" Murray did not appear on the Aura Lee lineup the other night, it is stated that the one and only Kevin will return and put in the winter with one of the Peterboro City Hockey League teams.

QUEEN'S RUGBY TEAM WILL BREAK UP

Six Players Will Graduate Next Year—Preparing For Hockey Now

Kingston, Dec. 9—Of this year's Queen's Canadian football champions six are due to graduate in the Spring: Carson, regular inside wing; Veale, the star end; Burns, a useful utility man, who played in the line and at flying wing; Johnston, an inside or middle wing; Saylor, the substitute snap; and Dolan, the substitute quarter-back. The loss of these men will be felt considerably, particularly in the case of Veale and Carson, but it is hoped that new material will arrive to fill the vacancies.

In a very snappy game of indoor baseball, played at the Armouries on Saturday afternoon, the Apex squad came from behind in the fifth inning, and snatched the game from out the fire, defeating the Boy Scouts 12 to 6. The feature play of the game was a double play unassisted by A. Greenwood. The lineups were:

Scouts—Finnerson, Nephan, Peeter, Ridley, McCrodan, Caskey, Wells, Miles, Kennedy.

Apex—Nicholson, Greenwood, Boyes, Robertson, Moffat, Kinnear, McCoy, Tom, White, Pinkton, Gillen.

INTER-CITY RIVALRY

Ever since it was officially announced that the Canadian Government Railways and the Grand Trunk were to be amalgamated, Toronto and Montreal have, through their respective presses, been trying to show which city was the more desirable for the headquarters. Such a course is pardonable, yet, even considerable, it purpose of showing legitimate lines. This has not been the case, and much bitterness and unpleasantness has crept into the press controversies that sprung up periodically. It does seem very needless on the part of the men behind such statements as have been made. Now the problem is not one for either Montreal or Toronto to settle; it is a national problem. But the really peculiar part of it is being attempted to be settled in the spot-light, is of little import. To add to the spot-light, is of little import. To add to the spot-light, is of little import. To add to the benefits of the city the size of Montreal or Toronto the benefits derived from having the executive have offices is slight. That portion of a railway's activities which does amount to something is its shops, its round-houses, terminals, etc. Now a city situated as is either Montreal or Toronto, will have terminals, yards, round-houses, shops, round-houses, etc., in the exact proportions, shops, round-houses, etc., in the exact proportions of that her trade demands. Whether or not the chief officials reside in the city is of little material importance. Neither city has anything to fear from the other if they get down to business and develop trade. If Sir Henry Thornton decides to make his headquarters in Toronto, and Montreal pays attention to business, she can make it possible to have a greater railroad population than it possible to have a greater railroad population than it possible to have a greater railroad population than

Woman's Sphere

A CHRISTMAS SONG

By Florence Evelyn Pratt

Oh, Christmas is a jolly time,
When forests heap with snow,
And other forests bend with toys,
And lordly Yule-logs glow,

And Christmas is a solemn time,
Because, long years ago,
The first great Christmas Gift was given
To all men near and far.

But not alone at Christmas time
Comes holiday and cheer,
For one who loves a little child
Hath Christmas all the year.

THE THREE-PIECE SUIT

The woman who has to plan her wardrobe carefully with due consideration to the number of costumes she can have on a more or less limited dress allowance will find there is no more satisfactory purchase than a three-piece suit.

In a suit of this type she is correctly and smartly costumed for almost any day time affair. If the frock is sufficiently elaborate it may even be worn who she dines formally in a restaurant or at a hotel.

These suits are extremely varied in style and adapted to almost every type of woman. The suit with a youthful looking short box coat is shown invariably the choice of younger girls. Quite as smart and interpreted in several different ways is the suit with a belted Russian jacquette attached to a hip band. A bit more unusual is the suit which has a coat cut on longer lines and cleverly draped to give a slender graceful effect.

Much of the charm of these suits depends upon the materials. This season the soft beauty of fabrics is intensified to the exquisite degree. Add to this the richness of costly furs and the result is satisfying from the viewpoint of beauty as well as chic.

In many cases the same color is repeated in the upper part of the frock, which is often of crepe de chine, but there is also a decided tendency for bright effects in gayly printed silks, velvets, or metal cloths.

SOVIET GOVT SEND NOTE TO CHINA

Peking, Dec. 11.—Representatives of the Soviet government of Russia have sent the Chinese foreign office a memorandum claiming that the powers which participated in the Washington conference last year have no legal right to interfere with the disposition of the Chinese Eastern Railway.

The memorandum declares that Russia is the only country entitled to deal with the railway and that a new administration for the road should be established by the Russian and Chinese. A thorough investigation of the railway's financial affairs is also demanded.

GERMANS TO BUILD MARINE CRANE IN ENGLAND

Wilhelmshaven, Germany, Dec. 9.—Too cumbersome for safe transportation abroad, Wilhelmshaven's huge floating crane, the largest in the world, will remain here despite the original stipulations of the Versailles peace treaty. Instead of moving it, the Entente has decided that Germany must build an exact duplicate in England at German expense.

The mammoth apparatus is 85 meters high and can lift 250 tons to a height of 85 meters. An entire torpedoboat can be dangled from its great iron claws.

ON THE WAY-UP, GRANDPA CARRIED A HOD

There was one day a little boy talking to his grandpa, and this boy suddenly said:

"Grandpa, are you a real good man?"

"I certainly hope so," replied grandpa. "Why you ask me?"

"Well, grandpa, I had a dream about you last night. I dreamed I went to heaven, and there was me, Peter and he said, 'Come right in, little boy, but you will first have to put down all the bad things you have done on a blackboard.' And I said, 'All right.' And you were there, grandpa, writing on the blackboard with others, and St. Peter sent me back home for some chalk. I had to go down a ladder to get home, and I got the chalk and I was going up the ladder, when I met you, grandpa, coming down."

"You met me going down the ladder?" said Grandpa, astonished. "What was I going down for?"

"For more chalk."

OBEDIENCE

Willie had almost finished his reading lesson when he came to a word he could not pronounce.

"Bacque," prompted the teacher.

Willie looked at his classmates and grinned.

"Bacque, Willie!" exclaimed the teacher, harshly.

Willie, looking up at the teacher, finally cried out, "Bow-wow!"

A NEW OCCUPATION FOR WOMEN

Geraldine had always detested the thought of fixed hours and routine that is the lot of most business women, and her search for a congenial occupation seemed hopeless, until, when I called on her recently, I found she had opened a tiny store and started as a professional fine-art bookbinder.

"Yes," she told me, while I was admiring a delicately gilt-tooled calf-bound copy of Shelley, "of course I had to train for some months at an art and crafts school before I could blindfold books like that one, but it really isn't such a difficult matter as it looks, providing one has a taste for good craftsmanship and some knowledge of drawing. After one has picked up the finer points of the craft, it becomes merely a matter of practice, and a little study of design."

The actual setting up of the business involves little trouble or expense beyond the book display in the little window and the purchase of type, typeholders, tools and leather. The financial position, too, of such a store is fairly secure, for the materials used cost so little, that the majority of the price charged finds its way into one's own pocket. The charges, of course, vary with the class of binding required, it being a fairly safe plan to charge the cost of material and so much per hour for labor, adding a slight percentage for overhead expenses.

Geraldine makes a specialty of the best type of work, which is also the most profitable—the binding of private sets of works—but she by no means despises humbler items, such as the binding of volumes of popular works, published in fortnightly parts, so many of which are now printed.

"PUSS IN BOOTS"

Boston, Dec. 8.—They are buckling them in Boston. The flapping overshoes of other years were hustled right today when they made their premier appearance of the season on young women trudging through the first fall of snow. It was in this city that the fashion originated several years ago, it has been said.

LINKED LIVES

By D. Kinmount Roy

MacAlpin was silent for a little, for the peddar and his fell deeds perplexed him, and to love your enemies when you have had such striking proof of their existence is never a very easy thing for an honest man, however pious he may be. MacAlpin longed to get there some time, and laboured to that end, but he could not pay himself any compliments on that head so far, and that worried him not a little.

He was about to try what could be done to get Oona and Graham into better quarters, and the undertaking was not without risk in many ways. Fortunately, interest in the strange disappearance had drifted away from the neighbourhood where it had occurred, and whatever concern there was had become directed to the sea-coast where Kinkenna and his party had last been seen. All this was in favour of MacAlpin's present plans.

Dawn was breaking as he picked up Jessy at her cottage door and rode away at a good pace: Duke, like the noble creature he was, responsive to the least word of his master. The journey before them could not well exceed thirty miles. Donald, had, however, learned caution from recent events, and the better to conceal his purpose he travelled by many cross roads, until as evening was closing in they seemed to come all of a sudden upon a quaint little village, hidden away among rocks and trees, as though suddenly dropped from the sky and not yet discerned by ordinary human folk. Streets there were none, but cart-tracks were visible in many directions, and following one of these leading up a steep hill and round a sharp curve, they drew up in front of a cottage at the foot of a cliff, fully forty feet in height. Here an ancient friend of Janet's was pleased to welcome them, and that visit was not of ceremony or of choice was well understood, but little was said about it. It was enough that Janet needed her friend and that Donald was doing them a service to the best of his ability.

Next day Duke rested and Donald went a-fishing, returning in the evening with a light creel but with a wealth of information about the strange place. The river, which, it is only just to say, could not be surpassed within the compass of the British Isles.

The day following, MacAlpin started in good earnest upon his mission, taking Duke with him. The animal was surefooted and well trained in his master's ways, otherwise he could not have taken him very far over or even round about the cliffs. Before it could be saddle—a lady's saddle—he turned Duke loose, while he ate some food he had brought with him and thought out the situation.

To secrete the saddle and an overcoat he was wearing, among a clump of gorse near by, occupied but a minute; treating the horse meanwhile as though he were partly in the fellow's confidence, he kept up a conversation with him and allowed him to nose the coat and saddle to his satisfaction. To have tied his horse there, Donald reasoned, would have attracted attention; but a horse at large, wandering at will, would not be a very unusual sight. Duke, his master knew, would never wander very far from the coat and saddle which represented his master's presence and commands.

The path along the bank of the river was steep in many places, and not very safe for a careless traveller, but MacAlpin had made the journey so often that he was quite at home in every turn and curve, and could name every stone and root which marked out the way. It will be remembered that the water which flowed through the great cavern continued its course for some distance before falling into a deep channel, a few feet lower. This stream, judged by its depth and swiftness, must have been fed from more than one hidden source, and evidence was not wanting that in far-off times a mighty volume of water had slowly cut its way through the rock, hollowing out its own path, and forcing an outlet through a tunnel-like opening, where it united with another stream and flowed on through a deep gorge; finally, becoming broader, with less precipitous banks, it flowed on as a noble river through rich pasture-lands, murmuring as it wound its way over a shallower bottom, without a trace of its hidden and mysterious source.

MacAlpin's plan was to aid Graham and Oona to effect an exit from their strange quarters without again passing the waterfall, and this had the double merit of being at once easier and safer to accomplish as taking them a long way from the neighbourhood of Fosseway Hall. Still, it was no light task which lay before him, for at the outlet the water rushed with great force, between yawning over huge rocks, with a final fall of over seventy feet.

A ledge had been left within the tunnel by the shrinking of the stream in the course of the ages, on which one might walk without much risk from the inner cave, by torch-light—otherwise the journey would have to be made perilously feeling the way along the wall of rock, with the hand and head of a river of unknown depth within a couple of feet—even to the coolest of nerves—a nerve-shaking experiment! Donald had performed this feat, more than once, for some distance from the mouth of the tunnel, when he thought a torch might attract attention.

A rope secured to a jutting rock within the tunnel and to a tree on the bank was the basis for a rough bridge of tree-trunks and brush, which he made, MacAlpin, and he hoped would now serve for the deliverance of Oona and Graham from their strange solitude.

Successful Studying

The Friendly Treatment of Books

(This is the last of a series of articles which will help young students to learn more and get better grades by showing them how to study more efficiently.)

If you wish to get the most out of your books, you must treat them like gentlemen. It's much easier to study a fresh looking book than one with a broken back and torn pages. Book were not meant to be used for fighting purposes.

When you have bought a new book, lay it on a table or flat surface, grasp the pages in one hand, and with the other gently push the covers down so that they rest on the table. This softens the back and keeps it from breaking easily.

Keep Books Clean.

Do not touch books when your hands are dirty, and never turn the pages with moistened thumb, as a mark is left which is hard to get rid of.

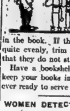

When the cover of your book becomes soiled, you can make it look almost as good as new by rubbing in finely powdered pumice stone, such as you can find at any drugstore, if your mother doesn't have some around the house. Use a soft cloth for cleaning. The pages may also be cleaned with the pumice stone, or with art gum.

Never turn a book over on its face or turn the corner of a page down to mark a place. It is also a bad habit to stick a pencil in a book, as this breaks the binding.

Mend Torn Leaves.

When a leaf is torn, cut a piece of thin onion skin paper one-half inch wide and the length of the tear. Use a good library paste to fix it over the tear. Place a piece of oiled paper under the page while you are mending it, so that no paste will get through to the next page.

If a page comes out, make a hinge of a strong piece of paper one inch wide and the length of the page. Fold the paper lengthwise, then put library paste on half of the folded paper and paste it to the torn page. Paste the other side in the book. If the page is not put in quite evenly, trim the edges neatly, so that they do not stick out.

Have a bookshelf in your room and keep your books in order, trim soldiers ever ready to serve you.

The Short Story Jr.

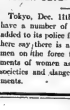

A DOG'S CHRISTMAS SHOPPING.

Only eleven more shopping days till Christmas," thought Towser the glassy, and it haven't done a bit of Christmas shopping yet. This thing of letting Santa Claus do all the work and waiting for Christmas is all right for humans, but it doesn't work for us dogs. Let's see, there's Trix, Shep, Frits, and Jack. I'll have to get something for all of them. My, I sure got busy!"

Towser looked at himself in the cellar window to see if his hair was nicely parted. "I'll just run down to the butcher shop now," he thought, "and see what he has in stock."

He flourished boldly into the shop. "Bow, wow, wow," he ordered briskly. The butcher laughed. "It's Jim Clark's dog," he said. "Just wait, I'll have to get him a bone."

Towser took the bone in his mouth, wagged his tail to pay for it, and marched off down the street. Out into the garden he ran when no one was looking. He buried the bone deep in a hole that he dug. "There, this will do for now," he thought. "Now I must go back and get one for Shep." He hurried back to the meat market.

"Nothing doing, old fellow, I must save you one." The butcher looked cross.

"Bow, wow, wow," Towser ordered more persistently.

"Get out of here! Not another bone to-day!" The butcher emphasized his words with a kick.

Christmas shopping wasn't such a cinch, after all. What could he get for Shep and Frits and Jack? Towser limped up the street, thinking hard. He went in the house to think before, she fire. There on the floor, as though put there for him, was a large plate of candy. What luck! Some of that candy would be just the thing for Pete. Cautiously he hopped up on the chair and then onto the table. Just then the door opened.

"Towser," shrieked the cook, waving her broom, "you awful, awful dog!" Towser made a flying leap for the door, just as cook hit him over the head with her broom.

He went out in his garden to think what to do next. There in the corner of the garden was Shep digging up the bone. Towser had just buried! Towser tore after him and soon drove him out of the garden, but it was too late. Shep hurried Trix's nice Christmas bone away in his mouth.

"Well," thought Towser, as he came back to his garden, "I won't have to get Shep any Christmas present now, but there's still Trix and Jack and Frits." He gave a sigh, then a grin and thought dejectedly that he was glad he was not Santa Claus.

A Difficult Question

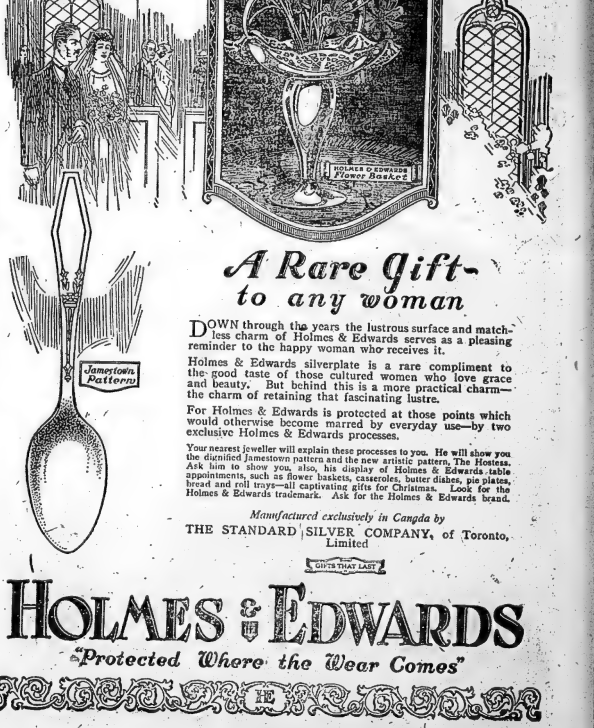

Nothing less than a public-school education was considered fit for the son of a profiteer.

Little Moneybags returned home from his first term full of importance.

Well Clarence, and what 'ave they taught you?" asked paterfamilias.

"French, father, and German, and Euclid."

"Ah," said Moneybags joyfully "that's the stuff! Now, just tell me the Euclid for "Good-morning!"

CONFERENCE OF MARITIME UNIVERSITIES

Halifax, Dec. 11 (By Canadian Press).—The third conference of the Universities, Colleges and Governments of the Maritime Provinces and Newfoundland will open in the Province Building here to-morrow for the purpose of passing on a scheme of University Federation which in the personal judgment of representatives of all the interests involved, and formally chosen as such, is a workable plan. Out of the conference, and with this plan as a basis, it is hoped will grow a final scheme for submission to the constituencies of the universities involved.

The publication last Spring of the report of the Carnegie Foundation Commissioners, Dr. William S. Learned and Dr. Kenneth C. M. Sills, following their investigation of the situation as regards higher education in the Maritime Provinces excited widespread interest among education ists other than those immediately concerned with the problem presenting itself in Eastern Canada. This for the reason that the solution recommended aimed at a new treatment of the problem presented in all large universities in the United States at the proper examination and direction of huge bodies of students.

In effect the report proposed that the various universities at present operating, under tremendous financial handicaps, in the Maritime Provinces should move to Halifax, set up a central university qualified to receive Government aid, preserve their own names and identities by functioning as constituent colleges, and with their endowments unimpaired, be further relieved of the burden of teaching the more expensive courses. As regards Dalhousie University, Halifax, which with its present $2,000,000 plant and endowment, would form the nucleus of any scheme of federation, it was suggested that it should hand over its professional schools of medicine, law and dentistry, already established, to the central university, and function as non-denominational everything it possessed, save only its name which should designate it the new Central University.

The plan it was pointed out was merely an adaptation of the English system, obtaining at Oxford and Cambridge which instead of attracting men to the various colleges, by the traditions of such would draw them on a denominational basis. The function and activities involved in the plan with their religious affiliations follow:

Acadia University, Wolfville, Baptist; King's University, Windsor, Anglican; Mount Allison University, Sackville, N. B. Methodist; A Presbyterian College; A Roman Catholic College; University of New Brunswick, Non-denominational; Dalhousie University, Non-denominational.

Following the publication of the Carnegie Report a conference representative of King's Mount Allison, Acadia, Dalhousie and the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Halifax was held here on July 7, at the call of King's College.

The conference elected the Chief Justice of Nova Scotia as Chairman and Mr. G. Fred Pearson as Secretary and provided for the appointment of two committees, finance and constitution, representative of all the institutions involved, and charged with the task of ascertaining the cost of a workable scheme of federation and a consideration of the main constitutional questions involved.

A second conference was held at Halifax October 24. The Committee on Finance reported that a new University, mothering the existing Maritime Colleges removed to Halifax would involve a capital expenditure of $1,000,000 and an annual outlay of $450,000. The Committee on Constitution reported, endorsing the principle of federation, recommended the removal to Halifax of the existing institutions while retaining each its own character and governing body constituent college, or should give up and holding in abeyance its degree conferring powers, except in divinity, retain its endowments and equipment other than scientific equipment, but all tuition fees would be paid into the Central University which would confer all degrees, other than those in divinity. It would share its library with the other colleges.

GEN. J. C. SMUTS,

Premier of South Africa, the condition of whose health is giving rise to alarm.

Growing out of the discussion of the above reports it was resolved:

"That each of the bodies represented at this Conference be asked to nominate two representatives on a committee to consider and report further on the constitutional, academic, and financial aspects of the problems before the Conference and to submit their report to each member of the Conference at least two weeks before the next meeting of the Conference."

This Committee subsequently met and decided to invite the representatives of each of the various institutions involved to submit a plan of federation which in its judgment would be workable. This having been done an endeavor was made to consolidate the various plans and the resultant scheme is the one which the Conference will be called upon to consider tomorrow. While its provisions have yet to be made public, it is believed they will follow closely the plan contained in the original Carnegie report.

In the case of any one of the constituent colleges this would mean that it would come to Halifax and be provided with ample residential and class room accommodation. It would teach roughly the first two years in arts and a full course in divinity, leaving the more expensive courses to the Central University. It would Government Banking.

Toronto, Dec. 7.—"Sir Joseph is merely expressing his own personal opinion. He made a number of statements, but gave no concrete facts to back them up. I think he would find they were without foundation if he investigated the matter fully," said M. E. McKenzie, director of the Provincial Savings Banks, when asked concerning some remarks which Sir Joseph Flavelle made in the course of an address on Tuesday night.

Sir Joseph declared that he was opposed to provincial government going into the banking business, and said that governments should obtain money which they needed in excess of their regular revenues through the sale of their securities.

"We are not banning banks in any way," Mr. McKenzie stated; "We are simply going on from the point where they leave off. No bank in the country is going into the matter of agriculture loans as we are."

would be most do for himself, Sir Joseph said. Our problems are not "how shall we obtain our share" but are how can we create something worth sharing. We must do more productive work and less unproductive work. Hard work is our only remedy today and not shorter hours. Hard work is an asset, not a liability to a country. The best fun in the world is hard work and it is a God-given blessing to be born poor.

Life is an adventure, and we should accept the challenge of competitive work.

In Toronto, a church continually clogged, and the foreman of the gang had tedious work clearing it. One day he did the job in record time, and covered with mud and slime and smelly filth, he exultingly proclaimed his feat. It is the joy of accomplishing something that is worth while. There will be no relief from heavy taxation but there will be no need to worry or lose courage. Do not scold or fume; take the manlier way and work, remembering the sacrifices of the Canadians in France. Remember what Rippy McGee said: We are working for a hundred millions and the unborn millions to come. Do our part as well as we can and Canada will come out successful in the end.

LARGE STILL SEIZED

Trenton Police officers recently raided a residence in that town, near the Cobalt Hill, and discovered a large still. The still was the most elaborate one ever found in Trenton, and the operators were experienced distiller who ever located there. He had a double-copper filter, and purified the liquor by filtering it through charcoal, which gives it a whitish color. In the house, the officer found one gallon of liquor, a quantity of mash, but the worn and filter had been hidden in the woods. On being questioned by the evidence secured by the police, however, he confessed there to the hiding place of the remainder. Magistrate O'Rourke fined him $200 and costs, or six months in jail. He took the jail term. He is a native of the United States.

MURDER TRIAL IN LONDON CREATES GREAT INTEREST

London, Dec. 11.—When old Bailey opened this morning for the trial of Mrs. Edith Thompson and Frederick Bywaters, charged with the murder of Percy Thompson, husband, there was a long line of persons waiting for admission. Bywaters is alleged to have stabbed Thompson while the latter was escorting his wife home from the theatre. The seats in the London court were at a premium and some persons among the hundreds waiting in line offered as much as five dollars for favorable places. Many of the unemployed took advantage of the interest in the trial by selling their places in line.

CAMPBELLFORD MINISTER FOR FIFTH YEAR

At a large and very representative meeting of the Official Board of the Methodist Church, of Campbellford, held recently, Rev. H. B. Kenny was given a unanimous invitation to remain as pastor of the congregation for a fifth year. The old law with regard to the itinerant system has been changed so that now there is no limit to the pastoral term if both pastor and people wish to prolong it. The work of Mr. Kenny in Campbellford has been most satisfactory in every way and not only will the Methodist people be pleased if he also chooses to accept the invitation but the townspeople generally. Mr. Kenny thanked the board for their kind invitation but was not in a position to give a decided answer. The officials expressed themselves as wanting the pastor to know that his acceptance would be most welcome to themselves and the congregation generally.

SUGGEEDS WHERE DOCTORS FAIL

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Often Does That—Read Mrs. Miner's Testimony

Churubusco, N.Y.—"I was under the doctor's care for over five years for Nervous prostration and had no relief from his medicine and a neighbor told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I want to say that I was so much that I walk five miles to the factory Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for my health, backache. It is a great help in carrying a child, as I have noticed a difference when I didn't take it. I thank you for this medicine and if I ever come to this point again I do not want to be without the Vegetable Compound. I give you permission to publish this letter so that all women can take my advice."—Mrs. FRED MINER, Box 102, Churubusco, N. Y.

It's the same story over again. Women suffer from ailments for years. They try doctors and different medicines, but feel no better. Finally they take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and you can see its value in the case of Mrs. Miner.

That's the truth of the matter. If you are suffering from any of the ills of a woman here, you ought to try this medicine. It can be taken in strictly young or old, as it contains no harmful drugs

OPEN RUPTURE AVERTED

French and British Take Eight-Day Adjournment to Get Together

London, Dec. 11—The adjournment of the Premiers' Conference to night for eight days in order to avert an open rupture between Britain and France over the question of the German reparations has been virtually decided upon, it was learned today. The British Cabinet, it was authoritatively stated, rejected the measure of forces for the Ruhr District presented by Premier Poincare instead. Premier Bonar Law informed Premier Poincare that public opinion was overwhelmingly opposed to any military measures against Germany. The conference will probably resume its sessions on the 19th days in London or Paris.

Meanwhile it is hoped that some guarantees may be found which will satisfy the French and at the same time impose military action unnecessary.

W.D.ROBB ARRIVES IN THE CITY

official under whose direction same was carried out.

At 2.30 p.m. the procession was formed at the station and was marshalled by Bleecker Ave. to Pine St., down Pine to Charles, down Charles to Bridge, via Bridge to Church, up Church to Foundry and Front, down Front to Bridge, and thence via Bridge to the Armouries. Many citizens along the route had thoughtfully decorated their premises, and along Front Street the merchants had followed suit. Everywhere along the line the impression was that every effort had been put forth to make the guest of the day feel that the welcome extended was a true one and was intended to make him feel right at home.

The children of the High and Public schools were out on the streets to greet the distinguished guests of the city as they passed in the parade.

At the Armouries, Mr. Robb was presented with a golden key, symbolic of the freedom of the City, in the presence of a most representative gathering Mayor Hanna made the presentation, speaking in part as follows:—

One of the happiest functions during the whole period of my official career as Mayor of Belleville, is the one which I am now about to perform it is a sacred custom dating back into History as the "presentation of the Freedom of a City." This Municipal privilege is an arrangement whereby a City is afforded an opportunity of paying its tribute of respect to certain distinguished individuals.

We, today, you as citizens of Belleville, are called together on such an important occasion, for we are about to grant the Freedom of our City to one who, years ago, was employed here as a Locomotive Fireman on the Grand Trunk Railway, but one who to day has reached the highest position in that System. We all know of the skill that to attain this great office of "Vice President and General Manager" is the result of unceasing energies, diligent service and hard work. This success has been a source of great rejoicing for us Belleville citizens, and we could not but think if some means to greet our Belleville Foreman of years ago, and this thought is now realized in this form.

Therefore, on behalf of the Council and our citizens of Belleville, I, your Mayor, take this privilege of presenting to you, Sir, this small case, in which you will find enclosed a golden key, which is a symbol of the Freedom of this City. It is like every other key, an emblem of authority trust and confidence. We would pray, Sir, that you make use of it for it is also a symbol of our most sincere greetings to you. We still look upon you as one of the sons of Belleville. There are some things that were made by you during your early career here that shall always remain as abiding pillars of your success and efficiency. Though you have left our City to some extent, yet we know that you are still with us in interests, and we want you for all time to learn today that you shall never be forgotten by our City of Belleville.

Many citizens witnessed this unique and impressive ceremony.

This afternoon about 5 o'clock, Sir Henry Thornton will arrive, accompanied by various officials, and will proceed to the Hotel Quinte to attend the complimentary dinner given to Mr. Robb. This function is scheduled for 7.30 p.m.; and will also be attended by Sir Joseph Flavelle, Bart., retiring chairman of the Board of Management of the Grand Trunk Railway System, and many officials prominent in railway circles.

Mayor Hanna will act as chairman, and Mr. Sanford Bronson will lead the community singing of songs especially provided for the occasion, and an interesting time is to be carried out. The reservations for this affair have long since been taken up and this function will close a chapter of events that will be indelibly written in the history of Belleville, as a mark of sincere appreciation to one of her most brilliant and successful sons.

AURA LEE SQUAD GIVE VARSITY SOME RUN

The "scrubs" eyped again. Those that stayed away from the Arena on Saturday night thinking that on the Senior B.A. game would be "no contest," and those that went there expecting to see Varsity defeat their Lee by ten goals, are but their good Canadian money accordingly. The blue-skirted team won all right, but not by ten goals, nor near that margin. The final score was 4 to 1, and the tilt went ten minutes overtime, the only breaking the tie after seven minutes of extra play had expired, and then could not even before the effort rans to a close.

JAPANESE SHIPPING LINES TO MERGE

Yokohama, Dec. 10th. (Canadian Press)—Negotiations for a merger of all Japanese shipping because of the competition offered by foreign merchant fleets are gradually progressing, and the preliminary investigations carried out by the Nippon Yusen Kaisha company have been completed.

According to the proposals that will be placed before the various companies for ratification, all Japanese steamships shall be standardized in quality, and ships will be allotted to the various services, taking into consideration the number and tonnage of vessels hitherto placed in those routes, as well as the amount of cargo loaded.

The freight receipts and expenses for the combined fleets will be properly prepared and the profits and losses will be duly disposed of in proportion to the capital invested in the steamship firms involved in the amalgamation.

BIKI AGAIN

Paris, Dec. 10—Battling Biki reappeared in the ring before the lowest-browed competitive appointed by the French Boxing Federation, which held its first session yesterday, in attempt to clear up the Carpentier-Biki frame-up charges. The Senegalese, through his counsel, sent a letter will be inaugurated.

to the committee saying that inasmuch as the federation had already taken his license and title of champion away from him without giving him a hearing, thus placing him under the necessity of suing them for the courts, he failed to see why they should ask to hear him now; it might cause prejudice to the legal actions which would be heard by a tribunal. The committee will hold its next meeting on Tuesday.

CITY BANQUETS MR. ROBB AT HOTEL QUINTE

DECORATIONS VERY EFFECTIVE

Quinte Hotel Dining Tables Tastefully Decorated—Walls Appropriately Hung with Posters, Bunting, Flags, and a Railway Map.

The tables in the dining room of the Quinte presented a very attractive appearance for the banquet last evening. The green runners and the snowy white linen all looked attractive. The menu cards were very showy golden up and were attractive souvenirs of the day. A miniature train with a railway station stood watch over the head table just in front of Sir Henry and Mr. Robb. In golden letters, "Grand Trunk" was painted on every car and the locomotive. The word "Believille" hung on the station itself. They little electric lights illuminated both train and station. A huge railway map, indicating in no uncertain way that Belleville was the centre of the Grand Trunk System hung just behind Sir Henry and Mr. Robb.

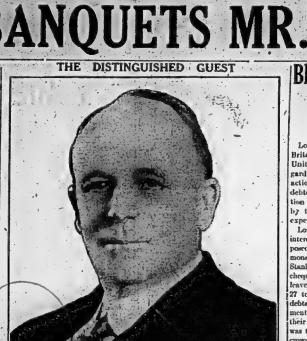

We quote herewith extracts from the souvenir menu booklet.

THE BAY OF QUINTE

O lovely Bay of Quinte!
Rolling on in tranquil flow,
Thine azure bosom tinted
By sunset's ruddy glow—
I might roam Mvy every country,
I might sail o'er every sea,
And never find a place more fair
Than Quinte is to me.

No rugged cliffs nor mountains
Outline thy tranquil shore,
But O' the peaceful scenery!
No heart could wish for more,
Thy sloping hills and valleys
All clad in freshest green
O, fairer shores than Quinte's
No mortal eye hath seen.

I love the Bay of Quinte,
And when this life is o'er,
And I with joyous steps will tread
Dear Quinte's side no more,

W. D. ROBB

Vice-President and General Manager of the Grand Trunk Railway System, from a complimentary banquet was tendered last night, at the Hotel Quinte, by the citizens of the City of Belleville.

FIRST OFFICIAL APPEARANCE OF MR. ROBB YESTERDAY

Drive From G.T.R. Station to Armouries, Route Lined With Citizens and School Children—Freedom of City Given Mr. Robb

Throughout the afternoon numerous citizens were escorted through the various shops at the round house, and every department in the huge centre of industry was found to be very clean, orderly and efficiently managed. Each guest was handed a card upon entering the west door by the man in charge of the escort parties. The cards contained considerable interesting statistical information about the G.T. railway.

Railway officials together with Mayor C. Hanna, members of the City Council, and many members of the Belleville Rotary Club, were shown through each shop by Mr. J. D. MacMillan, District Superintendent. The most interesting exhibit of the round house seemed to be the new rail saw, which was installed at the Belleville shops just this summer. This saw, which is the last word in efficient rail saws, sawed through one of the heaviest types of rails in 30 seconds. The saw was put in operation, and many rail ends were carried away by the visitors as souvenirs of the event.

Machine shops, repair shops, stores and stock rooms and plant offices were visited in turn, after which the party walked to the depot where the parade was formed previous to the march through the city streets.

Special mention is due the railway officials here for the very excellent manner in which the Grand Trunk depot was decorated. No time or energy was spared to make the depot present every evidence of the warmest and most hearty welcome possible.

The entire building was almost wholly obthroaded in Canadian flags and bunting, both back and front. At each corner, evergreen trees were in position, and the walls were also adorned by carefully made evergreen decorations. In bold white letters on the front of the station wall, at sign board bore the words, "Welcome to Our City".

The Parade

The parade, formed at the depot, being composed of a procession of motor cars some fifteen or twenty in number. At the rear end of the leading car, which was gaily decorated, Mr. W. D. Robb was seated, while Mayor C. Hanna was also a passenger in the leading car. The school children lined the north side of Front street, from Campbell, almost to Victoria avenue, and as the procession passed they cheered the ing tiny flags all the while. Mr. Robb doffed his hat, and with a jovial "Hello, children", greeted the little folks, who appreciated having been recognized so pointedly, and added just a little more zest to the cheering. All of the officials very courteously acknowledged the

UNEMPLOYED EJECTED

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Dec. 12.—A turbulent but short-lived scene was staged this afternoon in the great central hall adjoining the lobby of the House of Commons when the police ejected a crowd of fifty unemployed men who had invaded the place and begun singing the "Red Flag" and waving placards.

BLACK AND TANS AND IRISH REPUBLICANS LIKE POLICE JOBS

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Sydney, N. S., Dec. 1.—Forty members of the Black and Tans have arrived here with their families and settle on farms. Some of them have applied for positions on the City police. A Sydney police inspector says that the Irish Republicans are also arriving here and are also making application to be taken on the force. Local men are being given the preference.

MARMORA VILLAGE VISITED BY FIRE

Some Barns and Outbuildings Destroyed—Dodge Car Burned

Marmora village was, at a late hour on Sunday, visited by a fire which destroyed some buildings, entailing considerable loss. The barn in connection with Mr. H. P. Pearce's home was burned, also his garage. In the garage was Mr. Pearce's Dodge car which was destroyed. Despite the efforts of the fire brigade the flames spread to some other buildings adjacent which fell a prey to the devouring element. One of the buildings destroyed was a barn and the property of Mrs. Ruth Anderson. It was fearful at one time that the fire would assume a conflagration but fortunately it was subdued before it reached other buildings adjacent. The loss, amounting in some thousands of dollars, is partially covered by insurance. Mr. Pearce's car was insured. How the fire originated has not been accertained.

BRITAIN MAY SOUND STATES

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Dec. 12.—The belief that Britain intends to sound out the United States Government with regard to its willingness to take such action in reference to the war debts, such as the possible cancellation of the French debt, is asserted by the Daily Telegraph's diplomatic expert.

London, Dec. 12—Official circles are interestedly awaiting Bonar Law's proposed statement in the House of Commons on Thursday on the question. Stanley Baldwin, Chancellor of the Exchequer and the Debt Funding Mission, leaves for Washington on December 27 to attend a discussion of the allied debts with the United States Government. The Allied Premiers left for their homes today. Premier Mussolini was the centre of attention and a great crowd saw him off at Victoria station.

PARENTS OF O'CONNOR ABHOR REPRISALS

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Dublin, Dec. 12.—The parents of Rory O'Connor, executed last week, have written to the press, stating their abhorrence of the reprisals for the death of their son. "Our grief is not softened by the thought of the murders of others," says the letter. In a note written to his brother on the day of his execution, O'Connor pleaded that he could not continue with his former comrades. "I am to meet death at their hands. The will of God be done."

GOVERNOR SWORN IN

Belfast, Dec. 12.—The Duke of Abercorn, Governor of Ulster in Northern Ireland, was sworn in today. The ceremony took place in the Corridore Room in the presence of Premier Craig and the other members of the Ulster Cabinet. The oath was administered by Right Hon. Denis Henry, the Lord Chief Justice.

SEAN HALES LAID TO REST

AMERICAN MERCHANT PRINCE PASSES

BIG LIQUOR THEFT FROM RAILWAY CAR

Some time between Saturday night and Sunday morning, a Grand Trunk box car, which was standing on a siding in the yards here, near the Grand Trunk round house, was broken into, and some cases of liquor stolen from the cargo of liquor which made up the load.

The car was loaded with liquor from the Canadian Distilleries Limited at Corbyville, which was in route for export. The door of the car was pried open before operations commenced, and it is believed that a motor car or truck was used in transporting the liquor from the car.

Rumor has it that it is quite probable that the theft would have been carried out in a larger way, had the person or persons involved not been frightened away.

Provincial police officers, and members of the railway police force are busy working on this case, and it is expected that some interesting developments may come to light in the case in the near future.

The out-of-town guests of prominence were:

Sir Henry Thornton, President of the Canadian National Railways.

Sir Joseph Flavelle, and Lady Flavelle.

Major Graham Bell, Deputy Minister of Railways and Canals.

W. C. Chisholm, K.C., General Solicitor, Montreal, and A. J. F. Pratt, Assistant, General Solicitor, Montreal.

Mr. Geo. Adam, General Welfare Agent, Canadian National Railways Montreal.

C. E. Bowker, Operating Manager, Grand Trunk Railway, Montreal.

J. A. Yates, Treasurer, Grand Trunk, Montreal.

MR. H. F. KETCHESON.

In rising to propose the toast to our guest, Mr. W. D. Robb, I desire to state that we have much reason to congratulate your splendid career with the Grand Trunk Railway, starting many years ago as an apprentice in the shops at Point St. Charles, Montreal. Later you were made gang foreman in the same shops. Then came your appointment as locomotive foreman at Belleville where you career really began.

Filling very successfully this last appointment you were made master mechanic of the middle division, covering over fourteen hundred miles of railway being at this time associated with Mr. Howe. Next followed your appointment as superintendent of motive power for the whole G. T. R. system, and later your appointment as one of the vice-presidents of the railway and assistant to Mr. Kelly, the president. Now you are filling the office of vice-president and general manager of the Grand Trunk Railway.

What this is very gratifying your association with Belleville is what interests us most. You came here as a locomotive foreman and Mrs. Robb as a bride, there are men connected with the G.T.R. and in the room tonight who will bear out what I say that you had not been here long before wonderful improvement could be noted in connection with the shops. You realized that power to a railway was most essential and that no road could meet with any measure of success unless provided with ample motive power and this you developed to a very high state of efficiency in Belleville shops. Many the men knew that any problem they had not solve, could be passed on to you and would be sure of a solution. You were strict but fair, and all the men united to you like a family.

I cannot tell you how proud we are of you in what you have accomplished for long years of hard and faithful service to your company. Every citizen feels that through you great honour has been done to Belleville, that the city for many years and Mrs. Robb and yourself and family are well known in us. We also know that you have a very warm spot in your heart for the city where all your children were born and where you yourself were born.

The railway which you will manage assumes a great deal to our city. At least

SIR HENRY THORNTON RECEIVES PETITION

Communication Asks That Belleville be Selected as Head Quarters of the National Railway System—Boys' Council Mayor Unduly Modest

Upon entering the hall Sir Henry Thornton was presented with the following document:—

Belleville, December 11th, 1922.

Sir Henry Worth Thornton, K.B.E.,

Dear Sir:

Belleville is the place for the Head Offices of the Government Railways. You will then get away from the Railway influence prevailing where the Railways fell down. You will avoid the rivalries of those two cities of Toronto and Ottawa. The Ottawa Politicians, Belleville is convenient and accessible. Its situation on the beautiful Bay of Quinte makes it a delightful place in which to live. Land is plentiful and the price is low so that people will not have to be cooped up in handboxes.

It was at one time the home of General Sir Gordon Hewitt and of the late General Manager Reeves of the G.T.R. It was also the home of the late Chief Solicitor, John Bell, Q.C., and of the late President W. H. Biggar, K.C., of the G.T.R. and of Judge Philpots, Chief Commissioner of the Canadian Northern Railway. John McHugh Trunk at his career on the Grand Trunk as Station Agent, President of the Mechanics and Metals National Bank of New York, Chairman of the Clearing House Committee of the Commercial Bankers Ass., President of the Dominion Corporation of New York and Chairman of the Committee of the Foreign Trade Financial Corporation of the United States.

Belleville is in the Old United Empire Loyalist District that has given three Premiers, three Ministers of Justice, a Minister of Finance and a Deputy Minister of Railways to Canada; a Premier to Ontario, a Premier and two Chief Justices to Manitoba. Business and sentiment combined in Belleville. Please consider.

CHARLES HAYES,

Mayor, Belleville Boys' Council.

"I thought I would be able to be here among you, listen to Mr. Robb speak, and that would be all that would be expected of me, but as soon as I arrived and entered into the room I am handed documents making representations that the headquarters of the National System should be in Belleville, I have examined the documents with more than passing interest, and I know that you have achieved some measure of greatness. I think however that in the preparation of this document the Mayor has been unnecessarily modest to let out a lot of your more valuable and important assets. I am credibly informed that there is a distillery in the vicinity. I assure you had Toronto been able to offer such assets it would have been drawn to my attention by the gentlemen of the Board of Trade of that city who waited upon me today.

Sir Henry remarked that upon looking over the illustrious men that have been born in Belleville that the Lord appeared not to have been kind to him.

C.T. O'HARA, DID HIS DUTY? AS CANADA MIGHT HAVE EXPECTED

At Hawaiian Conference Canada Only Country Without Native-Born Representatives in the Children's Colony

(Canadian Press.)

Ottawa, Dec. 8.—The deputy minister of trade and commerce, Mr. O'Hara, regrets that there are not 10 provinces in the Dominion. Lost this afternoon he talked on the subject he should be explained forthwith that no such redistribution is contemplated. In connection with the incident that occurred during Mr. O'Hara's recent visit to Honolulu as one of Canada's representatives on the first Pan-Pacific Commercial Conference, F. C. T. took With him a beautiful silk Canadian flag. It transpired that delegates from other countries were similarly equipped. The object of the conference was to parade in a holiday and had chosen this as an opportunity of giving his deputy a big welcome. His flags were opened very speedily. Work of great importance was done. The men which met there were men of ideals and most essentially business men. There was a complete absence of the politicians and all the errors and privileges. No one country dominated the congress and good fellowship and desire to serve were everywhere in evidence. He was free to be able to draw the attention of visiting dignitaries to many facts concerning Canada, of which they were in profound ignorance. He even got the impression, in one instance, that in the Dominion we were still laboring under the difficulty of lack of money, pounds shillings and pence.

Mr. Aldrigh's on the natural beauties and resources of the Hawaiian Islands and on their history proved most interesting.

He expressed the wish that Canada's exhibits were more representative.

Mr. O'Hara returned a few days ago from this Conference and the splendid time which gave the Union Club at a recent luncheon, you all too short and proved most engrossing. The conference was attended by 100 delegates representing almost every nationality. Canada was represented by Hon. Senator Jas. Hodges, of Toronto, and by Wright, of Vancouver. He confessed that when he went there were men of ideals and most essentially business men. There was a complete absence of the politicians and all the errors and privileges. No one country dominated the congress and good fellowship and desire to serve were everywhere in evidence. He was free to be able to draw the attention of visiting dignitaries to many facts concerning Canada, of which they were in profound ignorance. LABOR REPORT IS ISSUED

U. S. Secretary of Labor Makes Annual Report To Congress

Washington, Dec. 11—Declaring the nation "must find a way to avert these futile, fatal appeals to force in industry," Secretary Davis of the Labor Department recommended to Congress today in his annual report that the conciliation machinery of the Federal government be so expanded as to enable it to handle effectively nationwide industrial disputes.

"No better example of the futility of these appeals to force can be found," said the Secretary, "than the present strike of the bituminous coal miners. After months of suspended industry, the 600,000 striking miners returned to their work without a single change having been effected in wages or conditions of employment. It has been the experience of the Department of Labor that disinterested intelligent practical conciliation is capable of settling many of these disputes.

"It seems to me that before enacting any radical legislation or changing the administrative scheme for dealing with these strikes, we might well consider perfecting and extending the machinery which has proved so effective in the past."

The Secretary's report recommended also a series of legislative enactments on other subjects dealt with by his Department. He asked that the immigration laws be revised to permit examination and selection of prospective immigrants at their ports of departure, and to make more stringent the provisions of the Chinese Exclusion Act; that aliens now held in the United States be enrolled and educated in Americanism; that deficient section be taken through a constitutional amendment or otherwise to rest the employment of children as wage earners; that juvenile offenders be given a status in the federal courts separate from that occupied by adults; and that the Federal Employment Service be enlarged to enable it to keep a finger at all times upon the industrial pulse of the nation.

Mr. Davis reviewed in detail the part taken by the Federal government toward the settlement of the coal and rail strikes but expressed an opinion regarding the merits of the two controversies. He did refer, however, to the debated question of the attitude taken by the Association of Railway Executives toward the railroad labor settlement proposal of President Harding when it first was submitted to them.

"After two conferences" said the Secretary in recitals the details of settlement negotiations, "the President submitted a definite plan of settlement. The President then called in the late Mr. Daniel C. DeWitt Cooley, chairman of the Association of Railway Executives, who, I understand, agreed to urge acceptance of the proposals submitted. It does not appear, however, that when the plan was presented to the Association of Railway Executives in New York, it was rejected."

Continuing his discussion of strikes which involved the interest of the general public on a large scale, Secretary Davis said that "all thinkers have recognized for some years that there must take an oath of office in public service give up their right to strike."

"However, there is a belief in the twilight zone between public employment and private industry, generally referred to as public utility or quasi-public service," the Secretary continued. "It is in this classification that the railroads, the coal mines, and other similar industries fall. The President has well said that every man has a right to work as well as the right not to work in any given industry. The right not to work in industry is under conditions which the individual considers limitation is set upon this freedom of action."

In connection with his proposal for enrolment of aliens, Secretary Davis said:

"To put across such a program there must be a method—a systematic and automatic means of bringing the alien in contact with the Government in a friendly spirit of co-operation. The alien should be acquainted with the objects of the government as to his individual welfare; the government must know the alien.

"I should strongly oppose any enrollment if it were to be conducted as a system of espionage. It is however, true that such an enrollment for educational direction would automatically bring to the notice of the government those who actively resent organized government or are disposed to treat lightly institutions of law and order."

Along with his recommendation for a selective immigration law, enabling American inspectors to examine aliens and physically all immigrants before they sail for the United States, Mr. Davis asked for extensive enlargement in the immigration machinery in this country. In many ways, the Secretary said, the present facilities for regulating immigration are inadequate. The Ellis Island station at New York, he said, usually has at least 50 per cent more than it is equipped to handle, while the station at Boston is "woefully inadequate" and that at Seattle is awkardly located and should be replaced by a government owned building. The station on Angel Island in San Francisco Bay he pronounced "wholly unsuited for the purpose for which it was built," recommending that proper steps be taken for the erection of a suitable immigrant station in the city of San Francisco with a view of abandoning the station at Angel Island."

The Chinese Exclusion Act, the Labor Secretary said, had "greatly failed" to accomplish the purpose sought. "Some of the provisions of the statute, he said, were unenforceable and their retention to exempted classes of immigrants, while those aimed at Chinese laborers were circumvented with comparative ease.

"It seems to me," he continued, "that the present situation with reference to Oriental labor under our law is simply disgraceful. The pressure for entry in the United States is tremendous and apparently well financed. The schemes for circumventing the law are most astute and clever and in numbers are beyond belief. The subject is worthy of the most careful consideration and a full, thorough and comprehensive revision of the law by Congress."

Discussing the child labor situation, Secretary Davis said a complete survey would indicate that 1,500,000 children are "victims of premature toil in mines, mills, factories, fields and homes."

"There are those," he said, "who advocate uniform child-labor laws by the States. On the other hand, there are those who advocate the adoption of an amendment to the Federal Constitution giving Congress exclusive power to deal with the subject. Regardless of which method may be adopted, it is urgent that some method be adopted which will forever blot from the escutcheon of the nation the black spot of child labor, which still exists in some form in some places."

In connection with the proposal for strengthening the federal employment service, the Secretary said:

"There are two problems to meet —to prevent a recurrence of the employment depression which threw between five and six million men into idleness, and to reduce the number of our workingmen who are daily without means of livelihood."

"We have a powerful agency in erecting both these problems in the United States Employment Service, which, fully organized and equipped, would have its finger at all times on the pulse of the overlook them."

TRENTON ITEMS

Latest Reports From This Busy Town

The Trenton Rotary Club held their weekly luncheon to-day, when Rev. Young and Mayor Bolton were again their guests. A goodly attendance is still retained in spite of the fact that severe members are absent. Invited on the splendid menu, which included on the splendid menu, which our good host, Rotarian "Bill" Thacker always favors us, was a goodly portion of venison on the last of the hunt. Rev. Young paid some tribute to the Mayor and Council for the improvements which have been brought about in Trenton during the present year. In his could express a very promising future for Trenton. In five years we should be a City. What's Not To Believe? in a few well chosen words, told the Trenton Rotarians something we knew nothing about and on a subject we know nothing about, the greatest mystery the world has ever known, this subject of Women.

"The women of the Victorian Age," our grandmothers, they were genuine "ye women of to-day, our wives, they have come into "their own" and part of "our own," namely the political sphere in fact every other sphere that is part of man's. But today our daughters and the younger generation, the age of flappers, they have forgotten more ideas than dad ever knew, and furthermore we believe them.

Arrangements are being completed for the Rotary dance, Thursday evening December 14th. We are informed on who wives will have something to talk about afterwards.

President "Bill" House and Rotarian Herbert Wilson and Jack MacNabb are attending the gathering in Toronto to-day, in honor of Rotarian Clarence Mackay, of the International President, Ray Havens. It is regretable that these gentlemen could not attend, but owing to the illness of the season, many find it impossible to go.

Gladstone Campbell who is attending Queen's University had to forego his studies a few days previous to the Christmas holidays owing to ill health. He arrived home today accompanied by his mother, Mrs. W. A. Bleecker. About three years ago, a similar attack prevailed which necessitated the loss of a Sharp's eye, we associate hope for an early improvement and that Gladstone will be able to resume his studies after the Christmas holidays.

Mr. C. V. Statia, who is attending the School of Pharmacy, Toronto, will spend his Christmas holidays in Trenton, accompanied by Mrs. Statia and family. Mr. Statia formerly with Simmon's Drug Store, Will assist Mr. Simmons during the vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Day, who have resided for the past few years near the Murray Canal have taken up their permanent residence with their daughter, Mrs. C. D. Wilson, Picton, Ont.

Satan's Empire Falling

Millions Now Living Will Never Die

Mr. J. H. Perrin, travelling representative of the International Bible Students Association delivered a lecture in the Regent Theatre to an attentive and interested audience last Sunday evening. He said in fact

All dominion rightfully belongs to Jehovah. He created man perfect and gave him dominion over the earth. He placed him in a beautiful home in Eden, and told him all the trees of the garden then mayest freely eat but of the tree of Knowledge, of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it. for in the day then eatest thereof then shalt surely die.

Lucifer, one of God's holy angels was appointed caretaker of the perfect pair in Eden. Ambition entered his heart and he desired an empire of his own, and said "I will be like the Most High." Isa. 14: 14. I will have an empire of my own. This wicked ambition led him to cause the down fall of our first parents by telling them the first lie, "Ye shall not surely die," for Adam's disobedience in eating of the forbidden fruit. The death penalty was enforced. God drove him from Eden, and there, Satan's Empire began. We see all the nations of the world to-day controlled by Satan's spirit ambition, selfishness, no matter who suffers.

The speaker showed through chronology that Satan's lease of power ran out in 1914, that since that time our Lord Jesus Christ, the rightful King of earth now present (because by His death and resurrection, he provided the ransom price for the perfect man Adam and his race) began to oust Satan, preparatory to the establishment of his Kingdom of righteousness.

He showed from the scriptures what God has been doing during this age. He has been calling out the Church of the first house whose names are written in Heaven, (the only church that God recognizes) who will become the bride of Christ and together these will compose the "seed of Abraham" which Messiah's Kingdom—through whom "all the families of the earth will be blessed."

Then when the Kingdom is fully established the second fact of the subject will be fulfilled, "Millions Now Living Will Never Die," for Satan's empire of sin, suffering and death will be completely done away. The earth restored lifted and the glorious message will go forth, that the millions then living on earth, if they are obedient to the new King will never die, but go up the "highway of holiness" to perfection, then the dead too will be awakened out of the sleep of death and have the privilege of being restored to perfect life. The people who have been coming to a full knowledge of the truth will be destroyed root and branch, and all things in Heaven and earth will be found praising God, Eph. 1:10. Surely I come Quickly—Even so, come Lord.

LEAFS COMMENCE IN APRIL

Adopted 168 Game Schedule for Next Season From April 18th to Sept. 23rd

New York, Dec. 12.—Adoption of a 168-game schedule for 1923, with the season opening April 18 and closing September 23, constituted the chief business transacted today at the opening of the International League's annual meeting. It was understood this schedule was adopted after clubs in the southern half of the circuit had advocated shortening the season to 154 games. The past season was on a 168-game basis.

The club owners appointed a schedule committee, composed of John Conway Toole, President of the League; G. L. Robertson, President of the Buffalo Club, and Jack Dunn, President-manager of the Baltimore Club. This committee will meet in February to frame schedule details.

Opening games, with the four northern clubs playing in rival territory, were fixed as follows: Buffalo at Reading, Rochester at Newark, Toronto at Jersey City, and Syracuse at Baltimore. This schedule will be reversed on the first swing around the other part of the circuit.

A threatened attempt by certain club owners to force the head of Jack Dunn, Baltimore owner, in connection with his agreement, made last June, to dispose of three of the Orioles' players who had helped the club make a runaway race of the pennant contest for several seasons, failed to materialize at today's meeting, according to President Toole. Mr. Toole added that he considered it improbable that any such attempt would be made when the magnates convene again at 11 a.m. tomorrow for their final session.

Adoption of the laws sponsored by Walter E. Hapgood, park, owner of the Rochester Club, also more was said to have been aimed at drawing from Dunn a definite explanation of his intentions. It was pointed out, however, that the Baltimore owner already has complied with part of his agreement by disposing of Jack Bentley, star pitcher and first baseman, to the New York Giants, and that he would have until the opening of the 1923 season to sell or exchange other stars, including pitcher Joe Boley, shortstop, and Max Bishop, second baseman, and Jack Ogden or "Lefty" Grove, pitchers. He has received a number of offers for one or more of these players from both American and National League clubs.

BAD WEATHER FOR ICE-MAKING

Hockey Players and Prospects Were Unable to Hold First Workout Owing to Mild Weather

This is poor weather for ice-making, for today, Jack Frost rains supreme again, and instead of December weather, we are being given a variety of Autumn again. If the probabilities are to be believed, however, we will very soon have much colder weather. The radio service of The Intelligencer on Monday picked up the cold weather warning from the Canadian west, where the thermometer is hovering about 28 below zero, and the rider attached was rain Tuesday, but much colder Tuesday evening.

Jack Marks expected to have his hockey squads out on the ice last night for the first time this season, but the mild weather prevented this, and the boys had a work out on the gym. floor at the "Y" instead.

ST. ANDREW'S GIVE U. T. S. SOME ARGUMENT

University of Toronto III. defeated St. Andrew's College 6 to 3 in their S. P.A. game last night, but it was by walk-over for Connie Smythe's husky and more experienced youngsters. There was no hugging on the ice for them. They had to travel at top speed the entire route to win the game and the right to enter the semi-final round. They play the winner of the St. Mary's-St. Michael's College game, which is scheduled for next week, and the winner of that game will meet either Argonauts or Kitchener.

The Somerville stood out very prominently in the Varsity win. He scored five of his team's six goals, and was the only Blue and White-clad lad who was able to solve the Don Carrick-Ross Paul defence with any degree of success. Hall, at that, was the successful shots were from outside the defence. His first was a high drive from the 20-foot line; another came to the from a low hook from the rail, and one earned in off Don Carrick's arm. His best, however, followed a solo rush down the centre ice, and he got right inside the Scotchmen's defence before he sent the rubber sailing into the twine. Somerville was shooting from all angles, and his shots were generally dead on, while his team-mates who worked just as hard as he did, were generally miles off the mark when they let fire. With "Scaldy" it is doubtful if Varsity would have won.

BIG PLEA IS MADE BY TORONTO FOR C.N.R. OFFICES

Strong representations were made yesterday to Sir Henry Thornton, President of the Canadian National Railways, by a deputation of the Toronto Board of Trade with the object of impressing upon him the desirability of retaining the central administration offices of the National Railways in Toronto.

The superiority of Toronto as the centre of finance, commerce and industry for the Province of Ontario and its advantages in geographical location, volume of business actually done and possibilities of future development were pointed out to Sir Henry by a strong man of the deputation, Mr. D. A. Cameron, President of the Board of Trade.

After Mr. Cameron had presented the claims of Toronto, Sir Henry Thornton thanked the delegation for the useful information given him, but he added that until he had had an opportunity of studying the whole situation he could not give his decision as to the point where the headquarters would be located.

JUST A FEW RIPPLING RIPLETS

Complimentary banquet to W. D. Robb, Vice-President and General Manager of the Grand Trunk Railway System, last night at the Hotel Quinte.

1. Belleville By The Bay

They're the men from Belleville,
Belleville by the Bay!
They plow and sow and reap and mow,
And useful men are they.
And when you come to Belleville,
No matter what the day,
You can tell them all that they stand or fall
For Belleville by the Bay.

REFRAIN—

O Belleville, Belleville by the Bay!
Good old Belleville, Belleville by the Bay!
You can tell them all that they stand or fall
For Belleville by the Bay.

2. The Road That Stands for Service

There are roads we like to travel,
There are roads at which we swear,
There are roads that rattle out our innards
Roads we hate and roads that treat us fair,
But the road that means the best of SERVICE.
Knows no graft or partiality,
Is the road that has its hub at Belleville—
The Grand Trunk, the road for me!

3- What's the Matter With Thornton?

What's the matter with Thornton? He's all right!
Oh, what's the matter with Thornton? He's all right!
He knows his job, I'll say to you.
And we will all of us back him through;
What's the matter with Thornton? He's all right!

4. Come Back to Belleville

Then come back to Belleville, to Belleville, to Belleville,
Come back again where good-cheer had its birth;
Come back to Belleville, to Belleville, to Belleville,
And the shores of old Quinte shall ring with our mirth!

5. Robb's Arrival

In days of yore, to Quinte's shore,
Robb, a young railroader, came
And laid foundations sincere and true,
And then he rose to fame.
He's back to-night, our boast, our pride,
Our friendship none can sever,
We're gathered round the festive board,
And pledge our love forever;

CHORUS—

The Grand Trunk route, the people's way,
The Grand Trunk route forever;
With Robb to bring prosperity,
The Grand Trunk route forever.

6. America

My country! 'tis of thee—
Sweet land of liberty,
Of thee I sing!
Land where my fathers died!
Land of the pilgrims' pride,
From ev'ry mountain side,
Let freedom ring!

7. Look Out For Your Cellar Door!

W. D. Robb has the key of Belleville now,
W. D. Robb has the key of Belleville now,
W. D. Robb has the key of Belleville now,
Look out for your cellar door!

OLD-FASHIONED VIEWS ON "HOW TO ACT"

(A E Drew, in The Challenge, London)

Many years ago, a weekly paper for ladies was published called "Hearth and Home." It was full of good advice on dress, complexion preservers, invisible tonques, how to wear mourning for the great-aunt, where to stay abroad in safety and how to make hashed mutton look like tender mouthfuls. Every week there was a section headed 'Social Snares or Trials in Tact,' and here week after week the readers of the paper were faced with a problem in conduct and asked to contribute solutions. I only remember two of them. In one Mrs. A. makes a first call on Mrs. B., and on being shown and about into the drawing-room, finds her hostess fast asleep upon the sofa. What can Mrs. A. do? In the other, Mrs. A. goes to a dinner-party and she is having her fish dinner, exclaims, 'O dear, I have come without a handkerchief.' Mr. B. who is her partner, immediately says 'O, please allow me to lend you one, I have two.' Mrs. A. accepts gratefully, but on getting home she finds that the handkerchief she finds it full of holes. What can Mrs. A. do? Prizes were given every few months for the most original and correct solutions, but our family soon discovered that invariably the safest answer was 'Mrs. A. can do nothing.' Very occasionally action of some sort was recommended, but far more often an attitude of wise passiveness was good Mrs. A.'s only escape from social suicide.

Very different in spirit is a small book picked up for 2d. a few weeks ago in the market of a provincial town. 'Questions in Etiquette for the Use of All' is its title: published in 1847 for John Burcher, author of the Centripetal Pronounine Dictionary. The book arose from questions asked by the pupils of the authoress at a 'considerable school' where she was engaged to give instruction in propriety of behavior, and she hopes that after a perusal of it no persons will be at a loss how to conduct themselves in all circumstances.

Q.—If in company, a person to whom I owe great deference, accost me, in what position would it be the most genteelly, and at the same time the most respectful, to stand?

Ans.—Hold your body perfectly upright, but not stiff. Turn a little to the right or left, with the face completely towards him, looking a little over one shoulder, the arm nearest the addist, the upper hand open, or the hands clasped and hanging down in front; one foot advanced a little. If the person who speaks is giving directions incline the body and head gracefully forward. Should the individual present say anything, keep the body bent until you have received it, and when you leave him, slide smoothly away, not making at the same time.

How, one wonders, did the pupils at the considerable school go through the drill necessary to perfect themselves in these evolutions? Perhaps the instructress in decorum impersonated the parts in turn. One day she would be a bishop waiting in the street, while rows of elegantly bonded bodies and serious countenances saluted her, and a few intimates condescended with kissing their hands. At another day she would be a friend, greeted without ceremony at the church door. Pinch-nosed, with arms not dangling, and scarf flowing with perfect propriety, she would 'move towards' a relation, or person sitting in a window, or she would 'personify an elder person whose seat had been taken, or at a superior character being passed on the stairs, while her young charges demeaned themselves duly before her and sold and sank and paniced their tone to the ground.

WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

A Trying Period Through Which Every Woman Must Pass

Practical Suggestions Given by the Women Whose Letters Follow

Detroit, Michigan—"During the Change of Life, I had a bit of stomach trouble, and was bothered a great deal with hot flashes. Sometimes I was not able to do my work at the store, which is about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in your little books and took it with very good results. I keep house and am able now to do all my own work. I recommend your medicine and am willing for you to publish my testimonial." Mrs. J. S. LAWRENCE, 2053 Hamilton Avenue, Detroit, Mich.

Queer Feelings at Middle Age

Sheboygan, Wisconsin—"I was run down, tired and nervous. I could not even do my own housework, could not sleep at night and all kinds of queer thoughts would come to me. Finally, I gave up going to the doctor and a friend told me of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. After the first bottle I could sleep better and I have kept on improving ever since." Mrs. B. LASSEN, 1539 N. 3rd St., Sheboygan, Wisconsin.

Neighington, Ontario—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable compound at the Change of Life for troubles women often have at that time. I had not been well for a year and was not really able to do my housework. A friend who had taken the Vegetable Compound herself recommended it to me, and I highly recommend it to all women with troubles like mine." Mrs. DANIEL J. TRACEY, Knightington, Ontario.

Let the Compound Help You

The critical time of a woman's life usually comes between the years of 45 and 50, and is often beset with annoying symptoms such as nervousness, irritability, melancholia. Heat flashes or waves of heat appear to pass over the body, cause the face to be very red and often bring on headache, dizziness and a sense of suffocation.

Should any annoying symptom which comes at this time as inability to even do any housework, could not sleep at night and all kinds of queer thoughts would come to me. Finally, I gave up going to the doctor and a friend told me of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. After the first bottle I could sleep better and I have kept on improving ever since." Mrs. B. LASSEN, 1539 N. 3rd St., Sheboygan, Wisconsin.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is especially adapted to help women at this time. It carries a peculiar influence to tone and strengthen the system, and assists nature in the long years and months covering the period. Let it help carry you through this time of life. It is a splendid medicine for the middle-aged woman. It is prepared from medicinal roots and herbs and contains no harmful drugs or narcotics.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Private Text-Book upon "Ailments Peculiar to Women" will be sent you free upon request. Write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Massachusetts. This book contains valuable information.

the rush of our population to the cities. Broadly speaking, the G.T.R. and many hundreds indirectly.

The G.T.R. believes that as time goes on, the more unanimity in this city, and you can quite understand that Grand Trunk interests are important; most of the people realize what this road and its employees mean to Belleville. I am informed that between 50% and 60% of the freight and passenger traffic of Belleville is given to the G.T.R. although there are two very active competitors.

Concluding, I wish to state that we are highly honored in having with us to-night Sir Henry Thornton, the President of the Canadian National Railways, who at great inconvenience to himself has joined us in doing honour to the client of the evening.

H. W. D. ROBB

There are few more flattering phases of human experiences than occasions such as this. To receive the expression of the friendliness of one's friends kindles emotions that are liked to express in language, but whatever I fail in utterance, I can assure you will be made up in appreciation.

It is so many years ago I lived here with Mrs. Robb and our children that one would almost expect to have been forgotten, but the hearts of the citizens of Belleville are evidently not made of such frigid qualities, for here you have called me at long length to receive your felicitations on the attainment to the position I now hold on the Grand Trunk Railway System. We all know it so well and love it so much that we can still meet together to review its past, and hope for its higher destiny as an instrument of national development and an avenue of the common weal.

Permit me to mention that whatever success I may have achieved that I attribute it all to two factors, viz.

(a) The loyalty and co-operation of my fellow officials and employees, this I shall dwell upon later.

(b) It is the faithful devotion and comforts of my home life. In it all that once someone asked the Ex-Secretary of State, Mr. Choates, that if he were to name the two greatest men who his choice would be, when he answered—"that he would like to be Mrs. Robb's husband because he can imagine no greater happiness than to minister tribute I would like to pay to Mrs. Robb. She has been a most faithful companion to me all these years. She was to me the "Belle of the Ball Town". There has always been a reluctance to take in the name of your beautiful City, "Belle-ville".

I well remember how I came to Belleville so many years ago. I was just a mere lad, and as they generally say, "Just married". It is accordingly worthwhile to be back once again among old friends of Belleville, Napanee or other the real basis of friendship is what one puts in it. Sentiment feeds upon this wonderful past. This is perhaps what is meant in the old saying, "Nothing new friends forget not the old."

My duties here were those of a locomotive foreman. The railroad system in those years was a good active foreman's manifold duties, which to-day are not upon the schedule of such a capacity. For in those days one of my duties included: the car motive power, the car dept., between Kingston and Cobourg, the repairs of work on the line between Cobourg and Bowmanville, we had to make all of our own work men, including switches and frogs; attend to the water system; and in addition to all of this I had to examine the engineers and firemen as to the transportation rules and attend all railroad investigations. So when one day's work was done, I felt that I was well agree with me it was a full day's work. But on the other hand it gave one an extensive railroad experience. Until to-day I honestly feel that my thirteen years as foreman, have given me the most valuable knowledge of railroad work.

I always remember one event that occurred on Bridge Street, just outside the Quinine. An engine got off the track; I came up with my wrecking crew, perhaps covering a little authority, for I was conscious of the fact that what I missed in experience and knowledge I could add on by authority and orders. Naturally all crowd gathered around to watch the men at their labors. The gazing crowd, rather, in a busy way, I overheard one in the crowd saying to the other, "Who is that white-faced kid that has so much authority around here?"

A man in those days had to learn much from public opinion. I cannot let this opportunity pass without giving a few words of praise of the young men who are here tonight, a few words that enable all to achieve success, especially in railroad life. Someone once asked Chauncey Depew, "Sir, can you give me the secret of success in life?" Mr. Depew looked at the young aspirant rather ironically and answered, "My boy, success has no secret. It's just plain dig! dig! dig!" So the two kept that open, the secret vault of true success was.

1.—Work—Just as the young student of to-day, when he enters upon his Collegiate Institute or University course soon realizes that education has no royal road to easy going, so must the young railroad aspirant of to-day fully realize that there are no frontpassports or privileged recommendation to his railroad destiny. All success on the railroad career depends upon work—hard work. Work is exactly what Mr. Edison meant when he said, "That genius consists of two parts, 50% perspiration and 50% inspiration". Someone defines genius as being "Infinite pain to do work" but I can assure you your period of to-day it is more than that, "It is infinite work, without pain". And as Longfellow so well put it:

"The heights by great men gained and kept,
Were attained by sudden flight;
But they, while their companions slept,
Were toiling upward in the night."

There will be many hindrances that will often keep you upon your butt and. There are essential attributes of youthful vigor and ambition. For I know, and speaking advisedly from all of these oppressions can be conquered. But young men, the most fragrant flower in the garden of your home will be the rose of achievement whose leaves shall be woven out of your toil and tears. Endeavor as the age sometime induces the youth to climb to the top of the mountain in two minutes. I rather personally prefer to see the mountain on top of the youth. For when he is digging himself out from under his oppressions, he at the same time is acquiring the strength and qualities that will be transformed into foundations of protection that will be so necessary when he gets too old to fight mountains. For what are these obstacles but stepping-stones to "obstacles castles". Work, and work hard is the first requisite.

Another feature that should be considered seriously by the Railroad young man is that of to-day is:

Character—Perhaps nothing explains my mind better than this expression made by the noble "Be a manly Man." I have always told my men when given a promotion or new responsibilities—"whatever your abilities may be, remember you can make up a considerable amount of your deficiencies by excellencies of a personal character." There is no vocation today that recognizes character of this; clean body, pure mind and honest purposes as the railroad ideal, including switches and frogs; attend to the water system; and in addition to all of this I had to examine the engineers and firemen as to the transportation rules and attend all railroad investigations. So when one day's work was done, I felt that I was well agree with me it was a full day's work. But on the other hand it gave one an extensive railroad experience. CHAS. HANNA
Mayor of Belleville, Chairman and Toastmaster at the Robb Banquet last night.

And it is most fitting for me just now, to tell you how grateful I am for the loyalty and co-operation of friends, fellow officials and employees for whatever success I may have achieved, it has been possible, due to this wonderful and unselfish co-operation of my co-workers and associates. There is no place whatsoever in the railroad vanity and selfknowledge it. However there is a very important phase I would like to have you get the good and congenial friends of Belleville, and that is your future attitude. "You have been most loyal in the past. I have always found in this city, the most cordial and co-operative relation between the Citizens of Belleville, and the G. T. R. But being such good friends in the past gives me a right of friendship to appeal for the future. For now more than ever we want your continued cooperation. Our present duties are many, responsibilities are large and our obligations are serious. For the Railroad is now "Yours." It is your investment. And the railroad industry of to-day offers a pathway of patriotic endeavour unequalled in any industrial phase of our National life. For to transform deficits into dividends for Government owners is always a by-do something highly desirable for the people of this Dominion. Gentlemen! This can be done but on the basis of full and honest measure of our patriotic manhood in fulfilling the duty which confronts us. Success of the railroad officers and employees, alone! This is your Railroad. You must increase your loyalty and by intensive encourage and support your own investment.

? and Mrs. Robb, too, want once more to thank you for this beautiful banquet and the hearty and kindly greeting which you have given the Robb audience with which you have listened to my remarks.—As I said earlier, Belleville and Belleville people will here will ever have a warm place in our hearts. What we think of Belleville is better revealed in the poem composed by our son Wallace when looking at a photograph of Belleville taken from an aeroplane.

BELLEVILLE THE BEAUTIFUL.
Belleville the beautiful, -picture of shadows;
Old are the trees and by sundimpled ways;
Here are disordered thy secrets as shadows;
Here in a dream are the longaway days.

Belleville the Beautiful, city of maples,
Crimson and gold sunny Autumn has made;
Over the tree tops thy steeples reveal thee,
Keys of the past all around in the shade.

Belleville the Beautiful; Where are thy children?
This is their home though they wander afar.
Over the Quinte the town clock calling,
Calling them back from where to every they are.

BUT

At this point Mr. Robb took the opportunity of introducing Sir Henry Thornton to the guests and after giving the allegiance of the men and officials of the Grand Trunk Railway. Mr. Robb wanted to make the Grand Trunk Railway, the Canadian Branch of success of the Canadian National Railways, and then the reward for their enthusiasm would follow assists.

Mr. C. M. Reid,

Mr. Reid was next to the pleasure it gave him to be privileged to join in the tribute that Belleville was paying to-night to the Canadian townsman Mr. Robb. In honoring him we were doing honor to ourselves and Mr. Robb was only too glad to honor to himself fitt to our city. He mentioned having lived as neighbor to Mr. and Mrs. Robb for several years and had found them the very nicest kind of neighbors. Belleville to-day welcomes Mr. and Mrs. Robb and their daughter back to their old home town with open arms.

In discussing the Railroad in the Canadian National Railways Mr. Reid made a short but pithy address pointing out the progress in the single system of railways in the world, with its more than 22,000 miles of railroads, which is, every important city and seaport in the Dominion. He also referred to the great telegraph and cable service reaching some 75,000 points in Canada, the United States and Mexico, under the control of their chain of modern hotels and their fleet of steamships on the Great Lakes and along the Pacific Coast. The great system also owns the Canadian National Express Co., and he pointed out that through our present system of public ownership all this belong to us. The President and officers of this great system were not servants and it behooved the people of this Dominion to be loyal to our own lines. This great organization is the combination of what was formerly six different companies namely the Canadian Northern, Grand Trunk Pacific, Grand Trunk Railway systems, Intercolonial, Prince Edward Island Railway and the Transcontinental railway which were carrying the products of our forests, ofisheries, our mines, our Prairie Lands and Manufacturing industries and distributing them not only to our own people but to the people from other lands. They were bringing from every country under the sun the Divine Gifts that Providence has bestowed upon us, we but to every village and hamlet in this Great Dominion.

Let us, said the speaker, mid Mr. Reid for those who are responsible for the management of this great Canadian asset, and for those who control it, co-operate with them in making it the success it deserves to be.

SIR HENRY THORNTON

Sir Henry received an ovation. Sir Henry arranged to be present as a guest at last evening's banquet, but the Canadian Pacific prevented him a letter declining with the advisability of making Belleville his headquarters as the executive offices of the Canadian National Lines. Sir Henry stated that the letter was expressed the opinion that no such claim as that was made for the local distillery. After reading over the names of the directors of the Grand Trunk here or had lived here, he thought God must have been unkind to him to decree that he should be born elsewhere.

He expressed pleasure at mixing with men who were on the firing line of railroading. He thanked Mr. Reid for his inspiring remarks and for his wonderful example. Belleville was to be congratulated to have him for a friend.

The Grand Trunk was the great carrying factor in the national lines and the Dominion could not be enhanced by the esprit-de-corps shown last night.

Before Sir Henry on the night's illuminiferous had the locomotive was a model electric one. Sir Henry said it was all too true, and he admitted in the future. The banquet was a source of pleasure to Sir Henry as he was to be remembered by those who saw him for a friend.

E. GUSS PORTER, K.C., M.P., Who proposed the toast to the Department of Railways and Canals at the Robb Banquet last night.

Dr. C. Y. Ford and Mr. J. E. Baker

Dr. Ford claimed he was a Canadian, but as the toast was to the American guests he could reply with an easy conscience. He was a native of Kingston. He drew the audience attention to the claims of Kingston as a good headquarters for the National Railways. They were central there could house and entertain all who came to molest him.

Mr. Baker was delighted to be present at the function and felt the quality of a good Canadian welcome and warm hospitality. He had been given a very material interest in the Grand Trunk, and thought highly of the G.T.R. service was second to none and the engineers knew how to stop and start slowly. They could teach the world something in that line.

This meant capable engineers and trustworthy co-operation, and loyalty were a great team and the G. T. R. have them both. It just had to go ahead in the future.

Lt.-Col. E. D. O'Flynn

The Grand Trunk was the first railroads line in Canada, and Belleville has been the most important divisional point on the road, since its inception. The head department of the Grand Trunk had its headquarters in Belleville for many years. Belleville was the only point that department. Bell and W. H. Bunger, were prominent officials of the Grand Trunk and most important divisional point on the line and a very large percentage of the citizens were employed by the road. It helped Belleville to fulfil itself as the Grand Trunk, unlike industrial organizations carried on in its midst and in bad. Belleville laymen industried by the Grand Trunk which had a habit of promoting their "efficiency" over or "thoroughbred" horses.

All Belleville was prepared to see Mr. Robb's grievance. He himself knew that he would advance. He had "looked horse" with Mr. Joy, Mr. Walker, Mr. Yates and knew that they had a fighting spirit. Thus he knew the "old man" had it in him to go places.

The Col. was glad Mr. Thornton was the guest. He was delighted at the kindly feeling that existed between the officials of the road and the citizens. The G. T. R. officials were real Belleville citizens, they were in the council and on the school boards, and were a part of the community.

Mr. W. C. Chisholm, K.C.

Mr. Chisholm owing to the lateness of the hour did not attempt a long reply. He remained about forty years, and of the old Belleville boys in the official circle of the Grand Trunk. All these officials appreciated the honor to Mr. Robb. Mr. Robb was a strict but a good master, and he was a very wonderful spirit. He got the work done, and he was wonderful in fact that men kept jobs there at all times that they could gain advancement. He pledged the loyalty of the officers in what he termed as Thornton's Great Adventure. Everybody will help as the railway is essential to Canada.

The Rev. Geo. Adam

If you want a clergyman to give a short speech or a brief lecture ask him to speak at 11.30 midnight as you have done on this occasion, and your desire will be granted, said Mr. Adam, in several welfare representatives of the Grand Trunk. He was glad to see railway officials dined and not railway officials fed. Learn to know railway officials and railway men. They are human, and they are nice fellows. He noted that a C.P.R. man (Sandy Burrows) lead in the singing. That was all that the C.P.R. would lend a hand to. The rivalry between the two lines, and there was room for both of them in Canada. He did not like the people of Canada to forget that the Canadian Nationals sold "Transportation."

For the full blooded child of the country, the National Railways, preference to the adopted children. Preference to the children welcoming the railway officials was a grand sight. If children were important to the future existence of our railways, the future would take of itself. The children of Canada were the country's future and these were the healthiest looking children in the world as was observed by His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales. European children are not so healthy looking. If children recognize the import of the Canadian National Railways a strong blow for success will have been struck.

MR. J. DAN MACLAUGHLAN.

Mr. McMillan thanked the citizens for the honor and tributes they had paid to Mr. Robb and to the Grand Trunk. Now as Mr. Robb deserved it, because Mr. Robb put Belleville on the map. Mr. Robb was the man who made of Belleville the banner division and the fruits of his early work are still to be seen. Today he as successfully trying to carry on in Mr. Robb's footsteps, and to follow his example. He pledged the loyalty of the Grand Trunk men in Belleville.

AULD LANG SYNE.

The hour was late but the company sang Auld Lang Syne, which was followed by the National Anthem. Thus terminated one of the memorable days in the history of Belleville, for a page had truly been written in Canadian Railway History.

E. GUSS PORTER, K. C., M.P.

Mr. Porter proposed the toast to the Department of Railways and Canals. He was delighted to pay his respects to his old fellow citizen, Mr. Robb. Mr. Robb and his family who had laid the foundation for his future success. Belleville always had confidence in Mr. Robb and that his honors would continue efforts have merited all his success.

Referring to Major Graham in the reply he responded to the toast, Mr. Porter stated that he knew him well and that he was a man of high ideals and character. His war record was a monument to his ability, and he earned arms and was under real fire till the armistice was signed.

Mr. Porter discussed the relationship of the Department of Railways and Canals to the Executive of the National Railways as it had existed. He thought that the railways and the department should share the blame for the present financial situation at the same time both have been of great benefit in developing the country. But the railways all came into existence through the act of parliament. Sometimes promotors sought a charter from the basest of motives and to-day we see the result of granting charters to such men. If we nourish our railways and carry them through the present period with all possible speed, we will have a system successful by any other country in the world.

Mr. Porter thought it fit advisedly place the railway problem on the shoulders of either political party. It was a time, not to place responsibility for past mistakes, but a time to get together. We could not abandon our railways, for all the public purposes then to put them on their feet. We must do away with the passing of the Railway Commission. The relations of the railways and railway promoters to be done, parliament, to grant charters for railways to be built, as requested them. Those days are gone, we are facing better days now. Politicians keep out of the hands, gentlemen.

MAJOR GRAHAM A. BELL

Major Bell stated he was a great believer, in co-ordination. Mr. Robb's Scotch father also cherished such news. He came to Canada from Scotland in 1856 and determined to throw in his lot with the Grand Trunk. When the line was first opened in 1857 from Montreal to Toronto and Stratford a grand banquet was held in the Point St. Charles shops in Montreal. Twenty four hundred guests were present, and over a mile of table cloth was spread before the guests. Part of the programme that was the work of one distinguished guest fourteen months later, when he became entered the employ of the Grand Trunk as an apprentice in 1871 when he was fourteen years of age. Mr. Robb's father, Mr. Robb's career and stated that he was the first Canadian to hold the high office of the chief executive of the Grand Trunk and that was the first man to rise to that position from the ranks and who has been employed continuously with the Grand Trunk.

FIRST OFFICIAL APPEARANCE

splendid reception accorded them by the musical children at the Robb Parade passed, Front street was crowded with townspeople. The parade proceeded to the armouries where Mr. Robb was presented with a golden key, symbolic of the freedom of the City of Belleville by Mayor Hanna made the presentation.

In reply to Mayor Hanna's, presentation speech, Mr. Robb replied as follows:

Your Worship:—

Words fail me to express to you, Sir, and to the kind people of Belleville, the joy and gratitude that now fills my heart to the very almost overflowing.

There are certain experiences in one's life, when audible expressions are strangled in the throat. These impressions when utterances fade, and when silence is bliss. This to me, Sir, is one of those moments of silence.

Honour and privilege go hand in hand. You have done me the honour of recorded me the privilege of your worthy city. I am sensible to the value of both. For this modern dispensation of an ancient custom in our British history touches my imagination, awakens my emotion and arouses my devotion to this dear city.

That I have been deemed worthy to have my name inscribed upon the honoured roll of this city's finest, quickens within me a sense of grave responsibilities, because:

Firstly—I am a child of this British history, this municipal ceremony of presenting the freedom of a city was conferred only upon Princes and citor distinguished individuals.

Now as to the extent of such wistakes appreciation of my qualities and your present opinion of my worthiness I am not sure of the second honour. I shall not argue upon an occasion like this, but as they say in the old land, "I can say my sin less beef."

Secondly—This custom carried certain privileges when first inaugurated in the Middle Ages, one of the rarer to defile nor abuse. I learn that it meant:

(a) Immunity from county jurisdiction.

(b) The privilege of corporate existence.

(c) And self-government held under a charter from the Crown. The privilege of trade.

Therefore, Your Worship, I humbly accept this key as a symbol of your respect and confidence in me and I pray that my best endeavours ill be turned to such interests and ideals as will in some way make you shamed of the honours you have now conferred upon me. As Pope so well put it in "Essay on Man":—

"Honour and shame from no condition rise.
Act well your part, there all the honour lies."

FRANCE MUST ACT ALONE

Paris, Dec. 12.—Premier Poincare's declaration will appear to his French Cabinet on the London Conference and will then present the situation to the Chamber of Deputies. The feeling in official circles is that the conference was a distinct disappointment and that Britain's opposition to coercive measures against Germany means that France must act alone.

BOY EMPEROR AND BRIDE HOPE TO MAKE WORLD TOUR

Peking, Dec. 12.—The picturesque and complicated ceremonies over Hsuan Tung, the 17-year-old emperor of China, and his bride, the princess Wan Chig Si, two years his junior, this morning capped the days before their wedding night to-day when they, although an emperor only in name since the revolution which made China a republic and caused him to dedicate the Imperial throne, Hsuan Tung has been forced to observe the strictest ritual and to "woo" his wife within the Forbidden City, outside Peking, a moated enclosed township of less than half a square mile.

The young emperor has grown weary of confinement. Only two months ago he was allowed to leave the Forbidden City, on which occasion he in pursuance of scientific knowledge of social service. He is of the modern type, and in spite of his disadvantages has acquired many things unknown outside world from his tutors, one of whom are English. Not long ago he had his eyes removed, they will tell, saw from the Rancho tradition dimensionally, he every European clothes and several times he has played with his court to buy him an auto mobile.

There are rumors that the young emperor sometimes evades his alien guardians and revolves outside the Forbidden City and glimpses Peking from a closed car owned by a sympathetic friend. It is known the Rickan is becoming "fed up" with the present routine and that he means to do something of the sort, especially the British tales, Canada and the United States, of which he has read so much.

It is by monarch apparently has no desire to return to power in China. He was only seven years old at the time of the famous old boy Empress Lung Yu, he was placed on the throne. He had no opportunity of testing power. The revolution came a few years later and he was obliged to resign the government before he scarcely knew what the action meant. He retains the throne and title with the consent of the Chinese government. He still holds the respect of the Chinese people and the terms of the abdication are such that a fairly pleasant future is before him if he is able to control his own activities.

The trouble is that the young emperor has so many retainers and courtiers that his attempts to break away from tradition are thwarted continually. Even his design to take the world may be interfered with because the ers' influential courtiers with in the Forbidden City who realize that with the emperor journeying in foreign lands they must join the ranks of the unemployed. Hundreds of people exist a livelihood within the Forbidden City, hemmed in by the quaint ancient, and they are on the payroll because the emperor feeds them. Naturally they do not favor progressive ideas for the emperor and frown upon incipient wanderlust.

Under the terms of abdication Hsuanty is granted $4,000,000 annually with which he is expected to maintain the palace and his hodgepodge and as the republican government has defaulted in a number of payments recently the idea of abandoning the pomp and grandeur of an emperor has gained strength. If it were not for his private income the emperor would probably be forced to eliminate many of the luxuries which his advisers consider it necessary to order to maintain the dignity of the imperial station.

The young empress too is eager to travel. She has been instructed in the English language by a young Philadelphia woman and speaks English fluently. Now that the imperial household contains two ardent advocates of the plan to see something of the world, it is believed that all job holders of the forbidden city will have more to worry about than ever before.

London, Dec. 12.—The words "Kenya and Uganda" will appear, after Dec. 15 first time take the place of the inscription "East Africa and Uganda Protectorates" upon the postage stamps of the Colony, issued on November 1. There are eighteen stamps in the new series, ranging in values from one cent to £25, according to the latest currency standard. The "cents" value bear King George's head in a medallion, flanked on the right by palm branches, and on the other a banana plant in bearing. All the other stamps bear the Royal Portrait surrounded by tropical vegetation.

This is the first change in the inscription on the stamps of British East Africa since Oct. 1890, when Europe were first introduced with the badge and title of the Imperial British East African Company. On the transfer of the territory to Imperial administration these stamps were overprinted "British East Africa" and subsequently in May, 1896, definite stamps with Queen Victoria's head, inscribed "British East Africa Protectorate" were brought into use. Following the amalgamation of the postal service with that of Uganda a combined issue of postage stamps bearing the head of the two Protectorates was inaugurated in July, 1903, which, except for the substitution of the head of King George V. for that of the late King Edward VII., has remained current down to the present day.

The PRESERVATION OF BUILDING TIMBERS BY TREATMENT

Some Suggestions That Will Enable Better and Longer Service to be Obtained From Timber Exposed to the Soil

Fence posts, barn sills, house frames and other timbers placed without protrusive treatment in contact with the soil give only a few years of service and the cost of replacing such timbers is incurred every year. Material is harder to obtain and labour is more expensive, in order that the longest possible service may be obtained from woods used for such purposes the Forest Products Laboratories of Canada, Forestry Branch, Department of the Interior, have for several years investigated such preservative methods as could be practised by the farmer and builder. Treatment of timber in open tanks, that is to say, without pressure, is the only feasible plan for man who is not in the wood-preserving business. A creosote oil suitable for such a process was formerly so expensive as to put the preservation of timbers appear a questionable economy, but owing to representations made by the Laboratories to the manufacturers of creosote oil in Canada it is now possible to get an oil of the correct specifications at a very reasonable price. The preservation of farm and other timbers is therefore no longer a matter of enterprise but of ordinary business sense. Particulars as to the oil or process may be had from the Forest Products Laboratories of Canada.

CALLED BY DEATH

MRS. S. S. LAZIER.

Mrs. S. S. Lazier, wife of Colonel S. S. Lazier, passed away at the family residence, Victoria Ave., at an early hour this morning. Mrs. Lazier was in her 82nd. year, having lived in Belleville practically all her life. For many years Mrs. Lazier has been active in the Social and Community life of the City. Her work as President of the Women's Red Cross and Patriotic Association during the War will be long remembered by the ladies of the City who were associated with her in that loving service. She has been President of the Ladies' Bowling Club continuously since the formation of her active interest being manifested to the very end of the present season. Colonel and Mrs. Lazier were married in August, 1865, and during nearly sixty years of their married life, have been continuously resident in Belleville, except for absences necessitated for health or for pleasure in 1886, Mrs. Lazier was presented at Court at a Drawing Room, held by Queen Victoria at Buckingham Palace. This constituted an interesting event in the strict and formal days of th Victorian era.

Mrs. Lazier was born at Trenton on September 20, 1841, being the daughter of William and Jane Holmes. Her father was one of the pioneer lumbermen in this part of Canada. Her brother, Alexander Robertson was a member of the local and Dominion houses of Parliament for many years, representing West Hastings.

Funeral from the family residence Victoria Ave., Thursday at 2.30 p.m.

London, Dec. 12.—Five huge radio plants are to be established in China to provide direct communication with Europe, it is stated on the president of the Federal Telegraph Company, has arrived here with a party of American engineers to build the first of the stations. There are to be ten stations at Shanghai and one each at Harbin, Canton and Peking. Mr. Schwerin says that Shanghai will soon have the largest and most powerful wireless station in the world. U.F.O. ANNUAL MEETING IN TORONTO

J. J. Morrison Advises of Changes in Order that the Business end of the Association May Exist

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Dec. 12.—The ninth annual meeting of the shareholders of the United Farmers' Co-operative Company opened here today. Mr. J. J. Morrison, Secretary-Treasurer, told the shareholders that changes in the system of operation appeared advisable in the interests of greater efficiency. Farmers must go on with the co-operative movement, he declared, otherwise a means of release from the condition of poverty in which agriculture found itself, would not be found. A special committee reported in favor of seeking a federal charter in place of the provincial charter under which the company now operates.

DECORATIONS ARE VERY EFFECTIVE

Oh! let us rest among the lights side.
More sweet would be my rest,
Beside the pleasant waters
I have always loved the best.
—Marie Jousaye in "The Songs That Quinto Sang."

Green are the hills when far away,
Still Youth in memory craves Mashood's away;
Placid the waters that wash the sands,
The sky is ever distant lands,
Yet phantom castles—springtime dreams,
Dissolve like foam on woodland streams,
As Fancy—chastened by breath of reams
Reasons in prose and not in rhyme:
Yearning ceases—behold at home
The glorious pictured by those who roam.
Rimmed with verdure on verdant
Banks Quinte Bay—perennial queen:
Matron—a sneer—she spans full years
Of peaceful hardship, wreckage, tears
From prehistoric days of yore
Her scroll is writ with mystic lore.
Over her forest and fertile plain
Slumbered with Redskin, bows and shaft:
Swiftly gathering widgeon and deer
Or Paleface tiller settled near.
Champlain and Franklin sensed her spell,
Soldier, trapper and creaking stage
Have seen Dame Quinte lashed in her
But seldom doth she portend ill,
Her mood is tranquil, coaxing, still.
Who hath not felt her soft caress,
Limpid, seductive as maiden's trees.
Who hath skimmed her foaming crest
With speeding sheet at her behest,
And doth not sing throughout his days
Of this real gem amongst the bays.
Ensconced in a setting of green and gold,
She is ever young to young and old.
Could her waters speak as they flow along,
"Forget me not" would be their song.
—Jean M. Copeland in "The Trail of the Swinging Lanterns."

London, Dec. 8.—While £3,500,000 is now being spent on the tube railway system of London, chiefly in electrifying and modernization of the City and South London Railway in order that the system may be able to carry a great deal more traffic than it has hitherto done, it is planned to spend £6,000,000 on tube schemes, authority is to be sought at the next session of Parliament for the development of the underground railways, the routes applied for during there for being the London Electric Railway, the City and South London Railway and the Hampstead and Hutton Railway.

As a result of the scheme of new works, facilities will be provided for the relief of the traffic at Waterloo Station, which is growing rapidly by reason of the electrification of the Waterloo and South-Western Railway. Train services will be provided to both the City and the West End in the territory beyond Tooting as far as Sutton, which should lead to the development of this open country.

The large increases in traffic brought into the centre of London necessitate developments, to the important central stations, such as Piccadilly Circus and Leicester Square. Included in the bill of the London Electric Railway are schemes for the building of a new station at Piccadilly Circus, and having escalators proceeding direct to the Bakerloo and Piccadilly lines. A Leicester Square the station will be doubled in capacity, and the new set of lift shafts sunk to deal with the expected growth of traffic.

The new work will be begun immediately, the sanction of Parliament has been obtained. When the £6,000,000 is spent in the work just outlined, the total expenditure on the underground railway system of London since the war will have been nearly £17,000,000.

Woman's Sphere

THE SHEPHERDESS

She walks—the lady of my delight—
A shepherdess of sheep.
Her locks are thyades. She keeps
Them white.
She roams the fragrant height
And folds them in her sleep.

She roams maternal hills and bright
Dark valleys safe and deep.
Into that tender breast at night
The chastest stars may peep.
She walks—the lady of my delight—
A shepherdess of sheep.
She holds her little thoughts in sight.
Though my own are mad, I keep,
She is so circumspect and right;
She has her soul to keep.
She walks—the lady of my delight—
A shepherdess of sheep.

Fashion Fancies

The Fifth Avenue shops are showing an extensive variety of the new deep berthas. It is characteristic of American styles that they ignore the nuances and must be either one thing or the other with great definiteness. Either nb collar at all or a berthe that reaches almost to the waistline is the present vogue in New York, applied with great enthusiasm but absolutely no sense of propriety. Lace caps in the subway collarette, sleeveless dressee artificially decollete to the waist in the opera, and sleeveless, jersey dresses worn with lace berthas only suitable for a silk or velvet evening gown.

Berthas are altogether delightful worn in the right way and with the right costume. They are made of lace or of net trimmed with lace, though some also use them, especially the shaped berthas, in Georgette or silk crepe on dresses of the same material. Many metallic laces are worn on velvet evening gowns, but the berthas of lace or the dress material are worn with dark dresses, sometimes the lace is stiff and heavy after the manner of the old Dutch portraits, and more frequently it is a fine sheer Binche, chantilly or shadow lace, fleur de Venise, varying from white through cream, ivory and blond to a deep ochre.

THE MODEL YOUNG MAN.

The views of several Ottawa girls on model young men were read from the pulpit of Western Methodist Church Sunday evening, prior to a sermon on the same topic preached by the pastor, Rev. J. Calvin Reid. One girl stated she had a young man who wanted to enter the ministry but hoped he would not because he would not get enough salary. Another girl thought a model young man was one who never passed remarks about young women after they passed on the street, who was not boastful, who was fearful of the feelings of others. A third girl wanted to know at what age a young lady should marry, which Mr. Reid answered by saying "when the right person came along." Other girl letter writers held that the model youth was one who was unselfish, who was found in church instead of on the street corners, who was not attracted by the forward girls of today, was polite to all women, "lifted his hat in an elevator" and who gave up his seat in a car to women. The last letter writer said her idea of a model young man was one who was a "clean sport."

HOW TO MAKE GOOD FONDANT

For fondant, use 2 cups of sugar, 3-4 cup of water and 1-8 teaspoon of cream of tartar.

1. Combine ingredients. Stir over the fire until the sugar is dissolved and boiling point reached.

2. Cover the pan and let boil slowly for five minutes.

3. Remove the cover and wash down the crystals, keeping the sides of the pan always free from crystals.

4. Cook to the soft-ball stage (115 degrees Centigrade or 238 degrees Fahrenheit.)

5. Pour on to a platter or marble slab. (Do not scrape the pan.)

6. Cool to forty degrees Centigrade (one hundred and four degrees Fahrenheit,) or until the pan feels not more than comfortably warm to the hand. When you see sugar crystals present, they will show at this time as little clear crystals over the top or as a little white powdery spot in the fondant. Their presence shows that the fondant will sugar, and the thing to do is to pour the fondant back into a clean saucepan, add about one-third cup of water and start over again.

No sugar should be left mixture in fondant, as it can be recooked several times until it comes out right.

7. When the fondant is not sugary, work it back and forth with a spatula or wooden spoon. As it becomes thick, beat until it gets white and stiffens.

8. Knead a small amount at a time on the bands until it becomes even removed and it is creamy and soft. If the fondant on the edge of the platter has formed a crust, add it to the beating process, every bit of it can be worked into the mass. If the fondant seems hard to work, put the mixture on the hot to while kneading will help to soften it.

9. Put the fondant into a bowl, cover with waxed paper and set aside twenty-four hours to mellow.

10. Form into shape like bonbons. The fondant will be softer the second day than the first. If it should still seem too firm, add a little water (may be kneaded in; this will help soften it and give it richness.

PRINTING SILENT LETTERS COST MUCH MONEY

London, Dec. 11.—French is known to be a language replete with letters silent so far as pronounciation is concerned; English also has a goodly number of examples of letters that are carried in some quarters as wasteful. Strike out every letter and symbol not essential to each language, and the total of the yearly printing bills in both countries could be reduced by $40,000,000.

This computation has been made by French and English statisticians with time on their hands and an interest in the bizarre.

In the periodicals published in France it was found that 180,000,000 francs were used yearly whereof 13 percent are useless. Casting these aside would reduce French printing costs by $2,500,000.

In English periodicals it was estimated that 12 per cent. of the printed letters and symbols are unnecessary, and that the space consumed on printed sheets by these unused letters costs about $37,500,000 a year.

HUNGARY SENDS TURKEYS TO DOMINION

St. Thomas, Dec. 10.—Orders for turkeys imported from Hungary are being taken by commission men in this city at 38 cents a pound, according to reports received yesterday. The European birds are said to be of excellent quality and to dress from 10 to 12 pounds. It is believed that the introduction of these turkeys will have a tendency to lower the prices of the local product, which brought around the 50 cent mark last year.

SPECIAL AIRPLANE NEEDED

Sydney, Australia, Dec. 11.—The exploration expedition by seaplane, which attempted in western Papua, has failed owing to the effects of the tropical heat on the machine. The members of the expedition are proceeding to the Fly River on foot.

Mr. Lang, the pilot, declared that the tropical rain and heat were such that no machine except one built entirely of metal, and with an engine of very high horse power, could withstand the conditions.

LINKED LIVES

By

D. Kinmount Roy

The old soldier had piloted Oona daily to the mouth of the tunnel, their torches flaring in the vastness and darkness, the weird music of the many waters in the dark depths; and sitting within their strange shelter they would talk the prospect as far as the hazy permitted, and would talk and wonder as to how and when they might regain their liberty, and whether they would ever credit the story of their strange experiences, and a thousand other fancies, which need not be set down here.

They had made their way down at usual one day, both more silent than their wont; for the stern old soldier had told upon them, and although they had tried to conceal their anxiety there was no denying the fact that their expectations of speedy 'deliverance had been disappointed, and the sanguine hopes which had buoyed them up on their first coming had been chilled by long waiting.

What had happened after they had reached the cave was a question they often asked themselves. Sandy might be dead, and buried, Malcolm might have fallen into some cunningly laid trap, and with the secret of their hidingplace might have perished; the old soldier thought it was time to make an effort to escape from their strange quarters without waiting further help from Alpin. To Oona it seemed as though she had been years in the gloomy depths of this cavern, which was now to be her one reality of her existence—and all besides a dream! In the twilight—in the evening—in the black night, strange thoughts came to her while they dripping waters rushed onward with their wind sighed through the crevices and mysterious galleries of this hidden place of Nature's own workmanship.

The material for fuel had become very scanty, and even torches would soon be impossible; and the prospect made their situation very cheerless. The very sight of sky and woods from the open tunnel, which had delighted them at first, became depressing, as if mocking their helplessness. The cave which had delighted them with its weirdness, giving them shelter and security, was now a prison, and night easily become their grave and no living soul know how or where they perished!

These were not cheerful musings, but the heaviest heart sometimes suffer from depression, and their situation was far from agreeable. Oona sat down near the opening, taking in all that the eye could see. An artist might have found delight in the shadows upon the rocks, and in the diamond-like sheen which the waters of the waterfall scattered in such profusion over every tree and shrub. She remembered all this years afterwards, but at the moment they were seen and not seen—and yet the picture was taken up in her mind as clear-cut and perfect as though it had been transferred to canvas by the hand of a master.

Presently she saw something moving in the distance, appearing and disappearing along the bank of the stream, and she drew the old soldier's attention to it.

"It must be MacAlpin," Graham said, a trifle anxiously, "it surely must be MacAlpin!" All the same he considered it safe to have his pistols ready to hand.

"It is MacAlpin!" Oona cried joyfully, as Donald's massive figure became detached from the bushes and trees along the bank; and they knew that their present straw of waiting was almost over.

Graham made use of the time which must elapse before Donald could reach them in returning to the cave for the things they wished to take with them, talking to himself by the way for want of better company.

The spot which separated them from the bank was perhaps not more than thirty feet, but to Oona it seemed a veritable gulf of despair. Even conversation across the short distance was impossible, owing to the noise of the waterfall.

After crossing to them, and taking a brief rest, MacAlpin's attention was at once given to forming and strengthening the bridge which was their only means of obtaining liberty. His skill and cheery confidence were inspiring, and communicated themselves to his companions. He was so strong and alert, they could not but trust him!

Their crossing was made without mishap, and Donald breathed more freely to know that there was a drop of severity feet or so beneath them, into an unknown depth of running waters, owing frantically between steep banks, might have disconcerted his companions and played havoc with their nerves! Fortunately his fears were groundless! Oona tripped across the space with slender confidence, and the old soldier followed with grave courage, as a man who knew that it was quite necessary, but not pleasant, to be discreet!

RUTH'S EYES:

"And over there is the lake shining like gold in the light of the setting sun. Above it the sky is all a lovely pink with tiny silver streaks in it." Bessie, her head upon her sister's arm, gazed idly at the fooleps through the park. An onlooker would never had known that Ruth was blind.

All her life Bessie had cared for her blind sister. She knew just how much to move her arm to indicate that there was a step before them. She knew just how to squeeze Ruth's arm to let her know that they were crossing a friend. A quick whisper in her sister's ear and Ruth, in spite of her blindness, knew as much as Bessie with her eyes.

"The world all looks like fairyland tonight with the lights anow covering everything."

"Oh, Bessie, do be still!" Ruth interrupted impatiently. "It just breaks my heart! You are all the time talking about the beautiful things you see, and to think I shall never get them! Oh, you don't know what it is to be blind. If you did, you wouldn't be continually raving about the beautiful snow and the pink and silver lights."

Bessie stopped her sister's arm in surprise. "Why, Ruth, I thought you liked to have me tell you what I see."

"Well, I don't. It makes me feel bad to know I can't ever see it."

"I'm sorry," Bessie said, "I won't talk any more. Let's sit down on the bench here and rest. You're tired."

The girls sat down in silence. Ruth was sorry already that she had been cross, but she had felt her blindness more today than usual. All day Bessie had been bubbling over with happiness, because of the first lovely snow of the season. The trees must be beautiful, and Ruth did so want to see them. She wondered what they looked like from the beach where they sat, but of course she could not ask Bessie now. What was that thing? A quick cars heard a stifled sob by her side.

"Why, what's the matter?" she cried in alarm.

Mother's old metal salt and pepper shakers, a long, shallow tin pan and a wooden knife and fork, with the help of some sealing wax, will make a striking and hand-painted set for a Christmas gift.

Buy the small sticks of sealing wax in black, yellow, and two other bright shades. Break each stick into several pieces, place the different colors in separate cups or small pans, and cover the wax with denatured alcohol. Let the mixture stand over night, and by morning the wax should be dissolved and thin enough to paint with. You may, however, need to add a little more alcohol.

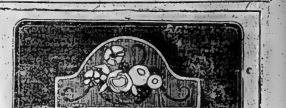

To make the tray use an oblong tin pan, not more than an inch deep. Using your larger-sized paint brush, give this a coating of the black. If it does not dry smoothly, add a second coat. Next, select a design for the bottom of the tray. It is best to get a pencil for this, or to cut a picture from a magazine, put it on with the paint is still wet, and when it has dried in place paint over it. The basket in the picture is painted gold, and the flowers are in blue, rose, and yellow. This was pencilled on, as stenciling is so much simpler than drawing.

Paint Shakers Black.

The salt and pepper shakers, which may be china or metal, are painted black, except for the screw top, which is painted yellow. The little squares are painted on with a few brush in three bright colors, such as yellow, blue, and green.

The wooden spoon and fork are used for serving salad. The handles are painted black, and the little square in the bowl are the same colors as those used for the salt and pepper shakers. These squares are easy to make, as all you have to do is outline. You must be careful, however, to keep the colors from running into each other, letting each color dry thoroughly before putting on the next one.

Makes Food Taste Better

Perhaps she has been struggling along with a motley collection of all sorts of cooking utensils, doing her best on cheap wares, slaving away half the evening cleaning up her all-metal pots and pans.

Do you realize that those wonderful meals of hers could be still more wonderful if she had the proper utensils to work with—Diamond Ware or Pearl Ware? They make food taste better. They have the smooth, clean finish of finest crockery without the breakage. They give no taint, no metallic flavor, to the food.

And they are so easy to clean and keep clean. Where other utensils require special cleaners, Diamond Ware and Pearl Ware just need a quick wash with soap and water. SMP utensils clean as easily as a china platter or bowl.

Cut Down Fuel Bills

Diamond Ware and Pearl Ware utensils heat quicker and retain even heat, thus cutting down fuel bills. They give better satisfaction, and if given fair care will outlast any kitchen ware made. Good hardware stores sell SMP Ware.

EMIGRATION AND IMMIGRATION

An Ottawa despatch of recent date states that from 1,500 to 1,900 French Canadians are crossing the border monthly and are settling in the New England States. We might accept these figures with some hesitancy but there is evidently emigration on a large scale proceeding throughout Eastern Canada. It is conjectured that emigration to other parts of Canada would amount to as much more. If these statements are only reasonably correct (which we regret to say they are), then Canadians are leaving the country at the rate of from thirty to forty thousand a year. No fault should be found with an immigration policy, but just why the subject is being more or less aggressively discussed at Ottawa without first correcting or removing the adverse influence, is something very difficult to understand.

What good does it do us to support machinery to bring in settlers from Europe at the rate of, say, 9,000 a month, if our Canadians are leaving us at the same rate? Why not let immigrants go direct to the United States, and save ourselves the expense of being a clearing depot? Why not devote all our energies to a "Wealth for Canada" campaign? Keeping capital is when leaks have been stopped we could go ahead with an immigration policy.

What is the fundamental reason that we are losing our people? Is it we not stimulate our industrial life and make conditions as attractive as they are in the States? Some authorities suggest that there is a remote possibility that our bankers could assist in solving the problem. Would it not be worth while for our parliament to find out if concentration of banking capital has anything to do with the matter? In passing we may note that the concentration of capital is decreasing in its relative proportion to turnover.

Late in 1920 the president of one of our largest banks stated that pending the adoption of some interprovincial scheme to finance foreign trade, Canada should establish a corporation "to foster foreign trade in order that factories may be kept busy and give employment to labor." Nothing has been done in the two years, but sooner or later such a move must be made.

One point where Canada is at a disadvantage is that her industrial fluctuations differ in the main from American fluctuations, by several months. When a slump comes to the U.S.A., Canada does not feel same for some time. Her people on such occasions do not lyze the country. Meanwhile the U.S. people see events Canada feels the slump and a little later on the States commence to recover. Then with business active in the States and dull in Canada, thousands of our unemployed Canadians naturally drift over to become residents of the republic to the south. It may seem strange, but it is a fact, that when conditions are reversed the tide does not flow the other way with sufficient strength to check the outward flow.

Possibly our bankers are more intimately associated with our industrial and economic life, than any one other class of men, and it would therefore appear fitting to enquire of them what is needed to check emigration. It is nothing more than common sense to conclude that discontent which causes such conditions to exist should be removed before Mr. King and his associates bring in thousands of European immigrants.

THE CALL TO ARMS

There has been a great deal of controversy regarding the methods pursued by the King Government when the famous call to arms was received from Britain in connection with the Near East question. Premier King's honored predecessor, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, made the statement, that "when England is at war, Canada is at war," yet in, what to all intents and purposes, was a very critical situation, Premier King delayed giving definite reply to the Motherland as to what course Canada, under his leadership, would pursue. As time goes on Canadians are becoming more and more ashamed of their official attitude at that time. We, who, of all the great dominions that go to make up the British Empire, refused British definite aid. We had a glorious record during the war, and that tarnished by a stain on final record in the eyes of the world. Canadians from the Atlantic to the Pacific were not afraid to take their stand, even if their government did hesitate. The tale about referring such matters to the people is absolute nonsense, expressed as Mr. King expressed it. When Canadians elect a Premier they expect him to be a man of vision, and to have initiative. We have representative government, but the term is not usually construed to mean that every matter must be referred to the people. We as a country realize that it is our duty to keep our representatives informed of our general ideas on current events, and then expect them to use their best judgment in carrying them out. It does appear childish to hear the cheap excuse, that the matter must be referred to the country. If Mr. King's ideas were carried out, it would not be necessary to elect to parliament, men of brains. Any man who could carry out instructions would do. Was Mr. King afraid to make up his mind? Does he realize that the country is behind him in this? Throughout his whole career he has shown marked desires to avoid handling big things, to come out squarely and deal with a situation. He does not seem to have's knowledge of what Canadians expect from a Premier. His speeches all deal with generalities. His actions all have the ear marks of timidity. As a politician and a student of political affairs, he appears hopelessly weak. He did not have the courage to state to Britain where he ought to know Canada stands, when we have to pass judgment on a nation which, has committed the atrocities that are laid at the door of the Turk. All red-blooded Canadians are ashamed to have us discarded as being afraid to face our responsibilities in case the Empire is threatened. Fortunately the incident has blown over and war is not as imminent as it was. However, the result of Mr. King's actions will not be so soon forgotten. We are suffering grievously yet from the last war but Canadians will not tolerate, nevertheless, in lining up on the side of right and justice. Peace is desirable but not at the cost of honor. Whatever the motives that inspired Mr. King, is still remains painfully apparent that he did not do his duty, as Canadians would expect their first citizen to interpret the meaning of the term duty.

HERE AND THERE

WHY LAMBORN PICKS YOUNG PARTNERS.

Arthur H. Lamborn landed in New York thirty years ago, an inexperienced Quaker boy, and established a business that today is the largest sugar brokerage business in the world. In 1920 he sold two hundred and fifty million dollars' worth of sugar and negotiated the sales for an additional sixty million dollars' worth. He always picks young associates and partners, and on this point has the following to say:

"From the beginning I steadfastly followed this policy of offering faithful, capable and ambitious employees an active proprietorship in the business. Around this policy revolves my entire business gospel.

"Proprietorship develops men surprisingly," he says. "A salaried executive may give his best to the interests of his employer, but every executive, a failed lift of power, that only the thrill and responsibility of active ownership can bring to life. I believe that the policy I have followed is a policy of common fairness and justice —but even if I didn't feel this, I should have done the same thing on a mere basis of dollars-and-cents self-interest. For should I not allowed the smarter members of these me to remain unca pitalized to the full!

"The criticism is sometimes offered that I have 'picked up young men.' I am glad that I have. The enthusiasm of youth and the responsibility of ownership make a great combination. One of my associates came into the firm at the age of twenty-one, another at twenty-two, and four more by the time they were thirty. In inviting them to join hands with us I knew that they would be able to give the best of the most productive years of their business life."

Lamborn does not believe, however, that partnership should be bestowed lightly. He has required each new associate to demonstrate convincingly his courage, capacity, and devotion to duty.

PRESS OPINIONS

QUEBEC DEMANDED HER FULL POUND OF FLESH

(Perth Expositor)

Hon. Mackenzie King owes his position as leader of the Liberal party to the influence exerted by the Quebec Liberal delegates from Quebec province at the Liberal convention held in Winnipeg after the death of Sir Wilfrid Laurier. Not even he will deny that. At the election the same reasons which prompted the selection of Mackenzie King as Liberal leader led to the defeat of every Conservative candidate in the province of Quebec, and the election of a solid bloc of Liberals." Anyone with the least knowledge of "practical politics as practised in Quebec knows that [the solid Liberal parliamentary phalanx] presented by Quebec to Mackenzie King was not expected to be a free gift. In a front page double-column editorial signed "Le Devoir," appearing in an issue of that paper following the last election, which paper is the recognized organ of the French language organs in that province, the claim was made that Quebec province should have its "full and legitimate share of representation" in the Cabinet of Hon. W. L. M. King, and the latter should not allow himself to be influenced in his choice by the organs in the rest of the people outside of Quebec and more particularly of Toronto. The editorial says in part:

"Since the latter has decided to associate Quebec province in the work of economic reconstruction of Canada, Quebec province has the right to be given her representatives in the Federal Government their fair share, [that] people and of influence. And this influence should be measured not only by the number of members [given by their numbers]. The "big interests" of Ontario, whose greed is limitless, may not agree with this claim, but Hon. W. L. Mackenzie should not pay any attention to them, and should remember that if he is today called to form a Ministry it is owing to the very special support of the province of Quebec.

"There will be doubtless a renewal of cries of Quebec domination. Men of clear minds will know what is behind all such [cries]. They learn from whom they arise. Quebec has no desire whatever to deprive the other parts of their fair share of representation in the Cabinet. But, once more, the province of Quebec will consent to take less than its right. The Canadian people looked a Liberal Government and a Liberal Government has found its principal support in the Province of Quebec. It is, therefore, natural that in the handling of the portfolios in the next Government the province should have its full share. Logic and justice call for that."

Le Canada, French language newspaper of Montreal, and the official organ of the Provincial Government of the Liberal party in Canada, editorially continued its comments on the representation of Quebec in the Cabinet of Hon. Mackenzie King Cabinet. It said in part:

"While desirous that justice be done and forgave—we must look now from the soil[forget—nor must the new Prime Minister—that it is especially due Province of Quebec that he is at the head of the Government. Quebec has given Mr. King 65 seats; she is sending to Ottawa a solid group considerable prestige in Federal politics; administrators who have had a laborious task during the war; men who, in Parliament are the men with whom it must be reckoned if it is desired that Canada shall be governed properly. Canadian whose loss is still so deeply deplored.

"That is why, despite the big interests of Toronto, Quebec should be given her full measure of influence in the King Ministry, and that influence should be measured not only by the importance of the portfolios which ought to be given her."

Quebec got more than her share. Quebec also gave refuge to the Minister of the Interior—a western man.

ANOTHER ENROACHMENT

(Peterboro' Examiner.)

The trouble with the Town Planning Act, which the local Council has decided to oppose when it comes before the Ontario Legislature at its next session, is that it is another demonstration of the ambition of the Ontario Government to infringe upon municipal rights.

Theoretically, the idea of town planning is sound, and there is no disputing the fact that such an organization would be capable of much good work.

Most Ontario towns, are like Topsy "just growed."

Very little heed had been taken of future development, and very little thought given to the larger needs of a growing community.

Undoubtedly a town planning organization would help to remedy that condition of affairs.

Unfortunately, however, the most plausible feel that they are being legislated to death.

So much of the public expenditure is beyond local control at present that not in justice be held responsible for higher tax rates.

The Provincial Government has exercised upon municipal powers to such an extent, that it is no wonder the Peterboro' aldermen see in the new Town planning Act merely another invasion by the Province of municipal rights.

Wide powers are to be given to the Bureau and if the Act were to pass municipalities would find themselves compelled to furnish returns and statements, fill plans for a town planning district that might include some of the best built areas in the present. This, appeal a local commission, or have one appointed by the Bureau. Any special rates for the Town Planning Commission, and also furnish additional grants to carry on such work as the Commission may consider necessary. And, on top of all this, no improvement along the line of town planning can be carried out without the approval of the Railway Board.

There is more interference than benefit in the measure. The Council does well in deciding to offer opposition to its passing.

THE STORY OF AN OLD WOOLLEN MILL

(Financial Post)

In Lethbridge, Alta., there is an old woollen mill—an old mill with a story. When it is explained that the building stood in the neighborhood of $30,000 and is now a drug on the market, and that equipment which cost $75,000 is now disposed of for $1,000, the sad facts are established around which it needs little imagination to weave a pathetic story. Lethbridge is a lusty town and civic pride which led to the opening of the city's coffers and the building of woollen mills was spent without regard to the principles of common sense or good business.

Lethbridge is a hotbed of speculation in regard to municipal financing of industries—when optimism supersedes the consideration of the cause and effect of a high price. Because excellence at a high price. The Herald makes the woollen mill the text for a timely editorial sermon.

The old woollen mill is all the present a landmark which calls for comment and reflection pertinent to the city council. It imposes the necessity of seeing that there are men on the council who have a sufficient value of realities and who, while realizing the value of sane optimism, will go slowly and when it comes to the expenditures of public money. The man who engineered the project of the woollen mill deserves to be held to blame. They acted in the spirit of the time and were sustained by the public spirit of the time. We have now, fortunately, been chastened by the spirit of doom, and it will be well if the city and its citizens to profit by the chastening. Regrets at this time of the day for money foolishly spent will be worth little. But these regrets will be worth their while if our hearts are hardened against the calls for expenditures by those who are in all times on rigid economy and encourage the virtue when they see the sin at the city council chamber.

Lethbridge has its old woollen mill. Its other industrial ventures which called other likewise tragic histories are written. And all too often the lessons of experience are forgotten for long periods. Almost daily we hear of municipalities which are embossing over an issue of bonds to be secured with the support of local capital backed by civic assistance on a scale which has been established by perhaps half a dozen other communities which have been competing in the lavishness of their financial ventures.

Recently THE FINANCIAL POST called attention to a warning to several municipalities which were lavishing their funds upon industrial waits about the antecedents of which they had made no inquiry. Such warnings are of course considered in bad taste when the people have been wrought to a high stage of civic pride and enthusiasm, and imagine that the old town is to become a Pittsburg over night, but if they have the effect of reducing the number of "old woollen mills" the effort is worth while.

Peking, Dec. 13.—The Soviet government is making a strenuous effort to obtain diplomatic recognition from the Peking administration, but so far without prospect of success. Russia was the first European country to receive the ambassador of China. That was in 1919. Recognition was withdrawn on September 23, 1920, and all Russian privileges in China were simultaneously withdrawn.

GAINED 65 POUNDS!

"Five years ago when I was first married, I had a wonderful appetite. I could be on the go all day long without feeling the least bit fatigued. I had a great appetite and could eat anything. I weighed 147 pounds. Then I went to bed every minute of the day and, when the day was over, I would go to bed and never waken once during the night. Thirteen months ago my first baby was born. After that my energy seemed to leave me. I was tired all the time. I had to force myself to do my household duties. Instead of being a pleasure as formerly, these duties became a real task. I lost all desire for food and nothing would tempt me. I had to make myself eat. I would go to bed at night and toss from side to side for hours at a time. After a while I would doze off only to find that I had been asleep for ten or fifteen minutes. Naturally I was nervous and, not having slept, I started the day completely tired out. I was shaky and nervous. The slightest noise would startle me and make my heart race like mad. I could see that my husband was worried. I was losing weight and my health and energy I slowly lost 54 pounds. I tried all kinds of tonics but they failed to help me. One night, a night I shall never forget, because it was then that I met the man of my life and happiness again, my husband brought me a bottle of Tanlac. My friend told him that Canrol had saved his wife's life, so he insisted upon my trying it. Six weeks after I began taking Canrol, my weight increased from 93 pounds to 158, an increase of 65 pounds. Now I am well once more. Every morning I fairly jump out of bed ready to tackle anything and every minute of the day is a joy to me."

Canrol is sold by your druggist, or if you can conveniently call, shortly after you have tried it, that it hasn't done you any good, return the empty bottle to him and he will refund your money. 8-422

CONDITIONS IN BRITAIN ARE GREATLY IMPROVED

Industrial Conditions Fast Improving—Political Situation Creates Satisfaction—Bonar Law Popular

Captain T. T. Mcl. Stoker, just arrived in Canada from England, has the following statements to make:

Conditions in England are greatly improved, better by running full time, and as a result the unemployment situation is better than it has been since it's termination of the great war. From unprejudice of opinion, and on all sides, it is evident that the people of England are glad of the recent change of government. He says there is no denying that Bonar Law is very popular and that all are looking to him to successfully cope with difficult situations as they arise in regard to the labor party. He stated out that the extremists are silently undermining their prestige by their clamoring the strength of the party. Immigration to Canada is being greatly discussed throughout England and Captain Stoker says, it is one of the chief topics of interest. The whole Union, which is now under the control of Sir Campbell Stuart, formerly of Montreal, is devoting its efforts to the interest of Canadian immigration and in fact all questions relating to the same. He says, as a result of the eyes of thousands of England, are turned towards Canada and much good is bound to result. Capt. Stoker is very optimistic regarding financial conditions in England and feels that Canada will soon derive benefits in more ways than one. He considers that a feeling of optimism apparently prevailing on all sides is doing much towards the return of prosperity after a most trying period. Speaking of the people generally throughout England, Capt. Stoker said they are greatly interested in Canada and whenever the question is brought up they make numerous enquiries as to Canadian financial conditions, how the people are faring, what kind of crops are paid well, the like, and what the prospects would be for more settlers. Capt. Stoker left this week-end for Halifax special visit for Montreal along with many other prominent Canadians, who are returning from abroad.

NEWS FROM TRENTON

The morning service at King Street Church was a very interesting and instructive one. Rev. W. G. Clarke, B. A., the Pastor who attended the World's Convention against Alcoholism, recently held in Massey Hall, Toronto, gave his report. At the commencement of the Conference forty three countries were represented, and before it closed sixty-five countries had sent one or more delegates.

Massey Hall was decorated with flags of every country. At the front of the Hall was a large map with Toronto as its centre and emerging therefrom were ribbons with little flags on each pointing to the different countries. Their first objective some years ago was the closing of a single bar in a community, then the whole town, gradually branching out to the township, then province or state, then country, until now the cry is "Prohibition in the World."

Such a gathering with such a scheme was even greater in magnitude than the recent Peace Conference at Washington.

In the evening Rev. Clarke exchanged pulpits with Rev. Woodger of Grace Methodist Church. Rev. Clarke delivered this address before the sister congregation. Rev. Woodger preached a missionary sermon, calling for a greater practice of Christianity rather than of theory on the part of the Christians, if we are to make our missionaries with their work among the heathen.

The Choir sang two anthems and Mr. Cull in his usual capable manner rendered a solo.

Rev. Major Belford conducted both services in St. George's Church today, in the absence of Rev. Canon Greene, strong, who is still ill at the General Hospital, Toronto.

Saturday's market brought fairly large quantities of butter, with prices from 36c. to 40c. a lb. Chickens were also aplenty, selling retail at 35c. a lb.

There is still an absence of fowl for Xmas, which no doubt will be forthcoming back till the Saturday before, when the demand will be greater than the supply, and many of us will have to be content with the smaller birds, but, they will taste just as good after all.

Some wintercoat boys and girls forgot the Sabbath and Sunday School and betook their skates and hockey sticks to enjoy the first frolic of the winter season by skating on the Trent River and Bay of Quinte. Such an ideal winter's day, surely no one will question youths' attitude. In fact how few of us, but sometime or other haven't grasped the first ice in which to go, skating or playing an innocent game of hockey. Maybe, who knows, some of our future hockeyists might have been some of the wayfarers some kiddies.

Trenton Arena has received two or three coats of ice, and if the weather man is kind and Jack Frost is about we will have skating much earlier than last season.

No word as to the progress, our hockey teams are making, but we can feel assured of as good and no doubt of a better team this year, because each season's effort produces results with a good live executive behind them the boy, will be hard at work in a few days. Lots of material is in Trenton.

We regret to hear that Dr. Farncomb's condition was not so favorable during the past few days but glad to learn only today of an improvement.

Mrs. J. F. Cox, Lorne Ave., is able to be and since her recent illness we hope for a complete recovery shortly.

Only one dozen shopping days till Xmas, perhaps some of you are in a quandary as to what to get for your parents, perhaps some little information they can give you, as regards time for mailing, how to wrap your parcel, and how long it will take it to reach its destination. Play safe, get your parcels away early; better arrive a few days before than after Xmas. Your friends will know you don't want them to open your presents before the 25th. Those residing in the country can assist the Mail Carriers by watching for the mail bags when home will be tired and his hands cold. Meet him at the road side.

"My Hands Trembled and I Could Not Sleep"

Mr. Thomas Hosey, Brantford, Ont., writes:

"When I began taking Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, I was so nervous that when I picked up a cup of tea my hand would tremble like a leaf. I could not sleep well, could not remember things, and there were neuralgic pains through my body. After taking three boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, however, I am in perfect health."

ATLANTIC CURRENTS AFFECT BRITISH FISHERMEN

London, Dec. 8.—The herring catch in the North Sea in 1921 was not up to the ordinary catch, though there was not an actual scarcity, but the herrings were of a very poor quality. The explanation for this is supposed to have been found in the changes in Atlantic currents, which change between existing the minds of scientists. This has not yet been established as a definite fact, but it is the belief of some eminent authorities.

However, an international body is now being held into the case of the herring failure, the British Ministry of Agriculture and Fisheries being particularly interested in the question.

Nelson, Scientific Superintendent of the Fishery Board for Scotland, says that so far as the tides are concerned in the summer of 1920, and also in 1921, there was an abnormal mix of Atlantic water into the North Sea, coming in by way of the Fair-Shetland passage. The waters, says Mr. Nelson, "is more salt, of higher temperature, and contains a distinct fauna. One of the most easily recognized animals is a jellyfish-like organism called a 'scalp.' These are found abundantly in Atlantic water, but never in the true waters of the North Sea."

Further Mr. Nelson says: "We know that the plankton, or minute crustacea, and the Atlantic water is found to be very deficient in these crustacea. This can only mean a reason for the very poor quality of the herrings caught last year.

"Research this past summer as to the position of the Atlantic water showed that it was normal, and there was no signs of it penetrating into the North Sea. This may be correlated with the successful herring fishing of this summer. The herrings were in extremely good condition.

"It is impossible to say what actually was the cause of this until we have made further investigations. The previous influx of Atlantic water into the North Sea took place some ago as 1905, so that it will be seen that the investigations are necessarily elaborate and extend over a long period of time."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

HOSPITAL FOR SICK CHILDREN
Corner College St., Toronto.

Mr. Editor—

Thinking that the trend of public opinion is swinging more strongly to the equalization of the burdens of such citizen of Canada must bow, the helping of those who are unable to help themselves occupies a much greater place in our minds, may I draw your attention to the fact that this House is accomplishing great things in a way that is untouched by any other institution.

The children from all parts of the province, irrespective of class or creed, those who are sickly and weakened here and are made strong and well. In not this in itself a wonderful work?

The service and the duty of the Hospital is far-reaching. As well as personal attention, both surgical and medical, of all the tiny patients, doctors and nurses also trained to extend the use of healing to the uttermost parts of the Province.

The entire function of the Hospital is commenced itself to you and your children. It is a CHILD WELFARE CENTRE well deserving of the support of all subscribers.

It is a new and unfortunate factor added to the responsibility which the Hospital must assume, that of the Province in the majority which little children are the chief sufferers. Many of them are little waifs from poorer sections where the streets are only playgrounds.

Here are the average day's figures for attendance:

Out patients 268
In-patients 199

In carrying out of this great work is responsibility as well as that of the whole of Canada. Every contribution to the Hospital is a friend, indeed, to little mites of humanity, and his satisfaction of knowing that the best of his individuals contribution is bring joy into at least one home by doing so sire for somebody's child.

The service of the Hospital depends on the continued support of the public with the conversion of dollars into pounds and strength will, I am sure be with your approval. Each minute penny costs over fifty cents, so you see that much money is needed for the upkeep on this GREAT MOTHER OF CHARITY.

Every day sees a large number of additional patients on the Hospital's register. Owing to the advanced costs of surgical and medical appliances and maintenance is mounting until now nearly twice the usual amount of money is essential for the fulfilling of our work. With the approach of Christmas, may I place those facts before your readers in connection with the 5th Christmas Appeal of the Hospital for Sick Children?

Faithfully yours,
E. E. ROBERTSON,
Chairman of the Appeal Committee.

DR. FAIRBAIRN,
Dr. Andrew Fairbairn, first Principal of Mansfield College, had a telling influence on many sometimes landed him into curious predicaments from which he escaped with glory, as will be the following, when addressing a mixed audience of Aberdeen and Oxford Universities:

"He drew a vivid picture of the hardships of the Scottish undergrads at Aberdeen in his young days, spoke of their poverty, oatmeal diet and their dreary bare lodgings. Against this austere background he painted the social splendor of the aristocratic luxuriousness of the Oxford undergraduate. "Look at him," he said, "as he appears in his commonly upholstered study chair, with his legs stretched across, to another chair—a cushion under his head, another cushion under his feet, and a third cushion under his—(then he remembered his mixed audience)—under his—his supercumbrent mass. Everyone gasped; then they cheered at the clever recovery of the man in trouble."

MUSICAL LIBARIES DISAPPEAR.

Peking, Dec. 11.—The musical libraries of old Moscow and Petrograd have entirely disappeared and the next economic policy of the Russian Soviet is proving disastrous to the theatres, according to Kalpun-Vladimjral, operatic director, who has arrived here after five months' journey across Siberia. He bought some opera orchestrations and piano opera partitures until his money ran out and was then forced to bargain with clothing and other property. One pair of trousers, he says, was the purchase price of a complete score for "Madame Butterfly."

NOT APPRECIATED

May (indignantly): "I don't care; I think Harry Easterleigh is downright mean."

Marie: "Why, May?"

May: "Well, he wrote me from Egypt, saying he had shot a crocodile seven feet long, and that when he shot another he would have a pair of slippers made for me. I'll never speak to him again."

KING AND CRERAR FORCES DUPE WESTERN FARMERS

Ottawa, Dec. 9—"It resembles a bundle of jargon than a piece of legislation," declared Hon. Arthur Meighen on the Wheat Board Bill when before Parliament. Subsequent events have proven the soundness of Mr. Meighen's contention and the Western farmer will not have a Wheat Board.

The Western farmer has been duped again by Hon. T. A. Crerar, grain magnate, and Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, the political associate of the Progressive leader. It was evident from the opening of Parliament that Messrs. Crerar, King, Motherwell and other Progressive and Liberal leaders intended to make an effective wheat board impossible. To accomplish this purpose every effort was made to delay the adoption of legislation to empower a wheat board and in event of this being successful, the legislation was of such a character to make impossible the success of such an undertaking. Hon. Arthur Meighen, whose wheat board of 1919 was so successful and remunerative to the farmers, the Progressive members chose to dupe their constituents rather than accept their advice. The result is that grain prices have been depressed, marketing disrupted, and no wheat board to bring order out of chaos, to protect the farmer, and secure the absorption of our great crop in a year when the supply is abnormal and the demand light. The Western farmer will be penalized millions, while Mr. Crerar's grain company will reap the benefit of his strategy.

Both Mr. Crerar and the Liberals were always hostile to the Wheat Board, the former because it interfered with his grain company, and the latter as opposed to any successful Conservative legislation. Mr. Crerar is a member of the Winnipeg Grain Exchange. The Liberals, while the Wheat Board of 1919 was in operation attacked it in and out of Parliament.

Mr. Meighen's last election placed feasible wheat board scheme before the electors. It was adopted after consultation with those who made a success of the 1919 scheme. If adopted it would have been in operation, assisting and protecting the farmers, without interfering with the private and corporate fair trade. It gave an alternative marketing scheme to the farmer and was his protection against extortion. Progressives and Liberals refused this proposal of men of experience in the trade and now have nothing but a depressed and glutted market.

The excuse now given for the failure is that capable men could not be secured to operate the Wheat Board. Capable men were willing to operate Mr. Meighen's proposed Wheat Board because it was a feasible and effective scheme but capable men refused to risk their reputations in trying to give effect to "a jumble of jargon."

Last election the Winnipeg Exchange supported the Liberals in Winnipeg and the Progressives in Rural Manitoba. Who won—the farmers or the grain exchange? There is no Wheat Board. Victory is with Messrs. Crerar, King and the Grain Exchange.

SWEDISH EXPERT OUTLINES GERMANY'S FINANCIAL FUTURE

Stockholm, Nov. 20.—"If France breaks with Germany financially chaos will follow, and the mark will go to almost any conceivable low rate," said Professor Gustav Cassel, Swedish expert in international finance, and advisor to the League of Nations, upon his recent return from Berlin where he has been called by the German government, together with seven other financial experts from the United States, England, Holland and Russia.

Professor Cassel declares that unless present conditions in Europe are altered, stabilization of the German mark will be impossible. The experts were agreed on this. They recommended that the German government look for a moratorium or repayments for at least two years. If this request is granted, stabilization will depend principally on Germany's production and on the make-up of the national budget. An international loan in Germany would not in itself solve the problem, he says, but would have a tremendous moral effect on the trade.

The commission of financial experts recommended, according to Professor Cassel, that in case the moratorium were granted, Germany give the following guarantees: the establishment of a "central foreign exchange department" at the Riksbank, to be provided with some of the Riksbank's gold reserve; the expenditure of this gold in the purchase of paper marks; the limitation of the floating debts, and the raising of the discount rate at the Riksbank. With the consents of the reparations commission, an international financial association should be invited to help in the work of stabilization. The redeeming of paper marks should be limited to sales of the Riksbank, chiefly foreign holdings. If marks were priced at the rate of 5,000 to the United States dollar, says Professor Cassel, less than half of the gold sufficient for the Riksbank would be sufficient for redemption.

Professor Cassel has recently agreed to act as financial adviser to the Soviet State Bank in Petrograd.

AN INTERESTING POINT.

(Woodstock Sentinel-Review)

Jack Jones, the British Laborite, who was turned out of the house of commons for referring to the members as "dirty dogs," explained afterwards that the expression was peculiarly English, and he thought he was justified in using the language of his constituency.

It's an interesting point, and who does not but it may become an important one? There are those who claim that British institutions are the most democratic in the world. It appears to be no—question of the right of a constituency or dockers to be represented in parliament by a docker; how long will it be possible to deny the right of a docker representative to speak in his own language?

It is possible to imagine the time when the house of commons will be made up largely of women. Will it be possible then to deny the right of a woman member to call a fellow member a cad?

NEW GAME SANCTUARY FOR BRITISH COLUMBIA

Victoria, B. C., Dec. 9.—British Columbia is to have another game reserve—a refuge for a greater variety of the feathered of the wood than is to be found elsewhere. In the Cariboo district a strip of country approximately seventy miles long and forty miles wide is to be set aside for this purpose.

Recently a body of naturalists and big game enthusiasts urged the Game Conservation to establish the reserve. The plan was approved and its only remains for the officials to determine the boundaries.

"The Bowron Lake Game Refuge," as the new park is to be known, will be enclosed within the enviable shores of Bowron, Spectacle, Sandy, Long, Isaac and Indian Point Lakes, which, with the streams connecting them and with the streams connecting them and several minor portages, form an almost circular waterway 200 miles in circumference.

The southern part of the reserve is 23 miles east of Barkerville, in one of the finest big game districts of British Columbia. Here is the natural home of moose, deer, caribou, mountain goat, grizzly and black bear, marten and kindred fur-bearing animals. Trout is plentiful, and geese, brant, ducks and grouse are found in large numbers.

A canoe can be taken around the circle with no difficulty, while inside the borders of the refuge are magnificent snow-clad peaks rising to an altitude of 7,500 and 8,000 feet. The scenery is enchanting. This district is one of the greatest spawning grounds for sockeye salmon in the province.

FAMOUS DOG MASCOT DEAD

Victoria, B.C., Dec. 12.—Rastus, huge black dog of the Great Dane species, official member of the local branch of the Veterans of France is dead and many friends mourn his passing.

He died at sea on the tender Estevan, on which he never missed a sailing during his lifetime. A soldiers friend he was and it was the funeral of a comrade he was given. Full naval honors marked his consignment on all sides.

A remarkable character was Rastus, returned men declare. Handsome in appearance, probably the biggest dog on the coast, he made friends on all sides.

Rastus' original owner was the late Paddy Dineen, who fought with the 67th Western Scots. After the war the twain were inseparable, and spent much time around the club rooms of the Veterans of France. Rastus was officially made a member, and the only known way to ruffle his temper was to attempt to tamper with the veterans' badge on his collar.

During the war Rastus had found a home on the Estevan. When the ship was in port he lived on the fat of the land, but sailing day found him on the dock. How he knew when the vessel was to sail is a mystery. He seemed to sense it from afar, and there was never a voyage of the steamer that he was not in his accustomed place aboard.

The Prince of Wales when he visited Victoria took a deep interest in the big black pup, who was formally presented with the rest of the local notables. The prince said he had a collar in London that he thought would look well on the dog's neck, but he forgot to send it.

MUSIC and DRAMA

"BITS OF LIFE" PROVES NOVELTY HIT ON SCREEN

"Bits of Life," the Marshall Neilan production, which opened an engagement at Griffin's Theatre yesterday, sets a new milestone of progress in the silent dramatic art.

It is likewise a triumph in acting as well as conception and direction.

The outstanding merit, however, lies in the new idea which Marshall Neilan has injected into motion picture-making. In "Bits of Life" he has combined the efforts of four noted authors and made one mighty interesting photoplay of it. The stories, which are divided into episodes, are taken from "The Red Samari," by Thomas McMorrow; "The Man Who Heard Everything," by Hugh Wiley, and "The Strange Adventure," by Marshall Neilan. And each of these stories is cleverly linked up by one main theme. Mr. Neilan has accomplished what the other producers seemed impossible. And he has achieved a real triumph in doing so.

Melodrama, comedy, satire and farce are ingenuously pieced together to provide an entertainment which is packed with interest from beginning to end.

Lon Chaney gives a magnificent characterization as a Chinaman in the episode based on "Hop." It is indeed one of his finest contributions to the screen.

Others who contribute their histrionic talents to this unusual screen attraction are John Bowers, Noah Beery, Wesley Barry, Harriett Hammond, Rockcliffe Fellows, James Bradbury, Jr., Fred Burton, Teddy Sampson and Anna May Wong.

"A Charmed Life", an amusing Vitagraph comedy, a two-reel Western drama featuring Harry Carey, and a beautiful Travelogue are being exhibited in addition to the feature attraction.

In "Steelheart", which is the feature attraction at the Regent now till Wednesday, William A. Dunean takes the role of a young writer, athletic in mold who finds adventure forever prodding at him amid the restlessness of a new frotier. There is a girl, of course, a wonderful woman only girl, played by his co-star, Edith Johnson. There is the scarlet life of the old mining camp and lumber-jack-board. The sequence of jealousies, the turmoil and the playing of the game of life on a very little deck-board. The sequence of "Steelheart" are so exciting as to keep the interest of the average spectator wet makes the production one of the most successful William Duncan pictures ever seen here.

In one sequence the hero and heroine find themselves trapped in a mine a few seconds before the blasting begins. Outside men run hither and thither before the tremendous quake and tremor sends tons of dirt flying. The electric switches are set. A quick perk and the current will do the work that no hand can stop. Is at this point that William Duncan, who directed the picture, justifies his reputation for originality. What happens is a stand-up thrill that has seldom been equalled.

"MUTT AND JEFF" HERE FRIDAY

The famous heroes of Bud Fisher's world-wide cartoon creations, "Mutt and Jeff", will appear in an entirely new offering this season. The title of their latest adventure is "Mutt and Jeff's honeymoon" and will be the superlative attraction at Griffin's this Friday night, for one night only.

From all accounts this is the most original and withal the most diverting piece of merriment that has help ed to immortalize the popularity of the pair since they graduated from the columns of the dailies into the flesh. They are to figure in a series of side-splitting complications and situation calculated to lift their fame several notches above the present, where which, as their millions of admirers and well-wishers already know, is universal. The story revolving about their latest and most diverting escapades takes two acts and six scenes to unfold, all which is accompanied to the accompaniment of melodies, music, surprises, innovations, novelties and fun of the nicest, infections and unusual brand. A competent supporting company is promised along with a scenic investiture out of the ordinary.

A WORKING MAN'S DOLLAR

A working man's dollar, like chaff in a gale,
Is flicked from his pocket for shoddy and whale.
They squeeze and keep squeezing, but listen to me,
They'll fool their own nest, just wait and you'll see.

When war fell upon us all goods in the store
Were raised to a value unheard of before.
Today war is ended, still prices advance,
And sly, cunning grafters, appear in a trance.

We shiver and shake like a pup in the cold,
Like the good shepherds' lambskin which strayed from the fold,
Our lives are in peril and like the lost sheep,
We're prey for the wolves, when awake or asleep.

The "makers" pay war tax, then pass it along.
The "wholesale" pay war tax, they too pass it on.
The "merchant" pays war tax, but when there's a sale,
The whole blooming debt hits the working man's pale.

Our neutral town fathers sit idly by
And lacking the courage, they shut up their eyes.
Along comes O'Reilly, with words to console,
But what did he do with the anthracite coal?

SIR HENRY THORNTON IS A BUSY MAN

Stratford, Dec. 9.—Sir Henry Thornton, the new President of the Canadian National Railways, visited Stratford during the week-end, where he paid an informal visit to Hon. W. C. Kennedy, Minister of Railways, who is convalescing after his recent operations. The visit of Sir Henry to the Minister was merely one of courtesy, and Sir Henry said his recent visit and spent a short time with Mr. Kennedy. While in Stratford the President took occasion to walk through the National shops and view the equipment.

On Monday Sir Henry in Toronto will receive a deputation representing the Toronto Board of Trade, and will afterward attend the new Union Station and the Grand Trunk terminal facilities. At 1 o'clock he will address a luncheon at the Empire Club, for which the demand for tickets is said to have already broken all previous records.

At 2 o'clock Sir Henry will leave on an inspection trip between Toronto and Belleville, where he will speak in the evening at a dinner given by the citizens to W. D. Robb, Vice-President and General Manager of the Grand Trunk Railway.

RUSSIA EXPERIMENTING WITH NEW CURRENCIES

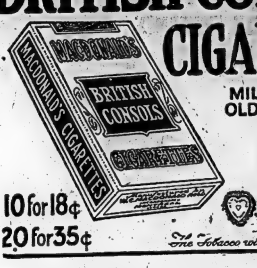

Moscow, Nov. 10.—As the gold ruble cannot at present be regarded as the real measure of value in Russia, a new ruble called the "goods ruble," corresponding to the value of certain kinds of goods, is to be introduced as commercial currency. Wages will be fixed in "goods rubles." In addition to the "goods ruble" it is proposed to introduce into the market other varieties of the ruble, namely, agricultural, export, and budget rubles.

A well informed Russian business man, questioned as to the Soviets latest financial plans, said the intention was that paper issues should in theory be backed by supplies of goods. Regarding the export and import issues, he said that the paper would be backed for face value by all the trade entering and leaving Russia.

The new financial measure is probably attributable to the fact that the supply of gold rubles is nearing exhaustion, and to a desire on the part of the Soviet officials to deal a blow at the people who are hoarding them. An effort was made by the Bolsheviki some time ago to declare the Czar, Duma and Kerensky rubley valueless, but it did not succeed.

COUNCIL'S OFFER REFERRED BACK

Civic Legislators Want Matter of Purchasing Lots Further Considered

The following recommendation from the civic committee was read evening considered at the Council meeting and sent back for further consideration:

That this Council submit an offer for three lots from the corner of Isabel Street to the jog in the stone fence and running back to the school lot on the north-west corner and to Mr. Carter's lot on Isabel Street, known as the Murney property at $5,000.

Mr. Robinson thought this recommendation should be sent to the ratepayers to vote on if it could be done legally, then the people could express themselves upon the matter.

Ald. Donohoe could not see what value the property would be to the city. We have parks enough in the city at present if this was to be for a park.

Mayor Hanna moved, in amendment, that the matter be referred back to committee for further consideration.

The amendment was adopted.

GRAIN FLEET STORM BOUND

Steamers Loaded for Last Trip at Anchor in Port Arthur

Port Arthur, Dec. 13.—Completely enveloped in mist arising from the freezing waters of Thunder Bay, the fleet of grain carriers which cleared from the elevators the week-end are still swinging at anchor in the harbor awaiting the abatement of the storm which has been in progress for the last 48 hours.

At noon today it was impossible to determine the number of ships, at anchor on account of the mist, but it is estimated that the fleet would number upward of fifteen, all downward bound with grain.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Dec. 12.—A sweeping sleet is raging from the Whitefish Point to this city. Vessels reported having been tied up since yesterday. The steamer Calliope was the last vessel to leave here for Lake Superior. The temperature is at home stopped from 25 degrees above zero, at midnight, to four above at 6 a.m. today.

The wind is blowing from the south east here at 30 miles per hour.

The northwest storm signals are up and zero weather is here now.

The steamer J. H. Brown of Hall fame, with a cargo of coal for Chicago, went aground off Point Nichols Soo Blane Island, this morning during the worst snow and wind storm in years. Captain Maddison and his crew of 28 men were taken off by the coast guard from Walker's Point. The rescue was effected in a raging blizzard.

The steamer is reported to have a hole in her hull, and to be leaking badly.

HOSE WAGON HITS CHEVROLET CAR

One Wheel Broken Off and Fender Crumpled—Hose Wagon Was En Route to Fire at Time

At 4 p.m. last evening the Fire Brigade received a call to a fire in the bush near the roadway at the Bridge, it being feared that the fire was getting beyond control. While the hose wagon was being driven south on Front street from No. 2 station, and nearing the corner of Campbell street, Fire Chief Brown, who was on the street, waved his hand as a signal to the driver of the wagon to slow down so that he might mount it, and continue on his way to the fire.

When the hoses were pulled up, the long reel veered to the west side of the street, and struck a Chevrolet touring car, which was in charge of Mr. Longden, 83 West Moira street. The car was thrown around, so that the front of it was pointing due west in front of the window of the Latimer Drug store.

The left rear wheel was completely smashed off and the rear portion of the fender badly crumpled. Luckily, however, no one was injured.

FARMERS TO BLAME FOR FAILURE OF U.F.O. STORES

There Are Many Lessons That They Have to Learn to Understand Co-operation

Toronto, Dec. 13.—At the ninth annual meeting of the shareholders of the United Farmers Co-operative Co., Ltd., in Toronto yesterday many pertinent matters were discussed. The meeting was held at Massey Hall. The failure on the part of the stores of the department of the Farmers' Company, to live up to the expectations of the management when this branch of the farmers' movement was set up, has not entirely dampened the enthusiasm of the United Farmers for this form of service. That was shown yesterday. After the whole matter of the failure of the stores had been thrashed out from many angles, the future of the stores was left in the hands of the new directors with instructions that they should use their judgment as to what was best to do. While there are still 24 or 25 stores in existence, many of them are losing money steadily, while ten others have been closed; but that did not alter the fact that the meeting expressed confidence in the old board of directors.

All of them who chose to stand for office.

Have Wrong Spirit.

About the most interesting part of the day came when Mr. Burnaby, the retiring president, informed the farmers that they had only themselves to blame for the financial failure of the co-operative stores, they did not have a good deal to learn about co-operation and that there had been too many of the joining stores in offering suggestions in the co-operative organizations. There were even secretaries, he declared, who wrote letters to the directors in touch with the general situation of the stores, were practically useless. The directors had held to their own many occasions to get the wrong information and did not take so much trouble as to write a letter in reply. With that sort of thing going on, the directors were ready to look to-day from general stores because they could save an odd penny here and there, with others ready to turn traitor to the farmer movement for a few cents, and with still others of the opinion that under-selling of rival selling the stores, it was not hard to see just why the stores department had failed as it did.

As to whether or not they should close down the stores entirely after March 31, Mr. Burnaby did not say, but he was confident that, though the stores as a whole lost the company $50,000 during the past year, they had kept prices a notch a condition that the farmers had not only saved the depreciation on their stock from $25 to $15 a share, but had saved several times, the $50,000 loss. The stores, declared Mr. Burnaby, were for the failure of the stores were:

"First, we have been unable to get credit by our customers as much as all our competitors have been doing. Second owing to the unprofitable operations of the farmer, the buying power has very materially declined. Third, the difficulty of managing these stores at such a distance from headquarters. There have been some cases of dishonesty on the part of the employees and a strong suspicion in some quarters on the part of even the shareholders, and auditors' boards."

STATEMENT FOR RATEPAYERS

Will be Furnished by Officials of the City

At the council meeting last evening Ald. McCreary moved, seconded by Ald. Foster that the City Treasurer, Clerk, Engineer and Auditor, collaborate and prepare for the general information of the ratepayers a statement showing in detail the various debentures issues at present outstanding and in course of issuance indicating the maturity dates of such debts, and showing the amounts now in sinking fund applicable for retirement of said debentures. Also that this Committee prepare for submission at the same time an estimate of the value of all city owned utilities, public buildings and other like assets. Carried.

Ald. McCreary spoke in support of the motion which would give information to the citizens. The statement would be material assistance to the ratepayers of the city.

Ald. Ostrom said at the close of this year he would give an account of his stewardship. The debentures are in such a shape the auditor that all could understand them and any person could be informed in reference to them.

The motion was adopted.

ENGINEER DEVISES STREET DECORATIONS

To City Engineer Chas. Campbell and His Men Much Credit is Due For Worthy Work Done

In referring to the various excellent decorative schemes which were put into effect in this city during the recent visit of Mr. W. D. Robb, and other officials of the Canadian Bell, we, "The Intelligencer" regret that through an oversight, the splendid decorations on the lamp posts and on all the city streets, were not specially mentioned.

Much time was spent in preparing the fine shields which decorated the lamp posts, the shields bearing the name, "Canadian Bell Telephone Ways," and the crest. Besides this the posts were well shrouded in evergreens. Much of this work was done after hours, in order to be in readiness for Monday, the Big Day.

Mr. Chas. Campbell, City Engineer, and his men are to be congratulated in this work, for it was all in charge of Mr. Campbell. Workmen began this morning to remove the decorations.

TURKEY REFUSES HOME TO ARMENIANS

Lausanne, Dec. 13.—Turkey refused at to-day's session of the Near East Conference, to assign any special part of Turkey, as a national home for the Armenians. Ismet Pasha declared it would mean a new attempt to dismember Turkey. He was irreconcilable on other points concerning the treatment of minorities in Turkey. Lord Curzon warned Ismet there would be no sympathy in the world for Turkey, if the conference failed on the question of the treatment of the minorities.

HOUSE FIRE TO-DAY ON BLEECKER AVE.

Residence of John Rigby Damaged by Fire Which Broke Out at 11 p.m.

Fire broke out in the attic of the residence of Mr. John Rigby, Grand Trunk conductor, at 316 Bleecker Avenue, shortly before 1 p.m. this afternoon, and the alarm was sent in to strike 1 o'clock, the fire bell began to ring, and the fire trucks and hose reels started on a run to the scene of the trouble. On arrival they discovered that the fire had started in the attic of the south side of the main chimney, and it was necessary to tear a hole in through the roof in order to get the water on the fire. It took the firemen half an hour to extinguish all traces of the fire, so that it must have had a good start upon their arrival.

The bedrooms are badly damaged by water, and the kitchen is also damaged by water, as well as all furnishings.

"It is my earnest hope that, by faithful observance, by all sides, of the constitution, peaceful peace and prosperity in Ireland may be established, the spirit of that settlement I have chosen you to be the first representative of the Crown in the Irish Free State.

"With all my heart I pray that the blessings of God may rest upon you and the Ministers of the Irish Free State in this difficult task committed to your charge."

Governor-General Healy's reply in the messages from the King was as follows:

"The terms of the message will touch all hearts, while the thought which inspires it must everywhere evoke the admiration of men of good will.

WORK OF ARTIST IN CANADIAN BUILDING

In the spacious rear office of the Chamber of Commerce there is truly a wonderful display of paintings all executed by Mr. Manly MacDonald, whose work has graced the mantle pieces of the city at Point Anne. Mr. MacDonald is a young man but achieved a wonderful success for his years. He has studied in many European countries and while there executed some work that truly merits the appreciation of the lover of art. Many people who have only a bowing acquaintance with the artistic values of this class of picture, will remark that the great majority of such paintings appear to have been created by one who has had considerable subject. Even the layman can see that Mr. MacDonald is an expert in the choosing of subject for his work.

Mr. MacDonald has developed a method of producing colored etchings by which many people have a number of these copies can be made. They are usually printed in oil colors. They are called the duplicates of oil paintings, combined with the charm of an etching. Some of the subjects produced by the process, now on exhibition are Baker House Close in Old Town Edinburgh; An Italian Farm House in Assisi, the rear of houses in a French village with a stream passing behind the houses; Fishing boats moored in front of; a Old Canadian Red Mill; a Courtyard in Toledo, Spain; the Home of John Knox, etc., etc.

Since his European trip Mr. MacDonald has painted quite a good deal in oil. There are many local settings, one being of Lott's mill; a Canadian Harvest; a Canadian Winter Scene; a Prince Edward Scene in the Harvest Field; an Autumn Scene at Huycke's Point; an Old House in Wellington; and many others. Other settings in oil were done in Europe and among these are, a Venetian Boat Scene; a Canadian Boat at Marseilles; St. Peter's, Rome; Firth of Forth Bridge; Venetian Moonlight; a Bridge in Toledo, Spain; Village Scene, and On the Seine; French Village Scene, etc.

Behind every picture lies a story and Mr. MacDonald has quite a good deal of romance into these stories, making his characters all the more real.

Mr. MacDonald was born at Point Anne and commenced his studies at the Ontario College of Art, Toronto, where he spent four years. He was at the Albright Art School in Buffalo, and the Boston Museum of Fine Arts. He studied with Mr. W. J. Beatty for two years and graduated from the Ontario College of Art. He is an Associate of the Royal Academy, and a member of the Ontario Society of Artists.

He was commissioned by the British Government to proceed to the battle fields of France to paint representative views of the Canadian Memorials at Ottawa. Two of these are "A Canadian Fishing Scene" and "A Canadian Harvest Scene."

It is a treat to view these exhibits and listen to Mr. MacDonald's story of how each was taken into existence. Those who miss the exhibit will be giving up a really interesting opportunity.

NO TIME FOR THREATS WITHOUT ACTS SAYS POINCARE

Paris, Dec. 13th.—Premier Poincare made it clear to interviewers last night that he will announce at the resumption of the parliamentary debate on French Foreign policy that the Government retains the right to use a free hand in securing security for the German debt. The time for threats, without acts, half passed, by will

MUSIC and DRAMA

WILLIAM DUNCAN
IN STRONG DRAMA

William Duncan and Edith Johnson, his co-star are appearing at the Regent tonight for the last time in "Bucking," a play of the western type in which Mr. Duncan appears as himself—strong, powerful and fearless, but with a tenderness for women and children, the character is well suited to the star's athletic build and build.

For News, "Falling or Fame," the two reel Christie comedy and the new chapter of "Robinson Crusoe" serial are being exhibited on the same program.

LEAH BAIRD IN AUGUSTUS THOMAS DRAMA

Those made Leah Baird her present day right to establish among the few established emotional stars of the screen through the medium of an Augustus Thomas drama. The or ginal play entitled "The Capitol," will be the feature of the six minute picture version of "The Capitol," the famous American dramatist's novel upon stage success in which such noted players as Amelia Bingham, Mary Shaw and Frank Worthington starred in theatre history. "The Capitol" a play of social and political Washington with many of its scenes enacted on the American capital, is announced for presentation at the Regent Tomorrow to Saturday, matinee daily along with a two-reel Century comedy titled "Ten Second," Pathe News, new Vodevil Movies and a Kinograph.

"MUTT AND JEFF" HERE FRIDAY

Unless all indications miscarry, the latest of the Mutt and Jeff series of musical comedies, "Mutt and Jeff Honeymoon," which will hold forth at Griffin's this Friday night, Dec. 15th for one night only, is sure to eclipse any previous effort in which this former pair have figured as the pioneers of unalloyed laughter and mirth. Their well-known propensity for disseminating fun of the lively and fascinating sort receives an additional impetus in this brighter and newer of mirth provokers. For instance, little Jeff, for the first time in his illustrious but checkered career, finds his counsel and services invoked help in balking the efforts assembling of Mutt's shrewish and ostensibly unreasonable wife. However, the best of intentions, no matter how zealously and sincerely we try invariably often go astray. It does in this case. Therefore, the outcome can be better imagined than described. For real fun, screams, guffaws, merriment, gayety and joy, the comedy is said to exceed the expectation of even its author, Ned Leroy, or the producer himself. The cast is a large and competent one.

WESLEY BARRY IN "SCHOOL DAYS" AT GRIFFIN'S TOMORROW

"School Days, Dear Old Golden Rule Days." That was a song, a very popular one which swept the country a few years ago. The title has surged to a picture which carries a tremendous appeal, an appeal to the heart and the soul. Written by William Nigh and Walter DeLeon and directed by the former, the picture takes one on a long journey to the years of youthful joy. Who is the guide? Freckle-faced Wesley Barry, the precocious youngster whose adaptability to the part almost makes one believe that he might have been the inspiration for the song.

It is a picture charged with human joy, on with homespun touches, that shows the making of a youth, a boy inclined to delicious mischief, but who develops character by being brought up sharp with realities. He goes to the city and becomes disillusioned with his artificial environment and he returns to the country—the ridiculous boy again. He is a 6 reel comedy drama brimful of laughter, and will be exhibited at Griffin's tomorrow night, and Saturday, matinee and night, where it is no doubt receive the same popular reception it has received wherever it has been exhibited in Ontario.

"False Alarm," a two-reel Camp Bell comedy, the third chapter of the thrilling Western play "Buffalo Bill," and a Travelogue are announced for exhibition on the same program.

NEILAN'S "BITS O FLIFE"
A DISTINCT SUCCESS

Marshall Neilan's latest First National featured production, "Bits of Life," is the feature attraction at Griffin's tonight.

The success of this innovation in film entertainment would indicate the more productions of this type may be expected in the future.

Marshall Neilan has very cleverly combined the works of four author in "Bits of Life."

Four separate and distinct stories—"The Bad Samaritan," by Thomas McMorrow; "The Man Who Knew Everything," by Walter Trumbull; "Hop," by Hugh Wiley, and "The Strange Adventure," by Marshall Neilan—form the basis of the production with one general theme. Each story is complete in itself, interpreted by the largest cast of prominent players ever gathered together for a Neilan picture.

Among the celebrities of stage and screen who are distinguishing themselves in "Bits of Life" are Rockcliffe Fellowes, Fred Burton, James Bradbury, Jr., Harriet Hammond, Noah Beery, Lon Chaney, Wesley Barry, John Bowers, Anna May Wong, and Todd Sanderson.

"A Charmed Life" a two reel Vitagraph Comedy, a two reel Western Drama, featuring Harry Carey, and a Travelogue, are being exhibited on the same program.

RESOLUTION FOR CHURCH UNION

Also One Other Resolution Passed by Kingston Presbytery at Quarterly Meeting

Before the Presbytery of Kingston closed its quarterly meeting, which was held in St. Andrew's Church, Napanee, on Tuesday, two notices of motion were handed in which will likely ensure a lively discussion at the next meeting, which will be held in Chalmer's Church, Kingston, on the first Tuesday in March. One of these notices was read by Rev. A. J. Wilson, Napanee, and was to the effect that the Presbytery overture to the General Assembly to proceed as expeditiously as possible to consummate the proposed organic union with the Methodist and Congregational churches. The other notice was read by Rev. R. A. Cranston, Trenton, and was to the effect that the General Assembly be overtured to proceed no farther with the union negotiations until the present membership of the Church has had an opportunity of voting upon the question. Mr. Cranston claimed that only about one-third of the present membership had voted for union, and that before property is transferred, or the constitution of the Church changed, at least two-thirds should vote in favor of it.

A letter was read from Mrs. D. V. Sinclair thanking the Presbytery for the resolution of sympathy passed at the last meeting.

Rev. R. G. Fry, who is supplying Burnbrae, presented a certificate of ministerial standing from the Presbytery of Kindersley, and Rev. G. S. Wood, Fenbore, a similar one from the Presbytery of Minnedosa.

The congregations of Wilton and Glenvale asked that the Presbytery give them the interest on $1,900, realized from the sale of the manse at Harrowsmith, said interest to be applied in meeting the current expenses. This the Presbytery refused on the ground that the money was held in trust, and to be used for the purchase of a manse in Wilton when one might be required.

Rev. J. L. Blacklock asked leave of absence till May 1st. As he is now in Boston prosecuting post-graduate study the Presbytery could do nothing but grant his request, but the field will receive no financial aid till Mr. Blacklock returns.

As the session of Zion Church, Kingston, had made application for the services of a deaconess, and as the Woman's Missionary Society once offered to send such a worker to this vicinity the Presbytery recommended to the W.M.S. to take into consideration the advisability of appointing a deaconess to Zion church.

The Students' Christian Movement of Queen's University asked the Presbytery to assist in sending delegates to a convention to be held in Toronto from Dec. 28th to Jan. 3rd next. As the Presbytery has no funds for such a purpose the request was refused but the Presbytery recommended congregations which have students in their membership to give assistance. Expenses are pooled, and the cost to each will be $30.

Rev. Dr. S. J. Wilson, reporting for the committee on the experimental conference of students, expressed gratification at the number and the standing of theological students in Queen's. He suggested that next year one or three of the students be asked to attend a meeting of Presbytery to relate their experiences in their mission fields.

Though the Presbytery fell short by $676 of the $17,500 which it accepted as its budget allocation for this year, it agreed to the same allocation for next year. Rev. A. J. Wilson was instructed to prepare and issue a leaflet setting forth sufficient quantities to give one to each family within the bounds. Two congregations in the Presbytery are paying less than the minimum stipend to their ministers, and the attention of the Home Mission subcommittee will be called to the fact.

Rev. R. Simpson, Stirling, gave a stirring address on Foreign Missions. It was agreed to secure a returned missionary to make a tour of the whole Presbytery in the spring.

Rev. A. McLean resigned the pastorate of the St. John's Pittsburgh portion of his charge, and a meeting of Presbytery will be held in Kingston on Dec. 26th to deal with the resignation.

Rev. R. A. Cranston, the Moderator, presided. Those present from Belleville were Rev. Messrs. Ramsay, Kerr, MacTavish, Ministers, and Messrs Wm. McIntosh and I. L. Moore, Elders.

"GAG AND SCANDAL" CRIED LABOR PARTY AS 16-HOUR SESSION CLOSED

London, Dec. 13.—The supplementary estimate for a million pounds for the relief of unemployment was agreed to, by the House of Commons early today, toward the close of a sixteen hour session, prolonged by the tactics of the Labor Party. The motion for closure, made by Stanley Baldwin, carried at 5.30 this morning amid cries of "Gag and Scandal".

SMALL TOWNS PRODUCE PROS.

Many of Major League Baseball Players Are Products of Small Towns

What an ecstatic wishing those born in the little towns would give to be big city or big-town delegates to baseball.

The small towns carry the class of the game by a most unseemly margin. Something after this order—of which how many were known to you before?

Wamps Tex.—Rogers Hornsby.
Manchester, Ohio—George Sisler.
Royston, Go.—Ty Cobb.
Hubbard, Tex.—Tris Speaker.
Millerton, N.Y.—Eddie Collins.
Bluffton, Ind.—Everett Scott.
Walsa, Va.—Walter Cehang.
Oakland City, Ind.—Eddie Roush.
Morocco, Ind.—Some Rice.
Hamilton, Md.—Zach Wheat.
Shankslin, Pa.—Stanley Covelskie.
Harvill, Ill.—Ray Schalk.
Clear Lake, Wis.—Burleigh Grimes.
Humboldt, Kan.—Walter Johnson.
Braisted, Minn.—Joe Bush.
Beckerville, W. Va.—Wilbur Cooper.

Every city from 100,000 up to 600,000 has almost every corner lot occupied with baseball talent, Sunday leagues and what not.

What is it the smaller villages furnish us per cent. of the stars of the leading players?

We take at random above fourteen leading names. How many ever heard of the towns they came from—before they came?

Among the few exceptions are Babe Ruth and Ed. Rommell from Baltimore; Schocker, Cincinnati; Dick Kerr, from St. Louis; Frank Frisch, New York; Waite Hoyt, of Brookly; Hollocher, of St. Louis; and Bill Doak, of Pittsburgh. But there are not many more.

With all the sem-pro. amateur, city league baseball played around New York, Chicago, Cleveland, St. Louis, Boston, Philadelphia, etc., the big town would seem to have it over the village, like a circus tent. But it's all the other way.

NO DEAD WOOD TO OLYMPIC GAMES

From a practical viewpoint, there was one outstanding decision reached at the closing sessions of the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada here Saturday.

In brief, the Olympic committee will send to Paris only those athletes who are considered to have a fair chance of scoring points for Canada. "Javelin throwers who will get beaten sixty feet will have no place on the team," was the expression used by Pat J. McQueen, of Toronto, who was appointed chairman of the Olympic committee, as indicating the practical and non-sentimental stand which it was proposed to take in the selection of the Maple Leaf squad of 1924.

On the occasion of our last Olympic trial games, the writer pointed out that, exclusive of Earl Thomson, the hardiing star, that no outside possibilities in the weight-throwing department, cold facts and figures gave the Canadian team no possible chance of scoring points in the track and field games, and that the bulk of this section of the team was only on a sight-seeing trip. "No more of that," said Mr. McQueen, after Saturday's meeting. "People are tired of sending athletes who haven't a remote chance and we'll have to get right down to a practical basis."

All the sentiment of the Olympic committee, which convened after the A.A.U. of C. gathering was in favor of an immediate start on proceedings towards the selection of a team, and the feeling in the direction of sending only those athletes with a real chance to score points was the general sense of the gathering, even if only three or four track and field men are sent.

Just how there are only three or four athletes in the Dominion who will fill the specifications, as the delegates agreed, in informal talk over the situation. Outstanding is Jack Conflan, the western sprinter, whose 100 yards dash record of 9 3-5 seconds was accepted as a new Canadian mark, replacing the 9 4-5 effort of Bobby Kerr—the latter a real sportsman who refused to go to the last Olympics because he felt he had no chance to win. This western flyer, together with Miller, the Surrey, N.B., high jumper, and McDonald, Chatgoistown, P.E.I., youngster, who is soaring better than 22 feet in the running brted jump, though only in his teens, and Cameron, the weight man, are the only known real possibilities, though the trials of next summer may bring forth unexpected possibilities.

QUAKER OATS TEAM RECEIVE GORDON CUP

The Quaker Oats football team of Peterboro, winners of the city championship, was Monday night presented with the Gordon Cup, emblematic of its honour. The presentation was made by G. N. Gordon, K.C., M.P., the donor of the cup, at a banquet given the members of the team by the Quaker Oats company.

At 7 o'clock the party to the number of twenty-four gathered in the large recreation room of the left wing of the factory where a bountious repast was served under the supervision of competent carterers. After the inner man had been satisfied George A. MacDonald, manager of the local plant welcomed the guests and thanked them for the good work accomplished by the team introduced Mr. Gordon.

President William Perdrv of the Quaker Oats Football Club in accepting the trophy thanked Mr. Gordon for both the cup which he had given and the words of praise he had spoken. In congratulating the team on the success of their efforts, he said that they had won more than the cup for they had also won the plaudits of all sport lovers in the city by their conduct on the field.

Arthur Lyons, the manager of the team also spoke a few words of congratulation to his charges and pointed out that the prospects were bright for another championship team next year.

A recitation by Joseph Johns and a song by Vernon Morphet completed the entertainment for the evening.

ARTIFICAL ICE FOR ST. CATHARINES

At a hockey meeting at Welland on Tuesday, Frank (Tony) Dixon, representing St. Catharines, said that they had plans ready for an artificial ice plant for next Winter, and wanted to make a start to show that hockey could help support the artificial ice project. A silver cup for the junior district winners was donated by E. Brassford of Welland.

WILL SIKI MEET CARPENTIER AGAIN?

Siki Reported to Have Jumped Into Seine River Turns up Later With a Limp

Paris, Dec. 11.—A second Carpentier-Siki fight seems a certainty, according to Le Journal, which points out that President Roussou, of the Boxing Federation, is inclined to be clement toward the Senegalese.

"I will box Siki under any condition at a date to be fixed upon my return to Paris this evening," Carpentier telegraphed Le Journal from Brighton, England, last night, "as a favor."

"Please say that to beat Siki would be the greatest joy of my life," the telegram said. It added that Georges was to get the opinion of surgeons as to the conditions of his hands, which were injured in his bout with Siki.

A report is current that Siki has disappeared, but neither his friends nor the police seem greatly alarmed. The newspapers suggest that he has been spirited away from the clutches of interviewers.

Siki appeared this morning to deny in person that he had committed suicide, or that he had been thrown into the river, as had been widely reported.

Siki was limping painfully in his right leg this morning as he left his suburban home and walked to the city gate, where he entered an automobile and disappeared. He avoided any explanation of the cause of his limp, which apparently accounted for reports that he had been thrown into the Seine. The Senegalese was absent yesterday and today from his usual haunts in the neighbourhood of the Avenue Orleans. His wife explained that he stayed home Sunday to play with his dog.

EVANS TO MANAGE QUEEN'S SENIORS

Kingston, Ont., Dec. 12.—At the meeting of the hockey players and supporters last night the managers were elected for the various teams that Queen's is to enter in the Inter-collegiate and O. H. A. The officers chosen were: President, Dr. Johnston; vice-president, C. Gibson; secretary, George Awrey.

TYSON AT OSHAWA

Tyson, catcher of Cobourg's Central League team for the last two years, is now a resident of Oshawa, where he is playing indoor ball with the Motor team. In four times up recently he had three hits, one being a homer.

Evidently Cobourg, the home shoe or hose slow town had no ties on Tyson, and furthermore it appears as though the Motor car town is looking into the future far as human eye can see."

QUEEN'S TRAINER BREAKS BONE IN HAND

Kingston, Ont., Dec. 12—Billie Hughes, Queen's trainer, had the misfortune to break a small bone in his right hand during the boxing workout last night. The bones are putting considerable pep in their sparring, and their trainer has his hands full sparring with the men, many of whom are from 15 to 50 pounds heavier that he is. He is game enough to take them all on, however, and one of his solid punches last night gave him the bad hand with which he is now handicapped. He had it X-rayed at the hospital today, and the picture showed that an old fracture had been re-opened. He was on the job in usual this morning, looking after the hockey players or other athletes who came in for treatment.

Reports from Grimsby on Monday state that the Habitant hockey squad, (Canadiens) are working hard and are getting into good condition.

Didier Pitre is reported into shape faster than was expected, and he is being groomed to play as a spare defence player, a contract today to play again for that team next season.

CORCORAN GREAT RIDER

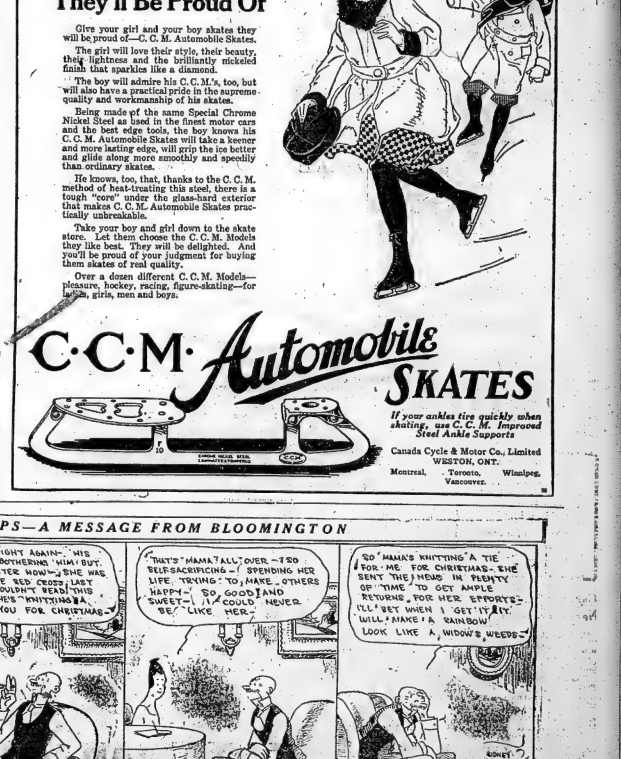

Thirteen winning mounts was Corcoran's record for the six racing days at New Orleans last week. He scored triples on Monday and Tuesday, doubles on Wednesday and Thursday, rode one victor before his accident on Friday and wound up with another double Saturday. He has acquired a following equal to that of Chick Lang last winter.

WAGNER'S PIANO COMES TO STATES

New York, Dec. 13.—Richard Wagner's piano, perhaps the most valuable in the world, has arrived here from Bamburg. The instrument, an old-fashioned Beckstein grand, was presented to Wagner by King Ludwig, of Bavaria, and upon it the great musician composed many of his masterpieces.

For years the piano's whereabouts was unknown, until Robert H. Prosser, of the A.E.F., came upon it and arranged for its shipment to this country. It will be placed in the Metropolitan Museum or the Smithsonian Institution, Mr. Prosser announced.

LABOR AND IMMIGRATION

From some newspaper reports that have appeared it seems that a representative Labor speaker has on the public platform denounced the efforts of the Canadian Colonization Association to populate the sparsely settled districts of the Canadian West. Now among the most pressing problems of this great Dominion of ours, the question of population is one of the most serious. There are two aspects to the problem; one is to hold what we already have, and the other is to increase that population by every legitimate and desirable means, immigration included. Of course the first factor to receive attention is to remedy that cause which creates emigration. At the same time we must keep our eyes on the problem of peopling our great western areas of sparsely settled arable lands.

The contention of this labor leader was that immigration that brought into the country men who would take up our vacant farm lands, would overcrowd the labor market. The reasoning is wrong and will not stand up against any logical or intelligent analysis.

Organized labor has always been opposed to the immigration of skilled mechanics and trained laborers. But this opposition, when extended to agricultural settlers coming into the country, is absolutely ridiculous, and indefensible. Any such policy that resembles an "air-tight" Canada, shutting the gates and putting up the bars against all newcomers is not the hair nor paticle. Canada needs, in the immediate future, a greater proportion of her population on the land, engaged in agricultural pursuits. Such a course, brings those real conditions to every hundredth of our population. Unemployment exists in the urban centres to a greater or less extent, and, except in boom times, will continue unless we have a larger proportion of our population on the land. We should develop our resources through such a channel and instead of overcrowding the labor market, the effect would be just the opposite. Every additional farmer we obtain, increases our domestic demand for manufactured articles, and thus urban labor is kept employed. It does not seem possible that the rank and file of the labor classes would be favorable to the policy of excluding immigrants of a good type, who desired to take up farming pursuits. Many of our present day problems would be the easier of solution if we could increase our population of basic producers such as farmers really are.

A BRITISH FARM COLONY

Lieut.-Col. Croft, who is a member of the British House of Commons, tendered a unique suggestion recently. He proposes to have the British Government inaugurate a "farm colony" scheme, and the idea appears to be based on a sound principle. The suggestion is that the British Government obtain a large tract of land in the Dominions—in Canada or Australia—build whatever necessary transportation may be required, and conduct a large agricultural training institution. He believes that 200,000 young men could be taken care of in this way, and placed in conditions from which they would gradually take a new and vigorous start. The task of encouraging emigration is as important to Britain as the obtaining of suitable immigration is to Canada. The big obstacle is the lack of facilities for transforming an urban population into an agriculturally trained one.

There is no large, readily convertible tract of land close to the railways, in Western Canada, that could be turned over to the British Government without cost. Most of the land within fifteen or twenty miles of railways is privately owned. The only exceptions are school lands, and these are not in the large blocks necessary. But it, as Lieut.-Col. Croft suggests, the British Government build a railway to a new region, using British materials and British workmen, Canada ought to be entirely willing to provide the land. The Crown still has great areas of good land in districts at present not served by transportation. If the British Government financed a colony for the purpose of taking care of young men wanting to emigrate, to get adequate training for a new life in Canada it would deserve the heartiest co-operation from all Canadian Governments and institutions, because that movement would be the source of a great strengthening of our already too much restricted utilization of land. Only an eighth of our good farm land is under cultivation. The agricultural output is only one-half, in value, the output of our manufactures. Our manufacturing institutions have been living, to a very considerable extent, not on current consumption, but on capital expenditures in constructing intended to serve a future growth of population.

The only way that growth of population can come is by suitable immigration, and the relation of our Canadian citizens in this country. The development of more "middlemen's business" will not help, for a lot of the middleman fee on the productive efforts of the producer, and on the earnings of the consumer. The Vancouver World, recently referring to conditions in British Columbia, said:

"We have valleys to clear and to till; we have forests to clear and logs to turn into lumber; we have mines of coal and ore to develop; industries to push; fisheries and canneries to reclaim for the white race. We do not want people to come here with money to buy something to hold for an advance. We have enough people here now who are parasiting on the country. We want men who can work, or who can organize work. If they have money to help them in so doing, they will be doubly welcome. If they have muscle, or knowledge, or capital, and a will to work, they will find a place and a reward here in due time."

The British Government is devoting fifteen millions a year to emigration and overseas settlement, and is succeeding in its purpose, largely with the co-operation of Australia. Canada's Government has not yet taken any direct steps to join in co-operative immigration work in conjunction with the British Government.

PASSING COMMENT

The Dominion forest reserves, which are the areas unsuitable for agriculture in the Prairie Provinces and Railway Belt of British Columbia set apart permanently for forest production, include an area of 35,185 square miles or nearly twenty-three million acres.

HERE AND THERE

A RICH MAN BROUGHT TO TERMS.

Robert Carrick, one of the richest bankers in Scotland a few generations ago, was as mean as he was wealthy. Being one day visited by a deputation for a new subscription toward a new hospital, he signed for two guineas; and one of the gentlemen expressing disappointment at the smallness of the sum, he said, "Really, I cannot afford more."

The deputation next visited Wilson, one of the largest manufacturers in the city, who, on seeing the list, cried: "What! Carrick only two guineas!"

When informed of what the banker had said, Wilson remarked, "Wait, I will give him a lesson."

Taking his check-book, he filled in a check for ten thousand pounds, the full amount of his deposit at Carrick's bank, and sent it for immediate payment.

Five minutes later the banker appeared, breathless, and asked: "What is the matter, Wilson?"

"Nothing the matter with me," replied Wilson; "but those gentlemen informed me that you couldn't afford more than two guineas for the hospital. 'Hello,' thinks I, 'if that's the case, there must be something wrong, and I'll get my money out as soon as possible'."

Carrick took the subscription list, erased the two guineas and substituted fifty, on which Wilson immediately tore up the check.

The hospital was built, and here the best part of the story begins, for the man who was thus forced, against his will, to raise the amount of his subscription became to take an interest in the work the hospital was doing. Before many years he contributed sufficient to fully endow and maintain it.

THE SPITE-FENCE.

My neighbor built between himself and me
A fence that gloomed my yard; the top was spiked:
It symbolled his spleen and meant that he
Had barred himself from one whom he disliked.

I could not shut my heart against the man.
Above us arched a common sky and stone
A sun that God had meant for all; no ban
Could keep His air and light for one alone.

I thought: The slugs that crawl along the soil,
The birds that climb the air on wings of hope,
The fish that cut the wave, the beasts that toil
And prowl all within the Master's scope;

All things, inert or having life, are kept
Within the plans of Him who lit the skies;
For Him our earth is but a dust-mote, swept
Through space by energy which He supplies.

And so, in all humility, I went
My way and did what kindnesses I could,
Remembering that all of us are blent,
Despite ourselves, in one great brotherhood.

One day my neighbor stopped me, passing by
Of old he never did, but with a frown
Or sneer would hasten on. I heard him sigh:
"Brother," he said, "that fence is coming down."

PRESS OPINIONS

ANOTHER CANADIAN ACHIEVES HONOR.

(Mail and Empire.)

Another Canadian-born American has attained high honor in the United States in the person of James Couzens, Mayor of Detroit and newly appointed Senator. Mr. Couzens was appointed by the Governor of the State to fill the seat recently relinquished by Senator Newberry whose habit an enormous amount of money was spent in the primaries, and whose presence in the Senate had become a national scandal. Mr. Couzens was born in Chatham and as a youth was a newsboy on the trains. Later he was a telegrapher and an employee in a coal office in Detroit. He had not earned large sums of money but had about $2,500 saved up when fortune in the homely form of Henry Ford knocked at his door. In those days, twenty-five hundred dollars was more important to Ford than perhaps twenty-five million would be today. Couzens believed in Ford and in the future of the motor industry. He invested his $2,500 and secured besides his stock a job as bookkeeper in the Ford Company. As the business grew so did Couzens' investment and his salary. He became perhaps Ford's closest business associate, and his ability opened equally increasing tests that were imposed on it. A few years ago when still a comparatively young man, he found that he had all the money he wanted. The death of his son seemed to have deprived him of all further ambition as a money-maker and he sold out his Ford interests. It is rumored that he received $30,000,000 for his original investment of $2,500.

But he was not content to remain idle, and he thought that he saw an opportunity of serving the citizens of Detroit as their mayor. He was elected and threw himself into the task of solving the street railway problem of the town. By personal purchase of some interests and by convincing the city that it should purchase some others he eventually carried through the scheme that had hung fire for years. Mr. Couzens said recently that he did not believe that municipal ownership is the more economical method. Undoubtedly politics would interfere with it, but he takes the view that the people control here as much where or they paid a four-cent fare or an eight-cent fare so long as they knew that no private interest was profiting thereby, and that the ideal was service. Though starting life as a poor boy, Senator Couzens will be ranked among the rich men in the United States Senate where rich men are common. But his record of public service is a guarantee that he is not in the Senate merely to protect the privileges. He will naturally belong to the progressive group, and the general comment upon the choice is that it is almost unanimously favorable. He accepts the office absolutely unpledged to anybody or anything. He is being hailed in the press as somewhat of a new type of Senator, one who found the way to eminence in national affairs through success in handling municipal business, just as Grover Cleveland found it in Buffalo and Joseph Chamberlain in Birmingham. Canada will rejoice in the continued success of one of her sons abroad.

SUITABLE CLOTHES FOR STORMY DAYS

Appropriateness is the keynote of chic. And it is an appropriateness which applies to the detail of even the smallest nicknacks. A really smart woman knows when the mistake of wearing the wrong neckwear, and for this she is just as careful about the hat and so on which she appears on stormy day as she is about her most formal costumes. Many women fail, however, to take into consideration the fact that every day is not a sunny one, and when bad weather comes it finds them unprepared.

Now when a rainy day one sees innumerable women with fastening shoe ends below the bottom of a coat, with the thinest of silk stockings and with dainty patent leather pumps above. Never, by any chance, can these women consider themselves smart. Far better for them to follow the example of fashionable women who dress as carefully, and, what is more to the purpose, as suitably for stormy days as they do for any other occasion. They reserve for days like this a smart, simple suit which rain or snow will not injure, a topcoat specially adapted to bad weather, and most appropriate shoes and stockings which are in keeping with the character of his rest of their costume.

The Daily Recipe

GRANDMOTHER'S COOKIES

1 cup butter
1 cup powdered sugar
1½ cups flour
1 egg

Soften but do not melt the butter, add the flour to it and rub well together; add the sugar, then the beaten egg, kneed thoroughly, set aside to chill. Roll out thinly on a floured board, cut into various shapes and bake on a floured pan in a moderately hot oven—350 to 375 degrees F.—for about five or seven minutes.

If desired, the mixture may be divided into two or three portions, each of these being differently flavored—one portion with aniseed, a second with a little grated lemon rind, and the third with caraway seeds; or a third cup of chopped nuts may be worked into one portion of the dough.

Model Aeroplane Building

ARTICLE VIII

How to Fly Your Plane

(This is the last of eight lessons which will how any boy can make a complete model aeroplane which will fly under its own power. Warren De Lenoy, writer of the articles, was formerly president of the Illinois Model Aero Club, a group of boys who build and fly their own models and who hold nine of the ten world's records for model aeroplane flying.)

Rather than a mystery, we find the motor-base must be found by experiment, but is about as shown in the drawing. It is attached by screwing the underside of the motorstick into the wire clips on the wing. The small clip is to the front, the slide toward the propeller.

It must be remembered that on a model there is no heavy weight in front corresponding to the engine of a real airplane. Therefore the wing which lifts the weight is not at the front, but at the middle of the motor-base, just behind the point where it balances.

Wind Propeller Clockwise.

The propeller, if made according to directions, should be wound clockwise as viewed from the front. A hundred and fifty turns are enough for a trial. Wind and set the model on a smooth surface where there is plenty of room. Release the propeller and model, at the same time giving it a slight push forward. It should take a short run, rise, and soar gracefully. If it rises too quickly and stalls, move the wing a fraction of an inch to the rear. If it does not rise, move the wing slightly forward.

By practice with your machine you will find out any weak points and can strengthen them. Most boys never stop with their first plane, but after they have built one they are always working on a new one which will break all the records made by the first model.

These little machines will make remarkable flights, and the work of building your model will be many times repaid by the fun you will get out of it.

The Short Story Jr.

THE STRANGE PERSON ON THE TRAIN

"Now don't lose your ticket and don't speak to any strange person on the train," Mrs. Adams kissed Ellen goodbye and watched her scramble up the steps. "I do hope she gets along all right," she sighed. "She seems so young to be going so far all alone, but I've given her all the good advice I can think of."

Ellen was so full of good advice that she could think of nothing else. She sat gingerly on the edge of the seat clutching her umbrella tightly in one hand, her pocketbook in the other. The train was nearly full. She hoped that no strange person would sit with her.

A solemn looking man in a black suit came into the car. Ellen had a queer feeling that she had seen him before. Smiling a little he sat down beside her. This was the kind of a man her mother had warned her to beware of. Ellen held her pocket book tighter. Yes, matter what happened she must not speak to him.

"May I put your bag on the rack?" he asked. Ellen did not want him to, but she nodded. She felt that she must not antagonize him. It was too harder to keep her eye on her bag, umbrella, hat, and pocketbook all at once when it was up there. Then she felt that she must watch the stranger by her side, too. He acted so queer that she was half afraid of him.

The conductor came through the train and the man produced a clergyman's ticket. Ellen gave a frightened gasp. That showed that he was also honest. He was trying to pass himself off as a clergyman to get lower rates. Ellen stirred, uneasily. What could she do?

The man looked at her; and again she was seized with a cyber feeling that she had seen him before. A thrill of horror went up her spine. Very likely he was a criminal and she had seen his pictures in the paper. She felt that he was watching her closely and wondered moving room enough aside to sit with the fat woman, but decided that she didn't look very kind, either.

She knew that he was going to speak to her before he did. What should she do? Her mother had especially warned her not to speak to strangers, and particularly to one who looked and acted so strange. Ellen felt that he must be especially dangerous.

He touched her on the arm to attract her attention. Ellen jumped and clutched her pocketbook till it hurt her hand.

"Now I am saying," she corrected herself, sobbing.

"Saying what must always be true, grannie, dear," pleaded Oona. "Oh! say I am your own bairn, grannie, for I have none in all the world to love me but you!"—and the long pentup sense of bewilderment and desolation had full sway, and the young girl wept out her heart's sorrow upon the breast of her lifelong friend."

LINKED LIVES

By

D. Kinmount Roy

The mouth of the tunnel was seldom visited by anyone; all the same, MacAlpin had no wish to leave any sign of their presence, and for this reason he crossed and detached the rope from the tunnel end, and started to return. The structure was of the frailest, having been thrown together in haste for its present ...ate purpose; and when Donald set out to return it swayed and creaked under his weight for a second or two, and then, with a crash, gave way. MacAlpin heard some such crash, and held the rope, which was securely fastened to a tree on the bank, and by means of it, he sprung, as lightly as a boy, on a ledge of rock and looking up he met the grey face of the old soldier looking down in white terror of amazement. Donald's sense of humour was never far distant, and with his free hand he lifted his bonnet gayly in salutation to the old soldier.

"Graham was not afraid of fighting, with the proper weapons, and under efficient leadership, but the way MacAlpin fairly tempted Providence, and did things which the Almighty plainly intended should be left to the goats and the conies and such-like creatures, took the old soldier's breath away. MacAlpin had no misgivings of any sort, and with a stout rope he was in perfect safety; but in addition to his natural courage and strong commonsense there was an elevation of mind in connection with this enterprise that day which effectually shut out all sense of failure.

While taking breath, and seeing that the rope was free, several deer on the other side of the river passed at their utmost speed. MacAlpin threw a warning signal to Graham, and lay low against the bank. They were not a moment too soon, as a party of keepers followed the deer, but fortunately, too much occupied with the business in hand to pay attention to what might be going forward on the other side of the river. At another time MacAlpin might have been uneasy, as he knew he was well-known for many miles, and the river, at the point where he had left him was narrow enough for observation to so narrow as to fill him with misgivings. He soon regained the bank however, and made the best haste possible under the light lasted; when the night closed in they rested and waited for the moon. The hut was welcome to them all, not only for rest, but for an opportunity of hearing what had passed in the interval. MacAlpin told of Reginald Hardcastle's self-imposed task of finding the supposed skeleton of Oona, and remarked heartily—He is not a bad laddie, he is not a bad laddie. Reginald means well, I know he means well!"

Graham groaned in horror at such laxity of thought, as became an orthodox Beadle, with highly important functions to discharge.

"Not-bad!" he repeated in amazement; "they are a' bad—every ane o' them!"

"Nae na, Graham, not a'," MacAlpin said quietly.

"Weel," remarked the old soldier, with some deliberation, 'maist o' them, if we mann be sae charitable and precise like."

"Aweel, MacAlpin agreed, 'perhaps maist o' them; but mind Alpie, the wers' want may be changed, and how be but honest and good soul; and the puir laddie has had nae chance.'

'Nae change!' Graham snorted, in hot displeasure, 'nae chance! . . Vessels o' wrath, I say, vessels o' wrath, fitted for destruction! Why man, it's in the Buik!'

Donald looked troubled, and his strong face worked strangely. 'It's a grand buik,' he said slowly at last, 'a grand buik, and says mickle o' mercy, and peety, and loving-kindness and compassion; and I was readin' this very noon that Jesus gaur' His sel' even wha can tell if the soul be not good, even when it looks barren?'

'Wha can tell, indeed!' Alan retorted quickly, 'neither you nor I, not any ane.'

'Vera' true, vera' true,' MacAlpin admitted sadly, 'even good soul may grow scant, the vera' tempest o' men's passions lay lay waste the best, until naught it foul and rank weeds can grow in it. Man may practise lying and deceit until he kens not the truth when it comes smiling and heartsome to his door, bringing love and peace to the vera' threshold o' his life. Oh! the peety o' it, Alan, the peety o' it, when sinful men slap to the door in the face o' mercy, and instead, hold out their hands to welcome foulness and death! But Reginald is young, and there is much hope, yes, much hope.'

Alan made no reply, and Oona listened in awe and wonder.

No word was spoken for a short space. The swish of the water near by mingled with the deeper note of the distant waterfall and filled the silence with their own speech; and once or twice the startled whirr of small wings warned them that they were reckoned intruders by the feathered wanderers of the night.

The moon had risen, and they began to move forward. "A great stillness was upon them, a kind of hush of expectancy, as though unseen forces had suddenly swooped about them, touching the mysterious and hidden springs of their being. They were no longer a little band of three, alone on the edge of a desolate moor, wit grim danger, perhaps, lurking in the shadows. They were instead a veritable host, inspired by high courage and fair hopes, their minds garrisoned by sublime peace, as though a legion of angels had received a charge concerning them; and had swept into line an invincible army of unseen and unmeasured power.

It was nearing morning when they reached the village, and Oona was once more clasped in the arms of the faithful Janet.

"My bairn, my bairn!" the aged woman crooned, as she held her in a close embrace; 'my ain bairn!'

"What am I saying!", she corrected herself, sobbing.

FRENCH STEAMER FOUNDERS AT SEA

St. John, N.B., Dec. 12.—S.O.S. messages from the French tramp steamer Chalutier Auguste C. Blond, which foundered at sea last Thursday was picked up by the Canadian Pacific steamship Metagama, which was en route from Glasgow, Scotland, to this port and which arrived here today. Commander G. C. Evans received the distress call at 10.45 last Thursday morning and in an accompanying message was informed that she was in latitude 41.39 and longitude 44.40 and required immediate assistance. The position given was twenty miles from the Metagama and Commander Evans put about and started for the scene. Before arriving at the given position he received another message saying the cargo steamer Golden Gate brings no assistance". At noon the Metagama reached the position given but there was no sign of any steamer and while cruising around another message received, giving a corrected position which was 216 miles away, and the Metagama then headed Nelson was standing by, and taking off the crew as the steamer was sinking.

Tokio, Dec. 12.—Prince Hirohito, Prince Regent of Japan is seriously ill with measles. He has a temperature of 104.9.

UNIQUE PUNISHMENTS FOR RECKLESS AUTOISTS

Chicago, Dec. 12.—Heavier fines, jail sentences and trips through morgues and hospitals to view dead and injured victims of reckless automobiling are becoming effective curbs in many parts of the middle and far west, a digest from the reports of several states shows.

Fines alone, the reports indicate, are not effective. In Chicago and Cook County, despite increasingly heavy fines, the death toll in automobile accidents for the fiscal year ended November 30, was 726, as compared with 650 last year and 543 this year before. There were 70 automobile deaths in November of this year.

In Louisville, where 41 persons were killed by automobiles in the first eleven months of the year, fines also have failed, officials say. One police judge there imposes fines of $5 for each mile per hour on speeders, and adds jail sentences if the prisoner was intoxicated.

A successful campaign was launched at Detroit more than a year ago when Judge Charles L. Bartlett began sending speeders to jail for terms of one to fifteen days. Among those sentenced was John Duval Dodge, wealthy young man, who served five days.

Recently speeding returned to Detroit and Judge Bartlett began conducting funerals through the morgues and hospitals so see the results of speeding. Arrests the week after the trips started dropped from 76 to 25.

In Cincinnati jail sentences have been invoked, and in some cases divers license revoked.

Cleveland, with 116 deaths and 2,286 injuries in traffic accidents up to the middle of November, is employing workhouse sentences and morgue and hospital visits, as well as fines.

In Des Moines Police John Hammond had ordered intoxicated drivers held without bail; while juiors are adding jail sentences in many cases to heavy fines.

Judge George E. Mix, of St. Louis, who assesses fines as high as $300, has added life law school to his court.

In Indiana the secretary of state has revoked six autoists' licenses, on recommendations of courts and has promised to continue his cooperation. Judge Delbert Wilmeth of the Indianapolis court has added jail sentences to fines on third convictions.

Kansas City has had occasional fines on jail sentences, but no continued campaign against speeders. Police take license numbers of traffic law violators and on the third violation a fine of $25 is imposed.

Judge W. F. Wapnick, of Omaha, takes groups of speeders to hospitals in the police patrol to see their victims and then assesses fines.

Judge Sylvester J. McAtee, of San Francisco recently sentenced a speeder to sixty days in jail, and announced he would continue a drastic campaign against traffic law violators.

Rubber shares are strong and Liberty Bonds gained in New York this morning.

Sterling exchange advances to $4.30¾ (d Montreal) this a.m., and $4.30 in New York. N.Y. funds at ¼ per cent. premium.

There is no indication of a renewal of public participation in the Montreal and Toronto markets. The stage seems to be abandoned to the professionals.

The mining market at Toronto is quite active with a daily turnover of around 175,000 shares. Hattie mines seem to be particularly favored, and the rumor that English interests are accumulating the stock seems to have aroused considerable interest.

The Wheat Market.

Chicago wheat touched a new high price record for May, but the futures market did not close at the day's best figure. Experts have suggested to the President that seventy millions be loaned to Europe to buy grain. This proposal caused higher prices and played a big part in the speculative rise.

At Winnipeg prices declined 2¼c. at the opening. A broader export business is looked for and there is a suspicion that the European buyer may be forced to do business on a large scale.

Wheat prices at Winnipeg—Dec., 1.05½; May, 1.09½; July, 1.09½.

At Chicago—Dec., 1.21½; May, 1.30½; July, 1.10¾.

FOWL CONTEST AT Y. M. C. A.

Competition is keen at the Y.M.C.A. Bowling Alleys in the fowl contest, and it looks as if it will be a strenuous battle before the Turkey, Geese and Chickens are finally decided.

To date Wally Walsh is holding on tight to the high single string record with the healthy score of 270 but others are slowly creeping upward and their may have to hoist his score yet in order to take home the birds.

Horton, a member of the G. W. V. A. Bowling Team, heads the High Consecutive Three String Record holders with a total of 667. He is followed closely by W. Gilbert with 655 and Yeres, who has 652.

The high score for any three strings is also held at the present time by Horton, his score being 402, other scores are W. Gilbert 655, French 634, Yates 622, Lancaster 618, shovels.

NEW MINES AVAILABLE

Chairman Pat Mulqueen of Olympic Committee Will Not Carry "Sight-Seers"

Winnipeg, Dec. 12.—With the completion of the Canadian Pacific railway line from Acme to Drumheller, Alta., 16th month five new mines were put into operation along this line, according to Charles Murphy, general manager of coal lands.

The coal mined is of excellent quality for domestic use and should remove any danger of coal shortage in the west this winter, Mr. Murphy states.

Evidently the farmers of the district were not confronted with the fuel problem for Mr. Murphy while travelling through the district noticed farmers filling their wagons with coal dug up with shovels.

NEWS FROM TRENTON

Mr. Jack North has moved into the Thos. Wise residence of Mr. Fred Bell, Lorne Ave.

About 4.50 p.m. Tuesday the fire alarm was rung in and when the chief Deputy Engineer Coleman had the Chemical engine before the scene of action. Very fortunately for Mr. Mark Fisher, whose home was, it should be so on fire, it was a false alarm. Upon investigation by Fire Chief Colbourn and Chief Bath, owing to the high winds blowing at the time, sparks were sent to be flying from the chimney. As Chief Bath said after words, "better flying from the chimney than from the front door." But undoubtedly the right policy, "Safety First" was adopted. Mr. Fisher's residence is situated at the north end of Murphy terrace on Murphy Street and would undoubtedly have been the scene of a very bad fire had it developed.

PALENCIA CLUB REGULAR DANCE

Most Successful Dance of Club This Season and One of Most Successful Ever Held

Possibly never since the Palencia Club has been organized in this city has such a highly successful dance been given by the club, as the regular monthly dance, held at Johnstone's Dancing Academy last evening.

Despite the fact that the dancing area in this academy is quite large, the dancing at times was almost crowded, so great was the crowd present. More than one hundred and fifty couples were on the floor at one time in some of the dances.

Music for the dancing was supplied by Sill's orchestra, which was improved by additional instruments and that department was well looked after.

At 11.30 a dainty lunch was served. Guests were present from Toronto, Trenton and other points.

Probably One of The Town's Oldest Inhabitants—Burial at Napanee

The death took place at her residence on Dundas Street early Monday morning of one of Deseronto's oldest and most estimable citizens in the person of Mrs. Helen E. Bogart at the ripe old age of 83 years. Possessing all her faculties up to the very last Mrs. Bogart was stricken with paralysis on Sunday, November 26th. Bogart and took up residence on a farm near Hay Bay. Mr. Bogart left the farm and came to Deseronto to work for the Rathbun Company. For twelve years he was in the company's employ then he died. After the death Mrs. Bogart continued to live there tho, she was probably one of the oldest living residents of Deseronto.

GONG FOR AMBULANCE

Of late the Police Ambulance has experienced difficulty in getting the right of way, in the traffic, especially in the country. The ambulance is a top heavy, and on the well crowned country roads, it is not safe to drive the machine on the side of the road, as it cannot get off the road so handily an other vehicles. A large gong is being put on the machine to try, similar to the gong which used to be on the old fire truck, so that in future there should be no difficulty in notifying other traffic of its approach. It is very essential often that the ambulance travel rapidly in case of serious illness or in the case of a serious accident where minutes count for much, and it must not be delayed on such occasions.

TROTTING RIDE

While driving a wagon loaded with hay, across the Bay Bridge Tuesday afternoon, a local man had a rather unpleasant yet exciting accident. The hay landed on the bridge, but the robes and a few articles of excess baggage were blown into the Bay of Quinte. The driver escaped by taking a dive down between the two horses.

ILLUSTRATED LECTURE

Last evening a very interesting and instructive illustrated lecture was given in Christ Church Parish Hall, by Miss Owen, who is travelling under the auspices of the British and Foreign Bible Society. The subject of the lecture was the Holy Land and the speaker described especially Jerusalem and the surrounding country. The views were exceedingly interesting and were one of the best collections of views of the Holy Land ever seen in the city, one pleasantly interesting object of the Garden of Gethsemane, before and after a local passage had visited it. Rev. A. L. Geen was the chairman of the evening.

LOCAL MERCHANTS PROTEST RECEIPT TAX

LABOR CREATES DISGRACEFUL SCENE

Leaders of Labor Disgusted —Chamber Filled with Wild Yells

London, Dec. 13.—The House of Commons was treated to an ugly scene this afternoon by the Labor members of the extremist section, who, it is believed, are concerting on plans for a big demonstration in-morrow to protest against adjournment of Parliament while the unemployment demand remains unsettled.

Disorderly shouts and interruptions by certain Labor members today rattled the whole proceedings in the House into chaos when Bonar Law failed to answer a question charging him with having promised his constituents in central Glasgow, during the election, an increase of unemployment benefits.

Bonar Law's denial that he had made any such promise only aggravated the uproar. The serious and unusual feature of the Assembly was that it was the view generally received as part of a concerted scheme devised to impress upon the country with the reality of the indignation of Labor.

Speaker Whitely was utterly unable to restore order or secure respect for his rulings from the Labor group which filled the air with their cries. For several minutes no progress could be made. The prohibitionist member Sexsmith, a veteran House hillman, by special consent of the Speaker by filling the chamber with uncertain shrieks of "Order! Order!" in his high-pitched, piercing voice.

"Milk-Sop" Leadership.

It looks as if Labor intends to make proceedings in Parliament impossible because their demands are not conceded to at once. The leaders of the Labor party profess disapproval of the violent tactics and when Clynes interviewed during today's scene it was in a planetary zone, but the attendance gave plenty of evidence the they resent what they consider the "milk-sop" leadership of the party.

A hint of a plan by extremists undoubtedly in favour of violent demonstrations as a way of arousing the working class of the country, was given this morning when Kirkwood, Labor member, who was deported from Clyde for sedition, shouted:

"We'll fight the Government in the streets if necessary. And if we can't get it constitutionally, we'll take it unconstitutionally."

YOUNG SPINSTERS HOLD "AT HOME"

Excellent Attendance at Pleasant Event Held Last Evening

One of the most delightful Pre-Christmas events of the season occurred last night at the Johnstone Dancing Academy, when the Young Spinsters of Belleville gave their At Home. More than eighty couples were present and a very pleasant program of dancing was carried out.

Dancing commenced at 8.30 o'clock, the music being supplied by Al Lanoue's six piece orchestra. Columbus from Toronto, which proved to be of the first order.

At the conclusion of the first program of dancing, a dainty lunch was served. During the evening, a number dances was given, in which Miss Mae Holland and Mr. Stan Hagerman were the lucky dancers, each winning a captivating "Scotty" doll as their prize.

A novelty dance, during the second program, in which the happy dancers rapidly became enthralled in the various colored streamers which were issued, was also a feature of the program.

The three young ladies in charge of the function were Miss Helen Lanier, President; Miss Phyllis Wallbridge, Secretary; and Miss Thyra Johnstone, Treasurer.

The members of the committee in charge were Misses Isobel Coppin, Marguerite Keeler, Jean Evans, Phyllis McMagnus, Nellie Milne, and Helen Wood.

The patronesses were Mrs. W. J. Neblitt, Mrs. B. L. Hagman, Mrs. W. F. Scott, Mrs. C. C. Walker, Mrs. R. J. F. Graham, Mrs. A. R. Wallbridge, Mrs. (Dr.) Stobie, and Mrs. (Dr.) Brandcombe.

A number of guests were present from out of town.

TURKEY REALLY ACCEPTS AN 'ALLIES' PRINCIPLE

Lausanne, Dec. 14.—Turkey accepts in principle the application to non-Moslem minorities in her territory, of clauses on this subject inserted in the Austrian, Bulgarian and other peace treaties, Ismet Pasha declared at this morning's session of the Near East Conference, which has for its object the ending of amnesty to members of these minorities.

Lausanne, Dec. 14.—Turkey will join the League of Nations as soon as peace is signed at Lausanne, Ismet Pasha announced at the Near East conference today. As the League exercises general supervision over the minority population, Ismet's announcement was interpreted as meaning that Turkey will accept the League's supervision over the Christian peoples of Turkey. Ismet said Turkey was prepared to accord the same treatment to the minorities as provided in the treaties exchanged between the various European countries.

SEEK TO RETAIN COURT FINES

Municipalities Asked to Keep All Fines Imposed In Police Court

The request that municipalities should be allowed to retain all fines imposed in their police courts, except in cases in which provincial officers prosecute, was made by a deputation which visited the Parliament Buildings yesterday and which was received by Hon. Harry Nixon, Provincial Secretary, in the absence of Premier Drury and Attorney-General Raney. The petitioners represented Toronto, Peterborough, Belleville, St. Catharines, Kitchener, Niagara Falls, Brantford, Fort William, Woodstock and Owen Sound. They pointed out the heavy costs will which the administration of justice was saddling the municipalities and while no committal was made in regard to the changes desired, Hon. Mr. Nixon promised that they would have the Government's consideration.

The cost of O.T.A. enforcement was particularly mentioned by the deputation and in somewhat caustic form

"We were told that the O.T.A. could change our jails into churches," Alderman Mitchell of Windsor, stated adding: "Indeed we have had to build new jails and police stations and enlarge the police force."

Mayor Hanna and Chief of Police Kidd represented Belleville.

BRITAIN PRESENTS TURK WITH STIFF ULTIMATUM

Lord Curzon Tells Ottoman Empire That Massacres Must Cease — British Lion Assumes Menacing Attitude— Lausanne Conference Will Be Broken Up if Turks do Not Speedily Come to Terms

Lausanne, Dec. 13.—In a bitter debate today Lord Curzon representing the Allies gave Turkey to understand in no uncertain way that the time for hedging and bargaining had passed. The Turks were plainly told that if they were not prepared to give more than paper guarantees for the safety of the decimated Christian minorities in Turkey the conference would be broken up and the possibility of a clash at arms was not at all remote. Turkish representatives did not fail to grasp the full purport of the menace of Lord Curzon's speech. It has been conceded that the Turk, up to the present has persisted in his ignorant attitude for three reasons. First, the possibility that Britain would not fight them; second, the possibility that France would not fight them, and the third, the certainty that the United States would not fight them.

Would Yield to Force

If the Turks were notified tonight that these three powers would send their naval forces to obtain protection for the minorities they would cede quickly enough. But moral suasion, typified by the United States' position, means very little to them, and it will take a different sort of reason to lead them from a fair settlement of this issue. When General Ismet Pasha, in the privacy of his room, figures how far he can go in defying the rest of the world, the presence of Ambassador Child at Lausanne is passing the bag of his cards.

The United States took no part to the discussion, but Mr. Child spent more than an hour with Ismet Pasha this afternoon presenting the United States' view on minorities, and trying to persuade the Turk that he is more reasonable.

Ismet will reply to the allied "ultimatum" tomorrow. I am informed in Turkish quarters that he will insist the allies should be satisfied with a Turkish acceptance of the same superivision and executing of minority regulation as is exercised by Austria, Bulgaria, Greece, Rumania and other Central European countries and not insist on a special commission to do nothing but watch the Turks.

Enough of Turkish Massacres

Seldom has any diplomat said to Ismet Pasha's face what a conference table the Language Lord Curzon addressed today to Ismet, when he declared that the world had had enough of Turkish massacres, and demanded guarantees against their repetition, laying down a definite ultimatum that the allies must have those guarantees or they would not make peace with Angora.

Ismet had promised to give today a reply to the allied minorities proposals yesterday, but he seems to be another attack on the Greeks, who he said, had destroyed 27 towns, 1,000 villages and 30,000 houses in Anatolia. Proclaiming Angora's desire for peace in Turkey, he said the best way to have this peace was to have no Greeks in Turkey.

"A final series of events" he said "has rendered necessary an exchange of the Greeks in Turkey with the Turks in Greece. This solution has become inevitable.

"An exchange of the Greeks in Constantinople is a necessity, and is but logical and just. Nevertheless our humanitarian sentiments led us to consent to exempt from exchange Greeks born in Constantinople, whose number is 200,000."

Might Prevent Worse Things

Some regard to the numbers of the suffering the expulsions would cause, but concluded that it was all for the best, because it might prevent worse things.

Lots Arrogant

The Turks tonight appear less arrogant than they were this morning. Curzon held several diplomats to-night that Britain would never agree to a settlement not including surveillance of Turkish treatment of minorities.

There can be no question of Lord Curzon's sincerity today. Never in circumstances it is permissible to point out that Britain for 50 years has been asserting the Armenian protection and the allies collectively have done it many times in the past four years and therefore the bona fides today is not new. It has been raised often before without the result demanded this morning.

LIVELY RUNAWAY THIS MORNING

Team of Horses Make Bolt For Freedom on Kingston Road

Near what is known as Bush's Mill Kingston Road, just east of city limits, a lively runaway occurred this morning. A team of horses attached to a wagon belonging to Mr. A. Smith, of the city, became frightened and off they started towards home. C. H. Arnott was in charge of the team and was near the rear of the wagon when they started to run away. He made an effort to stop them but his efforts were in vain and sustained a few minor cuts. The animals ran to their stable in the city and fortunately did not collide with any vehicle in their wild career.

HEAVY FIRE LOSS AT PORT BURWELL

Tug Caught Fire Which Spread to Docks, Buildings and Freezing Plant

St. Thomas, Ont., Dec. 13.—Early this morning the C. Wilson & Sons tug at the dock at Port Burwell, was discovered to be on fire. Owing to the heavy gale which was blowing at the time, the flames rapidly spread to the docks and fish house, and practically through the house effects of the villagers who fought the flames in zero weather with very limited fire fighting apparatus. But the whole place was not destroyed.

BROADENING OUT POLICY DISCUSSED

U.F.O. Learn of Danger of Split in Ranks

Toronto, Dec. 11.—Nothing of importance marked the conclusion of yesterday's session of the Annual Meeting of the U.F.O. Association. In fact rallroaders and moderation marked the first day of the annual convention of the United Farmers of Ontario which opened at Massey Hall yesterday and listened to a mild warning from Mr. W. E. Burnaby, the retiring president, that they must not allow a branch to develop between Premier Drury and Mr. J. J. Morrison over the broadening out policy. While the idea of broadening out has not yet come before the convention in any official way, it is still a fact that the Premier is on the list as the chief speaker tonight, and one that reason it is expected that he will make his attitude even more plain than he has done in the past. So Mr. Burnaby, anticipating any differences of opinion which might arise out of this meeting, has thrown out his warning.

"Probably the two most outstanding men in our organization in this province are our good friends Morrison and Drury," he stated, "To lose either would be a serious blow. They continue to be our leaders as long as they carry out the principles which they have set up. Otherwise we have the burden of an autocracy from which we have been making an honest effort to free ourselves.

Not After Power.

"It is argued by many that as an organization we should keep out of politics, and by others that we are not in politics, but rather the farmer's political activities are the outcome of the educational propaganda of the association. In view of the fact that every political move has originated among the people, the latter is undoubtedly the case. It is a matter of fact, however, the farmer is in politics and is just beginning to make himself felt in the life of the country, and nothing but a split in our ranks will take him out.

Officers Chosen.

At a meeting held this afternoon of the directors of the U.F.O. Co-operative Company, Colonel J. Z. Fraser, of rank Dunlop, was elected president and A. A. Craise, of St. Catharines, vice-president. Elmer Lick, of Dunnville, takes the third position on the executive. Mr. J. J. Morrison was reappointed secretary-treasurer.

Mr. Craise, who is a newcomer on the executive, has been absent from that body for the past two years.

MAYNOUTH RESIDENT IN TROUBLE

Assessed $200 and Costs or Six Months on Charge of Manufacturing "Moonshine"

Frank Blakely whose home is in the northern part of Hastings County near Maynouth, no doubt realizes that the making of moonshine whiskey is not altogether a profitable adventure, especially when detected. He was apprehended for operating a still and at Trenton yesterday, when he appeared before Magistrate O'Rourke, two rather serious charges confronted him. He was charged with having a still, also with having liquor in a public place, both of which are contrary to the Blakley alcohol policy and a fine of $200 and costs, in each case was imposed, or in default six months in jail. Up is the present time the fines have not been paid by the accused and for the time being Blakley is an inmate of the County Jail.

DOVE OF PEACE HOVERING OVER EMERALD ISLE

Dublin, Dec. 14.—The talk of peace between the republicans and the Free States in Ireland is heard more frequently as Christmas approaches.

The action taken by the new Senate of the Free State in regard to appointing a Commission to work for peace has developed some indications that a considerable section of the Republicans is willing to negotiate for peace that the rank and file is moving in that direction. The summoning of all Sinn Fein clubs in Dublin City and County to a peace debate on Sunday is pointed out as significant, as although the clubs are composed of treaty supporters and Republicans the active class opposed to peace.

MORRISON IS RE-ELECTED

"J.J." Tried to Make Farmers Understand Their Problems

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Dec. 14.—J. J. Morrison was re-elected Secretary of the United Farmers of Ontario by the convention of the organization here today. Addressing the delegates, Mr. Morrison said he had tried to make the farmers understand their problems and develop an active class consciousness. Hon. Mr. Biggs, Minister of Highways, spoke to the gathering and defended the good roads policy of the Drury Government.

COLLAPSE OF GERMANY VERY NEAR

The police attribute the act to the same person who recently made an attempt on the life of Sir William Horwood, head of Scotland Yard.

PROTEST AGAINST NEW STAMP TAX

Belleville Retail Merchants' Association Join in Protest

Amongst the many telegrams sent to Premier King protesting against the enforcement of the new stamp receipt tax was the following from the Retail Merchants' Association of this city:

To Premier King:

We, the members of the Belleville Branch of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada, wish to register a most emphatic protest against the receipts tax. We feel it will be both injurious and detrimental to our business.

(Signed)

Belleville Branch, Retail Merchants' Association of Canada.

B. F. Jennings, Secretary.

This is an example of unpopular taxation which is going to create a great deal of trouble. Receipts are given and taken in a multitude of ways and by individuals not accustomed to do business on a large scale. The cash register receipt for over the stated amount will require a stamp. Many transactions will raise receipts to be given when the stamping of same will be a hardship, or at least a great inconvenience. Will not the people feel for the non-observance of the law? If there is a penalty many people will become law-breakers and innocent ones. If there is no penalty the law will be observed more in the breach than otherwise.

Belleville Branch of the Retail Merchants' Association did well to protest against this tax. They should be supported in every way possible, in this stand.

POUND STERLING MAY REACH PAR BY JAN. 1ST,

Remarkable Rise in Last Few Weeks—Only 17 Cents From Parity Yesterday

New York, Dec. 13.—Sterling exchange had another sensational advance today, demand reaching the top line of decks which is within 17 cents of parity. This is the highest rate since March 21, 1919, when the British Government lifted all restrictions and suspended its stabilizing operations. At one time during the day banks reported that sterling was practically unobtainable. Bankers believe that the par of sterling—4.8665—may be reached by the end of the year and that in 1923 the gold export level may be touched.

Manchester, Dec. 13.—One remarkable rise of the pound sterling is believed here, says the Guardian, to be caused by a persistent demand from American speculators for sterling rather than caused by any operation on the British side.

The United States speculative demand is based on the view expressed that the pound sterling is undervalued to the gold value in the near future. The extent to which the speculation has developed is attributed to the fact that America has recovered from depression more rapidly than Britain, and that therefore it is natural Americans to trade within her own community, causing British traders to follow suit. However, A demand which has developed on the American side due to these trading operations and the speculators have carried it to excessive lengths, according to opinion here.

TWO MOTOR CARS IN CRASH AT NOON

One Car is Thrown Against Telephone Pole With Disastrous Results

At the junction of North Front street and Moira street, a collision occurred at noon to day, which caused some damage. A Ford coupe was proceeding down North Front street to-ward the upper bridge when a car which was being driven west on Moira street collided with considerable force. The Ford coupe was driven on to a telegraph pole with force enough to break the post near the ground. As a result of the impact the coupe was badly wrecked, and the Ford car was damaged to some extent. The coupe was the property of a traveller.

SOME RUM RUNNING PRACTICES

New York, Dec. 13th. (By Canadian Press)—Liquor "running" by airplanes from Montreal to Long Island points has become so profitable that many aviators, including one of the foremost fliers on the continent, have entered the bootlegging game, according to Frank J. Hale and James L. Kerrigan, Federal dry agents investigating liquor law violations in New York and New Jersey coastal counties.

Aviators inclined toward the adventure of liquor running, said Kerrigan in a recent interview, are experiencing no difficulty in getting financial backing. With the demand for liquor exceeding the supply, he declared, "responsible business men are underwriting the purchase of flying machines."

"We know of one instance," asserted Kerrigan, "where a Wall Street broker made arrangements for an aviator to ship him cargoes of liquor in Montreal. The liquor was purchased by the broker. The full story of his operations has been told us by the particular aviator, but we cannot make an arrest until we have absolute evidence on which to build a case."

"The aviator who conspired with the broker to bring liquor over the border went into the bootlegging game, he told us, more on a dare than as a money-making scheme. The profits were so large, however, that he continued to make trips to Montreal. Forty-five trips between Montreal and a Long Island landing field have netted the aviator alone $30,000 for a summer's work. The round trip from Montreal to his Long Island landing field, he said was made in a day."

"This man was under a verbal contract, according to the story, to supply liquor to a group of wealthy men associated with the broker who had underwritten the flights. On each of his trips he brought over the border thirty-five cases of whisky, for which he received $20 a case as a transportation fee. The liquor previously had been purchased by the broker. After he had discharged his cargo without being apprehended there was no danger in his admitting that he had brought the stuff in because the evidence was well hidden."

"Rutland, Vt., is the stopping place of the fleet engaged in bringing in the liquor. A field has been fixed up there so that the fliers can get fuel and other supplies."

"My route was from Long Island obliquely across Manhattan Island, the aviator is alleged to have told Kerrigan, "and then paralleling the Hudson to Albany, where I veered easterly to Rutland. From Rutland I flew northwest to the northern edge of Lake Champlain. A few minutes later I brought me to the landing grounds of Montreal. While this was a semi-government field I was able to arrange for my landings there.

"The Canadian inspectors whom I frequently met at the airdrome," the aviator is quoted as saying, "treated me cordially enough. Once in a while they would snoop around when I landed but they were watching for aviators who tried to "double up"—to smuggle a load of silks and other merchandise into Canada on the return trip.

"Through airdrome gossip, which I heard at Montreal while waiting for my plane to be loaded I learned of various schemes employed by pilots to preclude the possibility of getting evidence against them in the event of capture.

"I heard of one chap who had installed a trap door in the floor of his fuselage compartment. In the event of threatened capture he could pull a string and dump his cargo. The trap door could be tuned, of course, but there would be no evidence of bootlegging. Another flier, I hear, arranges matters for his escape by changing various markings before each trip and he always leaves Canada for a different point from which he arrived.

"The game of transporting wet goods from Canada to Long Island is safe enough. There seems only a remote possibility of arrest. In my neighborhood in Long Island there are many planes in the air throughout the day and the police would have a merry time trying out one as being suspicious. I imagine the army fires if overtaken and ordered to descend probably would flip in a sneering wing at the sky cop and zoom elsewhere.

"The transportation of liquor by airplane is safe also, because there are few restrictions for airmen. No registration of machines is necessary, and here it is that the air smuggler has a decided advantage over his associates who travel overland. They must apply much "grease" on trips from Canada and constantly are being double-crossed, high jacked and defrauded by employees.

"Even if overhauled in the air there has always been for me the possibility of escape in my fast plane. But to reduce the chances of detection to the minimum I made a slight alteration in my machine. By inserting a sliding panel painted the color of my fuselage over the aperture of the rear cockpit I made my ship look like a one seater. It required knowledge of that panel to scrutinize the inside of my fuselage without tearing it to pieces.

"At an expense of about $50 to myself I have made forty-five trips to Montreal, bringing back with me each time thirty-five cases of whisky, for which I was paid $700 in transportation fees."

Congress will be asked by the Prohibition Enforcement Department, Mr. Hale said, to pass laws restricting flights and promulgating resolutions that will lessen the possibility of flyers having such liberties as they now enjoy.

MUSIC and DRAMA

"MUTT AND JEFF" HERE TOMORROW NIGHT

When Mutt and Jeff are next seen in this city, which will be at Griffin's tomorrow night, they will appear in one of the most musical comedies that it has been our good fortune to chronicle for some time. The title of the new piece is "Mutt and Jeff's Honeymoon". It is in two acts and six scenes and tells the story and plight of two husbands who decide to even scores with their wives who insist upon the old pernicious system of constant henpecking. In this instant Mutt is the chief victim. He seeks his pal and co-conspirator, Jeff, for counsel. As might be imagined, Jeff steers his friend in the wrong course with laughable and side-splitting results. Special musical numbers; a bevy of exceptionally pretty young women; a large and competent cast; any amount of innovation and novelties, complete and features ultimately and completely fugue in the triumph.

"FRECKLES" WESLEY BARRY IN "SCHOOLDAYS" AT GRIFFIN

Charles Rush the Well known film critic of Motion Picture News in reviewing the initial world exhibition of Wesley Barry's new screen comedy at the Astor Theatre, New York, and which is being exhibited at Griffin's tonight, and Saturday, matinee and night speaks of the production in the following glowing terms:

"In "School Days", a screened film production based on the vaudeville play by Clay Edwards, Stephenson associations have turned out a screen story worthy of a verse creation by James Whitcomb Riley in its spirit of spontaneous, sympathetic humor. It promises to be the making of its young star, Wesley Barry, of the snub nose and opulent freckles, and the author, William Nigh, particularly, and the general of everybody concerned in its production.

It starts in the humble surrounding of a country school and shifts to the homes of wealth in an exclusive suburb of New York, the appeal of the poor country boy to the city boy is invisible. He is a sort of twin brother to Cinderella. Done by young Barry, all the innate pathos and humor of the character is realized a hundred per cent. The picture has been drawn by William Nigh, the director in a tender spirit of fun, and the direction carries out the conception in an appropriate vein of unaffected simplicity. Nothing could be more touching than the parting of "Speck" and his dog "Hippy", and the reunion is quite a moving a passage. It would be a hard-boiled screen fan that could sit through some of those passages without emotion ture in the eye. "But there is always a sympathetic smile behind the shadow of a tear. This elusive quality of humor is the highest attainment of the picture art, and in this picture it has free expression. It's a safe prophecy that the picture will develop into a memorable one of the year. "False Alarm" a two-reel Campbell comedy comedy, the third chapter of the gripping western play "Buffalo Bill", and a Sennitted Travelogue are announced for exhibition on the same program with the above feature offering.

"THE CAPITOL" POWERFUL LEAH BAIRD PRODUCTION

"The Capitol", Augustus Thomas' powerful drama of intrigue, social Washington, which scored a distinct triumph for a season on Broadway, and later one of the most successful road attractions at that time, has been brilliantly done for the screen with Leah Baird as the star, presented entire preclaiming the picture version as equally in power and audience appeal as Mr. Thomas' famous stage creation.

"The Capitol" which is being exhibited at the Regent to-night to Saturday matinee daily, has been brought up to date by the noted dramatist himself, and in it is revealed many angles of the present political situation in Washington. The story laid in the atmosphere of exclusive American society contains some with sensational episodes ranging from the burning of a bungalow-fastening, by the way, one of the most remarkable escapes from flames ever shown on the silver sheet to the capsizing of a canoe, containing the cast and some of the leading male players in the Potomac falls.

Leah Baird's emotional talents, which won marked commendation through her performance in Augustus Thomas' "The Volcano", are given much better return in "The Capitol", besides affording her opportunity to display a gorgeous array of gowns made especially for the new picture. All in all "The Capital" gives every promise of sustaining Miss Baird's reputation as a star, whose portrayals are always finished and whose individual efforts in every role she essays set a splendid example for all her associates in the filming of so powerful a story as the Augustus Thomas drama.

"Then Seconds" an unusually Crimzy comedy of the prize ring, a new Vodevil Movies, and Pathe news, are being exhibited on the same program.

UNUSUAL BEDSPREADS

There is no end to the variety of stamped unbleached bedspreads, but one which boasts a large and exceedingly graceful basket of flowers in patchwork, stands out from the rest. The flowers are appliqued with any number of different stitches and the effect is quite charming.

Sore Feet Nearly Drove Her Crazy

"For many years the callouses on my feet, the corns, and crusts had me nearly crazy. I was nearly driven to crazy," says Mrs. Anna Beckman, 1 Ward Street, Worcester, Mass. "Finally I tried Hoyang about two years and wonderful Hoyang about two years and wonderful Hoyang relieved my corns and callouses also and I enjoy real foot freedom, as I have not known it for I used it a few times as directed and lo and behold the callouses disappeared and left all the calloused part soft and as my corns, loosing the skin smooth. The callouses between my toes and under my feet are gone, and I feel as I did as a girl. I am telling my friends about Foot Relief, my feet must have been absolutely healed, for I can easily wear shoes a size smaller, and with perfect comfort. Foot Relief is a wonderful healer—must cure in a few days or money back."

NEWS FROM TRENTON

(Trenton December 13th)

Messrs. W. B. McClung, Fred Ayres, and Wilfred Powers of Trenton, are attending the annual meeting of the Shriners, Ramesez Temple, in Toronto to-day.

The steam shovel of the Standard Paving Co. which has been working on Division Street was found to cease operations, yesterday at 4 p.m. owing to weather conditions prevailing which prevented any further work. Today has been spent in housing the big fellow in the rear of Woddell's Foundry, where during the winter months it will receive a complete overhauling and be ready for an early start in the Spring.

HOCKEY PLAYERS WORK OUT

Last night Coach Joe Freeman, who will handle the Intermediate and Junior O.H.A. hockey teams, had his players working out in the lyon, also for a short road run. A few changes were noticeable, mainly jumps from the Junior ranks to the Intermediate classes. One or two new players were in the line up. If weather conditions permit, the boys will ring in this winter's hockey season by a workout at the Arena tomorrow night.

Harry Coults who in fast rounding the ice surface into shape, is greatly pleased with the progress thus far.

DIDIER PITRE DOES COME-BACK

Veteran Puck Chaser is Giving Pa Time the Battle of His Life

The surprise of the pre-season hockey news is that Didier Pitre is not only cavaying a "come-back," but that the retired veteran seems to have a fair chance of accomplishing that feat.

Under the immutable laws of nature, Pitre is near the end of a remarkable career,—even if he should hold on for another season. But even if he does not make the grade this year, he can hang up his battered skates with the knowledge that he gave a performance that has never been excelled, in a point of length of service in the fastest company in the world. Didier, well over forty years of age, until last year retained nearly all of his wonderful speed and shooting ability, and played as a regular in the fastest company of the speediest game the world knows. Not even only last season that his speed was dulled to such a degree that he was for the first time in a career extending over twenty years of active service, relegated to the bench.

Pitre is the last of the real Old Guard in hockey—a veteran of the Michigan League days when Hod Stuart, the Mallens, Hall and several great puck-chasers of a half-forgotten past were stars. All of these have passed out of the active playing arena except Pitre, who, with a physique that is remarkable and a courage unlimited in the face of advancing years, is still fighting gamely—and for about love of the game—to wear the red, white and blue of Canadiens another year.

Cyclonic, picturesque, and one of the cleanest, fairest players who ever pulled on a skate, Pitre will have the best wishes of every fan for a final good year before he hangs up the steels for all time.

HOCKEY STICK VERSUS TYPEWRITER

In an honest endeavour to prove that the typewriter is mightier than the hockey stick, baseball bat etc. a Montreal sport writer in the Montreal Herald turns to poetry. He says: The modern hockey star's excuse

When his showing needs explaining
Will be, "I had to write my story"—
I had no time for training."

Then as a rider he makes the following assertion, which is rather timely to say the least.

Probably there still are people who believe hockey players, baseball stars and fighters really write the stuff which they sign.

ST. PATS VS. CANADIENS ON SATURDAY

League hockey will start off on Saturday night when the N.H.L. season opens with St. Patrick's playing the first game with Canadiens. The world's champions closed their engagement in the Western zone at Winnipeg last night when they were defeated for the second time by Calgary. While the Irish did not secure an even break in the matter of games won and lost, the tour was a great success financially, and also from a missionary standpoint. Of the first five games played they won two, lost two and tied one, but the strain of travelling practically all the time with stoppovers just long enough to play a game took, and they lost three of the last four games played. In the eight games played they scored 35 goals to the opponents' 6. They will play in Winnipeg this afternoon and are due in Toronto on Friday afternoon.

While the team has been away the officers left behind have not been inactive, and the fans on Saturday night may see a couple of amateurs make their professional debuts. The St. Pats have been working quietly, unlike some of other morals, and when an officer of the club stated last night that the chances were bright for a surprise or two on Saturday night,

CENTRAL CURLERS ASSOCIATION HAVE ORGANIZED

Kingston, Ont., Dec. 12.—At the annual meeting of the Central Curling Association the application of the Rockwood and Prescott clubs for admission to the league was granted, and they will be grouped with Kingston and Brockville in the Eastern group. The annual bonspiel will be played at Belleville on Jan. 9 and 10. Belleville was awarded the senior trophy and Kingston the junior one.

The following officers were elected for the next year: President, M. F. Reid, Kingston; Vice-President, F. W. Hargraft, Cobourg; Secretary-Treasurer, P. D. Lyman, Kingston.

FIRST WORK-OUT OF SEASON

Intermediate Hockey Squad Chase Puck For First Time This Season

GOOD TURNOUT

Ice Good, But Players Complain About Poor Lighting System

They're off! The Intermediate hockey squad of this city had their first workout of this season last evening at the Arena. There was a good turnout, and a real strenuous workout resulted, for more than an hour and a half.

The ice was in good condition, considering the backward weather conditions of late, and the rail birds were out in full blossom, to see the boys go. Some of the players were loud in their criticism of the lighting system in the Arena, and stated that if it is not improved some one of the players will be apt to receive a love tap from the puck as it hurries on its way.

John Henry Williams, baseball pitcher, was out with the boys and played at centre ice position. Jack handles himself rather creditably on the steel runners so the story goes.

Dem Crook strapped on the big pads and went in between the goal posts with "Doc" Mallen and "Bouncer" Holloway out in front, on the bulwarks. Jack Williams was at centre with Fred Bick, a junior, on left wing, and Lake at right wing.

Vern. Weir, "Bunny" Freebette, "Toots" Holloway and "Al" Swayne were the members of the assault gang, it being a battle between forward line players and defence men.

This evening, the boys will hold another workout before the skating hour.

It was regrettable that Coach Jack Marks was unable to be present at the first workout. Jack was confined to his bed Wednesday and under a doctor's care. While working out in the "Y" gym. recently, he wrenched his neck, and it has been giving him considerable trouble since. It is hoped and expected, however, that he will soon be able to be out with his warriors once more.

SIKI & CARPENTIER WILL FIGHT AGAIN

Paris, Dec. 13.—A formal agreement for a fight between "Battling" Siki and Georges Carpentier on a date yet to be fixed, but between February 15 and March 15, has been signed by Siki and his new manager, Charles Brasilliel, says the Matin. Carpentier also would have signed but for the absence of his manager, Francois Descamps, who will affix his signature to the document Friday evening.

The bout will be for twenty rounds, under the usual boxing rules. Four-ounce gloves will be used.

Meanwhile Siki is having hide and seek with the French Boxing Federation, saying that he will not appear before its committee, which is investigating the alleged frame-up in the Siki-Carpentier bout, in which the negro fighter deceived by the white man. The Federation is still awaiting an answer from Siki to its last letter summoning Siki before the committee on Friday to make a statement.

ST. PATS AFTER JACK ADAMS

Jack Adams, says Toronto Mail & Empire, would be a valuable man for St. Pats, and could be secured in a trade for Lloyd Denneny, but Jack is residing at Napanee and St. Pats are not sure whether he would be willing to play hockey this season. He has expressed himself as being out of the game for the season, but he may reconsider.

Mf grain markets closed stronger yesterday. Cash wheat also higher. Zero temperatures are affecting the value of wheat. The rise in Sterling exchange and the credit possibilities at Washington are other factors.

Application is being made to have the $10,000,000 common stock of the Canadian Industrial Alcohol Company, Limited, placed upon the unlisted department of the Montreal Stock Exchange. It will be recalled that the company was recently re-capitalized, being super-seded at $10,000,000, as compared with $5,000,000 previously. If this stock attains anything like the popularity enjoyed by Industrial Alcohol on the New York board, it will prove a welcome addition to the number of stocks publicly traded in locally.

The shares are of a par value of $100, and have no bonds or preferred stock ahead of them. It is understood that the stock will shortly be placed upon a 4 per cent. dividend basis, unofficial reports of current earnings being very favorable.

The company has three plants, including one at St. Hyacinthe and another at Corbyville. Sir Mortimer Davis is president of the organization.

SAIDS TO BE LET DOWN?

Addressing the University Club at Ottawa Tuesday, Hon. Mr. Motherwell made a statement of a general nature that can easily be interpreted in a manner that may spell a great deal of trouble for Canada. He stated that Canada has the dangerous task of seeing that land belonged to the white race, were healthy and industrious," and he further said—that he "did not know that farming experience was necessary, or that they should be engaged in farming, but that there is space, or just as long as they were prepared to work he "could not foresee trouble.".

Politics akin to this should meet with opposition at the hands of their people. Of course, we want increased population but we must carefully guard our methods of increasing our numbers or else the added population will do more harm than good. The natural increase in population should be the aim of the country at times that are so attractive that it would be undesirable for them to emigrate.

Mr. Motherwell says we want "any white people who are healthy and industrious." There are many countries in Europe whose population is chiefly white, yet they are highly undesirable in spite of their health and their industrious tendencies. Some of these races consider human life of little value, and always carry weapons, which are produced on the slightest provocations. Others belong to the "bolshevik" and "red" organizations, all of whom have a low standard of living and cherish no ambitions to improve this standard. If such men were encouraged to come to Canada and not having any desire or ability to go to the land, which Mr. Motherwell says is not necessary they would congregate in our urban centres and cause our police courts to be overworked and our jails to be crowded. Even if they were not actually undesirable citizens they would flood the unskilled labor market, which is undesirable in a country such as Canada which has a long, severe winter season when unskilled labor is often a drug on the market. At such times this type of man is a heavy drain on municipal treasuries.

Canada needs immigrants that are producers, and in this class the agricultural class comes first. Such men need no great amount of assistance, financial or otherwise, as they are self-supporting after the first year or so. Canada wants less of the unskilled labor class coming to this country.

If the members of the Cabinet of the King Government cannot formulate better ideas of our requirements in the line of immigration it would be far better for them to devote their energies along other channels, as they will only create troubles to succeed administrations.

THE MEANING OF LANARK

The majority of Hon. Dr. Preston, Conservative member-elect in Lanark, is announced officially as 1,476. In 1919, Dr. Preston was candidate in North Lanark for the Legislature, and lost to McCready, U.F.O., by 86. At the same time, South Lanark voted U.F.O., by 803. The same polls which gave a total U.F.O. majority for the riding of 886 have now given a Conservative majority of 1,476. The county elected two U.F.O. members to the Legislature three years ago, but in the recent by-election a U.F.O., or Progressive, was not even entered in the fight.

Lanark has written the first chapter in the book of destruction of the Liberal-first farmer movement in Ontario politics. It is evident that Conservative farmers who in 1919 deemed it best to vote for what they considered an independent movement, now recognize that they were fooled by Crerar and Drury, Bancy and Morrison. The forces that have overthrown U.F.O. strength in Lanark are operating as well in nearly two-score other constituencies of the province. The exodus of Conservative farmers from the U.F.O., means a Conservative Government at Toronto in next year's general election.

PASSINGCOMMENT

Still, it is a hopeful sign when statesmen rattle a deficit instead of a sabre.

It is a very difficult matter to bully a merchant marine with receiver-ships.

An experienced business man is one who realizes that the chap who called six times while he was out isn't trying to give him anything.

Too many young fellows are at present devoting themselves to the accumulation of a past to live-down.

A woman candidate has been charged with buying votes. And yet the ballots said women wouldn't be able to understand politics.

Many of the public protests against new tax laws become common the National Railways' revenue may be so greatly augmented as to lessen the need for new forms of taxation.

John Wanamaker began business life as an errand boy at $1.25 a week. Wages have so increased since the fifties that few boys can now begin low enough to become millionaires.

The reason why the "Red Flag" is not sung by Communists in the British House of Commons is that "the police won't let them." The London "Bobby" does not suppress revolution. He simply moves it on.

The prospects for a radical diminution of horse racing next season, on account of the heavy taxation, are not at all imaginary. Hon. Peter Smith's newspaffidies, in respect of revenue, may be the mother of compulsory invention of other sources of taxation to replace this.

Hon. Mr. Biggs says that the maximum truck load will be cut from 12 to 10 tons. The new highways are not to be cut to pieces by gasoline Juggernauts. If Mr. Biggs will also insist that trucks do not exceed a reasonable maximum of noise, he will do the public a favor. A lot of them are entitled to go to the scrap-heap.

The Ottawa Journal says: "Kingston is noted for its historic land-marks, entombed statesmen, its penitentiary, R.M.C. graduates, its locomotives, and its touchdowns." And yet a misguided country is led to believe that Ottawa is the capital of Canada.

Forestry is not a question mainly for lumbermen. It is not even a question mainly for foresters. It means no one can get along without the forest, it is a question for every one of us. Our future supply of forest products is by far the greatest and most puzzling economic problem now before the people of Canada.

HERE AND THERE

CHARLES P. STEINMETZ, ELECTRICAL WIZARD, ON YOUNG MEN.

Mr. Steinmetz says he is often asked if he can tell what kind of a young man will win out. In reply he has the following to say:

"I haven't given a great deal of thought to the matter; and there is only one thing I can say about it with any particular convictsip. If a young man goes at his work only as a means to an end—like getting a raise in salary, or making a million dollars—I am not much interested in him. I am interested in him if he seems to do his work for his work's sake! If he does for that and satisfaction he gets out of it, and with the idea of making the work itself accomplish more in the great scheme of things, it is almost inevitable that he, too, will advance.

"Work is like an engine on which the workman rides. The man who is absorbed in making his engine function better and more powerfully, travels with it. The one who lets it run down, becomes as stationary as it is."

A Toronto despatch says that a Chinese paper is to be started there in order to supply "the Chinese there with home news. Chinese and other alien colonies are just what Canada does not want, and the Dominion Government must look into their prevention. There are said to be 6,000 Chinamen in Toronto.

The Toronto Globe says: "The slogan, "Eat Ontario apples,' is a good one, but we need the apples as well as the slogan. 'First catch your hare.' The best apples are exported, and the growers have a perfect right to choose the best market. But is the outside markets really any better than ours? As a beginning someone might tell us what price is paid for Ontario apples in England." We do not know; but we have heard of Canadian apples being sold cheaper in Switzerland than in Canada.

DOOR-KNOCKERS.

I wonder how many Londoners realize what an interesting study may be made of the old door-knockers which abound in their streets?

On the door of Lord Aberdare's house, 63 Eaton Square, is a bronze knocker in the form of Neptune rising from the sea, said to have been the work of Benvenuto Cellini. There is a knocker in the form of a single dolphin at 57 Curzon street, Mayfair; and Connaught Place, to the north of Hyde Park, has some good examples—a Tudor rose and Prince of Wales feathers bronze dolphin knockers, and at No. 8 is a silver knocker that has a ribbon scroll and a circlet of acanthus.

A mermaid knocker may be seen at 25 Queen Anne's Gate; a good example is at St Cheyne Row, Chelsea, where Carlyle once lived; and a rare knocker copied—one Roman soldier may be found at 36 Grove End Road, St. John's Wood, a house that was once the home of the late Sir Lawrence Alma-Tadema. But the finest knocker is the West end—that on the grand old wooden gates under the entrance of Devonshire House, which are now planted in an isolated—and tasteless—position on the edge of the Green Park.

Then there is an old knocker in the shape of a cheap ed hand at 17 Gough Square, off Fleet street, once the residence of Dr. Johnson; and another good specimen can be found hard by in Gunpowder Alley.—"P.S.," in the London Evening News.

NO LEAD IN LEAD PENCIL.

The word pencil originally meant a small, fine brush, such as artists still use under the same name, but is now chiefly denotes the black-lead wood-cased pencil and its varieties. Lead pencil is a misnomer, because there is no lead about it. The case is wood or paper, and the substance that makes the mark is graphite, also called plumbago, from the Latin word plumbum, lead. This is the only connection the substance has with lead, because it is a form of carbon, and it's one of the softest minerals known.

As January 1st approaches, kindly tell the world what you did with the money you saved by quitting your other bad habits.

One sees it all now. John Bull certainly had the white man's burden on his back when he governed (or misgoverned) and kept the peace in Ireland.

GOING TO ADORE

As the new minister of the village was on his way to evening service he met a rising young man of the place who was also on his way to church on an active member of the church.

"Good-evening, my young friend," he said solemnly. "Do you ever attend a place of worship?"

"Yes, indeed, sir; regularly, every Sunday night," replied the young fellow with a smile. "I'm on my way to see her now."

CAUGHT NAPPING

A school teacher was asking his class the names of countries in Europe and towns and cities were situated.

Before he received a reply, he spoke in a dreamy-looking boy, in the front row.

"Gone!" he roared to the dreamy one.

"X-no, sir, but Billy Smith does. She's his cat."

DEATH AT MADOC

Mr. Fred Robinson, proprietor of the Windsor Hotel in this city, received a message today announcing the death of his brother, Mr. Robert Robinson, of Madoc.

A SERIOUS COLLISION

While returning from Napanee late Monday afternoon, an auto owned by Mr. Sills collided with the horse and rig owned and in charge of Mr. George Pearson, jr. Mr. Pearson's rig was demolished and the horse was so severely injured that it had to be destroyed. Mr. Pearson escaped unhurt. — Deseronto Post.

FISHERMEN LOSE NETS

The Deseronto Post in referring to the recent cold snap says there is one thing regrettable about the sudden formation of the ice bridge across the bay here. Hundreds of dollars' worth of nets, caught out by the severe winds which prevailed for a day or two before the freezing, lie in the bottom of the bay, a big loss to the fishermen who owned them.

MISCELLANEOUS SHOWER

A very enjoyable evening was spent on Tuesday last when the Sesame Bridge Club, of Avondale, gave a miscellaneous shower to Miss Olegg-Sharpe, in view of her approaching marriage. About twenty-five young people gathered at the home of Mr. George Sharpe, early with a present, and each present bearing an appropriate verse. The verses were read by Miss Lena Bates. Miss Sharpe was very much surprised, expressed her thanks in a suitable manner. Lunch was served and a social evening spent by all present.

RESIDENCE BURNED

The home of Haldane Vanalstine, on the Palace Road, about two miles from Napanee was burned to the ground day afternoon. It is not known how the fire originated and owing to the high wind and the scarcity of water the neighbors who gathered quickly could do very little but save the other buildings.

HAITI MAKES BID FOR TOURIST TRADE

Port-au-Prince, Haiti, Nov. 30. (By Mail)—Haiti is to have a large modern hotel ready for business by May of next year. Until then she will be far behind her sisters of the West Indies, for there is not a hotel in the island that approaches the standards of an American town of 25,000, to say nothing of the splendid hostelries of Cuba, Nassau and Jamaica.

Business men of the foreign colonies here have combined with Haitian leaders in backing the new enterprise. Ground has already been broken on the estate of Edward P. Pawley, on the Bizoton Road, which is the pride of the capital's picturesque suburban country. The site overlooks the bay and can be reached from the heart of the city by automobile in ten minutes. With a panorama running from the shores of the bay to the foothills, there are facilities for golf, bosting, swimming, riding, tennis and trap shooting and magnificent views of the mountains and the bay.

The hotel will be on a comparatively modest scale, with 35 bedroom suites, a main dining room, dance floor, and large roof garden.

LARGEST HOTEL IN BRITISH EMPIRE

Montreal's palatial new hotel, The Mount Royal, the largest hotel in the British Empire, will be formerly opened on Wednesday, December 20th.

The erection of this new hotel forms one of the largest building enterprises of the American continent, during the past year. Almost an entire year was required for the work, during which time more than 1500 men have been employed on the site. The Mount Royal is a most imposing example of Georgian architecture, for which the materials used were granite, buff stone and light buff brick. It is ten stories high and covers a tit of 205 x 277 feet, said to be the largest floor space of any hotel in America. The interior design is in Italian Renaissance, which treatment is also carried out in the design and colorings of the furnishings and decorations.

Some idea of the magnitude of this new hotel may be obtained from a few of the details of statistics as supplied by the architects. The electric wiring for the building required approximately 150 miles of wire, enclosed in 60 miles of conduit. The telephone system has capacity for some 2,000 stations, equal to the service requirements of a city of 10,000 population. There are several public service rooms, such as the main dining room, lobby, hall room and banquet hall with floor space comparable with that of the largest ice hockey rinks, and the hotel has its own artesian wells with a capacity of 1,200 gallons of water an hour.

A clever idea in connection with the design of the building is the floor arrangement. Above the third floor the building forms a double "H," making every guest room an outside room.

The hotel extends three storeys underground and has a wonderful installation of machinery. The four boilers to supply power and steam for heating are rated at 1400 h.p., but through forced draft can, if necessary, develop 2500 h.p. Coal is handled entirely by machinery. This handling embraces automatic weighing, crushing, conveying and stoking of the coal.

Electricity is supplied ordinarily from city wires, but complete engines and dynamos are installed to supply the entire needs of the hotel.

A large ice making plant is installed where pure artesian well water is frozen into pure blocks of ice. Aside from the many ice cooled refrigerators, there are sixty-three brine cooled refrigerators. All garbage is mixed with water and frozen into solid blocks of ice for disposal.

The Hotel is a city in itself, and employs a tremendous staff of laundrymen, electricians, engineers, machinists, plumbers, carpenters, millwrights, and other mechanics in addition to a host of chefs, waiters and waitresses, clerks, porters, bell boys and other employees usually connected with any big hotel.

CASE ENLARGED

The case of Herbert Houlihan, charged with theft at Marmora, was today adjourned for one week.

ST. PATS HOME FRIDAY

St. Patrick's are due to arrive home Friday afternoon, or just in time to have a short limbering-up before they open the N.H.L. season here on Saturday night with Canadiens. A letter received at headquarters from Secretary Percy Hambly states that St. Pats had a real hard game in their first contest of the tour at Winnipeg against Edmonton, which they won 5 to 1. While the team have been away the members of the club have not been idle, and have been endeavoring to secure fresh talent. It is understood that they have made good offers to Howarth and Stephenson, who played for Aura Lee last winter, but so far have not signed them or any new players up. The plan for the game opens this morning.

Canadian Ships Help Swell Traffic That Necessitates Improvement

Cherbourg, Dec. 14.—The work of enlarging the docks of Cherbourg to cope with the growth in Trans-Atlantic traffic, which it is expected will reach 800 mile-mark year, will be begun in the near future, it is announced. The expense of 15,000,000 francs will be covered by a tax on passengers.

It will be remembered that all the express lines operated by the large steamship companies from New York to British and continental ports have in the last few years commenced calling at Cherbourg. Only this season the two largest liners of the Empress class operated from Quebec to Europe ports by the Canadian Pacific Steamships, Ltd., have been making Cherbourg a regular port of call. These steamers are the Empress of France and Empress of Scotland and sail from Quebec to Southampton, Cherbourg and Hamburg.

LYNCHING BRINGS ON SUIT

Lexington, S.C., Dec. 14.—Lexington County has been sued for $7,500 as the result of the lynching of W. J. Allen, a negro, near here, in August, 1921. Mary Allen, his widow, as administratrix of his estate, is plaintiff. Allen was shot to death after being taken from officers who escaped him after he shot Noah Frick, a white man.

DEATH OF G.T.R. EMPLOYEE.

Mr. Lyons Blair, a well known and popular G.T.R. brakeman, died today in this city after a few days' illness. Deceased was unmarried.

GETTING BACK AT HIME

The black-haired boy had a mighty contempt for the tow-headed boy.

"Huh," he said, 'your mother takes in washin'."

"Of course she does," the tow-headed artist retorted. "You didn't think she would leave it hanging out at night unless your father was in jail, did you?"

A COLD FACT

"Pa, what is a flat failure?" asked Clarence.

"The hunting system," growled his dad as he heaved himself for another chair.

FIELDING AND LAPOINTE TO RETURN IN JANUARY

Ottawa, Dec. 13.—A cable message received here today from Hon. W. S. Fielding and Hon. Ernest Lapointe intimates that they will not return until January, probably just in time for the opening of Parliament, which is expected to be in that month, although no date has yet been set.

Bootleggers Subjects of Hold-Up Men's Constant Attention

New York, Dec. 12—Bootleggers of New York, whose currency stuffed pockets, and diamond encrusted cravats, attracted the attention of bandits, are surrounding themselves with corps of armed guards and more or less constant fear of assassins' guns, the police have been told.

Two men, Michael Genovese and Joseph Vitale, arrested recently charged with carrying concealed weapons, said they were employed as bodyguards by wealthy bootleggers, whose various alcoholic concoctions were bringing to them great amounts of money.

Low-type criminals, they said, were turning their hold-up, sandbag and shooting efforts toward the bootleggers, because they know that the hauls were always big.

THEY ALSO, ARE TAXED

New York, Dec. 12.—One-sixth of the national income of the United States went into taxes in 1921, according to a report which has just been issued by the National Industrial Conference Board.

"The tax bill in the United States is fast making inroads on the surplus necessary for economic progress," the report declared, and threatens materially to hamper our growth, especially in view of the uninterrupted rise in local government taxes."

According to the report, the United Kingdom stands first in the burden of taxes with the United States second. Germany comes third and France fourth on the list.

Edmonton, Alta., Dec. 13.—Favorable results have followed the exchange of professors which was instituted two years ago by the universities of western Canada following the visits of professors between the universities of Manitoba and North Dakota. University authorities are elated over the success of the new system which places Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta universities in closer touch. Arrangements have been completed for an exchange during this winter.

The visiting professors remain in Edmonton for three days during which time they give a public address to the students of the university, the staff and all members of the general public who care to attend. This occasion is treated as a formal academic event at which members of the faculty are present in academic costumes.

The visiting professor meets the staff of the university on another occasion and also visits the rifle rooms and laboratories, and meets the students of the particular university department with which he is intimately related in his own university.

POPULAR CUBAN BANDIT MAKES GET-AWAY

Havana, Cuba, Dec. 13.—With sentence totalling 200 years in prison hanging over his head, and $50 fines and rural guards at his heels, Ramon Arroyito, Cuba's modern Jesse James, has staged a large, if temporary, escaping from jail at Matanzas through a hole blown in the thick wall by a mid-day bail signin meal which left him a popular hero and added to the difficulties of the authorities, for they claim no one will help them follow his trail.

Arroyito took to the high road about three years ago and, if the bulging kidnappings and other unlawful acts attributed to him are well founded, he operated in every part of the island before he went into retirement after two years of heckic endeavor and with a fortune variously estimated at from $50,000 to $300,000. But last spring, while very pessimistically travelling from Matanzas to a nearby village to attend a cock fight, he was captured by two rural guards, acting as a train escort, who held him under for carrying arms without a license, but loaded him with chains when they discovered he was the notorious outlaw.

Brought to Havana, Arroyito was greeted by thousands at the railway station and his first trip to the city jail resembled a triumphal procession. While being tried and convicted on numerous counts, he perfected his plans for breaking loose from jail and only the accidental presence of a mounted policeman on the harbor side of the jail prevented a clean get away three months ago.

His escape from Matanzas jail, where he was lodged last week to await trial by military court, is credited to a former pal, Julio Ramires, whom Arroyito once rescued from jail at Jarnco by holding up the warden and turnkeys single-handed in broad daylight.

MOVIES IN DINING CAR

Chicago, Dec. 12.—The Chicago and Alton Railroad began today to give moving picture shows for passengers on its St. Louis fast train. It leaves at noon. At 1 o'clock when the dining car undergoes something of a transformation; the tables, shoved to make way for more chairs, the galley becomes a reel-operator's booth, a screen miraculously appears at the other end, the car is darkened—and presto! Travelers are able to turn from the hotel guides, telegraph blanks and aged and decrepit magazines to a first-class, up-to-date movie performance.

DOG WAITS IN VAIN FOR MASTER

Milton, Dec. 12.—George Halliday, of Strobville, saw his dog, a fox terrier, chase a skunk into a hole a few weeks ago, and paid no more attention to the incident.

The dog not having returned, Mr. Halliday, after a long search, decided to look at the hole in which the dog chased the skunk. He found that earth had fallen into the hole, making prisoners of both his dog and the skunk.

After digging into the hole, he found his dog, which was dead. The dog had eaten the entire skunk, all but the hide. Mr. Halliday believes the dog must have lived about a week in the hole, eating a portion of the skunk daily in order to keep alive, with the hope that his master would find him and release him from his underground prison.

BRITISH STEAMER AGROUND IN BOSTON

Injured In Boxing Bout Last Night at Kingston

Boston, Dec. 13.—The British steamer, "Manchester Spinner," which sailed from here yesterday for St. John, N. B., went aground on the tip of Long Island, Boston Harbor today. Tugs were sent to the assistance of steamer.

NEW ENGLAND ABOUNDS IN GAME

Boston, Dec. 14.—"Above this time," as the old farmers' almanacs used to say, a frequently occurring paragraph in New England country newspapers reads somewhat as follows:

"The annual game supper was held last night. There was a large attendance and the hunters provided a bounteous repast."

"Although the wild turkey which set the style for Thanksgiving dinners on the occasion of the Pilgrims' first Thanksgiving Day three hundred years ago has disappeared from New England woods, three centuries of hunting with firearms has far from exterminated the wild life of the forests in this section. Even in the immediate vicinity of Boston, deer and ruffed grouse are seen occasionally, and squirrels, hare and foxes are regular inhabitants of suburban woodland. The pheasant, not a native game bird but imported some years ago, has flourished in Massachusetts and southern New Hampshire. Geese and an abundance of waterfowl pass on New England lakes and streams in their migrations.

"In the Maine does the moose persist, but bears, common in that state, are still found also in the remote sections of the mountain regions in New Hampshire, Vermont and western Massachusetts. Wildcats are shot of late years, and the increasing number of hunters has not more seriously depleted the supply of game in New England in the larger by conservation measures. For many years all the states in this section have enforced as strictly as possible the closed season provisions of the game laws, and in recent open seasons the bag limit on various classes of game birds and animals have been made increasingly smaller. Licenses also are required of all hunters, and in the case of non-residents high fees are demanded.

"The game supper nowadays is often like sharing by an individual or a group of hunters of the results of a day's sport. But in a few villages in the heart of the woods it takes on greater importance. Teams of villagers, fifty to a hundred on a side, are pitted against each other in a hunt from daybreak to dark. The men go into the woods singly, each to his favorite hunting ground. When all have returned at night the spoils of each team are counted, and the one having the smaller amount of game pays all the expenses incidental to serving an elaborate meal in which the meat courses range from squirrel pie to venison steak.

FOUR-MONTHS OLD BABE GIVES ALARM OF FIRE

Oshawa, Dec. 12.—Awakened at an early hour this morning by the coughing and crying of his four-months-old son, Robert, Joseph Hollis, 529 St. Julien street, found his house filled with stifling smoke and rapidly spreading flames.

He immediately awakened his wife, who, taking the child, sought refuge in the cellar while Mr. Blake extinguished the blaze.

The fire started as a result of the igniting of resin from wood which had been placed in the oven to dry.

Mr. Blake believes that had he not been awakened by the baby the family would have perished.

CUPID WORKED IN SPITE OF THE STORM

Couple Induces Captain to Leave Bridge to Perform Ceremony

New York, Dec. 12.—That the steamship Mount Clay, of the United American lines, was plunging and buffeting her way through a hurricane, meant nothing to Frank Kolchek, who resides in Chicago, when he embarked he met Miss Erna Bergman, of Bremen. It was a case of love at first sight, of swift wooing. So ardent was the appeal of the couple to Captain Earl T. Brown, that he must marry them, that the captain left the bridge for a few minutes to accomplish them. He married them.

Kolchek and the storm meant nothing to him, that his skies were blue and it was Spring-time.

REFORM MEN NOT ONLY PUNISH THEM

Winnipeg, Dec. 13.—Declaring that the new idea in prison work was to reform men and not simply to punish them, Governor J. C. Dowsie, of the provincial jail here, stated before that a meeting of the Winnipeg Ministerial Association recently that the introduction of the honor system and the operating of a prison farm has proved a distinct success in Manitoba.

Governor Downie said the chief value of the farm which is situated on the Greater Winnipeg Waterways Railway about 60 miles northeast of Winnipeg, was its effect on the prisoners who were taken into an atmosphere of industry in the outside world and not kept penned up inside four walls. The results of this industry brought some substantial cheques as revenue, but the great result was the wholesome influence in the lives and characters of the men. Concerts and other forms of entertainment besides provisions for religious worship are provided both by and for the inmates of the farm and jail.

The establishing of the common dining room and the introduction of a quieter costume for the prisoners were also discussed by Governor Downie.

Although economy had not been thought of when the common dining room was put into operation in 1919, Governor Downie said it had been found that a saving of one cent per person per day had been effected in spite of the fact provisions had increased in price since the system was instituted.

Included among the passengers arriving on the specials were a number of prominent men from Western Canada, as well as many from Montreal and Toronto. There were also a number from the Orient en route to the Motherland to spend the Christmas holidays.

LATEST AGRICULTURAL NEWS FROM PROVINCIAL DEPARTMENT

The drying up of wells is causing much labor and anxiety to many farmers. In some cases water has to be brought a considerable distance to the barns, or else some of the live stock have to be led to the water. That the trouble is more than local is shown by the fact that this week alone complaints on this score have come from the representatives of Kent, Elgin, Peel, Lennox an Addington, Peterborough and Hastings.

Last week buyers in Elgin were offering as from $7 to $8 a ton for hay in the barn.

Peel states: "Toronto and outside seed buyers are still operating in the alfalfa districts. Shipments are being made weekly. Prices from $11 to $13 a bushel are paid."

North Simcoe says: "Alsike seed is proving an extra good yield, but prices are low, averaging about $4.50 per bushel with highest price about $6.00. Red clover is scarce and not yielding very well; $10 per bushel has been paid for same extra good seed as it came from the thresher."

Lanark says: "Owing to the open fall many farmers left their live stock out until quite late with the result that they went back greatly in condition, and are not now showing as good as they should, considering the amount of feed in the country."

Kent reports as follows: "Store cattle in winter quarters are in good condition and a larger number than usual are being fed in this county. The price being paid for feeders runs as high as 6c. per lb. Quite a number have been purchased at $5.75 per cwt. Price of hogs on local market $9.50 per cwt. The hogs on the local market this week was smaller than usual."

Frontenac says: "Live stock marketing is rather quiet. More beef and pork is being sold on the market in the quarter. Dressed beef is selling from 7c. to 9c. Dressed pork from 17c to 20c. Hogs are selling around $10 a cwt., live weight."

Lennox and Addington says: "Farmers are taking keen interest in the securing of pure bred Yorkshire pigs of the proper bacon type. Many have been making inquiries regarding the grading policy as outlined by the Live Stock Branch. Pure-bred Yorkshire sows, five months of age, are selling at $18 each.

Dry cows as canners are selling at from $1.50 to $2 a cwt. in Glengarry."

Milk values are improving in Elgin. The condensery rate now is $2.10 a cwt. for 3.5 per cent. milk.

Cheese factories are all closed in Frontenac and that county states the condensery at Sydenham is still running, but the supply of milk is only about an eighth of the regular summer supply. The demand is good for both milk and butter.

Peterborough and Hastings also report cheese factories as closed for regular work.

Good heavy horses are bringing from $175 to $200 each in Lennox and Addington.

Leeds says: "At the turkey fair at Athens last Friday, prices per lb. for turkeys averaged around 43c to 45c, some 35c, poultry, 25c to 30c. There was a larger quality of chickens than usual as compared with turkeys.

South Simcoe reports a number of applications from farmers for fully experienced hands on a yearly basis.

TEN THOUSAND FOR FORESTRY RESEARCH

Winnipeg, Dec. 12.—For the advancement of forestry in the Province of Manitoba, Hugh W. Kennedy a pioneer lumberman of Winnipeg, who died last May, provided in his will for the payment of $10,000 to the University of Manitoba. The Home and Foreign Mission funds of the Congregational Church of Canada will also benefit to the extent of $2,500 each.

FOUR RAILWAY EXAMINERS ARE APPOINTED

Winnipeg, Dec. 12.—Appointment of four examiners under the Board of Railway Commissioners to investigate all minor cases and report their findings to the commissioners for ratification, is announced by the Winnipeg Board of Trade, according to F. E. Hamilton, transportation secretary.

Under this system, which is already in vogue in the United States, the examiners would be able to undertake investigation of a great many complaints which now have to come before the board, resulting in considerable delay in the settlement of grievances. It would also give the members of the board more time to deal with big matters of policy.

WHILE SHEPHERDS WATCHED THEIR FLOCKS BY NIGHT

By Nahum Tate.

While shepherds watched their flocks by night,
All seated on the ground,
The Angel of the Lord came down,
And glory shone around.
"Fear not," said he, for mighty dread
Had seized their troubled mind;
"Glad tidings of great joy I bring
To you and all mankind.

"To you, in David's town, this day
Is born of David's line,
The Savior who is Christ the Lord,
And this shall be the sign:
The heavenly babe you there shall find
To human view display'd,
All meanly wrapped in swadd'ling bands,
And in a manger laid."

Thus spake the seraph; and forthwith
Appeared a shining throng
Of Angels, praising God, who thus Addressed their joyful song:
"All glory be to God on high,
And to the earth be peace;
Good will henceforth from Heaven to men
Begin and never cease."

A WOMAN WHO HAS SUCCEEDED

(From "The Delineator.")

Nine years ago Edna K. Lemke was a stenographer at eight dollars a week; today she is general manager of a million-dollar plant of The Aladdin Company, manufacturers of ready-cut houses, in Wilmington, North Carolina. In her plant she can build five thousand houses a year. Her yearly salary is ten thousand dollars. Miss Lemke's success is a tribute to her own will to succeed. She was born in Petoskey, Mich., just twenty-nine years ago. At sixteen she was teaching in a country shool to help pay her expenses through college. Upon her graduation she went into the Michigan office of The Aladdin Company as one of eighty stenographers.

Even during her first days with the company she was singled out for her unusual work. Other stenographers merely transcribed their employer's letters, but she did more than that. She read the letter to which her dictation was an answer. She studied old files and was not satisfied until she understood every reference, or until she could tell what would be the answer to a letter before the answer came. Before long, and more, she read in her spare time every lumber-trade bulletin that came into the office. She watched market quotations, learned about the different grades of lumber, reasoned out price fluctuations and figured out cost quotations.

Tactfully and unobtrusively, as her employer offered her the opportunity, she fitted herself for responsibilities and gave him the benefit of the information she had stored up in her memory. Soon she was answering all of the correspondence herself.

After a few months, when the president of the company needed a private secretary, Miss Lemke won the promotion over the roomful of other stenographers. With it she earned a salary of eighteen dollars a week. As secretary to the president she took advantage of every opportunity to learn the business, and more and more sales and executive matters were entrusted to her.

After five years, Miss Lemke's second promotion came. She was appointed assistant general manager of the Wilmington plant. Her next step up was as general vice-manager of the sales office in Tampa, and the next to great success came in January, 1922, when, after almost doubling the sales in her territory, she was made general manager of the Wilmington plant. In her new position Miss Lemke has already designed and built some of the most modern and best-selling houses her company has ever produced. All along the line of her advancement, this remarkable woman has met and passed many men and other women in her business who had chances equal to hers. But they hadn't her earnestness, her determination, her thirst for understanding and her zeal to do everything a little better than any one else could or would do it. Now Miss Lemke can receive a carload of lumber at the back door of her plant, guide it through every machine, call every saw its right name, signal every plane to the proper fraction of an inch and carry through every building process until the original lumber grow out the front door of the plant a complete house.

And with it all, this young woman, who is also a successful wife, is young, gracious, charming and unspoiled by business success. She is as truly a womanly woman as one who has never stepped over a business threshold.

HO, HUM!

It would be foolish to tell the girls who are wearing the new type of gown to "sit tight." The skirts are to tight they can't sit at all.

PADREIC COLUM.

LAUSANNE STYLES DOOM FLAPPER

Lausanne, Dec. 14.—Short hair and short skirts won little favor in the fashion conference which Paul Poiret the Paris artist, conducted at the Grand Theatre for the fashionable crowds gathered in Lausanne for the Near Eastern Conference.

Ten Parisian mannikins displayed more than 100 costumes before the exclusive audience, which registered its approval by loud applause. The last model was a mannikin moved across the stage in a costume which did not meet the fancy of the assembly.

It soon became apparent that the girls counted more than the costume. Yes, it was difficult for a short-haired girl to call forth much applause from the young diplomats who constituted a greater part of the male section of the audience.

There were mannikins with bobbed hair which was curled, and bobbed hair which was plastered down straight. There were both brunettes and blondes with short hair, but they attracted little attention.

All eyes were on the girls with long hair, regardless of whether it was red, golden or black. They got all the applause. And the more elaborate the costume the mannikin was, the greater her popularity with the spectators.

The snappy flapper was clearly in the discard, in the opinion of the international expert gathered at Lausanne, and the willowy girl in extremely long skirts and with plainly dressed hair was in favor. The prettiest favorite among the mannikins was a gray-eyed little Quakeress, with brown hair parted in the middle, and simply dressed. Her suits and gowns were all gray or blue, and whenever she appeared on the stage the applause was deafening, while the more flashy mannikins, walking with great affectation and dressed in conspicuously red and yellow gowns, were greeted with little enthusiasm.

"I should say so. She's dead in love with a baseball player."

LINKED LIVES

By D. Kinmount Roy

A few days afterwards they were on their way to London. Hardcastle was in high spirits and unknown; and no one could then imagine the speed and comfort of an ordinary motor car, which had travel over ninety miles an hour. MacAlpin and Graham breathed more freely when Dover was passed, and safely under the roof of their lawyer, Frederick Maitland.

The law firm of which Frederick Maitland was the principal member, was not concerned ordinarily with criminal cases—affairs of bankruptcy required a little adjusting, but those were not considered criminal, being more mishap annoyance than crime. Nothing much to be regretted, were in no way dishonourable, when the game was played fair and proper as it should be.

Therefore when a charge of murder was brought against Lord Glenmore, it almost seemed like an attack upon the honour and standing of the firm, as well as their client. They were absolutely convinced from the first that Glenmore was innocent; and yet such was the nature of the case and the quantity of evidence procurable, that the utmost they could obtain was, as we know, the somewhat unsatisfactory verdict of "Not Proven."

The situation was as cruel as it was unsatisfactory, and the secretary of Maitland's partner Maitland, both from a personal and from a professional standpoint. The devoted friend, the wife, he knew, told seriously against the unfortunate man and nearly turned the scale against him, and doomed him to an unpronounced end.

Now, this very child is under his own roof, and MacAlpin has told him all he knows; yet, as though some malign fate pursued him, MacAlpin and Fergusson's combined story left the absolute proof required to clear Lord Glenmore. Suspicion now, for the first time, pointed to Eric Hardcastle, in the opinion of Maitland—with MacAlpin it had been a firm conviction for a long time, and as soon as he had seen Oona, it became a certainty. But proof, undoubted proof, was still lacking.

Janet and her husband had taken the child, rescued her, in fact, from the drunken ruffian into whose hands Kinkaid had given her. Peter Melean and Janet were not only moved by pity for the child, but also by loyalty and compassion for Glenmore, whose wild ways they deplored, while the murder filled them with dark misgivings as they knew not what. Hardcastle secured th them the evil genius of their master. They were firmly convinced that he cheated him out of his wealth, and obtained his estates by fraud and trickery, and had driven him to evil courses forced by his open and generous nature. In this we know their surmises were well-founded.

But the case was much worse than they supposed; for Hardcastle was quite willing to see an innocent man hanged for a crime which he had himself instigated, if not actually committed. To cheat an unsuspecting man out of his broad acres and good name, while pretending to play the part of an attached friend and counsellor, without being found out, is surely a height of villainy attained by few, however, corrupt, deceitful and covetous. Hardcastle having reached this bad eminence, was serene and unmoved, with the air of a gentleman and nobleman who was sorry for the misfortunes of his friend, very sorry indeed!

Maitland was satisfied that while he had not obtained positive proof of his client's innocence, he had found the clue which could not fail in the end to solve the mystery and render fruitless the evil schemes of an heartless and covetous life.

But how was this to be obtained, after the lapse of so many years? The memory of Lord Glenmore and his wild ways had become little more than a tradition, and for all time Eric Hardcastle had been master of Rosemay Hall. By what means he had obtained it Lord Maitland had any knowledge; and in the absence of Glenmore and the minority of his son, no one seemed called up to enquire into it.

Hardcastle was indeed in possession, but for all that, he was neither loved nor honoured; still, his possession was a fact which many accepted without question. True, the mineral wealth which had been unknown and undeveloped under men's feet had been brought to light by his means, and where the old Lord had left barren acres, the squires had called into existence extensive industries, from which great revenues were coming gold for Eric Hardcastle, and peopling a whole district with human life palpitating with energy and zeal. Small wonder if he felt at times that he had a right to rule in another man's stead. Why, he often said to himself, should a man's penetration and executive ability be limited by the narrow legal and social fetters of what the world, in spasms of virtue, made so much?

He challenged any man to deny that he had built up the district by the might of his power and the cunning of his brain; and why, he asked, should he rob him of his just reward for having done so!

His position was as secure as need be. Hundreds held their estates, if the truth were known, by a worse tenure.

What did MacAlpin's evidence as to a secret marriage in a foreign country amount to? Certainly, not much; and a young girl's likeness to a woman whose love and trust was too easily won proved nothing — absolutely nothing! The Squire smiled, as he recalled MacAlpin's vapourings.

DICK FAILS

"We are going to have a written lesson this morning," announced Miss White to to English history class.

Dick, who had been excitedly trying to read the first paragraph of the lesson, shut his book with a bang. That was just his luck. Here this was the first time he hadn't studied his lesson for months, and of course she had to have a written lesson. Now if it had been oral, he might have been able to bluff, but written—

"It will not take you long if you are prepared," Miss White was saying. "The questions all require short answers. I don't want any long discussions today, but just facts."

Dick's heart sank lower. His last hope was gone. Facts were just what he did not have. He might have been able to answer a few general questions, but luck was surely against him today.

Miss White wrote the first question on the board. "Give the dates of the reign of Henry VIII." Dick's mind was blank. He might have known she would ask for dates.

Beside him sat Dorothy Snow, the brightest girl in the class. Quickly in bold figures she wrote "1509-1547." Dick glanced up, and the big black figures held his attention. What harm would it do if he wrote them on his paper? He had not meant to look at it, but there they were, and now he knew the answer. The words were surprising, he argued with himself, and even if it was—tell all the fellows did it. He had ever been Dorothy's cheat. Why should he be the only one who didn't and his grades suffer for it?

As Dick struggled with himself, his eyes were again attracted by Dorothy's moving pencil. "Cardinal Wolsey," she wrote in answer to the second question. As quickly as Miss White wrote the questions on the board Dorothy wrote the answers. Dick could

The Real Reason

"Can you tell me what is the chief reason of your long life?" asked the reporter of Uncle Moe, who was celebrating his hundredth birthday.

"Well, suh. Ah reckon it's because Ah was bo'n a long time back."

She Was Happy

"And now," said the Sunday School teacher, "tell me what you did yesterday that made some one happy."

"I went to visit my aunt," said Johnnie, when it came his turn, "and when I went home it made her happy."

A Question of Time

"The hired man on, Farmer Slocum's place ploughed up a stump yesterday that he lost three years ago."

"I suppose now he's claiming extra pay for marking over time."

A Riddle

"When is a lamp post a tamplight, sir?"

"When the lamp is taken off."

His Start

"How do you like the new school?"

"The answers just as plainly as the questions. For half an hour he sat there watching those answers and struggling with his better self. Finally Dorothy wrote the last answer. He knew them all now. He had only to write them down on his paper. No one would ever know. What harm could it do? He had always had good grades, and he hated to fail now. Miss White would never know. No one would know.

"No one but myself," thought Dick. "Yes that's just the point. I'll always know and be ashamed."

In large letters he wrote above seross his paper just as the bell rang, "I am unprepared." Dick smiled to himself. He had failed, but he felt that it wasn't so much of a failure as it would have been if he had passed.

Just in Time

"Watch this horse for me," ordered the man, as he climbed out of the wagon and went into the store. The boy stopped obediently. Suddenly a train came along, half a block away, and the horse bolted down the street.

The man came out just as the horse was disappearing around a curve. "Gosh," said the boy with relief, "it's a good thing you came. I couldn't have watched him much longer."

BREECHES ARE "THE THING"

Any Montreal girl who have been reluctantly compelled to admit that they are beautiful, and who prepared to submit to the said test by applying for the position of Miss Montreal at the coming winter carnival, will be well advised to look carefully into the question of costume. The fat has gone forth that skirts are taboo and breeches are in the order of the day. Consequently, any young and ambitious female not appearing in the latter, may be brought before the O.C. and charged with appearing on parade improperly dressed.

The Winter Sports Committee has already stated that the title will not be awarded to beauty alone, but that the successful applicant must also be a sports girl. This has now been interpreted to mean not that she must necessarily be proficient in some branch of winter sport, though this, of course, is desirable, but that she must at least present herself in a sport costume. As the costume should be as up-to-date as possible, all young things now busily engaged hunting through the old trunk to find the tobogan suit will do well, when they find it, to throw out the shirt, if it has one, and study form to purchase a pair of breeches. One who claims to be a high authority on these matters says that skirts went out some time ago and that girls who took up skiing started the fashion in breeches, which they found much more suitable and convenient, besides eliminating danger from accident. The fashion soon spread to tobogganing, and the skirt is now as far out of date as the crinoline.

THE LATEST NEWS OF WASHINGTON

Washington, December 13.—Reorganization of the government agencies dealing with commerce, mining, manufacturing, shipping, fisheries and transportation facilities into three groups, each under an assistant secretary, was recommended by Secretary Hoover today in his annual report to Congress.

Whether these groups, which would contain themselves respectively with industry, trade and navigation, should be brought into the Commerce Department he declared was secondary to the necessity for the grouping itself in order to obtain concentration of purpose to eliminate overlapping. A direct saving of upwards of $1,000,000 a year in administration would be possible under the plan, he estimated, while many times that amount given to the public in increased values and services.

Administration of these functions at present, Mr. Hoover explained, now is divided among seven different departments of widely different major purposes, with the result, that there is "inevitable overlap, duplication and lack of purpose."

The Secretary's report, except for an appendix containing a recital of the work of the various departmental bureaus during the past fiscal year, consisted of a discussion of important domestic problems facing the country, with suggestions for solution and fourteen specific recommendations for new legislation directly affecting his department. Besides the plan of reorganizing of government activities his recommendations were:

Establishment of foreign trade zones in the ports of the United States as a substitute for the present system of bonded warehouses, to be undertaken as a contribution to the American merchant marine in increasing the volume of trade carried in American ships.

Radical reduction of the fees now charged for passports and visa and revision of the formalities required of travellers, because of retaliatory measures abroad which are hardly ing American merchants and traveling salesmen.

Adequate definition of the liability of ocean cargo carriers for loss or damage to goods as a remedy for much needless and time-wasting litigation.

Codification and revision of the navigation laws, for scientific application of the administration of the supervisory work of the government agencies in charge of shipping.

Enactment of a lode-line law similar to the laws of the maritime powers of Europe.

Modification of the present double inspection system of ocean cargo steamers.

Exemption from federal taxes or American resident abroad who are engaged in the expansion of American commerce, Americans so engaged, he argued, are placed at a great disadvantage in competition with nationals, as the United States is the only important nation which so imposes her domestic taxation.

Enactment of legislation now before Congress for the regulation of safety requirements in commercial aviation.

Extension of the regulatory powers the Commerce Department for control of radio.

Legislation for the betterment of the lighthouse service, including the construction of a lighthouse and fog signal at Cape Spencer, Alaska, and the construction or improvement of lighthouse depots and installation of radio fog signals at Newport, R. I. ed Boston, Mass., and of aids to avigation at Ludington, Mich., Galveston, Tex., Sandusky, Ohio, and Airport, Ohio.

A new node to give the Commerce Department complete jurisdiction over the fisheries in Alaska to enable preservation of the salmon industry.

Laws to prevent the pollution of coastal waters by fuel oil from ships and the many petroleum derivatives used in industry.

Increased salaries for experts and specialists in the Commerce Department.

Mr. Hoover reported among other things that investigation by his department had disclosed that the country's domestic sources of oil would last only a generation, and that foreign nations were rapidly developing the available foreign oil-bearing territory. He added, however, that through the voluntary measures sponsored by the oil industry, a number of holdings abroad there is measurable assurance of future supplies under American control.

As to the general business situation, the Commerce Secretary declared the outlook was also improved over a year ago as to be incomparable, despite the inequalities still existing in the price levels between various commodities and between farmers, manufacturers and farmers.

"Some relief," he said, "could be given to the farmer by readjustment of railway rates in such a fashion as to impose larger burdens upon high priced commodities and lower rates on primary products. A greater relief would be given if he were provided with adequate transportation. Further relief would be given by the provision of an adequate credit system to meet his needs of loans for periods in excess of Federal Reserve facilities and all security, the commercial rates of interest."

Liberalization of the law with respect to trade associations was favored by Mr. Hoover to the extent that co-operative organizations generally, as distinguished from capital consolidations, should be permitted to file with some appropriate governmental agency the plan of their operations, the functions they propose to carry on, and the objectives they propose to reach that upon approval such of these functions as did not apparently contravene public interest might be proceeded with; that upon complaint, either by individuals or by the government that these functions had resulted against the public interest, a hearing should be held before some suitable tribunal and the right to continue these particular functions should, if the complaints were found justified, be suspended.

Discussing the effects of the new tariff law, Mr. Hoover asserted that generally the volume of the country's exports is likely to be increased by the increasing prosperity at home.

"The theoretical assumption," he said, "that the new tariff will so diminish our imports as to strangle the buying power of foreign countries for our exports does not seem to be borne out by a critical examination of the actual figures involved. Somewhere between one-third and one-half of foreign buying power for our exports is furnished by variable exchange. Beyond this somewhere from 40 to 55 per cent of commodities shipped to us from abroad are upon the free list (based upon application of the Fordney tariff to the 1921-22 imports, where about 60 per cent were free, thus the buying power is untrammeled up to, say, 70 to 80 per cent. The remainder of our imports which are dutiable is in large part such goods as will be imported in any event, as sugar, wool, lumber, etc. Therefore it would not seem that the gross volume of exports would be very greatly influenced one way or another by the tariff."

In a critical examination of the railroad situation the Secretary described the needs for revision of railway legislation to prevent the strangulation of industry and commerce through a shortage of transportation.

"We must have increased transportation," he said, "if we are to maintain our growing productivity. We must therefore find a way out of the cycle of systematic starvation of

"HAD A NARROW ESCAPE"

"I never realized until a few months ago how risky it is to neglect a cold in the chest. I have always had such good health, that a cold either in the head or chest, while unpleasant, never gave me any worry. Outside an occasional cold, I had never known what it was to be laid up even for a day in all my life, until last December. One afternoon I got a chill and no matter how much I got to bed, I couldn't seem to get warm. This chill was followed by a cold in my chest. As usual I neglected it and it kept getting worse and worse. Finally I had to go to bed and send for the doctor. His examination showed that I had pneumonia and a bad case at that. By careful nursing, the care of my husband, my children and some friends, I managed to pull through, but the doctor told me I had a narrow shave. And here's where my trouble began. While I was now out of danger, I was anything but well. I was a very weak from the effects of the pneumonia. Although I had lots of life and energy before my sickness, I was now worn out and tired all the time. I slept fairly well, more because I was exhausted. But my sleep didn't refresh me because, while I appeared to be asleep, I was conscious most of the time of what was going on around me. The kinds of tempting dishes were prepared for me, I had no relish for food. This sickness had already undermined my health to the point where I was a living skeleton. I was getting discouraged as nothing I took seemed to do me any good. "I wonder" Carmel wouldn't build you up," a friend said one day, "it did me a world of good." I was completely run down and a source for yourself how well I look today. Why don't you try it? Thanks to this friend's advice I am in perfect health again, as healthy and as full of life and vitality as I have ever been."

SIXTH REDISTRIBUTION BILL TO BE INTRODUCED INTO PARLIAMENT EARLY IN YEAR

New Bill Will Probably Provide For Nine New Members in Commons—Total Number of Members To Be 244

(By Canadian Press)

Ottawa, Dec. 8.—Shortly after the opening of Parliament, the sixth Redistribution Bill presented since the confederation, will, according to present intentions, be introduced in the House. When the last Redistribution Bill was introduced by Sir Robert Borden in the session which preceded the outbreak of the Great War, no attempt was made to define the limits of constituencies. Following the example of Sir Wilfrid Laurier eleven years previously, Sir Robert submitted a Bill without schedules, leaving to a "Parliamentary committee the work of actually plotting out constituencies where changes have to be made. It is altogether likely that the present Government will follow a similar course. But, in the coming session, the party composition of the special committee will of necessity have to undergo a change. In 1914, the committee consisted of seven members; four Government and three Opposition. On the present occasion the Progressive party, in addition to Liberals and Conservative, will be represented on the committee.

The next House, when the pending redistribution will become effective, will be the largest numerically since Confederation. It will consist of 244 members, an increase of nine over the present membership, and the various provinces will be represented as follows:

	Present New House	House
Quebec	65	65
Nova Scotia	16	11
New Brunswick	11	13
Prince Edward Island	4	4
Ontario	82	91
Manitoba	15	17
Saskatchewan	16	21
Alberta	12	16
British Columbia	13	14
Yukon Territory	1	1
	235	244

Based on the census of eighteen months ago, the next House will have eleven more members from the Prairie Provinces. Nova Scotia and Ontario will have decreased representation. Saskatchewan will get an additional five members, the largest increase of any province. Alberta comes second with an increase of four members, Yukon, in the foregoing table, is indicated as retaining its present representation of one member. But there is doubt if this course will be followed. When, in 1902, the Yukon was first given a representative in the House, it had a population of 27,219. But the days of the gold rush drew to a close. Year by year, a decrease of the Yukon dwindled until at the census taken on June 1 it was only 4,157. During the previous decade it dropped 31 per cent.

The story of successive redistributions shows how the numbers assigned to the members of each province of Confederation, have been their representations in the House increase, and then, with the growth of the Western provinces, decline again. Such has been the case of Ontario.

In 1867, Ontario had 82 members; in 1872, its membership rose to 88; in 1882, to 92. Then the decline started. In 1903, the representation of Ontario was 86; in the present Parliament it is 82, the same, curiously, as at Confederation! In the next Parliament it will be 91.

But the representation of Nova Scotia at Confederation was 19. At the first redistribution, it rose to 21. It is now 16, and in the next Parliament, according to the present census computation, will be 14.

New Brunswick had 15 members at Confederation. Its representation then rose to 16 and remained at that figure for 30 years. It declined in 1903 to 14. In the present Parliament it is 11, a representation that is unlikely to be affected in the coming readjustment.

Meanwhile, provinces west of the Great Lakes have been growing and their representation in Parliament has been increasing. Manitoba's representation at first appear in the Representation Act of 1872, the former with four members and the latter with six. In the next Parliament, they will have seventeen and fourteen respectively.

The provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan were formed from the Northwest Territories in 1905. In the present Parliament each was fixed at 7 and 10 respectively. In the next Parliament, Alberta will have 16 members and Saskatchewan 21.

In readjusting constituencies, the broad principles taken as objectives are:

First, observance of municipal boundaries.

Secondly, equalization of population in the different constituencies.

Under the latter head, there is likely to be a conflict of opinion between urban and rural members. The British North America Act defines the basis of representation from each province. But no attempt is made in the B.N.A. Act to define the size of population of individual constituencies. Thus, there are urban constituencies returning also one member. Under the census of 1921, Maisonneuve, P.Q., has a population of 56,933. It returns one member. Brome in the same province, also returns one member with a population of 13,471. Ontario, there are 10,000 people in South York; in East Peterborough, only 13,716. Both these constituencies return one member each. In Nova Scotia, there is a variation between a population of 17,739 in Hants and one of 49,191 in Cumberland, both single member constituencies. Charlotte in New Brunswick has a population of 21,435; Restigouche and Madawaska in the same province, one of 42,977. In the other provinces, too, there are wide differences in certain cases in the population of constituencies although each is entitled to send one member to Parliament.

It is some of these anomalies which the coming redistribution plans to remove, while, at the same time, the representation of the different provinces is readjusted.

WELL TRAINED

At an annual series of races "for all comers," the sun was shining down on a field of hot, excited horses and men, all waiting for a tall, raw-boned beast to yield to the importunities of the starter and get into line. The patience of the starter was nearly exhausted. "Bring up that horse!" he shouted. "Bring him up!" The rider of the refractory beast, a youthful Irishman, yelled back: "I can't! This here's been a cab-horse, and he won't start till he hears the door shut, an' I ain't got no door!"

PRIVATE BANK OF "FLIVVER" MAGNATE IS SCENE OF BOLD HOLDUP

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 14—Five thugs and dollars in bills of small denomination was the loot obtained by a masked bandit, who fled up a private bank maintained within the walls of the Ford Motor Company's Highland Park plant late this afternoon. The bank is one maintained by Mr. Ford for the convenience of his workmen. The robber carried a sawed off shotgun, one barrel of which he discharged as he entered the bank. The shot was sufficient to keep the half score of men in the place from offering any resistance.

After grabbing a couple of bundles of bills from the shelf in the cashier's cage, the bandit dropped his sack and ran. How he managed to bring a shotgun into the factory without being detected has not yet been explained to the satisfaction of the police.

BRITISH HOUSE PROROGUED DESPITE LABOR'S PROTEST

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Dec. 15.—The British Parliament was prorogued to-day, until February 13th. The program for autumn work through without a hitch, despite the widely heralded efforts of a small body of the left wing of labor members, to prevent the rising of House of Commons, until a remedy was found for the unemployment situation. In his prorogation speech, King George stressed the need for the economic rehabilitation of Europe, and asserted the task of restoring conditions could only be overcome by co-operation among the nations affected. The measures of unemployment received special consideration in the speech, the king stating that the government would do all in its power to alleviate present conditions.

SOLDIER SETTLEMENT BOARD FOR IMMIGRANTS

King Government Will Likely Use Services and Accumulated Information to Help Colonists in Same Manner that it Helped Soldier Settlers

BOARD IS WELL ORGANIZED

Ottawa, Dec. 15.—It was announced yesterday that in carrying out its plans for the establishment of a land grant and other settlers, on the land, that the government will probably use the service organized and stores of information collected by the Soldiers' Settlement Board. The Soldiers' Settlement Board was appointed nearly five years ago, primarily to handle the considerations voted by Parliament to extend financial assistance to veterans of the Great War who desired to engage in agriculture. Inasmuch as aid was limited to the ex-service men by way of loans secured by mortgage, the Soldiers' Settlement Board has built up an organization to help the veteran to success and to protect the country's large investment. This organization on the one hand, sees that the money advanced by the Government is invested in suitable land and equipment, and on the other hand by supervision seeks to assist the settler in his farming operations. Up to the present time the Board and its staff which is scattered over the Dominion, have served only the soldier settlers and a comparatively few civilians, the assistance to veterans who for various reasons have disposed of their holdings. The Board many settlers, however, could extend the scope of its operations without materially adding to their cost and provide for the ordinary needs of three of the districts it now signs on soldier settlers. These three services are: 1. Assistance in the selection of land. 2. Assistance in the selection of live stock and farm equipment. 3. Guidance after settlement has been made, in view of the volume of business which has to be transacted for and with the soldier settlers, the Board and its staff cannot well be demobilized for several years at least.

Board's Vast Dealings.

During its five years of existence the soldiers' settlement organization has acquired knowledge of climates and conditions, and land values in every part of Canada. Settlement has been so successful that the general spread that settlement in actively in agricultural district in Canada in which it has not purchased land. Its officials have been consulted on some 50,000 tracts of agricultural land.

The extent of the Board's dealings in land is indicated by the fact that its document-room in Ottawa are filled with the records of transactions which have cost over $55,000,000, and fire insurance policies to the amount of thirty of forty million dollars on settlers' buildings.

It is believed that utilization of the Settlement Board's services and knowledge will tend to encourage immigration, "particularly of settlers with some capital and to keep the colonists on the land. Also it would be homogeneating on free grants of homesteads in the West is practically ended. Some of the unoccupied lands of the country are not adapted to agriculture, some are situated in districts where rainfall or frost conditions make farming precarious, consequently the settler who contemplates investing his money in a farm will greatly appreciate the services of an organization which can aid him in the selection of suitable land, stock and equipment, and in the effective use of the market value of each and maintain a helpful supervision of his efforts to cultivate his property.

BOTH DRURY'S AND MORRISON'S POLICIES WERE HEARTILY CHEERED

Farmers do Not Seem to Know Whether They Will "Broaden-Out" or Not—Morrison Policy Backed Up by Confidence Vote in Afternoon—Drury Policy in Evening Was Well Cheered

Toronto, Dec. 13.—Reviewing the sessions of the annual meeting of the United Farmers of Ontario held yesterday at Massey Hall, that will be in broadening out policies for the Farmers. The rank and file of the Farmers' Party went on record as desiring to hold the reins and that they will not be led by those who hold high office. This declaration was made amid cheers and enthusiasm.

But, there still be a broadening out in the political policies of the United Farmers of Ontario, if the declaration made last evening by Premier Drury before practically the same audience, in the same seats of the same Massey Hall, means anything. Outwardly that conflict of opinion did not seem to mean anything, though inwardly it may mean a great deal. For the same people who cheered and cheered a great deal of enthusiasm when the anti broadening out vote was forced through the convention, were just as loud in their cheers and their enthusiasm when Hon. Mr. Drury took the platform and talked for about an hour in a manner which compelled hand-clapping and cheering at intervals. Another week, it means that they cheered both the broaden out policy and the anti-broadening out policy, and that whichever party held the stage got the ovation; but since both parties did not chance to meet on the same day, it seems a fact that officially at least, the conference is not out forces are in the scrambled for another year. At least, they are left to their own devices for a few months through a vote in the afternoon and since there was no suggestion of a vote when Dr. Manley spoke in the evening, there can be no gauging the way the convention might have voted if the polls had not been sufficiently efficient to get the ballots in.

Premier Was Cat-Foil.

As it was, after the Premier arrived, he spoke quite plainly, but carefully. Perhaps some of the reasons for his utterances was due to the fact that he used a great deal of discretion in the choice of his words, and chose to talk broadening-out without using the actual term. The Premier had been speaking for an hour on topics which were highly flattering to the Farmer party, before he ventured upon the ticklish ground, and even then he felt his way. The first time he talked broadening-out, he did it gently; then when he got a fine round of applause, he came out more loudly, and then, the third time, he put it quite plainly and effectively and informed the Farmer party that he thought that attitude they may take for the internal management of their co-operative organizations, their only hope for a political future is to throw doors wide and accept the support of any people, of any creed whatever, who choose to give them their encouragement and their votes.

Having thus paved his way, namely by giving an accounting of his stewardship and by citing the many legislative changes the Government has brought about in the interests of the farmers, the Premier referred to the alliance with Labor. The Labor party, he declared, are not quite such a dangerous element as some people believe them to be, and since that statement was cheered it left the door open for more daring things. The future, he declared, would always require a strong farmer organization, if the movement is to remain a success, but the Farmer Movement must be based on economic necessities. It must be just as much a farmers' as a trade association is "labor."

Sir Andrew MacPhail, who held the stage in the evening, before the arrival of Premier Drury, was not complimentary to Sir Henry Thornton, the new head of the Canadian National Railway System. He was not certain that public ownership would be a success, and he openly said that "the new manager is indefatigable as a public speaker; he is so willing to keep the ear of the public that he is willing to plunge in himself."

Doherty Will Broaden-Out.

Hon. Manning Doherty was willing to take his stand beside the Premier in a broadening-out way, though he did it carefully. He stated of the necessity for getting better markets for farm produce, and for the elimination of the middlemen, the delegates that they must accept help of any person who is able and willing to give it, "whether it is a banker or industrial leader.

One direct blow was aimed at Mr. Biggs when Harold Carson, Strathroy, put through a resolution stating that the amount of money expended yearly on highway improvement should be limited to the amount received from automobile licenses. That stand was taken in view of the fact that 20 per cent of certain highway costs can be levied against county councils which have no voice in the expenditures.

The following officers were elected: President, W. A. Rowe, Pakenham; Vice-President, Harold Currie, Shelburne, and General Secretary, J. J. Morrison.

TRENTON ROTARIANS ENTERTAIN

Gilbert House Scene of Enjoyable Dance—Decorations Were Elaborate

The curtain went up for the Rotarian dance held in the Hotel Gilbert last evening under the leadership of Rotarian Col. Arthur Bywater and Mrs. W. A. Bleecker. The many guests swung into line and formed the grand march to start the evening.

The splendid music rendered by the Cuff Graydon five piece orchestra itself every chance to their finest. For one and a half hours the orchestra fully gave of their talents to the delight of all, with only the intermission for a pause. We would desire to say here that we believe the Rotarians have set a precedent in respect to supplying "home talent", where at all possible. During the intermission a buffet lunch was served, after which the immediate continuance of the dancing was suspended for a half hour while a short Shakespearian program was in order. Accordingly Mrs. Gains at the piano Miss Aileen O'Rorke sang "Tosti's Goodbye"; Mrs. G. Cliff Cook sang "Mother o' Mine", Mr. Goodmanson from Toronto rendered two selections on his violin. Rotarian "Mickey" Baker, in his usual manner sang "Mother Machree" and for an encore "Bells of St. Mary's", and every one joined the chorus. Each number was encored and was ably responded to by each singer.

Each guest upon their arrival received a paper cap to wear throughout the evening which added greatly to the

HON. MR. MEIGHEN AT HAMILTON

Hamilton, Dec. 14.—Seven hundred Hamiltonians tonight sat down to a banquet at the Royal Connaught Hotel at which were tendered to the Hon. Arthur Meighen by the recently formed Young Men's Liberal-Conservative Club. Seats could not obtain tickets for the banquet but attended later to hear the speeches.

Mr. Meighen's banquet speech was intensely patriotic. He was very optimistic concerning the future, and showed why the Conservative party did not be disenheartened at the election results of 1921. The reaction from the action of the war period in a great shaking of a flood tide of events. A combination of minorities on several issues before the country swept the Conservatives out of power.

Many of the current pressing problems of the day were dealt with by Mr. Meighen.

The banquet was an unparalleled success and the Conservatives in Hamilton are infinitely stronger today after the impressions gained at last evening's functions. The detail and memories of the evening will remain for a long time to come.

DEMOCRATIC POLITICS NEEDS TWO PARTY SYSTEM

Canon Cody Addresses Toronto Conservatives—Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen Present

Toronto, Dec. 14th.—At a luncheon here today given by the Liberal-Conservative Business Men's Club in the Carnival room of the King Edward Hotel, Rev. Canon H. J. Cody delivered an address on "The Responsibilities of Citizenship, which can be summed up as follows:

What we need is men of intelligence to wrish intelligently the economic conditions set before us. In the true sense of democracy we must have leadership. When we have chosen leaders let us give them loyal support. We want more men in public life who are sensitive to the needs of the public soul. The best we can do individually for Canada is none too much in the present perplexity and complexity of world affairs.

"Democracy today has come to its trial. It is the only form of Government that is practicable in the world. Properly applied, it affords the best hope we possess for peace and prosperous development of the masses. Constitutional monarchy is the only constitutional democracy. We need make no apology for our constitutional monarchy; it is a valuable guiding influence in our form of democracy, the purest and sanest on earth today. The only type of democracy that is practicable today is a representative democracy through which we must feel the power of democracy through our chosen representatives. The best method of Government can only be reached by having two parties. The more we study the elements of new forms of Government, Socialist, Soviet, etc., the more we are convinced that true democracy is the most stable and honest form of progressive Government, such as that given by two well organized parties. We must seat an electorate reasonably independent, and loyal, but not so blind-bound in allegiance that they will support their party even if the party goes for wrong. Under these conditions you have a sane and representative democracy.

MEIGHEN APPRECIATIVE.

At the close of Canon Cody's address, the president introduced the Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, who was accorded a hearty reception. The leader of the Conservative forces in the House of Commons said it was particularly gratifying to him to be permitted to convey his thanks to Canon Cody, whose address must have thrilled the big audience. He was wholeheartedly behind the main trend of his address and his frank criticism of the various experimental forms of Government. Hon. Mr. Meighen declared his comprehension of those difficulties which democracy had to struggle with He had followed the public and strenuous career of Canon Cody with more than ordinary interest, and he was a distinguished public man whose views he had gathered much valuable inspiration "Let us hope that his abounding, almost overwhelming attributes for better citizenship and the principles of democracy will purify the atmosphere in some circles and have the effect of clearing the field for public duty of every citizen," concluded Rt. Hon. Mr. Meighen.

This was a signal for three rousing cheers for Canon Cody, Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen and for King, and the big crowd responded lustily.

Among those at the head table were: R. C. Matthews, president; Canon H. J. Cody, Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, Dr. Edward Kemp, George Wright, D. Herbert, A. Bruce, MacGregor Young, K.C.; S. R. Parsons, E. M. Carnahan, J. Musson, J. McMichael, W. H. Price, Sir Samuel Hughes, C. B., Hon. Mark H. Irish, Horace B. Smith, Paul A. Rolph, George S. Lyon, W. F. Maclean, M.P., Senator Lougheed, C. B., R. Wickett, Sam Clarke, M.P., and E. J. Lennox.

UNCLE SAM'S HIGH TARIFF CAUSES MORE OR LESS DISCONTENT

Washington, Dec. 14. (By Canadian Press).—Although there is no real sign of another revision of the tariff in the near future, it is nevertheless a fact that there is much muttering of discontent in and ou t foCOngres sover the new law.

The full effects of that law are not yet felt. However, two things are clear: One is that there is a tendency on the part of manufactured goods to increase in price. The other is that the agricultural industry of the United States is still in a most serious condition and the tariff bill, with its high agricultural rates, has not been of any decisive advantage to the farmers. Undoubtedly, in some cases it can be shown where it has reduced importations which would have come into competition with the U. S. farmer but the fact is admitted by all agricultural authorities that the farmer's affairs are as bad now, if not worse, than they were a year ago. The tariff has proved no panacea for the troubles of the agricultural industry and there are decided symptoms that it will mean materially higher prices on the things the farmer has to buy.

Labor, it is plain, is much disaffected with the new tariff law.

If the President and tariff commission were to make quick and effective use of the flexible provisions to reduce rates, some of the discontent against the tariff would be allayed. But such is not being made. Many are becoming sceptical whether any large relief from excessive duties need be looked for through the flexible tariff provisions.

Not a few indications are given that the new tariff law will be short-lived. The results of the elections and the growth of progressive sentiment are partly due to feeling against the tariff law and if this feeling increases, as it is likely to do, the tariff may be a much larger factor in the 1924 campaign than in the recent one. Indeed, democratic hopes of carrying the country in 1923 are built partly on the belief the tariff will become increasingly unpopular.

MUSIC and DRAMA

FRECKLED WESLEY IS HIT IN "SCHOOL DAYS"

The eternal small boy to whom a bath is a punishment and a school book an unnecessary evil has been well portrayed by Wesley Barry in Gus Edwards "School Days" which was exhibited with wonderful success at Griffin's last night.

To those who urgh clean, wholesome, entertaining films for the young and impressionable can at last say, "Here is a picture we can use without changes in the time-honored phrase. Quite unlike pure good fun, "School Days" carries a good citizenship moral that any child can grasp.

Wesley Barry never appeared to better advantage than he does as Speck Brown, the freckled, mischievous hero of "School Days", the producer has caught the spirit of the small boy perfectly in arranging the settings. The Country scenes show some fine photography.

Speck Brown's story is that of the small boy taken from an orphanage and adopted by a flinty old deacon. Speck's reference lie in the direction of playing hookey and chokecherry the fishing rod with his faithful dog Hippy. The Deacon never spares the rod or forgets that Speck should earn his board at the woodpile.

A rich uncles appears unexpectedly, decides to make Speck his adopted son, and sends him on to New York, where the freckled youngster moves in rich circles, and falls victim to a confidence man, after many exciting and amusing adventures Speck returns to the country and home and simple folk.

A interesting Travelogue, "Fake Alarm" an amusing comedy, and a new chapter of the "Buffalo Bill" serial were exhibited during the evening.

"MUTT AND JEFF" AT GRIFFIN'S TONIGHT

In point of durable excellence, style and originality, the latest Mutt and Jeff offering, "Mutt and Jeff's Honeymoon" which will be the attraction at Griffin's tonight is said to be the best of the series in which these two world renowned famous stars of the cartoon have appeared since their afore-pointed excursions on the stage. The story is vastly apart from any of their previous efforts of adventure, comprising some of the most ludicrous situations, complications and screams gathered in one entertainment devised in recent years. This time little Jeff emerges from his role of bookstrap and shoes, or rather tries to lead his pal and fellow-conspirator from the meshes of domestic infelicity to the pinnacle of married happiness. However, as the Bobby Burns once said, the best laid plans of mice and men often "gang agley". In this case they do with Mutt getting the worst of it. Nevertheless, it is all satisfactorily straightened out at the finish, with the twain making up again and vowing to reform their errant ways for the time being, at least.

LEAH BAIRD ECLIPSES ALL HER PAST PERFORMANCES IN "THE CAPITOL"

Both in theme and enactment Leah Baird's new plays for Artcraft Leah Baird's new plays for Artcraft production and Paramount release grow in power. The third play of Miss Baird's series is "The Capitol", a great theatrical stage success of its period with Frank Keenan and Amelia Bingham as the stars. It is a story of politics and love and intrigue in modern Washington, with the shadow of the nation's political structure and the background of the United States Senate for atmosphere.

This makes three Augustus Thomas dramas that Miss Baird has had since the launching of the Four Star pictures under the presentation of Arthur F. Beck. These three are "As a Man Thinks," "The Volcano" and now "the Capitol," which is now being exhibited at the Regent Theatre.

Miss Baird has made a remarkable advance in her features as an already nationally popular screen star by having the advantage of six plays by the foremost of all American dramatists.

In "The Capitol" Miss Baird portrays three different roles—one in the prologue, which character she also plays a twenty years later, in addition to the principle role of a young society debutante of Washington, D. C. When the play achieved its remarkable run years ago, the three who stood out in the all-star aggregation were Amelia Bingham, Mary Shaw and Frank Keenan. In the selection of a cast to support Miss Baird, Mr. Beck assembled a coterie of players, who qualify nearest to the original Broadway cast.

Pathe News a new Vodvil Movies, a highly amusing Century comedy "Fresh Seconds", and a Kinogram are being exhibited on the same program.

Cancellation of all European debts, "so that the world, unencumbered, may start out on a new era of peace and prosperity," is advocated by William Jennings Bryan, shown above.

INTERMEDIATES HAVE SECOND WORK-OUT

New Players in Uniform, and Lively Practice Game Results

The Intermediate hockey squad will work out at the Arena again this evening from 7 until 8 p.m.

Last evening, twelve players turned out for an hour's grind, commencing at 6.50 p.m. The ice was in good condition, and a splendid workout resulted.

Len Crook went in the goal and Harry Fenn was in between the posts at the other end. The other player who appeared in uniform were "Al" Swayze, Jack Williams, Jim Marshall, "Bunny" Frechette, "Bouncer" Hellaway, "Army" Armstrong, Vera Weir, Stan Hagerman, Bluie and Lake.

Twelve men were on, and sufficient for a game and a really lively time they had, giving the rail birds a big free excitement.

New faces last night were Hagerman, who it is expected will be one with the Juniors this season, Bluie Fenn, Armstrong, and Marshall.

ROY REMANDED

Winnipeg, Dec. 14—A fourteen-pound coon took was granted David Roy, former secretary of the Canadian Football Association, charged with the theft of funds from the association totalling $4,127, when his case was called in the city police court today. His bail of $10,000 was renewed for the week.

LEAFS HAVE SOLD ANDY ANDERSON

Handy Andy Goes to Newark After Six Years With Leafs

Andy Anderson has been sold by the Toronto Ball Club to Newark. A wire from President Lawrence Sothman stated to-day that Andy had been trying to get Manager Wilts, of Buffalo, to buy him for the Bisons. Inasmuch as Anderson had evidently had enough of Toronto it was thought advisable to dispose of him.

Anderson has spent practically all his baseball career in Toronto, and has been nursed along for six or seven years. He is a useful player, and has been performing here as a utility infielder and outfielder, working at third base last year, and not at all badly.

Andy's best work has been done in the outfield, but he never had a chance to work steadily because of his gap-filling ability in the infield. He gave every promise of being a strong hitter but never rose to the heights hoped for from him.

Andy will now have Mickey Devine as his manager at Newark. The two are very friendly and should get along together.

BOWLING CONTEST

In the race for the turkeys and geese at Domenico's Alleys Butler is leading in the single with 272 and T. Darrett with the three strings has a total of 726.

In the ladies competition Mrs. Geo. Lee went to first place with 124, closely followed by Miss Watkins with 120.

ST. PATS HOME TO-DAY

St. Patrick's are, according to the latest train time table, due to arrive in this city this morning at 8 o'clock, and special arrangements have been made for them to practice at the Arena this afternoon from 2 to 3 in preparation for the opening of the N.H.L. season here tomorrow night with Canadiens. The plan, which opened yesterday, had a great sale, and a full house is expected.

St. Pats have completed the most extensive tour ever armured by a hockey team, and it remains to be seen whether the trip was a beneficial one or not. It was for the C.P.R. at any rate, as the railway fare for the trip amounted to $5,000.

SIMILARITY OF SHOCKS

Paris, Dec. 14.—The medical resemblance between shell shock and the knockout blow in boxing was discussed by Dr. Louis Livet before the Academy of Medicine today. Dr. Livet described the sequence of sensations felt in each case as exactly similar, asserting that loss of memory followed return to consciousness. He concluded that both phenomena were commotional, not emotional.

Y.M.C.A. ALLEY RECORD BROKEN

With every player on the team playing strong and Jones and Horton excelling themselves, the G.W.V.A. F.'s romped away from the Bowlers, running away from the Bowlers, and kept on bowling them over until they surpassed any previous performance of any team on the Y.M.C.A. Alleys. The Bowlers, by the way, rolled no mean score yet were scarcely in the running at the conclusion of the second frame the Vets having stepped out into the lead, which they managed to increase slightly again in the third and last string.

Incidentally, Jones of the Veterans raised the record for three games, for the present league when he rolled 699.

Cook of the Bowlers rolled a three string score of 573 which would ordinarily be good enough to head the score at the evening's play but not so last night. The players and scores were as follows:

BOWLERS.
Turner	164	138	167—469
Walshe	174	140	192—476
Cook	215	146	212—573
Symons	184	124	136—443
Evans	134	155	196—482

Cummings	182	183	150—515
Hayes	91	171	186—451
Jones	247	203	249—699

The Turkey Contest at the Y.M.C.A. Walshe is still leading in the High Single with 270 and G. French following with 256.

In the Three Consecutive Walshe heads the list with 713, Horton following next has 667.

The three string score is also headed by Walshe with 713. The second is Horton.

Johnny Evans who is leaving for Oshawa last summer ago the senior team of Oshawa, Kingston, Harry Evans plan to play hockey this season and conform with the rule of January 1st in the League. That's what Mr. Kingston would like to know. Evans went to Oshawa on May 15th, arranged for a house and then returned to Belleville where he remained until 1922. The Central League has worked the arrangement so that it is hardly likely that he will permit it again.

PASSING COMMENT

Farmers who are shareholders in the United Co-Operative Company are seconded by the management of double-crossing their own venture, to favor other stores that sell a cent or two cheaper. It is a pretty heavy strain on loyalty to ask any man to pay more for an article than he can get it for somewhere else. The Co-operative management ought to be able to sell as cheaply.

Although Western Canada has not had as much experience with little demagogues of public ownership as some of the Eastern provinces, Canadian Finance declares that "there is just a trace of Kaiserism creeping into the actions" of some public servants. Further, this Winnipeg journal opines that "there is a swelled head here and there which will have to be bandaged some day with a little public opinion so that the swelling may be reduced."

HERE AND THERE

AN AMAZING RECORD.

No steamship ever launched can claim so magnificent a record of service as the British liner "Mauretania". As a passenger ship she has steamed 450,000 miles and carried nearly 400,000 passengers. Including her voyages during the war, she has travelled over one million miles. Moreover, she holds all the speed records and has further achieved the remarkable feat of maintaining an average of 25½ knots on twenty-seven consecutive runs across the Atlantic. Even more striking is the fact that on three recent successive voyages the times taken for the Atlantic crossing differed by less than five minutes. Her British designers and builders may well be proud of such a magnificent record.

FIGHTING CORROSION.

Some time ago a number of British manufacturers, being deeply impressed by the endless and serious losses due to corrosion in all its many forms, decided to form an Association to study the whole problem and to devise solutions. The first announcements regarding this Association indicated that the preservation of iron and steel from rust, and of stone and timber from various forms of decay, would form the field of study. The Association has now decided to extend its researches all over the field of corrosion and to include even the scaling of boilers and the fouling of ships' hulls. Special attention will be given to the difficulties which the laundry industry and the building industry encounter. The benefits of such investigations will be enjoyed not only by the manufacturers whose part but by industries and public utility undertakings all over the world. It may be mentioned that the leading men interested in the oil and paint and varnish industries in Great Britain have formed an Institution of Paint and Varnish Technologists. This Institution will include not only the scientific and technical workers in the industry but the manufacturers themselves, representing in the aggregate about one million workers and possessing a capital of several millions sterling. The new Institution will carry on organized research, supplementing the investigations carried out in private laboratories. The protective effect of paint and varnish on various materials will be carefully investigated.

LAND OF DREAMS.

A separate life in the Land of Dreams,
A separate life have I;
When troubles harass and beset me
To my Land of Dreams I fly.
There all is beautiful, calm and bright,
Sweet visions come to brighten the night.
Oh, rich is the life of a soul indeed,
Who rests in the Land of Dreams in need.

A wonderful life in my Land of Dreams,
A wonderful life have I,
For when the world seems hard and cold
And trials come, my heart would grow old
If I could not sail to my Land of Dreams
Where, the best of my days I live.
There my ideals live, and Hope is my guest,
In my Land of Dreams, my Isle of Rest.

I can walk with Truth, in my Land of Dreams,
And Justice and Mercy's radiant gleams
Brighten the path in the land of delight,
And they help me all earthly ills to fight;
Sweet comfort and peace are there so fair,
And with me my trials and sorrows share,
Life is not too hard it seems,
Because I can rest in my Land of Dreams.

PRESS OPINIONS

THE FIRE RELIEF FUND

(Peterborough Examiner.)

The opinion of the local Council at Cobalt, the Northern Ontario Fire Relief Fund seems to be that the raising of the necessary money should have been undertaken by the Provincial Government by means of a special levy, and with that view the Examiner is in complete sympathy.

There should be no delay in the matter, and while Premier Drury's theory that the milk of human kindness should be given a chance to operate may be all right as a theory, it should be fairly evident that the people of Ontario will be a long time raising the million dollars required by means of voluntary subscriptions.

But having practically condemned the Government for not clapping on a special levy are the members of the Council logical in the conclusion they seem to be arriving at that the best system of raising Peterborough's quota is by voluntary offerings?

Are they not simply doing as Premier Drury did and passing the buck on it to the people

It is realized that the condition of the Northland calls for a comprehensive programme of relief, and that the estimate of a million dollars is not too high.

That being admitted, and the responsibility of the more fortunate communities of old Ontario being also conceded, it seems to be the opinion of many citizens that the fairest, simplest and quickest method of securing Peterborough's share, which has been estimated at a sum equal to an assessment of half a mill, or roughly $8,000, is to make a special levy.

The voluntary system imposes upon the people whose purses are expected to open at every call, while it allows to flock free the other class of citizen who turns a deaf ear to every appeal worthy or otherwise.

The levy method divides the burden in an equitable manner and ensures results.

One plan makes the securing of Peterborough's quota a matter of doubt; the other raises the necessary money without delay, and it is now that it is needed.

It is of course, not to be expected that the adoption of the special assessment plan would be unanimously approved.

Undoubtedly there would be strong objection to a levy, but, for the most part, it would come from citizens who would not pay the least attention to an appeal for voluntary subscriptions.

With thousands of our fellow citizens in Northern Ontario entering upon the winter season under conditions that would be appalling to any people less lion-hearted than themselves, and a winter in the Northland is not to be trifled with—the municipalities in certain portions of the Province should settle this question with their eyes firmly fixed upon the need and upon the urgency of the call.

If the Province made a mistake in the policy it adopted, there does not seem to be any reason why the same error should be committed by the municipalities.

THE OFFICE POET

Many a man anxious to take up the yoke of office has been splattered with the yolk of an egg.

The Civic Election Prospects

Just now in town there is much doubt
About the Mayor's Chair,
Good men live here, but won't come out
The voters seem unfair

Hanna has for these past years
Been leading City Father
His duties are somewhat dull, he fears
Some him to further bother

In sizing up prospective fields,
Some people fancy Ostrom,
Others think him not the man
To grace the civic rostrum.

Others think Greenleaf should lead
But by in quiet retention,
Would wish the people all to heed
And vote for the Parks Commission

Thompson has through service true
Fulfilled his many tasks
But his opponents never do
Fail to the Mayors chair to bask.

There will doubtless be some great remorse
On the day of Nomination.
Methinks a clique will run a dark horse,
For the voters approbation.

A guest at one of the City hotels received quite a shock the other night, as he was retiring, he reached for the quilt on the bed, thinking he had found a dollar bill.

WHAT DO THEY PRINT OVER THERE?

A news item says Frances forbids the publishing of the details in divorce scandals. Well, for the love of Mike! What do they find to fill up their front pages with over there, and just think of the lovely ones Paris could furnish.

The Power of Personal Expression in player music is given to YOU by the four Gulbransen Instruction Rolls Supplied with Every Gulbransen Player Piano

You have possibly seen some expert demonstrator produce remarkable results with a Player-Piano.

Or you may have been in a home where some one member of the family could produce real music on a Player—but the great majority of Player Owners never learn to play the Player well, so many people have come to look upon Players as mechanical, and are prejudiced against them.

The fault lies partly in the limitations of ordinary players and partly because no effort is made to help you master it.

The above illustration pictures clearly how Gulbransen Roll No 1 teaches how to accent the Melody in Music

Not so with the GULBRANSEN
The Player-Piano

Gulbransen Instruction Rolls on the Gulbransen Players lead you, step by step, surely and steadily, to where the whole world of music is yours to command!

Knowledge of music is not necessary; previous experience is not necessary—nothing but the desire and love for music. And we will positively prove to you, in ten minutes at the Gulbransen, that you have within you the power to do as you will with music—almost as you would by hand.

Until you have acquired this capacity—until you have experienced the thrill of this power—you will never appreciate the boundless measure of pleasure and happiness that lies within a Player-Piano, and the Gulbransen is one instrument with which you can acquire this art quickly, easily and satisfactorily.

The Gulbransen is not only the easiest pumping Player in the world—not only the simplest Player mode—not only the most fool-proof Player on the market—not only the most fully guaranteed Player in Canada—but it is the ONLY Player that will teach you, right in your own home, exactly how to acquire absolute Control of the touch and the power of personal expression that will enable you to put your very self into the music—just as the pianist, violinist or any artist can do.

NOT EXPENSIVE

Despite its exclusive superiority, the Gulbransen is not expensive. There is a model for every purse—$298, $625 to $968—and, moreover, the Gulbransen is Nationally Priced. It sells at one price everywhere. You can send your child to purchase it.

SKINNING AN ANIMAL

How to Get the Best Out of a Hide.

Skin While the Carcass Is Warm—Have the Knife Sharp—Avoid Wrinkling—Dry Carefully Above the Legs.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

During the autumn season, some Midwestern farms butchering is done and in the operation many good hides are spoiled in the skinning. To do a good job easily select a clean hard spot in the shelter of a tree or in a building if the floor is good. A block and tackle or other hoist arrangement should be rigged in a convenient position.

Skin While Carcass Is Warm.

The animal should be clean; if not it will be difficult to keep the hide and carcass in proper condition. The skinning should start immediately the animal is dead, and the more quickly it is done while the animal is warm the more easily the hide will come off. Make sure that the knife is sharp. After starting and sticking the animal it should be suspended to facilitate bleeding. While the suspended position the operator should begin skinning the hind sheaths and face. When skinning over the face leave the flesh on the head. The presence of meat on the hide is no objection. The head is removed from the neck at the atlas joint, or end of the spinal column. The horns should not be removed from the skull. With the head out of the way the animal should be completely lowered and placed breast up being held in this position by a gibbet stick between brisket and floor. The legs should then be skinned out and the feet removed.

Avoid Scarring of Wrinkling.

After removing the feet the hide should be ripped down the belly from the sheathing out to the tail. The sides should then be skinned by working forward to the brisket and then back to the inside of the hind leg, close to the tail. The free hand should be used to lift away, pulling outward and upward against the knife. Care should be taken to prevent the formation of wrinkles under the hide as it is being removed. The hide should not be skinned off nearly to the back bone, leaving it attached at the thighs and shoulders. Change the prop over to the other side of brisket and skin the other side in the same manner. Use Carefully About the Legs.

For the cut at the front legs start in the center, cutting the skin well forward at the brisket and to advance of the front legs, cut back to the union of the fore leg and body and on down the inside of leg to meet the cut made when skinning the side. In skinning the hind legs start at the center line about six inches from the tail and split the skin in straight line to the hocks. Skin over the rump and thighs. At this stage it is best to insert a gambrel above the hock joints and raise the carcass so that the shoulder will still rest on the floor. Split the skin on the under side of the tail and skin out the tail bone to the end.

Skin Away From Tail and Legs.

Skin the hide carefully away from the base of the tail and into from the legs and back, using the fist or a blunt instrument such as a hammer handle, skinning stone or the back of a cleaver. Be careful not to cut the hide, since each cut reduces the value. When skinned down to the shoulders the carcass is hoisted clear of the floor and the skinning completed down over the neck. Split the ears by cutting lengthwise and fold the hide flesh side in. Tie for shipment.—Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.

Cheap Ice For the Farmer.

Farmers who have not already done so should prepare to lay by a store of ice for cooling milk and for household use next summer. Cutting, harvesting and storing ice is low when compared with the actual cost. Ordinarily, it is safe to harvest two tons of ice for each cow in the herd. This will allow for milking and leave enough for family needs. Where cream only is sold, about one-third of that quantity of ice will be needed.

Did you ever try co-operation in ice harvesting? It works like a charm. Get one or two of your neighbors to go into such a scheme. One pond or stream and one set of tools will answer for all. The equipment necessary for harvesting and storing ice consists simply of saws, tongs, and iron bars for pushing the blocks of ice around.

A rough board enclosure ten feet square and eight feet high will hold sufficient ice to provide fifty pounds per day for 110 days after allowing for a reasonable amount of wastage. An important fact to be remembered is that the smaller the quantity of ice stored the larger is the proportion of waste. The bottom of the enclosure should be covered with a foot of sawdust, and a foot of space left between the boards and the ice, which should also be filled with sawdust. The ice should be similarly covered. The drier the sawdust the better. If the earth beneath the enclosure is a tenacious clay, a layer of gravel under the sawdust is advisable.

If sawdust is not obtainable, planer mill shavings will serve, if neither is to be had, two feet of marsh hay or any wild hay will suffice. The roughest kind of a shed that will hold the weather is all that is required.

If you are not making money on the farm, scratch your head and do some hard thinking.

Keep feeding the hens or they'll stop laying. Keep feeding the pullets or they'll stop growing.

LINKED LIVES

By

D. Kinmount Roy

He was always a slow-witted fool, Hardcastle told himself, and wise men had no need to disturb themselves for such as he. And yet a little cloud, no larger than a man's hand, had arisen out of a clear sky, and in due time the heavens would be black with tempest, and the floods of destruction would assail the lordly mansion Eric Hardcastle had built for himself upon shifting sand.

But that time was not yet. The absence of MacAlpin, when it came to his knowledge, was of little interest. Why should it be of interest? He own son was off on a ridiculous quest, all over the missing girl. Why not the fool MacAlpin? And if Donald considered it his duty to tell all he knew, who in all the world would believe the word of such a roystering fellow against the world of the master of Fonceyn?

Why, no one! he told himself, with pleasant assurance, simply no one. It was a settled conviction in his mind that he would be in the front, whoever came behind, that he would rise, whatever fell; and if, by any chance, he were found out, he would lie so well, so confidently, so abruptly, that his lie would have more weight than another man's truth.

Let MacAlpin look to himself, if he was such a fool as to cross Eric Hardcastle's path; and he swore, with an oath pronounced in the depths of his own evil heart, that Donald MacAlpin would get the way of others, who came between him and what he most desired.

CHAPTER XII.

SPIRITS FORM THE VASTY DEEP.

More than a year had passed, and MacAlpin kept to his lone hoe of Sandy's recovery.

The thought that the nimble little fellow might never walk again was bitter to the strong man, and he nerved his heart to hope against hope.

"Sandy never will again!" his mother said, in reply to Donald one day; "surely not!" She would not surrender herself to a prospect so distressing; and if such sorrow came to them, she said comfortingly to MacAlpin, "perhaps it may come to us with such merciful slowness that we can the better endure it. But surely there is better in store for the boy! Oh! I hope so, I hope so!"—and a far-away look crept into the mother's eyes, and a great longing into her heart.

They were both proud of their crippled laddie, in spite of his misfortune, for had he not fallen in the first fight with wrong, like a spotless knight of olden times? It was a sharp enough pain, but they made little outward moan over it; and Sandy took it all with great patience.

"No one grudged the services he had rendered; in fact, they both cherished the knowledge of the boy's love of truth and high courage.

"If his body is crippled," MacAlpin said one day to his wife, "all the more need that his mind be instructed." And so Donald began to brush up what he had learned, and well-nigh forgotten in Sandy's benefit. When Donald's limitations as a teacher became apparent, a tutor was found who could devote more time to the boy's education. But still, Sandy's best teacher was the open book of Nature, which now unfolded to him wonders he never knew before. It seemed to him as though before he had seen beautiful things in a dream; a wonderful dream; but now he was awake, and the wonders remained, so that he could, in reality, see and touch and handle them all. The flowers of the field had new interest for him; the birds of the air, and the wild, shy creatures of the woods were his friends.

If the sense of his physical helplessness was hard to bear, he made no sign after the first shock of the discovery was passed. Even then, he only covered his face and lay still, so that his mother thought he was asleep, and softly left the room.

But he was not asleep, but very wide awake, and under the sudden shock he was reaching out in the blank darkness for some help—some inner illumination to make clear the mystery. At least, so he described it afterwards, when all the shock had passed. He was, he thought, like a shipwrecked man suddenly thrown up by an angry sea upon a slippery rock, clinging for dear life to his precarious position, and straining every nerve of perchance in spite of the thunder of the breakers he might hear a directing voice.

When his mother saw him again, he was very calm with a wistful look in his dark blue eyes, as though out of his misfortune's wide and effectual door of hope had been opened to him.

The sunny nature of the boy had happily asserted itself, so common ill could long depress him; in spite of his cruel end bruised body he had entered upon a fair new world.

With Dora, too, it had been a year of wonder. Maitland's household was presided over by his widowed sister, Madame Rey, and her daughter Beatrice; and soon the two girls, who were almost the same age, were fast friends.

They studied together, went out together with Madame Rey dressed as if they were a family, and entered into much of the gaieties of the capital as the quiet habits of Maitland and his sister permitted. Oona's love of music and song for the first time found full scope under careful training; and the charm of her voice and lightness of touch, combined with her striking beauty, was beginning to attract more than passing attention. It was assumed that she was a niece of Maitland's, a mistake which the old man was in no haste to correct; in fact, it was a mistake which was exceedingly convenient for his purpose.

HORRIBLE EXAMPLE

Orville Wright, at a dinner in Dayton, was reproached for not taking up the challenges of the Smithsonian Institute that it was Langley, not the Wrights, who was the first to fly. "The trouble with you, Orville," said a banker, "is that you are too taciturn. You don't assert yourself enough. You should persuasiveness more."

"My dear friend," Orville Wright answered, "the best talker and the worst liver among the lords is the parrot."

BOOK REVIEW

(BY PERSEUS)

"Verse and Reverse", by Members of Toronto Women's Press Club, 1922.

A select group of poems by some of our greatest Canadian poets—some we know well—others we hope to know better.

You will find sentiment—a touch of humor,—an odd bit of philosophy—a thumbnail sketch—a dash of color—all here together in this charming book.

"Four-Square", by Grace S. Richmond; Publishers—Doubleday, Page and Company, 1922, $1.35.

"That tower of strength which stood four-square to all the winds that blew."

—Tennyson.

A beautiful bound, profusely decorated, well-written book. It equals, if not surpasses, her "Red Pepper Burns" which we all remember gave us such a keen insight into the humorous side of a medicine-man."

In a charming love story of a modern writer Mary Fletcher, who reaches a turning point in her career—to the City lies fame and fortune,—and to the simple country life from which she came is the man she loves.

An old-fashioned story of a modern girl.

"Pagan Love" by John Murray Gibbon. Publishers—McClelland and Stewart, Toronto, 1922.

A tale that grips the interest of the reader and has new developments in every chapter. A love story of mystery.

Walter Oliphant, a penniless but educated Scotchman comes to America and soon climbs the ladder of success to find all his illusions and dreams broken and destroyed by unfortunate whim of the Goddess of Chance.

The suddenness in which the reader is given the key to the whole mystery makes the climax doubly fascinating.

"The Timber Pirate", by Charles Christopher Jenkins, Publishers—McClelland and Stewart, Toronto, 1922.

A novel of the Great Northwest and lumber camps and fighting men, written by a man whose knowledge of his subject is unequaled.

A stirring tale of a man who has no soul and who fears neither God nor devil and only asks for a sporting chance from both.

A book I think anyone will enjoy reading as it has an appealing interest to all who prefer a tale of strength, of hardships and of battles between giants of men and the Frozen North.

THEY were talking about Overcoats. One man said, "I see you have gone back to the custom tailor. Business must be fine if you can pay $80. to have an Overcoat made to order".

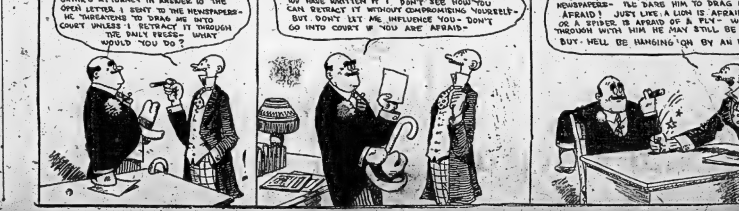

The other man said, "Business is good; but why should I pay $80. to a tailor when I can get $80. worth of style, fine fabrics, and hand tailoring, for $50, at Fit-Reform".

And he showed the Fit-Reform trademark and price label in his new overcoat.

THE GUMPS—WHO'S AFRAID?

DOMINION HOUSE MAY NOT MEET TILL FEBRUARY

No Definite Announcement Yet—Await Word of Sailing of Hon. Mr. Fielding

Ottawa, Dec. 13.—The opening of Parliament, which it was expected would take place during the latter part of January, will, in all probability, be delayed until early in February. Premier King stated this evening that there would be no announcement regarding the opening date until early in the new year, after the return of Hon. W. S. Fielding, Minister of Finance, from England. He pointed out that owing to various causes, Mr. Fielding had been delayed and even now the Government was not sure of the exact date on which he would sail for Canada. It is understood, however, that Mr. Fielding will probably sail for home toward the end of the month. As it is customary to give thirty days' notice of the date for opening Parliament, and as there will be no announcement in regard to the matter until early in January, indications now are that the opening date will be in the first half of February.

Asked with regard to the new commercial treaty which has been concluded between Canada and France, Mr. King said that its terms would probably not be made public until Parliament meets. The Government, he said, preferred to lay the treaty before Parliament where there could be a thorough discussion of its terms and where questions in regard to them could be asked and answered, prior to announcing them before the opening.

CANADA LEADS IN MOTOR SALES TO GREAT BRITAIN

(By Canadian Press)

Washington, Dec. 14.—A report received by the Department of Commerce from the U.S. Commercial Attache in London gives statistics on the importation of motor cars by Great Britain during September last, the details of which have just been announced in London. It shows that Canada led the world in the sale of passenger automobiles to the Old Country. The United States came next, and France was third in the list.

The figures are: Canada, 559 cars, valued at £86,978; United States, 426 cars, valued at £72,742; France 125 cars, valued at £20,096; Italy, 81 cars, valued at £13,706; other countries, 23 cars, valued at £5,899.

The average value of the Canadian cars was £160.

The report states that a comparison of the September figures with those for preceding months shows that the improvement of trade in imported cars, which became marked in the second quarter of the year, is being maintained fairly well up to the end of the season.

CANADIAN SHOE INDUSTRY MEETING COMPETITION

Washington, Dec. 13.—The progress which the Canadian shoe industry has made in meeting the competition of U. S. manufacturers is reflected in a report received by the Department of Commerce from Jose da Oliveira, U.S. Consul in Hamilton.

The consul, after reviewing conditions in the shoe industry in his district, which he declares "from the dealer's and consumer's viewpoint, is, in general, satisfactory," concludes:

"Existing conditions seem to hold out little encouragement for a revival of American export trade in boots and shoes in Canada. The consensus of the opinion of close observers of the situation is to the effect that during recent years, when the abnormal depreciation of Canadian currency proved so great an obstacle to continued trade with the United States, the production of Canadian factories has grown so much in public favor as to preclude the necessity of resuming the importation of many American lines of footwear which were formerly regarded as staple lines in the Canadian markets.

"Added to this are the effects of the long and persistent campaign on the part of the Canadian Government and numerous commercial organizations throughout the Dominion in favor of Canadian-made commodities, including boots and shoes, and the existing high duty on the importation of American products. In many instances retail boot and shoe dealers have entirely eliminated American-made footwear from their stocks while others carry only a few of the higher-priced imported lines from the United States to supply certain established demands."

HOLDERS OF RUSS BONDS FAIL TO OBTAIN GOLD OF CZARIST REGIME

Paris, Dec. 14.—The efforts of French holders of Russian bonds to get possession of 220,000,000 gold francs deposited in the Bank of the United States and the Allied Powers, and belonging to the old Czarist regime, have finally failed.

The French government has informed the bondholders that the money cannot be touched for any purpose unless under agreement by the Allied and associated Powers, in whose hands it was placed under the provisions of the Treaty of Versailles.

The gold was originally exacted from Russia by Germany under the treaty of Brest-Litovsk. It was taken to Berlin in a heavily-guarded train and deposited in the Reichsbank. The Allies in turn forced Germany to hand it over to them under the Versailles treaty, and it was brought to Paris by an escort of Allied troops.

GIFT OF A TIGHTWAD

Jed Doakes was known far and wide for his economical habits, and gloried in them.

"I'll bet, Jed," remarked an acquaintance, "that you didn't even spend money to buy your wife a birthday present this year."

"Well, yes," admitted Doakes, reluctantly. "I weakened a little when her birthday comes around. I went and spent $2 puttin' an ad. in the paper that she takes in sewin.'"

FRENCH ENCOURAGE WHEAT PRODUCTION

Paris, Dec. 14.—A "National Wheat Week" has been organized by the government for January 23-28 in an effort to free France from dependence upon foreign grain for bread and also to develop the Colonies by encouraging them to help grow breadstuffs enough for home and Colonial consumption. Five commissions will hold public meetings at which will be outlined the best methods of selecting seed and of intensive farming, so as to get more and better flour by these means as well as through improved milling.

Afterwards, means will be studied of putting this collective knowledge to work through legislation, through educational propaganda in the industries affected and through patriotic appeals to the people.

KITCHENER INTERMEDIATES OUST ARGONAUTS

Not having any ice at home, Harry Scrimmer motored his Kitchener team down to Hamilton for three practices during the last ten days. Then he put his players aboard the rattler and took them to Toronto last night for an R.F.A. game with Argonauts. They were rock in shape, and admitted it before they went on the ice, but at that they were good enough to hand Argonauts a 6 to 1 lacing. Yes, sir, they had enough of the play to give them at least five more goals if Roy Worters in the Scullers' old net had been as bad as were his team-mates. Worters in the first period had more to do than Hainsworth had the whole night, and it wasn't his fault his team was beaten. The Kitchener win was a surprise to the rubbishs, who right along have been picking Argonauts to win the O.H.A. championship, and they were offering a four goal margin on them out in peacock alley. Just another good thing gone wrong. Varsity meets Kitchener in the final for the S.P.A. Cup.

INDIAN MORTALITY OVERESTIMATED

Edmonton, Alta., Dec. 13.—Reports from the Department of Indian Affairs show that the mortality amongst the Indians of the north country during the past year have been considerably over-estimated. The territory between Lac La Biche and Hay river has a population of 2,000 Indians, and during last winter and early spring there were 177 deaths due to a number of reasons as well as to the influenza epidemic which visited the north. There were 35 births during the period, making, they total decrease in Indian population 135.

When Dr. A. L. Macdonald visited the tribes during the paying of treaty money the majority of Canada's wards were found to be in good health.

REQUIRED LOOKING INTO

"Dear Sir," wrote a youthful scholar to his teacher in his explanation of his absence from school, "yesterday Jimmy Brown hit me in the eye with a stone and I can't see into it."

BOXING AT PETERBORO

Peterboro, Ont., Dec. 13.—Tony Coombs won a decision over Scotty Cerby in the main bout on the P.A.A.A. card at Victoria Hall last evening. Coombs was outweighed by his opponent to the extent of twelve pounds, and, though he took a lot of punishment in the opening round, the remainder of the battle went all his way. Cerby was badly out of condition.

SHORT WEIGHT COAL SALES CAUSES TROUBLE

Boston, Dec. 14.—Judge Brown in East Boston Court recently entered two coal peddlers who had given short weight to give a ton of coal free to the families involved or pay heavy fines. One, who had sold 32 pounds for 100, gave the ton. The other refused, was fined $50 and appealed.

DIFFERENT

A furious man rushed into a newspaper office. He was a local celebrity, and had been reported as present at a boxing match.

"You referred to me as the well known lightweight champion," he roared.

"Well——" said the editor.

"And I'm not. That's my brother I'm the coal merchant."

IMPRESSIVE INCOME

"Dubwuite was always hard up when he was making $2,000 a year. Now he's making $20,000 a year and he's still hard up.

"But he has one advantage."

"Wot?"

"Bill collectors will stand for a great deal more back talk from a $20,000-a-year man than from a $2,000-a-year man."

THE FEEDING OF LAMBS

How to Raise Sheep From Day of Birth.

Mother's Milk the Best Food—When and How to Feed Grain—Succor for Ewes With Lambs—Shelter for Success.

[Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.]

Mother's milk is the first and best food for lambs. If this is not available, then the milk of goats or cows may be used. If the ewe or mother sheep has been well fed on clover, timothy and few roots for at least a month before the birth of the lamb, there is little, likelihood of a milk shortage for one lamb. Lambs that have twins or mothers usually need some assistance to obtain nourishment. The milkier sheep can be held by hand, or tied with a halter while the lamb nurses. This is usually not necessary for more than two or three days. The transfer of lambs from one ewe to another can be made at birth or while the lamb is still very young by tooling the ewe, who by the way depends largely on the sense of smell to identify her offspring. Should a ewe have but one lamb, a pet one, and it is desired to have her feed a second one, rub the two lambs together until they have the same smell and then test the ewe's ability to identify. If a ewe has but her lamb and it is desired to have the adopted and her mother one, each can be done by removing the skin from the dead lamb and placing such on the back of the lamb that it is desired she should adopt. This must, of course, be done in a comparatively short time; but cutting a slit in each corner of the pelt through the thin legs of the living lamb may be passed, it is easy to keep the skin in place for a few days. Twin lambs frequently do not get sufficient milk for best development, and again the strong lamb will get more than its share. Close attention is necessary to make such adjustment as will insure the lambs getting a fair share. When lambs are not getting all the milk that they need from their mother, provision should be made to supplement such by teaching the lambs to drink cows' milk from bottle or pan.

Grain Feeding.

When the lambs are two or three weeks old they will start nibbling at grain, hay, or grass. At this time, they should be encouraged to feed by way of placing choice bits of fodder and grain in a small feed rack where they can reach it without being disturbed by the older sheep. Bran, ground oats, cracked corn and oil cake meal are very desirable concentrates for lambs. Fresh water and salt should always be available in the pens, yards or pasture. The amount of grain to feed will depend largely upon the use that it is desired to make of the lambs. Lambs for the "best house lamb" trade require liberal grain feeding, while those for breeding, or ordinary markets should be limited within the bounds of profitable feeding. With lambs for export, costs are sometimes of secondary importance, and the grain feeding is more liberal than it is with the lambs of the breeding or market type. Lambs that are grain fed from the beginning will reach market weight six or eight weeks earlier than those not receiving grain until the commencement of the fattening period. When grain feeding is too liberal either before or after weaning, the lambs will depend upon the grain feeds, and not eat as much grass or other roughage as is in keeping with profitable feeding. The amount of grain to feed must be determined by the age of the lamb, the purpose for which it is being reared, and the succulent feeds available. Grain feeding from the time that the lambs begin to feed is a profitable practice if the amount of grain fed day by day does not reduce the appetite for grass and other coarse feeds. During the fattening period, the quantity of grain fed per lamb should generally not exceed one and a half pounds per day if the feeding is to be profitable. Good pasture grass, clover, or rape should be supplied liberally to all lambs intended for the ordinary market or breeding. With hot house lambs, the coarse food is limited, grains and milk are largely depended on for rapid gains.

Causes of Failure In Lamb Feeding.

1. Ewes not properly fed during pregnancy or after.

2. No supplementary feeds for the lambs.

3. Failure to properly dock and later lamb.

4. No provisions against failure of pastures.

5. No protection from other stock.

6. Pastures infested with eggs or larvae of stomach worms.

7. Failure to kill and destroy ticks and lice.

8. Failure to clip wool from inner thighs and udder.

9. Using poor scrub stock.

Reasons for Success.

1. Proper care and liberal feeding of ewe and lamb.

2. Supplementary feeding ample.

3. Wool removed from vicinity of udder.

4. Ticks destroyed or prevented.

5. Using good vigorous stock of desirable type.

6. Ample supply of green forage.

7. Pastures and yards kept free of eggs or larvae of stomach worms injurious to sheep and lambs.

8. Protection provided against fly nuisance.

9. Docking and altering performed at proper time.—Stewart Sweaney, Dept. of Agriculture, Toronto.

Tomatoes ripen better when grown in trellis or stakes. They can be set closer together in the rows than when allowed to spread over the ground.

A flock of scabby sheep will infect the roads, trails, sheds, yards, bedgrounds, pastures, ranges, and the ground around the watering places. It is therefore important that the flock receive proper treatment as soon as the disease appears, before the infection becomes scattered.

High Tides.

Herrington on the Western coast of Canada, says Frank Coffee in "Forty Years on the Pacific," is not so hazardous as in numerous places in the same latitude along the Atlantic coast. Owing to small rise of the tide on the Pacific coast and freedom from ice, passengers and cargo can be handled at all ports night and day throughout the year. As a contrast, take the Bay of Fundy, on the Atlantic side of the continent, which is enwrapped in fog throughout the greater part of the year, and where the tides rise and fall in such extraordinary fashion. At St. John, N.B., the tide has a variation of twenty-seven feet, and the reader can easily figure out the difficulties of loading a ship in these eccentric waters. The Bay of Fundy separates Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, where at Moncton, at the head of the bay, the flow of the spring tide is called "the bore," that rushes in at a height of five feet and travels eight miles an hour. Near this point is situated Cape Blomedin, which derives its name from "blow me down," as the wind sweeps around there at a terrific rate. Incidentally, I have picked up amethysts at this cape. At the head of this tempestuous bay is Minas Basin, where, at the point of Noel Bay, the tide rises fifty feet. In passing, I might mention that there are three other world-famous places where the tide rises to this height. At Broome, on the west coast of Australia, at Nonan, 1,100 miles up the Yangtzekiang river, in China, and at Campobello, on the St. Lawrence.

Yakima Indians' Legend.

On a high point of Mount Adams in the State of Washington are one hundred and thirty-six apparently human footprints, made in mud that has long since turned to stone. The tradition of the Yakima Indians is that the spot is the place where "the great canoe" landed after the Flood, and that the footprints were made by the people who stepped from the canoe to the ground softened by the long inundation.

The Axe.

Speaking of Arthur Stringer's thrilling story of Canadian whitewater around his summer home on Lake Erie—which he still retains, though he lives in New York—recalls a several-year-old story of how he won the heart of a Red Cross ball contestant. His house, he it mentioned, is on a bluff about 100 feet above the lake. One fall he carried his rustic, weighing about 125 pounds up the incline to put it in the house for the winter. An old man around these parts hearing of it marveled at the feat.

"Arthur," he said, "I don't know much about your business, but take it from me, you'll learn to swing an axe you'd make money."

Buffalo Wool.

Buffalo wool, collected from the prairie where the animals shed it each spring, makes carpets far more durable than those of ordinary wool. Mounted buffalo heads have recently sold for as much as $1,000, and new buffalo robes are worth $100 apiece. Robes and heads are now shipped east in the market, because the 740 animals installed at Buffalo Park, Canada, have increased to 5,000—a number for which even their 10,000-acre range is scarcely large enough.

"Have a Drink, Boys!"

Col. Cecil E. Morgan, well known throughout the province by his excellent work in connection with the Garden City Chamber of Commerce and the Royal Canadian Henley, has during his lengthy and varied career spent in the four corners of the world, accumulated a rich and extensive hoard of anecdotes and stories of the first water would literally make our affable and genial friend, George H. Hamm, of C.P.R. fame, turn green with envy.

Col. Morgan was at one time a member of the famed Northwest Mounted Police, in fact he was one of the early pioneers of that famous force. The following amusing incident occurred while he was a fellow constable were on patrol. It was during the year 1887, shortly after Queen Victoria's Jubilee, when there lose Mounties were on duty in a small settlement in Southern Alberta. It was particularly noticeable that the men were conspicuous by their absence and upon investigation it was found that they had become possessed of a keg of whiskey, wherupon they had assembled in the bunkhouse and there they were found much the worse for their abstinence.

Upon being interrogated regarding the why for of the festive occasion one cowpuncher not so drunk as the rest retorted, "Oh, this is a Jubilee."

"Jubilee," said the Mounties incredulously, for that term was by no means common in those days.

"Sure," returned the cowpuncher, "somebody has been doin' something for fifty d—— years. Have a drink, boys."

Naming White Men In Africa.

In Africa the natives usually give every white man a name that denotes his chief characteristic. In "An African Adventure" Mr. Isaac F. Marcosson says that the first name they gave him was "Bwana Cha Cha," which means "the master who is quick."

Subsequently in the Congo and the Kasai he goes by the name of Mfumu Mingi, which means "the man who eats much meat," and when I bore was Tain Tain, which in virtually all the Congo dialects means "spectacles." In many regions that I visited the natives had never seen a pair of tortoise-shell glasses such as I wear, and the children, thinking I was a sorcerer, fled from me shrieking in terror.

"Up the Kasai I heard a story which admirably illustrates the humor of the natives. A fat Belgian officer came out to take charge of a post, and naturally enough became known among the natives as Mafutta Mingi. As soon as he learned what it meant he was indignant, and demanded that they give him another name. So the local chief solemnly dubbed him Mfumu Mingi. The official was immediately appeased. Then he noted that every one who addressed him by the name always smiled as he did so. On investigating he learned that the word meant 'hippopotamus'."

A North Pole Fallacy.

It Is Not the Coldest Place In the World.

"Nearly if not quite the most fundamentally wrong idea about the Arctic," says Mr. V. Stefansson, the explorer, "is that the North Pole is the coldest place in the Northern Hemisphere, and that the Polar regions are far colder in winter than any countries that are now inhabited by the average kind of civilized European or American.

"Besides other considerations there are three main factors that determine what the possible minimum temperature of any place may be. These are latitude, altitude, and distance from the ocean. We are at once that the North Pole has a high degree only one of these three qualifications for being extremely cold—that of being in a high latitude. But the North Pole does not lie high above sea-level; nor is it located in an ocean which Admiral Peary, at the time he visited the Pole, found to be more than twelve thousand feet deep. And if it is not above sea-level, neither is it far away from the ocean. Possessing only one of the three main qualifications for being extremely cold, it naturally is never extremely cold.

"Those who theories about it generally agree that the minimum temperature there seldom, if ever, drops below 40 degrees below zero on the Centigrade thermometer. In Alaska, at Nenana, 1,100 miles up the Yangtzekiang river, in China, and at Campobello, on the St. Lawrence.

"After skiing the United States Weather Bureau for the past record applicable to the north coast of Alaska, I found that the lowest temperature ever recorded in some settled portions of the United States in some average American community where a good many average Americans live in average American comfort. They replied that in a small town in Montana, forty years ago, it registered 62 degrees below zero.

"Almost as low temperatures have been recorded in Havre itself, and Havre is a typical American town of three or four thousand inhabitants, with stores and shops, with schools and little children going to school, with people who drive regularly to church at a temperature 14 degrees below zero. It ever has been known to be on the north coast of North America, and about 70 degrees lower than it probably ever is at the North Pole. And Havre is not by any means the coldest place in America for the minimum cold is lower than on the northern-most coast of North America."

How Western Cattle Die.

Darwin has described the curious instinct of the guano of South America which leads it to "have favorite spots for lying down to die," and now comes a description by Mr. R. A. Brooks, a Canadian naturalist, of the behaviour of cattle and buffalo under the influence of cold, starvation and fright, which clearly explains the large masses of the bones of these animals have been accustomed. Mr. Brooks states that during the hard winter of 1906-7 thousands of head of Canadian cattle perished from starvation and cold. "I remember well," he writes, "how some of them died. The first one we found simply made its way to a lonely place, generally a clump of brush or a coulee, and lying down simply waited to die. Next one we found had been approaching followed in the tracks of the first one, and died close beside her and this was kept up until there were no more, or relief came." At one ranch in Central Alberta the owner showed Mr. Brooks a coulee where 463 head of his cattle died. The pile of bones actually made a dam across the ravine. Within half a mile was another pile of bones, all that remained of the thousands which excitement is the cause of many buffalo jumps at the bottom of cliffs, and it is well known that in the early days the Indians themselves used to stampede herds of buffalo over the cliffs.

Plants That Follow the Sun.

At this time of the year runner beans and many other climbing plants are making their way up the poles that support them. If you examine them you will find that those which climb by twining always twist in the same direction.

The hop and the honeysuckle turn from left to right. The reason for this is that the sun moves in the same direction and the plants follow him. The side of the shoot which is turned towards the sun grows faster than that which he in the shadow, and the result is that the shoot is forced into a "clockwise" curve.

The runner bean, however, and many other plants, twist in the opposite direction. At first sight this might think that this disproved the explanation given above, but in reality it does not. Plants of this kind are affected differently by sunlight and the heat of the sun. In their case, the side of the shoot which faces the sun shrinks a little under the heat and warps the whole stalk into an "anti-clockwise" curve.

A State of Uncertainty.

"They ought to change the name of that film of yours," said Mr. Green's wife at the breakfast-table. "They ought to call it the North Pole."

"—I must say that I don't see why."

"For the reason that when a man starts out to go there there's no telling when he'll get home again."

CHRISTMAS GIFTS FOR THE HOUSE

(From Woman's World)

Let every member of the family cooperate in the plan of giving gifts to the house this year, and make a gift that is distinctly useful. The small boy, for instance, may have to make his contributions from the Five And Ten Cent Store, but there are lots of useful and ornamental gifts which can be purchased there, just as necessary as the more expensive things which Father and Mother select. For instance, the small boy might give: A holly bedecked holder to the bathroom, a strainer to the kitchen, a glass vinegar bottle to the dining room, a box of rubber bands to the living room desk, a match safe or holder to one bedroom and a new pin-cushion to mother's dressing table; while little sister can follow suit with perhaps a small bottle of cold cream or lotion for the bathroom, an oilcloth mat for the front of the ice-box for the kitchen, a tea ball for the dining room, a lead pencil tray for the sitting room; Father's and Mother's bedroom would be happy to have a gas or electric light shade in a color to harmonize with the general furniture, while the bedroom of sister and brother will surely need a new picture or perhaps a picture frame for an old print. Of course, the older members of the family, will be more lavish in their expenditures.

In the way the home will get to mean more than it has done and there will be a co-operation of spirit which stands for far more than the sprinkes on a cake, which may in future years mean co-operation in work and pleasure. This multiplied in other homes which see and respond to its influence, may be as far-reaching as the Christmas spirit—for it is the Christmas spirit.

THE COMMONPLACE GIRL

(By Pauline Frances Camp.)

A little brown slip of a girl,
With not a dimple or a curl,
Her eyes plain, so is her face;
Her very name is commonplace.

Her fingers do not move with ease
Upon the smooth piano keys;
The gift of song his passed her by,
Though she can hum a lullaby.

But she can mend her father's socks,
And build wee Boy a house of blocks.
And though she cannot make good fudge,
Of bread and biscuit she's a judge.

And she can cheer up dismal folks,
With merry laugh; and she can coax
Dear grandma from her fireside chair
And lead her out to take the air.

So though in stately Hall of Fame
They may not write her smilie name,
Within our hearts we'll give it space;
Our Lady of the Commonplace!

VERSATILE EMBROIDERY

Apparently there is no end to the charming results achieved by a clever use of embroidery. Scarcely a week passes but one sees some new adaptation of needlework employed as the principal decoration on costumes of unique than usual interest and smartness.

The handiwork of many nations and many eras has been carefully studied, and often from the most unexpected sources has come the inspiration for modern designs.

One sees the colors of Persia, the curious symbols of Arabic, while the significant twists and lines of Chinese characters and the crude yet forceful patterns of Slavic peasants are among the most effective motifs chosen as decoration for smart frocks.

By means of embroidery and, to a certain extent, by means of braiding is the narrowest of outlines it is possible to bring color into a costume in a fashion that is as subtle as it is telling.

The Daily Recipe

DATE MUFFINS.

The plain muffin batter, with four or five ounces of dates, is brought up to exceeding fineness, unless the batter is too stiff, when the nibble becomes quite plain eating, whereas a small date muffin may be as exquisite as a perfect bonbon. There are various ways of adding the dates. One way to prepare them is to wash them thoroughly, rub off loose skins, open and inspect for removing seeds, roll up again, cut in three parts, and use these large pieces on top of the muffin or press them down into the batter just before it goes into the oven. Finer cut dates may be stirred into the batter.

THE GIRL WHO KEPT A PREMIER'S SECRETS

The keeper of more secrets than anyone in the British empire is a young and pretty and fair-haired and charming woman.

She is Miss Frances Louise Stevenson, for nine years—the most crucial nine years in Britain's history—confidential private secretary to Mr. Lloyd George, and the first woman in the world to be secretary to a premier.

Compared to her the oyster is garrulous and the clam a chatter-box. She won't even be interviewed about herself. She is the greatest proof in the world that woman can and do keep secrets.

Miss Stevenson was graduated from Clapham high school and Royal Holloway college, and got her Bachelor of Arts degree from London university.

Then she entered civic service. She became a clerk in a government department. That usually means burial for good and all.

But, somehow, by her skill, efficiency, attention to detail, Miss Stevenson was brought to the notice of Mr. Lloyd George. And in 1913, when that statesman became chancellor of the exchequer, she became his secretary.

Then came the war. There was a shortage of high explosive shells, and the cry for speed was to get someman to fill the post of minister of munitions.

Giving up his treasury job, Mr. Lloyd George in 1915 became minister of munitions. The job cut lines in his face, and put white in his hair.

Miss Stevenson is authority for the statement that this period was the greatest time of test and trial in the life of her great chief. In July, 1916, Miss Stevenson followed him to the war office, and in December of the same year she again followed him, this time to 10 Downing street, the official home of the prime minister.

And now that Lloyd George is no longer premier, she is over at 12 Abingdon street, his new headquarters.

During all this long service, confidential papers, letters and cables by hundreds have passed through Miss Stevenson's hands.

She is a strong advocate of women in government service. She makes the assertion that in all her experience she has never known of a secret which leaked out because a woman babbled.

To women seeking success in work such as hers, she says one thing gives the key—education.

RUSHING THE NEW GIRL

What do you think, the most terrible thing happened yesterday? Sometime I almost think mother is righ in some of her old-fashioned ways. She has always told me that I shouldn't be so outspoken. But I admire people who say just what they think, and so I've always tried to cultivate the habit.

Well, yesterday a new girl entered our class. Her name is Jane Smith and her father has oodles of money. They just moved here from New York. My dear, I thought she looked awfully nice. She wore the most stunning dress I almost ever saw, all trimmed in fur. I'll bet she got it on Fifth Ave., or Wall St., or wherever it is in New York that all the millionaires do their shopping.

Now, you know there are two bunch-es' cliques in our class, Jane Smith and her bunch. We girls call them the "slow-pokes." Then there's our bunch. I'm glad to say though, that we aren't quite as slow as they are.

When we girls saw how nice Jane Smith and her bunch seemed to be, this new girl just to get her to go with them, we decided we wanted her ourselves. We've lots of money and rode to school in a big car, and then she looked like she would be lots of fun, too. Before Jane had a chance, we asked her if she wouldn't walk home from school with us, and she said she would.

We started out and everything went fine for a while. We all tried to be just as nice to her as we knew how. We could see that she was beginning to like us, and we were just going to warn her not to have anything to do with Jane and the "slow-pokes" when a bunch of little first-graders passed us.

There was a little girl with them that I had never noticed before. She was positively the homliest kid I ever saw in all my life.

"Heavens!" I cried, "Look at that ugly child. Did you ever see such a homely kid in all your life?"

The girls all laughed. "Jeannette's an outspoken," Betsy said.

Clarissa didn't laugh at all. She just looked at me and said quietly, "That's my little sister."

Mercy, I couldn't think of a thing to say! And there she stood and looked at me. I suppose she expected me to apologize, but I didn't know what to say. After what seemed like an hour, but the girls said it was only about half a minute she said, "Oh, I forgot I must go in the drug store and get something. Well, good-by."

Tonigh she walked home with Jane and her bunch, and then all went for a long ride in Mr. Patterson's big car. The girls were awfully mad, and I had to come home all alone.

BASKETBALL LESSONS

By WILLIAM C. GRAVE

No. 3. Field Goal Tossing

In order to win a game of basketball, points must be scored. Field goals count two points, and are therefore the most important of the two methods of scoring.

Various methods of tossing field goals are used according to the position on the floor from which they are taken. A great deal of practice in this phase of the game is necessary.

There are three positions from which shots are taken that require different forms of shooting. These are: First, in front, or a distance of over fifteen feet from the basket, second, close to the basket to one side, and third, shooting on the run from under the basket.

Long Shot for Basket

In taking a long shot for the basket, the ball is held chest high with the left foot slightly in front of the right. Both legs are slightly bent to give a springiness, that is necessary to make the ball travel its distance. The ball is grasped firmly in both hands slightly below and to the rear of its centre. The fingers are spread comfortably apart with the thumbs pointing upward. The elbows are held in closely to the body. The rip should be natural and not trained in any way.

This position assumed, bend the legs slightly, allowing the body to sink about six inches. Then, pushing upward by straightening the legs, pass the ball upward and forward toward the basket. Make this all one motion—the sinking and upward snap with the arms pushing the ball. This will come very easily and naturally with a little practice. Then a wrist snap, will come in doing one second that will give the arms help in tossing the ball. Be sure to toss the ball high in the air so that it will travel in the form of a loop. Shoot high. A low shot seldom enters the rim. Do not try to bank this shot off of the backboard, but have the ball enter the basket cleanly.

Bounce Ball Off Backboard

In shot Number 2, the same motion is carried out, but the ball is bounced off the backboard into the basket. It is easier to "bank" a shot from the side than it is to toss it in cleanly. In the first shot keep the eye on the basket; in the second, pick a spot on the backboard to hit so that the ball will bounce in.

Shot Number 3 is made with one hand. Arriving under the basket with the ball, either by having advanced it one's self or by receiving a pass, spring as high into the air as possible, at the same time shifting lightly the ball from the right hand to the palm of the left. The top of the spring reached, the ball to the palm of the right board slightly above the rim and just over its edge. Don't throw the ball against the backboard; just lay it there.

SCHOOL BOARD APPOINTS 3 NEW TEACHERS

FOUR NEW DIRECTORS ELECTED

Local Chamber of Commerce Starts on a New Year

In the final election for directors of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce, which concluded at four o'clock yesterday afternoon, the following four were elected for a two-year term: J. W. B. Deacon, H. F. Ketchenon, C. M. Reid, O. H. Scott.

Mr. Deacon is vice-president of the organization and has been a director continuously since the Board of Trade and Commerce was organized in 1919. He has been one of the hardest and most enthusiastic workers on the Board and is everywhere recognized a trifle for of Belleville.

Mr. Ketchenon was first elected to the board two years ago and last year was elected its president. He has been undefatigable in his efforts to promote the interests, not only of the Chamber of Commerce, but of the entire city. In fact he values the Chamber of Commerce chiefly because it offers the most practical medium to bring about civic progress.

Mr. C. M. Reid, was re-elected director, was also returned a director at the election two years ago. He has been sent back to the board by his fellow members as a tribute to the energy he has displayed in the Chamber of Commerce matters during his term of office. He is a constant preacher of the gospel of optimism and of co-operation on the part of our citizens. He believes that Belleville has a real future, and will take a brisk position among the cities of Ontario if we will but cultivate unity of purpose and work together for the common good.

Mr. O. H. Scott returns to the board after an absence of twelve months. He was elected director at the time the Chamber of Commerce was organized and filled out a two year term. The fine constructive work he accomplished during that period so commended itself to his fellow citizens that they have insisted on his return to his duties in the directorate.

The retirement of Mr. Fairfield from the board is deeply regretted by his fellow directors as well as by the general membership. He intimated to his friends that he did not desire re-election, owing to business reasons, but would continue, as he had in the past, to be one of the best friends of the Chamber of Commerce. His very serious business judgment was greatly valued by his colleagues on the board and his retirement is a real loss to its councils.

Considering that this was their first appearance as members of the Commerce ballot, the names of Mayor Hanna, Mr. Chas. T. Bolan, the well-known druggist, and Mr. Vernon H. Turner, president of National Carriage, Ltd., attracted a remarkable vote and their well-deserved surprise evasive from being elected.

It has been a sort of unwritten law that retaining either for the ultimate nomination or the subsequent election was not good form. The nominations and elections that have come to those who have been returned have therefore had all the earmarks and complement of a spontaneous tribute on the part of their fellow members who are indeed leading and most influential citizens of Belleville.

JOHN STREET PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH BAZAAR

At John Street Presbyterian Church yesterday afternoon the Junior Mission Band held a very successful tea from which a goodly sum was realized, as well as an enjoyable time spent. Mrs. Sharpe was in charge of the function. Mrs. H. Hill and Mrs. W. Cook poured tea. The tea-room was in charge of Mrs. Geo. McArthur, Mrs. J. W. Cook, Mrs. I. L. Moore, Miss H. Hill and Mrs. G. Walbridge. The tea Tables were very prettily decorated in yellow and white, which made a very pleasing appearance. The cake table was in charge of Mrs. R. Boyle, Mrs. George and Mrs. Steven. Candy was also looked after by Mrs. Hockinson and Mrs. A. Hill. The members of the Mission Band were closely assisting in the different departments.

LOYAL TRUE BLUE CONCERT

Concert in City Hall Last Evening in Aid of Orphanage

LAST evening at the City Hall an excellent entertainment concert was held by the Loyal True Blue Lodge No. 30, in aid of their orphanage to a large and appreciative audience. Sharpe at 8 p.m. the curtain went up and Mayor Hanna, the chairman of the evening, delivered the opening address. He expressed on behalf of the Lodge the pleasure it gave them to have such a large attendance. He emphasized the good work the orphanage was doing for Protestant children; how it fitted them with an education and a vocational training to begin life with. His worship gave a short sketch on the new home which is being built at Richmond Hill, 12 miles from Toronto, at a cost of $250,000 and which would be opened on May 24th, 1923.

The programme consisted of born chorus, reading, tambourine dance, monologue, duets, mystic toun stunts by a magician and solos. It would be difficult to single out one number which excelled the others, as they were all put on in a manner that would astonish the old-time collection great credit upon those who trained them. The costumes in the different dances were not only beautiful but original. Perhaps the numbers that received the most favorable encores were the Tambourine dance by Miss Flora Robinson, who was attired in Spanish costume. She showed natural skill in her part. Another pleasing number was the Fairy dance by little Miss Powell. She was dressed in white trimmed with silver stars and danced in real fairy style. Master Jack Hinton exhibited some "eye opening" stunts which amazed his audience. The Belleville Kiddies gave several pleasing numbers. Miss Lillian Marsh attired in yellow and black demonstrated some fine classical dancing.

The number that seemed to call for the most applause was a snappy little solo by Bernice Hazell. She had several encores and each appealed to her listeners.

At the conclusion of the program the chairman again thanked the audience for the large turnout, which will help a great deal. Save the King brought a very successful entertainment to a close.

CURATOR OF ROYAL ONTARIO MUSEUM DELIVERS INTERESTING LECTURE

Few people realized that in the Royal Ontario Museum of Toronto there are exhibits from China that go back to the days before the arrival in Bethlehem of the Saviour, the anniversary of whose birth we celebrate during the approaching holiday celebration. That is to say when we express the dates which other nations were in use, we must use the term B.C.

Dr. Currelly, the curator of the Royal Ontario Museum astounded his audience last evening in his address before the Women's Canadian Club in the High School Assembly, when he stated that there were scores and scores of relics in the museum, all of which were each in excess of one hundred thousand dollars. The curio from all of the Chinese and Egyptian dynasties were also on display in the Belleville High School for the purpose of the coming great men of the future.

Rev. Mr. Malott brought forth three essential qualities to be a successful business man and today, he must be truthful, self-reliant and industrious. He gave the boys some very good advice how to get on in the world.

Mayor Hanna gave a few but snappy address and said that though he was retiring from active life in the commercial government of the city he would be always ready to help the boys.

Mr. Lille and Mr. Sword said a few words about their experiences with the scouts as scoutmasters they also outlined their work at camp. The speaker for the evening Mr. Dreaney, Provincial Secretary for the Boy Scouts of Canada. He gave the boys some straight talks which should be kept in mind. He complimented them on the splendid work that the Scouts have done in this section. He said that the Boy Scout organization was to prepare them to be a better asset to the community, so perfect them four square and advised the boys to make use of every bit of advice they could get. He voted the boys every success in the future.

Mr. Finkle advised the Scouts to live up to the Scout law and carry it with them wherever they go.

Misses Campbell and Curry of the Girl Guides, also said a few words. Clarke Hagerty, Cecil Hall and Jack Cosier also made short addresses of their experience with the Scouts.

Mayor Hanna then made many humorous remarks occurring on the various Scout camps.

The meeting closed with the repeating of the Scout law and singing the National Anthem.

Among the guests were Mrs. Brandrombe, Miss Pearl Campbell and Miss Curry, Mayor Hanna, Mrs. Malott, Mr. Lill, Inspector Davidson and W. H. Finkle acted as chairman. Scouts Dick Hall, Lawrence and Junior Mayor Hayes told some crispy fine stories.

DEVELOPMENT IN DAIRYING IN MANITOBA

Winnipeg, Dec. 15.—Manitoba's dairying industry has shown remarkable development during the past few years and out of 58,000 farmers in the province there are now 25,000 of them producing and shipping milk and cream. Immediately prior to the war, Manitoba was an importer of dairy products, but today the province is one of the greatest exporting provinces in the Dominion. Seventy carloads of butter were brought from the province in 1914 while exports now total 100 carloads annually.

"It has been one of the most remarkable developments of a new industry that I have ever known," stated J. S. Evans, deputy minister of agriculture for Manitoba, in discussing the history of dairying in Manitoba. Mr. Evans believes the success of the industry is a result of the high quality of Manitoba's products, stating it had been demonstrated amply at the recent Royal Show in Toronto where the first prize offered for dairy products were awarded to Manitoba producers.

ANNUAL RE-UNION BOY SCOUTS

Last night in Bridge St., Sunday School auditorium the sixth annual reunion banquet of the 1st Belleville troop Boy Scouts was held. The room was very cleverly decorated with flags and the troop colours green and gold.

At 6.30 the large crowd of scouts, executs and guests sat down to a sumptuous banquet, served to them by the Girl Guides. After supper speeches, interspersed by a few songs were given. Mr. W. Lille, Scout Master, made a few remarks about the old troop. Mr. W. C. Mikel K. C., gave the boys a very interesting address on the necessity in bettering the life of the community. He complimented the boys on their splendid work along that line especially those interested in the Junior Council. He prophesied that in the near future Belleville was going of the coming great men of the future.

Rev. Mr. Malott brought forth three essential qualities to be a successful business man and today, he must be truthful, self-reliant and industrious. He gave the boys some very good advice how to get on in the world.

MUNICIPAL CANDIDATES COMMENCE TO DECLARE THEMSELVES

In the last two-fifty-four hours a few men have announced that they will be prepared to enter the municipal contest and the council contest respectively. It is practically certain that Alderman, G. F. Ostrom will be a candidate for reeve and Alderman Vi. Thompson comes out squarely and states that he would like to have a seat in the 1923 council. Both these men are mentioned as possibilities, because of the names are highly speculative. Until nominations are filed no more or less of a crop of rumors circulating and not until then will the uncertainty be dispelled.

BELLEVILLE IS CONSIDERED FOR C.N.R. HEADQUARTERS

Mr. W. C. Mikel Believes That the Boys' Council Suggestion is Far-sighted

When the Junior Mayor proposed that Belleville be made the head office of the Government Railways, he said something that was not half as far-fetched as one to believe that the question of keeping the head offices out of Montreal and Toronto was being seriously considered, not only because of the strong rivalry of the two places for the head offices but also because of the remarkable opportunity one if the other was chosen. There were other disadvantages of the large city and the least of which was expense. In Montreal land is sold by the square foot. In Toronto the values are now up to a tremendous height and how you go out about as far as minister or Scarboro. All the influences still exist in Montreal and Toronto that contributed to the financial wrecking of the G.T.R. and the C.N.R. Ottawa is unsatisfactory because of the opportunity for political interference, and the G.T.R. lines from the west have no entrance to Ottawa. Belleville is really the most conveniently situated place in the country for the head offices. The cash receipts can be forwarded from the freight and passenger offices throughout the country to Belleville just as well as to Toronto or Montreal. The pay cheques can be prepared by the clerks and signed by the Treasurer here just as well as elsewhere. Reports can be forwarded to Belleville and instructions sent out from Belleville. The head office solicitor of the G. T. R. was in Belleville for over 25 years and was only moved from here because no other large office was left in Montreal. It will be decided during the coming year. Next year's Council will do a good job for Belleville if it secures the location of the head offices of the Government Railway here. Every member that will be helped. Not a cent of taxes will be spread over more people. If they go outside of Toronto or Montreal they should come to Belleville and they should go outside of Toronto or Montreal. Let the wills of 12,000 Belleville people have on this. Many of the most successful men of Canada have commenced their careers in this old U.E. Loyalist District. It should be impressed on Sir Henry Thornton that if he commences his Canadian Railway career here good omens point to his success also. He should be urged to seize hold of the reality, but of course help and aid to him from Belleville and turn away from the dismal failures that resulted from the efforts of Montreal and Toronto. Boys, you have vision not possessed by some of the older Belleville people. Get busy.

His condition at times was very critical, but by the constant attention of his daughter, Miss Beatrice Armstrong, and the attendance of his physician, Dr. R. A. McCombe, his steady improvement to-day warranted his return to his home, the rectory.

Owing to a break in the pipes caused by the blasting near the gravel pit, the new supply tank became incapacitated. IRISH DETECTIVES DEFY DETECTION

Dublin, Dec. 15.—The Criminal Investigation Department, established by the Irish government, has nearly replaced the old detective department of the Dublin Metropolitan police force.

It has its headquarters in Oriel House, and its task is the round-up of ordinary criminals, hangers and burglars, who were taken advantage of the prevailing troubled times to prey on the citizens. They now force has the advantage, however, that the members have none of the traditional and easily recognizable appearance of the ordinary police detective in Dublin. They are mostly young men, very like the average young man in dress and habit and their operations are increasingly effective. They recently made 56 arrests in one week; have recovered much property, and have been congratulated on their efficiency by the Recorder of Dublin.

BRAZIL NEGLECTED BY BRITISH MANUFACTURERS

London, Dec. 15.—Brazil has been overlooked by the British manufacturer, according to Sir John E. Thornycroft, and the American tariff is aiding American exporters in that South American republic.

Sir John has just returned from a trip to Brazil, and speaks glowingly of the latest possibilities of the country. "Brazil is virtually as large as Europe, and yet there are only about 15 or 16 millions of inhabitants. There is an enormous wealth in natural resources, and Brazil is ready to serve's southern Brazil suitable for stock-raising, where the climatic conditions are good for Europeans, and which Germans were exploiting before the war. Then, again, the extent of Brazil's mineral wealth is entirely overlooked at home. It took the opportunity to push forward probably the richest iron deposits and are now firmly established in the world, besides diamonds, and Brazil's naval advisers, with a further precious stones, which are by no means worked out."

Sir John expressed the opinion the manufacturing and engineering industries of Great Britain are good and unless we can get some sort of protection for our home markets, are especially get the exchange put down, becoming some of the disabilities we are under as regards preferential tariffs, Going to the American valley, the United States are conceded in getting no fewer than 27 different classes of manufactured goods on preferential tariff basis for importation into Brazil, and this hits the British manufacturer."

Great Britain lost ground, Sir John absorbed, by not sending a naval revision to Brazil at the end of the Americans, on the other hand, all this challenge to the Moslems of the world, alive to their responsibilities, are ever ready to meet in every manner.

"This meeting of the Central Khalifat Committee considers the British activities, in their attempts to introduce the Turkish Republic, a subject not of concern, and in the course of his committee such interventions and alienation could only be beneficial to the Moslem masses, especially British internationalists the step under that prospective influences, and, further in the opinion of this meeting such attempts are detrimental to the freedom of the Khalifat of Islam and the Sanct of the Khalifat.

MUSTAPHA KEMAL POPULAR IN INDIA

Delhi, India, Dec. 15.—Three airplanes and a finely decorated sword are to be presented to Mustapha Kemal Pasha by Indian Mohammedans as tokens of their sympathy with his cause. These gifts have been collected through the Central Khalifat Committee, which recently has been in session here. The presentations are to be given by the Aga province.

The Khalifat Committee, in the resolutions it passed, congratulated Mustapha Kemal Pasha and the National Turks upon their recent victories over the Greeks, and approved of the establishment of an Angora Legion in India. The government of France and Italy were thanked for the aid which they had given to Turkey. Appreciation was also expressed to the King of Afghanistan for granting equal rights to Hindus in the interest of Hindu-Moslem unity.

With regard to the anti-Turkish policy recently displayed by Great Britain, the Khalifas Committee considers in its condemnation. Re-

RUSSIA PREPARING TO EXPORT GRAIN

Moscow, Dec. 15.—Export of Russian grain by use of foreign capital was advocated in a report to the central executive committee of Soviets, workmen and peasants parliament, at its last sitting in this city.

The linking up of the rural economy of Russia with foreign markets is looked upon by Soviet officials as a means of bringing into the country foreign capital which would help in the re-establishment of both agriculture and industry.

This year's harvest of grain has yielded 47,000,000 tons, which is about 12,000,000 tons more than last year's and 20,000,000 tons less than the pre war production. Allowing 7,000,000 tons for sowing purposes, 23,000,000 tons for the needs of the peasants, and some 3,000,000 tons for the needs of the towns, there is a balance of over 8,000,000 tons the greater part of which, according to the report, could be used for export.

In pre-war times Russia exported yearly over 12,000,000 tons of grain or 15 percent of her production. Since then the sowing area has diminished from 223,750,000 acres in 1913 to 135,000,000 acres in 1922, while the number of livestock has fallen materially.

THE "MUTT AND JEFF" FARCE WAS ONE

It is with considerable pleasure that the Intelligencer makes advertisement on a presentation at the Theatre, last night. There are few Manager Forhan of Griffin's should receive public sympathy. Such productions as appeared here last night do not particularly impress the theatre-goers but may possibly satisfy some of the less discriminating. Dillinger and the people of this municipal district are certainly entitled to some of the better road shows, but support will be surely found negative if the dishes served up are not better prepared than the Mutt and Jeff Show.

There was no particular plot to the farce, and there was a succession of hop-ancy of burlesque, vaudeville frams, and slap-stick comedy interspersed with a seven piece orchestra overs for the music. The girls sang—by note which was neat due.

The outstanding feature of the show was John Valiohn. The mysterious Frenchman, played by Bernie Green who is the same violinist. His every action with the fiddle were very interesting and pleased the crowd. The efforts of The Bower Sisters in "The Little Red School," a song and dance shortly, was well received and encored. Some of the steps and splits were recorded. These are dainty little girl and their voices blend very sweetly.

"Mutt and Jeff," played by the clean-cut Richards Freeman and the diminutive Don McCormick, put over some good songs and the impersonation of Bud Fisher's "oddity mate," Jerome of comment. It pleased the little kiddies in the right on deck with the "slide" Kelly, "slide" acrobatics, and judging from the way it bounced from the nose floor into the seat of a chair, it should be no trouble for him to likewise make Brooklyn Bridge from a ferry boat. There were some clever foot juggling, and a good line of comedy from Mutt and the Chorus with the lady principals, were well gowned and would have put things over if their singing had been the least bit better, or rather if they had the throat. No one seemed to know where they came from. Many of the ladies, having local appearance unconcerned, and did not seem to realize, in their nonchalantness that they were on the stage. It is a safe guess that on one was more disappointed in the show, than Manager Forhan, who had three or four better at the Opera House this season that he is to be heartily congratulated upon—The Chorus girls' decorations. The spirit of Yuletide if truly exemplified in the embellishment of the interior of the theatre. Tastefully arranged festooning of the season's holly and evergreens, together with the tinsel, palms, and evergreens, the well gone sign and the Christmas spirit truly permeated the air Under Manager Forhan's supervision, the decorations deserve great credit for the attractive manner in which, and has been no mean task as the old building is not particularly conducive to decorative looks.

Next Thursday, December 28th, a real attraction, a musical treat and a recommended treat is coming, when the music lovers of the community will be privileged to hear that distinguished Lyric, De Wolf Hopper, with the Gilbert and Sullivan Opera Company in their Nippanee setting, "The Mikado." There is a company of 50 with an augmented symphony orchestra of eleven pieces and a chorus of 30 with the music. This is an event that is deserving of the patronage of everyone, and Manager Forhan is to be congratulated for having been able to book this production for Belleville.

JUNIORS PRACTICE THIS EVENING

Intermediates Were Out Last Evening for Third Grind—Juniors Tonight 7-8 p.m.

In all probability there will be a goodly number of rail birds present this evening at the Arena, when the Belleville Junior hockey squad will turn out for their first practice this season. Coach Jack Marks has the Juniors as well as the Intermediates in hand, and is rounding out a nifty little aggregation. They practice this evening from 7 p.m. until 8.

Last evening, a regular practice of the Intermediates was held at the arena, when the following players turned out: "Len" Crook, "Bouncer" and "Toots" Holloway, Very, Vern Wet- Stan Hagerman, "Doc" Mallen, Blute, Armstrong, Williams, Lake, Swayne Marshall, Freshette and Fenn. Doral handled the bell while the boys had a regular game.

Coach Jack Marks was present at the arena last evening, and watched the boys travel for the first time. Jck is feeling much better again after his recent illness.

BOWL'S SEVEN STRAIGHT STRIKES

J. K. Williams Has Strong Grip on Turkey's Feathers at Domenico's Alleys

Johnny "Crock" Williams, G. T. R. third baseman, rolled a tidy score of 253 after making seven straight strikes last night. Although Jack rolled such a good score he was lucky at all to get out of bad over the 300 mark he blew the first frame and again in the ninth. T. Barrett is also leading in the three strings with some very close seconds.

In the ladies competition the fight is even keener than in the men. Mrs. Frank Domenico rolled a score of 161 but being connected with the alleys she is barred from the prize. Mrs. Geo. Ley raised her score five times during Friday afternoon, until her final score stands at 157.

COBOURG FANS "SHOCKED"

The fact that Tynan has started "working" in Oshawa comes as a great shock to Cobourg fans. The Sentinel Star says: Alfred Tynan, who has caught for the Cobourg Central Ontario League team for the past two seasons, is now located in Oshawa and will probably play with the Oshawa team this season. He has already started light training. He runs to work every morning at 7. Haven't heard anything about him getting his release from the local club, but don't let a little thing like that keep you from your work, "Ty."

FIRST WORK OUT

Port Hope Intermediate and junior hockey teams will have their first practice on the ice this evening. Both teams will chase the puck for an hour.

Rochester, Dec. 16.—Claiming that the Bible gives the right to drink light wine in spite of the Volstead law, a number of Rochester citizens have organized a new sect known as the "Joy Christians." The announced purpose of the "Joy Christians" is to distribute wine among its members and follow the example of the Lord, "especially remembering Him as a man of joy among men; a drinker of the wine of His day."

"Christ drank wine in His day and no one has yet branded Him as criminal," said Mr. A. Stanley Copeland, chief organizer of the new sect. "Our Christian religion tells us to follow His example, and we are going to do so."

Mr. Copeland said that an effort would be made to secure the permission of the Federal Government to serve wine to members of the cult.

The communication was received and filed.

High School Grant

The Deputy Minister of Education wrote the Board that the High School Inspector had declined to certify to the payment of the grant to the High School for Belleville and in consequence the grant is withheld.

Messrs Jones. Elliott, Woodley spoke in support of the proposition, to appoint a delegation to wait on the Government.

Mr. Deacon stated that some schools were getting more than their share of grants.

Mr. Ackerman—We are moving in the matter of providing a new High School as fast as possible and should get the grant.

COSGRAVE BELIEVES IN FINAL UNITY IN IRELAND

(Canadian Press Dispatch.)

Belfast, Dec. 16.—President W. T. Cosgrave, of Irish Free State in a Christmas message to the telegraph of Newry, County of Armagh Ulster, says that even after the fixing of the boundary commission, "we may have to suffer separation of portions of Ulster from the Irish Motherland, but these portions will ultimately join the rest of Ireland as certain as the sun rises in the east tomorrow. There has never been in my generation any question of coercing or tyrannizing over the section of northern people who do not wish to join us in founding and building the great, prosperous Irish Free State, in which all breeds and classes will enjoy prosperity and civil and religious liberty," he said.

Sterling exchange closed at 4.65½ in New York yesterday being gain of one cent for the day. This mornings opening $4.65.

New York finds—7-16% premium. Call money—4%.
London money rates—1½% discount. Rates, short and three month's bills 2⅝%.

Cotton moved up yesterday. Yesterdays was the highest price in four weeks. A short crop in the south. A question of demand and supply responsible largely. Spot price yesterday 25.75c lb.

A stock dividend of 32.33 per cent was declared yesterday by Davis & Brown Woollen Co., a small New England concern at Uxbridge. They increased the capital stock from $15,000 to half a million to make this distribution possible.

Trading was strong and active at Montreal and Toronto yesterday, more public interest manifested. An unusual feature in the holiday trading.

The grain markets continue strong. Renewal buying to fresh top record prices for the season. Sleet in Kansas and predictions of a cold wave partly responsible in Chicago prices. Reports current that Minneapolis mills have disposed of 50,000 barrels of flour and were buying wheat aided the shift side. Again the argentine harvest is reported delayed and there will be no movement of new wheat from there until the end of January. Winnipeg sales at the next board totalled 500,000 bushels. There is more export business going on in Canadian wheat that public cables would indicate.

There is a heavy demand for cash wheat with farmers being heavy sellers. A good response of foreign buying noticed. As long as Russia remains a non-exporter, reserve stocks are exhausted and there is a surplus export shortage in Australia of sixty million bushels. This makes the market decidedly bullish with the ever squeezing plan to cover the shorts in the speculative section.

At Winnipeg prices are:

MR. DOHERTY AND THE BANKS

Although the Ontario Government, of which Hon. Manning Doherty is a member, has established a chain of savings banks to receive deposits and make loans to farmers in opposition with chartered banks, the provincial Minister of Agriculture appears to be of opinion that the latter ought to make special concessions to the co-operative organizations which are the outcome of his own Government's efforts. Addressing Perth dairymen, at Stratford the other day, Mr. Doherty quoted an instance where the Niagara fruit growers' organization had got behind at the bank to the extent of $25,000, and the bank called upon them to meet the overdraft within three days. Mr. Doherty added:—

"Bankers should take notice the Bank Act will come before the House next year, and unless they are more human, it will be revised, for in my opinion it is better to break a bank or two than that one of these co-operative organizations should fail."

Most people will agree that there has been quite enough breaking of banks in recent years in Ontario, but it is well to note that Mr. Doherty is referring, not to the Legislature, of which he is a member, but to the House of Commons, where another party sits in the Government side. The Progressive group—recently reduced by one—will have representation on the committee which is to consider revision of the Bank Act; but Mr. Doherty, in making threats, is just a little bit "over his head."

Bankers are seldom drawn into any controversy with a political twist to it, but a Montreal paper manages to get an interview from J. B. Bell, general manager of the Bank of Hamilton, who comments upon Mr. Doherty's remarks as follows:—

"The Provincial Government has nothing to do with the Bank Act. That is a federal matter. The trouble has been that the banks have been so lenient to co-operative enterprises."

THE FREIGHT CAR SUPPLY

The Railway Association of Canada has recently issued a circular dealing with the shortage of freight cars. Although there are not many in this vicinity who ship in carload quantities to any marked extent, it is nevertheless interesting to note the causes of the shortage, which more or less directly effects all citizens, as delays in incoming material are inevitable, particularly if heavy snowfalls are of frequent occurrence this winter.

Goods should be loaded or unloaded promptly as soon as cars are placed, because the improvement of business conditions has increased the demand for cars. The railway strike in the States has so hampered rail operations in that country that Canadian cars entering are only with difficulty being recovered. At the present time there are approximately 20,000 more Canadian box cars in the States than there are U.S. cars of a similar class in Canada. In addition to this there is the impaired railway service in the U.S.A. caused by the recent termination of the coal strike which creates on Uncle Sam's railways a suddenly increased demand for cars and motive power to move the accumulated orders for coal. This makes it even more difficult for the Canadian roads to keep down the number of their cars on foreign rails.

The Railway Association of Canada has made direct special representations to Washington and has obtained assurances that U.S. roads will do all in their power to speedily return Canadian cars." Of course Canadian roads are following up the matter aggressively themselves.

To a certain extent the dwindling supply of cars is being offset by a concentrated effort to move cars faster and further, thereby increasing the relative amount of work done by each car in use, each day.

In spite of all that has been done the shortage is daily growing more acute. One great factor in car economy lies out of the railway's control—and in the hands of shipping and receiving departments. If on instructions they will take pains to load more goods in each car and release cars promptly, it will help protect all plants against the further danger of car shortage.

Even though cars are being released well within the free time limit, it will pay to increase the loading efficiency still further and co-operate with the roads. The United States traffic is from 5 to 17 per cent. heavier this fall than last fall, quite aside from strike accumulations of shipments. Canada appears to be following suit. To share in returning prosperity it is essential to help protect our own car supply. Car shortage is a menace to every one. It delays shipments and this affects the ability of plants to keep running and that concerns every man, woman and child in the community.

How the Fakers Work at Seances

Joseph F. Dinn, 21 Queen St., is a member of the American Society of Magicians, to which belong the chief prestidigitators in the United States, and is an amateur magician of parts. He is also a sworn enemy and exposer of spiritist delusions. Never a prominent spiritist appears in his neighborhood whom he does not challenge, and of seances he will not except Conan Doyle, who visited Toronto a short time ago, and who has been lecturing in the United States for a few weeks past. Mr. Dinn says that in all his investigations he has never found this slightest evidence that spiritist seances are what they pretend to be, or that any of the phenomena are produced by supernatural means. In fact, he undertakes to reproduce any phenomena, and offers to wager a large sum with any spiritist that he will be unable to say how the trick is done, unless the spiritist happens to be a medium himself, in which case he will be prepared to know all about it.

Recently he gave the New York Herald an account of what he alleges is a typical spiritist seance, a cabinet seance, as it is called, wherein a spirit is brought from a cabinet and performs ghastly tricks. This is a common spiritist phenomenon, and, as a rule, greatly impresses those who see it for the first time or do not understand how it is done. As a rule, there are a couple of confederates, the medium and some other member of the audience, the latter being often the medium's wife, monies or person under whose auspices the seance is being held. Now the audience in this typical seance, says Mr. Dinn, will be made up of three classes. There will be those who believe, those who do not believe, and those who not know whether they believe. There will be those who approach the critical moments in a frequent pretence, and three, he says, are usually the true believers.

There is the hushed talk about spirits, the certainty that they appear, and the impossibility of them appearing. The medium, as likely as not, will be rather jocular, and will assure the gathering that there is nothing gloomy about spirits, and that gaiety is the order of place. When it is deemed that the proper atmosphere has been created, the lights are turned out, only one small, dimmed jet or lamp being left burning. The idea that ghosts will appear only in the dark is a superstition, says Mr. Dinn, that has served the spiritists well for many centuries. In fact it is the darkness that permits the fake mediums to operate. The medium is seated in a chair slightly withdrawn from the circle, and is just dimly visible. There is a cabinet, or recess, formed of dark cloth which will not reflect the faintest gleam of light behind her, and she proceeds to fall into a trance. Previous to the seance the medium, usually a woman, has provided herself with a roll of gauze, which has been treated with phosphorescent paint. This can be held in her hand or concealed in her dress. The gauze has been shaped like a funnel, flowing gown, with openings for arms.

Since everybody knows that the demonstration is to take place in the cabinet, the soft-footed medium finds it not difficult to slip from her seat while all eyes are fastened upon another part of the room. At a series of ceremonies then proceeds to call for the spirits. What appears to be something mysteriously glowing on the floor. It is the rolled-up gauze which the medium has deposited, her hand clad in a black glove. At this moment the last remaining light in the room is extinguished, and there is dense blackness, except what comes from the cabinet. Gradually the medium unrolls the glowing gauze, which seems to grow into a larger ball. The gauze is manipulated until the spectators believe they see something rising from the floor, which gradually takes human shape as the medium thrusts her head into the apertures, and draws the hood over her head and face. What happens subsequently varies in each case. But what the spectators see is supposed to be the spirit that has been evoked. It may be a spirit that nobody identifies. It may be identified by the master of ceremonies, or, if nobody else is credulous enough to recognize it, the spirit may announce itself as Robert Ingersoll or William Shakespeare.

Questions are put and answered. Then the spirit gives signs of disappearing, caused by the medium divesting herself of the gown and rolling it up again. Once more the spectators see something glowing on the floor, and they gaze into the medium slips back into her chair. It is now the business of the confederate to operate the rod, also the property of a slender, collapsible steel rod, divided into twenty projecting sections, so equipped that it can be extended or contracted at will by the pressure of the hand. He has also a rubber glove coated with phosphorus, and puts into the form of a hand by inflation. This is covered with a black handkerchief, to the corner of which is attached a thread, which plays out as the rod is quickly extended. The concealed hand is brought up over the heads of the gathering into the middle of the room, the handkerchief is suddenly withdrawn, and there the wonderers see floating, apparently, a human hand. Gradually it is encircled by means of tiny hooks, fastens upon the waving ball. Holding the gauze, once more rolled tight, the hand flickers about the room, eventually dropping in the lap of the medium, who quickly conceals the gauze and the gauze. The confederate contracts the steel rod. The medium sighs. The seance is at an end.

CANADIAN TRADE TREATY WITH FRANCE

Ottawa, Dec. 15.—The Government has received a cable from Hon. W. S. Fielding, Minister of Finance, in which he outlines the main provisions of the new Franco-Canadian commercial treaty signed by himself and Hon. Ernest Lapointe on behalf of Canada.

The cable was made public late this evening at the conclusion of a lengthy sitting of Cabinet.

It states that the treaty provides that France will grant to Canada the benefit of the minimum tariff on 124 tariff items, and 14 chemical articles, and the lowest rate of duties granted to any foreign country on 223 tariff items and 183 chemical articles, to which the minimum tariff will not apply. As regards the Canadian products coming into France under the French general tariff, the treaty provides that Canada shall receive as favorable treatment as the United States. Concessions made to the United States will also apply to the Dominion.

THE AFTERTHOUGHT

We have read somewhere of an old Scotchman, whose wit was edged with pessimism. One morning he met at her gate a neighbor whose business was seriously ill.

"And how's per husband this morning, Mrs. Tamson?" he asked, solicitously.

"O, he's awful' bad!—The doctor said his temperature has gone to one hundred and fifty."

"Nae, nae, you're made a mistake! Sandy's temperature could never be as mickle as one hundred and fifty—at least, so' in this world,' he added, as an afterthought.

SOME GRIM CURIOS.

Shrunken Human Heads Were Found in Peru.

One of the most fascinating countries of South America is Peru, interest centres mostly around its Incas and Pre-Inca ruins and much interest is manifested in the many tribes of Indians who inhabit this South American country, but the tribe of the Jivaro Indians is the one of real terror, who bathe science in their strongest method of shrinking human heads; a good illustration of one of these was lately in the hands of M.P.P., of Chatham, Ont., a well known, business man and a world traveler, who has made a magnificent collection of curios, varied and unusual, from the remotest parts of the world, but the most extraordinary according to Mr. Sullivan, is the shrunken head.

Very little information concerning shrunken heads is available. The Encyclopaedia Britannica is very vague, mentioning them as being "thought amulets of war" by the Jivaro, who are described as being a very war-like tribe and head hunters.

The shrunken head in its present state denotes, viz., a man's head in its natural form, shrunken to the size of an orange without any of the expression or feature.

The manner of shrinking is not known to science. It has been said that they brew a certain herb or several herbs and shrubs, which when cooked has a tendency of softening the bones, after which the heads were placed in large piles of sand and a fire kept going for months, night and day, until the head is brought down to the miniature size. They were then taken out and the hair with hair of the owners as either trophies of war or objects of worship. It has also been said that the process of shrinking was done by alternately applying heat and then cold, but no one has been unable to find the actual process.

While in Peru Mr. Sullman was informed that scientists have entered the Peruvian wilds in which the Jivaros have lived and that these heads have come out the same as described, recognizable in every detail.

The head in quite hard and retains the hair and eyebrows and even at close scrutiny the whiskers are visible on its face.

Through the use of Mr. Sulman's specimen in a cord showing how the captive was led by his doom. Large holes are punched in the ears of the specimen for ear-rings, similar to the same as the Incas, but not so large, as the Incas were sub-rings so heavy that they often pulled the fleshy part of the ear down to the shoulders.

Many of the museums of North America are without a specimen of the shrunken head, which is considered really more remarkable than a mummy.

Plaudi that Busy Parsis.

Do you realize that there are such things as vegetable pearls?

Now and then in certain tropical plants curious hard round substances are found which one may properly call pearls, since their composition is almost identical with the product of the oyster.

In Java, these substances are discovered in the joints of bamboo. On analysis they are found to consist of almost pure carbonate of lime, with a little material that goes to make up the oyster pearl.

Sometimes the pearls are found in the endosperm of the coconut, and they also occur in the wood of the betel and pomegranate trees.

They are sometimes the size of a hazel nut, but more often rather smaller. How these pearls come into being is not really known. They are believed to be due to excess of calcareous and silicious matter in the plant.

In the East Indian Islands these pearls are valued very highly as charms, and the owner of one will not part with it for any figure, because he considers that as long as he holds the pearl he will be immune from all ills.

Fancy That!

A Wooden Statue.

San Francisco are paying homage to one of the most remarkable wooden statues ever conceived) says Popular Mechanics Science. It is the work of Hanzuma Masakichi, greatest Japanese artist in wood or ivory, who posed for himself by the aid of adjustable mirrors and carved his own life-sized image from wood. The hair on the figure is the artist's own. He used the clippings from his head and beard, fixing them before the hairs and setting them in place one by one. The figure is in every particular, even the most minute, an exact counterpart of the artist. The carving required three years, even to so scroll and masterly a workman as Masakichi.

Wind Blown Pollen.

Windblown pollen (sulphur rain) is known to be carried for miles. The Swedish experiment station reports a quite extensive rain of tree pollen as two fire ships, twenty and thirty-seven miles from shore, and the pollen of signs is known to have been carried even as far as 300 miles.

HISTORY OF SURNAMES.

They Furnish Interesting Clues to Your Ancestry.

It is by no means every man who knows that to the name he bears there is probably an interesting and valuable clue to his ancestry.

Thus, if he signs it Harcourt or Hamilton, Howard or Percy, Bruce or Dunbar, he may be pretty sure that the founder of his family had his cradling in Normandy—though whether he was a lord, a knight, or a soldier, is a riddle for him.

Similarly, if he bears the name of any town or village in England, it is probable that like Wright or Lorn was the cradle of his forefathers; though here, again, he gets no clue to the quality of its first bearer, who might be the first labourer or enhanced tradesman or artisan. And when there are several places of the same name, often in different counties, he is still ignorant as to which of them he originally hails from.

Even when a man's surname throws no light on the place of origin, it often gives interesting clues to the occupation of the first Baker or Glover, Butcher or Baker, Cooper or Carpenter as we know that the first of his forefathers to bear that name followed each or other of these occupations.

The first Wright was a teller of wood; Jenner was a joiner; Milner, a miller; Webster, a weaver; Tanner, a tanner; Lorimer, a maker of bits and spurs; and so on through the long list of old-time trades, many of them now scarcely identifiable by the average man — such as Stringer, a man who made bow-strings; Tipper, who tipped arrows; and Fletcher, who added the feathers.

What surnames throw no light upon the place of origin, they occasionally reveal the situation of the original home. Thus, Tom who lived at the foot of the hill was Tomlinson; Underhill; if his home was on the shore, he was Tom Dy-the-sea. In similarly we get such patronymics as Undercliff, Atwell, Atmore, Dyehill, and so on.

Other surnames tell us what kind of men were they who first bore them: Dark or Swarthy; Read or Russell; or Pale (Whiteman); whether they were "Long" or "Short"; or "Speight," "Merry" or "Sadd"; "Bold" or "Coward"; "Lightfoot" or "Heavyside."

When a man's old days there was no such way of distinguishing a man, says a writer in "John o' London's Weekly," is was an easy matter to identify him as he left his cradle. Thus, Richard's boys became known as Richardson, William's as Williamson; and Robin's as Robinson. And when, in process of time, these kings grew too plentiful and confusing, the father's name was modified in other ways—to such an extent, indeed, that the connection is almost impossible to trace.

Some names which suggest undesirable lineage are often both ancient and honorable. Mr. Hobson can derive comfort from learning that before the Conquerer set foot on the shores of England a Leofric Hobbe-sune figured among Saxon tenants in Suffolk. Mr. Higgins and Mr. Biggs will be relieved o find that their surnames never will be "up under hatches"; and Mr. Snooks can point to Gervaisde as the cradle of his family.

GHOSTLY CHIMING HEARD

Duck Hunters Heard Spook on St. Clair Flats.

Whoever writes a complete history of Ontario will surely pause when he comes to the chapter on Ghosts. There is ample material for such a chapter, and a many good history would not be complete without it. As a matter of fact, a good many volumes could be written dealing only with famous Ontario spooks, if the writer included those which still remain unexplained by those for which explanation was ultimately found. One of the latter is still discussed with interest, and not a little amusement, at Sombra, down by the St. Clair flats, where duck-hunting flocks over the province are wont to congregate when the mallard are on the wing each year. An old-timer recalled the duck-hunting spook the other day after reading about the Antigonish ghost and his various relatives all over the continent.

It was about three years ago that the incident occurred. A number of Sombra men had a hunting camp several Ontario cities with down the St. Clair to the Flats in their houseboat. Among the party were two who on two nights before the party was due to return. The hunters had retired after a good day's shooting. Then the spook got busy.

"Listen, fellows, hear the bells!" shouted one of the party at two o'clock, sitting up in his bunk and waking the rest of the party from sound slumbers. Some were prevailed upon to listen, and plainly heard the sounds of chimes. Others would not too sleepy, curried imprecations at the wakeful ones and cautioned them to drink fewer nightcaps in future. Meanwhile the bells ceased and everybody went to sleep again. Next morning the conversation was chiefly about ghosts and their antics. The question was then put all agreed to listen carefully the following night for the bells. Sure enough, at the same hour as before, bells began to ring, but when the men made off to their boat by some who were afraid to remain in their bunks. Those who had listened to the chimes were not frightened to join in the search. Listeners inside and outside the cabin could hear the slow, melodious notes of chimes, which ceased as suddenly as they began.

The hunters scrambled to their bunks, but not to sleep. It was the last shoot, and they could not say they were mighty glad of it. The following morning they called for Sombra, and a few hours after they landed the story of the "haunted houseboat" was all over the village. The night following, a party of young Sombra men, determined to solve the mystery went aboard the houseboat armed with shotguns. An all-night vigil was without result. The bells did not ring, and they were never heard afterwards.

It would still be a deep, dark mystery if Dr. C——, of Kitchener, who was one of the hunting party, had not sent a card from Kitchener to relatives in Sombra, asking how the duck-hunters of the village were faring along without the little chimes which he used to keep under his pillow on the houseboat.

NIGHTMARES

Nerves of Body Boss Mind While You Sleep.

You can see more help dreaming when you sleep than you can help breathing; both operations are automatic.

Some dreams are pleasant, others are the reverse. The ordinary, apparently rambling, fantastic, and even chaotic dream is seldom regarded for more than a few hours; but the horror of some terrifying dreams leaves an impression that may last for days or months.

The latter class belongs to the nocturnal attacks of concentrated fear, dismay, and panic which leave us as waking, exhausted and gasping—with a racing pulse. Of such, a nature are the nightmares dealt with in this article.

The force brought by the nightmare varies in detail with the physical and mental capacity of the dreamer; but the general type has points of common agreement with all the others.

For instance, there is the one to which you find yourself in a position of danger, or threatened death. You may find yourself crossing a railway line in front of an oncoming train, and be utterly powerless to get out of its way, but your legs refuse to move, or are rooted.

At the supreme moment of impact you awake up. The mental agony you endure, and the physical energy you exert when you are awake are bound together without a bad effect upon your health.

This type of nightmare, of course, takes other forms. It may be that you are rooted to the spot when on the opposite side from a blazing building. Or you may find yourself stretched, unable to move, or even to speak, on the floor of a ghastly hammer, which is descending slowly and surely.

Again, it may happen that in your attempt to escape some mysterious clutching hand, you are forced to leap from a cliff, a tower, or a big window—waking just as you grasp the sidewalk or reach your bed.

Another familiar form of nightmare is that in which you are chased by a horrible thing that he groans, shouts, and even bellows about it. Screams of fear, abject terror. A sense of the size of the thing is created by a companion, much to its rage, when he is not, the nightmare is prolonged until he is aroused by his fellow-sufferer.

Most people have a type of nightmare peculiar to themselves, and recurs again and again.

These disturbing occurrences do not contribute to the refreshing quality of sleep, and are to be avoided if possible. It may be taken for granted that they are the forerunners ill health, which may be trivial and temporary, or serious and lasting.

Nightmares are caused by fear. Freud believes that every dream can be interpreted as the fulfilment of a wish; but mind-students are by no means unanimous in accepting his teaching. Nightmares can be explained more simply as being due to abnormal stimulation or irritation of one or other of the senses. That is to say they are of nervous rather than purely mental origin.

While we sleep our bodily organs are busy, and ask for all they are worth. Most nightmares are due to irritation of the great pneumo-gastric (lung stomach) nerve by an overtaxed or an unsuitably loaded stomach—a supper taken late or an indigestible item of food being the chief offenders. As the big nerve gives branches to all the vital organs of the body, these are disturbed by stomach trouble almost as much as the main nerve itself, the subconscious mind interpreting the disturbance as threatening it. Hence nightmares of approaching danger or death from which we vainly seek to flee.

The Name of Lacrosse.

Although the white man adopted the game of lacrosse from the Indians, they invented their own name for it. It would have been impossible to call it by any of the names used by the Indians, with the possible exception of "kagaxiawa." Even that one, although you can say it, is rather a mouthful.

Listen to some of the others.

The Iroquois called it "Tsiontkwaronhiatonk."

The Hurons called it "Tsiontkwaronhiatonk-8-shekx."

The French found it easier to invent a name of their own. The Sieur de Dollard Desormeaux likened it like a bishop's crozier and accordingly the first Archives of the city of Montreal as "la crosse." In course of time the two French words came together into the word "lacrosse."

There are still some old-fashioned folk who speak of the lacrosse stick as the crosse.

Lucky Horseshoes.

Why do we regard horseshoes as lucky? Many reasons believe that the superstition comes from the sea-god Neptune, whose horses were looked upon as sacred. A horseshoe picked up on the road was supposed to belong to one of them.

But the truth is that the horse is the national animal of the English people. The Celtic Britons who came to England were Hengist and Horsa both of whose names mean horse.

Smiths were regarded with great reverence, since theirs was held to be known a sacred art.

Do not forget that a horseshoe is lucky only if its points face you as you find it; for luck streams out from them. If, in lying the other way, walk round it until you are again in front; then pick it up and carry it with the points upper-most.

Nail it on your door in the same position. Good fortune will then be showered—so says the old belief—over your house. If the points are downward as it hangs on the door, the lucky influences will pass into the earth and be lost.

Canada's Water Power.

The Dominion of Canada possesses 20 per cent. of the world's total water power of 100,000,000 horsepower. The power of Canada's resources are estimated at 6,000,000 horse-power, of which 400,000 has already been developed.

PULLS TOOTH; DENTIST SUED

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 12.—Treatment of her teeth by Dr. William A. Giffen, extraction specialist, injured Mrs. Mary Langley Rachow's career as a concert singer to the extent of $20,000, she charges in a suit filed yesterday.

Mrs. Rachow says she went to Dr. Giffen, October 24, and told her she would need extraction of a tooth. She left upper jaw, preparatory to installation of bridge work. The operation would require no more than ten days, he said, so have told her.

She says Dr. Giffen broke her tooth and that the ten days became eight weeks, forcing her to forego a concert tour.

Mrs. Rachow admitted today that she had never appeared in public under contract, though she styled herself a concert singer in her bill of complaint.

Dr. Giffen denied the charge that his work was performed in an unskilled manner. He said that the tooth should have been removed long before, and that Mrs. Rachow's singing would have suffered had it been left longer.

Kingston, Ont., Dec. 13.—Thos. Smith was found guilty to-day when he came up for trial at the General Sessions of the Peace before Judge H. A. Lavell and jury, charged with shooting and wounding Mrs. Sybil Aylesworth, wife of Rupert Aylesworth, farmer, of their home near Cataraqui, where the accused was engaged as a farm hand.

Judge Lavell sentenced the prisoner to one year and three months in the Ontario Reformatory, with an understanding sentence thereafter of six months.

Walter Grubb, a colored convict, now serving a three years' sentence in Portsmouth Penitentiary for burglary at Toronto last Winter, through his counsel, pleaded guilty to the charge of escaping from custody on August 6 last, when being transferred to the prison at Kingston, Saskatchewan and was given an additional 6 months' sentence by Judge Lavell.

"There Were Many Things Which I Could Not Eat"

Mrs. H. Robert Wells, English Harbour, Trinity Bay, Nfld., writes:

"I was troubled with nervous dyspepsia—so much so that there were a great many things I could not eat on account of the distressed feeling afterwards. I used many different remedies, but they did no little good. Finally I tried Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and Kidney-Liver Pills, and was surprised at the relief that the first treatment gave me in such a short time."

TORONTO, FIRST

Name Is Supposed to Mean "The Place of Meeting."

Most of the older cities of Canada have had more than one name in the course of their development from early forts, settlements or trading posts to metropolitan greatness, and Toronto is no exception to the rule. But in the case of Toronto there is this unique feature that it has gone back to the name it had before the settlers' white settlers' arrived on the country.

The word "Toronto" is an Indian word and it means a place of meeting. Five Indian trails met in the place where Toronto is now situated and two hundred years ago there were a few huts and wigwams of the Indians located at the junction of the trails. That was the first Toronto. Later the French came and in 1749, Fort Rouille was established. But no settlement grew up around the fort, and when the British obtained sovereignty over the land they had no hamlet at Toronto at all. Instead, the great town of the countryside was Newark, on the Niagara frontier.

At Newark, Lieutenant-Governor John Graves Simcoe held sway. And he would have continued to exercise the fullest and ordinary functions of a Viceroy had not the Americans put a garrison in Fort Niagara across the river. It wouldn't do to have an armed garrison of a foreign nation keeping watch over the capital of Upper Canada and Simcoe went scouting.

On May 31, 1793, he set sail with a party of officers and went to Toronto, via Burlington Bay. Simcoe liked the easily defended bay at Toronto and forthwith established the place as his headquarters. The King's army was in Holland at the time and Simcoe took the opportunity to ingratiate himself at court by changing the name of the spot to York, in honor of the King's second son, the Duke of York, who was in command on the continent.

Thus was York at that day named as it appeared to the lieutenant-governor's surveyor: "Dense and tangled forests lined the margin of the lake and reflected their inverted images in its glassy surface. The wandering savage had constructed his ephemeral habitation beneath their luxuriant foliage — the ground then consisting of two families of the Mississaugas — and the bay and the neighboring marshes were the favorite unloyaded haunts of immense covers of wild fowl. Indeed, they were so abundant as to some manner to annoy our fowling pieces."

York grew and prospered. Between his military pensants Simcoe found time to build Dundas Street and Yonge Street. In 1812 it was marked by American troops but despite this set-back 20,000 souls call New York their home in 1834. The town was becoming too cumbersome to be governed as a part of Upper Canada and the Legislature passed a cumbrous bill of 87 clauses constituting the place a city. The name was changed to Toronto, and Toronto it has been ever since. Five wards were established and while the town has have disappeared as names of wards there are still traces of them in the streets of the older portion of the city. They were St. Andrew's, St. George's, St. Lawrence's, St. David's and St. Patrick's wards.—John Duke in Toronto Sunday World.

Canadian Justice.

The superiority of Canadian justice, and the Canadian people's attitude toward law, is the subject of comment by Judge Kavanagh, of the Illinois Superior Court. He has established himself as an effect, but equally dedicated as to the cause. In a Chicago newspaper, he is quoted as follows:

"A few of the most observable different in Canada may be noticed at once. For example, the administrators of the criminal law there are absolutely beyond the reach of politics. The chief of police in any Canadian city is secure in his office for life if he does his duty. Not a very policeman; the judge is there for life; and so practically is the prosecuting attorney. The penalties imposed for crimes are severe, and are as severe as our own. In fact, the entire Canadian theory seems to involve protection for the public, with only a secondary concern for the criminal. Above all, there is there an undefined but palpable difference in the attitude of two men on the street—the Canadian and the American."

The Food.

It has been estimated that the value of a toad on the farm to the farmer is $19.45. The service of the humble amphibian are worth good money in clearing away certain undesirable pests which are likely to give the farmer trouble. He there is no nuisance in any sense of the word. It is fallacy that the toad provides a poison which is responsible for the appearance of warts on the hands of any one who handles it. The liquid is a milky substance which passes through the animal's skin when it is frightened and it has a slightly irritating effect upon the human flesh, but there is no danger in it. Toads usually stay around a place for many years if the environment is congenial and there are instances on record where these have been seen year after year for twenty and thirty years.

A Parlorable Error.

A canny Scot was being shown over a man-o'-war for the first time in his life, and being keenly interested in all he saw plied his guide with all sorts of questions. The marines seemed particularly to interest him, and going up to one he pointed to the grenade on the man's cap, and asked what it was. The marine looked at him in mild surprise. "Don't you know what that is?" he asked. "Why, that's a turnip, of course." "Ach, man," replied the Scot, "I wasna askin' about yer head."

Not Then.

Mrs. Eve—Misery loves company, you know.

Mrs. Wye—Not always, my dear. I guess you never had on very tight shoes.

THE BONES OF COLUMBUS

They Are Going Place Is Not Known to Historians.

A new memorial for Christopher Columbus may be erected in Santo Domingo, but the project has raised fresh discussion as to where the discoverer of America is really buried if it be not in the present tomb. Many of us grant a discoverer that don't should be of great interest to the U.S. The Spanish nation, ever since Columbus died at Valladolid in 1506, has claimed to have all his ashes in its keeping, and still at least supposes that it cherishes them sacredly under the high altar of the Cathedral of Seville. The Spaniards say that the Dominicans, jealous because the bones of Columbus were removed from Santo Domingo to Havana on the transfer of the island to the French in 1796, have trumped up the discovery of "the authentic remains" in the Cathedral of Santo Domingo, and that they have actually done masquerading, as it were, in place of the ashes of the great admiral.

Books have been written presenting the arguments as to whether the Columbus bones remain in Spain or in Santo Domingo. The controversy arose from doubt as to the identity of the bones carried away from Santo Domingo about the year 1541. Some said that it was Columbus who was interred in a vault under the floor on the right side of the high altar (the right side looking from the altar, not toward it), and close by them somewhere were also interred the remains of Columbus' son, Diego, and afterward (on the other side of the altar) those of his uncle, Bartholomew.

These were the bones brought from Spain, presumably at the request of Columbus, to be buried in Santo Domingo, but the intrusion of a lot of old bones from Spain was something of a nuisance to the authorities of Santo Domingo Cathedral. Hence the incident was followed by neglect, and, if there was any tablet or inscription anything like a true account of Columbus, it eventually disappeared. Nothing remained except a tradition that Columbus was buried there on the right side of the altar. In 1795, when Spain's power was ceded to France, and when, in order that the ashes of the illustrious dead might fall into the hands of foreigners, it was decided that they should be removed to Havana, what was thought to be the dust of Columbus was deposited in the Cathedral at Havana, and remained there until 1898, when it was removed to Seville, to Madrid, and it is there that it still remains, venerated by the Spaniards as the true body of Columbus. Meantime, in 1877, some excavations at the Cathedral of Santo Domingo resulted in the discovery of a long leaden box containing a number of mainly unrecognizable bones, and an inscription on the exterior, which, being translated, read: "The Discoverer of America, First Admiral."

Therefore, in these confusing discoveries Canada may find the material for a lengthy dispute.

Of With Your Waistcoat.

Pinelli, the celebrated conjurer of the eighteenth century, in his performance at Versailles before the French Court in 1873, relieved some of the courtiers of their shirts without disturbing the rest of their attire. It was a very striking trick, perhaps, hardly suited for the greater refinement of the present day.

The waistcoat can, however, be removed without taking the coat off, it being only necessary to unbutton the lower garment. In the waistcoat is not pulled over the back of the head as in Pinelli's method for removing the shirt.

The trick is performed as follows: First take the left corner (or lapel) of the coat, and push it through the left armhole of the waistcoat from the outside to the inside. Next, put the left hand and arm through the same armhole, bringing the waistcoat down the right sleeve of the coat.

Last but not least, use an old coat and waistcoat.

A Costly Theater.

The costliest theater in the world is nearing completion, says the Mexican Magazine. It is the National Theater of Mexico at Mexico City, which will cost approximately $20,000,000. The huge structure presented its builders with an engineering problem that has finally been solved. The whole City of Mexico is on the site of an ancient lake. Usually foundations are omitted from Mexican buildings and they rest directly on a thin layer of concrete and steel, which extends for a considerable distance around the building. Regular foundations were laid for the theater, but encountered water. They started to disappear before the superstructure was erected. This has now been remedied.

Man's Marvellous Memory.

A man who has developed his memory until he has an amazing store of information on a wide variety of subjects has been discovered at Birchencliffe, Huddersfield, England. He is John Holroyd, a builder's laborer, and he is self-taught.

Holroyd has 21,000 facts stored away in his brain. He can name every man who has played football for his country, and the winners of all classic races since 1840.

Another of his specialties is cricket scores and results. He can tell you the birthdays of national and local celebrities. Once he has been a date he never forgets it, and he has more than once set parents right as to the birthdays of their children.

SOMEBODY IN CANADA.

Save of the Movie Made Great Popular Appeal.

A man who can survive his own slanders, his own press agent and his unpopularity of his own job and still be a popular hero can well, a cas.

That being an unpopular hema, no matter what he made of the part, is Douglas Fairbanks, the French commander in the first great scene of the western feature, "Knighthood for the world, the then Gen. Joffre did not make himself into Marne or while guarding the battle line from the Somme to Verdun.

Deposed, he made his first visit to America and simply made Viviani, Balfour, King Albert and all the rest of them look like cull clods. The strange combination of impassivity and savvy, and above all the hearty absolutely of the old man won all.

Marshal Foch was brought over to entertain him—and failed. The little generalissimo may have been a greater strategist, as Joffre himself was the first to admit, but he had not the something or other that made an appealing and acclaim. Foch had all the publicity resources of the American Legion and the Knights of Columbus, while Joffre had a Fairbanks. Some had that it was simply that made the grizzled, stout old Joffre as popular on the side of the water. If Foch had come in 1919, when Joffre came, it would be said.

After Foch comes Joffre again, by the back door, unheralded, unofficially, hardly press-greeted, under no particular patronage, himself making blunders in public and yet he is the hero of the hour.

Since the arrival at Seattle of Marshal Joffre on his way home to France from his trip around the world varying reports have come of the warmth of his reception. In the English Northwest he was accorded by the Hill interest, lending himself to an unpopular cause, during the war recently but disastrously. But when he got to San Francisco and Portland again nobody's man but his own there was a different story.

Victoria, B.C., staid and English, made rather a point of taking the cue, according to one account, and even Vancouver did not do it. It is said that in dedicating the "peace portal" there, Washington, on the Canada-United States boundary in commemoration of the century of peace, he made a jarring speech. After pacific sentences by Samuel Hill, the builder of the portal, and a woman, the general started those who understood the French language by making a great, overt speech saying that peace portals were "all right, but where would France be now if she had only built forts instead of peace arches before 1914."

That was a bounder, indeed, and enough to gain most men as drawing cards in the country where they don't raise their boys to be soldiers. Joffre was toted around from Seattle by the globe-trotter, Sam Hill, soi-disant of James J. Hill, railway magnate, and this feature made newspapermen very angry with Hill and lukewarm towards Joffre.

Then Joffre went to Frisco by himself and, although ill, made a tremendous impression. This he confirmed on the swing east, even shattered on the way by stirring making speeches. His very silence was more effective than the great eloquence of his colleague (and rival) Viviani on the earlier tour. This time he has had the floor and his words have been vigorous, pointed and courteous. People come prepared to be lukewarm towards the representative of French military power and policy. They stay cheer like a man whose square massive face, barrel body, instinct with reserve energies of spirit, will never be forgotten.

The man who saved Paris and conquered North America (including Montreal, although he is a Protestant) was born in 1852, first saw war in 1870 and was retired in 1917 as too old. Yet last year he was young enough to undertake a task which covered half of Asia, Indo-China, China and Japan, and did it. Having conveyed the thanks of France to her Oriental colonies and allies, he retires to the little home in his native Pyrenean mountains, in which his eyes turned even the day after the battle of the Marne.

Where Tomatoes Come From.

The growing of tomatoes forms the largest industry in the Canary Islands, and the manner in which the fruit is consigned to foreign markets is a tribute to the efficiency of the shippers. Owing to the long journey involved the tomatoes have to be picked when they are turning from green to yellow, and they ripen on the voyage. Long years of experience have taught the growers exactly when to gather their crops for consumption abroad, and although the fruit from the same delicate flavor possessed by that grown and ripened in England, the tomatoes that are sent arriving in England, estimated at over 1,000,000 pounds weekly, are said to be of excellent quality. They are produced from seeds obtained in the old country, and great care is exercised in packing the crop for markets overseas. Each tomato is wrapped in paper, and the layers of fruit are separated by granulated peat. The grower in the Canary Islands fill a gap in English markets from November until May, when the chief home produce from the Low Valley, Worthing, and other areas — the "prince of salads"—appears on the scene.

Mine Shafts.

In the comparatively process of sinking mine shafts through water-bearing grounds, holes are then drilled in a circle around the proposed location of the shaft. Canal water is then injected into the holes with a force pump. The canal water displaces the loose ground, and on setting forms a water-tight wall, inside of which the shaft can be sunk without difficulty.

MUSIC and DRAMA

DE WOLF HOPPER COMING IN "THE MIKADO"

DeWolf Hopper's appearance is always a welcome event, but his coming this season to Griffin's, Thursday, December 28th, for one night only may be said to be more welcome for he will bring with him his associates of the Gilbert and Sullivan comic opera company and together form the most notable light opera organization that has ever been organized in this country. Mr. Hopper will appear in one of his most famous characters that manifests his sense of drollery and his unusual quality which has placed him indisputably foremost among the comedians of his generation as well as of English-speaking countries. In "The Mikado," which will be the offering here Mr. Hopper will, of course, appear as Ko-Ko, the Lord High Executioner, a humorous role in which he has never had an equal. It is the most superlious to speak of "The Mikado" as this late day. Ever since its first production, it has held a place of public esteem not equalled by that of any other comic opera. It is the classic production of its kind and is not compared with it. Gilbert has never written brighter lines, and Sullivan's music is unforgettable.

Mr. Hoper will have the support of a company of artists thoroughly trained in the Gilbert & Sullivan manner, among and who know how to speak Gilbert's lines as well as sing Sullivan's music. Prominent among the members will be Herbert Waterous, Arthur Cunningham, Alice Mackenzie, J. Humbird Duffey, Helen Merrill, Ethel Mershon, and Winifred Anslin. The company numbers fifty, including a chorus of thirty voices in its way has received quite as much praise as the principals. The New Orleans Times critic wrote: "Gilbert and Sullivan as has equal been seen in a New Orleans Theatre." The company also carries its own scenery and costumes, and a San Fichlander. The production will be complete in every detail of costuming, scenery and appointments, two sixty-foot baggage cars being required to carry the various productions.

ZANA GREY'S "THE MYSTERIOUS RIDER" AT GRIFIN'S MONDAY

A photoplay that more than does justice to the splendid novel from which it is taken is "The Mysterious Rider," Benjamin B. Hampton's photodramatization of the best seller by Zane Grey, which is presented at Griffin's this Monday to Wednesday.

It is a story of compelling sweetness, powerful drama, mystery, suspense and intrigue; a spacing of the finest human emotions, and a great, throbbingly human theme at the base of it all—those qualities sum up "The Mysterious Rider."

Claire Adams, plays the girl, "Columbine," over whom mysterious powers are and whose love struggle the story builds itself. Robert McKim, one of the most polished, subtle and artistic actors of either stage or screen today, is "Wade," the man whose life has been spent in a secret quest.

Carl Gantvoort who has shared honors with Mitzi, Hazel Dawn, and other musical stage stars, proves that the screen should have claimed him long ago by his work opposite Miss Adams as Jim Mason. Maude Wayne, Frederick Starr, Frank Hayes, Walter Whitman and Angie Herring, the other principals, complete the cast of capable players.

A sweet, wholesome love story, a drama of compelling power, humor, and a touch of tragedy before love's sunshine breaks forth at the end—that's "The Mysterious Rider."

Also, "Bright Eyes", in a two reel Mack Sennet comedy called "Love and Doughnuts", Jack Mulhall in the Universal release, which will be shown at the Regent Theatre Monday and Wednesday, matinees daily, is a masterpiece of laughs.

As Director Lloyd Ingraham puts it: "The legitimate success of comedy is only a broad grin compared to the real hysterical knockout it's on the screen." Ingraham, who has directed many of the DeMaven successes for the screen, is no mean comedienne himself and Carter De Haven has a record for laugh-producing that is as wide as the civilized world. Every time the director or star thought of a funny situation while the camera was grinding it was straightway put into the film.

Every reel the two got together at the De Haven home in Hollywood and spent several hours thinking up gags to produce that situation while the camera was grinding it was straightway put into the film.

Every reel the two got together at the De Haven home in Hollywood and spent several hours thinking up gags to produce funny hysteria.

"My Lady Friends" was filmed on two of the biggest stages at the Mayer studio. Many of the exterior scenes were made at San Diego, Catalina, San Francisco and Atlantic City.

A two reel Sunshine comedy, Fox News, and a new chapter of the popular serial "Robinson Crusoe" have been arranged for exhibition on the same program.

SCHOOL DAYS PLEASING GRIFFIN AUDIENCES

Wesley Barry, that much-befreckled youthful star of Sinclom, wins more admiration from Belleville fans and wrests himself still deeper into the hearts of youthful Canada in his latest laughing picture, "School Days" which is being exhibited at Griffin's tonight for the last time. Admirers of the youthful star can find Nigh's screen version is by far the best picture Barry has been in.

A beautiful Travalogue, an amusing comedy titled "False Alarm" and the latest chapter of the "Buffalo Bill" serial completes the program which is well worth seeing.

"THE CAPITOL" BIG STAGE SENSATION SCORES ON SCREEN AT REGENT

"The Capitol", Augustus Thomas' powerful drama of political and social life in Washington, which scored a distinct triumph on Boardway, and later one of the most successful attractions of that time, has been brilliantly done for the screen, with Leah Baird at the star, and is the feature offering at the Regent tonight where it is being exhibited as a

THE FRENCH PROBLEM.

Is Now Spread From Quebec Into Vermont.

Ontario is not alone in receiving its overflow of population from the French-speaking of the Province of Quebec. Attention has been drawn of late to the French-communities in northern Vermont which have resulted from the migration from the Quebec side of the border. It has come as a surprise to some of the New England people, however, to be told by the St. Alban's Messenger that there are public schools in Vermont where the French language is being used in the ordinary instruction of pupils, at least for a part of the day.

There are communities in that section which have become almost completely French in speech, and in some of these it is quite necessary, in order to make any progress in the teaching of the children, to appeal to their mother tongue for at least a part of their instruction. This tendency is likely to increase, for it is said that the "Frenchification" of neighborhoods in Vermont along the Quebec line is continuing progressively. New England authorities, however, do not express any alarm, as it is deemed that the Americanizing influence is stronger than any influence that might be exercised from Quebec.

St. Alban's, it may be remembered in passing, once had its place in history in the incident known as "The St. Alban's Raid." On the 19th of October, 1864, Lieut. Bennett H. Young led from Canada about 25 un-uniformed Confederate soldiers in a raid on St. Alban's. They looted three banks, wounded several citizens—one mortally—and escaped to Canada; where Young and 12 others were arrested and brought to trial. But they were never punished, and even the $76,000 which had been taken from them on their arrest was returned to them. Later, however, the Canadian Government refunded the amount to the banks. In 1865 and again in 1870 the Fenians made St. Alban's a base for attacks on Canada; and United States troops were sent to preserve neutrality.

St. Alban's lies on the shore of Lake Champlain, a few miles from the Canadian border, which here possesses no natural markings excepting iron posts at intervals of a mile. The roads crossing the boundary lead one almost unconsciously from one country into the other, though now they are doubtless well protected by police against the operations of bootleggers.

"Noma Gronch."

A certain little caddie very popular with the members of a well-known Canadian golf club had the misfortune to be run over by a street car, which resulted in the loss of a leg. His hospital expenses were met by some of his former employers and who, after his recovery, further provided him with an artificial limb. The lad who "scored" was responsible for amounting to two hundred dollars from the radial company.

Speaking of the incident to one of the other caddies, a member remarked, "It was an awful thing to happen to a boy."

"Aw, I dunno," replied the lad, dourly.

"Surely you wouldn't like to be in his place. No more golf, no more caddying, no games like you other boys play."

"Well, he got two hundred bucks, didn't he?" protested the youth, who seemed to be labouring under a deluded grouch.

"Certainly he did, but that would not begin to compensate anyone for the loss of a limb."

"Aw, I dunno, anyway he wouldn't have got that if he'd been run over by my father!"

"Your father," exclaimed the surprised man, "was he the boy's lawyer?"

"Naw, my father was the motorman."

A Medicine Rock.

The exploration party sent out last year by the Government of the Canadian Province of Saskatchewan, to penetrate into the wilds of the huge unknown region in the north of that province, visited a famous rock, the location of which has been a secret carefully preserved by the Redskins for generations. There are only a very few Indians now living who know, and the party respected the hereditary rights of the family who have been the natural custodians of the life-giving "Medicine Rock," regarded by the Indians over a wide area as one of the great gifts of "Kitchee Manitou." "Medicine Rock" shows a narrow ribbon or seam of blood-red material pressed in between heavy layers of stone. According to the Indians, the red substance was a vein of blood to nourish the rocks whose walls surrounded it. For generations past this "Rock Blood" has been looked upon as one of the greatest remedies for loss of blood or any run-down condition. An analysis showed that "Medicine Rock" is possibly what its name implies, it is a form of iron which might be of value in anaemic conditions.

A Canadian Painter.

The Salon Societe Nationale des Beaux Arts, which opened at the Grand Palais on April 4, according to a Reuter despatch from Paris, reaches a very good average in quality. Some 1,200 pictures are exhibited, a feature of the exhibition being the large proportion of British and American works of art on view. Mrs. Mary Riter, of Hamilton, Ont., a Canadian artist, who painted a number of studies of the ground where the Canadians fought in the Great War, has a picture of the market of Ypres, the market hall and ruins of the ruins caused by the war. This picture will eventually be exhibited in Canada.

Wealth Vanishing In Smoke.

Every year 12,000,000 feet B.m. of valuable saw timber, consisting of 500,000 acres of timber land, cost the United States $10,000,000.

Uniformity Desirable.

Every poultry raiser should make a study of the market demands. A uniform color of eggs and flesh in poultry is desirable. A mixed flock will not produce uniform eggs or meat, and eggs from such a flock are not desirable for hatching.

EFFECTS OF CROPPING

Sure to Exhaust the Best Soil in Time.

Plant Food Must Be Supplied—Mother Earth Has Her Limits—Seven Rules for Poultry Raisers —Broadcasting Soy Beans.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

Lands that have been farmed for half a century usually show a decrease in crop production. A few farms that have been well managed in the various sections of Ontario are still very productive. Some have been so depleted of the plant food materials that were accumulated during the period of forest development as to be unprofitable under tillage today. Previous to clearing and cropping the process was accumulating fertility. Since cropping has been practiced the process has been reversed and supplanted by one of expenditure. Under a farming practice that exhausts the humus and returns no vegetable matter the soil hardens quickly, dries out and becomes unproductive, simply because there is neither food nor soil life to release such to growing crops.

Mineral Elements Become Exhausted.

Frequently one of the mineral elements—lime, potash or phosphorus—is exhausted by cropping or leaching. For example, potash is a very common condition noticeable in lands that have been cultivated for more than twenty-five years. After all, the earth is only a collection of those elements required in the life processes of the food plants that the farmer grows. In that storehouse various forms of life are at work converting the insoluble to a usable or food condition for the plant. If we crop for years and exhaust the silicogen or the potash or the phosphorus to a point where any or all of these could not be supplied in quantity sufficient to meet the full demands of the growing plant then we have a condition of plant mal-nutrition or starvation.

Plant Food Must Be Supplied.

The plant can only respond to the extent that food is supplied to perfect growth. Many of the thin crops noticeable in many sections of the province are due simply because of soil exhaustion. Some part of the plant's ration is below the minimum requirements for best development. It may be nitrogen or potash or phosphorus. However, if the farmer robbed the soil of some fertility element in his rotation of crops a decline in yields we should return to the soil what we have taken away if we are to expect full yields again. Cropping will exhaust a soil if the proper relation or management does not provide for the return of the essential elements, nitrogen, potash and phosphorous. Effects of cropping are noticeable in the poorly managed farms where clovers and timothy have been cut for years and in the crop rotation, where the crop savers are fed to live stock and where some attention is paid to keeping the mineral matter, nitrogen, phosphorous and lime, abundantly supplied.

Mother Earth Wants Only a Fair Show.

The soils of Mother Earth will, by reasoning and intelligence, be supplied by all of the thousands of individual farmers, just for our centuries. Unfortunately all our farmers are not as progressive as they might be, and we frequently see evidences of overcropping and soil robbery, poor management and lost labor.—

Stewart Stevenson, Deputy Department of Agriculture, Toronto.

Seven Rules for Poultry Raisers.

Here are seven safe rules for getting the most money from the same number flock:

1. Produce infertile eggs by removing the roosters from the flock in the summer time.

2. Provide clean nests and keep them clean.

3. Do not wash eggs.

4. Gather eggs twice daily during the summer to prevent them from being heated by the hen.

5. Keep them in a cool, dry place, away from the flies.

6. Market them at least twice each week.

7. Insist that they be bought on a quality graded basis.

Breaking Up Broody Hens.

Neglect in breaking up broody hens means a serious reduction in the number of eggs produced by Indiana farm flocks.

Confinement of broody hens in a slat bottom coop has proved satisfactory. This coop should be covered on top with slat or wire sides and may be placed outside, preferably under a tree to insure shade. A slat bottom coop prevents fowls from becoming comfortable and these soon lose their broody traits.

Common practice is to place hens in the coop for three days, releasing them in the evening. If they return to the nest they are returned to "Jail" for three more days. This usually breaks up the most stubborn sitters.

Removing the broody hens from the nest the first evening she sits is a very important factor in breaking up broodiness. If hens are allowed to remain undisturbed a few days it requires more time to break up broodiness and this results in a longer period of non-production.

Nasturtiums do not require rich soil, in fact, if put on rich soil they grow rampantly and bear few flowers.

The reproduction of fruit and vegetables at huge relieving transportation difficulties and solves the marketing problem.

Extra good growth of musk melons may be had by putting a bushel or so of well rotted manure in the bottom of each hill. Plenty of water during warm dry weather also helps.

A flock of scabby sheep will infect the roads, lanes, sheds, yards, bed grounds, pastures, ranges, and the ground around the watering places. It is therefore very important that a flock receive proper treatment as soon as the disease appears, before the infection becomes scattered.

TALKED IN FIRELIGHT.

They Entertained a Famous Poet Unaware.

"Your cook-fire made such a cozy combination picture against the dark, you don't mind if I sit and watch you two?"

This remark from a "tall, broad-shouldered, big-boned, open-countenanced-map, who lifted one moccasin-shod foot out of the stirrup and, the other, deliberately, set ungracefully, is quoted by T. Morris Longstreth in his new book, "The Lure-dians." The author and a friend were camping in the Laurentian wilder ness in northern Quebec when the unexpected visitor agreed. "From his opulence he might have been a shah-in-shah, but the firelight disclosed the face of sensibility as well as strength; for his hair of a rich and errant shagginess, he might have been poet or musician; but then his mackinaw! We should have thought him fifty and for a certain ruggedness that goes with youth. Sprawled there along the sand in an unperturbed silence, smoking, he piqued us to the liveliest of investigation."

The trio talked in the firelight, first of the Canadians, new of mosquitoes, then of the stars, and, by and by, reached poetry. "I'm a Canadian born in New Brunswick you may have heard of, Charles G. D. Roberts," said the stranger. "Perhaps there's a poet for you—a man who is at his best on a big theme in nature, and worth quoting at times like this. Or, better, a poet who, if requested further, he quoted the names of several Canadian poets of note, and then one of the listeners said: "You tell me, mate (from the Cockney), is Bliss Carman a Canadian?"

"Yes, but one of the wanderers, the wapiti, and little known."

"I didn't realize he was a Canadian, though everybody knows his name," said the listener.

"His name," corrected said the other, dryly, "but his work hardly; that is what counts. I never can recall a dozen poems by him, and I am familiar with poetry."

"I'd give a hand to meet that man Carman," said one of the listeners.

"He is not much to meet," said the stranger. "Shy and reserved and bachelor, who confines his conversation to the business of the day. I know him, or did when we were younger, and still occasionally get glimpses of him. He is a whimsical, pondering sort of giant. New Brunswick born, but forced to earn his bread in the States. He was starting off for Montreal the other day on a lecture tour and vowing when he got it over that he'd never go again where he couldn't go in moccasins."

They talked for hours, and once the stranger said he was trying to remember something, and wrote for fifteen minutes on scraps of things from every pocket. When he had gone they picked up some letter paper, also scribbled over, and found on the letter-head:

BLISS CARMAN,
New Canada,

An Atom and Energy.

Sir Ernest Rutherford's researches with the structure of the atom are known all over the world, and Canadian interest has been aroused by his recent statement that he does not think we can look in the future for a source of power in the disintegration of the atom by the forces at present at our command. This statement is of the highest importance in view of the expectations that have been aroused by his earlier discoveries in the study of the atom. Sir Ernest considers, however, that there are other directions in which chemists may look in their researches into this problem. "I am quite sure," he says, "that the force which held together the nucleus of the atom are so strong that only by the firing of Alpha particles at it have we been able to effect a liberation of its constituents. We might produce a furnace with a million degrees of heat, but you will not affect the disintegration."

Postmen of the Sky.

A thrilling sight that may become common in the air before the start of postal airplanes picking up mail bags by a speed of a hundred miles an hour.

Experiments in picking up objects from the ground without alighting or stopping aloft have been carried out by Air Force pilots at Farnborough and by others in France and America. One ingenious scheme which is to be adopted by the supersonic air-mail between New York and San Francisco has been found to work well.

In the airplane there is a coil of wire with a weight attached to the end. This can be lowered and raised in a very short time by a machine worked by the engine of the airplane. On the ground two high masts are built. These slope towards each other, forming a "V," with the opening towards the approaching airplane. The pre-arranged flying line, with the weighted wire-trailing on the ground, crosses the sloping and the wire is guided automatically up the "V" until it catches in a fork between two metal rods, where there is a grip with a wire connecting it with the mail-bag. The wire from the airplane catches in the clip and the bag is released.

Here in Canada it has been anticipated that aerial postal line will shortly be established to the Yukon

SHOOT DE VALERA ON SIGHT

Dublin, Dec. 12.—Irish Free State military officials have ordered Eamonn De Valera, chief leader of the republican cause, shot on sight, it was reported this afternoon. The authorities refused to confirm or deny the report. De Valera is said to be hiding in or near Dublin. He and Liam Lynch are the last of the powerful republican leaders at large.

THAT indomitable faith which inspired Champlain and Maisonneuve finds new expression today in Montreal's new hotel—The Mount Royal. Courageous and sustained! They built better than they knew, and Canada's Metropolis stands tribute to their memory.

To serve this growing city The Mount Royal was built. An entire year's time was given to its erection. More than 1100 men — artisan and artist—have been employed on the task. Steel mills and quarries, kilns and forests, factories and foundries throughout the land have contributed of their best for its building. Studios and stores, cabinet shops and looms without number, have been called on to provide its comforts and to enhance its beauty.

The work of building, equipping, furnishing and beautifying Canada's palatial new hotel has been completed. Now it is ready for guests. On Wednesday, December 20th, The Mount Royal opens for the accommodation of the public.

The Mount Royal's site—on Peel Street, just north of St. Catherine Street, the city's main thoroughfare—stands whither broad business movement and convenience of location has few comparisons among hotels of the world, and luxury that is distinctly refined and charming.

HINTS THAT HELP.

For a Delicious Icing.
Try mixing your powdered sugar with mashed bananas instead of milk and see what delicious icing you will have.

For Chocolate Stains.
To remove chocolate and cocoa stains, sprinkle with borax and soak in cold water.

For Dusty Satin Shoes.
When cleaning black satin shoes, use alcohol, and you will find they look like new.

When Blacking Stoves.
Blackening stoves is not a pleasant task for the housewife. Try slipping a paper bag over the hand holding the brush, thus preventing the hand and nails from getting black.

To Keep Oilcloth Spotless.
Anything hot placed on colored oilcloth turns it white. To remove these spots, rub with alcohol and polish with a dry cloth.

With Scorched Material.
To remove scorch from white goods, rub the spot with the cut end of an onion, lay the garment in the sun and every trace of the scorch will be gone in a short time.

To Freshen Lemons.
If lemons become hard and dry, do not throw them away, but place them in a pan of water and boil them for at least ten minutes. They will become as soft and juicy as when first bought.

To Remove Ink Safely.
To remove ink from material quickly and without injury to the fabric, spread the cloth over a bowl and wet sprinkle liberally with bicarbonate of soda.

To Polish Windows.
One tablespoon of kerosene to a quart of lukewarm water will make splendid solution for washing windows and looking glasses. It saves time and labor, as the oil makes them shine quickly and removes all the dirt.

To Keep Syrups from Burning.
To prevent burning when cooking syrups of any kind over a quick flame, drop in three or four marbles (taken, as the boys call them). The heat will keep these constantly on the move and will not only prevent burning but do most of the stirring.

WHEN MAKING CANDY.

Don't stir sugar candies while cooking; to do so is to invite granulation.

Don't judge a measurement of ingredients; have them exact.

Don't beat sugar candies as soon as you remove them from the fire; let them cool until only milk warm and they will be smoother, creamier and finer grained.

Don't try to cook your candies too fast; an even, steady heat will produce the best results.

Don't pour your candy out too soon; it will be too soft if it is not thick and creamy before pouring.

Don't throw your candy away because it is too hard to eat; it is not ruined, but can be crumbled up and melted down again by adding half a cup of milk and boiled to the degree called for in the recipe.

Don't try to more than double the recipe; it is better to make two separate batches.

Don't give up if you fail a few times; but try again, and each time be a little more careful.

Don't flavor your candy until you remove it from the fire; the flavor will cook out.

Home candy making will be more successful if a bright, sunshiny day is chosen; a damp, rainy, heavy atmosphere will tend to make the candy turn to sugar. Follow directions with care.

The Daily Recipe

MUFFINS.

Three eggs.
Pinch of salt.
¾ cup mild potato flour.
1 teaspoon baking powder.
2 tablespoons ice water.
1 tablespoon sugar.

Beat white of eggs stiff and dry, add salt and sugar to beaten yolks and fold these white, then flour and baking powder twice and thoroughly beat into egg mixture.

Bake in moderate oven from fifteen to twenty minutes.

Wonderful for luncheons.

Quotations From "A Pair of Blue Eyes" By Thomas Hardy

"It is only those who half know a thing that write about it. Those who know it thoroughly don't take the trouble."

"And so, though Smith was not at all the man Knight would have chosen as a friend—or even for one of a group of a dozen friends—he somehow was his friend. Circumstance, as usual, did it all. How many of us can say of our most intimate 'alter ego's,' leaving alone friends of the outer circle, that he is the man we should have chosen as embodying the net result after adding up all the points in human nature that we love, and principles we hold, and subtracting all that we hate? The man is really somebody we got to know by mere physical juxtaposition long maintained, and was taken into our confidence, and even heart, as a makeshift."

"Perhaps a man who has got thoroughly into a woman's mind . . . is half way to her heart; the distance between those two stations is proverbially short."

"Contradictory as it seems, there is nothing truer than that people who have always gone right don't know half as much about the nature and ways of going right, as those who have gone wrong."

"There are bachelors by nature and bachelors by circumstance; spinsters by choiceless and also of both kinds, though some think only those of the latter."

"Most men who have brains, know it, and few are so foolish as to disguise this fact from themselves or others, even though an ostentatious display may be called self-conceit."

"Decisive action is seen by appreciative minds to be frequently objectionable; decisiveness also of both kinds, though some think only those of the latter."

BOOK REVIEW

By "Parsons."

"The Love Story of Aliette Brunton" by Gilbert Frankau. Publishers—F. D. Goodchild & Co., Toronto. $2.00.

Gilbert Frankau fills his remarkably successful novel "Peter Jassery" which he has dedicated to meet with both the critics and public alike by his daring romance of modern life. None other than he would DARE write such a story, having as its theme, a widespread problem, DIVORCE—its evils and its consolation.

Is divorce justified? Or should we adhere to that irrevocable vow, said by Society to that, when once broken, when once transgressed, marks one as a social outcast, ostracized from decent human society forevermore? Is divorce immoral?

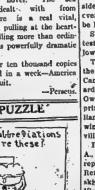

Julia Carondalin, the greatest novelist of her day, looked up to by all, as the dean of literary writers and herself a staunch Roman, is living embodiment of the stern and unrelenting dicsta of a mid-victorian, is the great enemy of divorce. She believes it sinful—a degredation of humanity; something to be abolished, quenched, destroyed before it brings one big scald on the masses of the people. Her son covets anothers man's wife. He loves her, and she, him. They run away and the fight for freedom begins. The mother Julia Carendish, formerly that great living exponent of righteousness, and avowed enemy of Divorce, abandons her life—long principles and aids her son to win the battle for love. Divorce, Scandal—and worse, are only too well pictured before the reader's mind as his or her tendingly hated novel. The sex problem is dealt with from every angle; there is a real vital throbbing problem, pulling at the heartstrings and compelling more than ordinary interest in this powerfully dramatic novel.

In England over ten thousand copies were reported sold in a week—America is sure to falsify suit.

FINE FEATHERS DO NOT ALWAYS MAKE FINE BIRDS

(Canadian Press)

Ottawa, Dec. 9.—Fine feathers don't make fine birds. At least, not the egg-laying kind.

This was contended by C. Engler, at a meeting of the Poultry Science Association recently, when he voiced his views in the negative side of the debate, "Resolved that exhibition strains are of greater benefit to the country than utility strains."

Mr. Engler argued that all it took the powers of a magician to get eggs from birds for exhibition. "I have a friend who can produce some eggshaped cubes to give to his exhibition hens to make them lay. The druggist could tell the coloring of the medicines. The bird on which the experiment was tried, laid all right. It laid one egg and then laid off for good. It died." Mr. Engler further cited his arguments against exhibition birds by referring to the fact that in nothing but pork on his trip, and was unable to feast on eggs because he had only pork to eat. He also mentioned species of the barnyard breed. The debate was won by Mr. Engler's side.

AUTO TOLLS PAY FOR BRIDGE

Baltimore, Dec. 8.—Twelve years ago the Pennsylvania Railroad gave away an old bridge over the Susquehanna River at Havre de Grace to private interests; the building of a new bridge laid on apparently valueless. Automobiles ever since have been crossing the structure in increasing numbers, and the men who got the bridge for nothing in 1910 recently sold it to the State of Maryland for $750,000. And in the 12 years it was in their possession they pocketed $370,000 in dividends, all in toll charges collected from motor cars.

When the new bridge made the old one obsolete it could not be sold, the company offered it first to the State and then to the county, but without success. Finally it was decided to give it away, and the matter was then submitted to the necessity of "throwing it, which would be impossible and expensive. So finally the company changed it from a Pair road bridge to a highway bridge, and residents will lucky be dividing a group of Maryland men who consented to accept the structure, which cost millions, as a gift. And they did.

The recipients put up $700 to organize a company. Last year the net receipts from the bridge were $65,000. The State will continue to collect tolls until 1939, by which date it estimates the proceeds will have paid back the sued against the purchase price of $585,000.

LINKED LIVES

By D. Kinmount Roy

That one old fellow should have two such pretty sisters," Harry Freedmore remarked ruefully to his friend one day, "is too much luck for any man."

"But it goes where the pooch comes in," drawled Frank Woodford, with the air of a man who knows the true inwardness of things afloat. "He is said to be fabulously rich, and these two girls are to share it one day, don't ye know?"

"Know?—not I; never heard it before!" Freedmore said, in genuine amazement; "how has he contrived to get so much?"

"Well, I have heard," explained Woodford, pleased to be able to impart such important information; "that his father left him a long fortune, and instead of spending it, as he should have done, when the woman he wished to share it with refused him, he settled down to business like a regular old moneygrubber, and now he is not only the head of the first beefrm in the city, but a great financial magnate to boot. All the same, he seldom appears in any transaction personally, but his finger is upon the business pulse of the nation, and he prescribes accordingly. When big undertakings are in the wind, by the government or others, it is Frederic Maitland that finds the cash."

"Yes I would never think it of him, would you?"

"No, never!" ejaculated Freedmore, looking thoroughly disgusted at the news of so much wealth, for what chance had a poor man against millions?

"Well, it's true," continued his friend; "the whole city swears by him, every man trusts him; you can learn that and much more now for yourself any day."

"I say again, it's too much for any man, burst out Freedmore, with some heat. "It's too much to be rich, trusted, and successful in every way, and have two such pretty gals craved up in his life as the sisters. Those looks more like a fortune than a human habitation!"

"Which means that you would like to be introduced to those two girls, confess it, Freedmore!"

"Yes, all—only one of them—I am most earnestly in love with!"

"Generous! The deuce you are! never heard of it before!" What must he might have said we cannot tell, for Woodford whispered suddenly, 'Look man, look, madame herself, and both of them! Ja's like calling spirits from the vasty deep.' Both men took up a safe position, and watched the ladies a' long as they were in sight.'

'Now, Freedmore, honour bright—which one?' laying his hand upon his companion's arm.

'Oh, hang it,' Freedmore said, impatiently if have not been settled, you!'

"Well, never mind old man,' said his companion slily, 'I like the dark beauty best, the one with the brilliant eyes and the light step, you know.'

'Go to——'

'Hanover,' you were going to say. Well, I have just one e from there and have no intention of returning at present. We must not quarrel, Woodford. The lady is not aware of my existence and ever may be, but for all that, to tell you the truth, I would give half my life to touch her hand, and look for one blissful moment into her eyes!"

There new!

'Woodford,' he said impulsively, 'we have both been talking heaps of nonsense.

'Rank nonsense,' readily assented his companion. 'Come then, let us both go forget it. I know a place where the chef is superb, and the wine of the best, and no chance of meeting any of our own set.'

That matter being settled, they strolled off, arm in arm, whistling the latest love-ditty and wondering whether the gates of Heaven would open to them in this life, or whether his fashion might they would be compelled to see their paradise afar off with a great gulf between.

A few months later all England was stirred by the news of the battle of Vittoria, in which Wellington obtained a great victory over the French under Joseph Bonaparte - with Marshal Jourdan as his chief of staff. It was not the first time British blood and valour had been spent in the service of Spain, for Edward the Black Prince under the impulse of a mistaken chivalry had intervened in the quarrel of Pedro the Cruel with his half-brother, so that Wellington's men unconsciously trod upon the bones of their fathers when they rushed to the charge in the valley of Vittoria.

been published, containing a dispatch to Earl Bathurst, Secretary of State for War, in which Wellington announced a complete victory over the French army numbering seventy thousand strong. The spoils of battle were enormous, as the French were carrying with them the plunder of fifty provinces, beside the Court, equipage of Joseph Buonaparte, and innumerable camp followers. Ladie alo pleasure were very much in evidence, and it was said the French officers sacrificed their army to their pleasures. Certain it was that out of one hundred and fifyt guns, they carried off but two. The military chest was knocked to pieces in the battle, and its millions of dollars were strewed in glittering profusion on the dusty road, crowded with fugitives too demoralised and too closely pursued by the victorious British to think of picking up the treasure under their feet.

W dlington always ranked Vittoria as one of his greatest victories. His sucen, strong of heart and strong of hand, had gone into action with unbounded confidence in their leader, and the result was a surpassing triumph for British arms.

WOULD HAVE EATEN HIM

A chief in the New Hebrides island, on hearing his conversion had been a cannibal was reading his bible one day when a trader came up to him and exclaimed:

"What is that you are reading?"

"The bible."

"Oh, that's played out," said the trader. "I don't believe it ever did anyone any good."

"Don't you?" replied the chief, let me tell you sir, if it was not for the bible you would be in my cookhouse now!"

MIKE AND THE MAPLE

Mike, the Snowman, clenched his clay pipe in the corner of his mouth and smiled at the snow white-blanketed world. A few streaks of dawn reddened the east and made sparkling shadows on the snow. Against the gray sky the maple raised its bare arms and shivered in the biting morning breeze.

"I don't see what any one wants to keep you around for," leased Mike, the Snowman, with a cold smile. "You certainly aren't a thing of beauty this season. Just a gangling skeleton, that's what you are. Why, even when you draw about your shoulders a soft cloak of snow the wind comes along and tears it all off you, leaving only a shred here and there. You make me feel queer to look at you."

The poor Maple sighed patiently. "But in the spring," it said hopefully, "in the spring—"

"There you go! Always talking about the fine things you expect to have some day. In the spring I'll have a green dress.'" Mike mimicked. "Who wants a green gown, anyway? I'm satisfied with my warm woollen scarf. See how it gleams against my white suit, like a ruby in a setting of diamonds."

He was, indeed, a very fine Snowman. He was round and solid, with a bulletlike head in which two coal black eyes gleamed. The soap bubble pipe in his mouth was shiny white, and the crimson scarf around his fat neck fluttered gaily in the breeze.

"I wish you'd put your arms down," grumbled Mike, "You make me nervous, the way you stick them out so stiffly ing the air. Don't ever get tired holding them that way?"

The gaunt Maple made no answer, and the Snowman finally gave up bantering. He was losing his pep and felt strangely warm and tired and listless. "I don't feel very well," he cried in alarm to the Maple. "Do I look pale?"

"It's this weather," comforted the Maple. "You'll feel better in the spring."

"Never still about spring!" shrieked the Snowman. "I want to feel better now. Oh! Oh!" And in the bright sunshine he began wasting away very quickly, until soon the crimson scarf lay on the ground.

"He doesn't look very fine now," said the Maple. "I wish he could have stayed to see me put on my green gown in the spring."

KITCHENER JUNIORS

TRIM ARGOS

Handicapped by being forced to use a left-hand shot on right wing and with a defence that was slow in clearing, Argonauts met the Junior S.P.A. game with Kitchener last night, 5 to 2. Bob Bowsfield and Fleming, the Scullery' boy' rail meat, are left-hand shots, and they took turns playing the right wing, with the result that when they got possession of the puck they always wheeled to the other side and caused a jam in middies. This tilted Argo's goal-getting effectiveness to practically nothing, with the result that the game was taken home by the double-blue players was wasted. And then the loose playing of the defence was responsible for two of the Kitchener goals.

MINE LEADERS ADVOCATE CANADIAN SOVIET

ANOTHER BAY OF QUINTE MAN MAKES GOOD

Theodore W. Dwight, B. Ac. F., is Appointed Prof. of Forestry at Toronto University

Theodore W. Dwight, B.Ac.F., former Assistant Director of Forestry for the Dominion Government, assumes his new duties as Associate Professor of Forestry in the Faculty of Forestry at the first of the spring term.

The second class graduating from the faculty, that of 1920, claims Mr. Dwight as its own. The new professor has the distinction of having made the best scholastic record in the school of any of its sixty-odd graduates in the fifteen years of the faculties existence.

The honours attained at college were amply justified by the splendid record made by Mr. Dwight in practical work. Within one year after his graduation he was made Assistant Director of the Dominion Forestry Branch, a position which he had held since that time.

Mr. Dwight brings to the faculty a wide knowledge of administration problems in the Eastern Province and of forestry conditions in both Eastern and Western Canada. In addition he has had charge of the extensive forest research being carried out by the Dominion Forestry Branch throughout Canada such as the studies of loss growth in the Petawawa Military Reserve. He is the author of several bulletins and technical articles on forest conditions and forestry methods in Canada.

The faculty of Forestry is indeed fortunate to obtain a man of such outstanding ability as Mr. Dwight.

Mr. Dwight is a native of Prince Edward County as is Mrs. Dwight, a graduate of Victoria in 1912. Mrs. Dwight was Mrs. Parle of Picton.

LETTER FROM MR. ROBB

Further Expresses Appreciation of Honor Bestowed Upon Him

Montreal, Que. Dec. 12th, 1922
His Worship Mayor Charles Hanna,
Belleville, Ont.
H. F. Ketcheson, Esq.,
President of the Chamber of Commerce, Belleville, Ont.
Gentlemen:—

Last night the opportunity was not given me to offer expression of my personally my heartfelt appreciation and gratitude for the splendid reception and honours which were tendered me yesterday by the citizens of Belleville in presenting me with the Freedom of the City and the splendid address upon you tendered me in the evening. As stated in my remarks last night, it is difficult to find words to express my deep good self, your Council, the Chamber of Commerce and the citizens of Belleville how grateful I am to all for the honour conferred upon me and the splendid success which was made of the entire proceedings.

The sight of the children gathered along at different points was indeed most inspiring and the memory of it will remain with me indefinitely.

May I beg you to convey to your associates my grateful thanks and also my best wishes for the continued success and prosperity of our beautiful city of Belleville.

Faithfully yours,
W. D. ROBB.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Sydney, N.S., Dec. 18.—"Some of you men may not be ready now for affiliation with the Red Internationale, but you will be within the year", declared Secretary J. McLachlan of the United Mine Workers, addressing trades unionists at Glace Bay yesterday. Trevor Mac Quire, who recently was convicted by a jury before Mr. Justice Riddell at Toronto on a charge of seditious utterances, was the principal speaker, and advocated the setting up of a Canadian Soviet as the only permanent remedy for the economic and political ills of the country.

Daniel Livingston, President of the Mine Workers, declared that the only salvation for the workers was a revolution similar to that which "liberated" the industrial classes of Russia".

SUNDAY BATTLE ON FRONT ST.

Lovers' Quarrel and Then Some—One Man Intoxicated, and Homeless One Finds "Home"

John Stevens, who came to Canada from far away Servia, was taken into custody on Sunday at the Grand Trunk depot here, on a charge of vagrancy. Stevens has no home so he states, and when he appeared before Magistrate Hanna and Ketcheson this morning in police court, he was remanded to jail for one week. In other words he will be out of the "Castle on the Hill", just in time for his Xmas dinner.

INTOXICATED.

William Knox, arrested for drunkenness on a public street, was assessed $10 and costs this morning. He paid.

STREET FRACAS.

It seems a shame to disturb the peace and quietude of Front street of a Sunday evening, but last evening such there was disturbed, when a young Belleville Lochinvar, who until recently resided near Kingston, but who now resides within the city gates of Belleville by the Bay, got mixed up in an altercation with his Juliet, who is also of Belleville.

When the police officers arrived on the scene of activities, the fight was on in earnest, and it is difficult to imagine just what the outcome might have been had the officers not been attracted by the strange sight.

The man was taken into custody, and the woman in the case was allowed to go. The only possible injuries to either party in the free for all, was a broken romance, after a pleasant courtship of one year, by one month.

When Magistrates Ketchoson and Hanna heard the tale of woe this morning, they allowed the man to also go with a warning.

REASONS FOR PARK SITE

A Few Explanations Relative to the By-law to be Voted on at Coming Municipal Elections

Few citizens appear to fully understand the purpose of the Park Commission by-law, which is to be submitted to the people at the municipal elections on January 1st. next. Apparently there are many citizens that interpret the clause, stating that the Commission can without any special additional authority expend moneys up to the amount of one half mill of the general taxes, to mean that an additional tax would thus be imposed. Such being are somewhat in error.

To begin with there are two principle reasons why the matter should be taken up at this time. First the practice of the past years in Belleville of appointing a Parks Commissioner from the council and allowing public moneys to expended by him, is, we are told by an alderman who has took a hand into the matter, unwarranted. Secondly, in the course or two years be the present Agricultural Park on Bridge St. West will pass out of the hands of the city and Belleville will have no park for Agricultural Fairs, sports or other public activities.

In order to present the Parks Commission bylaw to the people, certain formalities, including the production of a petition for the forming of the Commission signed by at least five hundred voters, had to be complied with. All these matters have been taken care of, to the satisfaction of the city solicitor. Regarding the expenditure of one half mill it has been shown that we have been spending considerable in the past on park work. We have not been getting results because the Park Commissioner, however, good his ideas were, only held office for one year, and there was no continuity of policy. Thus money spent this year might not result in any direct benefit because of new plans brought into being by a new man.

The Park Commission By-law is one which calls for the Mayor to appoint six men to form a Park Commission Board. A Council member is not eligible for this office. These men are appointed for a three year term and the mayor, by virtue of his position, is always a member of the Board. Thus this commission brings forward

OLDEST ORANGEMAN DEAD AT LONDON

London, Ont., Dec. 17.—John Sifton, age 103, the oldest Orangeman in Canada, died here today at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Wright. Deceased had been in remarkably good health until two weeks when he was confined to his bed, and only yesterday was in good condition though very low.

He was born in Ireland and came to Canada 86 years ago. He settled in St. Blyth, Ont., where he was married and where he lived for many years. For the past 15 years he had been a resident of this city. He was a member of the Orange Order for 84 years. He is survived by several grandchildren and great grandchildren. His wife predeceased him 15 years ago.

DEAD FROM BULLET FIRED BY WOMAN

C.P.R. Engineer at Chapleau, Ont., Shot in Own Home—Slayer Surrenders

Chapleau, Ont., Dec. 17.—John McKee, aged 42, widower, C.P.R. engineer and well-known citizen of Chapleau for twenty years, is dead, with a bullet through his brain and Mrs. Sadie Connaughton, aged 40, wife of a C.P.R. engineer and prominent in church and social circles, is at the district jail, Sudbury, charged with the crime.

Mrs. Connaughton surrendered to the police soon after, as the officers were notified to go to the Connaughton home which detail Mrs. Connaughton arranged by sending a neighbor's boy to notify the officers to come.

The tragedy occurred on Saturday night between 9.30 and 10 o'clock in a shed in the rear of the McKee home which is directly opposite the Connaughton home. Mrs. Connaughton is supposed to have invaded the McKee home by the rear door, and it was while McKee was endeavoring to have her leave the house that she put a bullet through his brain. She then walked to a neighbor's and calmly recounted what she had done and asked that the neighbor's boy go down town and notify the police to come for her.

When Provincial Officer Georgeson arrived, Mrs. Connaughton, without emotion, confessed to the homicide tragedy that has existed for several years. So docile is content with the simple explanation that she "shot my home and will not ruin another."

Before the tragedy became generally known throughout town, she was taken to the district jail in Sudbury by the first train, largely because no accommodation is provided in the local jail for female prisoners.

Not once during thetrip and even when she entered the jail did she express any remorse.

Her husband who was out on his run, was notified at Amyot to catch the first train to Chapleau and came in on the same train as did the officers who were taking his wife to Sudbury. When apprised of the tragedy he accompanied her to Sudbury jail, returning to Chapleau tonight.

BOTH PROMINENT.

The tragedy has shocked Chapleau to its foundations. Mrs. Connaughton was one of the foremost ladies of the town and district, there was not a breath of suspicion. The murder was committed with an old revolver, which Mrs. Connaughton found lying over the officers. It is an old Smith and Wesson revolver of a type of fifty years ago. With the exception of the weapon it was handed over it had one empty chamber and four full ones.

SARNIA FERRY NEARLY RAMMED BY FREIGHTER

Great Excitement as Ferry Was Skillfully Manoeuvred out of Danger

Sarnia, Dec. 17.—Passengers on the ferry steamer Lawrence on Saturday afternoon had a real thrill when the little ferry attempted to cross the bow of a big freighter ahead of the fast approaching freighter Fayette Brown, downbound from the Soo laden with grain to her topmost hatch. Poking her nose out of Black River from Port Huron, the ferry found herself in the path of the onrushing freighter.

The ferry turned tail and made frantic manoeuvres, the line edging back to the American side of the river. It was a ticklish situation, and the passengers of the ferry were in a nervous panic.

Women shrieked and there was general confusion as the big hulk of the Fayette Brown kept coming on at 15 knots and ever drawing nearer. The ferry, however, managed to shoot off to the American side in time to avert a crash. There was great excitement on the Sarnia side as many watched the incident and speculated as to whether the ferry would get out of the way in time.

WILL "BUCK" THE ICE TO RELEASE FLEETS

Ottawa, Dec. 17.—The ice at the head of the Great Lakes has been reported to the Marine Department as being extensively serious, and conditions are so bad at Port William as to be likely to tie up a number of ships and prevent them getting away with their cargoes. There are still four 3,000,000 to 4,000,000 bushels of grain there to come out, and quite a number of ships have been unable to take on cargo. The Department of Marine has given instructions that additional tugs be employed at Port William to assist that all ships can load and depart if possible, and the department will keep the harbor open and protect the free movement of ships up to the 20th of December.

CHATHAM YOUTH ELECTROCUTED CHARGING RADIO BATTERIES

Sault Ste Marie, Dec. 18.—The tug Gray has reached the "Reliance" and the first report is that 23 of the 27 missing are known to be saved.

Chatham, Dec. 17.—A tragedy occurred in this city shortly before one o'clock today, when Alfred Lambert, the seventeen-year-old son of Mr. and W. J. Lambert, was electrocuted while charging the batteries in his radio outfit.

The young man was a wireless amateur and was preparing his batteries to enable him to listen in on a concert in Cuba to-night. In making the connection between the charger and the batteries 110 volts of electricity were shot into his body. He found it impossible to let go, and he called three times for assistance. His brother, William, was attracted by his cries, rushed to the apparatus and pulled a switch shutting off the current. The unfortunate young man fell over unconscious and passed away five minutes later.

Deceased man was an apprentice in the drug store of W. W. Turner. His father is a freight handler on the Pere Marquette. He has been interested in the radio for some time and was considered one of the best amateur operators in the city. Dr. C. B. Oliver was called and the pulmotor from the fire station was rushed to the scene but all effort at resuscitation were without avail. THOROLD POLICE OFFICER KILLED

Bootleggers Are Suspected of Having Committed the Crime

Thorold, Ont., Dec. 17.—Police Constable Joseph Truman, of the Thorold police force, was shot down in cold blood at 2.50 Sunday morning as he pursued an unknown from the N. S. and T. Depot to the City Hotel. It is believed that the assailant lurked just around the corner when Truman pursued him and opening fire on the officer, firing his gun at close range and inflicting three wounds, two of which were serious enough to prove fatal. Dan Ledlet persevered the fight writ of the officer, another the left armpit and a third just below the heart. The officer's clothing was slightly burned.

Thomas Morley, night watchman at the N.S. and T. Depot was almost an eye-witness to the murder. He received but an outline of the murderer as he fled when called upon by Truman to explain his presence around the depot at that hour of the morning. Morley and Truman had been chatting, the officer having to patrol Front and Claremont streets, and, as usual, called at the depot. Truman took good notice of Morley and was just out of sight when Morley heard the remark: "What are you doing here at his hour of the morning?" With that shots rang out and the unknown was seen to run. A few seconds later there was another succession of shots this time by the murderer, as Truman had fired his gun in the endeavor to cut off his escape. The officer's revolver showed two shells used when examination was made later. Morley at once came out of the depot and found the wounded constable bleeding in the middle of the highway. Dr. Lefe was almost extinct when Dr. Herold was immediately called. The alarm was sent in by Chief Collins and Niagara Falls and Welland notified as well as the provincial and St. Catharines police. In the meantime the murderer apparently made good his escape and is still at large.

$1,000 REWARD OFFERED.

The Thorold Council met this afternoon and authorized a reward of $1,000 for the arrest of the murderer.

The murder flouted the greatest consternations in the quiet Sabbath of Thorold to-day, and was announced from the various pulpits. County Attorney Cowper proposes to ask the Attorney-General that a reward be offered for the conviction of the murderer. To night it was intimated that the police had two suspects in custody but nothing would be given out.

BUSINESS SECTION OF SPRINGHILL IS THREATENED

Fire Broke Out This Morning and is Not Yet Under Control

Amherst, N.S., Dec. 18.—A telephone message received from Springhill states that the business section of that town is being menaced by a fire which broke out shortly after the o'clock this morning. Thirty minutes after the outbreak the Royal Bank building and Sullivan's store were in mass of flames and the fire was threatening other buildings.

LABOR PARTY LEADS ELECTION

Premier Hughes Wins Constituency by Big Majority But Government is Defeated

Melbourne, Dec. 17.—Present figures of the Federal elections, held yesterday, indicate the defeat of the Nationalists and Premier Hughes, though the latter still claims he will lead the largest group. It is impossible, however, definitely to ascertain the result owing to the incompleteness of the count and the effect of the allotment of preferential votes under the law introduced under the proportional representation system.

Melbourne, Australia.—The labor party is still leading in the reported results of the Australian election held yesterday, but Premier Hughes' claim that the Nationalist Premier Hughes has been defeated. Owing to "preferences" and inaccurate publicity as Rural constituencies official figures from outlying districts are necessarily slow. Present indications however that the Nationalists will have the largest group in the new assembly.

"BOOZE, BOOZE, EVERYWHERE" BUT NOT A DROP OF WATER

Sandwich, Mass., Dec. 17.—The schooner Salvatore with 2,000 cases of Alcohol aboard, lying in the Powder Hog upside down as a sign of distress, and the Boston schooner Star, well stocked with Scotch and Canadian whiskey, together off this port yesterday by the coast guard cruiser commanded by Capt. Chris. Sullivan. The Salvatore, ostensibly bound from Antwerp, for Santiago, Cuba, was put under armed guard as a probable rum-runner; the Star was similarly guarded as a probable supply ship for vessels in the rum-laden trade.

Both vessels were taken to Boston by the coast guard cutter Acushnet. The Star was caught only after a chase in which Capt. Sullivan fired a shot from his revolver after Frank Nolan, the mate who was in charge, failed to heed an order to stop.

With alcohol aplenty on board the Salvatore, Capt. Sullivan and Mate S. Pierre, Miquelon, and Ange Cavelier of Halifax, N. S., her curtailed crew, were found dead of thirst, having no fresh water.

FATE OF TUG CREW IN DOUBT

Feared That Twenty-Seven Lives Have Been Sacrificed by Disaster to Tug

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Dec. 17—Recounting a tale of terrible hardship, seven members of the crew of the tug Reliance, of the Spanish River Pulp and Paper Company, which foundered off the north shore of Cross or north Lizard Island, Lake Superior, 100 miles west of the Sault, on the morning of December 13, reached the Sault last night via the Algoma Central Railway. Two others of the complement of the craft, Jack Harrison, and his wife, are staying at Bonanzaza's Camp, on the shore of Lake Superior, four miles from the railway, where Mrs. Harsen, worn out by the terrible experience, is under the care of a doctor and nurse. The fate of the remaining twenty-seven of the crew and passengers is unknown, but those now in safety fear for them, as there was an indication that they were about to leave the vessel when the vessel departed in a small boat, and no trace of them has since been found by rescue parties.

HEALY IS PRESENTED TO KING GEORGE

Governor-General of Irish Free State at Buckingham Palace

London, Dec. 16.—Timothy Healy's formal presentation to the King in connection with his appointment as Governor-General of the Irish Free State took place at Buckingham Palace today.

Healy, who wore a dark morning suit, drove up in a taxi and was immediately introduced to the King in his study, where they remained in conversation for over half an hour.

There was no formality about the meeting and Healy said afterward, "His Majesty was most cordial and showed a complete acquaintance with conditions in Ireland. In fact his knowledge of the country is really remarkable."

Healy was closely guarded during his visit to London, as it is known that the Irreguiars have sworn vengeance upon him.

FLAMES IN MOVIE HOUSE, AUDIENCE NOT INFORMED

London, Ont., Dec. 17.—Saturday afternoon, while the theatre was well-filled with a matinee audience, fire broke out in the switchbox of the operating room of the Grand Opera House, on Richmond street, near Fullerton.

The firemen were summoned by the management without disturbing the playgoers, and, though the lobby and floor soon smelt strongly of smoke, Chief Aiken and Manager Minhinnick resolved to allow the people to remain. The large majority of them did not know that anything was wrong and the fire was soon extinguished. About $1,100 of damage was done to the operating room and the roof of the theatre.

When all danger had passed one of the vaudeville artists announced what had occurred and the performance proceeded as usual.

LETTER FROM MR. W. C. MIKEL

Ottawa, years ago with 14,000 population got the Head Offices for all Canada. Belleville, with 13,000 population should get Head Offices for Just Canada's Railway.

To the Editor

Dear Sir:—

The difficulties confronting the new President of the Canadian National Railway in selecting the place for the head Offices of the Railway, recall the history of the difficulties that were experienced in selecting the Head Offices of Canada, that is the Capitol. The difficulties are similar, and the result may be similar. Parliament House at Montreal had been burned owing, it is said, to bitter feelings, and Parliament had been meeting some times at Quebec and some times at Toronto, and there was much wrangle and rivalry over the selection of a permanent place for Parliament. At last an unimportant small lumbering town of about 14,000 population, formerly called Bytown, later Ottawa, was selected for the permanent Head Office of the whole of Canada.

Tracey's History of Canada says: "It was a lonely place and very remote from centres of population, but it was not connected with any old wrangles." Belleville is not a lonely place and is not remote from centres of population. It is, however, unconnected with the wrangles going on between Toronto and Montreal for the Head Offices of the Railway. If getting away from "wrangles" was [illegible] other things fail. Let us find a job which they believe cannot be sufficient reason for putting the Head Offices of the whole of Canada at present in control in preference to Toronto or Montreal. Railway Head Offices, and also that would justify putting the Head Offices of at least a part of Canada, namely Canada's Railway, to beautiful, lively, accessible Belleville. It would be worth while for Belleville to go after it.

Belleville has lost about 700 population within the last few years, due to the closing of the Rolling Mills and other causes. At $4.00 this would represent a loss of potential earning power of about $500,000 per year. Merchants and others are feeling that loss. The Railway has been our fairy godmother. It keeps us going.

I was pleased to note your editorial referring to getting the head offices at Belleville, a few days ago.

W. C. MIKEL.

JUNIOR SQUAD MAKE DEBUT

Good Turnout of Junior Puckchasers at Arena For Opening Practice

On Saturday evening at 7 p.m. the intermediate puck chasers again took the ice for a snappy work out, and they had a snappy time of it too but only for thirty minutes, for the Belleville Juniors made their 1922 debut on Saturday evening also, coming at 7.30 p.m.

A dozen juniors turned out and Leo Crook went in the goal for the youngsters. Milt Latchford and Fred Miles were on the defence for one side, Fred Bick at left wing, Bill Strachan at center, and Art Bryant at right wing.

On the other side Bill Cook and Sammy Curry were on the defence, with Al Wardrugh, Jack Cummings, and Jack Arnott on the forward line. Jack is a brother of "Gunner" Arnott, formerly well-known here as a puck chaser, and now with Preston Intermediates. Burk Buskard was also out and worked on the wing position.

Billie Scott was not out and will not be able to come out until some time in January, as he recently suffered a painful injury to one of his ankles.

Jack Marks was on deck watching the every movement of the boys, who chased the rubber disc for thirty minutes also. Many rail birds were on hand.

WORKING HARD FOR CHRISTMAS FOWLS

In the turkey and goose competition at Dunsmore's, the interest is becoming keener every day. Dr. O'Callaghan went to first place in the three innings when he rolled them over for 297 with T. Barrett second with 720. In the single, J. Williams is holding on to first place with 285 followed closely by "Toots" Holway with 277.

OPENING GAMES PRO. HOCKEY

The world's champion St. Patrick's started off the 1922-23 N.H.L. season in the proper manner on Saturday night, when they sent Leo Dandurand's Canadiens back to Montreal on the short end of a 7 to 2 score, but it was not until the last ten minutes of the game that the Irish pulled away into a safe lead, the local gang running in four counters within six and a half minutes in the last half of the final period. Up until that time the Frenchmen had been distinctly in the play, and, while twice they were two goals down, their latest capture, Joliat, quickly brought the champions' lead down to one of a single goal. The visitors appeared to tire a little towards the end, and the Irish staged an onslaught that was not to be denied and fooled Vezina four times.

Hamilton, Dec. 17.—Battling as if defeat meant elimination from the N.H.L. race, Hamilton stepped into Ottawa Senators on Saturday night, and defeated them by a count of 4 to 2, in a game which went three and a half minutes overtime. By so doing they sent home a howling mob of 6,500 who were on their toes from song to song, partaking of the numerous thrills which the game afforded. But Tigers beat the superior team, and they have none other than their latest acquisition, Vernon Forbes the net guardian, to thank for their victory.

Ottawa, who had forty-five minutes of the play, and time after time swept down on the Hamilton citadel threatened to have their shots turned aside by the diminutive goaler. His work was the outstanding feature of the gruelling battle, and but for him Hamilton would have been stinging under a defeat today instead of elated over a victory.

At the Y.M.C.A. at 8 p.m. tonight a meeting of the Indoor Baseball league will be held. Representatives of all teams entered are asked to put in an appearance.

GAME FRIDAY

Mr. Ron. Lewis informed The Intelligencer late this afternoon that Smith's Falls would be here on Friday night for a game with the local Intermediate squad. Further details and remarks will appear in to morrow's issue.

Toronto Leafs will have a new uniform next year, their home uniform being all white, with white stockings, white hat, with blue visor, while the shirts will have blue cuffs and collar, with a blue "T" inside a circle, and the old reliable Maple Leaf on the breast. On the road the colors will be a blueish grey, with white stockings, blue cuffs and collar, and the word "Toronto" across the breast.

OSHAWA HOCKEYISTS NOT SCARCE

At a meeting called for the signing of certificates at Oshawa for the hockey season, about forty candidates were present to attach their John Henry's to the O.H.A. slips. Of the old reliables who put in appearance were Walter Fair, Charlie Hall, Kip Rowden, Dick Smith, Jack Smith, L. Flintoff, M. Bourkley. While a number of new fans were in the line-up, Roy Belding who was appointed secretary-treasurer at the organization meeting has resigned owing to lack of time to give the boys his personal attention and Chas. P. Davis has been appointed to succeed him.

ANTHRACITE VERSUS OTHER FUELS

For twenty or thirty years previous to the Great War, the price of anthracite coal locally was from six to eight dollars a ton delivered in cellars. Thus practically every heating apparatus used in Ontario was designed to burn this fuel, as it was the most desirable of all fuels and at that price was as cheap as anything that could be purchased. Every person having to operate stoves and furnaces learned how to handle this fuel and became possessed of the opinion that nothing else would be satisfactory. Now as long as the price and the supply were such as to make this fuel popular, no particular harm was done in using it. Of late years the price has bordered on the prohibitive and the supply has been anything but adequate. Thus it appears that it is high time for us all to learn that we can keep warm without being dependent on the supply of hard coal that we can get from the Pennsylvania mines. There is actually more heat in soft coal per pound in the better grades of soft coal than there is in anthracite. One cannot expect that this will give better results than anthracite if it is fired in the same manner that we have learned to fire hard coal. Then, too, nearly all our furnaces and stoves are designed to burn hard coal. Thus when small quantities of soft coal are occasionally used in extenuating circumstances, the results are nearly always unsatisfactory. If on the other hand, soft coal is used in furnaces intelligently, excellent results are obtained. There are today in Belleville men who prefer soft coal to hard coal for fixing their furnaces. These men can use this fuel without any more trouble from dust and dirt than is experienced with hard coal. It is just understanding the simple principles involved in the combustion of the fuel.

If we come back to facts we will learn that the only anthracite mines of any size in the world are in Pennsylvania. All European countries, including England, use soft coal for heating; nearly all the Middle, Western and Western States use soft coal; Western Canada uses its own soft coal, and so on down the list. We in Ontario are spoiled and either do not know how or will not use soft coal.

We have in large quantities in Ontario, peat. If this fuel were dug up or mined in commercial quantities we could heat a large percentage of our buildings with it. The writer has seen excellent samples of peat, dug up within five miles of Belleville. This peat has only approximately half the heat units per pound that are found in coal. But if it could be purchased at six dollars a ton, it would be as good as coal at twelve dollars.

The question of fuel is rather one of education than of getting in a supply of anthracite from the States. The gasoline engine gave a great deal of trouble until it was better understood by designers, builders, and operators. So with the fuels that are possible to burn other fuels than hard coal in our furnaces, with but few alterations. These alterations would be paid for, in many cases, by the saving in the cost of fuel for one season.

It's little research and investigation were started now and continued for the next few years, the public would find that their fuel problem would become less and less of a nightmare. There is no better time than the present to investigate the matter and if we could show more or less independence to the mine operators, they would see that there would be a possibility of their losing their market, and they would perhaps take steps to hold it. At present they have the opinion that we cannot get along without their product and they are exploiting us to the limit. This is the only remedy we have and it would be a source of a great deal of satisfaction to many of us to learn that we had more than one string to our bow.

THE MUSKOKA DESERTION

Aside from the interest naturally aroused by an elected member transferring his party allegiance, the point which is likely to cause prolonged discussion in connection with W. J. Hammell's desertion of the Progressive group in the Commons for a seat nearer the Treasury benches, is that of his accountability to his constituents. He explains that he sold his supporters he would support the strongest group, and he has been giving the matter careful consideration all this time. The Farmers' Sun is inclined to be indignant on this point, however, and says, editorially: "His explanations will not cover up the fact that he was nominated as a Farmer candidate, standing on the Farmer platform, and that if Liberals or Conservatives voted for him they did so on that basis. It may be, as he claims, that he promised independent support to Mr. King if the Liberal leader was called on to form a Government, but he will have some trouble in convincing anyone but himself that by his present transfer bag and baggage, he is implementing that promise."

Mr. Hammell's statement on the tariff is a bit complicated. It seems he favored the Progressive platform, with its free lists and reductions, and now he is joining the Liberal Party, not because it has done anything about the tariff, but because the time is right if conditions are favorable. Well, perhaps it is unnecessary to analyze too severely the excuse for Mr. Hammell crossing the floor. His constituents will deliver judgment, in due course, upon his good faith. In the meantime, what has become of that famous feature of the Progressive political system, the recall? Did Mr. Hammell dodge it?

It is worthy of note in this connection, that the Member believes in public ownership. He founded and is secretary-treasurer of one of the largest municipal telephone systems in Ontario. Evidently he will add one more to the Liberal group in opposition by Sir Lomer Gouin and Hon. Walter Mitchell and their supporters, who would sell the Canadian National Railways for a dollar—and waive the dollar, if necessary.

Rumors of further breaks from the Progressive group are current, but unconfirmed as yet. William Elliott, South Waterloo, denies that they are correct, with reference to himself.

While Great Britain's liquor bill is pointed to reprovingly as £450,000,000, nearly half that amount represents the tax up on it. For instance, bottles of Scotch whiskey selling in the home market at 18s. 6d. include an impost of 8s. 5½d. on each bottle.

SUBMARINE CABLE LAYING.

The romantic story of the laying or the first Atlantic cable by the mammoth ship "Great Eastern" has often been told, and it is a reminder that it is to Great Britain that the world owes all the pioneer work in the form of telegraphy which has done so much to bring the extreme parts of the world into close touch with each other. The "Great Eastern" was the only very large boat built with a view to service in laying cables and later cables laying ships were all of a more moderate size. They have laying ships were all of a more moderate size. They have laying ships were all of a more moderate size. They have

Lengthened Garment Likely to Be Shortened as Season Progresses;

Gowns With Capes.

Skirts drop all the way down this fall, just to be different. There would not be enough change if they only appeared to grow a bit more conservative, and added a few inches to the short length which has prevailed. Later, the smart woman will doubtless be willing to shorten her skirts an inch or two.

Among the alluring new things are bodice gowns with darker velvet capes, also jewel studded lace and fabric. The richness of these jewel studded materials cannot be overlooked, and the effect is stunning. They are most often employed with the plain materials, to make sleeves or form trimming bands.

With a dress using this trim, a jaunty little wrapped turban of the same rich fabric is worn.

Boy Adventurers

The First Sailing of Columbus

Even as a boy Christopher Columbus was very fond of the sea. He liked to listen to the wonderful stories of adventure related by sailors who had sailed to strange ports.

At the age of fifteen he sailed from Genoa with a relative known as Colombe, the younger, who was in command of the ship. At that time Genoa had a large and profitable trade and ships were constantly entering and leaving her harbor. The Genoese had been plundering and, destroying the vessels of Naples, a neighboring city. This made the Neapolitans very angry and they were looking for revenge.

Trouble broke out during the first voyage of Columbus. A boat from Naples met his boat and a desperate battle took place, during which there was considerable hand-to-hand fighting. The adventurous spirit of Columbus urged him to take part in the fight, but he was kept more or less in the background.

Ship Takes Fire.

Finally the enemy set fire to his ship. As Columbus was standing on the deck a flaming rope fell from a mast, setting fire to his cloak. He did not lose his presence of mind, however, but tore the garment from him and leaped into the sea. Fortunately an oar was floating close by, and with the assistance of this he struck out for the coast of Africa, only a short distance away, and succeeded in reaching it. So he was a strong swimmer.

Columbus, who was born in Genoa about 1435 or 1436, thought that it would be possible to reach Asia by sailing westward. He had a hard time convincing any one that this was possible, but finally, with the assistance of Queen Isabella of Spain, he was provided with three ships, known as caravels. Then he had trouble in securing a crew, for nobody wanted to undertake such an uncertain voyage. Finally everything was in readiness and on August 3, 1492, he sailed. After an eventful voyage he discovered the present island of San Salvador on October 12, 1492. In all he made four voyages of discovery, cruising among the islands, naming them, and also touching at various points along the coast of South America.

Nobody can say what the history of the world would have been if Columbus had been killed during the fight on the ship or had been drowned before he reached the African shore.

LINKED LIVES

By D. Kinmount Roy

Napoleon had been driven out of Germany and now he was driven out of Spain and Portugal, and all the British nation felt free to let the last act of the long-drawn-out tragedy of the nations of Europe be played, and the star of the great military genius of France had entered upon its decline.

In the summer of the event the residence of Lord Bathhurst was a blaze of light and splendour, and thronged with all the rank, fashion and valour of the British capital. Yet in spite of the general satisfaction there were minor notes, although but faintly heard, of smiles of public rejoicing; for when all is said of the glories of war, it is a grim game, and sorrow takes the way of victory as well as of defeat. Therefore while the sons of brave men were moving about among the gay throng, and carrying themselves with heroic calm, there were not a few women at home quietly trying to adjust themselves with a brave heart to the new conditions of life which the loss of those dear to them made necessary.

The Reverend Frederick Barrington, and Captain Marchmont had visited many drawing-rooms in the course of the evening, entering hastily into the general joy, save that Marchmont could not reconcile himself to the fate that had sent him home on the eve of such splendid things. "Deuced hard luck," he muttered bitterly, "just when things had become so interesting and opportunities of distinction so plentiful."

"I'll rejoin at once," he said decisively to his companion, "I'll be off to-morrow with or without leave, whatever comes of it, and——" His flow of speech was cut short, as they were making their way through the crush at the residence of Lord Bathhurst, for Reginald Hardcastle tore through between them, with reckless rudeness, for in truth he was like a man demented, and cared for nothing but to get out, to get into the open air and breathe in freedom. Marchmont, considering himself insulted and in high dudgeon turned to follow when his friend laid a restraining hand upon his arm.

'Something wrong there,' he said, 'did you see his face? take my word for it, that man is 'fey', or has got his billet for the wrong quarter.'

'Oh well, poor devil, in that case let his illmasters pass, he is not the only man that has missed his mark in the business!'—for Marchmont's moods were sometimes as numerous as the chameleon, and far from a constant, and this his friend and companion knew well.

Reginald Hardcastle, whatever his faults were, had certainly no thought of insulting any one, if anything he was himself the victim of extraordinary circumstances; for his world had suddenly gone to pieces in an hour, without preface or warning of any sort, and the blow which had just fallen left him stunned, helpless, blind and reckless of consequences.

He felt that nothing, past present or future, mattered any more. There was no longer any values to be considered, nor ambitions to inspire him. He stood in his own consciousness, upon the utmost verge, a mere solitary speck without hope or fear, a fragment of the world's refuse upon the cold, passionless, restless waves of the night's deep. The experience was new and terrible.

Two days later he was on board a crowded transport under orders to join the Royal Scots commanded by Colin Campbell, afterwards known as Lord Clyde.

It is strange how much of misery can be compressed into a short hour or two when fate or the unseen Power which shapes our destiny, call it what you please, tears down the veil from a guy and reckless life and closes the door of hope in a man's or woman's face.

But a few hours before this young commoner had entered the mansion on Lord Bathurst in the enjoyment of prospects as fair that more than one section of a noble house might well envy to a touch of envy—for long pedigrees do not always go with long purses, nor the certainty of a career fall to the lot of all men. Like others, he had been caught in the full tide of national pride and with a young man's ardour, had surrendered himself to the intoxication of the hour—only to be caught in the eddies of a past crime for which he had no possible responsibility, and driven into the night in the grip of a great despair.

If what happened had been carefully planned it would have deserved to take rank as a masterpiece of strategy and dramatic effect; but as unpremeditated and unrehearsed, it had a weird suggestiveness of that unseen Power which takes the wise in their own craftiness and brings to naught their best-laid schemes.

For strange as it may seem to a materialistic and frivolous age, men in the strenuous times of which we speak believed in an over-ruling Hand; and while in no way under values the spirit and daring of Britain's 'happy breed of men,' forgot not that the race is now always to the swift nor the battle to the strong.

When Reginald Hardcastle and his friend Poltimore entered the crowded drawing-rooms, Maitland, Lord Bathurst and one or two men of consequence were engaged in conversation in a recess a little apart from the moving throng; near them, a couple of gentlemen, of whom Herbert Masterman was one, appeared to be guarding them from possible interruption or the neighborhood of foreign spies. It seemed a needless precaution, as all present were far too eager in the exchange of greetings and the hearing of the latest news from those they met to pay much for mere statement, or the next move in the great war-game; and besides, foreigners unknown to the government were not supposed to be present. All the same, the spies were on duty as usual on such occasions, and in the persons of those ...

PEGGY IS "MADE DIFFERENTLY."

Margaret and Julia walked home slowly from their Mission Band. Margaret's eyes were still shining with unshed tears. "Don't you just wish you had lots and lots of money to...
Christmas-time?" she asked.

"It isn't just at Christmas-time I wish that," Julia laughed.

Margaret smiled mistily. "But at Christmas you could do so much good if you only had a lot of money. Just think of all those poor little mountaineer boys and girls without a single toy or any pretty clothes or anything. I'm going to send them Beatrice and all her clothes."

"Oh, Peggy; not Beatrice! Why what would you ever do without her? And after you've made her all those beautiful clothes, too. Why don't you send that one with a broken arm that won't go to sleep any more?"

"Why I'd be ashamed to send that one. Besides, I'll need her when I harvest Beatrice any longer." Peggy's lip trembled. "I don't know what I'll do without her, but just think of all I have to play with, and some of those little girls don't have a thing."

"Well, you're silly to send your very best doll. I may send that one I have with a crack across her face. Just to think of her sinks she's cracked, but those little mountaineer kids won't know the difference. You'll just die without Beatrice."

"Why, no, I won't," Peggy broke in. "I'll be happy to think how terribly happy she is making some poor little girl that never had a doll before."

"Well, you are the limit. I don't understand you at all," Julia said, but her conscience must have hurt her little, for she added, "I guess I'll send that old gingham dress that I just despise, you know the one Uncle Peter sent me from Arizona. I just hate it, and Mother, makes me wear it. My, I'd be glad to get rid of it!"

"Why how funny," exclaimed Peggy, "to give away things you don't want and are glad to get rid of. That's really giving at all. I like to give something that I want to keep."

"Oh, Peggy, you are the queerest thing! Imagine liking to give something that you want to keep."

"Why don't you try it once?" suggested Peggy. "Give your pretty dress and wear that ugly one your Uncle sent you and just see how good you feel thinking about how happy you are made some one else. I'm going to give my best dress, if mother will let me."

"Happy in that horrid dress thinking about some one else in my best?" gasped Julia. "Why you're crazy. I hope your mother don't let you give your best dress. I can't understand you at all. Mercy, I'm glad I'm not made like you."

Peggy smiled to herself as she turned in her gate.

"I'm glad I'm made just as I am,

MUSIC and DRAMA

DE HAVENS BRING STAGE SUCCESS TO SCREEN

"My Lady Friends," a First National attraction starring Mr. and Mrs. Carter De Haven, will be the attraction at the Regent Theatre for an engagement of 3 days, starting tonight with a Matinee daily.

The picture has been adapted from the farce of the same name which ran for many months on Broadway and was characterized as one of the funniest plays ever written. In its transmigration into a motion picture scores of additional laughs have been injected into it, with the result that it is one of the most humorous pictures ever produced.

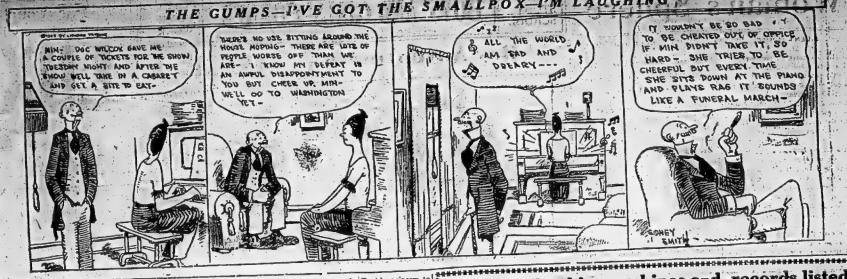

The story details the difficulties which beset a man who out of the kindness of his heart has befriended three girls—the "lady friends." All of which are of the purest, and when all of them decide simultaneously to visit his summer home, "Chickadee Cottage," in Atlantic City there was the device to pay, for Mr. Smith had neglected to inform his wife of the existence of his friends.

Mr. Smith enlisted the aid of a lawyer, but that made matters the worse, for the wife of the lawyer had a large degree of suspicion, and got Mrs. Smith worked up. Therefore they also went to Atlantic City with a couple of detectives, and found Mr. Smith in the cottage with the three "lady friends" and a little girl relative in addition.

It looked like the divorce court for Smith, until he conceived a happy idea. The manner in which he wriggled out of the compromising situation is one of the funniest things ever shown in a film.

Mr. and Mrs. De Haven have surrounded themselves with a cast that is delightfully efficient, each member being an expert farceur.

"The Book Agent," a two-reel Sunshine Comedy, Fox News, and a new chapter of the supreme adventure play "Robinson Crusoe," are being exhibited on the same program.

FAMOUS ARTIST PAINTS FOR 'MYSTERIOUS RIDER'

Benjamin B. Hampton's powerful photodrama, "The Mysterious Rider," adapted from the novel by Zane Grey, is an example of the highest use of all of the fine arts on the shadow-stage, as well as being a great, sweeping, thrilling story of love, adventure and mystery in 1921, Arizona. Once it was considered in a picture abounding in thrills and suspense that little attention need be paid to the finer details. Those days are past in the movies, and now a hundred subtle appeals will undoubtedly add to your enjoyment of "The Mysterious Rider," which plays at Griffin's tonight to Wednesday.

The services of Ferdinand Pinney Earle, an internationally famous artist, were obtained, for the production of the art backgrounds of the written titles. Mr. Earle is a student of the Whistler, and is noted for the versatility of his brush in the fields of landscape, marine, group and portrait art. Seeing "The Mysterious Rider" is like touring the famous galleries that are rich with the work of old masters. Combined with the wonderful musical score, Mr. Earle's painting, said in making "The Mysterious Rider" a splendid art work as well as a thrilling, human story of romance and adventure.

"Love and Doughnuts" a two-reel Mack Sennett Comedy featuring Ben Turpin, Jack Mulhall in a two-reel London Sea story, the first of a new series, each one complete, and a Travelogue have been arranged for presentation on the same program.

DANISH LABORERS SEEK OPPORTUNITIES ABROAD

Copenhagen, Dec. 18.—Owing to the industrial depression and unemployment in Denmark, an organized emigration plan has been worked out by the government with Nicaragua and Colombia under which these countries will accept Danish immigrants and give them assistance in settling.

Another similar agreement is pending with France, under which Denmark will participate in the colonization of Madagascar. According to the plan announced in the Danish papers, France has made an offer to start public works to be carried out by Danish engineers, to contain forest work with Danish labor, and to place land at the disposal of Danish farmers. The Danish settlers are to be permitted to organize their own schools and communities so as to retain their nationality.

A committee of French and Danish experts will go to Madagascar to investigate the plan, after which the Danish Riksdag will consider it.

HER WORTH

An old Scotch farmer, dictating his will to a lawyer said:

"I give and bequeath to my wife the sum of £100 a year. Is that writ doon?"

"Yes," said the lawyer; "but she may marry again. Won't you make any change in the case? Most people do."

"Ah, weel, write again, and say: 'If my wife marry again I give and bequeath to her the sum of £200 a year.' That'll dae, eh?"

"Why, that's just double the sum she would have had if she had remained unmarried," said the lawyer. "It is generally the other way."

"Aye," said the farmer, "but him that takes her will weel deserve it."

Reason For Park Sites

(were year program (which reflects the desires of the voters) and carries it out. The expenditure cannot be increased over and above the maximum of one half mill without the concurrence of the citizens. Now as this amount has been spent in the past not increased funds on the present by will be imposed, unless the people so desire. The result is that under the commission the expenditures will be made with a definite program in view and with a commission composed of responsible citizens better returns for our money will undoubtedly be had.

The second reason for bringing up the question at this time is that our Agricultural Park will pass out of our hands in the course of the next two years. Belleville will then be without a large park and we cannot hold an Agricultural Fair, or any large sporting fixtures, such as Lacrosse or baseball. The interests of the city at large will suffer greatly if we are caught stamping and do not provide a new park site. The young people of the town will migrate to centres where sport can be indulged in. There will lose interest in our city if we have no autumn fair and so on we can enumerate many things that are caused directly by the absence of a park.

The Coleman Flat scheme, as proposed by Alderman H. W. Greenleaf is only a suggestion and is not necessarily a accomplished fact if the by law is passed.

Where the paving operations on Pinnacle St. and Richmond Ave. (formerly Commercial St.) are started there will be about six inches of material removed from these streets and if a Park site had been decided upon at the time this material is removed it could be transported to that place at nominal expense and used for levelling up purposes.

There has been apparently no better method advanced for the bringing into existence of an athletic field and Agricultural Park, and unless there is some better plan we should accept this one. Belleville cannot afford to be alone among the cities and towns of Ontario, in not having an athletic field. Our sport activities have been a credit to the town in the past and have been the means of keeping in our city many desirable citizens who would otherwise be attracted elsewhere. We cannot afford to lose our young blood. They are the makers of the future of our city. We have educated them and do not what to do so for the benefit of other cities. We have spent huge sums in schools and will have to spend more in the near future, and we do not want to throw this money away. If we do not keep these young people here all the returns we will receive from them will be kindly thoughts.

This is question upon which the citizens of Belleville should think deeply and then vote intelligently.

BAND AT REFUGE.

Yesterday afternoon at the Home of Refuge the Salvation Army Band provided music and singing to the inmates of the institution, which was highly appreciated. Besides appropriate seasonal hymns, several old-fashioned hymns were sung, which appealed to the old people. No sermon was preached but several members of the Army gave heart to heart talks to the aged.

Worthy of special mention were the solos taken by Mrs. W. H. Gill of Trenton, who sang "O Divine Redeemer," and "Promise of Life" Soprano Miss Alan Harper sang "The Lord is My Life." Mrs. Scaries of Frankford, rendered several violin numbers in a fine manner. Mr. Wheatley, organist of the church, played several organ selections.

S. A. CHRISTMAS TREE.

Last Thursday night the first Christmas Tree of the season took place at the Salvation 'Army Barracks on Pinnacle street, which was a great success. There was a good attendance and everyone enjoyed themselves. One pleasing feature of the event was the appearance of Santa Claus in a barrel which collapsed as it reached the platform. The tree was well laden with gifts for the scholars of the Sunday school. Mr. John McIntosh again evinced his usual generosity in the Army this year, as in previous years, by supplying each child of the school with a gift.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Intelligencer has received a letter from a Belleville citizen, which is largely an appreciation of the "The Belleville Kiddies" success on the stage. We reproduce extracts from this letter.

No doubt many of the theatre loving people of Belleville will recall, with much pleasure, the appearance here some time ago of the "Winnipeg Kiddies", an organization of juvenile actors and actresses. Their entertainment presented here was merely and one worthy of a company of "grown up", as well as a credit to the city from which they received their title, Belleville, like Winnipeg, possesses such an organization also, and one which bids fair to rival this troupe from the Western metropolis.

"The Belleville Kiddies "as our own company is known, are all residents of this city and have been organized through the untiring efforts of four of Belleville's citizens—Messrs. J. B. Scott, F. Marsh, M. Reid and W. Reid.

Their first public debut was made recently at a concert given in the City Hall under the auspices of the Orange Lodge and was a great success. Again at the True Blue entertainment last Friday evening at the City Hall, this company of entertainers once again demonstrated their ability as talented actors and gave a performance which has never been equalled here by any similar organization.

Children in their teens performing only as their more experienced elders would perform, bearing evidence of the fine training which they have been given.

"The Belleville Kiddies" should prove a valued addition to the entertaining talent of which this city boasts.

A number of requests have already been received from outside points requesting the appearance of this troupe of "Kiddies" at concerts, etc.

Closing of the Gates of Derry is Commemorated in a Fitting Manner

In commemoration of the anniversary of the closing of the Gates of Derry, the members of Maiden City Lodge, No. 9, of this city last evening held a smoker in the lodge room on Front street. Many of the members were present, also visiting brethren from the Orange and kindred societies. In the early part of the evening card-playing was indulged in, after which refreshments were served. An informal program was carried out and this part of the evening's entertainment was presided over by Bro. R. H. Ketcheson, past Grand Master of the P.B.A. A number of those present gave appropriate addresses referring especially to the event they were commemorating. The pleasing evening was brought to a close by the singing of the National Anthem.

OFFICIALS MAKE CHRISTMAS APPEAL

Administration of Children's Shelter Requires $3000 for Continuance of Good Work

Christmas Appeal is being made by the officials in charge of the Children's Aid Society here, through the letter which the Intelligencer prints below. This letter explains the situation fully enough and by using the Intelligencer endorses it absolutely.

The letter which is of a general nature is as follows:

Dear Sir, or Madam,—

At the regular monthly meeting of the Board of Management of the Children's Aid Society, held on Monday, the treasurer reported that he had received the cheque for all arrears of maintenance due the County Council which enabled him to pay outstanding accounts, but to carry on this great public work for children it was felt absolutely necessary that we must again make our Christmas appeal as there is not sufficient finance to take care of this branch of child welfare work. Three thousand dollars ($3,000) will be required for the ensuing year and we solicit your kind subscription in aid of the work.

Please make and send all cheque and money orders payable to the Treasurer H. F. Ketcheson, 25 Bridge St., Belleville.

I remain yours truly,

A. E. Bailey,
Chairman Campaign Committee.
President—Rev. A. S. Kerr.
Treasurer H. F. Ketcheson, Esq.

FOURTH CHILD DIES OF FEVER

Kingston, Dec. 18.—Another chapter in the tragedy of the Sly family of Seeley's Bay was closed early Friday morning, when Edmond Sly, aged ten years, passed away at the General Hospital. This is the fourth of the family to die of scarlet fever within the last ten days, variety and no less unhappy father, and the mother, and little daughter of seven years. The latter two are still in the hospital and the Whig was informed that, although still very weak, their condition was improving, and hope is very high for their recovery.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Sly have been dealt a staggering blow by the Grim Reaper within a short space of time, and the sympathy of the entire district goes out to them in their sad bereavement. Of the five children now dead, there is now only one alive, and it is sincerely hoped that she will be spared to comfort the sorrowing parents.

The remains of the little boy, Edmond, will be taken to Seeley's Bay by Albert Sly, undertaker, Lyndhurst, where services will be held. The other members of the family, who passed away within the past few days, will be interred there.

TUG'S DEATH TOLL REDUCED

Twenty-three Survivors of Reliance Rescued From Lake Superior Isle

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Dec. 18.—After being marooned for five days on the barren Lizard Isle in Lake Superior, with the temperature everdropping well below the zero mark and without food, 23 of the 27 missing persons from the ill-fated Tug Reliance have been rescued by the tug Gray.

The Gray fought is sheltered from a blinding blizzard at Gargantua. The rescued party is aboard, and will be taken as soon as weather permit to a point opposite Mile 102, on the Algoma Central, known as Desbiens's Camp, where the first party from the Reliance found succor, and from there one sent four miles to the railway, and come down to the Sault. They will not be made to suffer a continued trip on Lake Superior, as the tug has yet to pick up some lighthouse keepers. The tug Favorite, which reached the scene of the wreck today found only the survival of the Gray, is at Whitefish, further down the Lake.

Confirmation has been received of the death of four men on the Reliance, Fred Regan, of the Forestry Department of the Spanish River Pulp and Paper Company; Captain John McPherson, manager of the South Fishing Company, of the Gray; Ingan Son; Gus John, of Renfrew, a lumberman, one of the crew, and an unknown Finlander who was left on the Reliance, and was coming down from one of the camps to enter a hospital here. He died of exposure after being taken by the others to Rowe Island. Just how the others met their death has not been determined, but their bodies have not been recovered. It is believed they were lost in an endeavor to launch another boat. Many details regarding the Sault are relayed through the Whitefish wireless, which is plugged with messages, so that the chain of information are only fragmentary.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)
Sault Ste. Marie, Dec. 19.—How wireless comes the story of the remarkable heroism on the part of Billy Gow, fireman of the tug "Reliance" who, four days after the tug had grounded, volunteered to swim ashore with a rope, and enable the party to make their way to the mainland. How plunged into the icy water with the rope tied around his body, and after a terrific struggle in which were a hopeless effort, he reached the shore. Rafts were constructed, and passengers on the tug were able to reach land. Survivors were picked up yesterday by Tug Gray.

FUEL PROBLEM SOLVED BY MR. S. RIGGS.

Mr. W. H. Riggs, who has just completed one of the most up-to-date garages in the Province, is today installing an oil burner in his furnace in connection with the garage and states that he can heat the building as well as with coal at about one-third cost, if not cheaper, with oil.

Mr. Riggs said that a great many people in Toronto are installing oil burners and say they have had good success with them.

This action of Mr. Riggs will be followed with much interest by the people of Belleville and no doubt many will follow suit if it proves a success, in view of the uncertainty of coal.

IRISH TRAIN WRECKERS PAY DEATH PENALTY

(Canadian Press Despatch)
Dublin, Dec. 18.—Four railway men, and three soldiers were executed here this morning for interfering with trains in County Kildare.

Dublin, Dec. 18.—The seven men, members of the Republican army, who have been executed, were captured on November 13th by Free State troops. With them a quantity of stolen goods, rifles, and ammunition war found. They were tried by a military committee, and sentenced to death on a charge of train wrecking. The sentence was carried out at 8.30 o'clock this morning.

Dublin, Dec. 19.—The official army report of the executions gives the names of the men as Stephen White, Patrick Barrett, Joseph Johnston and Patrick Mangan, of Kildare, James O'Connor, of Dundra, Patrick Nolan of Monasterevin, and Patrick Shortt. They were arrested with others at Rathbridge, which is in County Kildare.

U.S. CONSUMERS OF NEWSPRINT ARE LOOKING INTO PULP SUPPLY

Washington, Dec. 18. (By Canadian Press).—The outcry on pulpwood exports from Canada on crown lands is likely to be extended to all forest lands in the Dominion, says Chief Forester Wilson B. Greeley, in the annual report of the Forest Service, United States Department of Agriculture, just issued.

Should the "drain," he adds, on wood from Canada will be completely shut off as a source of supply for the pulp industry of the United States. The paper mills of this country now draw one-third of their requirements from Canada. Northeastern mills have already been seriously handicapped by the present embargo.

This illuminating report continues the hazard of becoming dependent upon foreign supplies. The rapid increase in timber shipments through the Panama Canal foreshadows the time, in the near future, when the principal source of softwood lumber for the United States will have shifted to the west coast and the average freight cost paid by the home builder or manufacturer will have advanced to a new and higher level.

When the coniferous virgin timber of the Pacific Northwest is cut, the turn of the principal source of supply shifts to Siberia or South America, the transportation problem will be solved but the present lumber market will become different only in degree. Furthermore, as the resources of Siberia are more restricted and more distant from the principal centres of consumption, opportunities for competition will necessarily, and temporary shortage due to bad seasons, labor troubles or congestion of transportation facilities are more probable and more severe. Thus the conditions of the trade become more favorable to monopolistic efforts, to violent market fluctuations, and to high prices. And all this dealing with a basic raw material, so widely used and as necessary to national existence as coal.

XMAS MESSAGE FROM LADY ASTOR

(Canadian Press Despatch)
London, Dec. 19.—Lady Astor M. P. whose beautiful home was given over to Canadian wounded during the war has given Canadian Press Christmas message to her friends in Canada. "To Canadian mothers whose sons graves are guarded by the navy. What a Christmas they will have their holly and that will always remember that they died to make peace on earth possible."

SUSPECTS HELD IN MURDER CASE

Two Finn Trappers Arrested, Charged With Killing Compatriots

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Dec. 18.—Two Finnish trappers, Kalli Maki and Urpo Ojenan, of Mile Sixty-Eight on the Algoma Central Railway, have been arrested by P.C. Tom Fraser, on the charge of murdering two of their countrymen, Victor Joki and Hannes Niemi, who were found last August in a lake, thirty-five miles back from the railway near the Montreal River weighted down with boulders. The two murdered suspects are being held in custody at the district jail awaiting a hearing some day the latter part of this week.

At the inquest into the death of the two trappers, four Finn witnesses, Edward Rasula, Anskeri Konsalo, Oscar Wiltu and Walter Grunland, all trappers, testified that Maki and Ojenan had held up their lines in 1920 in the district where the murder of the two Finlanders occurred and that in the Fall of 1921 Joki and Niemi, the murdered men, had trapped on the same line. When Maki and Ojenan heard that the two trappers were on their trapping lines they left to investigate, the witnesses stated, and after their visit the two trappers were not seen until the body of Joki was found by Walter Grunland on August 28, 1922. The body of Niemi was found later on August 27 by P. C. Fraser, Joki and Niemi disappeared in October, 1920.

Maki and Ojenan had a cabin thirty miles back of Regent near the Montreal River, where they trapped in the Winter of 1920,

In the Fall of 1921 they again left for their trapping lines and heard that Joki and Niemi had gone there to trap. All four men were seen by Algem Kousalo and Edward Rasula, who had a cabin four or five miles distant from the cabin of Ojenan and Maki. That was the last seen of Joki and Niemi. Maki and Ojenan said they didn't know anything about it, all they did, they said, was to go to the camp and stay there for a couple of weeks. P. C. Fraser has worked on the case for some time.

WORLD'S FAIR AT DETROIT

Detroit, Dec. 18.—Detroit will have a World's Fair in 1926, if a plan which has been prepared by the Detroit Board of Commerce materializes. A world's peace jubilee and water way exposition in 1926 is being planned in the event Philadelphia is unable to complete the commercial plan for an exposition commemorating the 150th anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence. If Philadelphia holds the exposition, the Detroit fair would be held a year earlier.

Harold H. Emmons, President of the Board, announced the proposal would be studied carefully by the Board before it would be put to the next few months. The last World's Fair was held at St. Louis in 1904.

BOOM IN SPRING BUILDING IS PREDICTED

New York, Dec. 16.—Confidence in the outlook for a resumption of building boom in the spring of 1923, based on an exhaustive trade survey conducted through 55 branch offices in the United States and Canada, has led executives of John-Manville, Inc., producers of building materials, to order substantial increases in the output of the company's existing factories, and to rush to early completion two new plants, one at Asbestos, P. Q., Canada, and the other at Waukegan, Ill.

The products of these at the company's various factories are to be increased shortly by 15 per cent, and in order to create reserves for next year, the production of insulating and roofing material is to be increased by 25 per cent.

CHARGE CAPTURE OF DE VALERA NOT CORROBORATED

(Canadian Press Despatch)
London, Dec. 18.—A report circulated in Paris last night, that De Valera had been captured by the Irish Free State authorities, lacked corroboration here today. It is believed that the report may have grown out of a despatch which stated that De Valera had escaped arrest while attending mass in a Catholic University church.

PLEASANT EVENT MONDAY EVENING

Miss Eva LaVoie, Choir Directress, Honored by Choir Members

A pleasing event took place Monday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. J. Batchelor, Octavia street, when the choir of Christ church assembled to honor their choir directress, Miss Eva LaVoie. After music and singing was indulged in, the party repaired to the dining-room, which was most tastefully decorated in the cheery Christmas red. Mr. Dillabaugh, on behalf of the choir, in a graceful little speech, assured Miss La Voie of the esteem and loyalty of the choir and asked her to accept as a small token of their esteem, several pieces of Coalport china, which up to this time had been hidden under the centrepiece. A handsome rod and lined bell, Miss La Voie was taken entirely by surprise but, recovering herself, thanked the choir not only for their beautiful gift, but also for their loyalty and support which made her work amongst them a pleasure. Later by Mr. Batchelor, the choir demonstrated their training in the singing of "For She's a Jolly Good Fellow", after which dainty refreshments were served.

TWO YEARS ON THEFT CHARGE

Trenton Youths Who Stole Motor Truck and Cars, are Sentenced

George Sheehy, of Trenton, aged 19 years, was sentenced to two years less one day in the Reformatory of Ontario, on Saturday last at Trenton, by Police Magistrate O'Rourke of that town. Sheehy was charged with the theft of three motor cars. His companion, the crime, a 18-year-old boy, whose name consequently cannot be published, was given suspended sentence, but he must report monthly to the police authorities.

It will be remembered that Sheehy and his companion stole a motor truck from a Trenton garage recently. Before it is Cobbyville, where it broke down, then stole a Chevrolet touring owned by Mr. Matthew Jones, near Colville, breaking in to his garage by night. This car, they drove about for several days, abandoning it at Picton, where it became useless and was frozen up. From the front of the Globe Hotel at Picton, they stole a Dort touring car which had been left standing there with the engine running. The Crowhurst brothers and the two boys were all captured at Trenton, after this car had also been abandoned.

Saturday's session was the closing scene of this little "drama from life."

A GOOD CAUSE THIS CHRISTMAS-TIDE.

The kiddies of the Shelter are anxiously awaiting the arrival of Santa Claus. He comes to them each year to assist in this Christmas event and the opportunity presents itself on Saturday next when Santa Claus will be received at the Hotel Quinte from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

It is hoped that there will be a generous response from Bellevillians, as the people will include the Shelter kiddies in their Christmas list only the kiddies will be assured of a real yuletide, but those interested in the movement know that their efforts throughout the year have been at least appreciated. This is one of our most important institutions and well its functioning is provided for largely by charitable contributions.

Remember the Shelter kiddies next. You will be doubly rewarded. The happiness and beaming faces of the children there when Santa comes will be enough, quite enough to expect as reward for kindness.

REMARKABLE DISCOVERY OF OLD PAINTINGS BY G.W.V.A. IN NOVA SCOTIA

Ottawa, Dec. 18.—One of the most remarkable occurrences in the history of the soldiers' movement is related in a letter to G.W.V.A. Dominion Headquarters from the branch at Bear River, N.S.

After purchasing an old residence with a view to turning it into a clubhouse, several large oil paintings, reputed to have been done by a famous English artist, were discovered buried under an accumulation of wall paper. The paintings have since been placed by two American experts, who have placed on a value upon them of at least $10,000.

The circumstances leading to the find are somewhat interesting. Bear River branch of the G.W.V.A. is one of the oldest in the province of Nova Scotia. It had some 70 members. About 18 months ago, after having raised funds by means of entertainments, etc., the house in which the paintings were subsequently discovered, was purchased for a club. The citizens of the town and district decided to think kindly of the idea, declaring that the veterans were taking on too great a proposition. The accidental discovery of the paintings followed and steps were at once taken to have them fully exposed. They were then thoroughly cleaned and retouched by one of the members.

The paintings are quite ancient and show scenes of Halifax and Halifax harbor in the early days. They are stated to have been done by a famous English artist who visited in Halifax for a considerable period and went to the scenes in several trips. A number of offers have already been made for them from the United States by the Bear River club, but the veterans have thus far withheld the sale, hoping that the picture may be retained in Canada.

EARLY MAILING IS ADVANTAGEOUS

Ottawa, Ont., Dec. 18.—In an interesting address on the postal business of the service for the people, and the largest public institution in Canada, A. G. Acres, Postmaster of Ottawa, told the members of the Kiwanis Club at a luncheon here recently, that greater co-operation with the post-office on the part of the public, and especially the business section of the public, would facilitate the delivery of mail and the improvement of the service. He said that the mail was one of the most important factors in the industrial life of the country.

Mr. Acres urged among other things, that would have a tendency to assist the delivery service generally, early mailing. "Early posting of letters and parcels results in quicker dispatch," he said. The avoidance of massed mailing was another means of assisting in the improvement of the service.

MUSIC and DRAMA

ZANE GREY'S "THE MYSTERIOUS RIDER" SCORES AT GRIFFIN'S

One of the most fascinating productions seen in here in some time—a story of love, mystery and intrigue, opened last night at Griffin's Theatre, where it will fill a 3 days' engagement. It is called "The Mysterious Rider" and it is adapted to the screen from the novel by Zane Grey.

A splendid all-star cast enacts the story, which is replete with rare comedy as well as drama, suspense, romance and adventure. The judicious injection and sensible treatment of comedy in the serious matter of the play was a feature which put last night's audience in a strongly appreciative frame of mind.

The picture deals with the love affair of Colemishe—shy and artistically played by the beautiful Claire Adams and Wilson Moore (Carl Cantwort), while a little subplot funny enough and complete enough to be a comedy in itself depicts the efforts of the ranch cowboys to keep their unattractive, amorously-inclined but professionally marvelous rodeo, from deserting the ranch because of her loosecomeness for a "steady." One of these cowboys, Tom Billings, played by that master comedian, Frank Hayes, is forced by the drawing of a card, to become her suitor. With this situation as a base, a joyous little comedy is enacted, artistically paralleling the great serious theme of the story. Too much cannot be said of the highly talented aggregation of artists assembled by Benj. B. Hampton, the producer, for the proper enacting of this great story. Robert McKim, Claire Adams, Carl Cantwort, Maude Wayne, Frederick Starr, James Mason, Walter Whitman, Frank Hayes and Aggie Herring play the principal roles and each and every one of them is simply ideal in his or her part.

Ben Turpin in a very amusing Mack Sennett comedy, Jack Mulgall in a gripping Jack London story of the sea, and Screen Classics a new and entertaining reel introducing bits of Science, comedy and Novelties were also screened during the evening. The program is par that is well worth seeing.

NEW DE HAVEN FILM

"My Lady Friends," a First National attraction co-starring Mr. and Mrs. Carter De Haven, which opened a three day run at the Regent Theatre yesterday, is a swiftly moving farce, sprinkled with many hearty laughs and photographed in settings of rare beauty and variety.

The De Havens could evoke laughter with any sort of vehicle, but in this instance they have a story which is brimful of complications and humorous situations. It is the sort of entertainment demanded at frequent intervals by the theatre-going public, but which cannot always be supplied because of the lack of suitable stories.

The production has been keyed up to a high rate of speed, and there is not a dull moment in the six reels. The fun starts with the opening scene, and keeps on the pace without a falter until the end.

De Haven plays the part of a bible manufacturer who chooses his "lady friends" discreetly, but without the knowledge of the little wife who is unable to forget the days when economy was the rule, and cannot bring herself to subscribe to the luxuries her husband would pile on her. To get himself out of the complications which follow the sudden appearance of all three, Smith enlists the support of Edward Early, his lawyer-friend. But, alas, the latter has a wife who is more suspicious than Mrs. Smith, and she spoils the beans. But Smith manages to clear himself.

Perfect direction and beautiful photography assist in making this one of the most successful pictures of the season.

Fox News, a Sunshine comedy "Singer Midgets Side-Show", and Harry Meyers in the Robinson Crusoe serial presented the exhibition of feature attractions.

NEWS FROM TRENTON

Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Cummings and son, Allen, of Fargo, N. D. arrived in town on Friday last and will spend the holidays with his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. J. Ross Cummings, Queen street. Mr. Cummings on his return from service in France went to Fargo and became connected with the Goodyear Rubber Co. This is his first trip east in 4 years.

Trenton Arena was opened to the public for skating on Monday evening. Despite the numerous attractions for pleasure seekers, a splendid crowd took to the cold-clear sport. The ice surface was not of the best but we have seen worse at the close of the season.

Previous to the skaters taking charge, Coach Freeman had his intermediate puck chasers after the rubber for an hour's work out. Surprising how rusty you are, after the lapse of time between hanging up your stick and taking it down again, but when some of the stiff joints are limbered up and the eye becomes accustomed to the lights of the rink, we don't mean the bright lights on Dundas, you will see a finished product according to the changes in some of the rules we won't require such a heavy defence, but rather a speedy one.

Sometime during the afternoon while mother was busy shopping, a little boy became temporarily separated from her Crying his eyes out indicating a broken heart. He still had courage and wander ed from store to store, never ceasing to let you know he was in trouble, like loosing one's mother, but child like and with a good sense of humor, some one told him he would likely find mother at the bargain counter, so gutting his teeth and running as best he could, trying to avoid the busy streets, finally arrested the mother's attention, when she was about to enter a bargain store and all was well.

Hugh Earncomb who is attending Toronto University, is spending the vacation at his home on Henry street.

Mr. Walter Little, son of Mr. Andrew Little is home from school at Toronto.

The funeral service of Mary Widdell was conducted by the Rev. R. A. Cleaston. Many floral wreaths bore tribute of the high esteem in which Mary was held. The remains were laid to rest in St. Georg's cemetery. Pall bearers were Harry and Kenneth Crews, Walter Little, Clayton McGuire, Gladstone Campbell and Fraser Fairman.

Mr. F. M. Shearer of the Railway Mail Clerk Staff, Toronto, spent the week-end with Mrs. Shearer and son Austin Cobourg, who are visiting her parents, Dr. and Mrs. J. F. Ward, Division street.

Vernon Armstrong of Toronto, is visiting his parents, Rev. and Mrs. F. W. Armstrong, at the Rectory.

The many friends of Mary Girdwood, Widdell, will deeply regret to learn of her death today at her home on Division street. While engaged as a teacher in one of the rural schools in Prince Edward County, early last spring, she had to give up her work, owing to illness. Thinking perhaps only a rest was needed, it was four necessary to operate to discover the cause of the illness. Since then Mary had been confined to her home, with many light hopes for recovery, always existing. Daily enquiries as to her condition were eagerly sought after, by both young and older friends of the family.

For one so young to be taken away when having only entered upon a new sphere of activity is ever a puzzling problem to us all.

The entire family and relatives will have the sincerest sympathy not only of all Trenton, but of other communities, wherein Mary has made a host of friends.

Elmer Collins, who is attending Varsity, is spending the holidays with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Collins.

Dr. Jack Farley is at home for Xmas with his parents, Dr. and Mrs. F. J. Farley.

Mrs. J. F. Teile, nee (Norma Dempsey) with her mother, Mrs. Frank Dempsey of Albury, were in town on Saturday.

Saturday's market was not up to the standard; only a week before Xmas, prospective buyers were very disappointed with the display of farm produces.

JUNIORS OUT THIS EVENING

Big Turnout of Juniors Solicited at Arena This Evening

This evening at 7 p.m. the Junior O.H.A. squad will be out for the second work-out of the season, at the Arena, and it is hoped that an excellent turn-out will greet the rail birds, who are naturally very anxious to see the youngsters go.

In this connection it might be stated that all juniors should make every effort to be out tonight, and at all subsequent practices. It is from the junior ranks that real hockey players are developed, as it is futile to wait until you are thirty or so before making the debut. Get out early, as there is much to learn, and the earlier you learn the tricks of the good old game, the more expert you will become.

Seaden, Belleville enjoys the services of a paid, professional coach, who has a real record as a pro. hockey player, and who above all other residents in this city is in a position to teach the finer arts of the hockey game. The services of Coach Mackay should be appreciated, and certainly would be greatly appreciated in other less fortunate towns and cities.

Every effort is being made this season to promote hockey in this city, and a bumper turnout is one way of helping along the cause. In numbers there is strength.

MARKING RULES IN O.H.A. RINKS

The Ontario Hockey Association in this season sending out to the clubs playing under its jurisdiction a diagram and instructions on the marking of the ice surface. All rinks where O.H.A. games will be played must have the ice surface marked as per diagram. Instructions follow:

Minimum ice area 160x60
Suggested ice area 175x75
Ideal ice area 185x85

Goal nets must be set out at least five feet and not more than fifteen feet from end of rink, that is, to the goal posts. Goal width six feet, height four feet.

Rinks must instal regulation goal nets. The official goal net has a cover-cap extending 12 inches from the goal posts to the back bar on a line, and extending at the base along the ice 36 inches from the goal posts.

Goalkeeper's territory—A semi-circle, in front of net, extending one foot on each side, with a radius of four feet from middle point of the goal line.

Defending side's area, where there is no offside, 20 feet out from goal line—draw dark distinguishing line on the ice.

Referees are instructed to see that this law is properly marked as per diagram, and no game is to be played unless the ice is so marked.

HEFFERNAN MOVES.

It is reported that Heffernan who starred for Picton last year has taken up his residence in Oshawa. Of course Heffernan cannot comply with the residence rule and it is not likely that the O.H.A. will grant a certificate. The rule governing players who are engaged as sailors is very explicit.

PORT HOPE "COCKY"

Belleville wired the secretary of the Port Hope Intermediates to come down there for an exhibition game on Friday night. As Leslie Jr. billed at Port Hope on that date the invitation had to be declined. Evidently Belleville is anxious to get a line on our team, says the Port Hope Guide. If however, we are successful in winning the district honors we will be glad to entertain our Belleville friends and hope to give the easterners reasons to remember that we were there.

BOWLERS BOWL PRINTERS OVER

The Bowlers insisted on having things their way in their game with the Printers last night. To put it briefly they were there with the punch, Wally Walshe copped all the high score records of the evening with a 366 in a single string and 607 for a total of three strings. The latter, by the way, is just one point higher than Jones made a few evenings ago when he raised the three string record for the present league series. The scores—

Events in the Fowl Contest.

The high single score 279, formerly held by Bateman, has been boosted to 298 by A. Weir.

Walshe is again in possession of the three-string consecutive score with 730, followed by Gilbert with 724.

The three-taring score (any three) is Walshe 790, Gilbert 771.

NEW LEAGUE IS ORGANIZED

A very enthusiastic meeting was held at Domenico's alleys last night to organize for the new five-pin league play to commence after the New Year. One purpose of the meeting was to adopt the new rule in regard to the four pin after making a strike or spare, and all present at the meeting were well satisfied with this new rule as it will greatly encourage the beginner. The above rule was adopted in Toronto some time ago. Another rule that will be enforced is the foul line penalty. The same officers were re-elected for the next term, namely, Dr. O'Callahan, President, and John Yerex, Secretary-Treasurer. The following eleven teams have already entered: Belleville Hardware, Shoe Clerks, Canadian Industrial Alcohol, Natural Treat, Spirettes, Giants, Wanderers, Quinte Battery, C.T.R. (ball team), Bankers, and R. of C.

Natural Treat Win Their First Game

In a double-header at Domenico's Alleys last night, Belleville Motors defeated the U Go I Go by the score of 2097 to 1871 and the Natural Treat won their first game of the season when they downed Springers to the tune of 2091 to 1931.

PRESTON INTERMEDIATES TRIM HAM. TIGERS

Preston, Dec. 16.—The Hamilton Tigers went down to defeat at the hands of the local intermediates at the Arena here tonight by a score of 9 to 5. The game was fast, considering it was the first game of the season. The Tigers showed good form in the first and third periods, scoring two goals in the first and three in the third. Preston scored one in the first, five in the second and three more in the third. Every man on the local team played brilliant hockey, while Breckenborough and Hughes were the pick of the Tigers. The ice was in excellent condition. The lineup:—

Preston A.A.—Goal, Blum; defence, Sterling and Schlegel; centre, Clark; wings, Woodley and Kreiser; subs, Arnott, Rogers, Anderson and Keever.

Hamilton Tigers—Goal, Robinson; defence, Day and Herbert; centre Breckenborough; wings, Redding and Mitchell; subs, Hughes and Marshall.

Referee—"Buck" Bowman, of Preston.

HO, HUM!

"Step on it!" the excited woman cried.

But wait, you are, wrong. They were not trying to escape bandits nor an outwit'n pursuing motor cop, nor even trying to beat a train over the crossing. She just was referring to a poor, little, innocent spider that was loading her way.

JACK MARKS IN HARNESS AGAIN

Coach Jack Marks was on the steel runners himself at the arena last evening when the Intermediates worked out in preparation for their big game on Friday evening with Smith Falls' six.

There was a goodly turnout of the puck chasers and a good practice resulted. Juniors are out tonight at 7 p.m.

SOFTNESS AND LUXURY

The upholstery trade is encouraged by maintenance of demand for its goods. A few months ago there was some uncertainty on the part of furniture manufacturers as to whether the vogue of luxuriously soft pieces had not about run its course. Doubts have been dispelled, however, and the news is out that through next spring at least the public will eagerly buy overstuffed couches and chairs. What the choice will be after that does not matter now.

If we were asked to make a guess we should say that there is slight chance of a reaction favorable to the hard, springless seats which characterized the furniture gracing our fathers' homes. The people have changed and this explains why furniture styles are so different from those of half a century ago. When straight backed, rigidly cushioned chairs and sofas were acceptable the people were more rigid and spare of build. They matched the furniture. Look around you today in the street or where people congregate. What is most striking about them? You will notice that the majority are liberally upholstered, not to say over-stuffed because the latter is a trade term and as such has no rightful place in social circles. Nor is it woman only that is more generously supplied with architectural padpus than in an earlier time. Well-rounded men are the rule rather than the exception. It makes us wonder what will happen if we ever get a living waggle tender with something of fright for results if a universally underpaid people can wax so fat.

DEMOCRACY OR AUTOCRACY?

The far-reaching effects of our railway problem in Canada has served to keep the Western Progressives in the Federal House at Ottawa from making any serious attempt to advance the Hudson's Bay Railway proposition. Since the House closed, however, the Dominion Government has decided to take the loss and abandon the line, insofar as it has been constructed. Rails are being torn up and other material is being salvaged, but the unavoidable loss will be about $85,000,000 including interest charges.

The idea of shortening the route to Europe via the Hudson's Bay route is absolutely ridiculous. Very little over three months of navigation can be obtained in a year, although some optimistic souls have figured that it might be extended beyond this slightly. The danger of collision with ice floes, the fogs, the isolation of the route and other features, added to the short season, make the project the height of folly. Yet in spite of all this, the Drury Government is seriously contemplating a similar scheme. It is announced that the Premier and the T. & N.O. directors have decided to extend the provincially-owned road some 200 miles from Cochrane to James Bay. Conservative estimates state that this road would cost $50,000 a mile, so that this useless extension would mean a total cost in the neighborhood of $10,000,000. Aside from all the doubtful factors (which are more than self evident) it appears to be most extraordinary that the directors, along with Premier Drury, should assume to the decision to commit the Province to an expenditure of this magnitude without consulting the Legislature or referring the facts to the people through their representatives. It cannot be shown that there is an area between Cochrane and James Bay which is at all likely to develop enough traffic for the road, to pay for one-tenth of its operating expenses. The scheme is a wild one indeed, and should be nipped in its bud. These quiet Farmer leaders who shouted so hard, previous to elections, for democracy and economy have reached the height of autocracy and extravagance in their decision to spend $10,000,000 by order-in-council.

PASSING COMMENT

Too many neighbors think thrift consists in coming over to borrow a cup of sugar.

Funny that a man won't have to cruise car—but will marry a girl who has been kissed by every Tom, Dick and Harry.

The steady advance of the pound sterling will bring Canadian exporters more money for their produce sold in Great Britain, and more British funds for investment in this country.

It is said that Mr. Wilson cherishes hopes of being President again. It would be cruel kindness for any of his friends to encourage such a hope. A more Presidential campaign would be the death of him, or at least destroy all hopes of future usefulness. If he is still capable of doing good public work, his place would be in the Senate, a dignified position, with possibilities of service, but with no great burden of responsibility and anxiety.

The British Chancellor of the Exchequer and his party sail for the United States on December 22 to arrange for the repayment of the British debt. People who come to give money, not advice, are usually welcome.

It is announced that Lloyd George's car ran into the Duke of Devonshire's at the entrance to the Commons and was damaged. That is the second win for the Duke within a month. The general election collision was the more serious.

The result of the telegraphic barrage against the proposed stamp tax on receipts will not be known until Mr. Fielding returns from Europe. The tax has worked well for years in Great Britain, but the British has had a long experience in licking stamps of all kinds for the Government.

The Philadelphia & Reading Railway brought the New Haven Railway to time for neglecting to return empty cars by putting a partial embargo on all traffic that way. Unfortunately Canadian railways have no such lever to force the return of their empties from the United States.

Prince Andrew of Greece still doubtless consider himself lucky in merely being degraded and exiled, his judges perhaps not considering him worth expending powder on. No one can blame him for being on the way to England—the traditional home for political refugees—"while the going is good."

Cleveland's mayor has settled a most momentous question to his own satisfaction, and that of many others, by decreeing that hats should not be doffed in elevators when women are present. In endorsing his view, the New York Herald pertinently asks, if the reverse were correct, why not enlarge the habit?

HERE AND THERE

MARINE BOILERS FOR LAND STATIONS.

During the war many important advances were made to the design of boilers fitted to British merchant ships, extraordinarily severe service demanded from naval boilers stimulated invention in many directions. The reduction since the war in naval programs of all nations has accordingly restricted the demand for such boilers, and the makers are turning their attention to other fields. They have found a very promising one in the electric power station. The marine type of boiler has the advantage of taking up comparatively little space and of being able to give a very rapid increase in steaming power when, for example, a sudden load comes on the station. In one large British electrical station two of these boilers are being fitted with oil burners, and excellent results are expected to follow.

OUR THREE DAYS.

Three days make up our life—Yesterday, Tomorrow and Today. The trouble is that Yesterday and Tomorrow take up far too much of our thought, and Today is deprived and almost elbowed out. Yet Today is our only real day.

If only we had Yesterday back, we say. That ball which bowled us out had only to be met this way or that, and there would have been a boundary—and many more too. We can see it clearly when it is too late. But the scene of that match is closed now. And Yesterday cries out, "You let me go when you had me; you will not see me again."

It is pleasant to pass the hours in dreams of tomorrow, and so we fill Tomorrow with the tasks and duties which belong to the present. But Tomorrow never comes; it is like a mirage in the desert, which never becomes real. Tomorrow mocks us, and says: "You're a fine simpleton to waste your time looking at me. I am out of your reach, and shall be forever. You always hear of me; You will never reach me."

There is still Today. That at least is ours, yet we think little of it while it is with us. We like to dream what we might have done, and what we hope to do. But the one day for deeds is Today. As was the word of the Master of all Good Men that we must do the work given us to do while it is day. When the day ends it is a completed story not to be reopened. We say to ourselves "Overtime Tomorrow," but when another day dawns it brings with it its own demands. It is vain to expect that we shall catch up in some Tomorrow the distance that we should have been covered Today. The day's march must be covered in the day.

It is not by our dreams of Tomorrow, or our imaginary triumphs of Yesterday, that we win our place. Today we can give solid substance to our dreams;—we can lay foundations, deep and firm, on which castles can be built as high in the air as we like.

There is a witty man in America who calls himself Saint of the Day, and this is his wisdom.

Edison achieved success by knowing when it was time to get out of bed. If thou wouldst be successful in life, rise early; meet the morning with a smile as the day's work with vigor, but without wasteful haste; use the brain and thy conscience as well as thine hands and feet; take reasonable care of thy health; do a deed of kindness for someone every day; trust God, and do thy duty.

That is the right program but it does not belong to Yesterday; and it is not concerned with Tomorrow. There is no anytime allowed in the business of life. Let us do what we have to do Today.

AN ANSWER TO "IN FLANDERS' FIELDS."

They died, each one, for us—
For them we can but live,
But, living, give
Help to our Empire, that we may
Each to some small extent repay.

They live their dust to form that precious sod
Of free, pure British Empire for their God.
Was it in vain this sacrifice they made,
Facing till death the awful shot and blade
Way; we will rise, as they did, to the call,
With strength to keep the trust they left to all.

Then will the world forget
The cause for which they died.
The bloody poppy we will let.
Remind us of our pride,
It's so in nature, all, from big to small,
Honor and love the brave who fall.

PRESS OPINIONS

A Connecticut Judge was probably not surprised the other day at the results of a spelling test he had tried on the lawyers and Government officials in the Federal Building at Hartford, the State Capital. He gave them the following ten simple words in common use:

Separate, tenuendo, inoculate, rarety, vitiity, repellent, plagyy, embarrass, harass and picnicking.

These are all words which one might use in ordinary speech without being criticised as pedantic, but not one of a considerable number of men above the average in education was able to spell them correctly. It is likely that a similar failure might be recorded in any other city on the continent. Business men everywhere complain that youths of both sexes coming to them for employment are unable to spell correctly, not technical words, but those in most common use, and they generally add that when the spelling is correct the handwriting is almost illegible.

THE EMPIRE EXHIBITION
(Toronto Globe)

In a speech made before leaving England, Sir Henry Thornton referred to the coming British Empire Exhibition as an opportunity for manufacturers and business people to become acquainted, and also as a means of directing to Canada the right class of emigrants.

A special section of the Exhibition which deals with the subject of emigration and overseas settlement will do more to find suitable settlers than the normal efforts of half a century could accomplish.

Districts will be labelled for stock-raising, grain-growing or mixed farming, and so on. A vivid conception of Canadian life and opportunity will be presented, so that the prospective settler will gain some conception of what his life in the new country will be and the rewards which wait industry and intelligence.

The opportunities ought to be good for presenting the Canadian field in a graphic and at the same time in an accurate way so that the right kind of people will be attracted and none misled. This, of course, is conditional upon proper facilities being offered by the management in Canada, and we may depend upon it that Mr. Larkin will do his best to see that justice is done to his native land.

HARD LUCK

Two boys had been behaving so badly in class that they were ordered to remain after school hours and write their names one hundred times.

They started on the task. After a time one of them grew uncasy, and began watching his companion in disgust; then suddenly he said to the teacher:

"Take fair, sir. His name's Lowe and mine's Stockenreiter."

"GROWING OLD"

A little more tired at close of day,
A little less anxious to have our way,
A little less ready to scold and blame,
A little more care for a brother's name;
And so we are nearing the journey's end
Where time and eternity meet and blend.

A little less care for bonds and gold,
A little more rest in the days of old;
A broader view and a saner mind,
And a little more love for all mankind,
And so we are facing a-down the way,
And drawing nearer the end of day.

A little more love for the friends of youth,
A little less zeal for "established" truth,
A little more charity in our views,
A little less thirst for the daily news;
Lest we are finding our lents away,
And passing in silence at close of day.

A little more leisure to sit and dream,
A little more zeal the things esteem;

WHAT EVERY FATHER KNOWS

A news item says: "Of so little account are women in many parts of China that a father, if asked the number of his children, will probably leave out the girls in the reckoning."—But any father who leaves daughter out of his reckoning over here wouldn't be sure, after he came to, whether he had been bucking or wrestled a careless motorist had knocked him over a goal. Father is the only one left out of the reckoning in this land of the Free and Home of the Brave

The music from the ballroom was at last then sufficiently alluring to occasion a general movement in that direction.

Hardcastle was discussing with his friend what to take in first, when Mrs. Ratcliffe, whom we have met before, emerged on the arm of an officer of distinction from what looked like a fairy bower, an skillfully laid bales of palms and gorgeous plants of exquisite beauty been arranged to conceal the entrance to a small room close to them. Hardcastle had not met her since she was his father's guest on the occasion of Oona's disappearance, and their greeting was mutually cordial.

"Ah! I have just been thinking of you," she whispered with breathless eagerness. "have you seen the reigning beauty—two of them, in fact," glancing in the direction of Politmore, simple and unsophisticated, with everything to learn about this wicked world. Ah me!" she said, looking up pensively, and then glancing the truth she had long passed the time when the 'wicked world' as she was pleased to call it, was to her a new and loved best and in which she still took a very real delight, cared much for her frequent evidences.

"Well!—get Masterman to introduce you," she advised, tapping him lightly with her fan, "take care of her, you will think no more of your enchanted island—and——"

"Perfectly true," remarked Politmore, who had been making discoveries of his own, 'come and see for yourself,—two sizes of matchless brilliancy in one hemisphere. Let us renounce the triumphs of Mars for the more delightful conquests of Cupid. Come, Hardcastle!"

"Always the same, Politmore,' Hardcastle said, a trifle gravely, 'whether it's a ball or a battle you insist on taking it lightly; if Boney was marching on London you would have your joke in the good old way."

"But man, I am not jesting' he protested, assuming mock gravity, 'that's the worst of having a light heart and a ready tongue. No one ever credits you with being in downright earnest, and I am often serious, as you know, Hardcastle.'

'Oh yes, I suppose so,' Hardcastle said provokingly, 'although I have no very distinct recollection of the special occasion!'

"Well, never mind!' said the young fellow, in no way disconcerted, leading his friend toward Madame Rey and the two young ladies. 'There!' he exclaimed, forestalled as usual by the accomplished Woodford and Freedmore being introduced: 'Look against us once more—deal against us!'

Hardcastle was silent. His eyes were fixed on Oona, and his pulse beat quick and strong. He hastily drew his companion back into the shadow of the improvised shrubbery, and sat down looking so pale and agitated that his friend was genuinely perplexed. All the surroundings were so unlike, not in his most fantastic daydreams had he conceived of anything like this. Yet the slight girlish figure, standing with such unconscious elegance of grace in conversation with Freedmore and others, could not be mistaken for another. And yet—what miracle could have brought her here, as the nieces of the great financier? Could he but find McAlpin, he was ready to wring the secret from him at any cost.

In fact, MacAlpin and Graham were quite near, although unknown to him, and very much occupied with some serious perplexities of their own, as we shall presently see.

"What does it mean?' Politmore asked helplessly. 'Have you seen a ghost, Hardcastle, in this highly respectable mansion.'

'It means that the lady of our lost quest is here,' Hardcastle snapped, impatiently; 'here—yonder!' indicating the little group we have mentioned.

His companion whistled softly; he was answered, but by no means enlightened. Then we have most fortunately stumbled on Paradise unawares,' he remarked, 'and should take our luck gratefully.'

'We have stumbled on the devil knows what!' Hardcastle said, with unusual irritation.

Still, the devil has behaved, handsomely for once, Reginald Hardcastle, and——' The sentence was not finished, for the piano was touched softly by a skilful hand in the next room—evidently, someone was enjoying the solitude of a grand assembly—and soon Oona was singing with true feeling and expression a song then quite new—

Soldier, rest, thy warfare o'er,
Sleep the sleep that knows no breaking.
Dream of battlefields no more,
Days of danger, nights of waking.
In our Isles' enchanted hall
Hands unseen thy couch are strewing,
Fairy strains of music fall,
Everyone in slumber dewing.
Soldier, rest, thy warfare o'er,
Dream of fighting fields no more!'

Hardcastle found it quite easy to forget everything but the bliss of the moment while Oona sang. He thought of the Island and the wonderful medley of ballads and songs which she chanted to the weird accompaniment of murmuring waters She had learned since then to use her voice with more skill, but it was not in the added touch of culture that the charm lay, but in the sweet, full tones which made the listeners feel that the soul of the singer was unconsciously revealed in its exquisite pathos, pity and beauty.

DRY LIFE FOR A BARREL.

Up the hill the old grocery horse plodded his way wearily. The back of the wagon was full of groceries.

"Oh," sighed the big barrel, as it bumped along, "life's too dry to suit me. I want some excitement." He shifted his position and knocked out a can of coffee. Down the hill it rolled, bounding from side to side. "Now, that looks like fun," thought the barrel. "I guess I'll try that."

He gave a jump and was out of the wagon, knocking a sack of sugar and a box of eggs out with him. The sack burst and the sugar flew in all directions. Little rivulets of yellow liquid trickled out of the corners of the egg box. But the barrel did not wait to see the fun Down the hill he rolled, faster and faster.

Now the milk wagon was just coming up the hill. "Whoa, Bess, Whoa!" shouted the milkman, but Bess would not. "Whoa!" Never before in her life had she seen such an animal as that barrel, and she was frightened.—Over the roads she floundered, and down through the ditch. Out across the cornfield she tore, shedding a stream of glittering white milk bottles all the way.

"Hurrah!" shouted the barrel. "Life isn't so dry, after all. This is fun."

Over stones and into bushes he bumped and clattered along.

Crash! He bumped right into a boy on a bicycle. The poor boy went sprawling, but the barrel went right on. Clatter, clatter, clatter, it rattled across the bridge. Crack! Bang! Right against the fence it smashed. Back it bounced, and splash! It lit right in the river.

Then excitement truly began for the barrel. Down the stream it was tossed and whirled. First it was thrown against one bank and then against the other.

"This is almost too much of a good thing," thought the barrel. "I almost wish I was back on the wagon again. One of my ribs is broken and I have a black and blue spot on my head. And Goodness! I'm soaked clear to the floor."

"Ho, Ho, Ho," laughed the river. "I thought you didn't like a dry life."

"Well, there's nothing dry about this, I can tell you," retorted the barrel.

Slowly the water seeped in through the cracks. The barrel got heavier and heavier. It was harder for the river to toss it from side to side. All of it was under water now but its head. Then it was able to hold that up no longer and slowly it sank to the bottom.

That was the end of a dry life for the barrel.

Christmas Candles

Artistic candlesticks are not only a pretty gift, but they fit into the spirit of Christmas. They mean so much more, too, if you make them yourself to match the color scheme of a friend's room.

Candlesticks are so inexpensive, too. Of the three candlesticks in the picture, the one on the left was carved out of a round piece of wood, the one in the middle was an old wooden candlestick, which had become badly scratched, and the one on the right is an ordinary tin candlestick.

Sealing wax paint will make all of these candlesticks. To make the paint, buy sticks of sealing wax in the colors you need. Break these sticks up, putting the different colors in separate cups or little pans. Cover the pieces with denatured alcohol and let them stand overnight. The wax should be melted up to form a paint which is just thin enough to spread nicely.

Combine Colors

The holder in the center of the illustration should be worked up in two colors, such as brown trimmed in gold, or green with French blue. Use the darker color for the main part of the candle and put on the banding in a lighter color.

The old-fashioned candlestick at the right would be just the thing for a dressing table if worked up in pink and white or blue and tan. Paint the holder in a solid color and then put on little spots of the other color, to represent flowers. Be sure to let each color dry thoroughly before putting on the next

The holder on the left is a little piece of wood carved to shape. Brother could do this for you if you don't know how to manage a knife yourself. It may also be decorated in one solid color with little dots of a brighter color, which are easily put on with a fine brush.

Decorate Candles.

If you happen to have an alcohol burner, or know where you can borrow one to use, you can decorate the candle by melting the sealing wax and allowing it to drop on the candle. This is done by holding the end of the wax over the burner and waiting until it melts enough to drop.

For the little Christmas candle at the right, a red candle with drops of green wax would be pretty, with the holder also in green and red with a touch of silver. The other candles should also be decorated to match the holders.

FILM STAR IS SERIOUSLY ILL

Los Angeles, Dec. 18.—Wallace Reid, film actor, is "fighting for his life' in a 'small Hollywood sanitarium, according to a story in the Los Angeles Times, published, quoting his wife, known professionally as Dorothy Davenport, and his mother-in-law, Mrs. Alice Davenport.

Reid suffered a breakdown nearly two months ago, after his health had been failing for three years, they said, and for several weeks he has been under the care of two physicians and two male nurses.

MR. THOS. MANLEY PROTESTS LETTER

Thinks Much Responsibility for Delay is Due to Architect

The Intelligencer is in receipt of a letter from Mr. Thomas Manley, stating that the letter read at the Friday meeting of the School Board from Mr. Jarvis is rather unfair to him, as a contractor. Mr. Manley claims that many of the delays dealt with in Mr. Jarvis' letter are due to Mr. Jarvis and calls upon the citizens to look into the matter for themselves. The Intelligencer does not publish the letter because it does not wish to be drawn into a controversy over matters that should be dealt with by the School Board. If this letter and others on the same subject are submitted to the Board they will be reported through the regular channels, but it would appear to be unadvisable to attempt to settle a letter which would undoubtedly start a controversy, and would do but little to assist in the settlement of the question, which should properly be handled by the School Board.

ELEVATED RAILWAY CLASH CLAIMS 29 VICTIMS

New York, Dec. 17.—Twenty-nine persons were injured and hundreds were thrown into a panic last night when a swiftly moving train on an elevated Fabsville branch of the Interborough Transit Company's Lexington avenue subway crashed into the rear of a stalled train.

Eleven women and children were among the victims. The motorman of the moving section, Patrick Keogh, is believed to have been fatally injured.

The collision involved two south bound electric trains crowded with passengers, which were running only a few minutes apart on the theatre rush-hour schedules.

Many are believed by the police to have been saved from electrocution by the stationmaster at Hunt's Point who saw the collision and immediately threw the emergency switches, cutting off the power along the system.

KANSAS TO OUST K. K. K. BY WRIT

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

White Sulphur Springs, Va., Dec. 16.—Kansas will not drive the Ku Klux Klan from the state by force, but will expell it by refusing to permit it to do business within the State's boundaries, as Governor Henry J. Allen declared in an address today before the Governors' Conference. A writ, being sought in Kansas supreme court, he said, would have the effect of ousting the K'an from the state.

DECLARES ITALIAN RAILWAYS MISMANAGED

Rome, Dec. 18.—Benito Mussolini, Italy's new Prime Minister, who, until nine years ago was known as a Socialist, has begun his tenure of office by luxuriously laying the axe to the root of all public service institutions owned or managed by the state, such as railways, telephones, telegraphs, letter and parcel posts, which show a deficit, and even some others which are more or less successfully run.

The railways in Italy are perhaps the most striking example of the difficulties and weaknesses of state management. During 17 years of such control, declared Professor Ugo Ancona, an expert on financial questions, they have ceased to be the largest producers of national profit, and are today virtually owned by the railroad men. Before the great war the railways brought in from 40,000,000 to 50,000,000 lire a year, which might be taken as interest on the five and a half billion lire which had been spent on constructing them. The deficit in 1921 was over a billion lire, although the price of tickets is now three times what it was, and it is said that the deficit for 1922 will be still greater.

In fact, says Professor Ancona, the net result of government management is disorder on all lines, deficiency of material, deplorable condition of running stock, service deteriorated, and discipline entirely wrecked. The number of employees and their wages have enormously increased; the average rate of pay has risen from 2000 lire a year before the war to over 10,000 lire today. To this should be added the greatly increased number of strikes and the fact that thefts on the railway, which used to amount to about 10 million lire a year, have now risen to over five hundred million. Five billion and a half lire were spent in 50 years in order to construct the railways; two and a half lire have been spent during the 17 years of state control merely to enlarge them.

Professor Ancona says further that those troubles are due in large measure to the fact that the Italian railroad lines run through sections of the country each with widely differing economic, social and climate conditions, thus creating a complicated and difficult system impossible for the state to manage successfully. Political interests have been permitted too much influence in deciding where new lines were to be built.

Another great drawback to the prosperity of Italian railways Professor Ancona says, is that the workers have insisted on an eight hour day for all employees, even for those whose duty consists in opening and shutting a gate at a level crossing once or twice a day. This eight hour question has added 40,000 to 50,000 to the number of the personnel, and something like 500 million lire to the expense of operation. The only remedy likely to bring in a reign of economy and efficiency, according to this financial expert, is the radical one of gradually ceding to different private companies the lines which, as one great whole, have been such a failure in the hands of the state.

PROHIBITION BOOMS TRADE IN POCKET FLASKS

New York, Dec. 18.—If the Christmas fleet reported to be bound for New York from the Bahamas succeeds in running the blockade of the dry navy, it should find New Yorkers amply supplied with receptacles for toting the forbidden liquor.

Several manufacturers declared today that the demand for flasks had trebled since the advent of prohibition. Shop windows with their Christmas decorations feature clandestine drinking vessels which in "wet" days brought a shudder from society.

Stores are selling thousands of flasks —large ones for roomy coat pockets and small ones gracefully curved for the hip; expensive containers of silver and gold and cheaper ones covered with imitation leather.

Flasks are not the only drinking apparatus on display. Shown in abundance are hollow canes, decanters, glasses never blown for milk, and elaborate cocktail shakers.

COULD NOT SEE IT

One of Guillion's stories deals with the age-old theme of the inability of some English people to appreciate the American joke: An English girl was present when this conundrum was asked. "How do you make a Maltese cross?"—the answer of course being, "You pull its tail." The English girl didn't smile. Finally she said: "Well, of course it's because I'm English and all that, but I really cannot see any similarity between a Maltese cross and a pu—let's tail."

ONLY REMEDY FOR EXISTING TROUBLES

Brandon, Man., Dec. 14.—The only remedy for the existing troubles of this country was increased population, declared Robert Forke, M.P., leader of the Progressive Party, at the Brandon Builders' Exchange banquet here last night.

Stating that the debts of Canada were growing by millions of dollars year by year, he did not hold out hopes for a reduction of taxation for many years to come.

AN EXPLANATION.

Mr. Charles Clapp, Superintendent of the City Mission Sunday school, has written to The Intelligencer today, drawing attention to the fact that the Mission Sunday school and Xmas tree entertainment, billed for Thursday, December 21st, and advertised in The Intelligencer on Saturday last, is NOT the City Mission Sunday school Xmas tree, but is in connection with the congregation worshipping there, and who hold their Sunday school at 10 o'clock on Sunday mornings. It seems that two distinct religious bodies use the building for their Sunday services. Mr. Clapp continues by stating that the City Mission Sunday School, which meets every Sunday afternoon at 3.30, is an old established one, having been organized by the late Rev. A. Schuster and Mrs. Schuster, over forty years ago, and which met in the waiting room at Ralthun's dock before the City Mission building was built, and which has been in existence ever since and which has always possessed a band of very faithful and loyal Christian teachers who are loyal to the Bible truth and the Sunday School.

THREE ROYAL WIDOWS TO SPEND XMAS TOGETHER

London, Dec. 18.—Two dowager Queens and one Dowager Empress of Europe, the widows of former Kings of England and Denmark, and an Emperor and Empress, intend to spend the Christmas holidays together in England. Dowager Queen Louise of Denmark, widow of King Frederick VIII who died in 1912, and Dowager Empress Maria Feodorovna, of Russia, widow of Emperor Alexander III, who died in 1894, will be the guests of Dowager Queen Alexandra at Sandringham. Queen Alexandra is the widow of King Edward VII, who died in 1910. Those who follow the annals of royalty say this is the first time, probably in history, that three widowed queens have thus come together.

Maria Feodorovna is a younger sister of Alexandra, and Louise is a sister-in-law of both. Hence it will be a family reunion. Maria Feodorovna arrived in England recently and celebrated her seventy-fifth birthday, November 26, as a guest of her sister. She has been living for the past two years in Denmark, she was originally the Danish princess Dagmar—but she will now remain in England for several weeks. Queen Louise, who is 71 years old, is expected at Sandringham a few days after Christmas.

There will be no public or social function in honor of the royal guests, but during the Christmas season King George and the entire royal family will spend a few days with Queen Alexandra and their aunts.

The meeting of Queen Alexandra, who is 76 years old, and her sister, will be more or less touching as the Queen is known to be very distressed at the health of her sister, who has been rapidly declining in health since the killing of her son who was Emperor Nicholas, by the Bolsheviki at Ekaterinburg in the summer of 1918.

NOTHING TO MEND

The post-war whirligig is responsible for many strange things. We may now find, for example, college girls in our kitchens and flitterasy in our Louis Seize drawing-rooms.

The door bell of a war profiteer's mansion rang the other day, and the profiteer's wife closed her Laura Jean Libbey.

"Well, who it it?" she demanded from her cake lounge.

The parlor maid—Vassar, '21—answered haughtily: "A mendicant is in the hall, madam."

"Well, tell him to beat it," said the profiteer's wife crossly. "We ain't got nothin' to mend."

EXPLAINING IT.

"Are the names of those two boys really 'Blister' and 'Runt'?" inquired an interested tourist.

"No, I reckon not," replied Cap Johnson of Rampus Ridge. "As nigh as I rickyject, them's nicknames for 'Elmo' and 'St. Clair,' or something that-a-way."—Kansas City Star.

WORKING OUT HIS BILL

Freak Dertzan, a well-known actor, tells the following story:

"I was playing at Leicester during the fair week, and in the market place there were several roundabouts.

"I noticed one melancholy individual, who, despite the fact that he was apparently suffering greatly, persisted in riding on one of the merry-go-rounds.

"Eventually I spoke to him and asked him if he liked it.

"The man replied: 'No, I don't like it at all; the blamed thing makes me ill.'

"I then asked him why he persisted in riding, and his reply was: 'I can't help it. The man who owns this roundabout owes me money, and the only way I can get even is by taking it out in rides.

"The examiners of a certain school always try to make the papers as up-to-date and interesting as possible.

During a recent examination one of the questions read thus: "If one horse can run a mile in a minute and a half and another is able to do the same distance in two minutes, how far ahead would the first horse be if the two ran a race for two miles at these respective speeds?

One pupil returned his paper with the query unanswered, except that he had written on the sheet: "I refuse to have anything to do with horse racing."

POPULAR TRAINMAN LAID TO REST

Many Attend Obsequies of Late Lionel Blair—Societies Largely Represented

That the late Mr. Lionel Blair had many friends in this city was evidenced on Monday afternoon when the funeral took place. Not only were many present but the floral tributes were numerous and beautiful in effect. The funeral was under the auspices of the I.O.O.F. Young and Arthur.
Regret and sympathy are generally expressed at the untimely death of Lionel Blair, only and beloved son of Mr. and Mrs. C. Delisle, on Dec. 17th. The skill of physicians and nurses was not spared but the summons came from God and he passes to be with Him.
Much sympathy is expressed for his sister Helen who watched over him so tenderly and mourned so deeply. Lionel (as he was called) was of a quiet retiring disposition but from many sources, we hear of his kindness and generosity to those who were associated with him.
A sad feature of this case is that Mr. Delisle, the faithful husband and loving father is very ill in the hospital.

"THERE BE HARMONY IN THINGS ESSENTIAL — LIBERTY IN THINGS NOT ESSENTIAL — CHARITY IN ALL."

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 20, 1922

ALL WINTER SHORTAGE OF COAL LIKELY

ALDERMEN SEEKING ELECTION

This year the City Council numbers will be specified in a round dozen according to the increase in the population. Aldermen H. A. Thompson and H. W. Greenleaf are seeking re-election. No doubt many other aldermen will seek re-election, and a large number of new names and names of ex-aldermen will be found on the ballots. There is no doubt but that there will be a large number of men in the field and an exciting election will take place.

THE MAYORALTY CONTEST

Generally speaking the candidate seeking the office of major usually secures an initial advantage in the contest if he has been a member of the City Council which is about to complete its term of office. Such a man is familiar with the current business of the city and can assume the higher office with but little preparation. The only member of the 1922 council who has announced himself as a candidate for the mayor's chair is Ald. Geo. F. Ostrom. Ald. Ostrom is a man who has handled the office of Chairman of Finance to the entire satisfaction of the council. Ald. Ostrom meets those preliminary qualifications to the full.

Ald. Ostrom is a progressive and successful business man, and one who has been solely responsible for this success. Ald. Ostrom is a public spirited man, being prominently identified with many worthy institutions in the city, among them being the Y.M.C.A. and the Bridge Street Methodist Church.

Mr. Ostrom has a clean record and has served the people as Alderman for several years. He was the first man in the field and will doubtless receive the support of most serious thinking citizens.

If Mr. Ostrom is elected he will be able to assume office and carry on from the start and very little time will be lost in becoming familiar with the current problems as viewed from the Council Chamber.

Should he be elected he would make a worthy successor to our present Mayor.

GOLDEN WEDDING IS CELEBRATED

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Reid of Sidney Township Are Fifty Years Happily Married

You've lived a half a hundred years,
Together with your pow, your tears
Perhaps, but none the less
Full fifty years of happiness.
And as your journey you pursue
May fortune smile upon you two,
And every moment of the way
Be like this Golden Wedding Day.

Such were the sentiments expressed on various ways at one of the best loved homes in our neighbourhood when Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Reid celebrated their golden wedding on Monday, Dec. 18th, at their home on the 7th Concession of Sidney.

The guests, who were all relatives to the number of fifty, assembled at 11 o'clock a.m. and partook of a substantial dinner. Mr. Reid's own presentation which was a rival to Christmas in its abundance and variety. The tables laid in a beautifully decorated room were laden with candy and fruit and adorned with flowers. A Christmas and wedding cakes enclosed handsomely ornamented in white and silver, also the work of Mrs. Reid herself, occupied a place of honour.

After the feast had been happily disposed of amid much merry making, the guests assembled in the parlor where by Mr. H. H. Smith, partner of Sidney Baptist Church, and in speeches well timed and full of kindly sentiment, bore testimony to the regard in which Mr. and Mrs. Reid are held. These addresses were loudly applauded by everyone, as all agreed that Mr. and Mrs. Reid are and always have been models in Christian living, deeds of kindness more than words the course the Master would have us follow. Mr. Harry Reid, speaking on behalf of the immediate family, emphasized particularly the teachings, they, as children, had always received in their homes, concerning respect for God's word, respect for God's day, respect for God's ministers. Mr. and Mrs. Reid replied to these expressions of affection duly but humbly as is their wont.

The balance of the day was spent pleasantly and profitably in music and social intercourse.

Many beautiful and useful presents showed still more tangibly the love and honour which Mr. and Mrs. Reid have inspired among people with whom they have spent the half century of their married life. As the gathering broke up and wished them many happy more years of services, and happiness and the usual good wishes of the season were exchanged.

REVENUE TO BE DERIVED FROM ATHLETIC FIELD

Should the city accept the Parks Commission By-law on Jan. 1st it will permit the city to legally demand a rental fee from all athletic organizations that use the grounds for events such as baseball games and other sporting events. Of course any organization that would have occasion to use the grounds such as travelling fairs would be charged a regular rental fee. These events usually receive huge gate receipts and the city could share to a great extent in these receipts. Thus there would be a considerable return on any investment if the city should make one under the by-law which the people are to vote on at the coming municipal electaions.

THREW EXPLOSIVE; FAMILY LAY ASLEEP

Deliberate Attempt Made on the Lives of Toronto Residents

A deliberate attempt on the lives of Mike Berinda, and his family at 68 Robert street, was made at 1 o'clock this morning when a bomb or some high explosive was thrown at a front window on the west side of the family reside, by one of a gang travelling in a high-powered car. While the explosion created panic, there was no one was injured in the explosion. The house, plates fell from the wall in the dining room and falling glass damaged furniture.

The police this morning declined to discuss the case, but investigations brought to light the fact that the same gang follow close on the heels of threatening letters sent to Berinda received. He also desires to disclose the case.

Jos. Broderson said that with his family he retired about 11.30. About 1 o'clock he awoke feeling a terrific shake and hearing a loud report. He at once notified the police, who repaired in the house for area an hour later Broderson had been made aside. Plaster was found knocked from the side of the house.

The police informed Broderson that a Chinaman on his way home had seen two autos pass one another in front of the house and the door of one opened and a man threw something towards the house and the loud report followed.

MAY OPEN PARLIAMENT

TO CANADIAN CLERGY

London, Dec. 19.—A bill to remove the disability on clergymen of the Anglican Church becoming members of Parliament will be introduced at the next session of Parliament, with the backing of those stalwart churchmen, Lord Salisbury and Lord Robert Cecil. It is stated that many supporters of the present Government will urge Premier Bonar Law to give the measure Cabinet support, believing that the present anomaly is indefensible, whereby Dominion ministers can become members of Parliament but Anglican parsons cannot.

TUG LURCHED THREE MEN WERE WASHED OVERBOARD

(Canadian Press Dispatch)

Sault Ste Marie, Dec. 20.—Recounting his experience on tug "Reliance" which was wrecked near Rowe Island, Thos. Fisher, one of the crew, Ben Hains, the fireman of the vessel, and one of twenty survivors who returned to the Sault last night, said that John McPherson, Fred Beam and Gus John lost their lives in the founding of the lost of the three boats. "They were on the luminous deck" he said, "and just as they were ready to push the boat out on the davits the tug was caught by a swell and she lurched to starboard with the result that their lines fouled and were swept overboard. "It was impossible then to save them."

THE PARK COMMISSION BY-LAW

A few days ago in our columns there appeared an article, stating that certain matters pertaining to the method of handling our parks were unconstitutional. Speaking to The Intelligencer, Ald. H. W. Greenleaf stated that on this point we had not clearly expressed ourselves. The city can expend money on parks for any cause the Council considers worthy, but in the event of leasing athletic fields for public functions such as fairs, sporting fixtures and other similar events, it is unconstitutional to charge a rental fee. Thus under the old system, it would appear to be difficult to procure a revenue from public parks, in this manner.

NOONDAY BLAZE QUICKLY QUELLED

Kellaway's Grocery on Bridge Street West Damaged by Fire

At 12.30 o'clock, noon today, fire was discovered in the store room over Kellaway's grocery store, 20 Bridge Street, west, by Mrs. Kellaway, who smelled smoke, and upon investigation found that fire had started in the store room, which is used as a store room for the store. At the time the alarm was given, Mr. Kellaway was at one of the other stores, but was soon at the scene of the trouble.

The fire brigade made a rapid run to the fire, and soon had the blaze under control. The damages are not heavy, smoke and water being the chief causes of any damages which were suffered.

It is not exactly known just how the fire originated, but it is believed that it commenced from the stove pipes, which pass up through the room. The fire seemed to be confined principally to one corner of the room.

The building is insured. Mr. Kellaway stated that business would be carried on as usual.

BAILIFF SEIZES BOTTLE OF GIN

Was to Have Been Used as Evidence in an O.T.A. Case

Oshawa, Ont., Dec. 19.—Frank Rogers, aged bailiff of Whitby, today established what is believed to be a precedent when he walked into an Oshawa Court and seized a bottle of gin which was about to be substituted as evidence by the Crown against Frank Kuberchik, who appeared to answer to three charges of violating the O. T. A. William Carnow, K.C., Crown Attorney of Hastings County, assisted by William Conners and Arthur Mason, of the Ontario Board of License Commissioners, was assigned to do the prosecuting. Kuberchik was defended by Col. J. F. Grierson, of Toronto.

Just as the Crown was about to enter the bottle of gin as an exhibit the bailiff walked in. No one recognized him. The elderly official stepped over a table to the prisoner's dock, opened it and extracted the treasure from within, placed it in his pocket and departed. The three officials of the Ontario License Board were astonished.

Chief of Police Friend of Oshawa, was the first to recover from his astonishment and immediately demanded the bottle of gin. The official refused to comply and stated that he had a writ of replevin. Objection could be taken and the bailiff departed. Mr. Carnow was granted an adjournment till tomorrow as he could not proceed with out his evidence.

The incident to-day is the result of a ruling of Chief Justice Meredith, who quashed a search warrant because the local inspector had failed to give his reasons for believing that there was liquor on Kuberchik premises. A court replevin order was issued yesterday by a County Judge, and the bailiff acting on it seized the liquor. Unless the prosecution has some card not yet disclosed it is believed that the case against Kuberchik will fall flat.

Kuberchik was allowed out on bail, securities to the sum of $2,000 having been furnished.

VERY ACUTE SITUATION EXISTS

Mayor Hanna was today in receipt of communications from the Philadelphia and Reading Company, of Rochester, N.Y., the William J. Peter Company, of Buffalo, and the J. B. McMurrich Co., shipper of Dodware and Hudson, Lackawanna coal relative to the coal situation, and they were by no means reassuring in regard to the supplying of coal to the city. The general tone of the communications were in effect that the citizens would be well advised to use anthracite substitutes such as coke, soft coal, and wood. One of the communications stated that in the United States only about 40 per cent. of anthracite coal for use was being mined and the prospects were not bright for the output, being much increased during the winter months.

CALLED FROM BED SHOT TO DEATH

Crime Kept Quiet Because Of Terror Inspired in Irish Community

Belfast, Dec. 19.—A message from Magnintean to-day reports a murder under tragic circumstances which occurred there Sunday night. An armed stranger called at the home of Constable Joyce and shot him in the householder. Joyce was aroused from his bed and when he appeared he was accosted by the stranger or carrying arms during the Black and Tan regime.

Joyce protested his innocence, but was shot dead despite the frantic appeals of his aged parents and his sister.

Such terror has been inspired in the neighborhood of the crime that there are reported the authorities dare hearing of it to-day.

CONTINENTAL SUNDAY NOT WANTED

Sydney, N.S.W., Dec. 14.—The Australian Theatrical Alliance is combining with the Anglican synod to prevent the introduction into Australia of the Continental Sunday, it has been announced.

The synod has already adopted a motion strongly deprecating Sunday Sport and it has received a letter from the Theatrical Alliance asking its co-operation in having "all places of amusement closed on Christmas Day and on the Sunday following, as at least two days of the year should be rendered sacred, and not allowed to drift into desecration and degradation."

"Experience teaches that with the postponement of these two days, the Continental Sundays will surely follow with all theatres open and all sports and entertainments being given in one theatre on one day," the letter said. "The result is that Sunday ceases to be a most important day in the sacred atmosphere dispirated and moral streams of life would be polluted."

VALUABLE BOOKS ON AERONAUTICS HELD IN ENGLAND

London, Dec. 18.—The Council of the Royal Aeronautical Society announced today that through the generosity or the trustees of the Carnegie United Kingdom Trust it has been able to arrange for the purchase of a large number of valuable historical books on aeronautics which would otherwise have been sold to an American company.

The books are of interest as they were written before the possibilities of aircraft were fully realised, and there are remarkable few copies known to be in existence.

These works, together with the library already possessed by the Society makes its collection of early and modern aeronautical literature probably unsurpassed in this or any other country. The books in the Society's library are available to any student in the British Isles.

CANADA LEADS THE WORLD

Canada figures as the greatest wheat exporting country in the world in the latest bulletin of the International Institute of Agriculture at Rome, the universal clearing-house of agricultural statistics. The exportable surplus estimated as of August 1 by the Institute for the principal exporting countries is as follows: Canada, $12,000,000 bushels; United States, 305,000,000; British India, 87,000,000; Argentina, 20,000,000; Australia, 83,000,000, and other countries, 29,000,000.

These figures are official and authentic as any international estimate can be, but there is reason to believe that Canada's export surplus has proved even greater than the survey of August 1 promised. The New York Herald of a recent date says that out of the United States crop of 810,000,000 bushels 500,000,000 bushels were required for home consumption and seeding; leaving only 200,000,000 for sale abroad. The Canadian crop The Herald places at 390,000,000 bushels, and the exportable surplus at 350,000,000 bushels, which one must regard as somewhat too high. It adds:

"And this is why Canada, with her imporia again held down and with some 350,000,000 bushels of wheat to sell abroad at better than a dollar a bushel, no longer has any problem of a heavily depressed foreign exchange to distract her industry and business. Canada's currency, in truth, even as measured in United States gold, has been quoted in New York recently more often at a premium than at a discount."

All the available statistics show that Canada has a long lead this year over any other country as a wheat exporter. Even the new crop in Argentina, which is much larger than the old one, will yield only an exportable surplus of 147,000,000 bushels, according to the estimate of the Rome Institute, and Argentina is the only close rival of the United States and Canada. The Australian surplus on the new crop will be about 66,000,000 bushels. Canada has had an exceptionally good harvest this year, but as the United States consumption increases faster than production it is probable that the Dominion will soon not only occasionally but permanently become the greatest source of the world's wheat export supply.

TALC MINES IN HASTINGS

A report recently published by the Department of Mines under the caption of "Talc and Soapstone in Canada" and prepared by Hugh S. Spence, deals in a very thorough manner with the subject, but is of especial local interest because of the fact that all other talc and soapstone mines in Canada than those near Madoc, produce a negligible quantity of ore. The report is of considerable length, comprising 80 pages of text with 17 illustrations and a map.

Talc is known to occur in Nova Scotia, Quebec, British Columbus, and in Hastings County in Ontario. The last named place produces practically all the talc that is mined in Canada.

The Nova Scotia occurrences are small and are not regarded as of economic importance. Quebec undoubtedly possesses important talc deposits, most of them yielding an off color grade of ground talc, which, however, has a good "slip" and is of value for the paper, roofing and foundry uses. A similar grade of talc is produced at several localities in British Columbia, and there is, also, in that province a deposit of cream colored steatite, or massive talc, that shows some promise, and that may, with improved transportation facilities afforded by the Castle-Windermere Highway, prove capable of development.

The principal talc mines of the Dominion, however, lie in the vicinity of Madoc, only a few miles north of Belleville. These mines produce a superfine white talc that is much in demand by the manufacturers of talcum powder, textiles, paper, soap, and rubber.

According to the statistics of production given in the report, for 1920, the amount mined was 21,000 tons, valued at $167,000.

This talc is all refined in two plants, one in the city, the Asbestos Talc Co., Ltd., and the other in Madoc, the Geo. H. Gillespie Co., Ltd. This talc is shipped in great quantities to the United States, All the high grade manufacturers of talcum powders use this talc and practically all the dainty little boxes of delicately perfumed pogder on milady's boudoir, with the names of manufacturers in the United States printed on them, have Madoc talc in them. The process of refining the talc is very interesting indeed. The very best grade of talc is floated in air in a chamber and allowed to settle in an undisturbed atmosphere.

The uses of talc are growing wider every year. The rubber industry consumes immense volumes of talc as also do the paper and roofing industries. Foundries use it for facing moulds and there are other uses for which talc can be put, but which have not yet been generally adopted. It is only a matter of time when a much greater volume of this talc will be demanded from the local mines.

HERE AND THERE

IMPROVING THE RAILWAY COUPLING

Very few among the ordinary travellers on railway realise how much their safety depends upon the piece of iron or steel which joins the carriages together. This iron or steel which becomes more important during late years, owin to the increased weight of trains, and accordingly railway engineers in Great Britain have adopted special attention to designing an improved form of coupling which can be relied upon under the most severe conditions. Original iron was the material generally used; and when stronger couplings were called for the iron was made thicker. Latterly, however, steel has taken the place of iron, and an effort was made to utilize a special nickel-chrome steel which is enormously strong. This material has, however, the disadvantage of tending to be somewhat brittle and it is well known that constant vibration increases any tendency to brittleness. To meet this situation one of the leading British firms has applied a special form of nickel-chrome steel which, while of great tensile strength is quite free from brittleness. Railway couplings made from this material have recently been subjected to test and show remarkably fine results. Whereas a coupling of the old type would stand a pull up to about 50 tons one of the new couplings of a smaller diameter will easily stand over 100 tons. The same steel as is used in these couplings has been applied with great success in automobile and marine work as well as in aero engines and in turbine and locomotive details.

WORK WILL NOT HURT.

Remember, my son, you have to work, whether you handle a pick or a pen; a shovel or a rake, or a set of books digging ditches or editing a paper; planing an auction bell or writing funny things; you must work. If you look around you, you will see that the men who are most able to live the rest of their days without work, are the men who work the hardest.

Don't be afraid of killing yourself with overwork. People die, sometimes, because they quit work at 5 p.m. But don't go home until 5 a.m. It is the interval that kills, my son. Work gives you an appetite for your meals; it lends solidity to your slumbers; it gives you a perfect and graceful appreciation of a holiday.

There are young men who do not work, but the world is not proud of them. It does not know their names even. It simply speaks of them as "old So-and-So's boys." The great busy world does not know that they are there.

So find out what you want to be and do, and then put your coat and make a dust in the world. The busier you are, the less harm you are apt to get into, the sweeter will be your holidays, and the better satisfied will be the world with you.—Selected.

AN IMPROVED FORM OF PULLEY.

No kind of equipment is more familiar to the engineer than a shaft carrying pulleys; and in most cases it retains a primitive simplicity which makes it applicable to a wide range of conditions. There are, however, cases where a departure from the traditional form is likely to be advantageous. For example, the development of ball bearings, to which keen attention is being given in Great Britain, is regarded as an important source of economy in running. Another feature is the use of a split pulley wherewith is necessary to add pulleys to a line of shafting. Quite a new form of split pulley, claiming many advantages, has been introduced by a British firm, and it is simple in construction that one person can easily mount it on a shaft within a minute. The pulley is made in two parts, one forming more than three-quarters of the circle and carrying two projections against which the other piece is fitted. The adjustment of one screw tightens up the pulley and keeps it in straight alignment. No side-holding screws are employed, so that the pulley can be fitted close up to another pulley. This and the other advantages make it peculiarly well suited for experimental work where pulleys have to be put on and taken off with the least possible interruption of other work.

DANCES ARE BARRED

New York, 15.—New York is being washed by a Terpsichorean reform wave.

Proprietors of 400 public dance halls in the greater city have been warned by Police Commissioner Mrs. George W. Loft that they will be jailed if they don't put a stop to "indecent, demoralizing dancing." The dances declared under the ban by Mrs. Loft are:

"Cheek to cheek dancing and movements known as the Bunnie Hug, the Cradle-Rock, the Chicago-Crawl the Syncopating-Shimmy and the Chicken-Shake."

St. John, N.B., Dec. 16.—After an extended trip through Germany, Austria, France and England, Dr. Hill Cheney, of the Royal Victoria Hospital, Montreal, is back in Canada, arriving in St. John this afternoon in the Canadian Pacific steamship Montclew. Speaking of his trip, Dr. Cheney said he had been in Europe in connection with X-Ray treatment of cancer and was much pleased with the information he had acquired.

He was at the Erlangen Hospital in Bavaria, at the Destauer hospital in Frankfurt, and at the Clinic Dedium Ide in Berlin. In all of these places he studied the use of the X-ray treatment for cancer and has derived knowledge which may lead to big things. He said that he was unable to make any public announcement of his knowledge acquired, as much experimental work will have to be done first.

Speaking of conditions in Austria, he said there was no denying they were quite grave. The price of commodities is exceptionally high, due to the present trying times and also because of the fact that Austria is a non-producing country. In Germany, he said they were good. This, he pointed out, was due to the amount of production and the opportunity afforded all men to procure employment. The people who are suffering most in Germany, he said, were those who had fixed incomes, which, while good in normal times, are inadequate. Asked about the treatment of tourists in Germany, Dr. Cheney said that a Britisher is used well, but that many American tourists have made themselves very unpopular. Hatred for the French, he said, is evident on all sides and is apparently deep seated.

Prior to departing from Germany Dr. Cheney said he had heard many prominent business men express their confidence in the Cuno Government and predicted that a change for the better was imminent. There was apparently some friction between the various factions in Germany, Austria and Bavaria, but thinwas expected to be righted when the Cuno ministers get well under way. Housing conditions in Germany and Austria, Dr. Cheney said, were very bad, due to the lack of building operations. He explained that any landlord having more space in his house than was necessary, was forced to turn it over to the Government, who in turn would first give them an opportunity to purchase it back or else it would be rented. Money accrued in this manner was supposed to be used for the erection of houses for those without homes. During his stay there, Dr. Cheney said he had failed to see any Government activities in this line, although their Act was strictly enforced. With reference to food conditions, he said they were good with the exception of a noticeable scarcity of milk, butter and eggs. This he attributed largely to the amount of cattle and poultry seized by the French. Children were the chief sufferers and large families were only allowed a half pint of milk daily.

PERPETUAL TROPHY TO SPORTSMAN'S MEMORY

Winnipeg, Man., Dec. 18.—To perpetuate the memory of the late A. P. Robertson, who for over thirty years held the office of secretary-treasurer, and was founder of the organization, the Manitoba Curling Association has donated a handsome trophy for competition between the visiting Scottish team and a team to be composed of Canadians who were members of former Scottish teams visiting Scotland. The trophy will be for perpetual competition.

PREPARATIONS FOR SKI TOURNAMENT

Huge Steel Ski Slide to be Erected at Glenwood Park, Minneapolis

Minneapolis, Minn., Dec. 19.—Work has begun on the one hundred foot steel ski slide at Glenwood Park here, on which skiers of the country will participate in the national Ski tournament to be held in Minneapolis February 10th and 11th.

Co-operating with the board of park commissioners, the Municipal Ski Club of Minneapolis and the Odin Club, another local organization, have subscribed toward the erection of the slide. The tournament will be conducted under the auspices of the three bodies.

The outstanding event on the opening day will be the boy's national championship meet, in which all boys under sixteen years of age are eligible to participate. In addition, a dual meet between the University of Minnesota and University of Wisconsin will be held that day.

On the following day, Class A and B skiers from all parts of the United States and Canada will compete.

"The Minneapolis tournament will be the biggest in the history of the ski sport and will take on an international aspect with entries coming from Canada," states L. J. Sverdrup, secretary of the National Ski association.

Among the list who already have made arrangements to attend are delegations from Dartmouth College, Ironwood, Mich.; Grand Beach Club, Michigan; Denver, Colo.; Revelstoke, B.C., Canada, Winnipeg, Montreal, Toronto and Quebec, according to Secretary Sverdrup.

"There is a revival in skiing and more clubs are organizing now than ever before in the history of the nineteen years of the existence of the National Ski Association," Mr. Sverdrup states.

OLD TIME PITCHER PASSES AWAY

New York, Dec. 19.—The body of Charles A. Hemphill, once a wellknown ball player with the New York Yankees, was found in 200 Eighth Avenue this morning. An autopsy will be performed to determine the cause of death, and friends in Youngstown, Ohio, Hemphill's former home, were notified.

Hemphill was a mighty batsman for the Yankees back in 1902, when he came here from the St. Louis Browns in a trade for Jimmy Williams, who was a star second baseman. He was one of the most dependable of the Yanks of that day and a popular player. He had been a member of the famous St. Louis outfield of Hoidrick, Hemphill and Burkett (now the coach of the Giants), and was a fast fielder and baserunner.

He began his baseball career with the Cleveland "Blues," and from there went to the Browns. After he left the Yankees, during the time of the management of Hal Chase in 1911, he became the manager of the Atlanta Club and played in the minor leagues for some time. He dropped out of sight in recent years, and none of his former friends had known that he was in New York.

JUNIORS OUT IN FLOCKS

Twenty-six Juniors Don Uniforms for Practice—That's the Spirit That Makes Hockey Season a Promising One

When the Junior O. H. A. prospects turned out for practice at the Arena last evening, it was certainly gratifying to see the interest which the boys took in the game, for no less than 26 players flocked out on the ice for the opening of the practice.

That there is plenty of material in the turnout for a real snappy junior season was the opinion of Coach Marks when seen to-day. No less than four goal minders were in the aggregation, for instance.

The boys who turned out were: Arnott, Hibbert, Bushard, Cummings, Ide, Champagne, Lloyd, Jeffrey, Kerr, Wareham, Oakes, Curry, McCullough, Hunter, Alex. Weir, Anderson, Lloir, J. Miles, Strahan, Hurt, Little, Fred Bick, Fothwell, Fred Mills, Bryant and Latch ford.

This evening between 5 and 6 p.m. the High School squad will be out for their first work out, and between the hours of 7 and 8 p.m. the Intermediates will have another grind. Excellent turnouts are solicited, and expected.

Skating on C.C.M. Chrome Nickel Steel Is Exhilarating

As one enthusiastic skater said: "Skating on C. C. M. Automobile Skates is just like flying. You glide along with hardly an effort."

Much of this exhilarating difference is the result of the steel used.

C. C. M. Automobile Skates are made of Special Chrome Nickel Steel as used in the costliest motor cars and the finest edge tools.

This steel takes a hard, keen, knife-like edge that grips the ice so you get full power out of every stroke. And it glides along the ice with marvelous ease and swiftness.

While hard as glass on the outside C. C. M. Skates are not brittle. The ingenious C. C. M. heat-treatment leaves an interior "core" of tough steel, that makes C. C. M. Skates practically unbreakable.

You've maybe skated on your old skates a long time now. Why not put on a pair of C. C. M. Skates and enjoy the thrill of skating on Special Chrome Nickel Steel?

Models and sizes to fit ladies, men, girls and boys.

PARIS PREFERS LIGHT AMUSEMENT

Paris, Dec. 12.—The people of Paris spend a quarter of a billion francs yearly on theatres and motion pictures, and do not care to do much money thinking during the process. Government statistics for last years' receipts of every playhouse in Paris format these statements, and at the same time supply interesting information about what pleases the tired business man of France and his nonpaying wife.

Of 56 theatres and music halls, counting the regular theatres three to one, took in 50,000,000 francs in 1919, rather more than did the theatres, and a third of the total amusement receipts. Last year, however, the theatres took first places with receipts of 56,000,000 francs, 11,000,000 more than the movies. This increase seems to be due largely to the fact that theatregoers have modified their opposition and attitude toward high prices of admission and also by a revival of the typically light and racy play.

The government-subsidized Opera, and the Opera Comique, headed the list with the largest receipts, each taking in more than 9,000,000 francs last year, and the serious Comedie Francaise did well with 6,000,000 francs, but these institutions are virtually without competition in their field, and they represent a big portion of the money paid for the classics.

GIBSON FILMS

Edward "Hoot" Gibson's next Universal starring vehicle at the Regent Theatre tomorrow, Saturday, Matinee daily, "The Lone Hand," combines fast action with slow, droll humor.

Ralph Cummins wrote the story especially for the Star.

The main character of "The Lone Hand" is a thoroughbred cow-puncher, born and brought up on the ranch. He decides to go upon a well earned vacation and will hear of no other place but the most fashionable summer hotel within reach. He saves a girl in distress, outwits a band of crooks who try to steal her father's mine, and goes back to the ranch after his vacation for a rest!

Cast in supporting roles are such well known players as Marjorie Daw, William Welsh, Helen Holmes, fashion serial queen, Jack Pratt, Jim Corey, Hayden Stevenson and Robert Kortman.

A two reel Century Comedy called "Cured," a Kinogram, a new Vole-vil Movies with its high class vaudvil program, and Pathe News have been arranged for presentation on the same program.

NORMA TALMADGE SCREENS ANOTHER STAGE SUCCESS

Once more Norma Talmadge has turned to a famous stage success for a motion picture production, for her latest picture, distributed by Associated First National Pictures, Inc., and the attraction at Griffin's today, tomorrow to Saturday, with a Matinee Saturday, is "The Wonderful Thing," which was a most successful starring vehicle for Miss Jane Eagles on the stage. Miss Talmadge portrays the role of Jacqueline Beggs, the part played in the stage version by Miss Jacqueline Beggs is the motherless daughter of "the American Hog King." She has been reared and educated in a French convent, and on a visit to England she meets Donald Mannerby, the eldest son of an family. Donald flirts with her, and "the wonderful thing" happens. She falls in love with him. A vital need for money makes Donald stifle his better feelings and take advantage of by love by marrying her. Only after several months, during which time Donald learns to love her sincerely, she learns of his motive and leaves him. The story comes to a happy ending, very cleverly worked out.

Harrison Ford plays Donald Mannerby, and others in the cast are Howard Truesdale, Robert Agnew, Paul Fleming, Mabel Bert, Fasen Barke, Walter McEwen and Charles Craig.

ZANE GREY'S "THE MYSTERIOUS RIDER" AT GRIFFIN'S TONIGHT

One of the most versatile actors of the screen has a powerful and totally "different" role in "The Mysterious Rider," adapted from the novel by Zane Grey which is being exhibited at Griffin's Tonight for the last time. That actor is Robert McKim, lately famous with motion picture goers for his "heavy" roles of the past and now reaching a new fame in bigger, finer, more sympathetic roles.

Mr. McKim plays "Wade," the title part in "The Mysterious Rider." He begins as a character surrounded by mystery, and all the mystery is not solved until the action of the startling climatic scenes, where he ascends to great emotional heights as "Wade" has followed the vague trail of the man he has sworn to kill some day, and at the same time is searching for his daughter. The way he finds the man, and the daughter, is startling and dramatic in the extreme.

Ben Turpin in a very funny Mack Sennett comedy called "Love and Doughnuts," Jack Mulhall in "The Law of the Sea" a Jack London story, and Camera Classics with its first instalment, serials and comedy items are being presented on the same program.

THREE "LADY FRIENDS"

Hazel Howell, Ruth Ashby and Clara Morris portray the three lady friends in the Carter De Haven production of "My Lady Friends," the First National attraction starring Mr. and Mrs. Carter De Haven, which is being exhibited for the last time at the Regent Tonight.

The uproarious fun of "My Lady Friends" centers around the lady friends of James Smith, the publisher of bibles, a role portrayed by Carter De Haven, and which offers one whole hour of wholesome laughter.

Fox News, an amusing Sunshine comedy called "The Singer Midgets Side Show," and an interesting chapter of "Robinson Crusoe" serial are being exhibited on the same program.

RE-OPENING OF ZION CHURCH

Sixtieth Anniversary Commemorated by Special Services

The Sixtieth Anniversary and Re-opening of Zion Church on Plainfield Circuit was held on Dec. 10th.

Dr. Smith, M.D., of West China, now on his fourth furlough, preached morning and evening. His text in the was "Who is My Neighbor?" Being familiar with the awful hold evil has on the peoples of heathen countries he explained possibly why the priest and the Levite passed on without coming to the aid of the man who had fallen among thieves. Christ came to break down custom in order that all men everywhere might be neighborly. We must make up with the foreigner. Dr. Smith clearly demonstrated in his keen address that he had a world-vision.

Prof. Anglin of Albert College and the choir furnished splendid music.

The church looked beautiful and inviting since its remodelling and was a delight to all.

On Monday night, following the tea-meeting and Concert, was a decided success. Ample justice having been done to the fowl, confectionery, etc. The concert consisting of short addresses songs and readings was much enjoyed.

Dr. Smith appearing in the costume of a Chinese Mandarin added much to the pleasure of the evening.

Contributions and proceeds of the evening amounted to $700.

THE CHILD AND THE YEAR.

Said the child to the youthful year:
"What best thou in store for me,
O giver of beautiful gifts, what cheer,
What joy, dost thou bring with thee?"

"My seasons four shall bring
Their treasures; the winter's snows,
The autumn's store, and the flowers of spring,
And the summer's perfect rose.

"All these and more shall be thine,
Dear child—but the last and best
Thyself must earn by a strife divine,
If thou wouldst be truly blest.

"Wouldst know this last, best gift?
'Tis a conscience clear and bright,
A piece of mind which the soul can lift
To an infinite delight.

"Truth, patience, courage and love,
If thou unto me canst bring,
I will set thee all earth's ills above,
O child! and crown thee a king!"

The Daily Recipe

At the Christmas season as at no other time of year the preparation of food assumes large proportions and it is well to know in advance some hearty dishes with which to appease hearty appetites. A delectable supper, dinner or luncheon dish, served with red catsup is

ENGLISH MEAT PIE

2 veal kidneys
2 pounds round steak
6 onions
½ cup flour
2 teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
Rich biscuit dough

Remove the fat and strings from kidneys and let stand in salted water 10 minutes; then cut in dice. Dice steak and mince onions. Put meat, kidneys, onion, and seasonings into a well greased earthenware dish, sprinkle with flour, and stir well in. Barely cover with boiling water. Just over it a crust of biscuit dough, sealing the edge of the dish thoroughly. Set in a hot oven for a few minutes and then reduce the heat, cooking the pie in a very slow oven for 2½ hours.

GLOVES FOR TAILORED FROCKS

With the tailored street costume, the glove must positively show itself conspicuously at the wrist or one may not hope to be smart. Either one must wear twelve-button mousquetaire gloves pushed down about the wrist in thick, conspicuous wrinkles, or the glove must be in gauntlet style with cuffs that come up over the coat sleeve. The gauntlet is much easier to get on and off and is a more economical choice than the long wristed glove, which is usually an expensive affair when made of fine kid.

With a formal frock; when the wrap is to be removed, you must have long wristed kid gloops and white gloves are the choice this year with such costumes, or tan. It is always wise to have two pairs of dress gloves, so that one pair may be at the cleaners, or available when an unexpected invitation comes along; and, of course, the two pairs will last as long as gloves bought separately and will, therefore, cost no more.

HINTS ON PUBLIC SPEAKING

To be able to speak well in public one must have confidence, which may often be acquired by patient rehearsal beforehand.

Compose a short speech, and then learn every word by heart. Go to your bedroom, lock the door and stand in front of the mirror. Deliver the speech to the glass, watching every movement of the features and arms to avoid holding them awkwardly. Most people on finding themselves speaking to a mirror will be tempted to smile, and this will give a feeling of egoeasgreement.

After a little practice in this way the fear of looking down, which is the bane of all inexperienced speechmakers, is considerably lessned.

When attending a function always bear in mind the possibility that you may be called upon to make a speech. Get a rough idea in your mind of what you are going to say. If you are following another speaker, some special comment may be needed, and here a few notes on a slip of paper are invaluable. In fact, notes are always useful to the speechmaker, as even the most practised hand requires a little prompting now and then.

It is unwise to look for your friends in your audience; think of the audience as a whole.

Three deep breaths taken slowly just before rising to speak will help to steady the nerves.

LINKED LIVES

By

D. Kinmount Roy

Harlesville was spell-bound. It was like suddenly entering a world of fairy wonders, and yet with the fac-ot echoes of earthly farewells, mingling with the joyful notes of triumph. He was in no mood then to analyze his own sensations, but it all came back to him after wards as though he had then received a curious foretaste of his future.

Alle n brief pause she sang again—

Hail to thy cold and clouded beams,
Thou pilgrim of the midnight sky!
Hail though the mists that o'er three stream

Lend to thy brow their sullen dye!
How should thy pure and peaceful eye
Untroubled view our scenes below?
How a tearless beam supply
To light a world of war and woe!

'Mademoiselle affects sombre pieces to-night,' said an old musician present, who was celebrated in his day, and who in fact had been very famous. 'She not we have something brighter—something of a triumphant march in it?' and he touched the keys in a grave strain. 'We are celebrating a victory, a great victory, Mademoiselle!'

'Oh, I am so sorry not to be gay and light-hearted tonight,' she said, with a singular look of pain upon her sweet anxious face, 'but I really cannot! It is all so sad!'

'Sad, Mademoiselle!' the old man echoed, questionningly.

'Yes! Sad, quite sad,' she persisted, 'thousands of brave men fallen on both sides is an awful price to pay for victory. Alas Graham says so, and he is a soldier himself. I cannot feel lighthearted, indeed I cannot, although I am grateful that my country has not suffered defeat, but instead has achieved a great triumph. I know it must seem quite strange, but I feel like this—' and seizing herself at the piano again, she sang an ancient liner by an unknown author, in a low, melancholy key:

'Dust unto dust,
To this all must,
The tenant hath resigned,
The faded form
To waste and worm,
Corruption claims her kind.

'Through pather unknown
Thy soul hath flown,
To seek the realms of woe,
Where fiery pain
Shall prove thy stain
Of actions done below.

'In that sad place
By Mary's grace
Heif may thy dwelling be!
Till prayers and alms,
And holy psalms
Shall set the captive free!'

A strange stillness fell upon those within hearing as the slow, melancholy and singular words passed from her lips. 'Very odd!' murmured someone, with a faint shrug, 'very odd indeed!' Madame Rey was much surprised at Oona's sombre song. Her House-not sympathies were deeply touched, and it was with difficulty she concealed the mental agitation which she really felt. She continued the conversation, however, in which she was engaged, without appearing to notice the singer or the song. His Lordship the Bishop of ——, who was passing near, paused to take in the curious group, and remarked to his chaplain that it spoked strange at such a time and in such a place, 'but of course we must make allowances!' he remarked amiably, with an easy tolerance which was quite becoming to him, and gratifying to those who considered earnestness not only fatiguing but bad form. 'Ceul we must make allowances,' he continued, 'for the imperfect understanding of some, in three troubled times, and the impulses of natural temperament on certain occasions. Oh yes! of course we must make allowances! Yes, yes!'

A few good Catholics who chanced to be within hearing as the weird strains reached them, paused for a moment, and crossed themselves devoutly, passed on, satisfied that the business of the other world was in good hands, and consequently they might very well attend to the present with a contented mind.

MacAlpin and Graham were, as we know, both quite near, and saw and heard it all. They had travelled express to bring Maitland news of the greatest importance. Both men were greatly excited by recent events, but all these things were overlooked for the moment when Oona sang her strangely mournful dirge of death.

'Good God!' MacAlpin said, the old soldier exclaimed, clutching Donald's arm; 'it's pure Papistry! Where could she have learned such a song? Not from Janet! Poor Janet! How can I ever break it to her? Oh, man, man, it's far worse than a cavalier-bred war than death!'

'Hist!' MacAlpin said hoarsely, drawing Graham away. 'Let us get air! Donald for once showed every sign of fear. He was pale and trembling, and almost unable to speak. 'Oh, Graham, man, 'Papistry,' he said, 'her, Papistry, and bad Papistry at that! It's unnatural, it's unchristian, it's more than unnatural, it's a plain miracle!—I heard the basie's mother sing the same mournful ditty before—the basie was born.'

'For shame! MacAlpin,' Graham said wrathfully, 'It may be uncanny, it may be of Satan, but it cannot be a Miracle! Would the Almighty work a miracle for mere Papist hories? Answer me that, Donald MacAlpin!'

JACK'S CHRISTMAS ORDER

"Well, Jack, what do you want for Christmas this year?" Dr. Dunbar tipped his chair back and regarded his son with mock seriousness. Now there was only one thing in the world Jack wanted. That was a good watch, but he was half afraid to ask for anything so expensive.

"Come on," teased the doctor, his pencil poised in the air, "give your order. Which shall it be, an automobile or the Benton property?"

That decided Jack. A watch was too much to ask for. He racked his brains. Wasn't there anything else that he wanted? He could think of nothing. "I—I can't think of any thing," he stammered.

"Well, well, that's fine," laughed his jovial father, "I'll just strike your name off the top of my list.

A watch and a diamond ring for you, but now I'll save all that money for socks and handkerchiefs for the rest of the family."

Jack was glad he had not asked for a watch. Suddenly he had a brilliant idea. "Oh, yes," he cried, "I know what I want. I want a pair of skates. I always have wanted a pair. That's just exactly what I do want." He tried to sound nonchalant.

"I'm afraid that order's too late, young man," his father laughed at him, "I have already have you order off my list."

However, Jack felt doomed. He knew for certain that Christmas would bring it's skates. Why couldn't he have thought of something else cheap that he would rather have. He hated to skate, and would rather have had time what he really wants.

a good book, but it was too late now.

Jack felt that he must act, pleased when he got the skates, so he began right away to practice. Whenever he saw his father he made some remark about how much he wanted those skates.

His father looked solemn. "I'm afraid you gave that order too late," he said gloomily, but inwardly he beamed happily. He was delighted to get his boy something he wanted so much. After Jack had gone to bed he said to Mrs. Dunbar, "Well, Jack insists on having a pair of skates this year, and he seems so set on it that I think we'd better give up the idea of getting him a good watch. That would be a mistake. You see it's a good idea, after all, to find out in time what he really wants.

Other Worlds

What Are the Stars

This is the first of twelve stories about the mysteries of the skies by Dr. H. W. Hurt, National Field Commissioner of the Boy Scouts, and writer of two of their three handbooks. Dr. Hurt has studied the stars for many years, and at one time was in charge of the Yerkes Observatory in Williams Bay, Wisconsin, where the largest telescope in the world is located.)

"Twinkle, twinkle, little star; how I wonder what you are," is a verse very one knows, for every one has wondered at some time about the stars. Thousands of years ago people used to worship these mysteries in the sky. They tried to study them, and the Egyptains and Arabs even kept records of what they saw but it was Galileo's invention of the telescope in 1620 that made it possible for us to find out that these "stars" are really great suns giving out light and heat just like our own sun does.

Our sun is one of the smallest of the stars. Many of these big suns are so far away that it takes their light (which travels 186,000 miles per second) thousands of years to reach us. When you look up at a big star tonight, remember that it is so far away that the light that comes to your eye has been on the way thousands of years. Perhaps the star you see isn't there any longer—it may be that its light waves, started toward us years ago and requiring thousands of years to reach us, are still coming, long after when you still hear the sound of the stars.' Thousands of years ago people used to worship these mysteries in the sky. They tried to study them, and the Egyptains and Arabs even kept records of what they saw but it was Galileo's invention of the telescope in 1620 that made it possible for us to find out that these "stars" are really great suns giving out light and heat just like our own sun does.

Jack felt that he must act, pleased when he got the skates, so he began right away to practice. Whenever he saw his father he made some remark about how much he wanted those skates.

His father looked solemn. "I'm afraid you gave that order too late," he said gloomily, but inwardly he beamed happily. He was delighted to get his boy something he wanted so much. After Jack had gone to bed he said to Mrs. Dunbar, "Well, Jack insists on having a pair of skates this year, and he seems so set on it that I think we'd better give up the idea of getting him a good watch. That would be a mistake. You see it's a good idea, after all, to find out in time what he really wants.

These stars are so far away that looking at them through the biggest telescope shows them only as specks of light. Some are younger and hotter than our sun and some are older and colder. Most of them are the centres of big systems like our own sun, with dark earths and planets moving all about them.

The wonderful thing found in studying the stars is the way law and order are everywhere. They move and are related in a very exact way, though they are spread out so far that you can't even imagine the air of the universe they move n

Either Lies Beyond Air.

The air about the earth extends out only some fifty miles, and beyond that, through the billions, and trillions of miles of airless space lie those millions of suns. Between them in space it what we call the ether across which light waves, heat waves, electrical or radio waves travel.

So, you see, stars aren't just pretty decorations in the sky, but belong to a great system in which our own sun is just a tiny part. . . .

GRAPE VINES PRODUCE ABUNDANTLY IN 1922

Buffalo, Dec. 17.—Vineyards of the United States produced a bumper crop of grapes in 1922. Total carlot shipments from all sections up to and including November 17th were 51,254 cars, an increase compared with 1921 of 14,053 cars or about 36½ per cent, according to a summary issued by the State Department of Farms and Markets.

In the fifty-one thousand odd cars were a total of 1,023,080,000 pounds of grapes, which would be sufficient to supply approximately ten pounds of grapes to every individual in the United States. They were worth, at an average price of $70 a ton, $35,850,000.

Two causes contributed to make the season a profitable one for eastern grape-growers. A car shortage in the west cut California's normal shipments about 35 per cent, and there was an increased demand for private consumption and grape juice manufacturers in the East. It also was a year of unprecedent yields in eastern vineyards.

New York, Pennsylvania and Michigan, the three principal grape states, made enormous gains in carlot shipments, and there also was a heavy movement by truck because of the prevailing car shortage in the east as well as in the west. Michigan figures show a gain in shipments of 371 per cent; Pennsylvania, 298 per cent, and New York 261 per cent. The crop of these three states alone brought approximately $10,000,000. Truck shipments in the three states, which are not included in the department's figures, are estimated at 20,000 tons, worth another million and a half dollars.

Statistics on destinations of the Michigan-New York-Pennsylvania crop show that Pittsburgh took the largest number of cars for the season, with a total of 1,726. Philadelphia was second with 1,476 cars. Other large distributing points for the crop were: Chicago 1141 cars, Boston 1,022 cars; Cleveland 888 cars, and New York City 582 cars. The city farthest from the productive centers to market grapes in volume was St. Louis, with 157 cars of Michigan fruit, five from Pennsylvania, and 26 cars from New York state. Milwaukee took 186 cars from Michigan, 19 from Pennsylvania, and 21 from New York.

The price paid by grape juice factories this year averaged $65 a ton, compared with $130 in 1920 and $96 in 1919. No grapes were pressed in 1921 because of the high tax and the poor condition of the crop, due to early frosts. The lowest price on record at grape juice factories was in 1897 when $10 a ton was the average.

NEW AUTO ENGINE SUCCESS IN FRANCE

Paris, Dec. 18.—The "semi-Diesel" automobile is now an accomplished fact. One of those oil-burning motors recently was installed on a heavy touring car chassis weighing two and one-half tons. The car made the trip to Bordeaux and back in two days, carrying five passengers, much baggage, and 60 gallons of reserve fuel.

The motor is designed to burn, "gas oil", a heavy petroleum product remaining after the kerosene has been extracted. It costs here 89 cents a gallon as compared with 56 cents for gasoline. The car made about 7 miles to the gallon and about 280 miles on a gallon of lubricating oil, so that the cost of operation worked out at two cents a mile.

Experts in charge of the experiment predict a great future for this type of motor. The engine used was found too small for the weight it had to pull, but an average speed of 30 miles an hour was maintained, which was regarded as creditable. The "semi-Diesel" type of motor, its friends say, not only costs less for upkeep but is simpler and therefore cheaper to make than the standard type. Experiments are being conducted with the idea of using this new engine on the automobile busses of Paris.

EGYPTIAN STUDENTS COMING TO U.S.A.

Cairo, Egypt, Dec. 18.—Thirty-three Egyptian students have been selected by the Minister of Communications to be sent abroad to complete their technical studies. Ten of them will go to the United States.

These young men will study the latest developments in manufacturing processes. Following an agreement, between the American Department of Commerce and the Egyptian government, one of them will be assigned, for two years' training, to the locomotive department of some American railroad. Another will spend two years studying internal combustion engines. It has been arranged that a third will pass four years' apprenticeship in the naval shipbuilding yards, and another will spend two years in the telephone service. The other six will spend three years in automobile factories. All the expenses incurred by these students will be met by the Egyptian government. It is felt here that this program will aid in bringing about closer economic and industrial relations between Egypt and the United States.

STOWAWAY SHOCK TO DEATH COAL PASSER

Hoboken, N.J., Dec. 19.—A wired piping coming from a coal bunker on the trans-Atlantic liner America shocked Otto Schmidt, a coal passer, to death—so his fellow stokers insisted when the liner arrived here from Bremen. The ship's doctor, however, said it was heart disease.

In any event the stokers were full of the story of the haunted ship. They said the "tweet tweet" kept coming from the bunkers and they all got so frightened they appealed to the captain for action. He investigated and as a result, a stowaway who had aspirations to play the piccolo in the opera orchestra here was brought to the deck. His ambition was so great, he said, he couldn't resist the temptation to practice.

He's going back.

FORSEES ERA OF INTENSE DEVELOPMENT IN EUROPEAN COUNTRIES

London, Dec. 18.—"We are entering a new chapter in the economic history of the world, a period which will, I believe, surpass in the intensity of its development the wonderful forty-four years preceding the Great War," said Edgar Crammond, an Englishman financial writer, recently in the course of a lecture on "The International Financial Situation" to members of the London Chamber of Commerce.

"This country is called upon to undertake tasks of reconstruction and reconstruction such as her bread shoulders have never carried before, and she is the one power organized and equipped to bring order out of the great chaos.

"Our two great duties must be," continued Mr. Crammond, "first, to secure the disarmament of Europe, and secondly, to solve the problem of reparations and inter-Allied debts. Now that we have practically arranged for the payment of our debt to the United States, it might be possible to invite American co-operation with us in a policy to help and forbearance. To carry out these great tasks, it is essential that we have freedom from governmental control of the Anglo foreign banks, and the great British mercantile houses should now be allowed to exercise a greater influence in the shaping of our financial policy than they have enjoyed since August, 1914."

"If we can arrive at a friendly understanding with France," the speaker added, "re-unite the world into a single economic unit, and establish once again the international financial system, I, for one, look hopefully and with great confidence to the future. There is no finality to economic expansion, and viewed historically the great war is a part of the process of the economic evolution of the world. We have effected in four and a half years of war and four years of peace, progressive changes which have taken perhaps two generations of peace to accomplish.

WINNIPEG AUTO LICENSES TO BE INCREASED SOON

Winnipeg, Man., Dec. 18.—The provincial government, it is understood, is now considering a plan for a radical change in the system of automobile licensing which will, if adopted, net the province an additional $500,000 increase. During the past year revenue from automobile licences yielded $682,000 from 39,240 cars while under the plan now under consideration with fees based on the selling price of the car, it is estimated that slightly over $1,000,00 would be realized.

The new plan embraces a minimum fee slightly higher than the present minimum for licenses for cars up to a certain value. Over that value they are to be assessed one percent of the total selling prices, allowing ten per cent. depreciation value each year of the car's life.

The system in vogue at present is that of assessing license fees upon the basis of the horse-power of the car and the opinion has been expressed that the method of computing the horse power worked out very inequitably in practice.

It is claimed that large and expensive cars got off very lightly in comparison with some of the smaller makes, owing to difference in the diameter of the cylinders—the basis of computation.

The present fixed minimum for small cars is $12.50 per annum. It is anticipated that this will be raised to $15. Under the proposed system the owner of a new $5,000 car will pay a license fee of $60.

TRADE UNION OFFICIALS IN BRITISH COMMONS

London, Dec. 20.—For the first time in 50 years, the legal profession is not the corruption of a majority of members of the House of Commons.

The new Commons will contain 8 members who make their living a Trade Union officials, while only 80 of the members are lawyers. The Trade Union officials were more successful in the last election, electing 83 out of 102 candidates.

The standing of the trades and professions in the new House of Commons is approximately:

Three Hundred Trentonians Hear Radio Concert

Trenton public had its first opportunity to "listen-in" on a radio concert Monday evening, under the auspices of the Young People's League of King Street Church, and under the directorship of Mr. Adsett, who held the master key. Pittsburgh was brought very near to about 300 attentive listeners by means of the radio. The daily program which is broadcasted for the use of all radio fans, was followed when possible during the evening. As was explained by Mr. E. H. Fraser, the first part of the programm was being rendered in Pittsburgh, it being possible one of the first stations to be able to broadcast its messages. Of course the program varied greatly and at times we were only able to pick up parts of it and sometimes fortunate in reproducing only the latter part of some selections. This as explained, was due to the difference in time in some parts of the country as compared with our own, and also weather conditions is a very important fact in Orchestra selections. Banda, the playing of the piano, and an occasional solo, were probably more distinctly heard than some others. We never dreamed of hearing Jazz Music in a Methodist Church, but such was the case on Monday evening, and not the least surprising how fascinating to all it was when the very popular selection "Yaaed O'Connor Has Nothing" was being played. You could see the countenance of everyone brighten up and in no few cases did the body stand to the rhythm.

To withhold the attention of so large an audience for over two hours while the radio was intercepting messages from many parts of the States and giving out as if coming from the artist himself, leads one to look back to the time of Edison when he astonished the world with his reproduction of the human voice. If the Radio in the next quarter century makes as rapid progress as the Edison phonograph, it will be the ambition of Marconi realized, with one in every home. We can look forward with a great deal of anticipation to a similar entertainment when our good friends the Young Peoples' League can be our hostess.

INDIANS IN WESTERN CANADA ARE PROSPEROUS

Winnipeg, Man., Dec. 18.—Indians of western Canada are making good progress as agriculturists, according to the report of W. M. Graham, commissioner of Indian Affairs, which shows that during the past season they harvested 810,613 bushels of grain in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. About 50 percent. of this is wheat and the balance in oats.

In addition to the grain, Indians in the prairie provinces produced more than 80,000 bushels of potatoes, 65,000 tons of hay, and also summer fallowed 16,000 acres of land and broke 1,000 acres. They own 28,000 horses, of which about 75 per cent. are ponies, have 18,000 head of cattle and lease 200,000 acres of land for grazing purposes.

Commissioner Graham looks forward to an increase in acreage for the ensuing year and if crop conditions are favorable expects a record yield.

DESTITUTION AND HARDSHIP REPORTS ARE EXAGGERATED

Ottawa, Dec. 15.—Exaggerated reports of "destitution and hardship" among farmers of the Olds district, published after the meeting early in November of the constituency political association, were followed promptly by offers of assistance from relief organizations and individuals, and also by a general exodus on the part of financial institutions to withhold farm loans pending thorough investigation of the basis for the reports. Those who have know the situation throughout the district assert confidently that there is very little foundation for the statements and that the Olds area generally is in good shape.

"Crops in the district were very good this year, with an abundance of feed and good seed grain," declared Nelson S. Smith, M.L.A., for Olds. "Only in the extreme east end of the Olds provincial constituency," he added, "has dry weather caused hardship." Extension of the "Dry Area Relief Act" which was recommended by the Olds political association would not bring the relief area within thirty miles of the town of Olds, and no recommendations were made to the government on the general subject of relief and free freight. Only one isolated case of extreme need was cited to the convention in the course of the argument for the extension of the "Dry Act" area.

VIENNA DOCTOORS COLLECT FEES IN BREAD

Vienna, Dec. 16.—The physicians of Heiligenstadt, a Vienna suburb, have established their fees on the basis of bread cost. One loaf represents an office call, and one loaf and a half an outside visit. In the rural districts a similar system is growing, but based on a measure of flour instead of the loaf of bread.

ARGENTINA SETS RECORD IN SOMEWHAT CLEANLINESS

Buenos Aires, Dec. 15.—Argentine soldiers in the future must see daily clean their teeth, but manicure their nails. An order making obligatory the use of the tooth brush, nail scissors and nail forceps by the troops, effective March next, has just been issued by the new minister of war, Col. Agustin Justo.

WILL TRY OUT STEEL SHAFTED GOLF CLUBS

New York, Dec. 19—Asserting its refusal to recognize the so-declared golf clubs in national championships had been misconstrued, the executive committee of the United States Golf Association issued a statement today explaining its attitude and announcing that official tests of the new style shaft would be authorized:

"A number of people seem to have misconstrued the action taken by the executive committee of the United States Golf Association with regard to the steel shaft statement said.

"We were asked to approve its use; we felt that it was a distinct departure from the accepted form and make of golf clubs, and that no one at that time knew enough about its possibilities to say that this is the use was for the best interests of the game.

"We, accordingly, refused to permit its use in the national championships. Our feelings are still the same. The executive committee itself will try out the shafts and request that a number of the leading amateurs do the same and report their feelings to the committee. They will not ask any of the other players who use the shaft and who desire to should submit their views to the committee."

IRISHMEN MEET SENATORS TONIGHT

St. Patrick's will leave at noon today for Ottawa where they will meet the Senators in the N.H.L. opener at the Capital and both teams are out after the victory. In the Irish will, it will put them set in the lead with two victories in as many games as the chance are Dandurand's Canadiens will meet the Hamilton Tigers take a fifty-fifty break on the season to date. If the Senators win from the champions, the Ottawa management-players combine will find all four teams on an even footing.

The Irish will be greeted by a full turnout of the Ottawa fans, including the famous "team brigade" and it is likely that Sam O'Rourke's tribe will bear something of the last game they played in the Capital, as the fans there were not at all pleased when the St. Pats adopted the Canadiens defensive style and won the N.H.L. little last March in the rearguard victories in games. The strike of play of the Irish did not appeal to the supporters of the Senators.

ST. MARY'S SIX TRIM VARSITY

St. Mary's, runners-up to Aura Lee for the Junior O.H.A. title, last night defeated Varsity 4-2 at the arena. It was a pretty game between two well-matched teams, and to Bon Kells, St. Mary's unassuming goal tender of the trainer, goes a large share of the glory of the splendid victory. In goal is where St. Mary's had their edge. Dickenson played well between the Varsity sticks, but he did no rise to the occasion as did Kells, and the last two of the club's total have him would have been pie for the pas-led lad in the other net. Another St. Mary's goal came from a long shot off Turner's stick, the puck glancing in off Phil Grey's arm. St. Mary's passes were sharper and their shooting more accurate than were Varsity's, but the margin St. Mary's had here was slight. They deserved their win.

BERLIN PUBLIC SCHOOLS FORBID ALL BOXING

Berlin, Dec. 18.—Boxing has been forbidden in the public school buildings in Berlin. In announcing the prohibition, the municipal board of education made no reason for the decision simply notifying the teachers that the gymnasiums could no longer be used for this form of sport.

Organizations which have been contesting the contests have, in some cases, been forbidden further access to the buildings. In other instances the societies are inaugurating sub-boxing classes under the auspices of the Toilers has taken steps to have the Supreme Court. for $50,000 damages. XMAS TREE FOR KIDDIES

Members of Lions' Club Dine Children From Marchmont Home and Children's Shelter

HAPPY TIME

Children Receive Presents From Xmas-Tree and Thoroughly Enjoy First Canadian Xmas

An outstanding motto of the Lions' Club, is to do something for some body, and the Belleville Lions' Club certainly demonstrated their ability at being able to put this motto into effect last evening, when the boys at the Marchmont Home here, and the children at the Childrens' Shelter, were made the recipients of Christmas presents, which were supplied by the members of the Lions' Club.

At 4.30 P.M. the Lions' together with Mrs. Merry and the boys, also one little girl from Marchmont home, sat down to a table, loaded up with things which were well in keeping with the Xmas spirit. Captain Ruston was also present on behalf of the Childrens' Shelter, the children of that Institution being in quarantine. Their presents will be delivered to the Institution this morning, and the Xmas tree will be given to the Shelter for Xmas Day.

Cubs Raymond Harris, Dick Philbin, Bill Lattimer and John McCle were the enthusiastic members of the Xmas tree committee, and they not only secured a splendid tree, but they had it decorated in a short space of time. Cubs Master of the Club presided, and Mayor Charlie Hanna, acted in the capacity of Belleville agent for Mr. Santa Claus. The children were called to the front in turn and received their gifts.

In welcoming the children to the club, President Ponton impressed upon the minds of the boys that they had not come to a foreign country, but to a similar country to the one which they had left. "This is your first Xmas in Canada," said the chairman, "And we hope you will be married to-day many other Canadian Christmas celebrations, and that you will always remember Belleville as your first Canadian home."

Chairman Ponton also impressed upon the boys, the importance of leading clean lives and using clean language.

In reply, one of the smallest boys moved a vote of thanks, and Mrs. Merry in seconding the vote, expressed her sincere appreciation for the splendid reception, and the kind action of the Lions. Mrs. Merry explained that in her 34 years experience with children, she knew of no time her care had never been treated so kindly as by the Lions last night.

That the children's enjoyment for every kind consideration is demonstrated by the fact that many of them have made careers for themselves in Canada as physicians, lawyers, and two or three of the old boys have represented Canadian constituencies in the Legislature.

Captain Ruston, on behalf of the

CHECK EMIGRATION TO STATES

Jails and Asylums Will be Filled if Promiscuous Immigration is Permitted

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Montreal, Dec. 21—An open door policy of immigration, is not favored by Dr. C. J. Edwards, M.P., addressing the Chambre, De Commerce here yesterday. He declared that the government should not allow the entry of hordes of emigrants from the Dominion to the United States. He warned against undesirables who are not invited to Canada, without strict supervyance. He declared that radicals, prospective paupers, the riff raff, of European cities, and criminals would finally find their way to Canada to fill jails and asylums and, become a burden upon the populace.

MUCH INTEREST MANIFESTED IN CIVIC NOMINATIONS

Candidates for Mayor, Aldermen and Public School Trustees Will To-morrow be Named by Electors of the City

Civic nominations will take place tomorrow morning not only in the city but in various municipalities throughout Ontario where elections have not been held. The change of date this year is necessary owing to Monday next, the usual time of holding nominations being Christmas Day. Much interest is manifested in the city nominations and it is expected that many candidates will be nominated for civic honors. At the hour of 10 o'clock in the morning, Mayoralty candidates will be named and the prospects are that there may be in the running. From 11 to 12 o'clock candidates for the Mayoralty will have an opportunity to present to the electors their views upon civic matters.

From the noon hour to 1 o'clock, nominations for Aldermen and public school trustees will take place. Owing to the increase in the city population, twelve Aldermen will, the coming year, occupy seats around the Council Board, being an increase of three. Several changes will take place in the personnel of the Public School Board, as some of the present members are retiring. One representative from the seven Wards in the city will be selected whilst the incoming City Council will have to appoint three High School trustees. Altogether, the nomination proceedings will be of more than usual interest.

HIGH PRICES FOR POULTRY

Offerings Were Large, But Sales Were Limited Owing to Price

The market today was without doubt the dearest place in the city today. Whilst dressed fowls, consisting of turkeys, geese, ducks and chickens were offered for sale in immense quantities the sales were by no means as numerous. The reason for this was the high prices asked for same.

Turkeys it is estimated were sold at from 65cts to 68cts. a pound, and geese sold from $3.75 to $4.50 each. Ducks were not so plentiful and sold from $3.50 to $4. a pair. Some fine specimens of turkeys were to be seen One which weighed 22 pounds was offered for sale at $12 but the price was considered altogether too high and the bird was still in possession of the owner at noon hour. A fowl was sold at 45cts. a pound being the most reasonable lot offered. A number of geese were procured by buyers at 35cts. a pound. Chickens sold from $1.50 to $2.50 a pair. Butter sold at 65cts. and 68cts. per pound, whilst the ruling price for fresh eggs was 65cts. per dozen. Some garden products was sold and prices for same were moderate.

INTELLIGENCER IS VISITED BY SANTA CLAUS

Was Heavily Laden With Presents and Left Part Of His Load

This morning, very early, before most people were up for breakfast, Santa Claus came down the chimney at The Intelligencer Office. Only one or two people were in the office, and he explained to them that he found he had too heavy a load and that it was a big strain on his poor old back. So he left quite a big portion of his load at this office, with the request that we distribute them for him. He explained to us that he wanted them presents to be given to the little boys and girls whose daddies were out of work, and to those other kiddies whose daddies had not been able to get enough steady work this past summer to give their children a happy Christmas surprise.

Thus on Saturday afternoon all those boys and girls are asked to come to the Intelligencer office and get their presents. Any time after two o'clock on Saturday afternoon the presents will be ready. So do not forget to come around, if you are one of the kiddies Santa wanted to receive one of these presents.

CHRISTMAS CHEER CAUSES TROUBLE

Archie Murray and Irvine Kellar got next Sunday Christmas cheer but after they were lodgedly persuaded to "do" the main street. Everything was as well as could be expected, until the Provincial Police officers home in sight, the matters took decidedly abrupt turn for the worse.

At this morning's police court session the two men appeared before Magistrate Hanna and Ketcheson and were remanded until 4 p.m. this afternoon, when they will receive their trial. Evidently there is some misunderstanding as to what constitutes (Oh-be-joyful) cane, and Inspector Naphan, of the Provincial Police, and Inspector Connors of Hamilton, who is also in this city at present, desire to be in attendance at the trial. These two officers are in Deseronto this morning on business.

ADDITIONAL SUBSCRIPTIONS

Mayor Hanna has received two substantial subscriptions to the Northern Ontario Fire Relief Fund. They are: Mr. W. A. Gander ..... $ 500
Mr. J. McCullough 10.00

PROPERTY OWNERS SUBMIT LIST OF RECOMMENDATIONS

Useful Suggestions That Are Drawn to the Attention of Electors and the 1923 Council

The Executive of the Property Owners' Association met last night and recommended the following:

The Property Owners' Association of Belleville approves of the following proposals and urge candidates for municipal office to publicly approve them, and request the electors to vote for such candidates as publicly approve same—

1. That every effort to have Belleville selected for the U.E. Loyalist Celebration in 1924.

2. That every effort be made Belleville selected for the Head Offices of the Canadian National Railways.

3. In view of the fact that Canada is not lobbing the immigrants already coming and work is not plentiful, the loan should not be let down to immigrants who cannot take care of themselves, and money should not be spent to bring them here or set them up after coming here because this will discriminate later conditions and impose burdens upon the taxpayer for the maintenance of such immigrants.

4. That all pavements be built by our own labor instead of by outside contractors with outside labor.

5. The Station street pavement should not be built this coming season.

6. That in future, where sewers and underground services are being constructed, they should be constructed, where possible, at the rear of dwellings, and not on the main highways so that it would not be necessary to tear up pavements when ever repairs are demanded services.

7. That the fire insurance rates in Belleville are too high and form an unjust tax on the property owners and that steps be taken to compel a reduction.

8. That new industries starting and existing industries in adverse condition, be encouraged and helped, but that no inducement be granted by the Council unless it is clear that by reason of the fixed assessment the city is getting some benefit commensurate the taxpayers for the loss in assessment.

9. That direct, persistent effort be made to secure for Belleville some of the industries coming from the United States to Canada that have capital and experience sufficient to insure success.

10. That the assessment be made the previous fall for the coming year and the taxes be divided into three instalments.

11. That the nominations be held the last Monday in November and the election be the first Monday of December.

The above recommendations will be considered at the meeting of the Association in the City Hall on Friday night.

THESE XMAS FOWLS CAME RATHER HIGH

Early this morning, a middle aged man might have been seen near the market, struggling under the burden of three portly "Knights of the barn yard," who had given their all in order that others might have an enjoyable time Christmas day. They were all ready for the oven.

As he was walking up the street, a teamster met and spoke to him home for one of the fowls, but the owner jocularly stated that he had parted with the sum of $24 for the birds, and that he thought that he could make the grade in his home unassisted, by taking the odd rest.

KATIE ECCLES IS LOCATED

Schooner Lies Between Timber Island and Nine Mile Point in 60 Feet of Water

Kingston, Dec. 21.—The schooner Katie Eccles, which sought shelter in the big storm of November 26th and rode it under through the worst of it in the shelter of Timber Island, only to break away at the last moment and drift out on the lake with no one on board has been located safe. This time, however, she is on the bottom, lying in water from 40 to 50 feet, midway between Nine Mile Point and Timber Island.

The Katie Eccles was on her way from Oswego to Belleville with a cargo of coal, when the rudder split, and she was forced to seek shelter in the lee of Timber Island.

Sighting Katie Eccles

In talking with newspapermen this morning Captain Cole told how he had salvaged the pieces of the Eccles. He was on his way back to Kingston from the Pulse Ducks, having taken he light keeper from there and the Main Ducks and about ten miles northwest of Timber Island a spar was sighted sticking up out of the water. Much to his surprise foot of he spar was showing so it is estimated that the water at that point is about eighty or ninety feet deep. The A. Cole stopped near the wreck and put a line on the spar which was showing. After a very hard pull which almost broke the new three inch line, the wreckage broke away. It was made fast to the Cole and towed in to the city. The captain said that it was very heavy and that his trip back was delayed fully three hours by the weight he was dragging behind. From this it would seem that the main sail and probably a large part of the wreck is attached.

All that can be seen now is the main boom floating on the surface but as soon as a derrick can be obtained it will be lifted out of the water and it will then be learned how much of the Eccles has been salvaged. It is understood that the location of the wreck of the Eccles she must have drifted directly on a line with the Point au Baril breakwater at Timber Island and had gone about ten miles when she foundered. Captain Cole, when asked about salvaging the Eccles or what is left of her or her cargo, said that he was not interested, but it was a job for the salvage company.

It was the last trip of the season for the C. A. Cole and in clearing up the mystery of the disappearance of the Eccles and in bringing home some of her riggins the Cole service truly made a successful last trip. The C. A. Cole, which is a new boat, rendered some further valuable service this week when she picked up the Ray Stanton and two barges. The tug had broken her wheel on the trip from Cape Vincent over here so the Cole took the whole tow and brought them into Kingston.

CANADIAN NATIONAL WILL ELECTRIFY G.T.R. BETWEEN TORONTO AND NIAGARA FALLS

Sir Henry Thornton Promises Immediate Action on This Project, and Thus Solves Radial Controversy

A report from Toronto to-day states that it has been definitely decided to electrify the Grand Trunk Railway lines between Niagara Falls and Toronto. Sir Henry Thornton promises immediate action.

This immensely significant development by the "People's Railway" executive alters the whole Hydro radial situation. As long as the steam lines neglected suburban and fast radial traffic out of Toronto, there appeared to be some reason for building new electric speed-lines. But the new executive of the National Railways wants for his system—and the country's—a half-and-half investment in it—all the traffic. Electrification of the G.T.R. will get it. It will give the service required, with all the benefits, and without any of the loges and liabilities involved in the Hydro radial scheme.

THOROLD ITALIAN SETTLEMENT CONSIDER CHIEF KLEAGLE

The Secretary of an Italian Society has published a statement, asking Chief Kleagle of the Kluklux Klan why? he should include in his letter to the people of Thorold, that an Italian murdered the Constable, and that there are many inhabitants of other nationalities in the district, and, while crimes continue to be committed by English speaking people.

HOOVER TO VISIT GERMANY RE REPARATIONS

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Dec. 21.—A request made by the German Trade Commission that a committee of United States business men, headed by Herbert Hoover, visit Germany to undertake a thorough survey of the economic conditions that would be used as a basis of a new reparations study, was reported here today and it was perhaps a starting point of a flock of rumors as to United States intervention in the reparations problem. It is semi-officially learned that Britain has informed the United States Government of its consent to such a plan. It is expected that France will also consent.

MASONIC LODGE PASSES MILESTONE

M.W. Bro. Wm. N. Ponton, Grand Master, is Speaker at Toronto Masonic Temple

John Ross Robertson Lodge, A.F. and A.M., No. 546, passed another milestone in its interesting career last night in the Italian Masonic Temple, when the election of officers was held, and a visit paid by several of the ruling Masters or other city lodges and honored by the presence of the Grand Master, M.W. Bro. Wm. N. Ponton, of Belleville.

W. Bro. A. Charles Scott, the Master, welcomed the visitors in a well chosen remarks, and these brought from the Grand Master in glowing tribute to the man whose name the Lodge bears. "The late John Ross Robertson," he said, "was one of those men who, while he did not see eye to eye with some respecting matters that came before the Grand Lodge, was a gentleman of the kind, thought, and was vigorous in his support of those matters which he believed to be in the best interests of the craft.

VENIZELOS AND TURK DELEGATE HAVE SPAT

Lausanne, Dec. 21st.—A wordy altercation between Ex-Premier Venizelos of Greece and Rita Bey, for Turkey, the Nationalist Delegate, caused Signor Montagna, president of the Near East Conference Commission, to threaten to bring this morning's session of the commission to an abrupt close.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Lausanne, Dec. 21.—The dispute was over the question of the liberty of emigration. M. Venizelos bitterly attacked the Angora Government, and protested against the alleged deportation of Greeks by thousands from Anatolia. Rita Nur replied in the same vein, declaring Venizelos with being responsible for the Turkish-Greek war and its consequences.

Shrunken Heads Made Very Fewer In Peru.

One of the most fascinating countries of South America is Peru. Its people are mostly second hair from the red Pre-Inca ruins and much interest is manifested in the many tribes of Indians who inhabit the Latin American country, but the most wonderful of these tribes are the Jivaro or Jivaros, who belie science in the art of the preserved method of shrinking human heads; a good illustration of which is given by G. W. Selman, civil engineer, of Chatham, Ont., a Dominion boundary and transit surveyor, who has made a magnificent collection of curios, relics and strange, from the remote parts of the world, but the most extraordinary, according to Mr. Selman, is the shrunken head.

Very little information concerning these heads is available. The Encyclopaedia Britannica is very vague, mentioning them as being thought objects of worship by the Jivaro, who are described as being a very war-like tribe and head hunters.

The shrunken head is, as its name denotes, vis, a man's head in its natural form, shrunken to the size of an orange without loss of an expression or feature.

The manner of shrinking is not known to science. It has been said that they brew a concoction of several barks and shrubs, which when boiled has a tendency of softening the bones, after which the heads were placed in large pots of sand and a fire kept going for months, night and day, until the head is brought down to the miniature size. They were then taken out and hung in the huts of the owners as either trophies of war or objects of worship. It has also been said that the process of shrinking was done by alternately applying heat and then cold, but science has been unable to find the actual process.

While in Peru Mr. Selman was informed that scientists have entered the Peruvian wilds in which the head varus have lived and that their heads have come out the same as described, recognizable in every detail.

The head is quite hard and retains the hair and expression of face even at close scrutiny the whiskers are visible on its face.

Through the nose of Mr. Selman's specimen is a cord showing that the captive was led to his doom. Large holes are punched in the ears of this specimen for ear-rings, presumably the same as the head but not so large, as the Incas were ear-rings so heavy that they often pulled the fleshy part of the ear almost to the shoulders.

Many of the museums of North America are without a specimen of the shrunken head, which is considered really more remarkable than a mummy.

Flaunt that Sour Fowls.

Do you realize that there are such things as vegetable pearls?

Now and then in certain tropical plants curious hard round substances are found which one may properly call pearls, since their composition is almost identical with the product of the oyster.

In Java, these substances are discovered in the joints of bamboos. On analysis they are found to consist of almost pure carbonate of lime, which is the material that goes to make up the oyster pearl.

Sometimes the pearls are found in the enlargement of the coconut, and they also occur in the wood of the teak and pomegranate trees.

They are sometimes the size of a nazel nut, but more often rather smaller. How these pearls come into being is not really known. They are believed to be due to excess of calcareous and siliceous matter in the plant.

In the East Indian Islands these pearls are valued very highly as charms, and the owner of one will not part with it for any figure, because he considers that as long as he holds the pearl he will be immune from all ills.

A Wooden Statue.

San Francisans are paying homage to one of the most remarkable wooden statues ever conceived, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. It is the work of Hokusai Katsushika, greatest Japanese artist in word or ivory, who posed for himself by the aid of adjustable mirrors and carved his own life-sized image from wood. The hair on the figure is the artist's own. He used the clippings from his head and beard, boring tiny holes for the hairs and setting them in place one by one. The figure is very particular, even the most minute, an exact counterpart of the artist. The carving required three years, even to be without and manually a workman as Masakichi.

Wind Blown Pollen.

Wind-blown pollen (sulphur rain) is known to be carried far. The Swedish experiment station reports a quite extensive rain of this pollen on two fire ships, twenty and thirty-seven miles from shore, and the pollen of signs is known to have been carried even as far as 240 miles.

THE FRENCH PROBLEM.

It Has Spread From Quebec Into Ontario.

Ontario is not alone in receiving an overflow of population from the French-speaking of the Province of Quebec. Attention has been drawn of late to the French communities in northern Vermont which have received many settlers from the Province of Quebec side of the border. It has been said that Canada is not the only New England people, however, to be troubled by Athen's Monitor says that there are public schools in Vermont where the French language is being used in the ordinary instruction of pupils, at least for a part of the day.

There are communities in that section which have become almost completely French in speech, and in some of these it is quite customary, in order to make any progress in the teaching of the children, to employ their mother tongue for at least a part of their instruction. This tendency is likely to increase, for it is said that the "Frenchification" of neighborhoods in Vermont along the Quebec line is continuing progressively. New England authorities, however, do not express any alarm, for the belief is that the Americanizing influence is stronger than the influences that might be exercised from Quebec.

St. Albans, it may be remembered is passing, once had its place in history as the locality known as "the St. Albans's Raid." On the 19th of October, 1864, Bennett H. Young led from Canada about 25 men, mostly Confederate soldiers in a raid on St. Albans. They looted three banks, wounded several citizens, killed one mortally—and escaped to Canada, where Young and 13 others were arrested and brought to trial. But they were never punished, and the sum of $75,000, which had been taken from them on their arrest was returned to them. Later, however, the Canadian Government refunded this amount to the banks. In 1915 and again in 1870 the Fenians made St. Albans a base for attacks on Canada, and United States troops were sent to preserve neutrality.

St. Albans is one on the shore of Lake Champlain, a few miles from the Canadian border, which here possesses no natural markings excepting a few islands. Its golf club had the misfortune to be run over by a street car, which resulted in the loss of a leg. His hospital expenses were met by some of the former employers. After his recovery, further provided him with an artificial limb. The lad also secured damages amounting to two hundred dollars from the radio company.

Speaking of the incident to one of the other caddies, a member remarked, "it was an awful thing to happen to Joey."

"Aw, I dunno," replied the lad, dejectly.

"Surely you wouldn't like to be in his place. No more golf, no swimming, no games like you other boys play."

"Well, he got two hundred bucks, didn't he?" protested the youth, who seemed to be laboring under a decided grouch.

"Certainly he did, but that would not begin to compensate anyone for the loss of a limb."

"Aw, I dunno, anyway he wouldn't have got that if I hadn't left my caddy father!"

"Your father," exclaimed the surprised man, "was he the boy's lawyer?"

"Naw, my father was the motorman."

A Medicine Rock.

The exploration party sent out last year by the Government of the Canadian Province of Saskatchewan to penetrate into the wilds of the huge northern section in the search of that province, visited a famous rock, the location of which has been a secret for generations. There are only a very few Indians acquainted with it, and the party respected the hereditary rights of the family who have been the natural custodians of the life-giving "Medicine Rock" revered by the Indians over a wide area as one of the greatest gifts of "Nichee Manitou." "Medicine Rock" shows a narrow ribbon or seam of blood-red material pressed in between heavy layers of stone. According to the Indians, this substance was a vein of blood to nourish the rock whose wounds responded it. For generations past this "Rock Blood" has been looked upon as one of the greatest remedies for loss of blood or any nervous condition. An analysis showed that "Medicine Rock" is porous, as its name implies, as it is a form of iron which might be of value in anaemic conditions.

NORMA TALMADGE AND HARRISON FORD AT GRIFFIN'S

Norma Talmadge's latest production, "The Wonderful Thing," which is the feature attraction at Griffin's tonight to Saturday, with a matinee Saturday, is from the pen of Frederick Monroe Isaac, and is a screen version of a story by Lillian Trimble Bradley and Forrest Halsey, and begins in the aristocratic circles of England and ends on a log ranch in Iowa—actually the Bradley-Harbold ranch, the largest producer of porkers in the country.

The role of Catherine Mannerly Trocadale, leader of the opposition against the admission of the daughter of the American Hog King into the socially prominent Mannerly family is played by Mrs. Lydig Hoyt, one of the younger of the ranking society matrons of New York, NewPort and Washington.

"The Wonderful Thing" was adapted for the screen version by Hoyne Mannerly, one of the daughters of the production itself is another in the series of those starring Miss Norma Talmadge and directed by Mr. Brenon, a combination which has resulted in some of the best pictures yet made by this popular star. Miss Talmadge portrays the role of Jacqueline Bonge, the Frenchcomplexioned daughter of the American Hog King. "The Wonderful Thing" comes into her life when she meets Donald Mannerly, the oldest son of the impoverished aristocratic English family, who is an incorrigible flirt.

His lovemaking, however, without any serious intent, arouses real Slice on her part. As set of a weak younger brother makes the raising of a large amount of money by Donald an imperative matter and even while despising himself as he does, she marries for her wealth. Of course is ideally happy for a time and Donald learns to love her; and then she discovers the real object of her marriage. Pride causes her to leave him, but the story ends happily in her own home in Iowa.

Harrison Ford plays the role of Donald, and in addition to Miss Talmadge and Miss Trimble Bradley, the cast are: Howard Truesdale, Robert Agnew, Ethel Fleming, Mabel Bert, Fanny Brown, Walter McEwen and Chbles Craig.

CANADIENS DOWN HAMILTON SQUAD

Many Brilliant Plays Feature Game Which the Frenchmen Win 7-3

Montreal, Dec. 20.—By a score of 7 to 3 goals, Canadiens inaugurated the local National Hockey League season here tonight with a victory over Hamilton. Many brilliant plays marked tonight's game here and Canadiens excelled in every department, with the possible exception of goal. On the defence they were impregnable, and only in the last minutes of play when Carey got close in to score, did the French-Canadian guard allow the visitors' attack to get anywhere near striking distance of Vezina. Tigers' first two goals were scored on long shots from near centre ice. Hamilton were outclassed by the speedy Canadian forwards, who combined in three-man rushes. To Billy Boucher went the evening's honors. The useful Canadien forward was all over the ice. He led the majority of Canadiens' attacks and was well described by Odie Cleghorn and Aurel Joliat.

To the credit of the Hamilton team they worked hard and never let up until the final gong. Rynch, Arbor and Prodger pushed in time and again, but their efforts were rendered ineffective by a lack of combination. Corbeau, last year with Canadiens, was outstanding on the Hamilton team, breaking up many rushes. Forbes, who turned in such a stellar game for Hamilton when they defeated Ottawa last Saturday, was again at the top of his form.

Four thousand enthusiasts of the great Canadian Winter sport were in attendance for the local opening of the season.

Hamilton opened the game with a rush to Canadiens' citadel, Arbour and Rosch figuring prominently, but their shots went wide of Vezina, and then Boucher and Joliat dreamed an effective, stickhandling their way into promising territory only to have Forbes block off their shots. Corbeau received a cut on the face, but stayed in the game, later coming in for some jeering for missing a scramble with the puck. Joliat Joliat Sprague Cleghorn went through and brought Forbes to his knees, the Tiger goalkeeper unable to check the puck to save. He was again forced to fall to defend his net, Reise eventually clearing and carrying the puck from danger. Odie Cleghorn stick-handled through the Tiger defence, drew Forbes from his goal, and put the puck past him for the first goal of the game.

The game was halted three minutes owing to Referee Pulford breaking one of his skates. Joliat led several attacks on Forbes, the Tiger defence shutting Carey and Rosch twice went in, the puck being placed behind Vezina, but the play was called for passing ahead. Boucher tested Forbes with a hard shot, the diminutive goaltender saving cleverly. Cleghorn had the best of the remainder of the period, shaping better combination. Joliat put the puck behind Forbes from behind, but an offside pass, preceding the play nullified the count. The period ended: Canadiens 1, Hamilton 0.

SENATORS TRIM ST. PATRICKS SIX

Ottawa Squad Win by 7 Goals to 2 at Capital Last Night

Ottawa, Dec. 20.—By defeating St. Patrick's of Toronto by the score of 7 goals to 2 at the Arena tonight Ottawa Senators defended their championship of their overtime defeat at the hands of Hamilton in the opening game of the season. The game was not fast hockey at times being particularly listless, but occasional flashes by the different players served to keep up the interest. The game was played under the patronage of his Excellency the Governor-General and Lady Byng of Vimy. Also present was the same started Eddie Grand, captain of the Senators, led the players to the centre ice and presented Lady Byng with a large bouquet of flowers. Lord Byng then came out to the centre of the rink and he dropped the puck to start between the sticks of Jack Adams and Frank Nighbor officially opened the season.

The Governor-General and 6,000 per sons were kept shivering for half an hour, as the train carrying the Toronto players was late. The all-day trip had its effect on the players, they showed very little of their renowned condescending combination work and their boring in tactics were confined to individual rushes.

HISTORY OF SURNAMES.

They Furnish Interesting Clues to Your Ancestry.

It is by no means every man who knows that in the name he bears there is probably an interesting and valuable clue to his ancestry.

Take, if he signs it Harcourt or Venables, Pelham or Percival, Daw-say or Daubney, he may be pretty sure that the founder of his family had its cradling in Normandy—though whether as a lord, a knight, or a scullion is hidden from him.

Similarly, if he bears the name of any town or village in England, it is probable that what he has from town was the cradle of his forefathers; though here, again, he gets no clue to the quality of its first bearer, who might be the lord of manors or an honest tradesman or artisan. And when there are several places of the same name, often in different counties, he will frequently need to know of them he originally hails from.

Even when a man's surname throws no light on the place of origin, it often gives interesting clues to past history. Thus, he is called Tanner or Glover, Butcher or Baker, Carter or Carpenter, we know that the first of his forefathers to bear that name followed one or other of these occupations.

The first Thwaites was a teller of wood; Benner was a Joiner; Milner, a miller; Webster, a weaver; Barker, a tanner; Lorimer, a maker of bits and spurs; and so on through the long list of old-time trades, many of them now scarcely identifiable by the average man — such as Stringer, a man who made bow-strings; Tipper, who tipped arrows; and Fletcher, who affixed the feathers.

When surnames throw no light upon the place of origin, they occasionally point to the occupation of the original home. Thus, Tom who lived at the foot of the hill was called Underhill; if his home was on the shore, he was Tom By-the-sea. And similarly we get such patronymics as Edwards, Atwood, Almer, Upfold, and so on.

Other surnames tell us what kind of men were they who first bore them: Dear, Hardy, Long (Hansom or Pale (Whiteman); whether they were "Young" or "Old"; "Broad"; "Merry" or "Sadd"; "Bold" or "Coward"; "Lightfoot" or "Heavyside."

When in these old days there was no such way of distinguishing a man, a writer in "Pebs 'o London's Weekly" was an easy matter to identify (for instance) a father's son. Thus, Richard's boys became known as Richardson; William's children as Williamson; and Robin's as Robinson. And when, in process of time, these labels grew too plentiful and confusing, the father's name was shortened in other ways—to such an effect, indeed, that the connection is almost impossible to trace.

The name which suggest such a strable lineage are often of the ancient and honorable; Mr. Gibbon can derive from Gibbe, the name of a lord of Gibbe, the Conqueror sat foot on the shores of England a Jarvis Hinchcliffe same figured among Saxon tenants in Suffolk. Mr. Maggs and Mr. Mrs. Mann will be relieved o find that their names descend from the "Man-of-Maine"; and Mr. Snooks can point to Normandy as the cradle of his family.

Weed Seed Spread by Manure.

It is quite generally known that weed seeds pass through the digestive tract of animals practically unharmed. The manure will contain these seeds, and the result is that fields may become infested with weed plants, especially if the manure is put later. In spite of this fact, precautions are not commonly taken as to the feeding of screenings which contain seeds of noxious weeds.

As a result of experiments at the Minnesota Experimental Experiment Station, it was found that a certain seeds to cows the germination may even be increased by having it passed through the digestive tract. Dutch cock, a very common weed, germinated only four per cent. In the animal condition, a per cent of this seed was fed to a cow, and 100 such seeds were given to a germinator. Ninety-eight out of the nine hundred grew. The seeds of wild to some extent of lambs' quarters, fifteen hundred of the seeds of this weed germinated 63 per cent. before feeding, 89 per cent. after feeding. Seeds of timothy and other grass commonly was not much affected, as a germination of 74 per cent. was secured before feeding, and 80 per cent. after feeding. The Department of Canada thistle seed was decreased to some extent by feeding, but remained to infest a field.

In view of the foregoing figures, the farmer should be very careful in the use of screenings. They should either be ground to the very finest possible condition so as to crush all weed seeds, or else they should be fed to such animals as sheep, which grind up and thoroughly destroy the ordinary weed seeds.

What to Plant In Late Garden.

Carrots, parsnips, beets and lettuce use may be planted in the latter part of June.

Golden bantam corn to keep up the supply for late summer.

Every foot of the garden space to provide substitutes for meat.

Fresh vegetables to serve as the means of saving canned products for winter use.

Seed sown in mild summer should be planted in freshly stirred soil and somewhat deeper than in spring, and the soil over the seed should be "firmed" more carefully than usual.

A New One.

When the famous motorist was called upon to stop, she asked, indignantly: "What do you want with me?"

"You were traveling at forty miles an hour," replied the police officer.

"Forty miles an hour? Why, I haven't been out an hour," said the lady.

How the Fakers Work at Seances

Joseph P. Rinn, of New York, is a member of the American Society of Magicians, and is among the chief prestidigitateurs of the United States, and is an amateur magician of parts. He is also a sworn enemy and exposer of spiritist mediums. Never a prominent spiritist appears in the neighborhood where he does not challenge, and of course he did not except Conan Doyle, who visited Boston some time ago, and who also has been lecturing in the United States for a few weeks past. Mr. Rinn says that in all his investigations he has never found the slightest evidence that spiritist seances are what they pretend to be, for that any of the phenomena are produced by supernatural means. In fact, he undertakes to reproduce any phenomena, and offers to wager a large sum with any spiritist that he will be unable to know how the trick is done, unless the spiritist happens to be a medium himself, in which case he will be presumed to know all about it.

Recently he gave the New York Herald an account of what he claims is the way a spiritist arranges a cabinet seance, as it is called, wherein a spirit is brought from behind the curtains of a performing medium, and, as a rule, greatly impresses those who see it for the first time or do not understand how it is done. As a rule, there are a number of confederates, the medium and one other sitting with the audience, the latter being often the master of ceremonies in some cases, in other cases the person the seance is being held. The audience in this typical seance, says Mr. Rinn, will be those who approach the critical moments in flippant reverence, and these, he says, are usually the true believers.

There is the hushed talk about spirits, the certainty that they appear and the impossibility of them appearing. The medium, as a rule, will be rather loosely tied, and will assure the gathering that there is nothing gloomy about him, and that he will not get out of place. When it is deemed that the proper atmosphere has been created, the lights are turned out, only one small, dimmed jet or lamp being left burning. The idea that ghosts will appear only in the dark is a superstition, says Mr. Rinn, that has served the spiritist well for many centuries. In fact it is the darkness that permits the fake mediums to operate. The medium is seated in a chair slightly withdrawn from the circle, and is just dimly visible. There is a curtain behind him, usually of black cloth which will not reflect the faintest gleam of light behind her, and he proceeds to fall into a trance. Previous to the seance the medium, if a woman, has carefully arranged herself with a roll of gauze, which has been treated with phosphorescent paint. This can be held in her hand or concealed in her dress. The gauze has been rolled into a long, flowing gown, with openings for hands.

Since everybody knows that the demonstration is to take place in the cabinet, the soft-footed medium finds a lot of difficult to slip from her seat while all eyes are fastened upon another part of the room. The master of ceremonies then proceeds to call for the spirit. What appears first is something mysteriously glowing on the floor. It is the rolled-up gauze which the medium has deposited, her hand clad in a black glove. At this moment the last remaining light in the room is extinguished, and there is some hocus-pocus carried on from the cabinet. Gradually the medium unrolls the glowing gauze, which seems to grow into a larger ball. This is the manipulated until the spectators believe they see something rising from the floor, which gradually takes human shape as the medium throws the gauze into the apertures, and draws the hood over her head and face. What happens subsequently varies in details, but what the spectators see is supposed to be the spirit that has been evoked. It may be a spirit that no longer appears to be in the control by the master of ceremonies, or, if supposed to be controlled, continues to recognize it, the spirit may announce itself as Hamlet's Ingersoll or William Shakespeare.

Questions are put and answered. Then the spirit gives signs of disappearing, and by the use of some diverting kerchief of the gown and figure of the medium the master of spectators see something glowing on the floor, and as they gaze the medium's figure sinks into her chair. It is now the business of the confederate to pick up the gown and, by means of a slender, collapsible steel rod, divided into twenty progressive sections, so equipped that it can be extended or contracted at will by the pressure of the hand. He has also a rubber gloved glove coated with phosphorescent paint, which he can conceal in a handkerchief, to the corner of which is attached a thread, which passes up the rod is quickly extended. The concealed hand is thrust up over the heads of the sitters, then into the middle of the room, the handkerchief is suddenly withdrawn, and there the wonderers see floating, apparently, a human hand. Gradually it is moved and by means of tiny hooks, fasten upon the whole small. Hooked on to gauze, once more rolled tight, the medium flickers about the room, gradually dropping in the lap of the medium, who quickly conceals the gauze and the gauze. The confederate conceals the steel rod. The medium sighs. The seance is at an end.

Hiding the Phone.

Persons who object to having the phone in the house will be glad to learn the instrument in a new piece of furniture which is both convenient and table. The phone is enclosed entirely in a tiny chest, when not in use.

TALKED IN FIRELIGHT.

They Entertained a Famous Poet Unawares.

"Your cook-fire made such a contented-looking picture against the dark, you don't mind if I sit and watch you two?"

This remark from a "tall, broad-shouldered, big-boned, deep-chested, aqueed-man, who lifted one accentached foot out of his canoe and then the other, deliberately, yet ungracefully, is quoted by T. Morris Longstreth in his new book, "Adventurous." The author and a friend were camping in the Laurentian wilderness in northern Quebec when the unexpected visitor appeared. From his reticence he might have been a shaman, but the firelight disclosed a face of sensibility as well as strength, from his hair of a soft and errant shagginess, he might have been poet or musician; but then his modesty! We should have thought him fifty but for a certain shy magnetism that was with youth. He came then along the sand in an unperturbed silence, smoking, he paused at the brink of interrogation."

The trio talked in the firelight, first of the mountains, now of moonstone, then of the stars, and, by and by, reached poetry. "I have a cousin down in New Brunswick you may have heard of, Charles G. D. Roberts," said the stranger. "Now there's a poet for you—a man who's all his best as a writer, his literature, and worth quoting at times like this with your own memory." Pressed further, he quoted the names of several Canadian poets of note, and then one of the lumbermen said: "You left one name from the list. 'Ian' is a Canadian poet, too."

"Yes, but one of the wanderers, the waggish, and little known."

"I didn't realize he was a Canadian, though everybody knows his name," said the listener.

"His name, perhaps," said the other, dryly, "but his work hardly" Pressed to what sounds, I can scarcely recall a dozen poems by him, and I am interested in poetry."

"I'd give a hand to meet that man Carman," said one of the listeners.

He is much in need of a hand," said the stranger. "A shy and awkward old bachelor. He confuses his conversation to the business of the day. I know him, or did when we were younger, and still occasionally get glimpses of him. He is a whimsical, pondering sort of giant." New Brunswick born, but forced to hunt his bread in the States. He was starting off for Montreal the other day on a lecture tour and vowing when he got it over that he'd never go again where he couldn't go in meccasins."

They talked for hours, and once the stranger said he was trying to remember something, and wrote for fifteen minutes on envelopes and things torn from pockets. Then he had gone they picked up some letter paper, also scribbled over, and found this letter-head:

OUR HERITAGE IN THE WEST

Canada has moved into the front rank of wheat producing and wheat exporting countries in the world in recent years and with the bumper crop of 1922, Canada stepped into the very first place of the wheat exporting countries of the world; and yet we have only one-eighth of our arable land in the West under cultivation.

That wheat producing is a basic industry, one which creates and produces wealth, and does not depelete our natural resources is a most important fact to us all. The development of our fisheries, our mines, and our waterpowers, to a certain extent, depletes our latent national wealth. Wheat production does not do this, but creates wealth in a way that is most essential to the well being of mankind.

The Canadian Pacific Railway submit some interesting figures that show how the production of grain this year compares with the last bumper crop in 1915. On account of severe weather conditions the close of lake navigation at Fort William, only one record of the great crop year of 1915 remains unbroken. In 1915 the weather remained good during December and in consequence the actual marketing of grain in that year between August 31st and December 10th exceeded this year's marketing by 12,767,595 bushels. All other records have gone by the board. The total number of cars loaded by the Canadian Pacific Railway since August 31st up to and including December 16th, show an increase over the figures of 1915 of 2,781 cars, or approximately 3 per cent. The number of bushels shipped this year exceed 1915 figures by 14,227,902 bushels or 17 per cent. in bushels transported. The average loading per car this year exceeds that of 1915 by 100 bushels. The actual saving in cost of weather loading being approximately 7,355 cars. Shipments from Fort William by boat show an increase in volume moved from the head of the lakes of 8.62 per cent. Loads cast from Winnipeg from December 1st up to and including December 10th this year shows an increase of 6,565, representing 6.7 per cent. increase in the eastbound movement from Winnipeg. In addition to the movement of grain to the head of the lakes, there has also been moved a large volume of grain to the Pacific Coast. From September first up to and including December 16th, the company has delivered to the Pacific Coast a total of 3,708 cars of grain including 3,767 cars of wheat, representing a total of 5,841,480 bushels. According to a statement issued by the Northwest Grain Dealers' Association under the date of December 11th this year, it estimates that there is in the hands of farmers 93,198,000 bushels of grain. Around the same period in 1915 it was estimated that there were 65,000,000 bushels in the hands of the farmers.

Thus in spite of the war-torn years, and other drawbacks such as the business depression, the West has gone ahead. Manufacturing and other activities have also progressed, in a similar way. We emerge from the period of reconstruction with our currency on top notch in the financial circles of the world. Our national port of Montreal is the greatest wheat shipping port in the world, our railways are the greatest transportation systems in the world, and our banks are the strongest institutions in the world. Thus today, we are a young country only fifty-five years old, and are leading the world in many of the big things. Still we are only on the threshold of a new era, for truly a new tomorrow is dawning for Canada, and prosperity such as we have never known before is within our grasp if we but reach out and take it.

OUR CHRISTMAS EDITION

The Yuletide season carries with it an almost inseparable connection with the romantic past. All of our joyous celebrations and epochs of customs hand us down to us from the dim and distant past. Some of these old traditional customs date back to prehistoric ages. Thus it is when a Christmas number of a paper is created, the atmosphere of the past invites Christmas itself, is romantic, but sacredly so, and thus from the very beginning, on that very first Christmas in far away Judea, when the angels sang "Peace on Earth, Good Will" there a touch a romantic sacredness which still continues.

We have thus delved into the past and have been able to present to our readers stories of Christmas festivities and celebrations that took place in Canada many years ago. We have taken little interesting legends from our own files of nearly ninety years ago. We have collected fashion plates of costumes for the housewife, and have told a tale of the superstitious lady, and have laid bare all her beliefs in signs and in lucky and unlucky omens. These latter items were looked upon as common household beliefs half a century ago, when there were not so many diversions as there are today.

We also have tried to give a comprehensive view of the educational institutions of Belleville. This wonderful activity that is daily functioning in our midst, has been very modest, and few of our citizens realize the vastness of the work, or the wide field covered by these seats of learning. Young folks from all walks of life and from all countries come to our city, quietly, unostentatiously, and enter our schools and colleges. Some come from great distances and spend their Christmas amongst us our midst; others come with great afflictions and here a new world is opened up before them, and the future begins to assume a new and precious meaning to them. All these activities seem to have more or less generally escaped the notice of the present generation, and those that labor in our midst rarely receive the rewards that should rightly be their due.

Thus in this issue we have endeavoured to create a new channel through which we could increase the pride of our citizens in their City-by-the-Bay. All our stories are Canadian, that is to say, they are written in Canada by Canadians, and the scenes are laid in Canada.

Our entire issue was "Made-in-Belleville", and is a product of our own establishment, and the staff have worked long hours to make it possible. We have been ably assisted by many of the officers and teachers in our schools and colleges, and in no manner to we wish to detract the value of their assistance.

We have been encouraged in our efforts by the fact that as we go to press nearly a thousand extra copies have been ordered, from various sources in the city, and these copies will be sent all over the civilized world and into many heathen countries where onetime students of Belleville institutions are now laboring.

We feel deeply gratified that this Made-in-Belleville effort has met with such hearty support, and if our efforts have created in our minds a deeper pride in our city, and if we have been able to give this city a broader sphere of publicity, and have been instrumental, in a small way, in building a Bigger, Better and Busier Belleville-by-the-Bay, we will feel amply repaid.

HERE AND THERE

A REVOLUTION IN WEAVING.

Weaving is one of the most ancient of arts, and during the past hundred years in particular it has seen 90 per cent of clever study by so many mechanical geniuses that one might imagine that no radical improvement in the weaving industry could be possible. Nevertheless, we come from Great Britain of the invention of a loom which is described as effecting a great revolution in the method of weaving. It does its work with a certain similarity to the ordinarily existing machine and at a fraction of the cost. Very little is known as yet regarding the features of this invention, as those responsible for it are apparently endeavoring to keep it secret until their arrangements are complete. Already, however, enormous orders from overseas have examined the new loom in full detail and will probably be available to the world in general within the near future.

"SAFETY FIRST" IN GREAT BRITAIN.

Excellent work continues to be done in Great Britain with a view to preserving the life and health of workers in all sorts of factories. The British Government is issuing a series of pamphlets on this subject, the seventh of which deals with the dangers of grinding wheels. Such wheels are used in modern factories at an extremely high speed, and consequently precautions have to be taken against the results of the wheels bursting. The necessary precautions are set out clearly and concisely in this pamphlet with the aid of illustrations taken from British factories.

THE BONES OF COLUMBUS.

Their Resting Place Is Not Known to Historians.

A new memorial for Christopher Columbus may be erected in Santo Domingo, but the prospect has brought fresh discussion as to where the discoverer of America is really buried. It is one of the ironies of the history of so great a discoverer that there should be any doubt as to where his bones lie. The Spanish nation, ever since Columbus died at Valladolid, Spain, in 1506, has claimed to have his ashes and those of his son and at least suppose that it cherishes them sacredly under the high altar of the Cathedral of Seville. The Spaniards say that the Dominicans jealous because the bones of Columbus were removed from Santiago de Cuba to Havana on the transfer of the island to the French in 1796, have trumped up the discovery of "the authentic remains" in the Cathedral of Santo Domingo, and that they have another elaborate body masquerading, as it were, in place of the bones of the great admiral.

Books have been written presenting the arguments as to whether the Seville bones remain in Spain or are in Santo Domingo. The uncertainty arises from doubt as to the identity of the bones carried away from Santo Domingo, and of those left behind. The remains, according to tradition, were interred in a vault under the altar on the right side of the high altar (the right side looking from the nave, not toward it), and those by them somewhere were also interred the remains of Columbus's son Diego, and afterward (on the other side of the altar) those of his grandson, Luis.

These were the bones brought from Spain, presumably at the request of Columbus, to be buried in Santo Domingo, but the intrusion of a lot of old bones from Spain was something of a shock to the authorities of Santo Domingo Cathedral. The incident was therefore passed by neglect, and, if there was any tablet to Columbus having the right to that of Columbus, it eventually disappeared. Nothing remained except a tradition that Columbus was buried on the right side of the altar.

In 1795, when the island was ceded to France, and when, in order that the ashes of the discoverer might not fall into the hands of foreigners, it was decreed that they should be sealed and removed to Havana, what was supposed to be the dust of Columbus was deposited in the Cathedral at Havana, and remained there until 1898, when it was removed to Seville. In 1877, some excavations in the Cathedral at Santo Domingo resulted in the discovery of a leaden box, which, containing a number of plainly recognizable bones, and an inscription on the lead, which, being translated, read: "The Discoverer of America, first admiral."

Therefore, in these confusing discoveries and doubts are the material for a lengthy dispute.

Of With Your Waistcoat.

Pinetti, the celebrated conjurer of the eighteenth century, in his performance at Versailles before the Empress Josephine in 1811, astonished all of the courtiers of their shirts without disturbing the rest of their attire. It was a very striking trick, it appears, hardly suited for the severer refinement of the present day.

The waistcoat can, however, be removed without taking the coat off, it being only necessary to unbutton the arm garments. In the waistcoat is not pulled over the back of the coat as in Pinetti's method but by moving the shirt.

The trick is performed as follows: First take the left corner (or lapel) of the coat, and push it through the left armhole of the waistcoat from the outside to the inside. Second, put the left hand and arm through the same armhole. The effect of this is to leave the left armhole of the waistcoat at the back of the coat.

Then take the right lapel of the coat, and put it through the left armhole of the waistcoat. Use the right hand and arm through the same armhole. Then pass the waistcoat over the right sleeve of the coat.

Last, but not least, use an old coat and waistcoat.

A Costly Theater.

The costliest theater in the world is an ancient amphitheater, says the Mexico Magazine. It is the National Theater of Mexico at Mexico City, which will cost approximately $20,000,000. This huge structure presented its builders with an engineering puzzle that has finally been solved. The whole City of Mexico is on the site of an ancient lake. Hence foundations are omitted from Mexican buildings and their places taken by a thin layer of concrete and steel, which extends for a considerable distance around the building. Deeper foundations were laid for the theater, reinforced with girders. They proceeded to disappear before the superstructure was erected. This has now been remedied.

Man's Marvelous Memory.

A man who has developed his memory to a point where the amazing store of information on a wide variety of subjects has been discovered at Birchenville, Huddersfield, England. He is John Heyworth, a builder's laborer, and he is self-taught.

Heyworth has 31,000 facts stored away in his brain. He can name every man who has played football for his country, and the winners of all cricket matches since 1850.

Another of his specialties is cricket scores and results. He can tell you the birthdays of famous and local celebrities. Once he learn a date he never forgets it, and he has more than once set parents right as to the birthdays of children.

Natives of the Punjab still spear their fish in small streams with a trident, not unlike that depicted on English coins.

CYNICAL DEFINITION

"Pa, what is politeness?"

"Politeness, my son, is the art of not letting other people know what we think of them."

PRESS OPINIONS

WHAT DOES IT MEAN?

(Woodstock Sentinel-Review)

Statistics show an increase in the arrests for crime in the United States during the two years of prohibition in that country. As to the significance of these statistics in relation to prohibition there is difference of opinion. Some of those who are out of sympathy with prohibition attribute to that measure the whole of the responsibility for the increase. The advocates of prohibition see in it a very different light. They trace the increase in crime to other causes, and argue that, bad as conditions are in regard to crime, they would be much worse were it not for prohibition.

Certainly there is room for argument. The mere fact that crime has increased during the "dry" rule, assuming that it has increased, is not conclusive evidence that prohibition increases crime, or even that it does not diminish crime; but certainly it is no proof that prohibition abolishes crime.

To reach a fair judgment it is necessary to face all the facts, and that is a difficult thing to do in regard to a matter concerning which people feel so strongly.

CANADA AND AUSTRALIA

(Brockville Recorder & Times)

The Canadian Minister of Commerce in Australia on public business which is said to be the negotiation of a reciprocity agreement between the Dominion and the Commonwealth. Whether a formal treaty is framed or not, it is expected that Mr. Rhodes will return with proposals for mutual tariff concessions and other plans for promoting trade. Australia is one of Canada's most important external markets, and the Canadian Government has shown alertness in sending a Minister to look personally after Canadian interests. The Commonwealth Government will be expected if it points to the one-sided nature of Canadian-Australian commerce. The returns for the four years show a pronounced export balance in Canada's favor:

	Exports	Imports
1919	$14,019,629	$1,262,446
1920	11,415,627	1,271,173
1921	3,112,841	730,804
1922	10,675,600	1,041,927

Of our imports the largest single item is raw wool. In 1921, the last year for which details have been printed, an item of $120,352 appeared for canned and preserved fruits—evidently the first of them products imported by Canada. Compared with our purchases, our sales are large and varied. The Commonwealth is the best overseas market for Canadian paper, particularly newsprint. Of wood and wood products, including pulp and paper, our exports in 1921 were valued at $7,536,633; of hoots and shoes, $170,562; vegetable products, including grain, flour and tobacco, $1,468,504; animals and their products, $580,317; textiles and textile products, $1,211,765; iron and its products, $6,197,411—including agricultural implements, $1,859,299; passenger automobiles, $1,226,442, and motor trucks, $443,950. A portion of this trade has since been lost, as the duties in agricultural implements, through Australian fiscal legislation, but some of these handicaps may be removed if the Commonwealth is offered a generous hospitality in the Canadian market.

PAY, ANYWAY

Magistrate—You assaulted this man merely because he differed from you in an argument. Is that so?

Defendant—I couldn't help it, your honor; the man is a Socialist.

Magistrate—Well, you must pay a fine of $50 and costs and in future you should try and restrain your fists when your human judgment has been removed if the Commonwealth is offered.

Good Will

Again the Spirit of Christmas kindles within us memories of old friends= whose Good Will for nearly eighty=eight years has helped us to maintain our ideals.

In hearty appreciation of loyal friendship, we wish you all the happiness at Christmastide and throughout the New Year.

THE INTELLIGENCER

CHRISTMAS IS HERE

The Yuletide season exemplified by evergreens, holly and bright red blazing on white, has quietly taken possession of Belleville. The keen December winds sweeping down the streets reddening cheeks and making fingers and noses tingle and smart adds the necessary touch of zest to the effect.

St. Nicholas in all his glory reigns supreme.

The streets have their allotment of holiday green and the windows along the streets are blazing in the glory of holiday attire. Bookstores, Department stores and toy shops, hold the eyes of the children, whose noses are flattened daily against the cold plate glass, leaving funny little oily marks to mar the vision of what's within. Hundreds of persons pass and pause before the windows of merchants of all trades—"window shopping" for Christmas Eve—

And so another Christmas will pass into history—

In the meantime

HOW SANTA CLAUS FOUND TWO LITTLE KIDDIES IN A DARK STREET

Their Father Had Recently Died—They Moved Into a Dreary Back Street and Wrote Santa a Letter and He Remembered all the Family

A little town was pressed close against the window, earless of the frosty chill beginning to creep over the pane, while two gray eyes gazed into the gathering twilight. The view without was not so entrancing: one might think, as to attract Max Kendall for its own sake. Passers-by were very few, but Max scrutinized each one, letting his little face expand in eagerness and idly half hearing the talk behind him, as his elders sitten crouched before the open coal-grate.

"No real Christmas at all," sighed Dot. "What did you get your heart on, Bitsy?"

"Same as you, Sue," was the laconic reply.

"I don't believe we shall have one mentall thing," said Dot disconsolately. "But then we are no worse off than my children and Rite. She never grumbles."

"She's Rite, not us," said Ditto.

"I wish I had a birthday," said Bat, after a little silence. "It made this one look so dingy. No wonder we can't have any Christmas, living here."

"If we lived there we shouldn't have pays, now," said her sister, coldly.

Max stopped his tattoo suddenly, having lost the whispered sentence in his interest in the preceding remark.

"Dot, can't Santa Claus find us here?" he asked, wonderingly.

"I might not, Max, my precious," said Dot, with a sorry little laugh.

The question on the boy's lips was arrested as he turned, to nod and smile at some one hastening through the gloom and up the steps.

"Here she is!" cried Max, hopping down from his perch, and the next moment "she" was in the room.

"Well, twinnies, is it good cheer today? Ah, my little knight, sister saw you at your post from far down the street."

So, stooping to kiss Max, passing caressing hands over the twins' brown braids, and bestowing a skilful poke on the smiling fire, Rite Kendall took off her wraps, and you saw why Max was content to stare into the fire—her coming.

She was not beautiful; keen intelligence shone in her clear dark eyes, her face mirrored candor, courage, and the tenderness of a strong heart. Her voice had a cheery ring, as if used to encouraging feebler souls; and truly that had been no small part of Rite Kendall's work since her father died nearly a year ago. From his grave she came back to find herself the stay of an invalid mother, the anchor and guide of four robust, rollicking children, and the contriver to make a scanty income stretch over large needs. A sprov from the pretty home-like house, a settling into cheaper lodgings, a changing up of music scholars here and there, a fortunate engagement as soprano in a church choir, and the new life began—the new life that begins for us all when a familiar face is shut away, and a loved presence called from the home. It was uncommon; perhaps that very fact makes it the more pitiful. Rite's voice gave no hint of it as she greeted the children and asked tenderly for the invalid.

"How is the mother? Is Elsie her nurse this evening?"

Elsie was, and proclaimed the fact by seeking down plainly to say that "mamma's nap was comforting, and had given her a 'sturdinary appetite.'"

At this welcome news a daintily appointed tray was carried up by Rite's hands, and presently she, with the children and Aunt Theodosia, had tea in the sitting-room.

A cheerful meal she made it, with pleasant talk of things she had seen in her round of music lessons, and never a suggestion of her own weariness and discouragement; so that the twins grew merry and said to each other, that perhaps it would not be so dismal a Christmas after all, and Max and Elsie prattled gleefully of past delights and expected pleasures.

"How these children believe in that heathenish Santa Claus!" said Aunt Theodosia, as Rite came down from seeing the four safely tucked up for the night. "Isn't it time they had some idea of things as they are?"

"It pleased papa to have Max and Elsie believe in that legend," said Rite gently; "and they are not ignorant of the best part of Christmas. I only wish there might be something to put in the stockings they will hang up with such faith."

Aunt Theodosia sighed, a

"This is a crooked life; up hill all the way."

"But every hill climbed brings plainer things higher up," said Rite with a sad smile. "It will be a great help if I lose my place at St. Jude's; they talk of closing the church a while until the new rector comes. But perhaps—yes, surely—there will be a way over it. I will not lose heart and faith, as well as place."

Aunt Theodosia sighed again. Rite looked into the coals and prayed; up into the children dreamed of Santa Claus, and "visions of sugarplums" danced through their heads.

In the kitchen the tired mother was sleeping, while Elsie watched for Christmas.

In a village two hundred miles away some other people were thinking of Christmas. The snow had drifted about the little buff cottage—the trail that strained from blank windows upon the white path which no one watched longingly, waiting the coming of dear footsteps. The elderly couple who sat by the fire had long ago passed the days of restless waiting for the eager reach-out toward future good, yet when the whistle proclaimed the brief stop of the train that emitted express to the quiet valley, the woman stirred uneasily, and looked up at her husband, whose wistful language he answered.

"I don't look much for a letter from Rite, and shall go down there thing in the morning. Dick don't write very often."

"Yet we have patient acquiescence in her voice. "But it's coming Christmas, father; seems as if he must write to us at such a time than."

The old man nodded, but he did not speak.

"He was born on Christmas, you known, father. We always taught him what a blessed star rose in the East that night for all the world and told him how we took comfort that it was our boy's birth-time—as if it had been a token. For we was in sore grief then, you know, over little Alice. Dick will write, father; he can't forget Christmas; perhaps he will be a better boy for thinking of it.

The son was a boy still to the mother's heart; she did not recall how the years had fled, taking so much of the boyish truth and innocence and purity. She thought of the Star in the East, and in patience of hope waited for the Birthday so full of promise.

"Elsie, are you awake?"

"Me? yes; do you want to talk?"

"Whisper, Elsie, or Rite will come and speak to us to be still. Elsie," with an impressive shaking of the voice, "don't you think Dot said Santa Claus couldn't find us here?"

Elsie sat up suddenly on her pillow and stared across at her small brother's bed in the opposite corner.

"Why, Max Kendall!"

"She did, Elsie. We have moved you know, and I suppose he will look for us in the old house, and won't know where we have gone, Dot 'most cried.

"But, Max, if Santa goes there won't the people tell him where we are?" said Elsie.

"Nobody sees him, don't you know?" with a touch of scorn at Elsie's ignorance.

"He just comes down the chimney when people are asleep. I wish I knew how to let him know we have moved. He will never think of looking in this ugly street."

Elsie gave a puzzled sigh; she could not; she could not plan.

"Elsie" after a long silence: "Elsie, we will write to him; all ourselves, and tell him about it."

"But you don't know where he lives," said the practical little woman; "and letters directed wrongly get dead, and nobody reads them. Dot said so."

"Well—then—then we will take it to ole old house, Elsie, and get leave to put it by the chimney, where he will see it when he comes down with our presents. They he can drive right over here, don't you see?"

Max was triumphant, and Elsie doubted no more.

Writing was an unknown art to the little boy, but Max could print, and the important letter was begun. It took quaff time, especially as it was to be kept a profound secret from the elders.

"We will surprise them!" said Max gleefully.

"Dot will jump and laugh, and Rite will smile the nicest."

The days went by and Rite's clear eyes had a troubled shade. She knew definitely now that she was to sing no more at St. Jude's, and the salary small as it was, could ill be spared. It was not now a question of how to provide Christmas cheer for the little ones, but of coal and flour and delicacies for the invalid, of the wherewithal to be clothed. If she could only get paid advance pay for Lucy Jewett's music quarter, the children should have something, Rite thought, and she had to deny herself food to make it up in the family expenses.

So on this errand of unceasing—a pitiful Christmas errand—Rite joined the pay hurrying crowd on the street that afternoon, never dreaming that Max and Elsie were a dozen paces behind her, tripping with joyous, childish faith on their mission, the precious letter to Santa Claus safe in Max's deepest pocket.

"This is the house! Don't bite your gloves now, Elsie, while I'm asking about putting the letter by the chimney."

"As if I should!" cried Elsie, indignantly, as Max tugged at the door.

Alas for the little hearts beating so high with hope and courage! A surly servant opened the door, and told waiting Rite that Santa Claus, said:

"Nobody at home; gone for the holidays."

Max thrust out a sturdy arm to bar the closing door, and began:

"We used to live here, and please—"

"Nobody at home!" and the door went together with a snap.

Rite's footsteps were looked at each other, and then Elsie began to cry. The disappointment was more than Max swallowed hard to keep down a sob, then suddenly dashed down the steps and grasped the coat of the retreating figure.

"Please, won't you ask him to let me in?"

"Do you live here?" asked the one thing unceremoniously addressed.

"No, we used to, and we wanted a letter because we have moved, and now he won't listen, so we shan't have any Christmas!"

The gentleman, not unnaturally, looked perplexed and a trifle annoyed, but the children's distress was evidently great, and he would not leave them without an effort to alleviate it.

"Tell me all about it," he said, and so drew from Max the story; how papa was in heaven, and they had moved to an ugly little street where Dot said Santa Claus could not find them so they had written him a letter, and not merely that they wanted presents themselves, but they wanted to surprise Dot and Rite, who was so good and worked so hard for them all.

"Did you expect Santa Claus to find your letter? Such a strange arrangement."

"Why, yes; Santa Claus loves children and they tried to be good. Didn't he know all about that?"

"May I see your letter? Perhaps I can help you send it." said the gentleman.

Max hesitated, but other resource he had not, so he slowly gave up the precious paper and scarcely suppressed he eyes that scanned the "puny, pathetic, crooked sentences.

"Dear Santy Claus: who papa went to heaven we moved to 28 South 7 street—now pleas tho it is not nice like it's name—but thats a chimney and we luv you and be good—pleas bring Rite a present and the twins and Dot I'm most particly—marmin a ick

Max sa I Rite—

"If you will trust me, Miss Rite Elsie" said the stranger, and the children thought his voice much more kind than when he first spoke to them, "if you will trust me, I will be sure that Santa Claus has the letter tonight. He will certainly mind it."

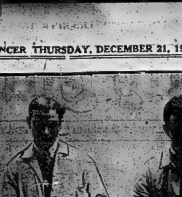

How the children's faces glowed at the promise; then tugging back with them, the stranger walked almost to "28 South 7 street," encouraging them to prattle of Rite and the twins, and the happy Christmas times when papa was with his darlings.

"That's Rite's church," said Max, as they passed it. "She sings there. Nobody sings like Rite. Don't you want to hear her sing about the Star? She sings it tonight, and Elsie and I are going to church to hear her."

"Do come," said Elsie, "you will like it so much."

The children dashed into the house full of their scent, sparkling and glowing with hope the brighter that it had come so near to disappointment; and the stranger stood just wayfingering absently the little note and thinking of matters that had not stirred his heart for years. He smiled at himself more than once that afternoon as he went from shop to shop, gay with holiday adornments, but had never been Christmasing like this before. But he could look back to days when a little lad like Max had rejoiced in the contents of his stocking, hung over night by a wide chimney where a generous wood-fire leaped and glowed; he could plainly see a loving face that smiled on his frolics and rejoiced in his joy.

Somehow, after that shopping and those memories, with that little trustful note in his pocket, with Elsie's kiss on his lips, and Max's gleeful voice yet almost in his ears, he could not spend Christmas Eve quite as he had planned. It was folly which the next day's light would drive away, but just now he could not shake it off. So he strolled aimlessly about until he chanced, or was guided, to enter the street where stood "Rite's church." Perhaps it was not chance that caused the Kendals just then to be at the steps, and Rite turning, dimpled with glad recognition, and beckoned vehemently as he stood in the shadow.

Rite's Christmas errand had been unavailing. Yet in her little room she must have found some comfort, for she let it with her eyes clear, shining and serene, and the people at St. Jude's had never heard her voice so rich, so pure, so exultant, as when she sang the carol—old, but new each year:

"In the East a star doth rise
Grand and rejoicing;
Look unto it, heavy eyes,
Hear the angels voicing,
Glory first to God, and then
Peace on earth, good-will to men!"

Rite! All tied up, addressed to you, and left at the door while you were at church."

"For me? It must be a mistake."

But there it was, name and street correctly written, a great knobby brown-papered bundle, suggestive of Christmas cheer which Rite had so longed to give the little ones.

To open it was a moment's work, and there were toys, pictures, books, bonbons, a goodly array, labelled variously, "For Max." "For Elsie," or member of the family forgotten, and in the midst a card bearing the brief explanation, "From Santa Claus."

Rite's surprise was as complete as ever Max could desire, and her joy as great. The marvel the mystery was hopeless, and with grateful smiles and tears Rite filled a row of small stockings, while Aunt Theodosia exclaimed and shook her head, doubtful, lest after all some evil might be hid in the mystery.

Max and Elsie needed no explanation the next day. To their sight the matter was clear; Santa Claus had received their letter and answered it. Rite, watching them, and re-reading a note that had come and breakfast time inviting her to sing for another church at a salary that far exceeded the one lost at St. Jude's thanked God and took courage.

She did not know that the childish letter in the next section of Santa Claus's were links in the chain that led one spring soul back to the light; she never knew that the mother in the valley two hundred miles away, welcoming to heart and home that day the son who went out girt followed by prayers of such unfaltering faith. Rite never learned how nearly another life had been lost in sin, and how much more she and the spirit within her had given, than—she had received that Christmas Day. But gladly and gratefully she sung, and the children's voices joined hers,

"Glory first to God, and then
Peace on earth, good-will to men!"

LIGHT PLUM PUDDINGS

These are particularly good. They should be made of medium size, because of their lightness. For four or five puddings, bake until deeply browned five teacupfuls (1 lb.) of fine breadcrumbs, and pour over them two pints of boiling milk. Mix together one pound each of flour, mashed potatoes and grated carrot, two pounds of sugar (soft brown sugar, when obtainable), a pound and a half each of finely chopped suet, plumped currants and halved raisins, a quarter-pound of shredded mixed peel, four teaspoonfuls of salt, and one level teaspoonful each of nutmeg and cinnamon. Slightly beat eight eggs, mix them with the breadcrumbs when they have soaked for about half an hour, and stir into the dry ingredients; steam in greased basin for about five hours. When required for use, steam for at least another hour, and let them stand for a few minutes before turning out of the basin.

PLUM PUDDING

Here is a recipe that will make one good-sized pudding: Take 1 cup suet, 1 cup breadcrumbs, 1 1-2 cups chopped suet, 1 ½ cups seeded raisins, 1 cup sugar, 2 cups flour, ½ cup molasses, ½ cup sherry wine, 1 cup citron peel, 2 apples chopped fine, 3 beaten eggs, 2 apples chopped fine, 3 beaten eggs and 1 teaspoonful each of soda, ground cloves, allspice, cinnamon and salt. Fill a large mould only half full, cover tightly and steam 3 hours.

White Fruit Cake with Nuts.

Cream well a cup of butter with one cupful and a quarter of sugar. Add the beaten yolks of two eggs, two-thirds of a cupful of milk, one teaspoonful of orange extract, one teaspoonful of vanilla extract, two cupfuls and a quarter of flour, one tablespoonful of lemon juice, half a cupful of sultana raisins, a third of a cupful of currants, half a cupful of chopped preserved cherries, three-quarters of a cupful of chopped nut meats, two tablespoons of chopped candied orange peel and the beaten whites of two eggs. Mix carefully and bake in a buttered and floured cake-tin in a moderate oven for an hour and a quarter.

LUCKY AND UNLUCKY

Our Heritage From the Seers and Sages of the Olden Days

—Life's Perplexities and Curious Coincidences Explained by the Early Philosophers —What the Tea-Cup Betokens—The Significance of Wedding Dates —Christmas Cookery—the New Moon—The Black Cat—Odd Numbers and the Proverbial Horseshoe.

(Compiled in 1871)

From the earliest times poor human nature has been superstitious; it is so even in the present day, and a collection of the lucky and unlucky omens which are familiar to many of us, (though we do not believe in them) will not be without interest.

The first view of the new moon is considered lucky, if seen over the right shoulder, unlucky over the left, and whatever the state of your pocket one may be when you first see the Lady Luna, so they will continue throughout the month. To lose money in the first to the new mooon was supposed to avert all evil during eight days; indeed her influence has been considered to operate even after life was extinct—for farmers believed that if an animal was slaughtered during the decrease of the moon, the meat would shrivel when boiling. whereas one killed at the increase would swell "plump in the pot."

A black cat who chooses to take up his abode with you, unlavited; should be welcomed most heartily; he brings luck, and should be wise to scratch the legs of your tables, do not interfere with him, he is only making your luck more secure.

A dog following you is a good omen and strange to say, the darkey the dog, the greater the luck. Though puss is a benefit to you when uninvited, yet beware of taking her with you when you move; if you do your luck stay will be short; so also if you move on a Wednesday, but never forget to take your dog BEFORE THE LAST load of furniture.

The first spring lamb brings luck to the seer, if he happens to see the head first. Put it on the head if you can catch it; but should you chance to meet its tail first, keep as far away as you possibly can.

So the first sight of spring birds sagors good if they fly towards you, bad if the reverse. No matter how much you may dislike a fly in your room or food at other seasons, yet give the FIRST one a warm welcome for—

"He brings you health
Or untold wealth"

A stalk of tea swimming on the surface of a fragrant beverage, foretells a visitor; if tough it is a gentleman, if soft a lady. Look on the back of the left hand, and tapped smartly with the right, you can fix the time of the visit; each dap represents a day, and the process must be continued till the stalk moves. Two spoons in the same cup betoken a wedding, and the quantity "grounds" in that same cup, determines the wealth or poverty of the future partner.

But the arrival of visitors is not foretold in the tea cup only; the cat brings them when she washes her face OVER HER EARS; so does the rooster when he crows upon your doorstep, or marches majestically through the barnyard with a straw in his tail feathers. Drop your fork, or a pin, or indeed anything pointed, and the visitor will surely arrive that day. If the point of the fallen article sticks into the floor. A sneeze before breakfast is equally efficacious, but in each case the circumstances must be accidental.

Never pass a pin that lies with the head toward you—be sure to pick it up, even if it lies on the muddy side—walk and you have on a new pair of sleeves; but if the point is toward you, leave it there, no matter how much you may need it. So also pick up and carry home all old iron, the heavier and rustier it is the better—and should you be so fortunate as to find an old horse-shoe, your fortune is made; all you have to do is to hang it up over your bed, and after that you may retire from business if you will, for wealth will surely pour in upon you unsought.

To have your front teeth wide apart is a sign of riches; so also is a mole on the neck—"Gold by the measure money by the peck,"—But a mole on the arm brings only harm.

Strange, how in these silly superstitions, the right is always for good, the left for bad. The right cheek flushes or the right ear burns, if an absent one speaks well of you, the left when they speak ill. The palm of your right hand itches when you are to receive money, the left when you are to pay it away. Itching sole of the right foot signifies that you will tread on strange ground to your advantage; itching of the left shows you will go somewhere or other to your loss. If the right elbow itches, it is for some good to happen you, but the reverse if the left. As the nose combines both the right and left, so if it itches you will be "kissed, cursed or blessed" before night. Another meaning is that you will "kiss a fool."

You need never suffer from cramps if you will only carry around with you a mouse's foot on the leg of a sheep known to many as the "cramp bone." A hare's foot prevents rheumatism; the extreme tip of a united tongue is a sure prevention of indigestion, and a raw potato in the pocket frightens away gout.

Be very careful about weddings, never wear the smallest piece of wedding dress carried by a person losing black but your shoes, if a lady—your hat, boots and coat, if a gentleman. Avoid throwing a shoe after the bride, and let the old one belong to the right foot. Above all, steer clear of the possibility of a duo crossing the path of the bride BEFORE the knot is tied or a cat APPEARS.

If it is your own wedding, consult the weather almanack so as to secure sunshine that day, and manage if possible to so place yourself in church that a ray of sunshine will fall on some part of the wedding party. May is an unlucky month in which to marry, and Wednesday and Friday unlucky days. Never begin a piece of work on Friday if you wish to have it finished; never allow a new servant to enter upon her duties, or undertake any important work; and above all do not permit any of your children to be born on that day, or they will be true representatives of 'Young America' and 'Young Canada.'

"Tho child on Friday born Looks on all old with scorn."

During these hard times, ladies often find it difficult to obtain a new dress, but the remedy lies with themselves only. Get a spider to walk over your old one, or a spark of fire to fall on it, or draw the ten of hearts from out of a pack of cards, and your desire will be granted—"new clothes" must come.

Beware of ever acknowledging that you suffer from what is called "a spot on the tongue." It shows to a certainty that you have been guilty of telling a falsehood. So also if you venture on a hiccough.

All odd numbers are lucky except thirteen, and it is certain death, (within a year) to one of the party if that number happen to meet together for any meal. Coodnatured, easy people say that if one of the thirteen marries the others are safe, or if one will abstain from eating while at the table. Seven is a particularly lucky number, witness the seventh son; or better still the seventh son of a seventh son. A cricket on the hearth is the harbinger of good to an Englishman, so is a stork on the roof to a Dutchman. To tumble upstairs is also lucky, no matter if you blacken your shins in so doing.

If on rising from a chair it happens to fall, your matrimonial prospects are blighted for that year, but strange to say the present of a pair of garters ensures marriage within that year. Should it ever happen that the same person not only received that gold colored "order of knighthood" but also "tipped up his chair" during the same year, I dread to think what may be the consequence.

To shiver without being cold denotes that a goose is walking over your grave, but whether feathered or not, I cannot say.

Any day of the year you may boil a plum pudding as you please, but on December 25th be sure to name an old bachelor, as you commit your treasure to the pot. To name an old maid whipper snotty as mince pies enter the oven ensures their coming out a success. In some country places the same idea is carried out with regard to black puddings. As the first is placed in the pot the mistress of the house thinks of a bachelor, (that is to secure perfect boiling), as the first one is lifted out and laid to strain on the dresser, the mistress of the house thinks of a lady, (this is to prevent the cracking of the skin), and it is expected that the two that "thought of" will become husband and wife.

To put on any article of clothing "inside out" or "hind before" is rather dubious of meaning, for to "change your luck" might be to change it for better; at any rate so thought the Norman Conquerer, when on preparing for the eventful battle of Hastings, he put his corselet on "hind before." When his attendants expressed regret at the occurence he told them it was to show that a duke would be changed to a king before night. True in this case at any rate.

If a dog should howl before your door, be sure to notice his position. If his tail points to the house, it is certain death to one of the inmates; but if his head, then only serious illness.

Never accept, as a present, any cutting instrument, such as a knife, pair of scissors etc.; such a present will "cut your love in two." Give something in exchange but money is best.

To pare your nails on Sunday is very unlucky. His Satanic Majesty is supposed to gather all the pieces to make a comb of—but I could never find out in what way this was supposed to affect the original possessors of the nails. A baby is doomed to grow up a thief if a pair of scissors are used to cut the nails before it reaches the mature age of one month.

Many other equally ridiculous things are in some cases, still believed in, but let us be thankful that this superstitious ignorance is dying out, as it must do, before a greater spread of education.

SANTA CLAUS

He comes in the night! He comes in the night,
He softly, silently comes;
While the little heads on the pillows so white
Are dreaming of bugles and drums.
He cuts through the snow like a ship through the foam,
While the white flakes around him whirl.
Who tells him I know not, but he soon finds his home
Of each good little boy and girl.

His sleigh it is long, and deep and wide;
It will carry a host of things,
While dozens of drums hang over the side,
With sticks sticking under the strings.
And jingle to the hearth like a stone,
He little red stockings he silently fills,
Till the stockings will hold an more;
He brings dolls and sleds for the great snow hills
Are quickly set down on the floor.
Then Santa Claus mounts to the roof like a bird,
And springs to his seat in the sleigh;
Not a sound of a bugle or drum is heard
As he noiselessly gallops away.

He rides to the East, and he rides to the West,
Of his goodies he touches not one;
He waits for the grumbs of the Christmas feast;
When the dear little folks are done.
Old Santa Claus does all the good he can;
This beautiful mission is his;
Then, children, be kind to the little old man,
When you find who the little man is.

Seasonable Suggestions for the Yuletide Baking—What Women Were During the Christmas Festivities of Seventy-Five Years Ago—Helpful Hints in the Making of Fondant and Fudge—Stuffed Dates and Raisins—Candied Nuts and Xmas Sweets

PLAIN CHRISTMAS CAKE

2 cups brown sugar, 1 cup butter, 2 well beaten eggs, 1 teaspoon each ground cloves, cinnamon and nutmeg, 1 cup sour milk or buttermilk, 2 teaspoons soda, 4 cups flour, 1 cup each raisins, currants, dates and mixed peel. Cream the butter and sugar and add other ingredients; chop the peel, raisins and dates fine, sprinkle with flour and add last. Bake slowly. This makes a medium-sized cake.

Holiday Fruit Cake.

One lb. butter, 1½ lbs. dark sugar, (creeps well together), 6 eggs, (leave in shell mixture), 1 cup black molasses, 1 nutmeg grated, ½ large teaspoon ground cinnamon, ½ teaspoon ground allspice, ½ teaspoon ground cloves, ½ lb. peel, ½ lb. shelled almonds, ½ lb. shelled walnuts, 2 lbs. currants, 2 lbs. seeded raisins, 3 teaspoons extract bitter almond, 2½ teaspoon baking soda (dissolved in a little boiling water), ½ tumbler hot water. Mix well with four into a stiff dough. This makes two large cakes, or a set of three, and will keep for a year.

Christmas Cake.

Take 1 lb. butter, 4 lbs. seedless raisins, ½ lb. blanched almonds, 1 lb. sugar, 1 lb. mixed peel, ½ cup milk, 1 teaspoon soda dissolved in the milk, 2 lbs. flour, 4 eggs. Scrub the hands very clean and mix the batter with them—that is, if you have not a cake mixer. Put into a greased baking tin, steam until nearly done, then finish in a rather hot oven.

Light Plum Puddings.

These are particularly good. They should be made of medium size, because of their lightness. For four or five puddings, bake until deeply browned, five teacupfuls (1 lb.) of fine breadcrumbs, and pour over them 2 pints of boiling milk. Mix together one pound each of flour, washed potatoes and grated carrot, 2 pounds of suet (not brown sugar, when obtainable), a pound and a half each of finely chopped suet, plumped currants and halved raisins, a quarter pound of shredded mixed peel, 4 teaspoonfuls of salt, and 1 level teaspoonful each of nutmeg and cinnamon. Slightly beat 6 eggs, mix them with the bread crumbs when they have soaked for about half an hour, and stir into the dry ingredients; steam in greased basin for about five hours. When reheating, steam for at least another hour, and let them stand for a few minutes before turning out of the basin.

UNCOOKED FONDANT

3-8 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla or other desired flavoring

Beat the whites of the eggs slightly, add the salt, flavoring and confectioner's sugar a little at a time until the mixture is quite stiff. Knead with the hands, then divide into four portions, color one pale pink, another lavender, another green and the fourth the white. Use vegetable colorings and be sure not to color too deeply. Form into various shapes and set aside to become firm.

A few coarsely chopped nuts may be worked into a portion of the Fondant, or small pieces of the Fondant may be rolled around shelled nuts or plump raisins or pieces of candied cherries.

Small pieces of this Fondant may be rolled into balls and dipped in melted chocolate.

RAISIN FUDGE

1 cup brown sugar
1 cup white sugar
2 tablespoons butter
1 cup raisins
1 teaspoon vanilla
Cook the sugars and butter together until they form a soft ball—if using a thermometer cook to 223 Degree F. Add the raisins, cook a moment longer, cool, add the vanilla and beat until creamy, then turn into a buttered pan and cut into squares when cold.

CANDIED CHESTNUTS

For these use large chestnuts. Peel them, then place in the oven for a few minutes—until the inner tough skin is crisp so that it can be rubbed off. Prepare a syrup in the proportion of two cups of sugar to one cup of water. Simmer the chestnuts in this until tender, drain, roll in granulated sugar, and lay on waxed paper or on table oilcloth to cool and dry.

FRUIT AND NUT NOUGAT

4 cups granulated sugar
1 cup corn syrup
1 tablespoon water
Whites of 2 eggs
½ cup raisins
½ cup mixed nuts
½ cup candied cherries
¼ cup crystallized ginger

Cook the sugar and syrup with the water over a slow fire, and when a little of the mixture lifted out of the pan on a spoon, using a thermometer cooks to 300 Degree F. Cool slightly, then pour mixture over the whites which have been beaten stiffly, during while pouring. Add the raisins and cherries, turn into a buttered pan and when cold cut into small squares.

CHOCOLATE DIPPED FRUIT

Confectioner's dipping chocolate
Cocoa butter
Dried fruits
Tiny pieces of fruit cake

Melt the chocolate in the top part of a double boiler—adding 2 pounds of chocolate and ½ ounce of cocoa butter—this helps to keep it soft and prevents glazing. When thoroughly melted, and the consistency of molasses, it is ready with a fork or skewer to dip the fruit, which is twisted into the form of a ball, placed on waxed paper—shelled nuts, candied cherries, candied pineapple, as well as fruit cake, etc. Place after dipping on a marble slab or table oilcloth and let cool and thoroughly set.

CARAMEL ALMONDS

1 pound Jordan almonds
2 tablespoons water
1 pound sugar.

Shell, then blanch the almonds, put the sugar in a granite pan with the water and stir until the sugar is dissolved, then add the almonds which have been previously browned in the oven. Stir the caramel and almonds all the time with a candy fork, pour out on a marble slab to cool.

I had an idea about that I always played with so I ran out in the Dicken behind the stove and got my rubber and brought it in and placed it on the floor in front of the grate, right near where all the stockings were hanging. I then went over, and lay down under a sofa, and tried to keep awake. Before long they sent me to bed, which was in a box in the corner of Bill's room. I was pretty tired and went sound asleep. Just as it was growing light next morning I woke up and very soon afterward Bill woke up. In setting up Bill woke his sisters and we all trooped down stairs to see what Santa had left. Oh, there were hundreds of toys and presents, it seemed. Bill had a pair of skates, a new red sweater, and lots of things, while the girls got dolls, and candies and toys; oh, there were just loads of presents. Everybody was talking and happy. Suddenly I thought of my shoe. I looked, and there was the prettiest dog collar that I ever saw, and also one of those funny blankets that dogs wear.

Then I knew what Christmas meant and why everybody looked forward to it so much. I was awfully proud of my pretty new collar with my name on it. I was glad to get the blanket, but did not think I could use it much. Before last winter passed, however, there were lots of days that I was awfully glad to wear that blanket to keep the cold winds from freezing me. I am just as excited this year about Christmas and I wonder if I will get anything. I have tried to be an awfully good dog and I hope I will.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

To The Editor of The Intelligencer:

Christmas comes but once a year, let us at least be glad and grateful on this Christmas day. There are so many voices calling us to that, surely we cannot resist even if we would.

For the day itself, and what it has meant in our own little history, and what it meant in precious memory and inspiration, we ought to be grateful and gladly grateful.

For what it has meant to the world through all these centuries, a day set unique in the midst of all other days that compels men to think of little children and all simple, kindly humane things, and above all, how glad we should be when we think of it as the day that brought God's love into the world.

More and More as life goes on we ought to be forming the habit of looking upon its great occasions with growing appreciation. Christmas is a great opportunity, and it would be too bad if we allowed it to slip by as unappreciated.

Christmas is a great opportunity because it gives to each of us a unique chance of adding something to the sum total of Human Happiness and good cheer and unaffected gladness, and among all the opportunities of life there is not one more worth while than this.

The memory of the years will not lay up any better record of our life than this, that we helped to make Christmas for some one at least, a joy and gladness and a benediction.

W. H. MADEE.

FRUIT NUT PASTE

cup dates
1 cup figs
Grated rind of 1 orange
1 cup seeded raisins
1 cup shelled nuts
Juice of 1 orange
A very little orange juice, if needed.

Pass the fruits and nuts together twice through the food chopper using the finest knife. Add the orange and lemon rind, also the orange juice if it is necessary to soften the mixture, but be very careful not to get it too wet. Press out about one inch thick on a board sprinkled with confectioner's sugar, cut into squares or diamonds and roll these in granulated sugar and set aside to dry; or dip in melted chocolate.

FRUIT JELLIES

2 cups cooked sifted dried apricots, peaches or very thick apple sauce.
¾ cup water
3 tablespoons granulated gelatine
Soaked in ½ cup cold water
2 cups sugar
Flavoring extract.

Boil the sugar and water together for five minutes, then add the fruit pulp and simmer stirring frequently until thick marmalade. Add the softened gelatine a little at a time, boil up thoroughly, cool, flavor and drop the mixture from a teaspoon on to waxed paper or table oilcloth. Let these drops remain undisturbed for twenty-four hours; then roll in granulated sugar and again allow to stand for 60 days.

Various flavorings may be used with different fruits—as almonds or lemon extract with peaches or apricots, lime juice may be used instead of the lemon. Fruit pulp, but the quantity of sugar should be reduced one-half.

SOME QUAINT CHRISTMAS COSTUMES

All sorts of quaint beliefs are centred around the Yuletide festivities. Many of them have been forgotten in the great British towns, but amongst country-folk they are still as strong as ever.

The burning of the Yule log is an important ceremony. It must be lighted with the last piece of the log of the Christmas before, and on no account must it be allowed to go out. Whilst it is burning the door must be watched carefully to see that no beggar, or "first-foot," There are numbers of professional "lucky birds" who have quite a long list of clients. In some cases the office is handed down from father to son for generations.

Another important Christmas custom is the making of a frumenty, a kind of porridge made of wheat and milk. If raisins are added you obtain "plum porridge," which was the traditional Christmas dish before plum puddings came into fashion. The eating ceremonity at the proper season is said to ensure months of good luck.

It is important that the first person to cross the threshold on Christmas morning should be a dark-haired man, who is called a "lucky bird," or "first-footer." There are numbers

An old Christmas custom which has fallen into disuse in England is the appointing of a Lord of Misrule, who in the good old days was absolute autocrat of the house during the festive season.

His business was to organise the revels and to invent all kinds of merry "stunts." He would play practical jokes on everyone with complete impunity.

One of his chief duties was to see that the dish of dishes, the great boar's head, was conducted into the dining hall with proper ceremony. First would come a motley crowd of men and girls, in quaint disguises. Then came the musicians playing a jolly air, and behind them marched four stout servitors bearing a gigantic dish.

Round the table went the procession, making as much cheerful noise as possible. Then the boar's head was placed before the carver, and the real began. Meantime his lordship was engaged in raising a laugh against each guest in turn.

It must have been a splendid opportunity for paying off old scores, but it was as well not to go too far, otherwise if the real lord was inclined to be testy the Lord of Misrule might lose his job, or even his head.

CHRISTMAS IN THE WOODS

A Yuletide Adventure in the Quebec Bush—A Descriptive Tale of the Early Days—Quebec Citizens Decide to Spend Christmas in the Woods—A Wandering Lunatic and Other Way-farers Find Shelter in Their Camp—Overproof Liquor and Habitant Tobacco Are Part of the Festivities—Their Bush Camp is Burned—They Are Left at the Mercy of the Elements —Find Shelter at an Indian Hut and Eventually Survive—An Interesting Account of an Actuality.

It is not long since the writer, with three friends, planned and executed a trip to the country. It was in winter, a few days before Christmas, and the point of departure was the ancient city of Quebec. 'I am not going to give a description of that renowned place, nor even of the expedition, whose object was the pursuit of game. The inhabitants of the forgner Capital of Canada are, in the winter time, either blessed or cursed with a superabundance of leisure time; in fact, from the close of navigation, about the middle of November, to the middle or the end of April, there is little to do, besides killing time, and so that delightful occupation the friends of all are fully devoted, and to it was due the conception of our trip. Our destination was about forty miles north, and having procured a berlin (a box without a cover, on runners) two Canadian ponies tandem, and looked after the commissariat, after a few hours' driving we arrived at our destination. We were sufficiently successful to satisfy all, each member of the party having bagged one caribou, several brace of partridges, trapped about a dozen hares, and caught a large quantity of fine trout, averaging about seven pounds. It was the morning before Christmas when we started homewards—a bright, glorious morning, with a sky such as is seldom seen out of Canada; a clear, frosty day, when the sound of our bells could be heard resounding on the distant pine-clad hills. The snow had not yet fallen to any great depth, and the forest road, although narrow, was good: our ponies were fresh and ourselves in joyous spirits, anticipating the happy greeting of the Christmas morning. We expected to reach the city about evening and congratulated ourselves on not being overloaded with unnecessary provender—in fact in having calculated the quantity so closely that by our arrival in town we should be without edibles or drinkables, excepting the spoil which we had captured. With song and gossip we shortened the journey, and it was only when we arrived within twenty miles of the town that we noticed that "the sky was changed, and such a change!"—snow-clouds came hurrying from the east, the sun was hidden, and a darkness overspread the view. We were still in the bush, and the snow fell in such quantities that the ponies became fatigued, and were at last compelled to walk through the harassing depth of snow. The clearances were reached, but this added to our discomforts, as the increasing wind had completely covered the blazes which marked the road, and the fences were of course hidden from view. We, however, trusted to the hardiness of our ponies, and still expected to reach home before the fall. We were soon undeceived; the poor animals, wading to their bellies in the snow, soon became unable to drag the berlin after them, so that taking them every assistance we put on our snow shoes and tramped through the blinding storm. It was useless, a mile or so of such work proved its futility, and we once looked for shelter; but in such a place the next house might be miles away, and we were unable to see a yard, not to talk of miles. In this desperate state of affairs a council of war was called, and we had almost decided to start for the bush and seek shelter there, when, owing to a sudden shifting eddy in the storm, a building was discovered close at hand. One was sent to reconnoitre and informed us on his return that the house was deserted; this augured a cold reception and no help, but as the gods help those who help themselves we were not without hope, and set to work to get our horses under shelter. If there had once been a stable it had disappeared, and our two ponies were served with the same accommodation as ourselves, namely, the only room in the house, and as the fires proceeded from the storm, as the window panes were all broken and the shutters in bad repair. Finding no firewood in appropriated some of the ceiling, and soon had a fire going; hay and oats we had in the berlin for our horses, and having cooking utensils we shortly improvised a supper by cooking some caribou, hares and birds to be procured; and I sallied out in the storm in search of it, and was fortunate in finding a spring near the house. We chopped up the remnants of a shed for spare firewood, and spread our blankets, stored away the berlin on the west side of the house and made ourselves as comfortable as we could for the night. Rolled in our blankets, with our feet to the fire and our pipes lit, we bemoaned our hard luck. We each had our engagements, and I for one had in my desolate imagination the picture of a Christmas tree, to which I was expected to be a considerable contributor; but now the choice gifts would be distributed in my absence. Williams, who lay next me, had an engagement to dine with cousin Emma (as great a flirt as ever graced a garrison town) to the country and she I know would make short work of excuse of his absence if cause built with poor Williams, and a reason for assertion to the subject. My own were bitter enough, for I too had made my own arrangements for Christmas Day, which I was now likely to pass in a barn of a house buried in snow, sleeping with horses, and without any other liquid refreshment than water to quench thirst.

At this moment a gust of voices was heard in the storm. Curses, loud and deep, with a strong Milesian accent, grew more distinct each moment, and at last a succession of blows on the door, accompanied by a repetition of oaths, announced the arrival of visitors. Visitors! no visitor could venture out in such a night as this, and the belated travellers like ourselves, and after a few moments' conversation we decided to admit our brethren in distress. They were farmers, belonging to one of the outlying parishes, on their way home from town, after making their Christmas purchases, the greater portion of which consisted of drinkables, if we were to judge of the strong smell of whiskey, and the vociferous manner with which they announced their arrival. Being accustomed to similar incidents, we had no fear of being in any danger from them, and soon had them seated round the fire, and stowing away their berlin, out of which they took a description of large demijohns, which they immediately uncorked after closing the door, and invited us to help; as men had had enough; but if any of my readers has ever attempted to partake of any portion of such a fact, he can easily imagine the difficulty in the present case. But our visitors were not to be satisfied unless we also tasted the contents of each demijohn, which they insisted on the gentlemen leaving a drop. It was a description of one of the man who swallowed a mouthful of ice cream, and of the concentrated essence of peppermint which each tooth endured. I have also read of the Indian Braves who, at a Coronation dinner in Washington, swallowed each a mouthful of mustard and retained their composed demeanor while the tears ran down their cheeks; but I do not remember to have seen a description of the feelings of the man who unwittingly partook of a glass of overproof Canadian high wines. I will merely say that at first I thought the brute had rammed a red-hot poker down my throat; but there being no poker in the building, that idea was dismissed. The Japanese trick of swallowing a sword I then successfully believed had been spoken of; but as the effects of the vile stuff taken increased, I was positive he poured nitro-glycerine down my throat, and that I was about to explode. The party were now in a state of frenzy, while the two farmers were again helping themselves to another dose of the poison, when another rap came to the door, and a food cry of "Laissez nous entre" prepared us for another invasion. Companions in misery, of course; this time, three individuals. The previous arrivals had now berlin had rendered the road to the house less difficult, and we shortly had the newcomers with their horse properly housed and the berlin placed alongside the others. We were at first not curious to find out who formed the accession to the party; but observing that one was tightly bound, so as to prevent the use of his arms, we were informed that he was a lunatic from a distant parish on his way to the Beauport Asylum. The French habitants were cold and benumbed, and freely partook of the "overproof," and we were horrified to see that his guardians allowed the lunatic to indulge his taste as freely as themselves. The wind was increasing, but the snow no longer came in by the shutters, as they were covered by the drifts. All chance of leaving such a place could not be thought of, and we resumed the places near the fire which we occupied before the arrival of the countrymen. One Irishman, lying on the floor, was droning away at one of those interminable ballads so much in vogue among them, while the other was assuring him of his protection under circumstances. The lunatic, leaning against the wall, was yelling at the top of his voice, and using all the oaths of which the French language is capable, while the two guardians were enjoying themselves, one in a sort of jig or breakdown, and the other in endeavoring to beat a tune in time. This was certainly Pandemonium on earth, and I thought the night would never come to an end; but sleep, if not balmy, at last, induced by the fumes of high wines and tobacco, came to our relief, and gradually the infernal noise of the five men faded away to give place to the fitful and harassing dreams. Starts, as from an electric battery, continually woke me to the sense of our position; a racking headache and parched throat, both the effect of the liquor we had drove me crazy. I was in this unenviable state when, towards morning, I managed to obtain some refreshing sleep, from which I was awakened by three rapid discharges of firearms. I jumped to my feet and saw the madman, who had obtained possession of Williams' revolver, and already discharged three barrels, endeavoring to fire at one of the Irishmen; but his arm being tied, he was unable to take proper aim. Instantly all was confusion; all the party had evidently fallen asleep, and been awakened by the pistol shots. He was instantly seized and disarmed of the pistol, and bound hands and feet, the poor wretch struggling violently the whole time, and uttering the most frightful imprecations. Further sleep was now impossible, and a little fresh air seemed to be desired by all. With that the house being completely buried in the snow, the exhalations of nine men, the effluvia from the four horses, and the fumes of bad tobacco and whiskey, the closeness was unbearable. Opening the door was impracticable, as once open it would be almost impossible to close it from the large quantity of snow which it. The only remedy was to make an opening in the roof, and this was effected without loss of time. The cool application to our stifling heads at once afforded relief, and the refreshing breath of air was a thrill of enjoyment. The storm had ceased, and the sun shone out bright and clear; but what a picture! The very trees were all but covered, and nothing but their tops could be seen; no sign of a road appeared, nor track of civilization; the very house from which we looked was a hill of snow, and the storm was hardly perceptible among the surrounding heaps. It was far from a consolatory sight on a Christmas morning, between fifteen and twenty miles from town, with a road impassable covered with a depth of four to ten feet, blocked in a house by a depth of, perhaps, twenty feet, and our berlin one shovel on hand; It was tantalizing, it was mortifying, but had to be faced. Considerably refreshed, we descended from the garret, and decided to replenish the inner man. We had fortunately brought in part of the caribou, some partridges and trout, or our provisions must have fallen far short of supplying the whole party. There was good ale and eatables went, but as to the wherewithal to abate our thirst we were entirely destitute. What water I ever procured from the spring the evening before was entirely consumed, and as to the beastly ale it was quite ironical. Snow water, although good for horses, was worse than none, and the good ale was key, which had already been tapped by the farmers, was almost as bad; and yet this stewed mess was drunk ad. Our fire, however, being replenished from the rafters of the house was soon in fine brightly, and soon the savory smell of venison and trout pervaded the building. Our meal had nothing having been greatly qualified by the disappointment which we endured from being unable to be in the among them, while the snow was heavy ready to do justice to breakfast in the morning. In fact, by the time that we had finished and enjoyed a smoke, it was fully noon before we were prepared to set to work to excavate ourselves out of the snowpit, and this we forewaw, would be a long and arduous operation, having only one shovel in our possession; but we hoped to advance the work by using boards from the house as shovels. It was very fatiguing work, and although we had eight pairs of hands at work, the snow was so deep and so soft, and our improvised shovels so unhandy, that it was late in the afternoon before we had the door opened and a path free place to the road. Our next work had prepared us for a good dinner, and the opening of the door was celebrated by a call to that meal, followed by another pull at the pipe and the whiskey jar. Again we set to work, but the snow seemed interminable, and our progress to the 'berlins' was slow and toilsome; the sun was declining fast in the horizon, and we began to fear that we should have to pass another day in the horrid place. At last we were rewarded when we heard a tinkle, who of course was most shovelling, making none of his usual boisterous remarks, but paid particular attention to them till they became as outrageous, and were at length suppressed by snorting and kicking of the horses, when one of the Irishmen, who had been left in the house, but as quickly rushed back, crying "Fout Feu!" We all ran to the door, and found the building on fire and the smoke that it was impossible to enter. The lunatic was all this time bound hand and foot, remaining fixed to be almost helpless, we determined to make an effort to save him. Two of us, therefore, cut the cords severed from, and fortunately found the unfortunate man with his clothes scorched, but not burnt. We dragged him in the snow was the work of a minute. Our efforts to save the property were perfectly useless; they were in a state of abject terror, and even to approach them in the absence of the lunatic was out of the question. With them were burnt all our things which we had taken into the house from the previous evening. The whole three snow on the burning house others worked at shovelling to save the "Berlin" and the horses, which were at the west end of the house, and must assuredly be destroyed as the fire penetrated the wall. It was in vain; long before we had reached half way to the 'berlins' they were covered by the flames. Our troubles of yesterday were now as nothing; the finale of our adventure would be seen; no sign of a rail for extrainment of our pleasures, but also of our lives. The prospect of sleeping out in the snow, and without covering, without even our overcoats, for we had discarded them in our work, without food and without fire, was full of gloom. The two guardians felt inclined to take summary vengeance on the lunatic, who had caused the disaster, for the fire could not possibly have reached the hay and displaced or thrown there, and it was without question that there the fire had appeared. The loss of the whiskey was greatly deplored by the lunatic, one bed, a stove, a table and a chair, formed the only furniture—and here were nine strangers to be accommodated, and one of them a lunatic! We remembered some logs from home, but his squaw and two daughters, young squaws of sixteen and eighteen respectively, resided us with a show of hospitality. We told our losses and stated that we wished to remain there all night. It seemed ridiculous, if not impossible, for the thirteen persons then there actually crowded the shanty, that even the cabin cur could not find standing-room, and had to be ejected by one of the squaws. In looking round I noticed a pair of snow-shoes, and on being questioned by the husband had four for sale, this was a relief and a certainty of escape on the morrow. Our first business was to procure something to eat, for our long walk and work at the fire had sharpened our appetites. What else had the poor woman save, some fat, rancid pork, black bread and very weak tea, and this we took after a fast of 24 hours, and therefore relished it well. Christmas Day in the country.

EIGHTY-EIGHT YEARS AGO IN THE INTELLIGENCER

The "Ad" That the Late Sir Mackenzie Bowell Answered —Market News—Quotations in Pounds, Shillings and Pence—Perpetual Motion Solved—Air Ship Flights in the Days of William IV. of England.

Mr. Chas. MacKenzie, who is known as an author around the city, takes a very keen delight in delving into the past. He possesses a wonderful fund of information concerning the days in America when the Indian claimed the whole continent for his domain. Mr. MacKenzie speaks numerous Indian dialects and is a historian of no mean note. He herewith prints a few clippings taken from old files of our paper, the originals of which are in Mr. MacKenzie's possession. A few remarks have been added by our contributor which Intelligencer serve to explain the significance of the various items chosen.

In the old Intelligencer, 88 years ago, dated Saturday, October 11, 1834, the aerial paper being Volume 1, No. 8, the following advertisement appears:

WANTED

An intelligent lad as an apprentice at this office.

* * *

The late Sir Mackenzie Bowell, when shown this old copy, stated that it was in this advertisement that he answered when he applied for the position of printer's apprentice and it is a matter of history that he received the job. The Intelligencer was then published by the late George Benjamin.

On another page was the notice:

"Rags received in payment for papers at this office."

Even at this advanced age this notice would be quite suitable, with a slight correction. It would then read, "Cash received for papers at this office." In those days rags were a very important material used in the manufacture of paper, especially linen rags, which formed the greater proportion of the contents of the rag-bag than will be found today.

The following prices of goods appear in an advertisement of Bills, Flint and will be found of interest to compare with the prices charged today—

Onodaga salt, 10s 6d per bbl; Onodaga salt, 3s 6d per bus.; loaf sugar, 1½d per lb.; best Muscovado, 6d per lb. or 11 lbs. for 5s; Twanky tea, 3s 3d per lb.; Flyson skin, 3s; old Flyson, 5s per lb.; plug tobacco, from 7½d to 10d per lb.; pimento, 10½d per lb.; black pepper, 6d per lb.; rice, 10 lbs. for 3s or 4d per lb.; coffee, 9d per lb.; candles, 8d per lb.; soap, by the box, 4½d per lb.; soap, single pound 5d; ground ginger, 10d per lb.; root ginger, 8d per lb.; molasses, 3s 6d per gal.; potash kettles, 25s per cwt.; coolers, 2d per lb.; hollow ware, 3½d per lb.; sad irons, 3½d per lb.; drag teeth, steel pointed, 4½d per lb.; 9-inch hand saws, 4s 6d each; good coarse boots, 10s per pair; good coarse shoes, 7s per pair; cast steel, 9s per lb.; cut nails, 3½d per lb.; glass, 7½x8½ and 7x9, 33s 9d per box or 2½d per light; grind stones, 1d per lb.; pairs, each 2s.

40 boxes raisins, 35 doz. corn brooms, a lot of Philadelphia mill saws.

N.B.—A quantity of cooking stoves at very low prices, form hich wheat will be taken in payment at 4s per bushel if delivered soon.

It appears, when the copy mentioned was published there was scientific and mechanical research, as at the present day, for the following items appear:

* * *

"To all Nations, Languages and People, Greeting—

Know ye, that I, Nimrod Murphree, of the city of Nashville, of the State of Tennessee, have discovered perpetual motion.

N. Murphree,

Nashville, Aug. 27, 1834."

We clip the above from the last number of the Nashville (Tennessee) Banner, where it appears as an advertisement without note or comment. Probably Mr. Murphree has succeeded in handing himself over the Cumberland river, or a barn fence, by the straps of his boots. We advise him to send his pretensions on to the next Congress by Col. Crockct himself, whose motto is "no afeard."—Mobile Advertiser.

The following rather startling item appears:

AERIAL SHIP.

"Paris, August 5th.—The aerial vessel, L'Aiele, in the Chamaus Elysee, which is on Sunday to make its first excursion in the realms of space, is at present an object of general curiosity, and has been visited by numbers of scientific amateurs desirous to inspect the machinery by which the elements, hitherto so refractory, is to be tamed into obedience and made to obey the helmsman."

Has there been a gap in aeronautics, or was the machine a failure?

Another Item is:

"Joseph Bonaparte and his brother have taken Mr. Wey's mansion, Denham Place, near Uxbridge, for a number of years. There may yet be for them 'a tide in the affairs of Europe that may lead on to fortune' and bring their dynasty again into power."

And that "there may be yet for them" was rather prophetic. France and the Allies believed an unthinkable, and, still suddenly beholding a gallows, he roared out in a burst of glee, "God be praised, I am in a civilized land!"

AN OLD FASHIONED CHRISTMAS.

By Alice Williams Brotherton.

A good old-fashioned Chris'mas, with upon the hearth,
The table filled with "goodies, an' the room a-roar'ish mirth,
With the stockin's crammed to bustin', an' the meddlers piled 'ith some—

A good old-fashioned Chris'mas like we had so long ago.

Now, that's the thing I'd like to see ag'in before I die,
But Chris'mas in the city here—it's different, oh! my!
With the crowded hustle-bustle of the slushy, noisy street,
An' the scowl upon the faces of the strangers that you meet.

Oh! there's buyin', plenty of it, of a lot o' gorgeous toys;
An' it takes a mint o' money to please modern girls an' boys.
Why, I mind the time a jack-knife an' a toffy lump for me
Made my little heart an' stockin' just chock-full o' Chris'mas glee.

An' there's festin'. Think o' feedin' with them stockup city folk!
Why, ye have to speak in whispers, an' ye daren't crack a joke.
Then remember how the tables took-on all crowded with your kin,
When you couldn't hear a whistle blow across the merry din!

You see, I'm so old-fashioned like, I don't care much for style,
An' to eat your Chris'mas banquets here I wouldn't go a mile;
I'd rather have, like Solomon, a good yarle-dinner, set
With real old friends, than turtle soup with all the nobs you'd get.

There's my next-door neighbor Gurley—fancy how his brows 'd lift
If I'd ixdlor "Merry Chris'mas! Couzin, old fellow; Chris'mas gift!"
Lordy-Lord, I'd like to try it! Guess he'd nearly have a fit.
Hang this city stiffness, anyways; I can't get used to it.

Then your heart kept a-swellin' till it nearly bu'st your side,
An' by nicht your jaws were achin', with your smile four inches wide,
An' your enemy, the wo'st one, you'd grab his hand an' say:
"Mobbe both of us was wrong, John; come, let's shake, it's Chris'mas Day!"

Mighty little Chris'mas spirit seems to dwell 'tween city walls,
Where each snow-flake brings a soot-flake to a smutty finish falls;
Mighty little Chris'mas spirit! An' I'm a-goin', don't you know,
For a good old-fashioned Chris'mas, like we had so long ago.

One lb. calf's liver, 2 medium-sized onions, bacon, potatoes, parsley, salt and pepper. Mince the onions and fry them in fat bacon, and put them in the bottom of a casserole. Slice the liver and put on top of the onion slices f the liver, then the bacon cut fine. Then place a layer of diced potatoes, a little parsley, and salt and pepper. Add more liver, potatoes and bacon, and cover all with water or stock. Cook slowly for an hour and a half, then thicken the gravy, and serve from the casserole. This is very delicious if cooked slowly.

General Yamanashi, Tanaka and Uyehara at the recent army manoeuvres in Tokio.

Washington, Dec. 16.—An ancient brass mortar bearing the royal cipher "GR", and which has filled a peaceful role at Governor's Island, New York, since the days of George II., of Great Britain, has found its way back overseas to Great Britain and into the hands of its original owner, the King's Royal Rifles, St. Rode, Bournemouth. It was sent over as a token of amity by the U.S. army and in reply Secretary Weeks has received a message from King George V., honorary colonel of the old British regiment, expressing a feeling of "comradeship existing between the military forces of the two' English-speaking peoples."

The weapon is one of those known as "Coehorn mortars", brass 56-pounders, long out of date, and was left at Governor's Island inadvertently in 1774 when a battalion of the Royal American Regiment, a British colonial force organized in 1756 with men from Virginia, Maryland and Pennsylvania, was withdrawn at the outbreak of the Revolutionary War and sent to Jamaica for service. Later, after service in other British colonies, the regiment reached England to be named the King's Royal Rifles but jealy feels that the significance of this interchange of gifts cannot be overestimated as testifying to the comradeship existing between the military forces of the two countries, each retaining at the same time its old designation in the British army, the 60th Foot.

Field Marshal Lord Grenfell, senior colonel commandant, First King's Royal Rifles, wrote Secretary Weeks in September.

"I have the comands of His Majesty the King, Colonel in Chief of the King's Royal Rifle, to convey to you his appreciation of your courtesy and his grateful acceptance of the gift to his regiment, in the following message:

"'The King, as colonel in chief of the regiment, greatly appreciates the friendly action of the Secretary of War and the United States Military forces of the two English-speaking nations'."

COLD WEATHER MAY CAUSE WELLS TO GO DRY

The comparatively empty condition of many farm wells, which has been causing considerable anxiety during the month or more, continues, and it is feared by some representatives that the cold weather may aggravate the situation.

Grey claims that some farmers in the Meaford district had from 900 to 2,000 barrels of apples this year. As high as $4,000 was paid for the product of some of the larger orchards.

A farmer in Grey County sold his sweet clover seed by the pound at 25c a bushel, and averaged about $27 an acre.

According to the Renfrew representative, local merchants are reporting that farmers are buying only necessary articles, owing to the low value of agricultural products.

The Algoma representative saw plowing done on two farms on the 4th of December, with no frost in the ground to hinder the work, a record for New Ontario.

At recent sales in Waterloo, prices were better for all classes of live stock except horses, which are usually dull at this season. Good grade cows sold at $60 and better, while good grades were worth all the way from $100 to $125.

Bruce reports: "Shipments of choice fat cattle left several stations during the past week. Two choice baby beef heifers weighing around 1,000 pound left Chesley this week and brought around 12c. at Toronto. These two calves were fed by boys in the Baby Beef Competition. A car load of heavy draught horses were shipped from Ripley recently and were purchased for $200 to $250 each."

Brant states: "The price of fat cattle is not in keeping with the present price of feeding stock. Feeders have been sold as high as 6c. per lb., although the average would be about 5½c. At the same time fairly good butcher cattle are brought around 7c. Little pigs are selling at about $13 per pair, although just now the demand has slackened somewhat, it requiring good pigs to bring that purebred Holstein consignment sale in the county 35 females brought an average price of $180 while eight males averaged $105. With the exception of two small females included in this sale last, the average price was well above $200."

Milk is selling at 2½ a cwt. in Frontenac, and butter fat around 40c. a lb. Condensary price for milk of standard quality in Elgin is $2.10 a cwt.

Peterborough says: "Generally speaking, factory patrons are letting their cows go dry. There are some, however, who are shipping either the cream or whole milk out to the larger centres."

Brant claims that the increased price of milk has created considerable interest in dairying, which is shown in the improved price of dairy cows at the farm sales, good grade cows sumbing in price from $75 to $80.

Wentworth says that a more general interest is being taken in the grading of hogs, and that many farmers are securing better sows and boars.

Peterborough states, that hogs in that district have been grading around 35 per cent. selects.

Grey states that a larger number of live chickens are being marketed this year.

Rainy River says: A busy winter is expected in the bush. A quantity of pulp wood is already cut. Men are being paid $4per double cord for cutting. A good man can cut a cord per day."

O LITTLE TOWN OF BETHLEHEM

(By Phillips Brooks)

O Little town of Bethlehem!
How still we see thee lie;
Above the deep and dreamless sleep,
The silent stars go by.

Yet, in the dark street shineth
The everlasting Light;
The hopes and fears of all the years,
Are met in thee, tonight.

How silently, how silently,
The wondrous gift is given!
So God imparts to human hearts,
The blessings of His Heaven.

No ear may hear His coming,
But in this world of sin,
When meek souls will receive Him still,
The dear Christ enters in.

Oh holy Child of Bethlehem!
Descend to us, we pray,
Cast out our sin and enter in,
Be born in us today.

We hear the Christmas angels
The great glad-tidings tell;
Oh come to us, abide with us,
Our Lord Emmanuel.

CHRISTMAS EDITION

The Daily Intelligencer.

SECTION TWO

THE DAILY INTELLIGENCER THURSDAY, DECEMBER 21, 1922

CHRISTMAS NUMBER

PROSPERITY is returning to Canada again and after a bountiful harvest we are in the midst of the Christmas Season. Conditions all over the country are showing improvement, the crops have been good, unemployment has ceased to be a question of moment, and one of the factors of the greatest significance is that spirit of conciliation which now prevails between Capital and Labor. It exemplifies the spirit of the season

"Peace on Earth
Good will toward Men"

THIS CHRISTMAS will find true happiness and real Christmas Cheer in more homes than ever before.

Our problems are put aside for the time being, and the spirit of kindness, unselfishness and good-will is prevailing. Happy, red-faced children are seen on all sides, and speculation among them regarding the surprises of Christmas morning is rampant.

The shops and homes are gayly decorated. The crimsom-red Christmas Bells, the holly, the mistletoe, and the Christmas tree with its gay decorations, are all familiar scenes. Dull care is cast away and the festive spirit reigns supreme.

Out-of-doors, the ground is white with snow and sleigh bells are ringing merrily. The hills crowded with the youthful members of the community, the frozen waters are covered with skaters, and all is well.

Thus we usher in Another Christmas—The Season of 1922.

IN THE FOLLOWING PAGES WILL BE FOUND MANY STORIES TELLING OF THE EDUCATIONAL ACTIVITIES IN OUR CITY. SOME OF THESE INSTITUTIONS HAVE BEEN CELEBRATING THE YULETIDE SEASON IN OUR MIDST FOR UPWARDS OF HALF A CENTURY. THESE SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES HAVE BEEN PATIENTLY LABORING THROUGH THESE LONG YEARS AND HAVE BEEN RESPONSIBLE DIRECTLY AND INDIRECTLY, FOR MANY HOMES IN WHICH THE SEASONABLE CELEBRATIONS ARE BEING ENJOYED. IN MANY FAR-OFF LANDS TOO, THERE WILL BE HOSTS OF KINDLY THOUGHTS OF BELLEVILLE AND ITS SCHOOLS AT THIS SEASON. MEN AND WOMEN HAVE BEEN DEVELOPED HERE IN BELLEVILLE, WHO PASS ON TO OTHER SCENES OF ACTIVITY AND HAVE BECOME SUCCESSFUL IN THEIR ENDEAVORS. THESE MEN AND WOMEN WILL SPREAD CHRISTMAS CHEER UNDER EVERY FLAG IN THE UNIVERSE, AND IN THE QUIET, THOUGHTFUL HOURS OF THIS SEASON, WILL THINK OF BELLEVILLE AND OF THE MANY, MANY HAPPY CHRISTMAS SEASONS THEY SPENT IN THE CITY BY THE BAY.

THEY WILL BE, PERHAPS, UNDER SUNNY SKIES AND THEY WILL PICTURE THE SNOWY HILLS OF HASTINGS IN THEIR DREAMS. THESE HILLS DO NOT CHANGE; THEY ARE HERE TO-DAY THE SAME AS THEY WERE THEN, TWENTY, YES FORTY YEARS AGO, AND TO-DAY, AS THEN, THE CHILDREN OF OUR SCHOOLS ARE RIDING DOWN THEM ON THEIR SLEDS.

BELLEVILLE SHOULD, INDEED, BE PROUD OF HER SCHOOLS WHICH HAVE DONE NOBLE WORK. IT IS NO FLIGHT OF FANCY TO SAY THAT THOUSANDS OF KIDDIES TO-DAY ARE LOOKING FORWARD TO A FAR HAPPIER CHRISTMAS THAN IF THEIR PARENTS HAD NOT BEEN ABLE TO PARTAKE OF THE ADVANTAGES OF OUR EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTIONS. PROBABLY NO GREATER WORK IS BEING DONE ANYWHERE IN CANADA THAN IS BEING CARRIED ON AT THE SCHOOL FOR THE DEAF. HUNDREDS OF LITTLE KIDDIES WHO, OTHERWISE WOULD BE MORE OR LESS HELPLESS THROUGHOUT LIFE, ARE EDUCATED AND TAUGHT USEFUL OCCUPATIONS. RIGHT HERE IN OUR MIDST ARE MANY WONDERFUL THINGS GOING ON DAILY. FOR THESE REASONS CHRISTMAS TO THOUSANDS WILL BE A BRIGHTER AND HAPPIER DAY.

ST. MICHAEL'S ACADEMY

Church Street, this city, is not only one of the number of churches which stand out so conspicuously, for it is studded with churches, but also as one of the important and picturesque buildings. St. Michael's Academy, one of Belleville's greatest pride of Methodism's worship.

Erected in 1908, this magnificent stone building, standing on the corner of Church Street and Victoria Avenue has since been one of the outstanding buildings, of the number to be found on Church Street. The doors of what of St. Michael's Academy was official ly laid on May 10th, 1909.

This building was built while Rev. Father Twomey was stationed in Belleville, and it is regretable that Father Twomey did not live to see the final completion of the school, as he passed away before the work has been completed. Two deaths of Father Twomey occurred late in January of 1909, he having come to the Belleville parish in 1906. About this time of the year in 1905, St. Michael's Church was completely gutted by fire, both the remaining after the fire had spared itself, but the charred walls, which were used again in the erection of the present church on the identical site. Rev. Father Byrnit, now Archbishop Byrnit, succeeded Father Twomey in 1911, when Rev. Father Killeen came to Belleville. Father Killeen is still in charge at St. Michael's parish.

The first Catholic school in Belleville, stood over on John Street, now as a frame building. The school was of brick, and stood near the site of the present St. Michael's Academy. It was in turn sold and made into two dwelling houses, in common having been retained. The present school was then erected.

During the vacation period of 1910 the Loretta Nuns left Belleville, and the present teachers assumed their duties at the opening of school that Autumn. At the present time some 215 students are in attendance at St. Michael's and eight teachers in charge. Sister Edward, Principal of the school.

INTERESTING PHOTO

Father Killeen has an interesting picture in his library, taken this Autumn on the occasion of the repairing of the spire on St. Michael's church. It is one of the hundred people, and arrange for the services of a Chimney.

The man selected, who by the way, has made a reputation for himself as a daredevil in the climbing business, was a young farmer from west of Toronto, age about 20 or 25 years. He mounted the spire quite coolly, and completed his work in a most satisfactory manner.

CHATHAM LADY DROWNS HERSELF

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Chatham, Dec. 20.—Mrs. Sylvester Parks, 55, drowned herself in a cistern at the rear of her home here this morning. It is said she had often threatened to jump into the river when suffering from depression.

THE BELLEVILLE HIGH SCHOOL

On the present site of the Reformed Episcopal Church once stood the first grammar school in Belleville. Very few of the citizens of Belleville remember that school, or the head master, Mr. Alexander Hourston. In all probability this school was not quite so dignified with the name Grammar School, but it was in any event from this school that our secondary school sprang. In those days, no doubt, the pupils of that school coasted down Hotel Street at recess and were called to their studies by the ringing of a small hand bell. In time this school became too small and the first grammar school was built. This one story two roomed building is still in use and stands on the present High School grounds at the rear of the high school building.

With the transfer of the school to the new building the teaching staff was increased to two and Mr. Tilley was the first assistant. He taught for a few years in this capacity and then moved to Ottawa, where he became an influential factor in educational affairs.

The school grounds at that time were not limited as they are now, as there were no buildings east of John Street and the pupils could roam about in the fields and gather wild flowers or play in the brook which ran through the grounds at the back of the school. This is all history of one sixty or seventy years ago.

Mr. Tilley was succeeded by Mr. W. F. Milburn, M.A., who was given charge of the classics and modern side. Mr. Milburn remained a member of the teaching staff from that day until June, 1907.

The attendance at the Grammar School increased until the little stone building housed over one hundred pupils and then the City bestirred itself and the present High School Building was erected. The new building was very much the same as the present high school excepting that the two end wings have been added.

About this time Mr. Bourdon died and Professor Dawson of Albert College became the new principal. He was a graduate of Trinity College, Dublin, Ireland. The four class rooms in the second story of the new building were occupied by the High School students and these four class rooms opened onto the large assembly room in the centre. There was no shortage of cost in those days because it was not used, as the building was beside by a large box stere in each class room in which hard maple or beech was burned. The seating of the class room was quite different from that of to-day. Two of the class rooms were seated with long benches arranged in amphi-theatre style reaching half way to the ceiling at the rear of the room. The other class rooms were seated with double seats. So far as was no library, no clock rooms, no teachers' rooms and no principal's room.

It would appear that the pupils at that time were somewhat older than those of the present day. They were said to be more studious. It is presumed that this may be accounted for by the fact that there were fewer distractions in those days and that pupils were encouraged and forced to remain at home and prepare their lessons for the next day. At any rate those were the days when every one labored by the light of coal oil lamps. The teachers saw that plenty of home work was assigned and the parents made it their duty to cooperate and see that the work was done. Of course, there were no automobiles, no theatres, no rinks, no Y.M.C.A., no movies, no telephone, no wireless telephone to induce pupils to leave their work and amuse themselves away from home.

Those were the days when English, Classics, Moderns, History and Mathematics were stressed in the school. As a result of this very many pupils entered the professions of law, and the ministry, and few became engineers or medical doctors. Whilst the upper part of the building was devoted to high school work, the lower part was occupied by the public school and at this time Mr. Irwin was the principal downstairs. The lower part of the building was subdivided in a similar way to the upstairs and also had high school pupils mingled freely among the recess and noon hour.

As time went on the enrolment increased, a larger number of teachers was required and by the time that Mr. Wright became principal there were five teachers on the staff. Dr. Wright was an honor graduate in modern from Toronto University, and had been teaching in Albert College before coming to the High School. He spent eleven years in High School work as a principal of the school and the school appears to have had a very prosperous time and new subjects were added to the curriculum including science and art. In 1894 the death of Dr. Wright occured and Mr. Milburn was appointed principal of the school and remained in this capacity for the next fifteen years. The school building was remodelled and extended. Science rooms were equipped and the foundation of many of the activities found in a modern school were laid at this time.

CANADIAN CHRISTMAS

In the "New Canadian Monthly," a magazine once published in Canada, in the December number for the year 1874, forty-seven years ago, there appeared an article entitled "A Christmas Twenty-Five Years Ago," by Ernst Gervase. The article, which is quite lengthy, has a certain charm, because it describes vividly from a child's viewpoint one of those old fashioned Christmas days over three-quarters of a century ago, with the visit to grandmother's, after the wonderful ride over the snowy roads, in the big sleigh, with real "Indian" robes, behind the horses with their merry, jingling bells, the marvellous dinner, which modern cooking has not surpassed, and the relatives, presents and everything which went to make Christmas the day of the year for the children. There is much in our celebration of the holiday which corresponds with this description, but some of the charm, perhaps, has passed, with the almost-passing of the sleighride. Interests from the article, especially those describing the clothes worn by the members of that particular family, are interesting.

"Mamma was in her great brown beaver bonnet, her heavily sashrobber of black lace veil, fully a yard long, her brown silk cloak, lined throughout with grey and white rabbit skin, red reaching quite to her feet, a big boa or chinchilla wound about her throat, and one hand, the other was supporting the baby, tucked into a muff of great dimensions. My sisters, Maria and Harriet, were dressed precisely alike. Maria used to buy a piece of cloth or a large quantity at once and made suits alike for the children who were companions in age; and on this occasion, Maria and Harriet appeared in frocks of blue silk, with pelisses of grey silk, edged around the cape and sleeves with white rabbit skin; they had grey squirrel toques around their necks, grey beaver bonnets on their heads, with long green veils and knitted woollen mittens on their hands.

"My pelisse was only merino, but it too had a rabbit skin edging around it and my little hood of dark blue quilted silk was trimmed all around with soft white down, my cuff also was of down, and my mittens of knitted wool, like my sisters'.

"I am not going to describe Jack, the baby's outer costume minutely; she was so muffled in grown-up garments that all her own little individuality was lost until we arrived at grandmamma's, and the grown-up garments were removed, and a little dumpling figure was disclosed, clad in a frock of bright red flannel and a pinafore of white."

There was no Christmas tree at this family gathering, they being rather uncommon at that period; however, the stockings were filled with cheap but alluring toys, articles of winter clothing, apples, ball's-eyes and peppermints. The following extracts, telling about the presents, are in some cases, rather amusing. One interesting present which the girls received this Christmas, were Indian moccasins, sent by their father, who was in the West, "made of dressed skins, and embroidered with porcupine quills, red in colors of blue and red and green."

"Beside, either were, besides the red silk, yellow and hood and the red and moccasins like mine, a worked necktie from Harriet and Maria, a bible from Mamma and a Jew's harp from me. I had chosen the latter gift not because it was appropriate, for Emma knew not whether she likely to acquire skill in playing the instrument, but because its price suited my purse.

"Those were the happy days, when money counted for less and "penny" sticks were prized, when for that reason, perhaps, the love and good-will of the givers, counted for a little more—but, would we go back?

THE ALBERT COLLEGE

Brief History of Secondary Education in Belleville—The Old Stone School Still Standing on the High School Grounds—Stories of the Days When Fields Were all That was East of John Street

(Belleville ar. Educational Centre.) Sixty-five years ago on May 27th last Albert College brought into existence. Three men in the township of Sidney answered their forms in order that the buildings might be erected.

Methodism had its rise in a College, and, from its inception, it had desired the culture of both the heart and mind of the rising generation. As soon, therefore, as the Methodist Episcopal Church had thoroughly established itself in Canada, the pioneer preachers began to feel the importance of some provision for the christian education of the youth of the country.

Preliminary steps were taken to raise subscriptions for a conference seminary, in Sept. 1852. In June 1854, the General Conference adopted the scheme, and determined to erect and maintain an Educational institution. Trustees were appointed by the General Conference. The Trustees to consist of laymen only, and the Board of Management of laymen and clerics. The first Board consisted of Rev. Jas. Richardson, John Campbell, John Cummer and Peter Fisher, appointed by the Niagara Conference, and Rev. Benson Smith, Rev. R. W. Lade, Rev. Wm. Brown, C. E. Mallory, Philip Carman, and Hiram Buckley, appointed by the Bay of Quinte Conference.

Some discussion arose as to the site of the new General Conference Institution, the claims of both Brockville and Belleville being urged with zeal. Finally, the pleasant situation of Belleville and its prominence in the local history of the Bay of Quinte caused it to be selected as the site for the new school, which, while denominational, was to be opened to persons of all grades and opinions, without test or restriction.

The name of Belleville Seminary, suggested by Bishop Reynolds, was chosen for the new seat of learning, which was incorporated in May, 1857, and opened July 16, 1857. The lot and buildings cost $30,000; furnishings etc., increased the cost to $45,000. This sum, increased by subsequent expense, was to be raised by voluntary subscriptions of the friends of education throughout the Province. J. H. Johnson was appointed the first Principal, and Rev. Gideon R. Sheppard was brought from the editor's chair, at Hamilton, to occupy the position of Moral Governor and first Bursar.

For seven years the school continued to work without change in its constitution, receiving meanwhile many gratifying tokens of public appreciation. But the time had now come when it was felt necessary to affiliate this Institution with a University, in order that its progress might keep pace with the growing interests of the province.

After a brief existence as a College affiliated with Toronto University an Act of Parliament was obtained by which the name of the Institution was changed to Albert College, and affiliated University powers thereto attached. By this Act, a Senate was created with power to make statutes for governing degrees. The first session of the Senate began on the first day of April 1857. Bishop Smith presided. In 1871, Albert College was granted full powers and privileges of a University.

From 1858 to 1874, Professor Carman occupied the position of Principal of this Institution and professor of mathematics, which positions he filled with remarkable executive ability and great force. In 1874, the General Conference elected him to the highest dignity in the church, th office of Bishop. His successor as Principal of the College was Rev. J. R. Inskip, M. A. Ph. D., who as professor of Classics, a ripe scholar and wise administrator, who had had years of experience as a teacher in American Colleges. President Jacques held this position for the years when he retired in 1885, and was succeeded by Principal Dyer. The success of the Institution under him is too well known to need comment. In 1913, on account of ill health, Dr. Dyer retired, and Dr. E. N. Baker was appointed.

For sixty-five years Albert College occupied an important place in the educational life of this country. It has proved to being as a residential Christian school for the sons and daughters of the Methodist Episcopal communion, but from its inception it has had a broader policy than many such institutions, for it set up no entrance barriers against any creed or class; to quote from the charter "free from sectarian tenets and religious tests." Down in sacrifice, it has been maintained throughout these decades—first as Belleville Seminary, then as Albert University and ages the students of Canadian Methodism as a secondary school in affiliation with the University of Toronto—by the sacrificial devotion of its original promoters and of those who have followed in their train.

After sixty years of struggle and achievement, marked by many changes but always with an upward lift, a crisis came in the spring of 1917, when a disastrous fire destroyed a portion of Massey Hall, the administration building. This serious loss made it unadvisable to rebuild on the present site, inasmuch as the grounds here were quite inadequate, and the whole building in need of much overhauling. Some of the leading citizens of the church recommended the removal of the College from Belleville, and rebuilding elsewhere. Then the City Council came forward and offered to the Board of Management a new site of about fifty acres overlooking the Bay of Quinte. This action of the Council was ratified at the polls by the citizens of Belleville, Besides this fine gift from the city, two prominent citizens subscribed $50,000 each toward the erection of new buildings, and altogether, exclusive of the site, $160,000 has been subscribed by the people of Belleville. The allotment for Albert from the National Campaign was $175,000. $250,000 more will be required to complete and equip what has already been undertaken.

During the war years little was done toward the new enterprise beyond the consolidation of what had been begun, but two years ago a Building Committee was appointed and steps were taken to inspect educational plants and different types of architecture, with the result that last May the plans of Messrs. Chapman, Oxley & Bishop, of Toronto, were accepted and preparations were made for work to begin as soon as possible.

On the 27th of June, 1921, the first sod for the new construction was turned by R. J. Graham Esq., in the presence of many spectators. Two unique features of a notable program were an address by Miss Ella Gardiner, who has been Lady Principal at Albert for thirty-six years, linking up the past and present of Albert with the new enterprise, and the laying of the first college yell on the new ground by two Albert students, Messrs. Moulton and Miller.

The plans for present development provide for an administration building, gymnasium, swimming pool, dining-hall, kitchen, storerooms, residence quarters, boiler-room and fuel rooms, laundry, hospital and a residence to accommodate 150 students. During the summer and autumn of 1921, the foundation for these buildings was constructed; as rapidly as finances will permit, this work will be carried on to completion.

It is the only school in Methodism in the Province of Ontario that prepares young men for entrance into the ministry—it is the "open door" to the ministry of the Methodist Church. Albert is also an open door for returned soldiers, many of whom are in attendance at the present time, coming largely on the recommendation of the registrar of Toronto University as the best place for them to receive their matriculation. These now are among our brightest and best students.

A conspicuous record along scholastic lines Albert College has maintained—the average for the last four years has been 85% successful in University and Departmental examination—while the number of her sons and daughters who are filling responsible positions in church and state in the other lands testifies to the moral and spiritual atmosphere of the College.

From its inception Albert College has been democratic in policy and the management has ever endeavored to put the advantages of a liberal education within the reach of all classes. President Butler's fine ideal that every student is a human being and as such has a right to the enrichment of his nature by being put into possession of his race's inheritance, aesthetic, social, political, scientific and religious, is an ideal towards which Albert College Board is working in its plans for enlargement. Surely the sons and daughters of the poor are entitled to the same advantages of higher education as are the children of the wealthy!

Year by year, students come to Albert who are unable to meet their necessary expenses and it has been the desire and plan of the Board to supplement their resources. A sympathetic and sacrificial faculty are endeavoring to help, in every possible way, handicapped boys and girls, but the whole management is seriously impressed with the urgent need of more liberal resources for the carrying on of this important work.

And now what of the Albert of the future? At a recent meeting of the Board of Management held Feb. 22nd, 1921, it was decided to limit the attendance in the present building to 200 students. The residence will be built to house plan—50 students to form a unit, each housed to be separated over by two or more masters. Ample accommodation has been planned for recreation rooms, lavatories and bathrooms. Practice rooms will also be provided for those who may desire to take music. A fine gymnasium will afford every facility for all indoor athletics, while arrangements are being made for up-to-date equipment for lockers and dining-room. The administration building will be furnished with every requirement to make the classroom work pleasant and efficient.

As far as resources would permit, everything in connection with the "New Albert" has been planned to enable its students to attain their highest development. Care has been taken to provide for the physical, mental and aesthetic culture of the boys and men who may in the years to come enter its halls. Much as the present management is concerned about these important acquirements, much more concerned is it about the development and training of Christian leaders for the great and ever-increasing tasks that face the world as the years come and go. The notable men and women who are to be found all over this continent and in almost every nation on the globe, who had their training, and got their vision at Albert, are test to the influence of the college throughout the years of its history. Some time ago, the Rev. D. B. Clare offered this testimony. "The last year I was at Albert, I was sent to the Y.M.C.A. conference at Lake Couchiching. During the conference, the delegates were asked to record on cards certain things regarding the religious activities of their colleges. At the end of the conference, Mr. Moody, who was the leader of the conference, said that the best work was being done for the spiritual uplift of its students than any other college represented at the conference."

The past has been glorious, but the future still extends! Albert's record for 1921-1922 boasts the largest in attendance in its history, and the year is comparatively in the history of the college, of those who belong to the Christian group, preparing for the Ministry and the Mission field, while the moral and spiritual atmosphere of the college is noteworthy. With greater advantages and with consecrated and trained leaders, there should be an ever-widening and uplifting influence from the students and the "Albert that lives in them."

Albert College draws her students from many remote places but when they graduate they scatter to the four quarters of the earth. The following are a few extracts taken from a recent issue of the Albert College Times.

"Albert had a representative at the Disarmament Conference in the person of Dr. John Ferguson, who was also represented the Chinese Government.

Rev. and Mrs. Simmons (Florence Kingston) of the Canadian Anglican Mission, after their year's furlough, have returned fh their work at Kai-feng Hosan, Central China.

Dr. Fred Stephenson gave us the privilege of being the first to see some of the interesting views he took in China. All he has five thousand, and hope to have many more similar visits. He also told us much of the present conditions of Japan, as he was on the visit of the Dr. and Mrs. Stephenson to Japan and China gives added inspiration both to our workers there and to ourselves.

Dr. Robert Peers of '03 surprised us by a brief visit in January. He has near San Francisco, the largest Private Tuberculosis Hospital in the U.S.A. Mrs. Peers is also an "Albert" student and late pictures showed her to be in excellent health. Their eldest son is attending the State University at Berkley, California.

J. Horace Faull, now Professor Faull, B.A., Ph.D. (Harvard), Professor of Botany at University College, has done valuable research work for the Government in the forests of Northern Ontario.

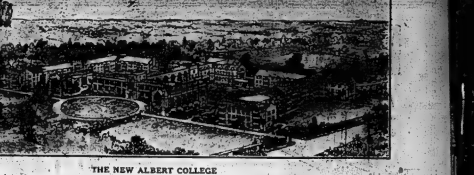

In the legal profession "Albert" has many distinguished sons, such as the late Justice Chas. Moss, Toronto; W. N. O'Flynn, W. C. Mikel and E. Guy Porter, M. P., of this city. Two late graduates are Reeve Lovering and Wendell Osborne, and Goldie Elgee. All are practising in Toronto.

J. H. Grisdale, of the Dominion Department of Agriculture, passed his Senior Matriculation here in 1889.

Journalism has many representatives as H. J. Moore of the "Action Free Press"; A. R. and F. A. Carman on the "Montreal Star;"; F. J. Moore of the Publication Department of the Methodist Book Rooms, and F. W. Rathman of the "Daily Ontario."

In business circles, many former students have attained an enviable reputation as Hon. P. P. Copnell, Senator and exmember of the California Legislature. Mr. Copnell has extensive walnut ranches at his home at Upper Monte, as well as orange groves in the Sunkist districts of California. He is President of a Bank and has been prominent in directing the good roads of California.

BRIEF HISTORY OF CHRISTMAS CUSTOMS.

Christmas in the British Empire and other English speaking countries of the world is our greatest annual celebration. Around the celebration of the day, many customs have been built. The greatest and most important of these is that of the exchange of gifts and greetings, in an attempt to bring happiness to all.

Christmas is really a religious holiday that has come down through the ages to us. The first Christmas was the day on which Christ our Saviour was born in Bethlehem-in a manger. While, the shepherds watched over their flocks. Thus it is really a Christian day of festivities. The angels on that night sang

"Peace on Earth, Goodwill Toward Men."

Now that is really the spirit of Christmas—one of Peace and of Good Will.

Bible records show us that on the festival day that Christ was born, there shone in the heaven nations regarded the winter solstice as the turning point of the year—the beginning of new life and activity of the powers of nature, and of the gods who were the controllers. By symbolical personifications of these. In more northerly countries these facts must have impressed themselves greatly palpable —hence the Celts and the Germans from the oldest times celebrated the festival with the greatest festivities. At the winter solstice the Norsemen held their great Yule feast in commemoration of the Sun's new birth. They believed that during the twelve nights from the 25th of December to January 6th that they could trace the personal movements and interferences on earth of their great deities. Many of the habits of the old Romans, relating to this period, passed over from heathenism to Christianity, and have nearly survived to the present day.

The custom of decorating churches at Christmas, especially with holly and ivy, is a very ancient one. The Christmas tree is directly traceable to the Roman saturnalia.

The exchanging of presents cards is a comparatively recent custom that has sprung up in the last hundred years. The invention, if one may term it as such, has been ascribed by some to the late Sir Henry Hole, and by others the credit of designing the first Christmas card in 1846 is given to J. C. Horsley, R.A.

On account of our climate, we in Canada always associate Christmas with winter. The little people all delight in toys and gifts that are useful in winter.

Thus around our festivities we have built up associations and customs and practices that have become inseparable with our popular conception of Christmas.

The furnishings of the extra room need not be expensive to be attractive. It is the good judgment with which the articles are selected which make the room. The woman who finds an extra room in her house need not hesitate to purchase furniture for it because of an inheritance of moving to smaller quarters where the furniture may not be usable.

Any bedroom which was not being used by the amily, was fitted up into a charming den, which served as a guest room as well when out-of-town guests came to visit. The room was decorated in this way because the furnishings could be used in almost any part of the home, whereas a specided bedroom set would require a special room for it should the family make a change in residence.

Select your furnishings of the colonial variety if you would use them later in a room where other periods are shown. Colonial furnishings have a way of forming charming bits about an otherwise austere room. Mahogany is always in good taste. It blends with any other kind of wood and stands wear. Woven or braided rag rugs are decidedly inexpensive. They add just the correct furnishing touch to the small room.

The den that would be a bedroom at will may be furnished in this way.

A day-bed of mahogany or metal is an article of importance. It serves as a lounge for the den and may be converted into a sleeping couch for the guest room. In pace of the regulation dressing table the clever woman who originated the bed-room idea selected a small mahogany secretary desk. In this she kept her magazines and papers. But there were reserved two of the small interior drawers for the convenience of the dressing table, such as comb and brush, fresh powder and cotton puffs, manicure implements and fresh soap.

The floor was covered by two oval rag rugs in keeping with the colonial atmosphere of the other furnishings. The windows were curtained in plain inexpensive homespun, and boasted a stenciled border of red poppies. A couch cover was made of the same material and matched a small scarf that was kept in the lower drawer of the mahogany secretary desk and spread on its open front when the desk was converted into the temporary dressing table.

In this way there was no extravagant investment made for the guest-room furnishings. Yet the room was cozy and convenient and could be used by members of the entire family for a reading or writing nook.

THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS OF BELLEVILLE

This City Has Three of the Most Beautiful and Best Equipped Public Schools in Ontario—A French School Under Construction.

If one chose to drive back into the days of the public schools in Belleville perhaps one of the most interesting stories of local human interest immediately would be found. Our public schools were, of course, the very first form of educational activity in the country. For many a long year it was the only form of education available to the settler in Hastings County and the curriculum was described by the three R's—reading, writing and 'rithmetic. But it is a long jump from those early days to the present. We have today three of the finest public school buildings (and a fourth under construction) that are to be found in Ontario.

Two of these schools were opened in the autumn of 1912, having been completed that summer. The class rooms in these schools are of the airy type, and have excellent natural and artificial lighting. Modern ventilation system are installed and also the very best heating apparatus. Every graduate of almost every other educational institution in Belleville received his or her early grounding in these schools. Here all the preliminary work is done and it is not often that a student's later success is ever attributed to his public training. No doubt a great deal of praise that should be bestowed on these teachers is never given.

The public schools of Belleville are buildings of which every citizen should be proud. The teaching staffs are doing a wonderful work and this work is not often recognized by the public in general. All praise is due these staffs.

Milburn advised the building of a new high school. He was supported in this view by many of the able men at that time, including Sir Mackenzie Bowell, but the time was not opportune. The opposition was too great and as a result no building was erected. Mr. Milburn had some very able teachers on his staff, amongst whom were the late W. W. Knight, B.A., H. J. Clarke, B.A., now Inspector of Public Schools, and Miss McRae, now engaged in the Normal School at Peterborough.

In 1908 Mr. James Colling, B.A., Head Master at Cobourg Collegiate Institute, was induced to become principal of the School in Belleville. One of the inducement held out to Mr. Colling was that a new building would be erected in the near future. That was fourteen years ago, and the new building is still a thing of the future. Mr. Colling remained as principal of the school for four years, and was then appointed Public School Inspector for North Hastings. During Mr. Colling's term as principal, the school made a great deal of progress. The school library was then overhauled and extended. New physical and chemical laboratories were equipped, and the teaching staff increased to six. When Mr. Colling resigned the total enrollment of the school was about 220.

In June 1912, the present principal P. C. MacLaurin was appointed and the next ten years have been years of continual expansion until at the present time the day teaching staff numbers 14, the night staff 16, the day enrollment 370 pupils and the night enrollment 200 pupils or 700 pupils in all. A commercial department was started and the at the present time there are about 100 pupils in the commercial school.

The whole building is now occupied by the High School and in addition the two rooms in the old Grammar School, the old Parish Hall and a room in the Taylor property, making in all 17 class rooms and laboratories.

In the Night School classes, Auto Mechanics, Show Card Writing, Dressmaking, Millinery, Household Science, Bookkeeping, English, Mathematics, Shorthand, Typewriting, Penmanship and Woodworking, are taught.

With five splendid public and separate school buildings in the City, the time has now arrived, without doubt, to build an up-to-date, complete collegiate and technical school, one in which there may be room for 1200 pupils and then along with the other educational institutions of our City Belleville, may justly claim to be an educational centre.

CROSS ATLANTIC IN KETCHES

Duke of Leinster Making Final Arrangements in New York

New York, Dec. 18.—The Duke of Leinster, British sportsman, arrived on the Baltic today by arrange with William W. Nutting, editor, whose challenge he accepted, the details of a Transatlantic race in 40-foot ketches, or auxiliary sailboats, planned for next Summer.

Becoming the proposed contest, the Duke said he would rather the ketches be sailed by one man each, but that he had acceded to Mr. Nutting's request that two man each boat. Mr. Nutting will be accompanied by F. W. "Casey" Baldwin, the Canadian yachtsman, who was one of his two companions when he crossed the Atlantic in the Typhoon, a small sailboat, in 1920. The Duke will be accompanied by a servant.

The British sportsman has not yet decided whether to build a ketch here or bring his own from Ireland.

"Casey" Baldwin is known throughout the Dominion as a sportsman, and some 17 years ago was a member of the Argonaut Varsity Rugby squad. In 1905, at the final game for the Intercollegiate Rugby Championship of Canada, Baldwin was a member of the Varsity team, in the play off game at the Varsity stadium. With 30 seconds to go in the final period, Baldwin scored a touch and put Varsity over the top with a 1 point lead, for the championship.

HISTORY OF ALBERT COLLEGE

Two Farmers in Sidney Mortgage Farms to Make College a Reality—Progress Made Year by Year—Graduates All Over the World in Every Walk of Life—The New Albert to Surpass Any College in Canadian Methodism—Co-Education to be Abandoned

EDITOR'S NOTE:—The forgoing was prepared from data supplied by Dr. R. N. Burns, principal of Albert College. The following historical sketch of Albert was prepared by Miss Ella Mardenfeldt, a graduate of Albert, and received after the first article was in print. They although there is to some extent/ overlapping, the two will be/ ing/ orderly/ it/ was deemed/ advisable to edit the manuscript and/ to/ have/ it/ printed in the series.

For the past sixty-five years, Albert College has filled an important place in the educational work of this country. Important, because of the men and women who have had their training there and have made and are making worthy contributions to the life and betterment of this and other lands.

The College was opened in 1857 with the name of Belleville Seminary and under the auspices of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Soon it was affiliated with the University of Toronto, and, by the Act of Parliament, the name was changed to Albert College, and University powers were conferred in 1871. The new college assumed the name of "Albert" and the women's college that of "Victoria," the names having been selected in honor of the Prince Consort and Her Royal Highness, the Princess of Wales. In 1884, when the Methodist Union was consummated, Victoria and Albert University were converted, Albert graduates were recognized as graduates of Victoria University. The undergraduates of Victoria College in their respective years and great was the satisfaction when the University examinations, which, were formerly a "stumbling block" to many students at Albert, easily got a good proportion of the prized medals. Victoria and Albert College were then merged into one, the institution being adopted as the principal Methodist/ of the United Methodist Church as a Methodist school of secondary education.

In 1906, Victoria University, under Act of Parliament, federated with the University of Toronto, and federation was consummated in 1892. Since then, the Senate Matriculation examination is classified as "high" and "low." Albert College by the Senate of Toronto University, and successful candidates receive both the diploma of graduation at the College and first year standing at the Arts College in Toronto University.

In addition to all the work of a Collegiate Institute, Albert College provides academic instruction in vocal and other departments of education. We have thoroughly equipped Courses in Commercial Science, Shorthand, Painting and Drawing, Religious Education, including the Preliminary Course in Theology for the Methodist Ministry and Music. The Course in Music comprises Toronto Conservatory and University Examinations, Piano, Pipe Organ, Singing, Violin, Harmony and Theory of Music. Physical education is provided in gymnasium classes in our local Y.M.C.A. and by tennis courts, cricket, basket ball, a large skating rink and organized field games.

Albert College has been fortunate in having had among men as its Principals throughout its history.

Dr. Carman was Principal and Professor of Mathematics for seventeen years and filled the position with remarkable ability and unrivalled power. He is remembered for his strength of thought and zeal in students. His successor, Mr. James Seques, Professor of Classics, was a man of power and wise administrator, who had had years of experience in American Colleges. He held the joint position for ten years and was succeeded by Rev. W. P. Dyer, M.A. Dr. Dyer was Principal until Professor of Science for twenty-eight years, during which time the school constantly increased in attendance and prosperity. During his regime, many improvements and enlargements were made in the build ing and in the various courses. In March, 1913, Dr. Dyer suffered a per vous collapse and was succeeded by the present Principal.

Dr. Baker has entered upon his tenth year as Principal and has already, as principal, secured an endowment of $173,756 already paid, with $8,000 more of good subscriptions, and has also secured the building to College affairs. His vision, optimism and enthusiasm have been far-reaching and have affected the Board of Management of experienced business men, and his presentation to the Education Office has met with ready response from the City and many citizens throughout the Dominion, so that practical results are seen in the beautiful site of fifty acres given by the City, in cash and subscriptions of $200,000 for building purposes and in the strong foundation, that has already been laid for the future of co-education, that is to rise, overlooking the picturesque shores of the Bay of Quinte.

The teachers of Albert College have always been characterized by efficiency, thoroughness and loyalty, all honour to Dr. Carman and his staff, that the Women's Christian Association was organized and the city hospital is a monument of her Christian zeal and interest in civic affairs. Albert College students were associated with D. Y. Sinclair and Chas. Clark in the formation of the Y. M. C. A. of this city, for they laid before a meeting of men the needs and possibilities of such an institution and Dr. Horace Wrinch acted as first Secretary. The motto of the school has always been "The College for Christ." Linked with the motto of John Wesley "The World its My Parish." Probably the first foreign missionary from the College was J. W. Warne, who was wonderfully blessed of God as an evangelist in Calcutta and has served for a long term of years as Bishop of the M. E. Church, who was Principal of Nanking Arts. He chose Hazleton as the site of the Hazleton Hospital, which has been a great boon to both white men and Indians and has received the approval of the Provincial and Dominion Governments, while Dr. Wrinch has won renown through all that northern region as a skilful physician; he is also a magistrate and man of great influence in the community. Several of our students have been pioneer preachers in the Peace River District, notably C. F. Hopkins, South America has also had workers from Albert College, prominently in Argentina, where Henry Turner is now laboring as an evangelist and with a Mission Press. Many others are found in various parts of the world laboring as good works and God is giving them fruit in their respective fields of labor.

ST. AGNES SCHOOL

Large and Up-to-Date Residential School for Girls, Surrounded by Beautiful Lawns and Trees—Twenty-Two Years Ago School Was Started—Miss Carroll Giving up Her Good Work

In the year 1902 Mrs. F. R. Lingham, desiring to establish a school where girls under the refining and ennobling influence of the church, might be fitted for all the higher duties of life, bought the property of the late Colonel Brown which had been unoccupied for some years for that purpose with her wonderful energy and great executive ability, she set to work remodelling and making additions to the building, and on September 10th 1902, the school opened with a small number of day pupils. Gradually the numbers increased, and upon the return of Mr. Lingham from South Africa, a couple of years later, the school was in such a flourishing condition that he decided to go on with the work so well begun, which he did with great zeal and pleasure.

Their united interest and the lavish spending of money resulted in completing and furnishing one of the finest schools in the Dominion. Every requirement of a perfect School was fulfilled and in a few years it was widely known, popular and well filled.

But in February 1911 a great calamity befell the school in the sudden death of Mrs. Lingham, the beloved Foundress and Directress and her loss was very much felt. Then, Mr. Lingham redoubled his interest in it and made it his chief pleasure. He built a new wing in memory of his wife's loving work and the desire she had that the maids' quarters should be better and in keeping with the rest of the building; but he made it three stories instead of one. By September of the same year the new wing was finished and the two upper stories filled with pupils.

In the March following, 1912, the school received another and blow the sudden death of Mr. Lingham. These two losses were very much felt, but the good work, begun by them went on, with their daughter, Mrs. E. D. Leaier Directress.

In a couple of years the war broke out and this was very hard upon all boarding schools, but upon this school especially. Built upon a large scale it took a certain number of pupils to pay the expenses and there were not one third of that number, so that the school got considerably into debt and it was thought that it would be necessary to sell the property. However, another arrangement was made, and in 1916 the school was leased by Miss Carroll, who had been Principal since its foundation, and who then assumed the financial responsibility as well.

For six years it flourished, but this year, the seventh of her lease, the numbers are few, the expenses much increased since the war, are heavy and Miss Carroll, unable to bear the responsibility longer, has decided to close it now, much to the regret of the pupils, the staff and the friends of the school. Much good work has been done, in all departments, during its existence hundreds of girls from all parts of the Dominion, the United States, Mexico, South America and the West Indies, have come and gone with happy memories of their school and its teaching and have sent others to take their places. They have always been ready to do their share in any good work that was to be done. Many of them have been distinguished in their career, in Music, Art the Higher Education and in War Works, and they all have fond recollections of the school where they received their early training, and perhaps inspirations. These would be too numerous to mention, but among our Belleville girls, distinguished in their Stobie, Anna Ponton, Aileen Cherry different departments are:—Jean Clinton, Kathleen Hungerford, Mrs. and Helen McKeown, of whom any school might be proud.

A WARNING

Fire Chief Brown has received the following communication from John A. Robertson, secretary of the Canadian Fire Underwriters' Association:

"Following our usual custom at this season of the year I beg to draw your attention to the danger to life and property from Christmas decorations, such as draperies, scenery, cotton to represent snow, etc. Displays of this nature, and the lighting arrangements in connection therewith, add very considerably to the ordinary risks of fire.

"I would also point out that should an accident of the kind occur in a crowded store or meeting, the rapid spread of fire in such inflammable material is almost certain to occasion a panic with attendant risks to life and limb. The National Fire Protection Association and the Ontario Fire Marshal recommend that all fabrics for decoration purposes should be immersed in a solution of commercial ammonium phosphate in the proportion of one pound of phosphate to one gallon of water. If then slightly wrong and dried they will offer considerable resistance to fire until again washed.

"If this is not practicable, a few simple precautions may reduce the danger to a minimum, and these should be considered in all cases where large numbers of people and particularly children are to be gathered

"See that inflammable material is clear of and not hung over heating and lighting devices, steampipes, stove pipes, electric light bulbs, etc.

"See that your electrical circuits are properly fused and not overloaded by the addition of temporary lights.

"Examine your fire extinguishing appliances and see that they are efficient in good order, and readily accessible.

"See that all the exits are plainly marked and not obstructed."

"Remember that nothing can render these displays absolutely safe, and that if accidents are not to mar the festive season, constant vigilance and care must be exercised."

BELLEVILLE, -- AN EDUCATIONAL CENTRE

As was very strikingly demonstrated during the recent Industrial Exhibition, Belleville industries are of an extremely varied nature, so too, if we analyze the activities of the city as a whole, we find them varied in a similar degree. This is one of the healthiest conditions that a city can desire. One of the activities in Belleville that cannot be overlooked, in the wealth of educational institutions that are in our midst, which are constantly and quietly, but very effectively training not only the youth of the city, but the young people from all parts of Canada. One of the most extensive agencies, we have today, is the spreading of the name of Belleville over the world, in the work of the graduates of our educational institutions.

These institutions are practically all housed in buildings that are not only a credit to themselves, but a source of pride to the city. There are some of these seats of learning which have plans for larger and better buildings that are either already under construction, or will be erected in the near future.

Our educational system is very complete for a city of the size of Belleville. Our public schools are equal to none in the country, our High School has a very efficient staff and looks forward eagerly to the day when it will be housed in its new home, when a more efficient system can be taken advantage of to teach the boys manual training and engineering work, and the girls sewing, cooking and other subjects covered by the broader term of domestic science. Two separate schools are doing excellent work in their field and have magnificent buildings, Albert College, doing a wonderful work and practically education to a class of individuals whose influence for good is felt to a marked extent after they graduate. The Ontario School for the deaf is a provincial institution, with a world-wide commercial sphere of education, the business colleges have a better or a wider record than that of the Ontario Business College. It has drawn to Belleville many students from all parts of America, and among its list of students, practically every civilized country in the world is represented. In the private school sphere, St. Agnes has brought many prominent young girls to Belleville, who have become more or less famous after their departure.

At present large additions are being made to the School for the Deaf, which it is expected will be completed in a few months. Albert College has a completely new institution under way, which promises to be one of the most beautiful buildings of the city. A new public school is being erected in Coleman Ward and a new Collegiate is planned. These expanding educational institutions will indeed place Belleville on the map as a seat of learning and every citizen should be proud of them and take a keen interest in them. They will always welcome you as a visitor and any person who cares to take advantage of the open institution to pay visits to any one of them will learn a great many interesting things and will find those in charge to be very hospitable people, and well worth knowing.

Lucky Horseshoes.

Why do we regard horseshoes as lucky? Many people believe that the superstition comes from the sea-god Neptune, whose horses were looked upon as sacred. A horseshoe picked up on the road was supposed to belong to one of Leem.

But the truth is that the horse is the national animal of the English people. The first Saxons who came to England were Hengist and Horsa both of whose names mean horse.

Smiths were regarded with peculiar reverence, since their work was said to be almost a sacred art.

Do not forget that a horseshoe is lucky only if its points face you as you find it, for luck streams out from them. If it is lying the other way, walk round it until you are opposite the points; then pick it up and carry it with the points uppermost.

Nail it on your door in the same position. Good fortune will then be showered—so says the old belief—over your house. If the points are downward as it hangs on the door, the lucky influences will pass into the earth and be lost.

KEEPING THE TRAINS SPOTLESS

1. Parking away the rugs after having had their turn on the vacuum.

2. Cleaning the pillows on the vacuum cleaner invented by Canadian Pacific employees.

3. The train carpet beater in action. Straps attached to the roller quickly loosen all dust.

A FEW hours spent in the Winnipeg, Montreal and Vancouver yards of the Canadian Pacific Railway while the dining and passenger trains are being cleaned gives one the assurance that there is little need for travellers to worry as far as germs are concerned.

The yards are equipped with the very latest devices for the cleaning and equipping of the trains. The same pattern of equipment is in use in Winnipeg, Montreal and Vancouver, and at these three terminals the coaches undergo a thorough cleaning. Approximately 110 cars are cleaned in Winnipeg per day, and it costs $18.00 to clean each car.

When a passenger train arrives at, say Winnipeg Terminal, it is run down to the coach yard and everything moveable is taken out. Then commences the cleaning and germ ousting process. The heavier tapestried cushions, pillows and bed blankets are placed under a vacuum cleaner with 90 pounds pressure. This is the first process of cleaning, then follows the disinfecting. The carpets are placed on a wire netting, which looks not unlike a bed-spring only that it moves on wheels. At one end there is a huge roller to which is attached scores of leather straps, which is referred to in the yards as the "cat and 109 tails." This revolves at a terrific force and after the carpet has been twice beaten there is a good chance of any dust remaining. Carpets usually stand this treatment for 18 months to two years. While all this portable stuff is being cleaned, workers are busy inside the car. They do not spare disinfectant or soap and water.

The kitchen tables and ice boxes are aluminum, and all the sauce pans are of copper. When one considers that several hundred meals a day are prepared and served from one of these small kitchens, it is no wonder the diner service is considered one of the most remarkable features in connection with passenger traffic.

There are at present in the entire system 155 dining cars in which approximately 8,000 meals per day are served. Back in the Winnipeg coach yards is the Dining Car supply building and linen department. It is here that bread, rolls, cake and pastry are made each day to meet the demand for the Buffet and Dining cars. There is a first-class artificial ice plant installed so that the supply of food on hand is kept in perfect condition. Every room is well stocked, with the exception of the wine cellar, which boasts of nothing more than soft drinks. Several seamstresses are busy in the linen room, where the bed and table linen are kept in repair. The linen department of the railway is well stocked. There are in the entire rail service alone 245,253 sheets; 204,867 slips; 68,925 cloths; 201,833 table napkins; and 373,267 face towels, as well as many other pieces. The laundry has when checked at the end of each year show that approximately 13,000,000 pieces go through the wash tubs, at the three big terminals and other divisional points along the line. No steward, cook, waiter, sleeping car conductor or porter, is put on a Canadian Pacific train without having graduated from the school of instruction. They attend lecture classes every morning until fully qualified to attend to the wants and needs of travellers over the Canadian Pacific.

THE ONTARIO SCHOOL FOR THE DEAF

One of Belleville's Largest Institutions—Best Equipped School for the Deaf on the American Continent—Students Taught Not Only to Read and Write, but All Subjects Usually Studied in Public Schools—Practical Instruction in Dairying, Poultry Raising, General Farming, Carpentry, Printing, Tailoring, and Practically Every Trade.

Among the educational institutions in Belleville of which the city and Province have good reason to be proud, is the Ontario School for the Deaf, so well known to our citizens in an indefinite way, yet almost unknown to a very great many of them. Every stranger come to the city and are being shown around, this is one of the places to which they are always taken and always they are surprised and deeply impressed with the magnitude of the plant, and the diversity, variety and excellence of the training and instruction given. Yet, strange to say, very large numbers of the citizens of Belleville have never been inside the school, and know practically nothing of the work being done there.

Nearly two thousand years ago, the Roman Philosopher Seneca uttered the following words—"Into universal idea relative to the mental status and capabilities of the deaf:—

"No instruct the deaf no art could reach,
No care improve them, nor wisdom teach."

Incredible as it may seem, this view that the deaf were totally incapable of receiving instruction prevailed throughout the world until less than two hundred years ago, and during all those long centuries the condition of the deaf was lamentable and hopeless indeed, even in the Christian countries. A wonderful change has been wrought since then. Great schools have been established in all civilized countries, and some even of the heathen lands by Christian workers and it has been amply demonstrated that the deaf are quite as susceptible to mental, moral, and religious instruction and development as hearing people. Among all the great and charitable things that have been achieved for humanity during the last hundred and fifty years, there is none greater or grander than the work that has been accomplished in the education of the deaf; nor is there any class in the community entitled to higher honor than the men and women who have devoted their lives to this noble work for humanity.

So far as is known, the first school for the deaf was established in Spain in 1755 and permanently removed to Leipsic in 1756 by Samuel Heinicke, and in the same year Abbe de l'Epee, a scholar of high eminence, who is looked upon as the real founder of the education of the deaf, opened a school in Paris. In 1780 Thomas Braidwood began the teaching of deaf children in Edinburgh. His school soon became great celebrity and drew pupils not only from all parts of Great Britain but from the American colonies. The first institution for the deaf in America was established in Hartford in 1817 by Dr. Thomas Hopkins Gallaudet, the great pioneer of deaf education on this continent, who visited Great Britain, Paris and Leipsic for the purpose of making himself familiar with the methods employed there.

The first school for the deaf was established in Toronto in 1858 by J. E. McLean, and in 1864 it was removed to Dundurn Castle, Hamilton. It was a semi-private school, being supported by fees, supplemented by small government and municipal grants. As is always the case in private schools, Mr. McLean had much opposition to overcome, since a majority of people still believed that it was impossible to the deaf to be educated to any useful extent. But as he persevered, and so persistently urged the claims of the deaf, and so deeply demonstrated their mental capacity, that the Provincial Government finally recognized their rights, and in 1870 the "Ontario Institution for the Deaf and Dumb" was opened in Belleville. The first Superintendent was W. J. Palmer, M.A., Ph.D., an experienced American educator of the deaf, his teaching staff being composed of J. B. McGinn, D. R. Coleman, M.A., S. T. Greene, B.A., T. T. Watson, Mrs. T. J. Churchill and Miss A. Perry, the attendance the first year being slightly over one hundred. In 1879 Dr. Palmer resigned, and was succeeded by Mr. R. Mathison, who held this position till 1890, when the present Superintendent, C. B. Coughlin, M.D., was appointed.

"The Ontario School for the Deaf," which is the present official title, is not an asylum or place of detention, as some people seem to imagine it to be, but is in name implies, is purely and solely a school for the education of the deaf. These, of course, cannot be satisfactorily taught in the regular public schools of the Province, and to make provision for them a special school expressly for their instruction, where they may be taught by teachers specially trained for this purpose, of age it has always provided a vocabulary of many hundreds, perhaps thousands, of words, and can express its thoughts freely and in reasonably correct language. When a deaf child enters school it does not, except in rare cases, know a single word of the language—not the names of even the commonest objects in everyday use; and it takes several years of hard work for a deaf pupil to become as proficient in the understanding and use of language as that which the hearing child has unconsciously attained during the first six or seven years of his life. The ability of the deaf to converse all the difficulties consequent on their deafness is evidenced by the fact that one the pupils, totally deaf, after completing the course here, took the complete High School and Victoria University courses, and graduated as Bachelor of Arts. Another pupil, while attending this school, passed the Entrance examination, standing fifth in the list of successful candidates in South Hastings and Belleville. He then attended the High School in Belleville, and afterwards in Peterboro, passed his matriculation examination last spring and is now attending Toronto University.

The number of pupils at present in attendance at the O.S.D. is 180. The largest enrollment in the history of the school, and the number will probably reach the 200 mark before the end of this session. These are divided into 26 classes, averaging about eleven pupils to the class, the largest number of pupils in any one class being seven, and the smallest four. This is a very important feature of the work, especially in the junior and department, as it enables the individual, the classes to be smaller than in hearing schools ten pupils being as many as one teacher can satisfactorily instruct, while in hearing schools the average is only eight.

In addition to the academic work manual training and trades' instruction are also given. The boys may learn farming, gardening, carpentry, printing, shoemaking or tailoring; while the girls are instructed in dressmaking, housekeeping, cookery, knitting and mending, and every sort of domestic work which girls in the best, regulated homes are expected to become proficient in. It is hoped in the near future to considerably extend the technical instruction at the school and also to carry on continuation work corresponding to at least the first and second year High School courses. The school hours are arranged so as to facilitate instruction in the industrial department to the greatest extent as possible. Part of the pupils begin work in the classrooms at 8 o'clock and are dismissed at 2.30, spending the next two hours in the shops. The rest of the pupils, classified in junior and senior rates, go to the shops from 8 till 9.30 in the morning, and are in the class rooms from 9.30 till 2.45. The double shift system enables much more thorough instruction to be given each pupil while the shops have as many hours possible if all the pupils were present at the same time.

This is the virtual home of the pupils during the ten or twelve years that constitute the formative period of their lives, and the importance of and instruction is an imperative and vital part of the work of the school. The pupils of each denomination are in charge of a minister of that persuasion, if there is one in Belleville and these ministers are required to come up to the school at specified times and give such instruction as they wish, assisted by a teacher as interpreter when necessary. The pupils may attend church wherever arranged by the ministers in charge, but there is a fully organized Sunday school, every teacher on the staff being required to teach a class in the Sunday morning. The Roman Catholic pupils have a catechism class twice a week, taught in the school by their church, and, as required by the rules of the church, must attend service every Sunday, weather permitting. Of course all religious instruction at the school is given after the school hours.

There are two main methods of instruction in schools for the deaf, the manual and the oral. In some classes the pupils are taught by writing and finger-spelling, with a limited use of signs. In oral classes all recitations are conducted chiefly by speech and lip-reading, though writing, especially in the higher classes, is largely used as in hearing schools. Schools in which some of the classes are taught by the oral method and others by the manual, are known as "combined" schools. Half a century ago a great majority of deaf schools were manual, but during the last few decades the oral system has been making rapid headway and is now the prevailing method all over the world. In nearly all the leading schools the manual method is only followed in a small proportion of the classes composed of the duller pupils, or those with, because of poor eyesight or other defect, are unable to make satisfactory use of speech and lip-reading. At present nearly seventy-five per cent of the deaf in the United States and Canada are taught by the oral method, while this system is almost exclusively employed in the great majority of schools in Great Britain and Western Europe. In the O.S.D., the manual method was used till within twelve years ago, when the oral system was introduced, and now 83 out of the 98 classes, constituting eighty-five per-cent of the pupils, are taught orally.

Signs is the natural and instinctive mode of expression for the deaf and will always be used by them as the language of communication with each other, and they are practically essential in their conventions, religious services and other large assemblings, as it is almost impossible to read the lips of a speaker at the far end of a large room; but the use of signs in the class-room or even outside is a hindrance to the progress of the pupils. Signs seldom follow the grammatical sequence of words in the English language, but quite the reverse; in most cases, and many very important words are not signed at all. The natural tendency of pupils is to use signs habitually, and when they think in visualized signs, is to follow in speech and writing the order of words as signed which, as stated above, is rarely in the correct grammatical order. For this reason the "use of signs" is generally looked upon as a positive detriment to the pupils in the acquisition of the correct form of speech. Nevertheless signs are prohibited in all oral schools, or restricted to the utmost possible extent, and speech and lip-reading are the only means of communication used in the school, as much as possible, even between pupils in the play hours. Some of the most successful pupils in the school are those who have become deaf in early childhood, and have thus lost the power of hearing before they had learned to speak. Such pupils, of course, have a great advantage over those who have been born deaf, or who have become deaf before they had learned to speak, as they have already acquired a knowledge of language, and can speak and read the lips with comparative ease and correctness. Many of the pupils, however, who have become deaf in early childhood, have lost the power of speech, and have to be taught to speak. Others, who have become deaf at a later period, have retained the power of speech, but have to be taught to read the lips. Many of the pupils who have become deaf before they had learned to speak, or who have lost the power of speech, have a very good command of language, and can express their thoughts freely and in reasonably correct language. When a deaf child enters school it does not, except in rare cases, know a single word of the language—not the names of even the commonest objects in everyday use; and it takes several years of hard work for a deaf pupil to become as proficient in the understanding and use of language as that which the hearing child has unconsciously attained during the first six or seven years of his life. ONTARIO SCHOOL FOR THE DEAF, FIFTY YEARS AGO

To such educated as the faculties the deaf are as justly entitled as are living children, so this school for the deaf is an essential and important part of our excellent public school system.

As stated above, many people still have a very erroneous idea of the intellectual capabilities of the deaf, and there are some people who still regard them as mental defectives. Nothing could be farther from the truth. The deaf are in all respects similar to hearing people with the exception of their deafness, and this deprivation is to some degree compensated for by the more perfect development of the other senses. In mental alertness, in intellectual aptitudes and in manual dexterity the deaf are fully the equals of the hearing, and, comparing them individually and collectively, they will average as high in the public school in the Province a brighter or more mentally alert lot of boys and girls than can be seen at this school.

In point of morals the deaf are susceptible to hearing people; and, in evidence, that they have the same inherent evil, but because their deafness makes them less subject to temptation and more susceptible to evil influences. The difficulties of discipline that break the heart and spirit of many a teacher of hearing children, are almost non-existent at the School for the Deaf. Punishment, during a session often goes by without the need for corporal punishment. As a rule the deaf are very susceptible to kindly influences, and are more reverent than hearing people, probably due to the fact that they do not hear those things so flippantly and blasphemously spoken of as other people do every day.

One very prevalent erroneous idea relative to the deaf is that those classed in the popular mind as deaf-mutes are dumb in the sense that they have no sense in which they are deaf. They are deaf because their organs of hearing are defective in some way. Many people think that they are mute because of some defect in their organs of speech, while in no way is the case. The vocal organs of the deaf-even the congenital deaf—are as perfect as the hearing. So far as we know there is not in this sense, a dumb child in the school. The reason they are dumb in the sense in which they are deaf. They are deaf because their organs of hearing are defective in some way. Many people think that they are mute because of some defect in their organs of speech, while in no way is the case. The vocal organs of the deaf—

TO GIVE ARBUCKLE ANOTHER CHANCE

Several Producers Express Desire to Help Film Comedian Who is in Turn Grateful

Los Angeles, Dec. 20.—Will H. Hays, chairman of the motion picture industry, said today that Roscoe C. chance to "come back" in the motion picture.

The statement of the comedian given out from the headquarters of Mr. Hays, said:

"He has gone straight since he was barred from the films last April and he has pledged his word that he will keep on going straight. His conduct has satisfied Will H. Hays adviser to the motion picture industry; Joseph M. Schenck, who will employ him, and the Paramount Company, represented by Jesse L. Lasky, which operates formerly distributed the comedies in which the fat pantomimist appeared."

SONG.

(By Edna Valentine Trypsell.)

Rain grave with the yesterdays I'll by my sorrow,
Wrapped in his memories like parcelcots of lawn,
And I shall forget it-in care for the Save only at evening and some times at dawn.

I shall go on with the day's burden lighter,
Blue sky and brown earth and I shall be friends;
Small things and simple shall make me brighter
On every to-morrow until the trail ends.

Small things and simple I shall use in forgetting:
Green buds of springtime, October's brown leaves;
I never shall for my sorrow go fretting;
Ah, but the dawnings—the shadowstrewn eves!

LINKED LIVES

By D. Kinmount Roy

"Nay! I cannot answer anything, Donald said with an air of helpless defeat unusual with him; 'I canna understand! I am a dull-witted callant, as ye ken best, Graham, but I heard the lassie's mother sing that same song before she was born, so I said and we bot left her ow'n person to have heard or learned it from her. Pitpistry it is, Papistry if you will; but surely the Almighty can find some way of His own of speaking to His creature, in spite of their strange fancies and bewildering beliefs. The ministers are a' wise, umco' wise, but the Almighty has taken nane o' them into His confidence nae much that they ken a' His mind, nor bound Himself to deal wi' a' folk according to' my written plan. I would not undertake to do it myself, Graham, then how can folk expect the Almighty to do it? And if an angel or spirit hath spoken any thing to the lassie which is hidden from us, let us not fight against God; for sure I am that the lassie's soul is an open as the driven snow, and her mind as an open book. But man, Graham, it is fearsome to suddenly feel that the definite and the Allseeing is so near you, and that no wile from, or might, or cunning or play of tongue devising e an shut out the highsing flashes of the All-powerful.'

If the old soldier found nothing to say he was in no haste to say it; and both men in silence gazed out into the night, each wrapped peripherally in wonder and courageous. The wing of mystery touched them in the innermost recesses of their being, albeit it but touched them differently and in spite of all the wisdom of the ages is still according to each and again comes to us for which we have no names, and against which neither have any armour of proof.

The mystery of the song was solved satisfactorily long after.

Before they could stand it no longer, 'Oona,' she exclaimed, 'you are like a changeling tonight! I thought you were a heavy spirit, sometimes, and bewitched you, we must exorcise the treacherous imp! I think it would have been splendid to have seen the fairies! I would like to have been in the thick of it.'

'Beatrice!' Oona exclaimed, amazed and wondering.

'Yes, I would,' continued the youthful firebrand, with rising colour and stirred of defiance, 'I would like to see a seafight as well! I would rather see a seafight than a plain hand-battle—and hear the booming of cannon over the breakers, and the cheers of our men. I feel like that,' she said, singing to her own accompaniment the long since forgotten song—

'A wet sheet and a flowing sea,
A grind that follows fast
And fills the white and rattling sail
And bends the gallant mast, my boys,
While like the mad we fly
Away the good ship flies and leaves

Old England on the lee.

'Oh for a soft and gentle wind!
I heard a fair one cry:
But give to me a snorting breeze,
And white waves heaving high, my boys,

The good ship tight and free,
The world of waters is our home,
And merry men are we!

There's tempest in yon horned moon,
And lightning in yon cloud,
But hark the music, mariners!
The wind is piping loud!
The wind is piping loud, my boys,

The lightning flashes free—
While the hollow oak our palace is,
Our heritage the sea!'

The swing of the old melody was irresistible, and many who came impetuously was pouring out 'apologies, questions and explanations without pause or stint, or desire to his shifts' to hear everything clear and satisfactory.

She was puzzled, but unmistakably interested. At first could not see that Hazlestelle was much too excited to be striking light hold.

'Oh, the Island!' she said at length, as she just slowly filtered through the mass of confusing recent events had induced—'the Island! It is a fascination beyond words that the Island should have any connection with any one of us here; and this handsome and deferential gentleman—could he be the boisterous strongman who burst in upon me before day-dreams upon the little 'Isle of Two Streams' so long ago? It really was not so long ago, but how much had they far in thought and character since then. The rustic simplicity and rural pleasures of the unsophisticated home of Janet's care were not forgotten, and never could be forgotten; she had grown up under them and had indeed their pure breath of trust and freedom, but a new and wholly unknown world had opened to her, and a wide emotional and exciting interests had already made her faintly aware that there were still many unexplored chambers in her mind, many worlds of interest and pleasure to conquer and win for her own. Those who had been her first love-letter herself till would have been inclined to add that there were also unmoved depths in the placid waters of her nature that might be stirred to storm and tempest when the slumbering winds should awake from their long sleep.

But so far, no cloud had arisen to dim the horizon, no ripple had as yet troubled the calm waters.

THE INTELLIGENCER—THE PAPER EVERYBODY READS

GOLD MADE TO ORDER.

Science Still Trying to Follow Lead of Alchemists.

A considerable sensation was recently caused by a rumour that a German chemist has discovered a method of producing gold from another metal —possibly copper. Later reports denied that the gold was rumor; the great secret of making gold is still undiscovered.

As most of us are aware, the chemists — alchemists as they were called in the Middle Ages—put their lives in searching for method of manufacturing gold from cheaper base minerals. Fifty years ago they were regarded as somewhat ludicrous by the scientists of the day; but our views have changed, and to-day it is realized that it is only a matter of time and research before the transmutation of metals is an accomplished fact.

So long ago as 1907 that great chemist, Sir William Ramsay, did actually effect transmutation by means of a gas evolved from radium. Only in this case, what he did was to "degrade" copper down to the first member of its group of metals, namely "lithium."

Almost the same date three members of the French Society of Modern Alchemy were announced to have succeeded in making a synthesis of gold. In other words, they had built up gold out of its constituents.

Tunes Adopted by Islam.

A curious blending of the ancient Orient and modern West was observed this year on the occasion of the return of the Holy Carpet of the Mahmal from Mecca to Cairo after its usual excursion to Mecca, according to Dr. T. H. Green, writing in the Christian Herald. As the carpet was brought into the city with enormous pomp and ceremony, the attending band shattered the Egyptian air with the tunes of "Marching Through Georgia." Before the carpet was finally put away it was taken on board back on seven ceremonial circuits, and the stately old band described three concerts to the tune of "My Old Kentucky Home." What these airs are the case selected for such a sanctified purpose is known only to the Moslem authorities.

The annual pilgrimage with the Holy Carpet is one of the most colorful and impressive of the ceremonies of the Mohammedan year. For many years of plenty the carpet is accompanied by a host of followers, and great circumstance is observed throughout, both at Mecca and at Cairo.

CHRISTMAS FOR THE LITTLE BUSH

They grew side by side in the big woods—tall, well-shaped evergreen and the scrawny little bush without any leaves.

The evergreen proudly rustled his needles and admired himself. Christmas was coming and wasn't he the most beautiful tree in the forest? He felt confident that some one would soon come for him, but most of all he hoped that Fred and George would come. He wanted to be their Christmas tree.

The little bare bush were sad. She, too, loved Fred and George. "Oh," she sighed, as the wind rustled through her bare branches, "if I were only beautiful as he, then I could go along. How I should love to be a Christmas tree, especially for these dear boys."

The very next day the two boys came into the forest. They were poor boys, so poor indeed that most of all he hoped that Fred and George would come. He wanted to be their Christmas tree.

"There she goes," called Fred. "Look out! Don't let it fall on that little bush." The big evergreen fell sprawling to the ground, just missing the tiny bush.

"Fred!" George stood and looked at the little bush. "I have an idea. We're going to have a Christmas tree, after all. Here, help me cut down this bush."

"That bush? Fred gasped. "Are you crazy? Look at it!"

The little bush blushed and hung her head for shame. She was glad the evergreen was still too dazed from his fall to hear them.

"Listen! It isn't so bad. We'll put it on the table with that scrawny old tree to hide it. We'll hang the branches all with cotton so it will look like it is covered with snow. And you know we have a lot of other sparkly stuff left from last year. We'll sprinkle all over it. Then with our tinsel and popcorn and the kids' presents, I'll bet it will look keen."

"Say, you've said it!" Fred was already chopping away at the little bush. And we won't tell mother until we get the things ready. Will that be fun?"

It all fixed. Won't she be pleased to have a Christmas tree after all, and such a pretty one too! And it will be pretty, by George."

George laughed at this old joke. "By jove, too," he said. "You've got a head for help." The little bush laughed, too, but she felt sorry for the poor evergreen that had to be cut.

SANCTUARY

When the Sultan sought asylum on board the British Fleet.
He knew well that Fisg's protection where ti flew;
Made farewell to home and country till the time of trouble passed away,
And the prospect of return the brighter grew.

No matter what his errors, the Allies were on their guard.
He knew well that once upon the wave,
The well known Flag was sanctuary to all beneath its folds:
"T was a Haven both to Sultan and to Slave.

May that day be far and distant when
Those who succour crave
Will be told that Britain's power at sea is gone,
When the names of Drake and Nelson, or Howard and of Blake
Are but memories, history's pages to adorn.

AT FORTY-FIVE

When a fellow has grown mellow,
In the middle of miles of life,
While he's done his stretch of trouble,
And endured his share of strife,
When he's reached that state of feeling,
When the heart's no longer bold,
I can certify, Old Scout, he's Getting old!

When a chap has grown a lap on
Shallow as his girth is great,
When he hunts his slippers early,
And remains at home in state—
When his wildest, dissipation,
Is a night out, with his wife,
I can tell you, he is getting,
On in life!

When he never (hardly ever)
Yearns to go out with the boys,
When he lingers with the kiddies,
Painting trousers on their toys,
When the thrill of jazz can't touch him,
Nor the flapper catch his eye,
He is ready for his mansions
In the sky.

As for me, I'm getting younger,
Every minute I exist,
And it keeps me busy adding
New diversions to my list;
And if I keep growing backward,
(Other things do), I shall
And be sitting at a bottle,
In my crib.

"Well, that!" asked the teacher. "All the others have written at least two sheets, while you did nothing."

"Well," replied Hendy, "that's what I'd do if I was a millionaire."

TEXT OF REGULATIONS GOVERNING RECEIPT TAX

(Canadian Press.)

Ottawa, Dec. 21.—Last evening an extra issue of the Canada Gazette gave further particulars regarding the stamp tax on receipts, which becomes effective January 1st, 1922.

The regulations are:

"Counter sales slips and cash register tickets are not taxable, provided no words implying or stating acknowledgment of the receipt or the payment of money appear thereon.

"Payrolls, signature of employee thereon being receipt for wages, taxable in respect of each such signature.

"Receipts for payment of legacies are taxable. A receipt of money in a deed or mortgage is taxable.

"Receipts for payment of taxes except those given to or by the Dominion Government or a provincial government, are taxable.

"Individual freight bills and periodical statements of same, acknowledging receipt of payment, are taxable.

"Customs House broker's receipts are taxable.

"Letters forward by mail, also postcards, acknowledging the payment of money, are regarded as letters and cards and are not subject to this tax.

"All insurance policies, whether fire, marine, life, or casualty, whereby the payment of money is acknowledged, are taxable.

"All insurance receipts, acknowledging the payment of money, are taxable.

"Receipts drawn out of Canada, but not valid until countersigned in Canada, are taxable.

"Cancelled cheques and cheques with receipts endorsed thereon when drawn up on or addressed to a bank, are not taxable as receipts.

"Promissory notes, bills of exchange, drafts, cheques, counterfoil, being part of a taxable express money order, is not taxable as a receipt."

Persons violating or evading the regulations are liable to a penalty not exceeding $100.

This in spite of protests from all over the Dominion, the tax will go into effect. It will be a decidedly unpopular levy and will be the source of a considerable amount of trouble to the Government.

"HASWELL" MAY ENTER ATLANTIC OCEAN RACE

Vice-Commodore Aemilius Jarvis, of the R.C.Y.C., may race his yacht Haswell in the Duke of Leinster's ocean race, Mr. Jarvis has been in communication with Mr. Nutting, editor of the Motor Boat, New York, regarding the race. Mr. Nutting with Owen Sidwin, the old Varsity Rugby star, sailed the Typhoon to England in 1920 and plan to sail against the Duke of Leinster next summer.

"If the race is as originally described, a fleet of yachts, sailed for not less or two men, I could not be in it. If, however, it is open to 45-foot schooners as well, I think I could spare the time from business, gladly enter the Haswell in it. That is how things stand," Mr. Jarvis yesterday.

Mr. Jarvis took the Haswell to Jamaica and back two years ago, and has sailed her many across the Atlantic, while racing in the Solent, in view for some time. He has not yet decided when he will go. The International rule, under which Haswell would have to race in England, might prove too much of a handicap for a vessel built for measurement under the Universal rule. The time question also enters into Mr. Jarvis' calculations.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

Government figures suggesting that the new winter wheat crop would be 15,000,000 bushels larger as compared with the corresponding estimate at this time last year, had a bearish effect on the wheat market today. Closing prices were unsettled, ranging from ⅛c. net lower to ¼c. advance, with May $1.¼, 25½c, $1.25½, and July, $1.14⅝ to $1.15⅛. Corn finished at ⅛c. to ¼c. decline to ¼c. gain, and oats off ⅛c. to ⅜c.

Evident loosening of confidence on the part of numerous holders was shown by the quantities gathered, and that standing that some authorities said the really significant feature of the Government report was the fact that except in two cases the condition of the winter crop is the lowest on record.

It was also pointed out that severe cold had prevailed since the Government data were gathered, and that many of the fields were unprotected. Fading away of prospects of the loan to Germany lended further to handicap bulls, and so likewise did talk about slow progress of bills at Washington.

Persistent buying for strong commission houses rallied the wheat market to some extent during the last hour of the day. This buying accompanied gossip that as much as 500,000 bushels of wheat should be purchased for shipment to Europe, including considerable hard winter grade to go from ports on the Gulf of Mexico.

Some notice was also taken of late messages saying an important announcement was expected in relation to plans for financing exports of foodstuffs.

Corn and oats averaged lower with wheat. Rural offerings of corn, however, were small, and some export business was announced.

Strong Liquid Position of Royal Bank of Canada

Total Assets Stand at $479,362,366—Of This Amount Liquid Assets Are $216,048,331, Equal to 49.37% of Liabilities to Public—Savings Deposits Show Canadian People Practise Thrift.

The Annual Statement of the Royal Bank of Canada for the fiscal year ending November 30th discloses the strong and sound position of the bank. With its large and complete organization throughout the Dominion, the report of the Royal Bank of Canada reflects in a special manner the general conditions of the country. On this account there will be satisfaction to find that following the readjustment period for tightened credit, the general trend of business is evidently on the upgrade.

Of the greatest importance from the public standpoint is perhaps the manner in which the savings deposits have been maintained in the face of lessened industrial activity. The substantial total of these deposits indicates that a very great proportion of the people have been adding materially to their savings. This is a healthy sign, particularly in view of the large amount that small investors have placed in Victory Bonds during the past few years. Total deposits amount to $377,555,951, of which $277,555,882, bear interest.

Bank's Cash Position.

The Bank has fully maintained its usual strong liquid position, the percentage of actual cash on hand and in bank to liabilities to the public being 26.20%. Of total assets of $479,367,395, liquid assets are $216,048,331, being 49.37% of liabilities to the public. Of this amount cash on hand and Dominion notes total $83,938,009. Other principal items included in the liquid assets are Call Loans on bonds, debentures and stocks of approximately $48,000,000; cheques on other banks $20,378,642; balances due by banks and banking correspondents $27,893,715; Canadian Municipal Securities and British Foreign and Colonial Public Securities, other than Canadian $7,901,277, Railway and other bonds $13,622,668.

Profits Well Maintained.

The Profits and Loss Account shows that profits have been well maintained, the total for the year after deducting charges for management, accrued interest on deposits, making full provision for all bad and doubtful debts, having amounted to $3,938,499, which equals 19.42% on the capital. This amount added to the balance of Profit and Loss carried from the previous year, made the total amount available for distribution $4,963,514. From this was paid in dividends and bonus 2,850,000; there was transferred to Officers' Pension Fund $100,000; appropriation was made for Bank Premises of $400,000; Reserve for Dominion Government Taxes, including War Tax on Bank Note Circulation $500,000; leaving an amount to be carried forward to Profit and Loss of $1,013,514.

That the Royal Bank of Canada has increased through the period of business depression in such splendid shape is an evidence of the stability of our Canadian banks and of the business sagacity of those in charge of them.

STANDARD OF BUSINESS HIGH

Dishonesty Wins No Lasting Success Today—Conscience Only Guide to Best Capital.

That man is a success who lives up to his conscience.

Business success and conscience success go hand-in-hand, as a rule. Indeed, "success" is attained in business only when conscience is now generally looked on as no success at all.

Conscience is the sense of character, and without character no man is today rated a success.

The less conscience a man has, the less likely is he to be successful—and stay successful—today.

Our whole business standards have been revised.

Salesmanship used to consist largely of cupidity. Today cupidity is recognized as stupidity.

The progress made ethically by business is best illustrated by the transformation which has taken place in advertising. A generation ago advertising was nine-tenths exaggeration, misstatements and deception. Today it is nine-tenths truth, fact, honest.

Truthful, small "voice," in other words, has become a loud, dominant

PETERBORO SOFT BALL LEAGUE HELD BANQUET.

Peterboro', Dec. 20.—The Peterboro' Softball League brought their Fall schedule to a close last evening with a banquet for the championship team, at which the cup donated by Mayor Taylor was presented by the Knights of Columbus to the champions. Delegates from every other team in the league were present.

The toast list was lengthy. President James J. Dorris, of the K. of C. softball club, stated that was the first year that the Knights had ever won in any athletic contest in this city. The Knights were also presented with a special cup donated by Chris Gage for championship of the city section of the schedule. Plans for the opening schedule were discussed.

The C.G.E. and Maple Leaf baseball teams, champions of the intermediate and junior sections of the C.G.E. league, were also at the banquet last evening, at which the medals and prizes won by the teams will be presented.

special cost to Toronto, Hamilton, or any other community. Electric lines laid alongside the present double track will save an enormously expensive new right-of-way; save a whole set of new, costly terminals and stations; give a fine entrance to Toronto and through Hamilton without sacrifice of water-fronts or other civic assets; cut operating costs and increase revenues of Canada's national railway system, and thereby lessen deficits for which the people have to pay and prevent squandering of municipalities' cash and credit on unnecessary railway duplication.

Sir Henry Thornton immediately perceives the outstanding fact that further duplication of railways in this district is sinful. He does not want the people's National Railway cutting the throat of Hydro radials—another "people's" railway. So he proposes to electrify the Grand Trunk, and give the service that will—until the need, and conserve traffic and revenues for it.

The logical, sensible thing for Sir Adam Beck to do, in this new circumstance, is announce a suspension of his project until Sir Henry Thornton can develop the G.T.R. electrification scheme more thoroughly. Sir Henry has been in the country only two or three weeks. The superiority of the Grand Trunk for fast radials is self-evident to him, and the electrification is a business proposal.

It will never do to have the National Railways and Hydro radials paralleling each other over a hundred miles, fighting each other into deficits on traffic, and costing the public immense sums. The district can stand only the one or the other —and the Grand Trunk electrification has all the advantages in cost, in location, in economy to the public, and in general transportation facilities.

CHRISTMAS TREE.

children of the Shelter, was loud in his thanks for the generous nature of the Lions, and strongly advised the children to go out into Canada, the land of manifold opportunities, and by being hard and persistent, as well as kind and considerate work, become good, desirable, and highly successful citizens of Canada, as we all hope and expect that they will.

Before the meeting disbanded, Chairman Ponton urged members of the Lions' Club to contest the municipal elections and the Board of Education vacancies, providing that opportunity presents itself, at the nominations to be held on Friday. The Lions were urged to support the Para-Commission by-law, as strict efforts were being made to defeat the cause in the city. It was felt that some organizations were probably unfavorable to the idea.

During the evening four of the boys and the little girl repeated the Christmas story from the Scripture, by heart, and sang a song ensemble. Jolly ring songs were loudly sung by the cubs also, Cub Russ Wotten presiding at the piano.

MAYOR HANNA ENTERTAINS COUNCIL

Quinte Cafe Scene of Informal Banquet After Committee Meetings

Last evening, after the committee meetings were concluded, all the members of the city council journeyed over to the Quinte Cafe as the guests of the Mayor. After the informal banquet spread had been taken care of, a toast to the Mayor was proposed. In the toast the many high qualities of the Mayor and his untiring energies were appreciatively touched upon. The Mayor answered in a very appropriate manner. This is one of the many little things that our Mayor is constantly doing, and the reason for his unprecedented popularity is evident.

THE BASILICA AT QUEBEC IN RUINS

Fire Completely Destroyed the Old Historic Edifice at Early Hour This Morning

Quebec, Dec. 22—A heap of smoking ruins amidst scorched walls, was all that was left to-day of fine old Basilica. Fire which broke out in the early hours this morning in the roof defied all the efforts of the firemen, and completely destroyed the edifice. The damage is estimated by Mgr. Laflamme, the Cure of the Basilica, at one million dollars, though contents of the church which dates back to 1674, included a number of paintings of sacred subjects by Vandyke and Lebrun which cannot be valued in money and are irreplacable. Incendiarism is believed to have been responsible for the outbreak as the chief of the provincial police received a letter telling him that the Basilica was to be burned the twenty-eighth of this month.

Quebec, Dec. 22.—The announcement that evidence which will prove that the fire which destroyed the Basilica here this morning was started by an incendiary has been placed in the hands of the police for investigation, was made this afternoon by Mgr. LeFlamme, Cure of Cathedral.

NO FAITH IN "AMERICAN CANARDS"

London, Dec. 22nd. — Considerable caution, amounting sometimes to frank skepticism, is manifested by the London newspapers in their discussion of the proposal for the United States to commission the Geneva. Some of the papers bring forward semi official denials that Britain has received, much less accepted, the proposal and warn against putting faith in these "American Canards".

OIL FURNACE IN OPERATION

New Oil Burning Furnaces at New Riggs' Garage Put in Operation on Friday Afternoon

On Friday afternoon, the new oil furnace, recently installed in the Riggs' garage, Pinnacle street, was set in operation for the first time. The furnace, which is in the basement of the new garage, near the front entrance, was started, with all water throughout the heating system quite cold; in exactly one hour's time, the furthest radiator in the spacious building, was too hot for the hand to bear, and the temperature in the huge open room was 48°.

The fuel used in the ordinary gas oil, which is pumped into the furnace room from the tank, which is buried in the ground outside the building. The oil is pumped in by a small electrically propelled pump, and is fed in the furnace by a rapidly revolving, atomizer-like machine which feeds the oil in a very fine spray. When the fire is about to be started, the pump and the atomizer are put in motion by means of switches on the electric switchboard. A long stick with a bunch of waste tied on the end of it, is saturated with oil and a match touched to it. This is then thrust into the furnace, and it catches instantly.

The heat which is forced from this furnace is great, for in one hour, the 2800 feet of heating system was completely covered, and all radiators quite hot. There is positively no dust or dirt with this burner. In the Gerrie Ford Garage on Victoria street, Toronto, where a similar system is in operation, the managers claim that their fuel bill has been cut in two.

The only adverse condition found in the oil burner furnace as it was in operation, was the noise. It makes considerable noise, but noise are not unfamiliar to garages and as Mr. Riggs stated he would put up with a great deal of noise in an effort to keep away from the cold.

Workmen re busily engaged at their work of laying the concrete floors in the rear of the western half being now finished, and some three or four cars are in storage. It is estimated that the garage will store some 100 cars. There will also be a repair shop, valeanizing room, lading room room, and, in the spring, a paint shop will be erected as a wing to the main structure. The new garage will be completed in a few weeks under the very best conditions, where there is plenty of light and heat.

The Riggs' garage will certainly be one of the finest in the Province upon completion, and already magazines have asked for pictures of it, so that cuts may be made and published.

WILD CAT SIGHTED

MUNICIPAL NOMINATIONS HELD THROUGHOUT COUNTY TO-DAY

Candidates Proposed for Various Civic Offices in Towns, Villages and Townships in Hastings County—Some Old Horses in the Race With a Few Added Starters Entered—Much Local Interest Manifested—No Dearth of Office Seekers, Although Some Acclamations Recorded Present

To-day is the one particular day in the year when holders of civic offices are expected to appear before the electors of their respective municipalities and give an account of their stewardship. If the municipal honors, now held by them are again coveted, they must explain the proposed planks in their platforms for the coming year. The annual nomination day affords a splendid opportunity for grievances to be aired, official competency and incompetency to be commented upon and plans formulated and discussed for better civic government.

While strenuous municipal contests now seem to be avoided so much as possible, there still appears to be some of the old time fighting spirit remaining in several individuals.

Nominated candidates under statute have until to-morrow night to declare themselves, whether they will stand for election or withdraw from the contest. At Deseronto and Madoc nominations are each held until 7:30 o'clock this evening. Reports covering the results up to the time of going to press are as follows:

Contest for Thurlow Reeveship

Reeve N. Vermilyea, the municipal veteran of Thurlow Township will have opposition for the seat.

The following are the nominations for Reeve, Deputy Reeve and Councillors for the Township:

Nominations were held at the Town Hall, Canniton to-day.

For Reeve

Messrs. N. Vermilyea and Bert. rum Docter.

For Deputy Reeve

J. G. Sills, Bolt, M. Mitchell, Eratus W. Brown.

For Councillors

Messrs. R. J. Cowden, W. B. Tufts, D. A. MacDonald, Arthur Clinzie, Eratus Brown, Gilbert Clapp Harry Gray, Andrew Gray and Robt. M. Mitchell.

No Election in Sidney Township.

The gentlemen named for the reeve of office for Sidney Township have received acclamations following to-day's proceedings at Wallbridge, Township Clerk W. H. Nokes presided at the meeting. W. A. Reid, Reeve, and Dan. H. Agnew, Deputy Reeve, are therefore re-elected for 1923.

Hungerford Township.

Nominations held here today were resulted as follows: The present Reeve was re-elected by acclamation. For Reeve, Jas. H. Clare (acclamation); for Deputy Reeve, J. L. Newton, Arthur H. Tutt, Joseph Taylor. For councillors: Joseph Taylor, Charles Gerow, Wesley Bridgley, Arthur H. Tufts. The polling business seems to be that some of the proposed candidates will withdraw by tomorrow night, thus avoiding election.

At Tweed

No less than seven candidates were proposed for the mayor's chair at the local nominations held here today. Nineteen were nominated as councillors and two for water commissioners (one to be elected). All the old council were renominated and there will be a mass meeting of the electors in the city hall tonight to discuss affairs generally. It is likely that several parties will withdraw from the field.

Reports from Tweed Village and Harmers villages, together with the townships of Esden, Marmora, and Tyendinaga, were not available up to press time, but it would appear that there will be some contests in the County Council personnel, following the elections on January 1st, in the different municipalities throughout the county.

Stirling.

At the nominations held here today the following gentlemen were proposed for office:

Reeve—C. R. McGuire (acclamation).

Councillors—L. Meikle-jhn, T. Montgomery, Sr., Hugh Morton, D. A. Burkitt, A. Hammond and S. Hatton.

School Trustees—B. H. H. Alyea, Fred T. Ward, and R. Bullock, all by acclamation.

MAYOR'S XMAS GIFT TO KIDDIES

Skating Rink Will be Free and Some Hilly Streets Closed to Traffic on Christmas

With his usual foresight and generosity Mayor Hanna is preparing a rousing treat to the children of the city. On Monday afternoon, Christmas Day, he has secured the Simpson skating rink on Station street and the Bailey rink on St. Charles street where children up to 16 years can skate free. During the afternoon and evening of Christmas Day His Worship has directed that Catherine street hill, Church street hill and Bridge street hill be closed for traffic in order that the children may enjoy sliding going down these hills. This is certainly part of the Mayor will no doubt be appreciated by the children.

MANY CANDIDATES NAMED FOR MUNICIPAL HONORS

Three Aspirants for the Mayor's Chair—Thirty-eight Names are Proposed as Aldermanic Candidates, Twelve to be Selected—Contests in Some Wards for School Trustees

Much interest was manifested in the civic nominations which were held today in the city building. Many electors of the city were in attendance at the proceedings which were presided over by Mr. J. W. Holmes, City Clerk, who by virtue of his office is returning officer. Six were nominated for Mayor.

MAYORALTY CANDIDATES

W. C. MIKEL, K.C., proposed by Thos. Thompson, seconded by P. Andrews.

CHAS E. HANNA, proposed by W. A. Woodley, seconded by Ald. Greenleaf.

G. H. FRENCH, proposed by Mayor Hanna, seconded by W. A. Woodley.

W. A. WOODLEY, proposed by Harry A. Thompson, seconded by G. H. French.

GEO. A. BENNETT, proposed by C. N. Suman, seconded by J. C. McCarthy.

GEO. P. OSTROM, proposed by H. F. Ketcheson, seconded by John G. Shaw.

At the conclusion of the nomination proceedings a public meeting was held presided over by Mayor Hanna, and the candidates nominated were called upon to speak.

Mayor Hanna announced that he was not a candidate for the Mayoralty. His Worship stated that for 5 years he had been in the Council and had endeavored to do his duty, as had other members of the Council. He would be content for mayor would be clean.

Ex. Ald. Woolley said he had no intention of being a Mayoralty candidate. His desire was to see a contest for Mayor and Aldermen of the city. Go at the battle in a royal manner. He would be a candidate for Aldermanic honors.

Ald. Ostrom in his opening remarks stated that he had been in the Council for four years and it had been a pleasure for him to serve the citizens of Belleville. The speaker stated he would not have been a candidate had Mayor Hanna decided after 2 years more. He would remain in the field for the Mayoralty. Belleville was a fine city and its finances were in a good position. His record in the Council was before the citizens and if elected he would do his duty in as honorable a manner as it was possible to do so. Ald. Ostrom referred to parties and stated that the street leading to the station known as Station Street must be paved. We do not want to keep an extensive plant to build pavements. If elected he would give his best service to the city.

Ex-Ald. Bennett thanked those who had nominated him for the position of Mayor. He did not intend to be a proclamation for the Mayor's chair. His intention was to remain in the field. If he was elected he would endeavor to improve the city; to make it a better city. We are going deeper and deeper into debt and a halt should be made in expenditures. We have gone too far in the building of pavements and sewers. Only the most necessary public works should be constructed by the city.

Ald. Donahue—The people are asking for sewers and sidewalks and we cannot build them fast enough for the people.

Ex. Ald. Bennett continuing said the workingmen of the city had not been protected as they should have been. If he was elected as Mayor he would see that the fair wage clause was enforced. He was in favor of the ideas formulated by the ratepayers.

W. C. MIKEL, K.C.,

Mr. W. C. Mikel, K.C., stated that personally he had no intention of being a candidate for the Mayoralty but had complied with the request s of many citizens to offer himself as a candidate. As good as our city is, the condition can be improved, and with this object in view he was desirous to help improving the city. The speaker referred to the insurance rate which was too high. We should in the future make an effort to have this insurance reduced. The rates are unfair and unjust. If we get a united action in the matter a reduction in rates will be achieved. The companies are getting 60 cents in Toronto whereas in cities in the United States only 35 cents is charged. This is one of the things he would take hold of if he was elected as Mayor of the city. This was a serious matter and one to be taken hold of by the citizens.

We should link up with other cities who are building their own pavement. This means that the citizens get the money in building them also the pavement, and not let the money go ouside of the city. Kingston has a paving plant that costs $6,500 and that city is building its own pavements. He was in hearty accord of the ratepayers Association resolutions. Mr. Mikel referred to the proposed U. E. Loyalist celebration in this city. The speaker spoke strongly relative to having Belleville made one of the headquarters of the Canadian National Railway. Come to the best city possible and that city is Belleville. This should be held before Sir Henry Thornton and let us get what we can for this city. On the question of immigration we should take a stand and protect ourselves as much as possible to the class of immigrants that come here. There is a propaganda of steamship lines to have a million brought to Canada in the near future and what will they do. Mr. Mikel said ourassessment should be made in the fall and the tax rate struck in the early part of the year. He was also in favor of the fact the municipal elections being changed so as not to interfere with the Tuletide festivities.

BRITISH WOOL GROWERS TO IMPROVE STOCK

London, Dec. 21.—Several hundred head of rams are to be imported into this country from Peru in order to improve the qualities of producers' mutton wool, or merino cross wools, in the British Isles.

The plan is the result of efforts by many wool manufacturers in the North of England to breed sheep here which will produce wools of a grade of fineness that produced in South America. At the present time the finest wool produced here is grading as coarse.

Should the initial efforts be successful, it is probable that all of the pure bred Lincoln Rocks will be gradually killed to make way for the finer breeds, as these command prices four times higher than the present British product.

AUSTRIAN ARMY GIVES TROUBLE

This is Unofficial Army, Very Irregular, and Without the Pale of Treaty.

Vienna, Dec. 1.—Besides its little standing army of about 20,000 men, fixed its status peacefully, Austria has two other armed and organised forces, both irregular and both probably without the pale of the Treaty. In the opinion of many observers here the two last mentioned organisations may lead to trouble. They are the admirably well armed labor battalions, and the growing "heimwehr" or countryside "defence" or ganisations.

The latter are composed largely of the peasants and lower professional classes and ex-officers, and are particularly strong in Styri and the Tyrol. Just how well armed they are, arms, ammunition and equipment is not known. The Allied Military Control Commission was opposed to have it stripped the country of military material, but the fact remains that both these organizations are fully equipped and number many thousands. Recently the police found in one of the "heimwehr" headquarters not only guns and hooded cloaks but hand grenades and poison gases.

Incidents in Styria recently showed the danger of these forces. In the case strikers explored and disarmed gendarmes sent to subdue disturbances, whereupon the governor of the province ordered out the local detachments of the army. The army is preponderantly socialist and sympathetic with the workers, but the soldiers obeyed orders, arrested the troublemakers, and released the policemen. The explanation is found in the fact that the governor was of the same time, assembled 2,000 of his "heimwehr" and put them behind the soldiery to see they did their duty as told to do.

The two forces narrowly avoided a serious clash recently in Judenburg, Styria, and this incident showed even more clearly the latent danger that lies in the coexistence of military. Workmen from some factories entered the house of "heimwehr" personnel at night and seized their arms. They were arrested in turn, and, when a first demand for their release was refused, nearly 5,000 workmen, militarily armed and organized, assembled and marched on the town. Gendarmes were mobilized, reinforced by detachments from the two state universities there, and for two days the two forces faced each other over a little bridge. Then the government ordered the release of the arrested workmen, and further trouble was avoided.

The recent disclosure that the large industrial concerns of Austria were paying to their central body a record far greater than their state tax, for the maintenance of "technical troops," which is merely a disguise for strike-breakers and secret police, has also served to lessen the ill feeling of the workingmen, and this condition is owed by them as a justification for their own organization.

ITALIAN OFFICIAL IS HARD WORKER

Legal Dictator of Italy Works Eighteen Hours Out of the Twenty-Four

Rome, Dec 21.—Benito Mussolini the man who at thirty-eight years of age has become virtually the legal dictator of Italy has a great capacity for work. Since he assumed charge of the Ministries of Foreign Affairs and the Interior Mussolini has arranged over eighteen hours of hard work every day. At his desk promptly at the stroke of eight, he is still busy at midnight attending to the business of the two most important ministries in his government.

During the eighteen months in which he occupied the centre of the organization of the Fascismo movement culminating in the peaceful entrance of a hundred thousand of his followers into Rome October 31st, Mussolini worked an average of twelve hours every day, including Sundays.

Mussolini eats little and drinks less. He sleeps about five or six hours out of the twenty four. His beverage is a light Italian wine with about fifty per cent. of water added.

His favorite recreations are fencing and walking, and he is said to be a clever player of no mean ability.

Italy's man of the hour was an enthusiastic advocate of his country's entrance into the world war on the side of the Allies. He served as a corporal until extended an errand that he had to be sent to the rear as unfit for further active duty. It is said that his body bears he scars of one hundred and twenty wounds, caused by shell splinters and shrapnel.

GULLS REVISME HABIT OF WINTERING IN LONDON

London, Dec. 21.—For the first time in many years the river front of London is filled this winter with thousands of sea gulls which have come up the river from the English Channel. The gulls made a habit of spending the winter along the Thames Embankment before the war, but for the last six years they have neglected the custom and gone elsewhere.

The birds make their homes in the many nooks and caves of the buildings on the river, and under the bridges. There is a continuous supply of food for them, as the city authorities have established a daily feeding time, and in addition hundreds of loungers offer them tempting bits of food.

MACKENZIE ROBERTSON NEW PRESIDENT OF C. OF C.

W. B. Deacon, Director-Elect Tenders Resignation—Mayor Chas. Hanna Thus Succeeds Him

Several important events succeeded one another in the meeting of the Board of Directors of the Chamber of Commerce held yesterday afternoon. In the first place Mr. W. B. Deacon, the Vice-President for last year, created a surprise by tendering his resignation as director elect Mayor Chas. Hanna who had been the next ranking number in the vote in the final election was then appointed to succeed Mr. Deacon. After this had taken place Mr. Mack Robertson, one of the Vice Presidents last year, was elected president for 1923.

At the Directors' meeting there was a full attendance with the exception of Mr. Robertson who was out of the city. Mr. Deacon forwarded a letter to the Chamber of Commerce formerly tendering his resignation and in a subsequent verbal statement to the Board he expressed the deep regret it gave him to sever the very pleasant relations he had with his fellow members the past three years. It was owing to the fact that he was the chairman of the Building Committee of the new Albert College and would have to devote every moment of his spare time to that work he coming year that he reluctantly gave up his duties on the Board of the Chamber of Commerce. Mr. Ketcheson, in accepting the deep regret of Mr. Deacon's colleagues upon losing so influential and enthusiastic an associate as Mr. Deacon had been. There was, however, a limit to the load that any man could carry and Mr. Deacon was pretty well loaded to the limit with duties outside of his own Business. Other members followed along the same line and testified to Mr. Deacon's energy and efficiency in the good work of building up a greater Belleville.

As Mr. Deacon was insistent upon the acceptance of his resignation a formal motion was carried and the position Mayor of Belleville was elected director in his stead. Mr. Hanna was informed by the President and expressed the pleasure that he felt on being elected to so honorable a position. He would do his best to serve in the interests of the Chamber of Commerce as he had done in the past. The election of officers for the took place by ballot and resulted as follows:

President—Mr.Ketain Robertson.
Vice-Pres.—W. W. Ackerman.
Vice-Pres.—C. Mj Reid.
Treasurer—J. C. Moffat.

Very encouraging reports were presented along industrial lines and the financial statement showed that the affairs of the Chamber of Commerce was now more favorable than at any time since it was first organized three years ago. A drive program of work will be prepared for the coming year.

Mr. Mack Robertson, the President elect of the Chamber of Commerce, is a comparative newcomer to Belleville but since his arrival he has clearly established himself as one of the most capable and progressive of our business men. Starting here in a small way in the creamery business less than ten years ago his interests have expanded until now the Belleville Creameries Limited have not only a fine modern plant at Belleville with an output of over a million pounds of butter per annum but the Company has acquired or established creameries at Bancroft, Sharbot Lake, Napanee and Kingston. The combined output of these creameries for the year 1922 will be well up to two million pounds of butter if it does not exceed that figure.

Mr. Robertson, however, has not allowed business to absorb his entire attention. He has taken a very prominent interest not only in Chamber of Commerce affairs but in amateur athletics, the Rotary Club, Y.M.C.A. and a number of other interests that go for community progress. The Chamber of Commerce is indeed fortunate in having Mr. Robertson to preside over its councils the coming year.

WANTED FOR MURDER

Winnipeg, Dec. 21.—The police of Canada have been asked to look for John Stanton, of Winnipeg, who is wanted in connection with the murder here on Monday night of John Penny, who was tied and beaten to death with a hammer. A reward of $100 for Stanton's apprehension has been offered.

Stanton, according to the police, has served terms in Kingston penitentiary and in the Manitoba provincial jail.

QUEENS RUGBY WAS FINANCIAL SUCCESS

Kingston, Dec. 21.—Although nothing official is announced it is understood that when all bills are paid Queen's Rugby activities this year will show a profit of from $12,000 to $13,000. This is considered an excellent showing when one considers that for years it has cost the athletic board of control considerable money in addition to the gate receipts to finance the Rugby teams.

"DAREDEVIL" MOFFATT AT IT AGAIN

Morris ("Steamer") Moffat, Canadian and Ontario professional motorcycle champion, has completed arrangements for his endeavor to break his record of 105 feet, the leap he made over a steamer on a motorcycle, into the river, at Saginaw, Mich., in December last year. The takeoff is being built to-day in the Western Gap, foot of Bathurst Street, and Moffat will make the attempt on Saturday afternoon, December 23rd, at 2.30 p.m.—There will be no charge made to the public to see the stunt.

The Belleville High School boys open their hockey season on Xmas night, Dec. 25th, when they take on the H.N.S. team of Trenton. The locals are bringing the Trenton team here at considerable expense and are relying on the hearty support of the fans. Jack Marks is coaching the High School team and he claims they are a well-balanced aggregation. The H. N. S. team are practically composed of junior O. H. The locals will take the ice for their second practice to-morrow morning at nine o'clock, and the following are asked to be on deck—Arnott, Curry, Strachon, Hurley, Kerr, Buskard, Oakes, Weir, Christy. All other High School boys are requested to refrain from taking part in this practice as Monday night's team will be selected from the above boys. ELLIOTT'S FIVE GIVE REDS SOME BATTLE

The Boys From the "Y" Came Out Top, However, in Tough Contest

Last night the Elliott team and the "Y" Reds played off a postponed league fixture and both teams showed some superior hockey predictives. The Elliott aggregation started out strong, and at the end of the first frame, were leading by a good margin but the Reds came to life with a vengeance and in the second frame they forged ahead with a lead of over 400 points, rolling over the thousand mark to do so. The last frame although won by the Reds was more closely contested.

Chicago Grain Market.

Heavy selling to realize profits led to sharp break in the value of wheat, corn and oats today after some new price records for the season had been touched. The wheat market closed nervous at ⅞c to 2⅛c net lower. May $1.24 to $1.24⅞ and July $1.13⅞ to $1.13⅞. Corn finished ⅞c to 1⅞c down and oats off ⅝c to 1c.

With an advance in Liverpool quotations tending to lift prices here, the way was opened for holders of wheat to unload to advantage, and the opportunity was quickly grasped. It was even asserted in some quarters that the Liverpool market had been purposely held up to furnish such a chance. However this might be, sellers were quickly broadened and gains which had been scored at the opening were much more than wiped out, the market at one time showing a fall of as much as 3½c a bushel.

On heavy selling, the Winnipeg market declined, opening one cent lower over yesterday's close. Considerable grain is loaded in railway cars in transit and is not being absorbed by export buyers as quickly as it might be.

Wheat prices—Dec., $1.16⅞; May, $1.12⅝; July, $1.11⅞.

Bullish cunning figures caused a renewal of buying in the New York cotton market. New York traders are trying to start a selling movement today and are apparently partially successful. Spot sales in the south are improving daily, but reports state that the holders of actual cotton are reluctant to sell on spot. Spot price today, 26.00c.

Sterling exchange, $4.63. New York funds, ½ per cent. premium. Foreign rates generally unsteady. Call funds opened at 4 per cent. in New York.

Irregularity on New York Stock Exchange. Steel shares declined.

Montreal and Toronto exchanges quiet in holiday trading.

PROOF OF BIGGEST CROP GIVEN BY STATISTICIANS

That the western crop had surpassed the bumper year of 1915 has been demonstrated through the careful estimate just issued by the Dominion bureau of statistics which shows that in wheat alone the prairie provinces have produced 566,457,000 bushels, or exactly six and a quarter millions more than in 1915. Other grains bring the total yield to an estimated billion bushels.

ORDINARY DAY'S WORK OF LAKE SHIPPERS' ASSOCIATION

On November 17, actual loadings 1,000,000 bushels. This grain was taken from 15 houses and there was not one vessel waiting turn at any house. The most marvellous bit, but to the working of the Lake Shippers' Clearance Association system, whereby documents are cleared for grain as rates and cheques are cleared for banks.

LEAFS PURCHASE GEORGE MAISEL

After negotiations extending over several weeks, during which time it looked as if his quest was going to be unsuccessful, Manager Dick Carroll of the Toronto club last night announced that he had secured the outfielder he has been after. The man in question is George Maisel of the Cubs, who is a former International Leaguer, having played under Hendley in Montreal.

When it was decided by the Cubs that Maisel was to go to the minors he was given permission to select which club he would go to, and although the Chicago owners wanted him to go to the Coast League as part payment in the Dumovitch deal, he elected to come to Toronto to play under his former manager. Early this week it was announced that he had been sent to Los Angeles, but the announcement was rather premature. Maisel is to be married shortly to the daughter of one of the owners of the Baltimore club, and decided to stay in the East. In fact, he notified the Cubs that he would quit baseball rather than go to the Coast. Maisel's firm stand and an exceptionally good rush offer by the Leafs resulted in the deal with the local club being put through.

He bats and throws right-handed, and as both Wingo and Kelly are left-handed hitters the addition of a batter who hits from the thinblue side, is welcome. Maisel has been with the Cubs for the past two seasons, and before that was with Montreal and one of the Coast League teams, being farmed out by Detroit. Last season he hit for .289 in 38 games, but his batting average is much higher when he is used regularly. Manager Hendley knows Maisel's capabilities and is pleased with the success of his negotiations.

The only dollar the average man has saved is the one that now remains in his pocket unspent.

There is little or no unemployment in Germany, and France, when the currencies are depreciated, budgets do not balance, and national debts grow. This paradox cannot long continue.

Papers like the Toronto Globe and Toronto Star declare vociferously that President Thornton must have a free hand and in the same breath attempt to dictate to him as to the location of the National Railway headquarters. Toronto needs a school of logic.

Australia's national debt at the end of June totalled $1,210,000,600, and of this $2,080,000,000 was debt of the Commonwealth. Australia has only five millions of people, lacks our manufacturing assets, and is minus a lot of our great natural resources. Compared, speaking, we have an easy task to set our house in order.

HERE AND THERE

NEW METHODS IN KNIFE MAKING.

A short time ago the British Cutlery Research Association held an exhibition of modern methods as applied to the cutlery trade. The exhibits included the latest machinery used in Great Britain in the manufacture of pocket knives, table knives, razors and scissors. One of the novelties shown at this exhibition was a machine which electrically welds table knife blades to steel handles. The handles are hollow and are produced and ground by machinery and are so constructed as to combine balance and lightness with durability and good appearance, above all a low price. Still more interesting was the demonstration of the latest discovery in electro-plating. It is the method by which silver, copper, nickel, iron or steel can be plated with chromium. A process has been evolved by which this metal can be used commercially for all ordinary kinds of goods, such as knife blades and handles, spoons, forks, and other tableware. Chromium does not rust or stain and it also possesses the property of hardness. It may also be added that the production of stainless steel, which is a Sheffield product, is proceeding vigorously in response to a demand from all parts of the world.

POWER FROM THE ATOM.

Any lear on our part that the earth's coal will be exhausted quite without reason, in the opinion of Sir Oliver Lodge. Not because the supply is inexhaustible, but because the time is coming when the use of coal for power will not be needed. This eminent scientist whose studies of energy have astounded his colleagues, now says some atomic energy is certain to be discovered which will provide a source of power sufficient to entirely supersede coal. In describing the possibilities, Sir Oliver explains:

"A radium atom firing off a particle which turns out to be a quadruple combined atom of helium is like a two-ton gun firing a 100-pound shot. Before it has exhausted its ammunition it fires off five such projectiles and then settles down into a quieter existence as lead or something chemically-indistinguishable from that substance.

"It would seem that all substances of very high atomic weight are liable to behave in this way. It is only a question of degree, and it is not by any means their whole energy that they thus exhibit; it is the energy they expend and not rid of—their waste energy—that we perceive. When their active transformations have ceased and left them in a stable state like lead, gold, silver, iron, copper or any other common element, we are not to suppose because they are quiescent, therefore they have no store of internal energy. Anyone looking at coddle might think it harmless and all is still a suitable attitude in applied. I think we are on the brink of a discovery. It may take a century, but instead of burning 1,000 tons of coal, I believe our descendants will take the same amount of energy out of an ounce or two of matter."—Selected.

SHEPHERD'S LEA.

Now Shepherd's lea la white with snow,
And beech and oak are bare,
And, search you high or search you low,
No greening thing is there.
The drift's are deep from Mary's well
To Pincombe, all the way,
And none would think in Linder's dell
There ever blossomed May.
But there were blithe days ago,
My boyhood friend and I,
And thought no fairer spot could be
Beneath our homeland sky.

Now frozen fast is Burnham brook,
Its ripples all are sere;—
Forlorn the ancient willows look
From Trine's to Basset's weir;
But there's a joyous, happy sound
Upon the cringing air
The miller's dam is large and round,
And there are skaters there.
Ay, youth's still on Burnham brook,
That runs through Shepherd's lea,
Though dear, remembered Burnham now
Flows not my friend nor me.

PRESS OPINIONS

MATRIMONIAL MATHEMATICS

(Woodstock Sentinel-Review)

A Brooklyn man is seeking divorce from his wife on the ground that she can neither add, subtract nor multiply, and is therefore unfit to attend to the disbursing of funds for the purchase of household supplies. The wife's reply is that she has all the knowledge of arithmetic necessary for the handling of all the money available for household purposes, and that the real reason why her husband wants a divorce is that he is in love with another woman. Evidently it may be a serious matter when arithmetic and matrimony become involved in matrimony one and one are supposed to make one; there must be something wrong else-where when they make two.

CANADA AT WASHINGTON

(Dallas (Texas) Journal.)

Canada, according to a story out of Washington, is bent upon having direct diplomatic representation at Washington.

The case of Canada with respect to relations with the United States differs from that of any other British Dominion. Canada is so near a neighbor, so closely have her interests and our become intimate. And Canada has grown independent, great, important. By right of her status and of her many vital interests she is entitled to direct diplomatic representation, that could better serve those interests, or even if her people prefer it.

THE MODERATION LEAGUE

(Hamilton Herald)

A branch of the Moderation League of Ontario has been organized in Hamilton. The character and aims of this organization are indicated by its name. Its main purpose is to combat all extreme and arbitrary measures which unduly restrict personal liberty.

More particularly does the league oppose the Ontario Temperance act, and does so for the reason that the act is not, rightly speaking, temperance legislation at all, but coercive legislation. The league believes in temperance, not in extreme prohibition. It does not desire a return to the old license system, but would favor a system similar to those in force in Quebec—a system of strict government control and direction of the liquor traffic.

MUSIC and DRAMA

HOOT GIBSON'S SUNNY PERSONALITY EVIDENT IN NEW PICTURE

A perfectly good cowpuncher gone wrong and become a lady's man is the basis for all the trouble in "The Lone Hand", the Universal attraction starring, Edward "Hoot" Gibson, which opened at the Regent Theatre yesterday.

Ralph Cummins wrote the story especially for the star, and if it does no more it brings out all the hard hitting, two fisted fighting spirit in Gibson.

The leading woman is Marjorie Daw who plays appealingly opposite her. Others in the supporting cast are William Welsh, Helen Holmes, Jack Pratt, Jim Corey, Hayden Stevenson and Albert Kertman.

The story concerns a young cowpuncher, born and bred on the ranch and never ten miles away from it. He decides that he needs a rest and chooses an exclusive summer resort for his vacation. Before his vacation is a day old, however, he comes upon a girl in distress and upon investigating, finds that she is all alone and badly in need of protection from certain men. The young cattleman thinks to do the right thing but the girl is suspicious of him and when her father returns he, too, orders the newcomer o fthe place.

But in spite of themselves, the vacationing cowboy helps them, wins the girl and turns his first vacation into a honeymoon.

"You and Me" an amusing Juvenile Century comedy, Pathe News an excellent Gaiety Weekly, and a Kinogram of scenes in beautiful Lake Louise were exhibited during the evening.

NORMA TALMADGE SURPRISES IN DISTINCTIVE ROLE IN "THE WONDERFUL THING"

Norma Talmadge has done many fine things in the line of screen entertainment, but we doubt if anything ever done before will be quite as generally liked as "The Wonderful Thing", her latest production, which opened an engagement of three days at Griffin's Theatre, last evening. Miss Talmadge has a role which gives her opportunity for exhibiting a decided talent for comedy, an accomplishment which is generally supposed to have gone entirely to her sister Constance, at least as far as the Talmadge family is concerned. In addition, the story does not deprive the audience at the theatre of seeing Miss Talmadge do some of the emotional acting which has made her so popular.

The abilities of Norma as a comedienne were the first surprise of the evening. The second surprise came in finding that Mrs. Lydig Hoyt was in the cast. It must be admitted that the announcement that this New York society woman had gone in for pictures and would have a part in a Norma Talmadge production had been noised abroad, but it was expected that she would appear in but a very minor part. The second surprise, therefore, was the discovery that the young woman who so very capably played the rather difficult role of Catherine Mannerby Truesdale was in reality the young woman who had forsaken the gay whirl of the upper strata of society to appear before the camera.

"The Wonderful Thing" is really good entertainment. The wonderful thing about it is the wonderful way in which excellent comedy has been mixed in with drama and thrills. The entire cast is fine, and naturally Harrison Ford carries away the honors that go to the male characters. Howard Truesdale, however, is admirable as the self-made American Hog King, and others in the cast who give good accounts of themselves are Robert Agnew, Ethel Fleming, Mable Bert, Fanny Burke, Walter McEwan and Charles Arling.

The Country Chicken", a funny Punch comedy, Roy Pictograph with its interesting scientific and novelty offerings, and Art Accord in the Western chapter-play "Buffalo Bill" were also exhibited.

STRANGE MONSTER LEFT BY TIDE

Lima, Peru, Dec.,21—The tidal waves which recently devasted parts of the coast of Chile cast upon the beach at the same time a strange denizen of the deep whose like has not been seen in these waters in many years. It would appear to be a cross between a whale and a turtle.

Fishermen at Lurin, 25 miles from Lima reported a huge cetacean floundering in the shallow waters of the bay. Then they sent out word it was an unknown monster of the sea, and that they had killed it.

The director of the Natural History Museum of the University of San Marcos and the official taxidermist made trip to Lurin for the purpose of studying and classifying the strange visitor. They found an animal with the body of a whale, but with a head and extremities resembling those of a turtle. After examining they came to the conclusion that it belonged to the family of "Balaenidae" cetaceans, inhabiting the South Pacific waters. It is supposed that it was carried along by the Humboldt current and thrown up on the beach by the tremendous surfs following the tidal waves of the Chilean earthquake.

The specimen will be brought back to Lima for mounting and will be preserved in the University Museum.

GETTING ON TO CHRISTMAS

It's getting on to Christmas and a little boy I know,
Jumps out of bed o'mornings and to school seems glad to go,
And a pair of little stockings which his mother grieves about
Now have ceased their awful habit of being always double out.

It's getting on to Christmas and a little fellow stands
At the basin in the bathroom scrubbing dirty little hands,
And a certain little necktie which was once a sight to see,
Now looks as neat and proper as a necktie ought to be.

It's getting on to Christmas and a shock of tousled hair,
Now wears the shine and lustre of the most devoted care,
And although the part betokens that at times the task was rushed,
No one could doubt the statement that his hair was combed and brushed.

No longer little garments now are flung upon the floor,
At night his cap and jacket always hang upon the door,
There's a saintly air about him, things are going on all right,
It's getting on to Christmas and the rascal's being good.

RESEARCH WORKERS MAKE DISCOVERY

New York, Dec. 20.—Fragmentary evidence of unclassified prehistoric palaeta and reptiles has been found by Albert Thompson, palcontologist, in the ranchlands of Nebraska," where in former years research workers have discovered the remains of mastodons, rhinoceroses, giant camels, alligators, dwarf horses and other queer beasts.

The bones of the strange animals were uncovered on a ranch in Sioux County while Mr. Thompson, who is a member of the palcontologist research staff of the American Museum of Natural History, was searching for skeletons of three-toed dwarf horses.

Mr. Thompson began the study of palcontology while employed as a cowboy in the Dakota Bad Lands more than thirty years ago. He was especially interested in the remains of the three-toed horse and other types of beasts of the same family.

In the interest of this work he went to Nebraska early last summer. Aided by several students he began digging in a channel bed that appeared to be rich in bones of all sorts. He found bits of the dwarf horse of the allotter and of other animals, and then he came upon pieces of skulls the character of which was new to him.

Had weather finally set in and Mr. Thompson was compelled to abandon his work. He had, however, collected hundreds of bones and skulls of great research value. He plans to return to Sioux County next year and resume work in the channel bed.

"Western Nebraska undoubtedly is the richest field in America for this sort of work", said Mr. Thompson recently and we hope to make startling discoveries in the next two or three years. I shall return next summer and make an effort to find complete skeletons of the strange type of rodents and reptiles of which we have fragments."

It's no secret—anyone can make a half pint of the finest cough medicine in the world for a trifling sum.

Get from any druggist one ounce of Parmint (double strength)—to this add a little granulated sugar and enough water to make one half pint—that's all there is to it.

But now you've got a real medicine—mind you—the first spoonful you take acts directly on the membrane of the throat and nose, the tickling ceases almost instantly—the inflammation begins to disappear—up comes the stubborn mucus and often in 24 hours every trace of the cough that frightened you is gone.

Its really remarkable how this home made remedy acts on the mucus membrane and that is one reason it is so helpful to thousands of Catarrh sufferers.

THE CHRISTMAS CHILD

In Bethlehem, long, long ago,
A little Babe was born;
The wise men finally o'er Him beat,
On that first Christmas morn.

A star was seen 'way in the East,
The angels went and came;
An ox and baby hay came to earth,
Lord Jesus is His name.

The Lord has sent Him here on earth,
The people's souls to save;
Yet people nailed Him to the cross,
And laid Him in the grave.

He 'rose from out the tomb,
The Comforter is now sent;
And now in heaven with Father and Son,
The angels' voices blend.

Alexandria, Egypt, Dec. 21.—Germany is increasing her exports to Egypt, cotton being the principal article returned to the Egyptian market.

Orders which previously went to Japan are now secured by German firms. She exercises an almost unchallenged monopoly in synthetic dyestuffs and pianos, glass, chinaware, cutlery, leather goods, small manufactures, cotton hosiery, small mercery and hardware. All these articles have been dumped into the Egyptian market on a cash basis at prices that have defied competition. Statistics on foreign trade for the first seven months of 1922 show that Germany has advanced from sixth to fourth position, and that the United States stands fifth. The loss of considerable American trade this year is due to the heavy falling off in the importation of cereals.

Last year nearly $15,000,000 worth of wheat and wheat flour alone were brought in from the north to the Atlantic, whereas this year, up to the end of July, the amount was less than $1,000,000 for the same period. Rumania's revival of business has contributed largely to this loss by the United States. Kerosene from America also dropped to a very low figure, the Rumanian product taking its place.

QUESTIONS FOR THE WOMEN

Girls Can You Answer These?

Los Angeles, Calif., Dec. 19—Girls, what was Mrs. Mallory famed for? What is the adolescent age? Who was Prince Albert?

The college women of the country now are invited to step to the front and have their mentality determined by replying to a serious of questions propounded by a California theater.

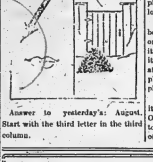

Professor Ralph L. Power, of the faculty of the University of Southern California, is the questioner. He has prepared a series of 35 interrogations which he thinks the college women of the United States, if their academic training is not faulty, should find little difficulty in answering.

Here are Professor Power's questions:

1. What is the adolescent stage?

   About The Bible.
3. What was the first woman's college in the United States?
4. Name five present-day captains of industry.

LINKED LIVES

By

D. Kinmount Roy

She remembered she had been warned against this young man, but could not at once recall why she had been warned against him. She had been so fortunate in always having trusty friends around her, that any personal care or anxiety had never touched her life, so far, to any extent. She recalled the fact that MacAlpin had taken a very stern view of his intrusion on the Island, and Alan Graham had also regarded it as a very grave offence, but London was so different, and Oona found the presence of a stranger no longer something to be received with a mixture of wonder and fear; and then he had certainly very much improved, and was both courteous and fascinating.

Oona had excellent reasons for her altered opinion of Reginald Hardcastle. As he appeared at the moment, he was a fine enough specimen of British manhood, alert, keen and resolute, with plenty of confidence in himself, and no quarrel of any sort with his lot in life. What he desired enough to consider worth having had always been his without much effort; so easy had his conquests been that they had grown quite uninteresting. Just what had moved him to take a special interest in the Lady of the Island, he could not tell. To analyze his motives or sensations, or seek a reason within his own conscious new for doing this or that, had never occurred to him. It certainly saved much trouble, and made the wheels of life run with most agreeable smoothness. He had been favoured by fortune in a singular manner tonight, he told himself and Oona with perfect sincerity, and had much to say to her which was not unpleasant for a lady to listen to. Yes! she was beautiful—he had not been mistaken: beautiful in the rustic attitude of the little island, and still more impressively beautiful amidst the blaze of light and splendour of a London drawing-room. Whatever the mystery of her life might be, or whatever her rank or fortune, by all the laws of the game she was his by right of discovery from the first, and nothing would move him from that.

The situation was becoming a trifle embarrassing, when Maitland and Masterman found them. Masterman came to claim her as a partner in the next set of the Lancers, which was even then forming in the ballroom. Hardcastle had no choice but to give way; not, however, before he had secured the next dance.

It left Alone with Maitland, as the rooms were, for both men paused out upon the terrace. The night air was cool and refreshing. The music from the ballroom and the distant sound of voices blended with the far-off hum of the great city; and Hardcastle could not but think of the island where he had seen her and the gay world—his world—where he had just as unexpectedly found her. He was excited and restless, he smoked his cigar in eager whiffs as though it were a business that required despatch and vigour, moving up and down meanwhile. Maitland sat perfectly still and silent, looking at the young man and wondering how it all would end. Hardcastle's patience became exhausted and he could wait no longer, and, throwing away his cigar, he plunged into the subject, nearest, and least without a moment's hesitation.

"It has given me the utmost pleasure to renew acquaintance with Miss Maitland," he said heartily; "I was not aware she was your niece."

"I was not aware of it myself," remarked Maitland, a trifle drily.

"Not aware of it!" Hardcastle stammered, standing before his companion; "in Heaven's name, then, who is she?" he gasped.

"Well," said Maitland, rising and speaking slowly, "would you really like to know?"

"I would, on my soul and honour; in fact, I must know before I am an hour older."

"Are you quite sure?" Maitland asked. "Yes, I am quite sure. Have I not said so?"

Then Maitland said in clear, slow, merciless tones, which seemed to cut into the young man's soul: "She is a near relation of your own.'

"Of mine? Hardcastle asked in wonder, as he grew hot and cold with a strange intimation of coming ill; 'a relation of mine?'

"Yes, of course. Have you any objection to her being related to you?"

"Good Heavens, no!' he protested, at the first heat of curious wonder. 'I would give my life to have her—'

'As your sister,' Maitland said; 'she is your father's daughter. Your wish is already gratified.'

"You lie, by Heaven!" the young man hissed, with sudden fury; 'you lie! Do you hear? I say you lie! What juggling is this?"

Maitland stood still, looking with ominous calm at the infuriated man before him.

'I heard,' he said quietly, and he shook himself as though the words had hurt him, not by Weight of impact but by foulness of touch. 'Compose yourself, Mr. Hardcastle,' he said, with freezing politeness; 'you are not the first man who does not know his own origin beyond a doubt, but that need not spoil your career in these glittering times, for hinder your advancement. The lady is your father's daughter in fact and in law, and you are not his legitimate son nor heir. Do you understand the situation now?'

"Oh! by——,' and he sprang at Maitland with the unreasoning fury of a tiger, then swayed like a man smitten by some unseen force, and would have fallen had not MacAlpin, who had seen and heard it all, caught him in his strong grip.

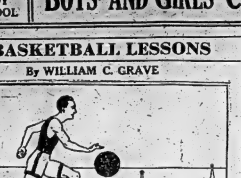

The sight of MacAlpin brought back everything that had occurred on that first day, and the young man fought with murderous passion for mastery, for revenge: wild, devilish fancies and desires surged through his brain, and incoherent oaths were hissed through his clenched teeth.

BASKETBALL LESSONS

By WILLIAM C. GRAVE

W.N.U.

No. 4. Dribbling

(This is the fourth of twelve lessons on Basketball by William C. Grave of the University of Pennsylvania, Intercollegiate high scorer for 1921. Mr. Grave was captain of his team in 1921, and was named as All-Collegiate center in 1918, 1920, and 19-21. He holds the record of having played ninety basketball games and losing only five.)

Dribbling is advancing the ball by bouncing. It can be a great success or a great failure according to how it is used. It used at the right time it helps the team along. If used at the wrong time it breaks up team play to such an extent that good playing is impossible.

There are only two occasions when it is all right for a man to dribble. One occurs when there is no one open to whom the ball might be passed; the other, when there is no one between you and the basket. Any attempt to dribble is sure to result in failure for the player and for the team.

Dribble To Centre.

If, then, you are in your backcourt, which is that portion of the floor nearest your opponent's goal, it is perfect all right to advance the ball by dribbling, if all your team mates are guarded. Dribble up to the centre of the court and watch for chance to some one else. If no such chance arises and there is no one in front of you, dribble through. However, above all, don't try to dribble through the opposing team. It can't be done with the one-hand dribble that the college rules demand. All an opponent must do is wait until you are going by and then bat the ball out of your control.

The other time when a dribble can be used to good advantage is when there is no one between you and the basket. Then the only thing to do is to dribble as fast as you can until you get under the basket, and then take the one-hand shot described in Lesson 3.

Use Skill in Dribbling.

There is another occasion when a

JOHNNIE MOUSE MISSES CHRISTMAS.

Little Johnnie Mouse had never seen a Christmas. He had been born in January, so he was now looking forward to his first Christmas. He hardly knew what it would be like. But Johnnie had his ideas on the subject. When the old cat sat outside the hole-in-the-wall and Johnnie had to stay in. Oh! Mother Mouse often entertained him with stories of Christmas.

At Christmas-time all the cats were so busy eating turkey bones that they had no time to scare little mice. Then there were always the best things imaginable to eat, and they were left right out in plain sight for the little mice. But best of all there were the good smells. Johnnie loved nice smells. There were nice sweet smells, and greasy smells, and cheesy smells, and dribble may be used to good advantage, but which requires a great deal of skill. That is using the dribble to make the other fellow foul you. If you are a good enough dribbler you can keep the ball in your possession until the other fellow fouls you in his effort to break up your play.

A good way to practice dribbling is to place about five Indian clubs in a line about eight feet apart. Then start from one end and dribble as fast as you can in and out around the clubs. Dribble to the end of the line, turn and come back without losing control of the ball. Keep up this practice until you can make the whole trip in good speed without stopping.

Use the dribble intelligently and you will have a good weapon of at any, but above all don't try to appear clever by dribbling all over the floor when you could help the team by passing. Passing is faster and stimulates teamwork. Dribbling, if used stupidly, will break up teamwork and ruin a team.

chocolate smells. That was how you first knew it was Christmas, Mother Mouse said, by the lovely Christmas smells.

One morning Johnnie Mouse woke up and sniffed the air as he always did. Somehow everything was different this morning, and it was all due to a wonderful cheesy smell in the air. Johnnie loved cheese above everything else.

"It's Christmas," he cried in excitement, "I smell it. It's Christmas."

Mother Mouse stuck a cautious eye there. "No," she said, "when Christmas comes the cat will go."

Johnnie was disappointed, but he did not give up hope. All day long he sniffed the air. It was coming, anyway. He could smell it.

Towards evening when he looked out the cat was gone. Then Johnnie was just sure that Christmas had come at last. Without even waiting to ask his mother he tore out the hole-in-the-wall and was off after the good smells. He scampered along the wall, sniffing the air. The nice cheesy smell got stiffer and better. Suddenly right in front of him Johnnie discovered a little round box, and inside enticingly dangled a number of pieces of cheese. Then Johnnie had never imagined anything half so delicious.

With a little spurt of delight, Johnnie thrust his head in one of the holes after the largest piece of cheese. "Bang!" Johnnie never knew what hit him when the trap sprang shut.

But when Little Johnnie never returned home, Mother Mouse's Christmas was entirely spoiled. So was Johnnie's for that matter.

HE LOVES THE BIRDS

JACK MINER IS A UNIQUE CANADIAN PERSONALITY.

Story of the Man Whose Sanctuary For His Winged Friends Has Become Famous In Every Part of the Continent—Lives in Bungalow Near Kingsville.

It's a difficult task to define in words or unusual personality as Jack Miner. To realize the man who made the wild goose tame you must hear him speak. Then, by turns, he makes you laugh with his droll humor and impresses you with his tremendous sincerity. He grips your attention without seeming to try. He is too keenly interested in his message to feel concerned, either about his audience or about himself.

The story of Jack Miner has been told and retold till it is familiar to most Canadians. But it will bear retelling.

Jack Miner of to-day is a big, upstanding man of 56—an out-of-doors man, essentially, with the out-of-doors habits of hard working and clear thinking. As a boy he came to Essex County, Ont. The "smart of us ten children," as he aptly described the Miner family, got little education, and went to work early. A dollar bill looked like a horse blanket" in those days; so Jack and a favorite brother hunted for the market. They became wizards of the gun.

Meanwhile, Jack grew up, raised a family, and sent them in due course to the backwoods Sunday school. They induced their father to attend. He could neither read nor write. His little folks taught him. He in turn taught Sunday school, quit shooting for the market—and then came those marvelous activities that have made Jack Miner known throughout this continent.

The wild geese and wild ducks had known him as an enemy. Now came the thought: "Surely they would know a friend if they had one!" So Jack Miner set himself to make friends with the wild things.

"Birds are wild because they have to be, and men are wild because they want to be," is a characteristic bit of Miner philosophy.

Jack's campaign of pacification was infinitely patient. First, a bird or two ventured upon his ponds. He nibbled his tempting cornobs. Next season there came a large company. So bird interest grew from year to year. Now in March and April every year the wild geese congregate by hundreds and thousands. The good word has gone forth to the far distances of North Carolina, Saskatchewan and Hudson Bay that this one spot in America is dedicated to the wild goose. And the geese understand.

It took four years to induce the birds to call. Eight birds constituted the first visitors. Last year Jack Miner's feathered friends required 3,400 bushels of corn for their mess at this half-way house between North Carolina and Hudson Bay.

The same birds come back. Jack Miner has proved that. Among the thousands of birds that gather every spring at the famous goose pond near Kingsville are many wearing aluminum "anklets," with which Jack has decorated them in previous years. Many such anklets have been returned to Jack Miner from points as far apart as the Gulf of Mexico and Jaffa's Bay. As for the ducks, the anklets returned from 32 different states and provinces, the farthest south from Guyana, Louisiana, and the span of territory east and west stretches from Long Island, N. Y., to Englefield, Sask. Four million square miles of territory—by year after year, the birds come back to this same spot.

They know.

It's an interesting sight to watch Jack Miner strolling through a flock of six hundred or more wild geese, to the shyest bird alive. He talks to them in their own language—he has mastered several words in the geese vocabulary—and bosses them about as though they were a flock of barnyard ducks. The birds seem to know that they are safe from the hunter and that, backing up Jack Miner's efforts, the Dominion Government has made this spot a sanctuary for them.

There is another story told by a man who motored down to Kingsville once with Jack Miner. A wild duck against the sky hovered a flock of wild geese. "Stop," commanded Miner, suddenly. "That's one of my birds." He gave a peculiar call; and the distant bird came volplaning down in answer.

That is how intimately Jack Miner knows the birds, and how intimately the birds know Jack Mir.r.

Years before Jack Miner ever thought of putting his story on paper he was widely known as a lecturer. He has told his story of the birds before all sorts of audiences except uninterested or indifferent ones. No audience, hearing Jack Miner, can long remain in that state of mind.

"Farmer and Fruit Tree Merchant," is the modest fashion in which Jack Miner's letter-heads style him. There was a time when the fate of the fruit trees hung in the balance, and the future looked black for the drab life merchant. That, however, is a story apart from Jack and his birds, and must be left for another time.

Miner believes in getting near to nature. Nature, as typified by primeval forest, was long ago swept away from the Kingsville country side. But at intervals betwixt his cities of the wild geese, the wild duck, the barn swallow, and the rest of them, he has planted thousands of trees. Years ago he planted a grove of maples. To-day they surround a Robinson Crusoe bungalow where, isolated as on a deserted isle, he can carry on his work undisturbed.

ABOUT SOILING CROPS

An Easy Way to Supplement Dry Midsummer Pastures.

Alfalfa and Clover, Peas, Oats and Corn Cut Green Make Succulent, Nourishing Food — Weed Seeds Spread by Manure — What to Plant In a Late Garden.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

When the pastures dry up in June, July, August or September, the shrinkage is noted in the milk can and on the tribe of all the live stock. No grass, no milk, no beef, or at least enough to be really profitable, is a condition both undesirable and too frequent in the experience of many farmers.

Live stock to be profitable must be fed liberally. Maintenance rations or dry pastures are nothing more—never make beef or milk, and never can be profitable.

Feeding Soiling Crops Prevents Loss.

The farmer who provides green or succulent food to carry his live stock at full capacity during any period of pasture shortages is not only making his operations profitable, but he is preventing losses that liberal feeding alone can prevent.

The farmer who takes time by the forelock and provides a summer silo does not worry about drought, knowing full well that his stock feed reserve is standing ready. The man without the summer silo must at the present best thing, provide ample green crops that are palatable and convenient to do what the pastures fail to do. A few pounds of green peas and oats, green clover, green alfalfa or green corn in addition to the dry pasture pickings make for contentment, a full milk pail and thrifty young stock.

How to Carry Over Ten Cows.

If a farmer has ten cows he should figure on the crop from one half acre providing ample green feed to carry them ten days. Peas and oats mixed one and a half bushels of each, sown as early as possible in the spring, and followed by successive seeding ten days later, will provide for twenty days of an early season.

An area of alfalfa near the feedyard is especially useful during July and August to keep the stock going until the early corn is ready. Sweet clover is more useful as a pasture plant than as a soiling plant that may be cut and taken to the feed rack.

Clovers, peas, oats and corn will furnish all the succulent foods that are necessary providing of course that the stockman undertakes their production in due time each spring. Throw a few additional acres for green feed this spring, and if drought occurs you will be fortified against loss.—L. Stevenson, Secretary, Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.

Weed Seed Spread by Manure.

It is quite generally known that weed seeds pass through the digestive tracts of animals and still remain viable. The manure which contains these seeds, and the result is that a field may become infested with undesirable plants, some of a very noxious character. In spite of this fact, precautions are not generally observed in the feeding of screenings which contain seeds of noxious weeds.

As a result of experiments at the Minnesota Agricultural Experiment Station, it was found that in feeding certain seeds no loss in germination may even be increased after having passed through the digestive tract. Curled dock, a very common farm weed, germinated only four per cent. in its natural condition. A quantity of this seed was fed to a cow, and 100 such seeds were placed in a germinator. Ninety-eight of the cow ones hundred grew. The same is true to some extent of lambs' quarters, often known as pigweed. The seed of this weed germinated 43 per cent before feeding; 84 per cent after feeding. The germination of quack grass seemingly was not much affected, as a germination of 85 per cent. was secured before feeding, and 82 per cent. after feeding. The viability of Canada thistle seed was decreased to some extent, but enough seed remained to infest a field.

In view of the foregoing figures, the farmer should be very careful in the use of screenings. They should either be burned or the very finest possible condition, so as to crush all weed seeds, or else they should be fed to such animals as sheep, which grind up and thoroughly destroy the ordinary weed seeds.

What to Plant In Late Garden.

Carrots, beets and celery for winter use may be planted in the latter part of June.

Golden bantam corn to keep up the supply for late summer.

Early string beans and peas to provide substitutes for meat.

Fresh and crisp vegetables as the means of saving canned products for winter use.

Seed sown in mild summer should be planted in freshly stirred soil and somewhat deeper than in spring, and the soil over the seed should be "firmed" more carefully than usual.

The Home Vegetable Garden.

The home vegetable garden should be a family interest and all members of the family who are able to do so should take part in its cultivation. There is no better form of healthful exercise than moderate working in the home garden, and few times of recreational work will give greater returns for the time

Mine Shafts.

In the cementation process of sinking mine shafts through waterbearing grounds, holes are first drilled in a circle around the proposed location of the shaft. Cement and water are injected into the holes with a force pump. The cement spreads through the loose ground, and on setting forms a water-tight wall. Inside of which the shaft can be sunk without difficulty.

DOWAGER EMPRESS MAY LIVE IN ENGLAND

Copenhagen, Dec. 21.—The Dowager Empress of Russia, Maria Feodorovna, who is now in England on a visit to her sister, Queen Alexandra, may prolong her stay well beyond the limits originally set for it. First it was said the widowed queen, who was a Danish princess before she married Emperor Alexander III., would return to Denmark in five or six weeks; now it is rumored in court circles that the visit may be indefinite.

Maria Feodorovna crossed the Channel safely, indeed. She was accompanied by the Russian princes Dolgoruki and Viasemsky, Countess Mengden, and the well known Cossack Jachchouk, who used to carry the little lame son of Emperor Nicholas in his arms in the days before the executions at Ekaterinburg over three years ago. This little boy was Maria Feodorovna's grandson.

It is understood locally that the Empress will be followed to England shortly by her daughter, the Grand Duchess Olga and her husband Colonel Koulikovsky, and their children.

AN OBLIGING BELL-PULLER

An inquisitive man saw a sign: "Please ring the bell for the care-taker."

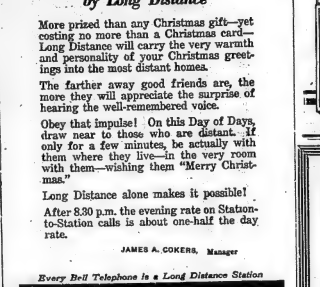

He walked up and gave the bell such a pull that it nearly came out by the roots.

In a few moments an angry man appeared at the door. "Are you the care-taker?" asked the bell-puller.

"Yes. What do you want?"

"I saw that notice, so I rang the bell, because I want to know why you can't ring it yourself."

Dairy Products Must Be Kept Cool—A Variety of Plans for Handling Ice—Good Drainage in the Ice House Necessary.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

It is a very regrettable fact in Ontario that the winter weather is not cold enough to make plenty of ice on our lakes, rivers, mill streams, and ponds. We can, therefore, feel pretty sure of a good crop of ice this winter.

Ice is the only other means of cooling on farms, except in the case of very large dairies where the use of a mechanical system may be warranted. The one chief obstacle to proper cooling of milk and cream is ice that many farmers meet is the lack of a convenient supply in their farmhouse kitchens. Ice is also of no an insurmountable difficulty, however, as there is always the possibility of ice being shipped in during the winter and stored for use in the summer.

Dairy Products Must Be Kept Cool.

If the quality of our dairy products is ever to become supreme in the world it will be necessary for the producers of milk to get the nature's best cow. Then they must do all possible after it is abstracted from the cows. This will mean more and better handling of both than most farmers have to-day. Then would ice be recognized by all dairy farmers as they would have to secure it either from nearby bodies of water, if pure, or through some suitable organization keeping it in as reputable a form as before. The superior article selling at better prices would likely pay the producers to ship in ice if it were necessary. Many farmers now have a household refrigerator or small cold storage plant for keeping the daily food for the table pure, sweet, and fresh, and never fail to store ice for this purpose alone whether used or for other purposes or not. They find by experience that this practice is worth while. If much milk is produced on the farm, so much greater the need for storing some ice.

The Problem Deserves Consideration.

The problem of storage should be considered carefully and plans decided upon well in advance of the harvesting of the ice, as it may be necessary to make repairs to the present storage house, or a new one may be needed. Construction work on the farm is more easily and cheaply done in good weather, so it is desirable to get the ice storage ready for the next crop before the late winter weather begins, or just as soon as the fall work will permit. It will be necessary to do some of the work right away, e.g., concrete work, and leave the rest until later, in all probability until the freeze-up drives men to the barns or the land.

Plans of Storage Vary.

The kind of storage for the ice will vary with the conditions on the farm, and the ideals and tastes of the farmer himself. One thing is certainly true, namely, that the storage need not be elaborate in construction and costly in order to be efficient. Many farmers have used for years such inexpensive and simple storages as a log hut made of solid boards and planks and located in some well-drained place, such as under an open shed, in row of barn, or in edge of woodland, a simple shed will lean-to on the shady side of a building, an old abandoned silo, or any other suitable structure not affected from the sun's direct rays. The form and style of the storage for the ice does not matter materially provided the following essential conditions are faithfully fulfilled. These conditions apply to any kind of ice storage house, and require special emphasis, as some of them are often frequently overlooked. Note carefully that they are: Protection from sun's rays, plenty of some material a poor conductor of heat about the ice on all sides, top and bottom, good circulation of air over the ice bin, i.e., between the top of the ice and the roof that may be above it. In other words ventilators must not be closed attic or loft-condition in hot weather because stagnant air under a closed roof becomes very hot, and so heat will naturally pass down through the covering over the ice and melt it very fast.

Good Drainage a Necessity.

Another condition is good drainage, either natural or artificial, under the ice pit, as water backing up or failing to get away rapidly from the ice melts it quickly. Another, air should be kept away from the ice at the bottom. Still another, cakes of ice should be packed in the house at a cold frosty day and no sawdust should be put between them, but rammed into the outsides next the walls, but small openings between cakes should be filled as well as possible with dry snow or fine pieces of ice. The object of this is to get rid of the air spaces and secure as far as possible a solid block condition of the ice. Do not freeze blocks together with water. Whenever any ice is removed during the summer dry sawdust, or whatever covering is used, should be at once put back over the ice; if these conditions are well provided for there will be very little loss of ice by melting within the storage.

Plans for more elaborate and costly forms of ice-houses, and also plans and specifications for small ice cold storages, may be secured free of charge by writing the Department of Physics, O. A. C., Guelph.—R. H. Graham, O. A. College, Guelph.

Many herbs, such as sage and thyme, may be easily grown in the home garden.

Rome Has Big Sensation

Genoa has not eclipsed Rome in the interest of the Italian newspaper readers, nevertheless it is hardly at present the scene of one of the most sensational murder trials of modern times. The case is one that would attract attention in any city in the world, however-those to murder, or more correctly speaking make it unique in the annals of crime. The accused prisoner is Leonida Bolognesi and he is blind. The victim of the crime was his wife. Her murder was not discovered until she had been in her grave for a month. She was killed by being shot expertly through the temple. The motive for the execution has to answer to the satisfaction of the court to have been that Bolognesi could save first with so true an aim. The motive of the crime is said to have been the love of the alleged assassin for another woman, and in the course of the trial there has been enough gallantry and guilty love and old-fashioned crime interest to light to satisfy the most morbid.

Bolognesi is a middle-aged man, half Peruvian, half Italian, known for many years in Rome as a horse-breaker, adventurer, as brilliant as he was unscrupulous. Two years ago, after a life of dissipation, his eyesight threatened to fail. He grew to be almost totally blind, a friend, the Commendatore Attilio Simonetti, had a fine young daughter, Angelina, named Bice. The child became fascinated by the blind man's misfortune, and, despite the entreaties of her parents, announced her determination of becoming his wife. Since they could have no power over her the parental sanction been withheld. The marriage was connected to, and the scenes acquired considerable money, Bolognesi, however, by his old connection with Maria de Angelis, an adventuress who has a good deal more than a prominent figure in the demimonde of Rome. This woman was infatuated with the blind adventurer, bitterly resented his marriage, and plagued the face of the little bride as they were leaving the church after the ceremony.

But ill-treatment could not cure the love of little Bice for Messina, and there was general astonishment when early after New Year's Day, 1918, she disappeared, and her husband declared that she no longer cared for him and had run off with another man. A letter from Bice, dated from Naples, was received which seemed to confirm the truth of the statement, but the parents were not satisfied. Why, they asked, should a girl be infatuated with a man for seven years, enduring the most cruel treatment, and then suddenly leave him overnight? A couple of days after the disappearance of Bice's father, and his brother-in-law's gun, which, after two years, led to the discovery of the young woman's body, and the arrest of her husband, the paramour and wife of the hotelier named Benucci and Lieut. Barbero. These people are now on trial, and for some months past Rome has been proceeding a legal battle which rivals that between Landru and the French authorities some months ago.

The reason that the body of Bice was not discovered until after the two years after her murder, is that the spot where she was shot was not identified under her own name, and was at a distance from Rome. Under this name she had spent several days in the town of Bracciano, which is the most disreputable district of Rome. She was found with her face upon the hair brain lying on the cobblestones of a street near the Tiber. Her purses and personal effects were found on her which confirmed the first theory that the crime was the execution of her as Maria Rotellini, and not as Bice Bolognesi. Her parents viewed him that Bice had been murdered, and later the friend identified the portrait of Maria as the murdered woman. The body was buried, the police being unable to find a clue to her murderers.

Through some means, not made clear, in an otherwise complete story of the case from the Italian correspondent of the New York Herald, a detective came to the conclusion that the dead body was not the missing Bice were one and the same. An incautious word dropped by Benucci, and heard by a friend, convicted him that Bice had been murdered, and later the friend identified the portrait of Maria as the missing Bice. It is said that he had persuaded his wife that the only way for them to get rid of the importunate Angelis was to kill her, and he had carried out the first part of which consisted in Bice establishing as Maria Rotellini. Benucci who was really digging her own grave, for when the time was considered opportune, her husband said her to be at a certain place and sent the woman to meet her, and shot her. Another story is that Messina shot her himself, repudiates the alleged confessions, and has offered proof that at the time of the crime his arrest he has been out of his mind.

Dehydrated Vegetables.

When dehydrated raw vegetables are used in artificial feeding tests at ordinary temperatures investigations at Cornell University have proved to be an important factor in their preservation. There is a "critical moisture content" below which the distinctive color and odor are retained unimpaired for upward of six months. For cabbage this is from 5.34 per cent. for onions from 6.74 to 6.64 per cent. There is many injury from exposure to air at room temperature, all comparatively high humidity at lower temperatures and from similar exposure to a dry atmosphere.—Scientific American.

Too Impulsive.

"My wife was feeling up this morning, and asked me to send for the doctor, but I reminded her that the sales were starting, and she felt better at once."

"But wouldn't it have been cheaper to send for the doctor?"

"Aye! I never thought of that."

HARD TO ACCOUNT FOR FIND

Scientists Puzzled Over Location of Jawbone of Animal Discovered by Prison Big Boulder.

Workmen engaged in removing a 10-ton field boulder which is to mark the American Legion lot in Mt. Wollaston cemetery came across a strange find. When the boulder was lifted, after hard work, from its bed at the edge of a piece of swampland at the bottom of a small hill in South Quincy, the workmen found part of the jawbone of some animal. A large double tooth, remarkably preserved, the makes it unique in the annals of crime. The jawbone is over a foot in length and he is blind. The victim of the crime was his wife. Her murder was not discovered until she had been in her grave for a month. She was killed by being shot expertly through the temple. The motive for the execution has to answer to the satisfaction of the court to have been that Bolognesi could save first with so true an aim. BEDDING FOR STABLES

Straw, Peat Moss, Sawdust and Shavings Considered.

Straw Preferred for Many Reasons —Measuring Hay In the Mow and In the Stack — Hand-feeding Lambs.—Farm Trespassers Bound Over.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

The materials used for bedding domestic animals are generally straw from the grain fields, peat moss from the bogs, sawdust from the saw mills, or planing mill. Straw is used to a greater extent than any other material, for several of its abundance; secondly because the stable offers a medium for transferring this by-product of the field to manure, and thereby facilitating its return to the land; thirdly because it is a good absorbent of liquids. Straw from oats, peas, rye, wheat and oats vary in value as a litter or bedding material, the oat straw being the best straws, while durable to the wear of animals, is not as good an absorbent as the straw from peas and the straws. Wheat straw not being highly valued as a feed finds its greatest use as a stable bedding. Straw from oats, potash and phosphorus contained in the following table. Pea straw has a value at commercial fertilizer prices of $1.35, oat straw $1.15 and wheat straw $1.10. Straws have a further value in that the organic matter contained in the straw forms a nature as to be particularly valuable as an absorbent of liquids. It is also of a fibrous and porous content. The manure from straw-stables where peat moss is used as bedding is generally of considerably higher value than that from straw-stables where other materials are used as litter sources. It has no objection in that it does not cake and retain the dust and shavings, while serving the purpose as a litter material, add little value to the manure. Useful as an aid in keeping the animals clean and preventing the loss of the liquid portion of the manure, peat moss has little feeding value for this purpose; but it must be remembered that its fertilizing value is also low. Those who have straw should not sell it. Those who have neither straw or peat moss should then use the latter.—Arthur Stevenson, Sec., Dept. of Agriculture, Toronto.

MEASURING HAY.

The following simple and practical scientific method of measuring of hay are worth noting and filing:

Hay in Mow.

To find the number of tons of hay in a mow multiply the length by the width and then by eight out of hay. This will give the number of cubic feet. Divide by 512 the resulting number will be the answer in tons. Hay varies in value from 10 to 20 per ton according to the character of the grasses or clover which make up the bulk of the crop, the time it has been stored, the size and depth of the mow. Timothy and other grasses pack closer than clovers, shallow mows go not back to the same density as do the deep mows, so judgment must be used in the matter. A fair factor above or below 400 when estimating the hay in the buildings. Every 20 feet deep will be packed into half the space observed in a shallow mow of the same length and width. Hay varies in value from $5 to $20 per ton.

Hay in Stack.

To find the number of tons of hay in a stack, measure the overthrow distance of the stack and multiply by the width and length in feet. Divide by three. The resulting number will be the number of cubic feet. If the hay has been standing for several months after it is cut it will be nearer correct. A fair average for all conditions is 500.

Farm Trespassers Bored.

Mrs. Bess Wilson, editor of the Redwood, Minn., Gazette, very properly censures town people who drive through country districts and raid the farmer of his tame and wild fruit and other products. Everything that grows on a farmer's farm belongs to that farmer; to the wife and to the pupils it. "To take even wild fruit without his permission is as much a theft as to take his corn, potatoes or chickens."

BOOK REVIEW

(BY EDPESON)

"The Sky-Line of Spruce" by Edison Marshall, Publishers—Longman's Green and Co. Toronto 1922. $1.75.

Edison Marshall writes of the great Northwest in this, his newest and one of his best novels of the great outdoors. He visualizes before us a clear picture of the woods, the forest, the lakes and the great snow-trails of the vast regions to our north.

Ben Darby, a convict is freed from the penitentiary through the influence of his long friend and goes to the North woods in search of gold. He meets rival claimants to his find and abducts his enemy's daughter and takes her into a vast spruce forest—into a great unknown and there awaits the coming of his rivals to rescue her.

This fascinating story of the open is told in that clear, lucid and descriptive manner which delights the reader and makes him think the scenes and characters are real, living persons and not actors in a book—figments of a fertile imagination.

"My Discovery of England", by Stephen Leacock. Publishers—S. B. Dodd, Toronto, 1922. $3.50.

Read this and laugh with Leacock." His lectures and travels in England, Scotland and Wales are vividly described in that humorous vein which we have become accustomed to when reading any of his books. He is one of the foremost humorists in America to-day and should one develope a case of indigestion, lumbago, the toothache, or as he might phrase it "some other atrocious horrible malady" and read this it will readily put one, in a jovial mood and despel any of the unpleasant sensations.

His style is unusually clear and forcible in this book and his usual brilliant criticisms are abundant and "relish the reader enjoyable reading.

As I said before—read this and Laugh with Leacock."

"Illicisms of the Trail", by Geo. C. F. Pringle. Publishers—McClelland and Stewart, Toronto, 1922.

The author being for many years closely associated with the Yukon District and the Klondike gives us this group of reminiscences told in a clear and convincing manner, accurately describing many of the privations and difficulties which confronted many of the pioneers in that gold-bearing country.

Those stories were first narrated to his fellow-countrymen in the cage-nts in newspaper and now in a more of perpetual interest to many of the new heroes on the Western Front.

His stories furnish enjoyable reading.

...ERE ROOTS OF COLUMBUS...

...Think Resting Place Is Not Known to Historians.

A new memorial for Christopher Columbus may be erected in Santo Domingo, but the project has raised fresh discussion as to where the discoverer of America is really buried. It is one of the ironies of the history of great a discoverer that there should be any doubt as to where his bones lie. The Spanish nation, ever since Columbus died at Valadolid, May 20, 1506, has claimed to have his ashes in its keeping, and still at least supposes that Columbus' remains reserved under the high altar of the Cathedral of Seville. The Spaniards say that the Dominican, Nicolas Ovando the governor of Santo Domingo, removed from Santo Domingo to Havana on the transfer of the Island to the French in 1795, and there set up the Discovery of "the authentic remains in the Cathedral of Santo Domingo, and that they have another body masquerading, as it were, in place of the ashes of the great admiral.

Books have been written presenting the arguments as to whether the Columbus bones remain in Spain or in Santo Domingo. The uncertainty arose from doubt as to the identity of the bones carried away from Santo Domingo about the year 1541. The remains, according to tradition, were interred in a vault under the floor on the right side of the high altar (the right side looking from the altar, not toward it), and close by them somewhere were also interred the remains of Columbus' son, Diego, and afterwards (on the other side of the altar) those of his grandson, Luis.

When the bones brought from Spain, presumably at the request of Columbus, to be buried in Santo Domingo, but the intrusion of a lot of old bones from Seville was something of a nuisance to the authorities of Santo Domingo Cathedral. Hence the incident was followed by neglect, and, if there was any tablet or inscription marking the grave as that of Columbus, it eventually disappeared. Nothing remained except tradition that Columbus was buried somewhere on the right side of the altar.

In 1795, when the island was ceded to France, and when, in order that the ashes of the discoverer might not fall into the hands of foreigners, it was decreed that they be exhumed and removed to Havana, what was thought to be the dust of Columbus was deposited in the Cathedral of Havana, and remained there until 1898, when it was removed to Seville, in Spain, and interred there at the Cathedral, where it still remains, venerated by the Spaniards as the true body of Columbus. Meantime, in 1877, some excavations in the Cathedral at Santo Domingo resulted in the discovery at a long leaden box containing a number of plainly recognizable bones, and an inscription on the exterior, which, being translated, read: "The Discoverer of America, First Admiral."

Therefore, in these confusing discoveries and incidents are the material for a lengthy dispute.

Off With Your Waistcoat.

Pinetti, the celebrated conjurer of the eighteenth century, in his performances at Versailles before the French Court in 1872, relieved some of the courtiers of their shirts without disturbing the rest of their attire. This was a very neat trick, if perhaps, hardly suited for the greater refinement of the present day.

The waistcoat was, however, be removed without taking the coat off, it being only necessary to unbutton the two garments. In this the waistcoat is not pulled over the back of the head as in Pinetti's method for removing the shirt.

The trick is performed as follows: First take the left corner (or lapel) of the coat, and push it through the left armhole of the waistcoat, bringing the outside to the inside. Second, put the left hand and arm through the same armhole. The effect of this is to leave the left armhole of the waistcoat at the back of the neck.

Then take the right lapel of the coat, and put it through the left armhole of the waistcoat. Put the right hand and arm through the same armhole. Then pass the waistcoat down the right sleeve of the coat.

Last, but not least, use an old coat and waistcoat.

A Costly Theatre.

The costliest theater in the world is nearing completion, says the Montreal Standard. It is the Municipal Theater of Mexico City, which will approximate $10,000,000. This huge structure presented its builders with an overwhelming puzzle that has finally been solved. The whole city is built on the site of an ancient lake. Usually foundations are omitted from the plans for buildings and their place taken by a thin layer of concrete and steel on which suitable for considerable distance around the building. Regular foundations are then made and walls reinforced with girders. They started to descend before the first story of the structure was erected. This has not been remedied.

Effects of Cropping Are Sure to Exhaust the Best Soil in Time.

Plant Food Must Be Supplied—Mother Earth Has Her Limitations—Seven Rules for Poultry Raisers —Breaking Up Brooding Stock.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto)

Lands that have been farmed for half a century usually show a decrease in crop production. A few farms that have been well managed in the various sections of Ontario are still very prosperous. Some have been cropped out to the point of abandonment, while others are being skilfully cropped, but are becoming less productive, simply because there is neither food nor soil life to release such to growing plants.

Mineral Elements Become Exhausted.

Frequently one of the mineral elements—lime, potash or phosphorous —is exhausted by cropping or leaching. Nitrogen exhaustion is a very common condition noticeable in lands that have been cultivated for many years without crop rests. After all, the soil is only a storehouse for those elements required in the life processes of the food plants that the farmer grows. It is comparatively easy to supply the various forms of life are at work transforming the soil into mineral or food condition for the plant. If the soil becomes deficient in lime, nitrogen or the potash or the phosphorous, the addition of any one of these will soon restore the soil to a condition of plant nut-rutrition of plant nutrition.

Plant Food Must Be Supplied.

The plant can use nitrogen only to the extent that food is supplied to permit growth. Many of the thin crops of grain, hay and pasture in Eastern Ontario are thin simply because of soil exhaustion. Some part of the plant's ration is below the minimum requirement for best development. It may be nitrogen or potash or phosphorous. However, if we have robbed the soil of some fertility element to a point where we see a decline in yields we should return to the soil that which has taken away if we are to expect full yields again. Cropping will exhaust a soil if the system of rotation or management does not provide for ample return of the essential elements, nitrogen, potash and phosphorous. Effects of cropping are first noticed on the rather well managed farms where clovers and other legume plants are prominent in the crop rotation, where the crops grown are fed to live stock and where some attention is paid to keeping the essential elements, potash, phosphorous and lime, abundantly supplied.

Mother Earth Wants Only a Fair Share.

The soils of Mother Earth will, if reasonably and intelligently managed by all of the thousands of individual farmers, last for many centuries. Unfortunately all our farming methods are not reasonable as they might be, and we frequently see evidence of overcropping, soil robbing, poor management and lost labor.—L. Stevenson, Secretary, Department of Agriculture, Toronto.

Seven Rules for Poultry Raisers.

Here are seven safe rules for getting the most money from the poultry member flock:

1. Produce infertile eggs by removing the roosters from the flock in the summer time.

2. Feed wholesome mests and keep pens clean.

3. Gather eggs twice daily during the summer and keep them from being heated by the hen.

4. Market eggs in a cool, dry place, away from the flies.

5. Market eggs at least twice each week.

6. Insist that they be bought on a quality graded basis.

Breaking Up Broody Hens.

Neglect in breaking up broody hens means a great loss annually in the number of eggs produced by Indiana farms.

Confinement of broody hens in a slat bottom coop is the most practical factory. The coop should be covered on top with slat or wire and should be set on legs, preferably under a tree to insure shade. A slat bottom coop prevents lice from becoming comfortable and these soon cause broody hens.

Common practice is to place hens in the coop for a few days and then turn them in the evening, if they return to the nest they are returned to "jail" for three more days. This usually breaks up the broody notions.

Removing the broody hens from the pens the first evening she sits is a very important factor in breaking up broodiness. It is not necessary to be undisturbed a few days it requires more time to break up broodiness and this results in a longer period of egg production.

Nasturtiums do not require rich soil, in fact, if put on rich soil they will produce few vine than flowers.

The reproduction of fruit and vegetables at home under proper sanitation difficulties and solves the marketing problem.

A good growth of musk melons may be had by putting a bushel or so of well rotted manure in the bottom of each hill. Plenty of water during warm dry weather also helps.

Our Tommies and Lady Nancy

Ladies who contemplate investing their millinery into the political ring might take a tip from Lady Nancy Astor, M.P. for Plymouth in the British House of Commons, who recently visited Canada.

Thousands of Canadians who were overseas retain vivid recollections of Lady Nancy, on the Astor's country estate, "Cliveden," near Taplow on the Thames river, on whose estate the Duchess of Connaught's Canadian Red Cross hospital was situated, using expressions like "Slam it a-mile," and cutting capers at ball games staged by the Canadian Overseas League back in '16.

As a baseball coach and side line coach, Lady Astor had the ordinary run of professional baseball fans. She was the liveliest spectator and among the noisiest at times on the grounds, to the delight of Canucks and the highly amused Imperial Tommies who were patients at the hospital.

Lady Nan knew all the baseball jargon up to that period, and she frequently has proven on the floor of the House since then, that possessed a shrewd and witty tongue and could coin a catchy phrase equivalent to a home run in the standard ball game banter. She could wield a wicked bat, on the opposition team, but, being a good sport, she was always ready to encourage the "home" players.

Military red tape, lack of sympathy and army regimentality with which she was periodically at variance must have pailed heavily on Lady Nan's impetuous spirit and caused her unconventionality. At any rate, she chose to go to the limit in such differences to the delight of the Tommies, at one of the final league games in 1918, between the nurses and orderlies' teams. Distinguished visitors came down from London for the occasion. Members of the headquarters staff, including Sir Auckland Geddes, were there. A string orchestra was provided and there was a big luncheon and open refreshment tent on the lawn. Imperial staff and patriotic khaki and "blues" crowded the grand stands.

Mighty cheers greeted Lady Astor just before the game when she began to distribute scores of small boxes of peanuts to the Taplow supporters. She pressed several of the distinguished staff officers who by rights should have remained strictly neutral to accept peanuts and more noise than at any time in the game.

She pranced excitedly and wimply about the base lines, encouraging her sergeant and jibes through her megaphone. She was certainly the life of the big party. Her enthusiasm for Taplow team lost the game, but it stirred up the crowd to boisterous encouragement.

While Lady Astor's ardent love for baseball and her frolicsome capers at Taplow endeared her to Canadians of most outstandingly by Canadians who were patients there, their first recall as well, her kindly interest and sympathy for the wounded and their suffering and devoted efforts toward cheering the men who were confined for months in the wards. She paid daily visits to the hospital, distributing cigarettes, chocolates and such great armfuls of flowers from her private garden as would embarrass a florence scores of the two thousand or more patients by the time the last cheery word for all of them.

Besides entertaining the big estate in the absence of her husband who occupied an important Admiralty post and who seldom came to Cliveden, she was also actively interested hospital visitties, arranged amusements and entertainments for the patients and occasionally held levees at Cliveden House—a castle in size—for the staff and V.A.D. workers.

The estate itself was an inspiration to the men who were wounded, many of whom came almost to love the Cliveden estate as a hospital. Cliveden was previously the property of the Duke of Sutherland and the Dukes of Westminster and is one of the most magnificent modern mansions in the heart of the Thames river country, which is said to be in England. A walk through the woodland paths surrounding the mansion also revealed beautiful and interesting statuary groups, monuments and memorials and artistic rustic seats and bridges. The great fountain at the front of the house was also reputed to have cost half a million dollars. The statue representing the clock tower at one side of the main entrance to the house is said to be of solid gold. Cliveden was a recreation ground for convalescent and convalescing comfortable and these soon cause broody tracks.

Probably the acres of its bulk comprising the big hospital have long since been torn down and the grounds restored to their old beauty, but Cliveden will remain for all time a sacred remembrance to Canadians who served war days in the little Canadian military cemetery which is the resting place [of] Canadians who "went west" in the injured, from the wounds, Italian garden, one of the beauty features of the estate.

Canadians who knew Lady Astor best will remember her unfailing interest with keen interest and they must have knowingly smiled when she spatches describe her parliamentary tailists, recalling her impulsive and unrelenting baseball coaching in the war years.—Toronto Sunday World.

Wasted Water.

It is estimated that something over 100,000,000 gallons of water per day are wasted in connection with the domestic supplies of the water undertakings in Britain.

Sir Auckland Geddes Was Anything But Beloved by British House of Commons

Whenever the former assistant professor of anatomy in the medical faculty of McGill University, Montreal, Canada, commenced to lecture the House of Commons, the more excitable members of that celebrated club used to writhe and feel again like small boys in hard forms before superior taskmasters at Eton or Rugby, or Winchester. How they used to fidget and squirm! Many more unpopular than his brother, the Canadian soldiers and sailors. Others were possible. No Parliamentary master at all, old Sir Eric Geddes, old bean, a most unparliamentary and delightfully improper manner, and all that sort of thing, old top. Frightfully jolly beastly! Auckland Geddes' lectures (alias his speech) would go on in the most benevolently authoritative and discursive manner—the Geddes manner.

Sir Geddes has been "doctored" again, this time by the University of Edinburgh, and Lord Haldane, Liberal, Rt. Hon. Sir Auckland Campbell Geddes, M.D., C.B., K.C.M.G., His Britannic Majesty's Ambassador to the United States. Like Sir Robert Borden, Sir Auckland is a product of Queen's University, Kingston, Ontario. His further training was in medicine, with a year in Germany, and then at Oxford manner, getting no nearer to "the university" than Edinburgh. No wonder the Commons loathed him.

But he was a soldier in the South African campaigns with the 43rd Imperial Light Infantry, and in the Great War proved his quality as an administrator, as director of training and later as national service beaten entering the Cabinet and taking on the onerous task of work on local government, reconstruction and trade in the Lloyd George Ministry as Minister in charge successively of the various departments of after-war Government. When he left for Washington the Commons—the rest of his own Unionist stripe, or of opposing parties, cared little that he had been Promoted, so long as he left them alone. His unpopularity with them, however, was not so great that they would deny him a vote of thanks and good-will. In honoring him the University of Toronto recognized brilliant services and abilities.

Wonder Weighing Machine.

In the gold room of the Bank of England stands the most wonderful balance in the world. This huge pair of scales is seven feet high and weighs almost one ton.

Place in the scale pan a huge gold bar, worth £10,000 or more, and the great balance will give its report to a fraction of a grain.

In addition to being able to deal accurately with heavy weights, it is so delicately poised that a sheet of paper on the pan will cause the pointer to fall perceptibly. A piece of tissue it will weigh a quarter of a ton of gold or a gold cigarette paper of equal ease.

The cost of this machine ran into many thousands of pounds, for every part had to be made with the most extreme accuracy.

The slightest trace of moisture would affect the delicate mechanism, and even dust inviable to the eye must be kept away, otherwise the balance would register the weight of the dust as well as that of the gold.

Picture on a Pin's Head.

What is undoubtedly one of the smallest engravings in the world has been produced by Mr. Herbert Bangeer Government engraver, of Washington.

It is t picture of the United States capitol cut on the head of a pin. Three days were spent in getting a finely polished surface on the pin head, and the engraving took four days to complete.

So small is the picture, which was executed with a fine diamond point under a powerful glass, that it can be seen only with a microscope.

The details—door, windows, columns and even the statue of Liberty above the picture is written, "United States Capitol," and beneath, "Washington, 1922."

Mulching Paper.

Weeding would become a lost art if the use of mulching paper could be applied to all gardens as successfully as it is in market gardening, says an article in Popular Mechanics. The paper comes in rolls and is rolled out where it is desired to plant, and slits are cut in the paper through which the plants are planted.

"Your cook-dre made such a confounded fuss getting pictures ready in dark, you don't mind if I sit and watch you working?"

This remark from a "tall, broad-shouldered, big-nosed, open-mouthed" man-about-town lifted out of a peaceful foot out of his canoe and then the other, deliberately, not impulsively, is quoted by T. Morris Longstreth in his new book of travels, "Intrans." The author and a friend were paddling in the Canadian wilderness in northern Quebec when the unexpected visitor agreed. From his insolence he might have been a shanty-man, but the twilight disclosed a face of sensibility as well as strength; from his habit of a rough and ready sharpness, he might have been poet or musician; but then he was English. We should have thought him fifty but for a certain ebb magnetism that goes with youth. He sprawled down along the sand in an unperturbed silence, smoking the stars, and by and by, reached poetry. "I have a cousin down in Devonshire who says you have heard of, Charles G. D. Roberts," said the stranger, "who's a poet for you—a man who is at his best on a big theme. I'm not a poet myself, but at times like this if one has the memory." Pressed and urged, he began to recite several Canadian poets of note, and then down Memory said: You left one name from the list. Isn't Miss Carman a Canadian?

"Yes, but one of the wanderers, the spirit, and the stars, and by."

"I didn't realize he was a Canadian. Somehow I always knew that name," said the listener.

"His name, perhaps," said the other, "But his work hardly; that is what counts. I can scarcely remember a line by him, and I am interested in poetry."

"I give a pound to meet that man Carman," said one of the listeners.

"He is not much to meet," said the stranger. "A shy and awkward old bachelor, who confines his attention to the business of the day. I remember him at the start, when I was younger, and still occasionally get glimpses of him. He is a wholesome, genuine sort of giant. New Brunswick born, but forced to leave his native town by the States. He was starting off for Montreal the other day when I left, and I wrote him when he got it over that he'd never go through anything worse in peace or ceasing."

They talked for hours, and once the stranger said he was trying to remember the names of some fifteen minutes on envelopes and letters from the same man. They had gone they picked up some letter paper, also envelopes, and found on the latter-head:

A curious fact is that the ancient Orient and modern West was observed by Mr. Cecil Sharp during the return of the Holy Carpet of the Mohammedans to Mecca, according to Dr. T. E. Green, writing in the Christian World. The carpet was brought into the city with enormous pomp and ceremony, and Mr. Sharp had shattered the Egyptian air with the strains of "Onward, Christian Soldiers, Georgia." Before the carpet was finally put in its place it was carried back on seven ceremonial circuits, and with the stately animal, described these courses to the tune of "My Old Kentucky Home." Why these airs are the ones selected for such a ceremony is unknown, but the collector of melodies authorities.

This annual pilgrimage with the Holy Carpet is a joyful occasion, and full and impressive of the ceremonies of the Mohammedan faith. For years of plenty the carpet is accompanied by camels and drivers, and great circumstance is observed throughout, both at Mecca and at Cairo.

HISTORY OF SURNAMES.

They Furnish Interesting Clues to Ancestry.

It is by no means every man who knows that in the name he bears he has a valuable clue to his ancestry.

Thus, if he bears the surname of Harper or Wenables, Pelham or Percival, Davenport or Chester, he may be pretty sure that the founder of his family was a harper, a cook, a butler—though whether he was a lord, a knight or a yeoman is impossible to tell him.

Similarly, if he bears the name of any town or village in England, it is probable that the first forefather to bear the name made his home there, though here, again, he gets no clue to be guided to the exact locality. Thus a Suffolk, Mr. Muggins and Mr. Bangs still be referred to find that their names "came over with the Norman," and Mr. Bangs can point to Bungay as the cradle of his family.

THE KING GEORGE SCHOOL QUESTION

High Time That Conflicting Conditions Were Wiped Out

Several letters have been addressed to the Intelligencer of late by Mr. Thos. Manley and Mr. Beaumont Jarvis, regarding the unsatisfactory progress being made on the construction of the King George School. These letters have not been published in their entirety, because in some instances they contained expressions that could not be otherwise interpreted than being strongly of a personal flavor. These letters, if published, having of a controversial nature would only lead to a long exchange of correspondence, during which our columns would undoubtedly be the medium through which private differences would be carried on. The public generally, we have assumed, are not greatly interested in the petty details of the affair, but on the other hand are vitally interested in the general conditions concerning the non-fulfillment of the contract.

Thus we intend to put the search light on the affair. To begin with the city is committed to an expenditure in excess of $100,000 and from all appearances the city will either get far less than the money's worth of the initial investment, or be forced to pay more for what is expected to get from that sum. There is thus no doubting away from the fact that if we are to get a school that will measure up to the specifications, a large sum must be spent and possibly a tax suit faced.

Briefly Mr. Manley condemns the building from the point of faulty architectures and Mr. Jarvis condemns an element of faulty workmanship and poor material. In either event both parties agree that the building is far from what it should be. While these parties are continuing their argument, progress are going on, and delays are greatly deepening the ultimate values of the school which stands without a roof and more or less detrimentally exposed to the weather.

Why do the School Board allow this condition of affairs to continue? Are they ignorant of the true facts? If they are, it will be a poor excuse to offer the tax-payers, when the payments are to be made.

It appears that the following suggestions should be acted on in a general way, and acted upon at once:

1 As Mr. Manley condemns the architecture, have a thoroughly competent man, one in whom we have confidence and suspicion, and quite disinterested, report on the plans and specifications.

2. As Mr. Jarvis condemns the quality of the material, the workmanship, and methods of the contractor, get an expert opinion on this phase of the matter.

Now Mr. Manley is a contractor of experience, and when he accepted the contract under bond to complete same by October 15th last, he did so with his eyes open. Up to date his explanations have not been very convincing. He blames he architect and has some other petty excuses. The city should receive, through the School Board, a full account, giving the REAL reasons for the almost unbelievable delay and steadily increasing loss. There is not the slightest doubt that a certain amount of the delay is due to the contractors themselves, and if they felt that the architect had held them up unduly, they should have gone on record to this effect and placed same before the School Board Reasons quite a new and unique procedure to neglect to inform the School Board as soon as these conditions were made manifest, and then at the last hour attempt to justify themselves through the medium of the press.

On the other hand Mr. Jarvis condemns soundly the material that has gone into the building. He has reports of leak on the mortar, used in this school building, that then the mortar (privately now severely attacked as mortar made by a nationally known Testing and Inspection Company, according to the specifications as were supplied). Mr. Manley, The is only one instance of defective material Mr. Jarvis claims to have other others. This factor alone weaken the whole structure so that re-roofing apparently has become necessary. This re-inforcing costs extra money and to a greater or less extent ... the beauty of the building. If both

HOTELMEN OF CITY ORGANIZE

Held Meeting and Elected Officers of an Organization Created to Protect Their Interests

The Hotel keepers of the city of Belleville, seven in number held an organization meeting at the Hotel Quinte on Thursday evening the 21st inst, at 8 p.m. for the purpose of organizing and following out the general organization which is taking place in reference to Hotels generally.

The hotelmen have done this in view of the fact that the report of the Commission appointed by the Provincial Government to investigate hotels conditions in the Province generally will be returned shortly and it is hoped in time to have some concessions come up at the next Provincial Legislature in regard to relief against the unnecessary burdens which Hotelmen contend they have to endure from a thoughtless and careless public, needlessly imposed upon them by sentimental and enactments which are a source of upkeep and expense to hotelmen individually and from which they obtain no legitimate remuneration. This fact is well known to the public generally.

The hotelmen feel that there is strength in organization and by an united effort they may be able to induce the Legislature to look upon their application for some concessions with a degree of leniency, which the opening of Temperance did not arise as an issue, they objects are for the purpose of betterment of legislation generally and the welfare of the travelling public who depend upon hotels for accommodation and convenience.

J. P. J. Power was elected President and Messrs. Kingsley Johnston and Hugh Sharpe were appointed the executive committee. The members present were: Messrs. Jenkins, Power, Kingsley, Johnston, Sharpe and Bateman. William Carnew, K.C., was appointed their solicitor and Secretary for the purpose of the association.

CITY CHARITIES THIS CHRISTMAS

IN THE LAST MINUTE RUSH REMEMBER THE ORPHAN CHILDREN AND THE NEEDY

There seems to be nothing to do for those unfortunates in the Provincial Charities in Belleville but to express continued gratification over the remembrance they are getting from date to date and to renew the expression of the hope that what is now in happy prospect for the needful will be realized by next Monday.

And no one who wishes to give practical heathish manifestation should be small. There is an old proverb that he "who gives no small gifts would give no gifts." It is a serious matter this year for some of the neediest and even the smallest gift, may help to carry a wish for life. At any rate it will be for the joy of the Christmas season and for many, the whole year through.

Do not forget the children at the Shelter, The Salvation Army and the different churches, whose organizations are bearing much responsibility those festive days. You will gladden many hearts and your own Christmas tide will be indeed reassuring.

FOREMAN PRESENTED BY EMPLOYEES

Mr. H. Carr, foreman of the Machine Shop of the Canadian Fairbanks Co. and Mr. W. Edwards who are severing their connection with the company and leaving the city, was on Friday presented with a club bag, and umbrella. Mr. Ezra Read an address and Mr. Gosnell presented Mr. Carr with the club bag and Mr. Edwards with an umbrella. Although taken by surprise both gentlemen made suitable replies.

SANTA CLAUS AT MISSION

Pleasing Programme Provided by the Sunday School Scholars

Thursday evening was certainly a great one for the children of the City Mission when parents and children crowded into its capacity, many having to stand.

The doors were open at 7.30 and the orchestra played selections of the old time Christmas airs, while the people gathered.

At 7.45, a programme of forty items commenced and was given by the boys and girls of the Sunday School. Recitations, solos, dialogues and a tableau "Safe in the arms of Jesus" by twelve of the young ladies of the school, all clad in long white dresses.

The most enjoyable moment was the arrival of the Santa Claus outfit which had arrived inside the door on his way to the platform.

Immediately on the programme finishing Jingle Bells sent in a few minutes Santa came rushing in clad with presents. For a few minutes there was cheer and clapping of hands for Santa's arrival. Many of the boys and girls received presents and all got a bag of candy and nuts.

Just before Santa arrived Rev. Mr. Logan had a few words to say to the parents of the members of the church. Mr. Moffat, when presenting some of the goodwork Mr. Logan has done since he has been in charge of the work at the mission in June and especially the interest he has taken with the children.

Mr. Logan in a few words very nicely thanked the congregation for the handsome present.

Mr. Logan is a worker man of God, with great evangelistic zeal and is doing a wonderful work. Many nights while the mission is crowded out and through the week night's service as many as seventy-five to one hundred come to hear his able discourses.

BEAUTIFUL AND UNUSUAL GREETING

Masonic Grand Lodge Have a Beautiful Creation to Send to Lodge Members

A very beautiful Christmas greeting card printed in old English was shown to the Intelligencer by Col. W. N. Ponton. The card conveys the greetings of the Grand Masonic Lodge to the members of the fraternity. It is a work of art, and the sentiments which are expressed thereon are very beautiful indeed. They were composed in Belleville. The capital letters are in blue and are incased in a beautiful gold and red crest. The first letters of words are in red and the balance in black. Decorative crests and borders are tastefully arranged on the four pages of the card. It is a modern product but suggestive of "ye olden times" when such work was done by hand.

MUCH POULTRY FOR SALE

Good Prices Obtained for Dressed Fowls on Market

The Christmas market to-day was in some respects one of the largest held in this city for some time. Turkeys, geese, ducks and chickens were in abundance but the quantity did not seem to cause any great reduction in price. Some beautiful dressed birds were to be seen. One turkey offered for sale weighed 35 pounds and the price asked for same was $12. The ruling price for geese was from $3.50 to $4.50 each and ducks $2 a pair.

Garden products were quite plentiful and found ready purchasers at fair prices. Our quotations are as follows:

Turkeys	.50 to 55c. lb.
Geese	45c. to 50c.

DIDN'T KNOW GUN WAS LOADED

Fatal Shooting Accident Near Bancroft Village

Ambrose, the nine-year-old son of Mr. Thos. Hickey, who resides eight miles north of Bancroft village, met with a shooting accident on Thursday evening last which proved fatal. Ambrose, with an older brother were alone in the house at the time of the accident. It appears that the oldest boy was carrying the floor, when the younger brother noticed a gun standing in the corner, he making the remark "I am going to see if there is anything in it at this juncture just what happened is not known, but the gun was discharged and the contents emptied into the little fellows abdomen, death following a couple of hours later. Dr. Embury who was rallied to the scene, but could only relieve the sufferings of the victim. The sympathy of the community goes out to Mr. Hickey, he having lost his wife about a year ago and an older son a short time prior to the mother's death. —Bancroft Times.

'There was a fairly large and representative attendance at the Town papers Meeting last evening in the City Hall, considering the many counter attractions due to the approaching festivies.

Among the present were three aspirants for the mayoralty.

The Chairman, Mr. W. H. Panter, called the meeting to order and the secretary Mr. A. Hunter, read the minutes of the last meeting which were approved by the Association. Chairman Panter then read the recommendations of the last meeting and discussed each separately. They were all unanimously passed. In regard to the motion that the taxes be paid in two instalments, Ald. Bamford said that the year he was in the council, 1921, the city paid the Bank of Montreal the sum of $8,000 for interest alone on borrowed money, whereas if the taxes were paid in instalments, it would do away with the need of the city to borrow a year's money; the said motion was the changing of nomination and election day to the last Monday in November and first Monday in December respectively. Mayor Hanna stated that he was in sympathy with the matter, said it was what other cities of Ontario were doing and thought it the proper thing to do, however, there are conflicting a great deal with the holiday celebrations.

The open discussion of the evening was the Commercial-Dundas Streets sewer. An invitation was given to MacCay Engineer, Milton, to be present but he had failed to come and had not given any reason for not doing so. Aldermen Patterson, himself an engineer and contractor, said he had investigated same and found that the construction of the sewer which Mr. Mackie used had varied greatly from the original specifications. He also said the City Officials were lax in the checking and handling of said contract. They were no tenders or contract in the possession of the city authorities; he also said that the total sum for the same sewer had been paid in full by the City Treasurer and on the recommendation of City Engineer Mills. The completion was signed only by the City Clerk and did not bear the signature of the Mayor, was not sealed and duplicated as it should have been. There was also several conflicts in measurements of the city to show what was figured in the said contract.

The next speaker was the City Engineer, Mr. Campbell. He claimed he found the sewer was not laid in a tidy manner and all specifications called for in tender were not complied with. The sewer, however, being only necessitating a new sewer pipe for the laying of Highland Avenue Sewer.

The next speaker was Ald. Ostrom. He made reference to his four years in the council and said had always tried as he thought he was entitled to the support of the city on election day.

Ald. Wallace of the other capacity said he was a large taxpayer in the city, and if he were elected mayor would do his utmost to see that every city was carried on in a businesslike manner and that there would be no petty graft or waste in any department during the evening, in future in any work he would supervise.

Aspirant mayoralty candidate, W. C. Mikel, K.C., stated that in his peculiarly referred to the fact that it was evident that the city now owned a sewer i nthe council, as mayor, to look after the legal end of the affairs. He also elected he would see that the contracts and all city papers were properly signed, sealed and put in the right place for keeping.

Ex-Ald. Woodley said he was in the field for aldermanic honors. He would give his undivided attention to city affairs and would see that everything that came to his attention would receive every consideration.

Chairman Panter then told the membership gathering that this was the last meeting of the Association as the membership year that next year it could be reorganized and that they would be elected as delegates prior to and would sell them for 50 cts each for one year's membership.

NEW BASILICA FROM ORIGINAL PLANS TO BE BUILT SOON

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Quebec, Dec. 22.—The reconstruction of the burned Basilica on its former lines has been decided upon by the Roman Catholic Church authorities. The original plans of M. De Levy, French Architect, drawn up in 1744 have been selected as the basis of work. The new building will, however, be fire proof in every respect.

AUSTRIAN REFORM BILLS DISCLOSE ANCIENT ABUSES

Vienna, Dec. 27—Some curious abuses, survivals of ancient as well as modern outrageite, have been disclosed in the parliamentary debates on the Reform Bills. These measures are designed to fulfill the conditions on which the League of Nations is to undertake to find Austria foreign credits.

For instance it is asserted that some 30,000 institutions, both religious and secular, as well as many individuals, enjoy salt duties, that is, free salt from the government monopoly. These are of very ancient origin and bear curious titles, such as the "Salt of Grace," the "Must Salt," the "Salt of Alms," the "Salt of God's Healing," and so on.

There it has been disclosed that great numbers of free sticks of wood or other fuel exist also dating back to olden days of the monarchy.

The Minister for War confessed that obvious opposories could reduce the army cost by 91 billion crowns a year without material reduction of personnel. The debates showed a superfluous number of officers in the army. In the Tyrol, for instance, there are nearly two officers to each soldier, counting sergeants as officers.

The most serious disclosure, however, was the overmanned railway administration; Dr. Odelmal, the railway minister admitting there were 19.4 employees for every kilometer, or five-eighths of a mile.

A modern scandal also was revealed when it became known that the map and lithographing bureau, wiio director general of the government is also owner or director in six other similar establishments privately owned, had closed down his shops and was doing private work in the government establishment, with government labor, and paying nothing in return.

PARIS COLD TO "NO TIP" ENTHUSIAST

Paris, Dec. 23—A taxi who did not want a tip caused incipient riot in Paris recently. Te was the owner of a taxi motor-cab, and thought he could operate his own property as he saw fit. So he placed on his vehicle a sign reading:—"I own this taxi, and I accept no tips."

The ruction was caused, not by a rush of customers, but by the anger of fellow taxi-drivers. "What does this upstart mean?" asked one, climbing down from his seat and hurrying toward the revolutionary car with threatening vigor. "Resign!" cried other chauffeurs from the cab stand.

Epithet followed epithet, and meanwhile the crowd grew after the fashion of street crowds in Paris, with the customary baker's boy, butcher's boy, and flock of "Midinettes". When the crowd had grown to impressive proportions the owner of the taxi said to his colleagues: "You don't appear to like this announcement." There was a loud chorus of "No." With no backing from possible customers, the audacious taxi proprietor decided to capitulate. So he took down his sign; the crowd applied and the tipping system was saved.

MUSIC and DRAMA

HOOT GIBSON AND MARJORIE DAW AT REGENT TONIGHT

"The Lone Hand," a Fire ter "Hoot" Gibson Universal starring vehicle, is the feature attraction at the Regent tonight. Gibson, premier horseman of the screen, is at his best in this production and keeps up to his usual standard of a laugh or a thrill a minute throughout the five reels, one thrilling feature of this picture, is the flood scene in the valley canon depths of an abandoned mine in which two men are trappedsitation; for their lives. Included in the supporting cast are Marjorie Daw, Wil liam Welsh, Helen Holmes, and Hay den Stephenson.

"You and Me," an amusing and original Kibbie Comedy, Pathe News, a new Vodevil Movies and a Kinogram are being exhibited on the same program.

PHOTODRAMA OF SOUTH SEAS STARS KATHERINE MACDONALD

"The Infidel," Katherine Macdonald's new picture, which will be seen for the first time at Griffin's Monday to Wednesday with a special Matinee Xmas Day. Miss MacDonald has the role of a young woman who has been brought up by her mother to hate all professors of religion, an antipathy that is the result of her being deserted by her husband, who was a minister. When the young girl is brought in contact with a white haired missionary on a far off isle in the Southern Pacific she discovers the peace and comfort and happiness of true religion. The transformation of the young woman's character is brought about gradually and naturally and this, together with charming love story and a host of dramatic situations, makes "The Infidel" an unusually entertaining and interesting picture

Larry Semon in a highly amusing two reel comedy-called "A Pair of Kings," a thrilling Jack London Sea story, and a Travelogue have been arranged for presentation on the same program.

NORMA TALMADGE AND HARRISON FORD AT GRIFFIN'S

The Norma Talmadge picture which is being exhibited at Griffin's tonight, for the last time, is an adaptation of the stage play of the same name, "The Wonderful Thing," which had such a successful run, with Jane Eagles as the star. Many things, both amusing and dramatic, which of necessity did not appear in the stage version because of the limited scope, are shown in the film version, so that critics have hailed it as being a distinct improvement over the spoken play.

Harrison Ford plays opposite her, and Mrs. Lydig Hoyt, the young New York society beauty who was drawn to the routine of a social existence for a career as a screen artist, has the leading feminine role in the supporting cast.

An amusing Punch comedy titled "Country Chickens," an interesting novel Bray Pictograph, and the latest chapter of the popular Western play "Buffalo Bill" are being exhibited on the same program.

FAMOUS PLAY IS IDEAL PICTURE

"Her Lord and Master" is Unusual Photoplay.

Fred Stillwater, railroad magnate, called his palatial country residence the "ranch house," but to Ina he was little thing designation for his daughter. He considered her the greatest of his treasures. Many patrons of the spoken stage have found Indiana Stillwater as her relatives and friends considered her, and in the new picture the number of her admirers will be multiplied.

Indiana Stillwater is the sprightly and fascinating heroine of "Her Lord and Master," a highly interesting and entertaining comedy drama by Martha Morton, which has been vitalized as an Alice Joyce Vitagraph production. It will be shown at the Regent Theatre Monday to Wednesday, Matinee daily.

Indiana, an only child, has been somewhat spoiled by her fond parents and knows it. In confessing her love for the Right Hon. Thurston Ralph, Viscount Canning, and promising to marry him she enters a singular protest. She demands the assurance that as her husband he will do everything to cure her of her willfulness and silly habits instead of loving them because they are hers. Thurston keeps the promise under strenuous circumstances, though he feels that in doing so he may be sacrificing his life's happiness.

There are many tense situations in "Her Lord and Master" and sustained suspense. The production was directed by Edward Jose, world famous for his work as a director for the spoken stage and the screen.

A two reel Century Comedy, Fox News, and a new chapter of the popular adventure play "Robinson Crusoe" are announced for exhibition on the same program.

DE WOLF HOPPER AND HIS GILBERT AND SULLIVAN COMIC OPERA COMPANY

One of the most noteworthy and important attractions that Belleville will have this season will play an engagement of one night only, when the famous comedian, De Wolf Hopper, and his Gilbert and Sullivan comic opera company will appear in a repertoire of the most popular comic opera classics by England's most noted and matchless light opera collaborators, Mr. Hopper is universally acknowledged America's foremost operatic comedian, a distinction achieved through long years of painstaking effort. During the past twenty years or more no Metropolitan production of a Gilbert and Sullivan opera has been considered complete without De Wolf Hopper in the cast. His present season has probably been the most distinguished in his career, for it has been entirely devoted to the Gilbert and Sullivan operas. He played an engagement of twelve weeks in Boston during the warm summer months, a record of success that has been rarely equalled. He brings with him a company of exceptional excellence, one that has been thoroughly trained in the Gilbert and Sullivan atmosphere. It includes among others: Herbert Waterous, J. Humbird Duffey, Arthur Cunningham, Henry Kelly, Miss Alice Mackenzie, Miss Bernice Mershon and Miss Winnifred Angliss. The mixed chorus of thirty voices has been lauded everywhere as one of the best ever heard in high opera. The company also carries its own music, under the direction of Max Fichtnider.

BELLEVILLE INTERMEDIATE SIX DEFEAT SMITH'S FALLS SQUAD

Game was Rather Listless, Except in Second Period, when All Scoring Occurred—Final Score was 2-1 for Locals—Frechette and Swayne, Goal Getters for Locals

Last night at the arena, the curtain rose and later fell on the first presentation of any hockey offering in this city this season, and the hockey season for 1922-23 was officially ushered in. Smith's Falls Intermediates, and their Belleville Intermediates were the opposing teams, and after three periods of listless hockey, which followed on shining in many instances, the local squad came out top of the scoring heap by 1 the tune of 2 to 1.

Rather a small crowd greeted the players, and enthusiasm was not great. The visitors had had but two practices prior to last night's game and were far from being in condition, the locals having it on them in that department. Many subs were used on both aggregations.

Friday was a poor day for the manufacture of ice, and the result was that the ice sheet was not good. It was sticky, and during the first period especially, was dotted with a shimmering of shell ice. The puck would not ride properly on this, and the game was considerably slower on that account.

Still the ice is not altogether the trouble, for had it been fast, the visitors would have weakened, and the pace would have been tough on a couple of the locals, to say the least.

For the locals, it seemed to be a matter of "You do it, George" except in the case of Swayne, weir and Hagerman, when he was needed. Of course it would be folly to "kill" the players in an effort to pile up a score against a team in a meaningless, exhibition game. At all events, Belleville tucked the old game under their pinnies, and that is the main thing, win the openers.

One good feature of the locals was their unselfishness in passing the rubber, and their persistency in playing combination, when it was plainly obvious that combination was almost impossible. Judging by last night's game only however, it appeared as though the visitors had a pair in uniform, who were almost too fast for the locals, and fast ice might have vindicated this further, providing of course, those men could stand the racket. "Smoke" Naud, left defence is a burly boy, and is dangerous, being very fast for a defence man, like "Moose" Reynolds, his right hand man, is like a house, but he moves very rapidly for his size. Some of the other sub. players were like school boy excuses however.

For the locals, commencing in the goal, Les Crook was there last evening, and left no doubt in the minds of the fans, as to his knowledge of the job. Crook saved some nasty looking shots, and had to do it often too, especially in the first, and parts of the third period. "Toots" Holloway on the defence showed up well, for his debut in the Intermediate company, but Frechette was there only in flashes, appearing as though he were saving his tricks for some future date. Swayne at centre was one of the hardest workers of the squad, but appeared to fag under pressure. Mallen and Weir were effective at times. Mallen appearing as though he might be able to pack a wicked shot, and he does it in a decidedly sandy manner, so goal minders who know say. Hagerman, and Blake were used considerably, relieving Swayne, Weir and Mallen. Hagerman was effective, and introduced the pep by raising the ire of at least one of the visitors. Lake was used for a few minutes on the defence.

No scoring occurred in the initial frame. Early in the period, Frechette slambed one at Mosg but he saved nicely. Mallen used his weight to advantage. Holloway made one good rush from half way down, and got a shot, but Mosg saved. Lake substituted for "Toots". Blute going to centre and Hagerman relieved Weir.

In the second frame, after one and one quarter minutes play, Neil Wark, visiting wing man, slambed one by Crook for the initial and only counter for the visitors. Mallen got possession after, and got a lovely shot on goal, but Mosg saved by a narrow margin. Play then went to the Smith Falls goal, and in the scramble, Swayne poked the disc in for the first for the locals, after five minutes play. Exactly one and one half minutes afterwards, Frechette shot a corker one high, which beat Mosg for No. 2 Coal drew the one and only penalty in the second period.

The third period was slower than the second, and nothing of importance happened. Many subs were thrown in, and it was just a matter of time until the affair was over.

Smith's Falls—Goal, Mosg; left defence, Naud; right defence, Reynolds; centre, Kimberly; right wing, H. O'Neill; left wing, Wark; Spares Coad, Kennedy and Bissicotte.

Referee—Leo. Barrett.

Yesterdays Grain Market at Chicago.

Assertions that more than 1,000,000 bushels had been bought for shipment to Europe did a great deal today to lift prices in the wheat market here. The close was strong, ⅝c to 1⅞c net higher, with May $1.25⅝ to $1.25⅝; and July $1.14⅞ to $1.14⅞; corn finished at ⅞c, off to ⅝c advance; oats up ⅝c to⅞c and provisions varying from 5c decline to 5c gain.

It was only in the last hour of trading that the wheat market showed any decided upturn impetus. Earlier the sellers outnumbered the buyers, with the bulk of offerings coming from holders who were in a position to realize profits. This class of selling appeared to have exhausted itself about midday, and at about the same time the pit became aware that export business on a liberal scale had been in progress and that speculators on the bear side had apparently over-reached themselves for at least the time being.

The fact that a considerable part of the foreign purchasing was to be filled by shipments from ports on the Gulf of Mexico tended to make the advance by the wheat market rather brisk at the last. In this connection special notice was taken of the fact that for the first time in quite a while United States wheat was quoted in Liverpool at the same figures as wheat from Canada.

Corn and oats were governed by the action of wheat, but corn displayed less power to rally. Large receipts of corn here counted as a bearish influence.

Future prices closed:

Wheat—	Open.	High	Low.	Close
Dec.	1.27⅞	1.27⅞	1.26⅝	1.27⅛
May	1.24	1.25⅝	1.23⅞	1.25⅛
July	1.13⅞	1.14⅝	1.13	1.14⅝

Prices at this morning's opening were somewhat bearish.

Mex. Pete's Performance.

Mexican Petroleum, as in days gone by, was again the star performer on the Stock Exchange today. The stock sold up to 122, the highest at which it ever sold in the history of the company. At that level it showed a gain of 70 points over the close of Wednesday. At its final price of 200 it showed a net gain of 42 points. Virtually all the transactions were confined to lots of 100 shares. There were many reports circulated in the financial district to explain the rise. It was said generally that the company was buying the stock in order to absorb the small floating supply, which now amounts to only 16,000 shares, this representing stock which has not been turned into Pan-American's treasury under its recent offering. Officials of the company, however, denied today that either the company or its officers were buying the stock in the open market, but said that any outstanding stock would still be exchanged if satisfactory explanation was given. On the Stock Exchange it was reported that the company would buy all stock offered up to 200. The explanation which was generally accepted was that a few remaining shorts decided to cover before the floating supply became much smaller.

CHRISTMAS

Tonight the curtain drops on the pre-Christmas activities, and that rush and hustle that has characterized us all to a greater or less extent will disappear. The fact that Sunday is sandwiched in between the last business day and the actual Christmas celebration, is indeed a great blessing. Those that have been rushed right up to the last moment will have a day in which to relax. The final touches to the Christmas tree decorations, the arranging of the gifts for the day, and these duties that were put off for the while ordinarily would be rushed through, can be given quiet attention on Sunday without in any way violating the spirit or the letter of the Lord's Day Act.

Then on Monday, the early morning hundreds of little kiddies will wake up to find their array of toys, their Christmas tree, and all other things inviting them, as usual, but free from the excitement that had all tended to tire them. The restful Sunday will cause the burdens of the housewife who has to prepare the Christmas dinner.

Thus we can look forward to a more restful Christmas than usual. The celebration this year will be more genuine in many homes, than it was last year. Unemployment is not so serious and we are infinitely better off than Canada was two years ago. Prospects for Canadians the celebration of 1922 will be more general.

The Canadian Christmas has many features that are not common to all countries. Our climatic conditions enable us to always associate, snow, and the joyous ringing of sleigh bells, frosty air, and ice-covered rivers and lakes, with the occasion. Both these have largely a commercialism aspect to them, and our entertainment also bows to the same influence. Thus we have a distinctly Canadian interpretation of the term Christmas.

It is the wish of The Intelligencer that all its readers may spend a very Happy Christmas, and that Santa Claus pays a special visit to every home. We wish all the children specially a very Merry Christmas. We hope that there will be lots of snow and ice on which the new skates and sleds can be tried out.

JAUNTS

The Hon. James Robb, Minister of Trade and Commerce, is returning from Australia. He has broadcasted the news that he has arranged a treaty. With whom, we would like to ask? Our aggressive minister would like Australia in the midst of a general election. It would appear to be a most inappropriate opportunity to choose for the negotiating of a treaty, when the feet ten months time will tell Mr. Robb is still over the left coast. he has had a trip to Europe and one to Australia. He has been less than three months in his office. throughout the calendar year.

A HOUSE DIVIDED.

Although the vote of the U.F.O. convention at Toronto was overwhelmingly against "broadening out," it was also a specific declaration in favor of "constituency autonomy." The constituency organization, at election time, is the "United Farmers' Political Association" of such-and-such a riding, which is merely the county U.F.O., slightly dressed up for the purpose of legitimately handling a campaign fund. In some associations, urban citizens, presumably "like-minded," have already taken an active part. In some ridings the members call themselves "Progressives," in spite of J. J. Morrison's claim that the title was never authorized.

There is evidently nothing to prevent riding associations from making use of any support which may be available from townspeople. Some of them have done so, and will again. The curious result of such a situation is that such urban voters will, in the confidence of a man who, if elected, cannot speak for them, because he has now a strong "class consciousness", mandate from the whole provincial organization, in convention assembled. The typical farmer of one occupation, must come first, at peril of the "recall" resting in the hands, not of the constituency, but the U.F.O. executive of the riding.

Such constituencies, in a general way, represent the Drury wing of the party, which favors broadening out. It is said of Mr. Drury that a year ago he contemplated calling several Liberals to his Cabinet. His section of the party is now shorn to be in a minority, and it is probably too late now for the "People's Party" to become more than a name before the general election ends the brief tenure of Ontario's first Farmers' Government.

An interesting sidelight of the annual meeting, was the election as vice-president, succeeding W. A. Boys, of Harold Currie, county director for Middlesex, who has often been found in vigorous opposition to the Drury policies.

PASSINGCOMMENT

THE VALUE OF PERSISTENCY.

About three-quarters of a century ago a young man just arrived at maturity, after searching the city through for work, entered an office in Birmingham, England, and sat down faint and exhausted on a wooden settee. He had spent his last penny in purchasing a roll. He had no friends in the city, and work there was none.

The whole world seemed to be against him. Only a month before he had been a grinder at cutlery in Sheffield, and though his pay was small it enabled him to live. But a depression of trade had thrown him with hundreds of others, out of employment, and, after searching vainly for something to do in his native city, the young man had wandered to Birmingham with only a single shilling in his pocket.

Weak, hungry, and despondent, his impulse was to cease all endeavor and lie down in despair. But the young man had stuff in him, and as he sat disconsolately, with his head bowed in his hand, one of the loungers in the office engaged a friend near him in conversation. "Some one has built in a day." The expression caught his ear and stirred his heart with new resolution. "I'll not give up yet," he cried, striking his fist upon the table in front of him. "I'll try again and trust in God whatever happens."

In vigorated by his rest he left the inn and sought work, and before night he had obtained a place in a bucket factory. His wages were small, but by being economical he managed to save several pounds. Soon afterwards he made the acquaintance of a young lady, who with her brother, was engaged in the manufacture of steel pens. They were the black "barrel" pens and were very stiff and scratchy compared with the quills which they were intended to supersede. As each pen was clipped, punched and polished by hand they sold at enormous by high prices.

The young man became interested in pens, and, being a natural mechanic he soon devised an improvement. This was to cut three slits in the pen instead of one. The idea, carried out at once, gave an impetus to the trade. He next turned his inventive mind in the direction of more rapid means of manufacture. He worked early and late, many times discouraged, but always persistent, and at last complete a machine that would turn out 144 pens by the thousand in the time hitherto required to make one by hand.

He made his invention known to the young lady and her brothers, and asked her to marry him. The morning he was married the young machinist rose early, and long he was married the young machinist rose early, and before night had made a gross of pens, sold them for thirteen dollars and with this money paid all his wedding expenses . In a few years he had a large factory running in Birmingham which employed two hundred men, enraged in the manufacture of Gillott's steel pens.

Joseph Gillott lived to amass a fortune, and his pens are sold all over the world. The price of steel pens fell when he entered business would buy nine hundred by the time of his death. In the works that he established five tons of steel are used daily and one hundred and fifty million pens are manufactured annually. Before he died he visited the old inn where he stopped on his first arrival in Birmingham, and purchased the rickety old settee upon which he sat in the time of his despondency so many years before. In his will he devised it to his children, with the condition that they should always preserve it as a reminder of the humbler beginnings of their fortune.

And he who would win,
The first foe he must conquer
Is the spirit within.

Secure from destruction
At noontide he'll stand
Tho' thousands should fall
At his side or right hand.

PRESS OPINIONS

REDUCING OUR BURDENS

(Lindsay Daily Post.)

The citizens of Lindsay as well as other centres are today slaughtering a heavy burden in the form of taxes that would warmly welcome and support any scheme or policy whereby that burden could be lightened. This can be accomplished in a great measure by the exercise o frigi economy—the curtailment of extravagant expenditure by municipal governments.

We are paying through the nose a period as great as that in which we are now suffering. There are those who can afford it and who are willing to pay but the fact must not be lost sight of that we will have many obligations to face in the form of taxation imposed as a result of the war for some years to come. It behooves us then to make haste slowly.

Some municipalities, however, appear to have no grip of this fact. In their craze for expansion, etc., they have undertaken extraordinary assessments, increasing the burdens of the taxpayer and make conditions anything but ideal.

A policy of retrenchment consistent with prudent and businesslike administration appears to be the same one there is room for in Lindsay. It is for us in Lindsay would like to possess but it would be poor policy to boost ourselves in the matter of taxation.

Lindsay is a desirable place in which to live, but we can make it far more desirable and attractive if we reduce our tax rate. We must cut out all unnecessary frills and avoid putting on things that can wait. Lindsay town than a one-horse city Lindsay may sit be strong in radio circles, but it is not going to be called industrial centres, and a far more desirable place to live in.

THE WISE CRITICS.

(Vancouver Province.)

Mr. John M. Keynes wrote two o three years ago a book on the Peace of Versailles was a bad piece of work especially in the matter of German reparations. Mr. Keynes was sent to the United States Mr. Keynes has been trying to find a method a financing reparations which Germany may establish her own credit and meet some of the just claims the war makes upon her. So far he has not been successful. There is not to be said in favor of giving a severe critic a chance to improve on the course which he criticizes.

THE WAR OF REVENGE

(Toronto Star).

Canadians are as ready as any collection of people to set aside old French quarrels. Nothing can be said to the discredit of Germany. With little or no inquiry many of our citizens are convinced that France is preparing for war of revenge, that she is making no attempt to pay reparations, and that her military forces and her prosperity greater than elsewhere, that the monarchists are pulling the strings from behind the scenes, and that huge stocks of war materials have been hidden away for the renewal of the struggle for world power.

There may be room for a difference of opinion as to the correctness of these current conditions of Germany. And it is true that the nation as a whole is unrepentant and hates the Allies. But war-mania has by a lot o ground during the last four years and there is no present prospect that the militarist will be overthrown. It is also true, probably, that Germany is making some effort to pay reparations as exacted by the allied financial experts believe. But Germany is militarily helpless for years to come. And the efforts of French imperialists and of M. Clemenceau to make it appear that France has not sufficient hidden war material to constitute a menace are ludicrous.

WHERE HE GOT IT

A Northerner met a colonel from a Southern state in the smoking room, and he said he had served in the war between the states. "No, sah," was the Southerner's prompt reply. "Not the Spanish war?" "No, sah." "Not the world war, surely?" "No, sah." Then the Northerner grew puzzled, and said about. "The National Guard?" "No, sah." Perhaps you were on the Governor's staff?" Inspector general?" The Northerner. "No, sah," was the invariable response, so, said the Northerner, you must have been on the Governor's staff." Then they call you Colonel because you come from Kentucky." But even this ignorance was finally dispelled by the courteous but suave, habitual reply of the 'Colonel.' "Then, would you mind telling me in the name of common decency" persisted. "Well, sah, I reckon I just inherited that title, so to speak, from my wife's first husband."

ON THEIR WAY

"We may as well give up trying to get into society," said Nowrich in discouragement. "The barrier is insurmountable."

"Nonsense!" returned Mr. Newrich. "We'll get over it in time."

"What! have we wings?" he expostulated.'

"No, but our money has," said his wife.

D. Kinmount Roy

"You canting hypocrite!" he panted, his face in your fine, mystery, this is your hellish plot! But it's a lie—a lie; you shall eat your words before an hour's past, you and the pompous old dotard you have made your tool!"

Maitland had re-entered the house, closing the window after him, and Alan Graham was on the alert to prevent interruption. He was decorated with all his warmaids, for the occasion was a grand one, and he felt himself on duty once more in a very real case.

It required all MacAlpin's strength to subdue the angry youth, and even then it was in part the shock and fury of his own passion that ended the conflict in his sudden collapse.

When all power of resistance had died out of him, he stumbled into a chair, a despicable heap of misery. Had his faith in his father's honour and uprightness been more perfect, such statements might have fallen harmlessly for the moment; but although not much in his father's confidence, he had reason to know that he was not too scrupulous, and the fear that lurged at his heart was that it might be true, that it probably was true!

"It must be a foul lie!" he said, looking up at MacAlpin questioningly.

"No, laddie," Donald said kindly, 'it is the truth, but it mistk be worse: many a gay callant would be proud to be her brother, even in a left-handed way!"

The words, wellmeant as they were, stung the young man like scorpions, and, struggling to his feet, he rushed into the house and tore through the crowd like a madman, as we have already seen.

CHAPTER XIII

A GREAT BATTLE AND A GREAT DISCOVERY

When last we heard of Aynsworth he was with Wellington's army in the Peninsula, and had the good fortune to be present at the battle of Vittoria. The result of that battle might well, indeed, occasion the wildest joy in England, for it had resounded like a thunderclap throughout Europe, and was the beginning of the end of Napoleon's career of conquest.

Madrid, as we know, was soon after wards evacuated, and the whole army of French officials and followers of Joseph Bonaparte made haste to follow their departed monarch in his retreat.

But the work was by means finished, for, although broken and demoralized, there were wings of the great host which still held together; and several of these joined the garrison of the four strongholds which still remained in their hands. Among those, we are chiefly concerned with San Sebastien, which made such a stubborn defence and soon acquired such frightful celebrity for the unparalleled slaughter and crimes of which it became the scene, and which even now after the lapse of a hundred years reads like a chapter from some hideous inferno

It was at San Sebastien, you will remember, Gleanore began his pilgrimage quest to clear his name from the shadow of a great crime, a quest which we know ended so forlornly with his death among strangers.

And now his son, quite unaware that he is treading in his father's footsteps, and unaware of his father's end, is strangely enough brought amidst the horrors of war to the very threshold of his fate, at the same place and under stranger circumstances.

San Sebastien is situated upon the extremity of a low, sandy peninsula which curves in the form of a horseshoe, and immediately behind the town a conical-shaped hill rises to a height of over four hundred feet. The craggy base of this striking eminence is washed by the thilldering surge of the ocean, while its summit stands crowned by the ancient castle of La Mota.

At the time of which we are speaking, the Convent of St. Bartholomew was situated at the end of the isthmus, and was strongly held by the French; and being considered the key to the position, it at once became the focus of a deadly struggle.

SUFFERED YEARS WITH ECZEMA

"Fruit-a-tives" Cleared Her Skin

Pierre St. Pierre, P.Q.

"I suffered for three years with terrible Eczema. I consulted several Doctors and they did not do me any good.

Then, I used one box of "Fruit-a-tives" and two bottles of "Fruit-a-tives" and my hands are now clear. The pain is gone and there has been no return.

I think it is marvellous because no other medicine did me any good until I used "Fruit-a-tives" and "Fruit-a-tives" is the wonderful medicine made from fruit".

Madam PETER LAMARERE.

Guns of the heaviest calibre then manufactured batered its walls for days before the bravest of Wellington's veterans dared to advance to the breach. Let us drop the veil over the horrors which followed, for when men inured to the gruesomest sights of battle break loose from the strong hand of discipline and let the wild beast in them have full sway, no lurid scene of Hell that has ever been conceived or pictured can equal the unspeakable horrors of which they are capable.

Before night had quite closed in and dropped her sombre mantle over the fields of slaughter, a brief pause was necessary on both sides to care forthe wounded and the dying, and to bury the dead. It was while a party of men under Aynsworth were so employed that a stifled groan attracted their attention. Hastening, apparently, from a cell or small dormitory below the floor, which was broken in many places and carved into many fantastic shapes by the shells which had been rained upon it. Several men were hastily turning over the contorted bodies which lay about, not too gently, hardly restrained by the presence of an officer from some act of savage greed—for the resistance had been stubborn and fierce—when a voice from the same quarter whence proceeded the groan asked for water: "Water, for the love of the Mother of God!' it pleaded in feeble tones of despair.

SCHOOLS IN SOVIET RUSSIA SHOW INCREASE

Moscow, Dec. 22.—The number of public schools in Soviet Russia shows an increase under the Soviet regime as compared with pre-revolution times, according to recent announcement of A. Lunatcharsky, commissar for education.

During the first two years of the revolution, public education was given much attention by the Soviet government, and the number of public schools was brought up to 20,000 with a staff of 70,000 teachers and 2,250,000 pupils, as compared with 72,000 schools, 92,000 teachers and 1,300,000 pupils in 1911. But in 1921, with the change of economic policy and the abolition of the non-remunerary system, came the first reduction of expenses in education and curtailment of public schools. In 1922 a further number of schools had to be closed, on account of budget difficulties, while many schools were deserted by their staffs owing to insufficient and irregular pay.

At the present time, according to the official figures, there are 23,000 schools, 48,000 teachers, and 1,650,000 pupils. Put 1922 is expected to show a decrease, for the government will place the cost of upkeep of public schools upon local authorities, and these are notoriously short of funds.

The Short Story Jr.

THE UNWELCOME PUPPY

Uncle Dick arrived for the Christmas season amid shouts of welcome. Somehow Mother did not seem quite so glad to see him as usual. She had caught sight of a restless little ball of fluff hidden under his coat. "Oh, Dick not a dog!" she said.

"A dog!" the rest of the family echoed, but in quite different tones. That was just what they had wanted above everything else.

"It seems to me I have enough with five children around, without having a dog under my feet all day, too."

There was a loud crash and five screams. "Oh, he's knocked over the lamp," they cried. Mrs. Jones flashed an Look-you look at her brother and went off to pick up the pieces, while the rest of the family searched for the little scared puppy.

During the course of the afternoon the baby's new doll was chewed up, the library curtains were fringed, at the tablecloth was jerked off, and several of the dishes were broken. The best cushion was torn, and Mrs. Jones' new fur-lined slippers were twice rescued from the little puppy. Poor Uncle Dick had just about decided that he would have to take his Christmas present back.

The little dog had been missing for nearly five minutes. Mrs. Jones had vicions of her best bedspread in ribbons. A hunt was started, but no dog could be found. Finally Uncle Dick discovered tracks leading out the front door. They disappeared at the road where there were marks in the snow made by a horse and buggy.

"He's been stolen," Uncle Dick cried. Quickly he got out the machine and he and his sister were off down the road after the buggy they drove up beside it. Mrs. Jone's eyes flashed. "That's our little dog," she said. "We think a great deal of him and would not lose him for anything."

Mrs. Jones held the little puppy tight as they drove quickly back to the anxiously awaiting family. She did not notice the 1-told-you-so expression in her brother's eyes as he chuckled over the wheel.

ITALY KEENLY PREPARING FOR THE NEW OLYMPIAD

Rome, Dec. 21.—"Napoleon the Fourth" is the title by which Benito Mussolini, the young premier of Italy, is fast becoming known locally; owing to his resemblance to Bonaparte in personal appearance, and in his daily intercourse with his visitors and lieutenants.

Six representatives of the press, after speaking with Mussolini for over an hour the other night, were evenly divided as to whether this Napoleonic attitude of the Fascisti leader was natural, or merely pose.

Mussolini snapped back his answers in short incisive sentences. Many times his right hand wandered into his waistcoat across his chest, and

BOOK REVIEW

"THE COMPLETE RADIO BOOK" by Yates and Facett. Publishers—F. D. Goodchild Co., Toronto, 1922. $2.00.

This book comes at a very opportune time. Nearly everyone is interested more or less in Radio and has watched its development with interest.

Anyone who is contemplating building a set of his own and thus get the practical experience as to how it is done should first read this book. It is a story of the progress of radio up to the very latest developments known and gives minute instructions on how to build a set of your own with the least possible difficulty and the language used is not the least bit technical but so clear and easily understood that a child could follow the directions with ease.

The work is enclosed by the Radio Section of the Associated Manufacturers of electrical supplies and is packed with useful information for radio enthusiasts.

"THE STORY OF CANADA" by E. M. Marsh. Publishers—Thomas Nelson & Sons, Toronto, 1922.

A very compact little book of history for juveniles and young students containing quite useful information about our own country, Canada. It deals with Canada under French and afterwards the British rule and traces the development of the country from the time it was discovered by Columbus in 1492 up to the present in a very clear and concise manner easily understood by young students.

"THE KEY OF DREAMS" by L. Adams Beck. Publishers—McClelland and Stewart, Toronto.

The author of this book has an extensive knowledge of the orient, its peoples, its traditions and its customs. When he wrote "The Tenth Vibration" he placed before us a work of art as well as a story —he offered us a keen insight into the workings of the oriental mind. He very opportunately follows this with his present book—a love story of the Far East.

When reading this book I could not but feel that there is something more than emotion depicted in it—the book has a soul. There is no imagination here: there is truth.

A very good story and well worth reading.

"STORIES OF FRANCE IN DAYS OF OLD"—by Arthur O. Cooke. Publishers—Thomas Nelson & Sons, Toronto, 1922. $1.00.

This little book is not a history but a of stories telling vivid pictures of battles and exploits from the time the Romans conquered England and settled there down to the present time.

It furnishes quite interesting reading, giving some very good information and reliable facts and could be used by young students to advantage to supplement their studies on History as described by their regular text-books.

"THE TWENTY-FIRST BURE" by Victor Lauriston. Publishers—McClelland and Stewart, Toronto, 1922

A thrilling mystery story of the usual type, a crime and then its solution. The book is a thriller, having many startling and sensational developments. It will amuse and interest those who care for this type of light fiction but on glancing through it I didn't find any thing original in it—nothing dissimilar from many of its predecessors of the same type.

"PORTER OF THE MOVIES," by Harry Leon Wilson, Publishers S. B. Gundy, Toronto, 1922 $1.75.

The author of this book has a quaint style of vision by which he places before us a true picture of the inner workings of Hollywood, the mecca of movieland, and mingles and caperieures of movie actors, with a humour that makes chronic dyspeptic and rheumatic grouch laugh with ease.

The story is about a young man in a small town grocery store who after taking a correspondence course on "How to Become a Movie Actor" finally decides that he is having good talent by not joining his brother actors in Hollywood and thereby rise to stardom and command a fabulous salary for his meagre efforts to please the jellible public.

How he arrives at Hollywood and endeavours to induce movie managers that he is a great actor, is beautifully told with a humour that is contagious.

"THE BELLS OF ST. STEPHENS" by Marian Keith. Publishers, McClelland and Stewart, Toronto.

One of these Scotch stories surrounded by the usual mixture of Scotch humour.

The rector of St. Stephen's who was Scotland to be ordained, finds himself facing a stone wall for the the first time in his short and eventful life in the form of the village gossip. The old and talkative members of his congregation begin to complain about his coming marriage with his housekeeper of which he is blissfully unaware. Thus it is that his niece, a buxsom and extremely active young copper-haired maiden came to keep house for him and as the author puts it—"to relieve the peace of mind of the whole town."

THE MOTOR ARISTOCRACY

"You have no lower classes in this country?"

"Certainly we have."

"And what do you call them?"

"Pedestrians."

A NEW BRITISH AIR SERVICE

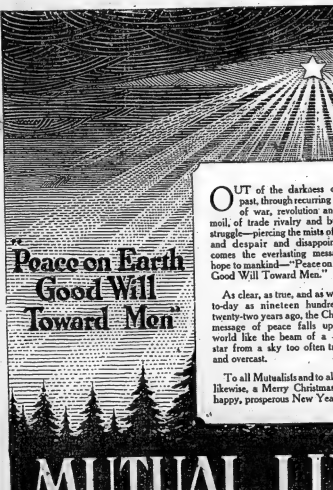

The regular aeroplane services between Great Britain and the Continent continue to be augmented. One of the latest of the new services is between Manchester, London and Amsterdam. The journey from Manchester to London occupies about two hours, and the same machine proceeds after an interval of three quarters of an hour to Amsterdam, which is reached in two and a half hours. Ultimately the service will be extended to Hamburg and Berlin.

A HINT TO HENS

An Ottawa hen laid an egg daily for 107 days. There's a saying in every henhouse that an egg a day keeps the hatchet away.

MORE TO THE POINT

"What has become of the old-fashioned family doctor?" asks an editor. For the matter, what has become of the old-fashioned family.

OUT of the darkness of the past, through recurring storms of war, revolution and turmoil, of trade rivalry and business struggle—piercing the mists of doubt and despair and disappointment, comes the everlasting message of hope to mankind—"Peace on Earth, Good Will Toward Men."

As clear, as true, and as welcome to-day as nineteen hundred and twenty-two years ago, the Christmas message of peace falls upon the world like the beam of a radiant star from a sky too often troubled and overcast.

To all Mutualists and to all others likewise, a Merry Christmas and a happy, prosperous New Year.

EARLY IROQUOIS

INDIAN HISTORY.

Ottawa, Ont., Dec. 23.—That the Iroquois Indians were not pagan, but professed the Protestant religion, was a statement made by F. W. Waugh, of the Departmeiit of the Interior in addressing the members of the Ottawa, Women's Canadian Historical Society here recently.

A Historical and Ethnological Sketch of the Iroquois was the subject of the lecture delivered by Mr. Waugh in an interesting manner in the Victoria Memorial Museum. Mr. Waugh stated that he had lived with the Iroquois for some time, and had made a special study of them. The Iroquois settlements were found mostly in Ontario and New York State, where many of the present generation were making a good living as farmers. In Canada the Iroquis Indians number 10,418 while in the United States there were 8,200.

Mr. Waugh gave an historical sketch of the early Iroquis as found by Jacques Cartier when they were then known to be the most advanced of the many Indian tribes in existence. Items of interest concerning them by many writers were given by Mr. Waugh, who concluded his lecture with a number of lantern slides.

IRISH VOTERS DECEASED, BUT VOTE, JUST THE SAME

Dublin, Dec. 23.—The cemetery population of Enniskillen, County Fermanagh, will suffer a reduced vote in the next election owing to the diligence of the revising registrar who rejected 10 applications for registration made in the names of persons already buried in local grave yards.

Owing to the intense political issues in all parts of Ireland in late years, personation has been terrific. Many good political partisans considered it their duty not to let the fact that supporters of their cause, or causes, were dead interfere with their expressing their opinion at the polls. The cemetery population consequently has been pretty articulate, and many Irishmen who have been in America for the last few years may return to find that they have been voting all the while. The Free State Parliament is now preparing legislation to prevent personation and Ulster officials are revising the voting lists.

WHISKEY RAIDS DECLARED ILLEGAL

Philadelphia, Dec. 23.—Declaring the Constitution in making raids without proper search warrants, Judge that United States prohibition agent violated the Fourth Amendment to Thompson in the United States District Court has dismissed two liquor cases involving several hundred thousand dollars.

Liquor and wines valued at $200,000 were ordered returned to the warehouse of J. L. Lipschutz, where it had been seized by dry agents. Stills, copper coils, malt extract, whisky flavoring and accessories worth many thousands, were ordered returned to the Atlantic Food Products Company.

NOSE-BLEED ALMOST FATAL

Atlantic City, Dec. 23.—The life of Charles Lloyd, 20 years old, of Kinwood, has been saved by blood transfusion; after he had bled from the nose almost uninterruptedly for three days.

The youth was seized with a nasal hemorrhage while at work near his home. On the second day a consultation of physicians was held. The efforts to stop the blood failed, and finally it was decided that blood transfusion was imperative. Lloyd's uncle, Philip Dowty, volunteered for the operation. After the transfusion the bleeding stopped.

The financial editor wishes all market traders extreme peace of mind, quiet fulfilment and freedom from worries, if they are holding commitments over the holidays. The markets yesterday look bullish for the New Year.

DOMENICO'S ALLEYS

Clayton Corsell rolls a new alley record 223. Corsell made a bid for the turkey last night when he broke all previous alley records with a triple score of 223 at Domenico's Alleys last night. Corsell also has the three strings with 849. Barrett, O'Callaghan, Williams are still in the prize winners.

In the ladies competition Mrs. Ralph Gibson set a new record for the ladies with 190 and considering that Mrs. Gibson is only novice at the game it is a score to be proud of and will take a lot of beating.

MAYORALTY CONTEST A TWO SIDED FIGHT

CHRISTMAS EVE SERVICES AT BRIDGE STREET

Methodist Choral Services Were Heard by Large and Appreciative Congregations

The special Christmas music at Bridge St. Church was enjoyed by a very large congregation. The hymn of carols were sung very heartily by the Choir and congregation and the Christmas Cantata "The Adoration" was beautifully rendered by the large choir, the solo parts being taken by Mrs. McKinnon, Mrs. Stobie, Mrs. Carley, Mr. Fred Sprague and Mr. Snelgrove, also the very exacting soprano solo from Handel's Messiah, was sung with much expression and finish, by Mrs. Stobie. The 141st Battery Band, "The 49th Highlanders" was a gem of loveliness as sung by the quartette. The organ, cornet, trombone, flute and violoncello augmented the instrumental accompaniment and played "Three Volunteers" with beautiful blending and taste. Mr. V. C. Hunt, organist directed the services. Rev. Mr. Malott was the Minister in charge, giving a short address suitable to the festival service.

MIDNIGHT MASS AT ST. MICHAEL'S

An usual Christmas was observed at St. Michael's with its accustomed impressiveness, but the attendance at the midnight mass this year surpassed any in previous years. It was found necessary to fill the middle aisle with chairs to accommodate the congregation. Every available space at the rear of the church was also taxed to its capacity.

The high altar, itself a masterpiece of art, was elaborately decorated with chrysanthemums, carnations and colored lights, and the choir loft, also, quite in keeping with the spirit of the ceremony. The Bethlehem scene was also in the sanctuary, thus making more real the origin of the great feast.

The music, as in former years, was of a high order. Gounod's mass was played and the singing was under the capable direction of Mrs. Jas. Grant. The soloists for the evening were Mr. Harold Barrett, who sang "Star of Night," "The Redeemer" by Miss Bawden, "Ave Maria" by Mr. Thos. Barrett. Mr. John Foley also sang. Mr. Young accompanied throughout the mass on the violin, and he also played two selections.

TOWNSHIP ELECTIONS

A Contest in Thurlow for Council Only—Candidates Standing in Rawdon for Both Reeve and Deputy Reeve

There will be an election this year in Thurlow Township for Council only. The veteran Reeve, Mr. N. Vermilyea will again guide the destinies of Thurlow for the ensuing year. Owing to the fact that B. Doxtator, who was nominated to oppose Mr. N. Vermilyea, has retired, there will be no contest for the Reeveship, and consequently Reeve Vermilyea has received his forty fourth acclamation at the hands of Thurlow electors and in addition this will constitute his forty eighth year of municipal service.

For Councillors the following gentlemen have decided to stand: Robert Gadsden, Dan. MacDonald, Wm. Tufts, Stanley Brown, Dorland Clapp, Robert Mitchell, Wesley Deer.

The first three men comprise the retiring 1922 Council. The remaining four are the new nominees and they have been definitely decided to enter the race. Three to elect.

RAWDON TOWNSHIP.

There will be a contest for the Reeveship in Rawdon. Chas. W. Thompson the present incumbent and Geo. A. Bailey, are in the field. For Deputy-Reeve Jas. Fanning and S. M. Coomb are fighting for the office.

In Tyendinaga acclamations were accorded for all offices for 1923.

EXPLANATION FROM MR. MIKEL

Letter Written by Him Explaining His Position

To the Editor:

Dear Sir,—My friends may desire to know why I did not become a Mayoralty candidate when the prospect of my election seemed so bright. My decision was arrived at because I believe it to be in the interest of harmony, and this year the welfare of the City demands harmonious actions, probably more than ever.

The matter of obtaining the I.E. Loyalist Celebration, the Howl Offices of the Canadian National Railways, and the fight with the Fire Insurance Corporation for a reduction of 25 per cent. of our burden for fire insurance premiums involving about $25,000 per year, certainly requires united action.

I announced publicly about four weeks ago and several times since, that I would not be a candidate, but notwithstanding this, many people forced me to run. The two candidates whom I understand will go to the polls, claimed that they had relied on my above mentioned announcement not to be a candidate and might have acted otherwise had I not announced that I would not be a candidate. There also seemed to be a possibility of a fourth candidate. An aspiring citizen who has a personal grouch against me was making himself especially active. While I like a fight, I felt that harmonious action among our citizens this year was an essential that I should sacrifice any personal ambition I might have in the interest of harmony.

I sincerely thank my nominator and seconder and the many friends who desired to have me run and intended to support me. As I am not of a grouchy disposition I hold no ill feelings against those who intended to oppose me.

PEACE IN ERIN AT YULETIDE

Not a Shot Was Fired in Competition on Christmas Day

Dublin, Dec. 25.—Irish church bells have chimed their Christmas peace messages without a shot being fired in competition. The rumored large scale Republican Christmas demonstration did not materialize.

But there was no Christmas leave for the troops. Defense Minister Mulcahy sent a special message to them at their posts.

Republican Bulletin

The Republican Christmas bulletin declares the Free State's first Christmas finds peace and good will unprecedentedly marked by their absence. It points out 13,000 persons are in jail, 50,000 of their dependents are thrown upon the country, hundreds of thousands are out of work, trade and industry are disrupted by civil war and Ireland has been partitioned by her ancient foes.

"This last is worse than all in increasing deadly hatred and bitterness on all sides, dividing brother and sister, father and son. Thank God there will not be another Free State Christmas."

New Year's Prospects

Another Christmas contribution to the general trouble is the decision of the railwaymen not to accept a wage reduction proposed by the companies. This refusal is made after many conferences and work on the roads will cause the first of the year, unless mediation efforts are successful in the meantime.

Complete tie up of transportation already badly disorganized by destruction in the recent guerilla warfare is Ireland's new year prospect.

BABY THROWN INTO MAIL SACK

Cleveland, Dec. 25.—Amid the hustle and bustle of a large crowd of Christmas shoppers in the main postoffice to-day came the cries of a mother for her lost infant.

While the mother was addressing some packages at a table in the lobby she placed the child in a mail sorter basket which she placed under the table. Her packages ready to be mailed, she looked for the baby. It had disappeared.

The basket, with its contents, had been picked up by a postoffice employee and thrown into a mail sack. Before the child as the sack was about to be placed on a mail truck led to its discovery.

WINNIPEG SCENE OF BIG FIRE

Eleven Firms Out of Business When Block is Gutted

Winnipeg, Dec. 25.—Eleven business firms temporarily are out of business and property damage amounting to approximately $250,000 resulted from a fire which swept origin, which completely gutted the Pulford Block, Donald street, early this morning. Practically all firms are covered by insurance. Fireman Henry Aubrey was slightly injured when working on the top floor. A portion of the roof falling on his back. The fire is believed to have originated in the Saratoga Bowling and Billiard Rooms, occupying the second and third floors. Flames enveloped practically the entire front of the upper part of the building when firemen reached the scene shortly after eight o'clock. A second alarm was sent for reinforcements who concentrated on saving the adjoining Dunalda Block and the lower floors of the Pulford Block. Two hours after the first alarm the firemen had the blaze under control, the flames being entirely out by 1 p.m. in the five-hour battle with the blaze the fire fighters were handicapped by a high wind which drove the flames and was partly responsible for the startling spread of the blaze.

TRENTON ROTARY CLUB

The usual bowling luncheon was postponed this week till Thursday evening last, in order that we might commence with the pleas of the Trenton High School and assist in doing honor to Principal Bruce Taylor of Kingston, who was paid a visit by the six o'clock luncheon. In order that others might avail themselves of an opportunity to hear such a distinguished guest. Several of the Rotarians invited their friends. About fifty in all enjoyed a first class luncheon and an A. 1. address by Dr. Bruce Taylor on one of his pet subjects, "Political Economy." Trenton were travelling some to grasp all the splendid thoughts which he gave us in such a short time, but left many good points on which to ponder. Rotarian (Tim) Ireland welcomed our guest to Trenton with a few fitting words, "Monty Parker again sang to the delight of all.

A number of Rotarians were unavoidably absent, but owing to the absence of the usual Tuesday rain, we had an unusually good attendance.

PRETTY DIVORCEE MURDERS FRIEND

Shot Man Who Feard Reconciliation Between Her and Former Husband

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Louisville, Ky., Dec. 26.—"I killed my friend," Mrs. Olive L. Jones, 22 years old, a pretty divorcee, announced when she entered the police headquarters just after daybreak Monday. She was distracted and hysterical. The police are duly discounted her story. Oh; he is dead. I shot him. You will find him out there on the floor. I left him covered with his own overcoat. I know he is dead, he hasn't moved for hours," she declared. This was the first information officials had had that O. L. Black, sales manager for a Louisville automobile company, had been shot to death in Mrs. Jones' apartment Sunday afternoon. Mrs. Jones stated she had lured him in self-defence when Black, according to her account, became angry when he learned first hand of the divorcee's plans of the divorced couple. Black was shot in the back. All night she had kept death watch without having enough courage to summon the police.

TWO PERISH IN FIRE AT BRIGHTON

Brighton, Dec. 25th.—The home of William Firman two miles from this village was totally destroyed by fire on Christmas night between nine and ten o'clock. Mr. Firman and his little daughter were burned to death, Mrs. Firman and her 12 year old son escaped. It is thought that the fire started from a defective furnace connection. The father and daughter went to sleep on a couch in the living room and it is thought that they were overcome by smoke upon being awakened by the flames. The wife and son made heroic efforts to save the father and daughter and with difficulty finally made their way to safety from the burning house. Neighbors hurried to the house but were too late to offer assistance. When the flames subsided the house was reduced and the two charred remains found.

Mr. Firman was about 65 years of age and was a prosperous farmer. He also drove a rural mail route. He had lived all his life in this section of the country.

EVERYDAY LIFE OF ENGLAND'S ROYALTY

Peeps Behind the Scenes—All Members of Family Live Crowded Lives—Princess Mary a Very Human Little Person—Prince of Wales Loves Dancing—Household Breakfasts at 8.00 a.m. Always

New York, Dec. 22.—(By Canadian Press)— Impressions of the home life of the British Royal family, in which king George is described, as an indulgent father and Queen Mary as an efficient manager, have been given New Yorkers recently by Miss Mary Symonds, segenarian, who has taught two generations of feminine royalty to sew.

Miss Symonds is in the United States giving lectures on needlework.

The Prince of Wales is described as a handsome young gentleman who loves to dance.

"They have their pet names for one another and the way they bear toward their families is no different than the love of other brothers and sisters and parents," Miss Symonds says. "There is little formality in their relations to one another, as there are when Queen Victoria reigned. She was a stickler for royal etiquette and her children called their father 'papa' and their mother 'Mother in her presence.'"

Queen Mary is an able woman, to Miss Symonds describes her as having lovely hair, fresh skin and a gracious manner which is friendly without invading familiarity. She is reported to be a splendid cook. Her mind is quick as a steel trap and penetrating.

The Queen has an unusual memory of names and faces and the peculiarities of people," Miss Symond's says, "this is gifted both in diplomacy and in social graces, she knows how to enter tain on the insufficient allowance the King is granted. A strong individuality, a distinguishes her from other women. She makes her own style in clothes a study and has an extensive and fashionable wardrobe, for England wants it queen well dressed."

Princess Mary, as seen through Miss Symond's eyes, is a sweet, simple young woman, whom year deprived of the pastimes other girls enjoy. She has mother's fine skin, untouched by powder paint. A well-bred girl with a distinct nature, and a bit wistful at the good times she has missed, is the Princess. She has found great joy in her romance with Viscount Lascelles was in love with Mary and he might well be, for "the Princess' fresh girlishness stood out clearly from the foolish little flappers and fast, low matrons of British society," the royalty sewing instructress says.

King George and the royal family live crowded lives, with scarcely a minute to themselves. They rise early, try breakfast at 8, and thereafter for all rest of the day every half hour is filled.

Dinner is served at 8.30 and they retire before midnight, and often later, but they are up early the next morning.

Hundreds of letters pour in with the daily mail, and a whole staff of secretaries answer them according to the King's directions.

ABOUT SOILING CROPS

An Easy Way to Supplement Dry Midsummer Pastures.

Alfalfa and Clover, Peas, Oats and Corn Cut Green Make Succulent, Nourishing Food — Weed Seeds Spread by Manure.— What to Plant In a Late Garden.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

When the pastures dry up in June, July, August or Sept-aber, the shrinkage is noted in the milk can and on the ribs of all the live stock. No grass, no milk, no beef, or at least not enough to be really profitable, in condition both undesirable and too frequent in the experience of many farmers.

Live stock to be profitable must be fed liberally. Maintenance rations —dry pastures are nothing more— never make beef or milk, and never can be profitable.

Feeding Soiling Crops Prevents Losses.

The farmer who provides green or succulent food to carry his live stock at full capacity during any period of pasture shortage is not only making his operations profitable, but he is preventing losses that liberal feeding alone can prevent.

The farmer who takes time to study the livestock and provide a summer ration not worry about drought, knowing full well that his stock will be in reserve is standing ready. The man without the summer silo must be at least-boat thing, provide ample green crops that are palatable and nourishing and to do what the pastures fail to do. In a few pounds of green, cured oats and, green clover, green alfalfa or green corn in addition to the dry pasture pickings made for contentment, a full mill pail and thrifty young stock.

How to Carry Over Ten Cows.

If a farmer has ten cows he should figure on the crop from one half acre providing ample green feed to carry them ten days. Peas and oats mixed one and a half bushels of each, and sown as early as possible in the spring, and followed by a second seeding ten days later, will provide for twenty days of an early drought.

An area of alfalfa near the feeding is especially useful during July and August to keep the stock going until the early corn is ready. Sweet clover is more useful as a pasture plant than as a crop plant that may be cut and taken to the feed rack.

Clovers, peas, oats and corn will furnish all the succulent feeds that are necessary providing of course that the stockman undertakes their production in due time each spring. A few additional acres will serve to feed this spring, and if drought occurs you will be forded against seasons.—L. Stevenson, Secretary, Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.

Weed Seed Spread by Manure.

It is quite generally known that weed seeds pass through the digestive tracts of animals and still remain viable. The manure will contain these seeds, and the result is that a field may become infested with weed plants, some of a very noxious character. In spite of this fact, grocers' farms are not generally observed in the feeding of screenings which contain seeds of noxious weeds.

As a result of experiments at the Minnesota Agricultural Experiment Station, it was found that in feeding certain kinds of seeds to cows the germination may even be increased after having passed through the digestive tract. Curled dock, a very common farm weed, germinated only four per cent. in its natural condition. A quantity of this seed was fed to a cow and 100 such seeds were placed in a cemistator. Ninety-eight out of the one hundred grew. The same is true in some extent of lambs' quarters, often known as pig weed. The seed of this weed germinated 43 per cent. before feeding, 82 per cent. after feeding. The germination of quack grass examined was not much affected, as a germination of 85 per cent. was secured before feeding, and 80 per cent. after feeding. The viability of Canada thistle seed was decreased to some extent, but enough seed remained to infest a field.

In view of the foregoing figures, he farmer should be very careful in the use of screenings, which should either be ground to the very finest possible condition, or to crush all weed seeds, or else they should be fed to such animals as sheep, which grind up and thoroughly destroy the ordinary weed seed.

What to Plant In Late Garden.

Carrots, beets and celery for winter use may be planted in the latter part of June.

Golden bantam corn to keep up the supply for late summer use.

Early string beans and peas to provide substitutes for meat.

Fresh and crisp vegetables as the means of saving canned products for winter use.

Seed sown in mid summer should be planted in freshly stirred soil and somewhat deeper than in spring, and rolled over the seed should be "firmed" more carefully than usual.

The Home Vegetable Garden.

The home vegetable garden should be a family interest with the members of the family who are able to do so should take part in its cultivation. There is no better form of outdoor exercise than market gardening in the hour's garden, and the habit of recreational will give greater returns for the time

Mine Shafts.

In the cementation process of sinking mine shafts through water-bearing gravels, holes are first drilled in a circle around the proposed location of the shaft. Cement and water are injected into the holes with a force pump. The cement spreads through the loose ground, and on setting forms a water-tight wall, inside of which the shaft can be sunk without difficulty.

SEVEN DETROIT PRISONERS ESCAPE

Awaiting Transfer to Various Institutions to Serve Long Sentences

Detroit, Dec. 24—Seven of the most desperate criminals confined in Wayne County Jail, most of whom were awaiting transfer to different State penal institutions, to which the yhad been sentenced for terms varying from 20 to 30 years, escaped from that institution at 6 o'clock Sunday morning and are still at liberty. In effecting their get-away the prisoners set upon and beat two prison guards, William Akerman and Deputy Sheriff Dziecko, who were on duty at tie time, using brooms and mop-handles as weapons. After the guards had been pounded into submission the seven men unlocked the heavy steel door of the corridor and walked into the street, where they scattered in all directions. The key for the door was hanging above the jailer's desk in the office, and not more than a minute elapsed from the time the men entered down the stairs into the jail office before they were at liberty. The delivery is believed to have been effected by collusion on the part of some prison guards who were not on duty at the time."

MUSIC and DRAMA

KATHERINE MACDONALD HAS LIVE ROLE AS INFIDEL

Charles Legge fashioned better than he imagined when he wrote "The Infidel" for Katherine MacDonald. In some of her previous screen offerings Miss MacDonald has not had many opportunities to prove that, as an actress, she is capable of almost any demands that may be made upon her, but in "The Infidel," which is the First National attraction at The Griffin's this week, up to Wednesday she has light comedy moments, strong, sincere, dramatic scenes that prove her absolute mastery of the technique of screen acting, while toward the end of the thrilling and romantic story of the South Seas the star shows that even in melodrama she is capable of powerful and impressive characterization.

Katherine MacDonald is seen in the role of Lola Dalntry, a young girl who has been brought up to hate missionaries, the Gospel of God and everything of a religious character. Chance takes her to a South Sea isle, with its missionaries and native life, and in the thrilling experiences which follow and culminate in a happy romance, she undergoes a complete change in her ideals. The South Sea settings are picturesque and the story, with which the action, including a typhoon and an island uprising, which is quelled by the U.S. marines.

An excellent supporting cast appears with Miss MacDonald, whose leading man is Bertram Ellis. Others in the cast are Joseph Dowling, Boris Karloff, Melbourne MacDowell, Otis Oaks, Gladys Leonard, Lydia Yeamans Titus, Barbara Tennant and Charles Force.

"The Infidel" reveals fine direction in the hands of James Young.

A very funny Larry Semon comedy called "A Day at Kings," with Jack Mulhall in a gripping Jack London Sea story "Sings of the Lucky Shire Queen" were also tendered and proved very entertaining.

"HER LORD AN DMASTER" MAKES MARKED IMPRESSION UPON LARGE AUDIENCE

"Her Lord and Master" a photo play made from the famous comedy-drama by Martha Morton, as an Allen Joyce Vitagraph production was the chief attraction at the Regent Theatre, last night. It made a marked impression upon a large audience, fulfilling every possible promise made in advance notices of the sensational style features.

The Martha Morton masterpiece in itself made a strong drawing card, and the cast, headed by Alice Joyce, the radiant young star, in the stellar role, intensified the interest.

Alice Joyce was altogether lovely in the role of Indiana Stillwater, the exuberant and rather headstrong only daughter of an American railroad magnate, and later as the subdued and demure wife of an English viscount. The single flash of rebellion, a flaring up of the former untamed spirit of the American girl of the west, held the audience breathless as the dramatic consequences seemed to become more and more inevitable.

Holmes E. Herbert, in the role of the Rt. Hon. Thurston Ralph, Viscount Canning, gave an impressive performance. Walter McEwan was excellent as Lord Stafford, as also were Frank Sheridan and Marie Shotwell as Mr. and Mrs. Pratt-Stillwater. Two entertaining comedies, and a new chapter of the "Hurricane Chase" serial were also exhibited.

DE WOLF HOPPER HERE THURSDAY IN "THE MIKADO"

The presentation of a light opera repertoire is a colossal undertaking. A tour of one more particularly a piece happens to be musical is no easy matter but when five different plays are presented, the difficulty is naturally multiplied as many times. De Wolf Hopper and the Gilbert and Sullivan comic opera company presents five light comedy classics: "The Mikado"; "Pirates of Penzance"; "H.M.S. Pinafore"; "Yeoman of the Guard", and "Iolanthe" Each one is presented with individuality and to the minutest detail the truthfulness of this statement is guaranteed by the fact that every member of each of the five productions, even to a pin, is carried by the company and the management provides itself that not alone has he assembled the greatest cast of players ever brought together for the purpose of entertaining but that each piece is the last word in scenic and costumic art. Two sixty-foot baggage cars are necessary for the transportation of these effects and the staff of stage mechanics, numbering ten, is necessary to properly assemble the scenery and effects. Probably never before in the history of theatricals have so thoroughly equipped or so expensive an organization been taken on the road. Early in February this company in its entirety will begin an indefinite engagement in New York.

De Wolf Hopper's company is to appear here at Griffin's this Thursday night, December 28th in the historic opera ever written "The Mikado".

The company numbering 50 has many well known members, a chorus of 30 and a special orchestra.

JUMPS 210 FEET INTO TORONTO BAY

Morris "Steamer" Moffatt, who has been residing in Galt for a number of years, although he was born in Toronto, on Saturday broke the world's broad jump motorcycle record when he landed 210 feet out into the Bay at the Western Gap, on Saturday afternoon, while going at the rate of seventy miles an hour on his motorcycle.

A year ago, "Steamer" made 105 feet at Saginaw, when he jumped his machine over a boat into the Saginaw River, thus breaking the previous record of 67 feet.

Saturday his record-smashing feat was, according to Moffatt last night, more of a fluke than anything else. The takeoff was twenty-four feet long, with a four-feet elevation on the one end. The take-off consisted of two-inch spruce planks, and these nearly proved his undoing, although they helped him increase his own record. When the machine, travelling seventy miles an hour, hit these planks, it tore right into them, with the result that the machine, in place of making a backward dive, did a perfect nose dive. This Moffatt didn't expect, and he was thrown back slightly, although he was arrested yesterday in apparently good condition. Last Summer, at the motorcycle races, Moffatt only lost one race in sixteen.

TORONTO LEAFS FIRST GAME ON APRIL 6TH

Cleveland, Dec. 25.—The Toronto International baseball team will meet the Cleveland Indians in the American League, in an exhibition game on April 6 at Atlantic City, according to a schedule issued tonight. After breaking camp at Lakeland, Fla., where the Indians are to train, they will play eighteen exhibition games between March 15 and April 15. Twelve of these will be with the National League teams training in Florida.

TORONTO GLOBE SAYS

Belleville intermediates have offered to come to Toronto and play an exhibition game in the eastern city.

The Auto Lee seniors will play in Cleveland this week.

BIG BOXING BOUT IN TORONTO

Benny Gould Confident of Defeating Junior Feather Champion Tonight

This has been a bad year for champions in every line of sport, but more particularly in the boxing game, Johnny Buff, Jack Britton, Gene Tunney and George Carpentier having been relieved of their titles. Maybe another Wolfe, of Cleveland, will lose his crown tonight. The junior featherweight kingmonarch of the squared circle, Jack who is here to box Benny Gould, tightly considered one of Canada's best 122-pounders, does not think so, but neither did Buff when he met Joe Lynch, or Britton when he fought Walker, or Tunney when he game battle to Harry Greb, or Carpentier when he made the match with Siki. Gould is not a false alarm. He has done all that he has been asked to do in the few years that he has been in the ring, and though Jack Wolfe is a heap of more class than any of the boys that he has ever contested against, he is not worrying over the outcome.

GOULD CONFIDENT.

Gould says that, win or lose, he will be on his feet at the expiration of the ten rounds at the Coliseum tonight, and that if there is anything in the axiom that youth must be served he will not be the underdog. Wolfe is the veteran route. Most of his winning bouts have been at fifteen rounds. Gould, with his speed and strength, may get the drop on him early and hold his advantage to the end. His advisers intend sending him right at the veteran, and whether the contest goes four rounds or ten, it will be replete with action. Wolfe is down to weight, and Gould last night was within an ounce or so of the required poundage—122 pounds.

"SCRAPPER" COMES TO KINGSTON

Kingston, Dec. 22.—It is announced at the Kingston Yacht Club that Principal R. Bruce Taylor, of Queen's university, has purchased the Scrapper from Major Windeyer, Toronto, and this fast vessel will be added to the fleet of the Kingston club.

Principal Taylor will use his boat in the elimination trials to decide the boat to challenge for the George cup, now held by the Cornell Yacht club, Watertown, N.Y. The Scrapper will be brought to Kingston early in the spring.

THE GLOBE SAYS

Len Crooks is making good as goalkeeper with the Belleville intermediates. He starred with the Bolce outfielders. He starred in the 2 to 1 victory over the Smith's Falls team of the Ottawa Valley League. Belleville expects to go a long way in the O.H. A race. Last season they were right up with the front runners.

WILSON'S "The National Smoke"

BACHELOR

Still the most for the money

10c.

ANDREW WILSON & CO. TORONTO MONTREAL

Quebec, Dec. 23.—Fire and police officials were not inclined to give much credence to the arson theory as the cause of the fire at the basilica. Fire Marshal Leclerc said he did not believe that it was a case of arson. He had investigated recent fires in the district of Quebec and elsewhere, and in all cases discovered they were due to the usual causes.

Within the last few months, five churches have been destroyed by fire in the province of Quebec, St. Felix de Valois, Granville, St. Anne de Beaupre and Turriffe, and finally the basilica. Mr. Leclerc does not think this shows any increase over previous years.

A few days ago, Rev. Canon Beaulieu, on the advice of his Eminence Cardinal Begin, forwarded a circular letter to the parish priests of the diocese, asking them to take all means of protecting the sacred buildings. It is claimed that this was not done on account of sinister rumors, but it was a new precaution.

Chief Gaudias Trudel was inclined to believe that the fire was due to natural causes.

"I do not want to make any statement on a matter which has not yet been investigated, but I believe that many of the rumors are false. However, we will take all means of clearing the case, and already my men are investigating all clues."

DAILY QUOTATION STOCK AND BOND MARKETS

Liners.

Christmas Day all stock exchanges were closed.

On Saturday the grain markets were of a holiday nature.

Chicago Grain Market.

Chicago, Dec. 23.—With practically the cables in from abroad, due to the holiday, and with little or no pressure of any great business in sight, the grain trade was mainly of a holiday character here. A private report from the United Kingdom took a bullish view of the situation there and said a good demand was in sight for North American wheat for December-January shipment. This, however, had little effect on the market at the start here. There was some general profit taking of wheat in evidence during the early dealings, but the trade was without a guide.

Trade was not large, a majority of the traders looking on and waiting for the close. The session which was led from unchanged figures to 3c lower, with May $1.34½ to $1.34¾, and July, $1.32½ to $1.32¾, was followed by further slight declines all around.

Subsequently the wheat market relied on a report that Greece had bought 1,500,000 bushels of Manitoba wheat on overnight offerings from the seaboard, but there was a lack of aggressive buying and the market again eased off and closed dull with values showing a net loss of ½c to 1½c, and with May $1.34¼ to $1.34¾, and July, $1.32½ to $1.32¾.

Prospects for large receipts today had some effect on the corn market today. After opening unchanged to ½c down, with May 72½c to 72¾c, the corn market underwent a further setback.

Corn showed little power to rally, the market being depressed most of the session. The close was easy at losses varying from a shade to 2c.

with May, 71¾c to 72c.

Oats started unchanged to ½c off, with May, 45¾c to 45¾c, and after declining a little, underwent a slight reaction.

Cash prices closed: Wheat, No. 2 red, $1.35; No. 1 hard, $1.37½. Corn, No. 2 mixed, 73½c; No. 2 yellow, 73½c to 74½c. Oats, No. 2 white, 45½c to 46½c; No. 3 white, 45½c to 46½c. Rye, No. 2, 96½c. Barley, 61c to 74c.

Future prices closed:

RUBLES ROW CHEAPER

Moscow, Dec. 23.—The Russian ruble continues constantly to decline, and as a result the price of every commodity in Russia has increased.

Since November 1, the prices on food have gone up 72 per cent, and on clothing and other wearing apparel 60 per cent, while wood, which is extensively used in Russia as fuel, has advanced more than a hundred per cent. During the same period the rate of exchange has gone up only 13 per cent. Last a November the dollar brought 2,500,000 rubles.

WAGGON TONGUE PIERCES WINDSHIELD

Woodstock, Ont., Dec. 24.—A Christmas tragedy occurred about 5.30 p.m. last evening, when Cecil Brownlee, of Barrie, was fatally injured when his car ran into a team of horses and a waggon about one mile east of the city. Brownlee, with his wife, was on his way to London to spend the Christmas week-end with his wife's father, William Kidner, 604 York Street. There was a heavy fog at the time and apparently he did not see the waggon coming along. When the crash came the two horses spread out to either side and the tongue of the waggon crashed through the windshield and struck Brownlee, who was driving. Herbert Zinn, of Innerkip, who was driving the team, at once summoned assistance and Brownlee was rushed to the Woodstock General Hospital. Dr. Krupp was called, and it was found that there was a fracture at the base of the skull. He never regained consciousness, and passed away at 6.45 p.m. Mrs. Brownlee was uninjured, and there was no damages to the horses. The car was badly smashed.

Mr. Zinn, in giving details of how the accident occurred, said he was driving east, and turned out to pass a buggy on the road. He saw the car lights ahead, but misjudged the distance, and thought he had time to get back on his own side of the road in time. Before he could do so, however, the crash came.

CHEMISTRY REVOLUTIONIZING DETECTION OF CRIME

Paris, Dec. 25.—A chain of recent years has become the best known detective in France. Edmond Bayle is a small, dark, quiet man; he works in a modern equipped laboratory in the Palais de Justice; he is feared by criminals of all classes, and his ultimate fame promises to surpass that of Alphonse Bertillon, the French finger print expert who died in 914.

Dr. Bayle is chief of the technical Bureau of the Paris Police Department. Here all the criminal information of the Republic is concentrated, collected, and studied. From this bureau the expert chemist and physicist gives directions in the field of criminal detection. So successful has he been that the ignorant criminal classes have come to regard him as a wizard. In Black Magic. His unique methods have been studied by the police department of New York City. Dr. Bayle rarely gives much attention to the personality of criminals or their particular psychology. He works rather with material things. His workshops consist of many rooms and passageways, equipped with all the paraphernalia of a big industrial laboratory, and includes a photograph gallery. He has spectroscopes, microscopes and X-ray machines by the dozen, each fitted for a special purpose such as examining blood spots, forged documents, counterfeit money, powder burned clothes, and the wreckage that is picked up on a criminal trail.

Dr. Bayle's study is lined with books on science, and catalogue records of his work. In the records of his bureau there are registered no less than eight million names of persons involved in crimes, past and present.

"The detection of crime today is something very different from the popular conception," said Dr. Bayle to The Associated Press correspondent. "The Sherlock Holmes and Arsene Lupin stories of great criminals and their feats are no doubt most entertaining, but that is all I can say for them. From my point of view there is no crime that cannot be detected, that does not leave its traces behind, at least theoretically. For one thing criminals, as a rule, are not very intelligent. The uneducated man usually commits crimes of passion and brutality; the educated man rarely to fraud.

"My methods astound the ignorant criminals, and they have come to fear me when I enter the courts. The so-called intelligent professional criminals seem to have begun to try to thwart me in a small way. Nowadays they endeavor, by wearing gloves, not to leave fingerprints behind, but we have reached the point where their finger prints through gloves are perverted.

"Crime is really not very mysterious. The curious point to me is that the crimes which interest me most do not interest the public.

"There has been very great progress made in the detection of crime during the past six or eight years, particularly through the application of chemistry and photography to it.

"In my opinion we are not yet in sight of a crime-less civilization. Crime is a part of human nature. Much of it is spontaneous. The fear of detection and punishment will not prevent it.

"I would like to point out that part of our endeavor has been to help to protect innocence, and prevent the miscarriage of justice. Science does not seek to convict. It looks for the truth, no more and no less.

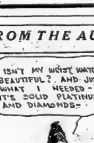

"During the war a spy case, that of a certain Vigo, alias Allureyds, attracted much public attention. The man was found dead there. The only evidence was two spots on his shoe laces. By comparative analysis of these, one is found to be mud and the other paint on his bed, and I was able to conclude he had leaned himself and thus clear the jailers of guilt.

"Another case: during the war a young captain wrote his mother the night before a battle in which he was killed. A postscript to the letter revoked a former will in favor of his wife. By analysis of the ink and the handwriting in this postscript, it was shown that the mother had forged his signature. She confessed it, thought her confession added nothing to the value of the proof.

"We are beginning to eliminate eyewitness proof in crime. We prefer our own, we prefer witnesses distrust the facts without sometimes wishing to. Science cannot lie."

HOW TO SLEEP ON A BARE FLOOR

IT is more a matter of SLEEP, than of bed, is it not?

Some people can't do anything up, standing up, even when walking.

Many people can't get the softest of downy beds, and all of us suffer occasionally from nervousness, wearying, tiring wakefulness at night.

There is always a reason for sleeplessness. Usually it is "over" something, "over tired," or "over down" on the job, congested bowels, or indigestion.

Then, just before retiring, take Beecham's Pills. They soothe an uneasy stomach, encourage the organs of digestion and elimination to natural activity, and ensure restful sleep no matter what!

UNITY AND STRENGTH

When Sir Joseph Flavelle addressed the local Rotarians about two weeks ago he dwelt on the "group spirit among boys" and the developments as shown in the grown-up boys in the form of labor unions, trusts, and other similar organizations. The theme is a big one, and is capable of producing material for many long discussions. It is true that we are all, consciously or unconsciously, more or less victims of the habit or practice or custom, whatever it is chosen to term it. Labor unions are established to get conditions, short hours, minimum wages, and many other concessions. Manufacturers seek high tariffs, want governments to provide foreign markets for surplus goods; the farmers want fixed prices for wheat, and so on. Nearly every class or occupation want the government to own, control, operate, subsidize or legislate specially for their particular interests. Governments are looked upon as the great panacea for all classes, and are expected to wave the magic wand, and presto!—troubles disappear!

Let us diverge for a moment into the manufacturing field. The tendency of the day is to consolidate factories, standardize the output and to get higher production. Factories employing thousands of hands are common. The employees in these factories are not skilled craftsmen, but are the "all-around" men. Ninety-five per cent. of them are "skilled operators" only. They do the same thing, mechanically, every day, over and over again. Many do not know what they do for, or to, them, and hundreds of them have only a vague idea of what they are making. The firm pays a piece-work wage and they only live to turn out as many articles as possible in a given number of hours. They have no pride in their work, they are only a part of a machine. The company maintains a welfare department, and the Workingmen's Compensation Act is functioning, and when it they are laid up from illness or an accident, well and it will be well. Why should the workmen worry?

Governments, labor unions, trusts, large corporations operating elaborate welfare departments, the Workingmen's Compensation Act, unemployment doles, and such other similar factors, may have all been created from the highest motives, but they are shortcutting "INITIATIVE" and "INDIVIDUALITY." They teach a man that the world owes him a living and he does not have to work very hard to get the aforesaid living. There is too much organization all around us, too much government. There are too few people with vision and courage to launch out for themselves and hew their own way. No longer does the average young man battle with the world for a living. To get a living to-day the young man only has a little discussion with the world, and if he can blunt a little, he gets that living. But for all this public assistance and service, for all this direct and indirect subsidizing, we are now paying the piper, in taxes and a famine of strong men. That is to say that we have heavy taxes and we have not the big men today that we had fifty years ago. Nor will we have many such as Lord Mountstephen, R. B. Angus, Lord Strathcona, Sir John Macdonald, John Bertram, Timothy Eaton, and hundreds of others, if we continue to nurse our population along with public legislation, assistance, luxuries, nerve-stimulating amusements of the lighter vein, etc. There is no choice between the old and the new. The old days produced better men, and they had lots of recreation, too. The question is already serious. In ten or twenty years we will have only a handful of molders, machinists, carpenters, etc. Other craftsmen are rapidly passing. The man who thinks for himself is passing. So many lines of endeavor. There is no dearth of men living parasitic lives, trying to obtain a middleman's profit on all deals with which they have had a bowing acquaintance.

The solution is just what Sir Joseph said it was: WORK—and the sooner everyone realizes that, the better for the nation.

Thus, in the kind of unity we are developing, a real strength, or is it to be our undoing eventually?

A REMARKABLE MUNICIPAL RECORD

It is astonishingly doubtful if a parallel occurs to-day in the municipal life of Canada, or, for that matter, in any country, equalling the situation which is municipally existent in the Township of Thurlow, in this County, when, at the recent nominations, Mr. Nathaniel Vermilyea was accorded an acclamation to the Reeveship of the Township for the year 1923. Reeve Vermilyea has enjoyed an unimpeded route to the Reeve's chair for the long period of forty-four years, and for a span of forty-eight years has been in charge of a municipal electorate office in Thurlow Township.

Such an extraordinary tenure, and particularly such an acclamatory one, might well be explained and accompanied by at least a hint of the facts. Mr. Vermilyea, in becoming Township Reeve, year after year throughout these many seasons, has not been a victim of any mischance, that might have happened to any man, but his internal politics, demonstrating him at all times to be a close student and faithful exponent of Township business, his virility, ingenuity and elasticity, coupled with the reformation and schooling through about under his guiding hand, has [illegible] out the years, thoroughly convinced the electors of [illegible] Township of a most capable stewardship and by their votes for him and confidence in him, the public has known them.

It is an undeniable fact, that, although Reeve Vermilyees does not [illegible] to eye politically with this journal (and we [illegible] is the see the light), his rigid policy in municipal affairs has always been "live and let live," and in Thurlow Township there has been total political abstinence for the common good. Sometimes it is expedient that one man should be sacrificed for his group and sometimes Christmas charity comes too high, but this is not decidedly not the case in Thurlow, where a veteran Reeve, a man of deep convictions, of sincere and earnest character, has again been chosen by the renewed allegiance of the electors to preside over the deliberations of the Council for another year.

In these pre-Christmas days of ringing Christmas proclamations, it is not too much for The Intelligencer to not only express its own sentiments, but those of the citizens, in extending hearty congratulations to Mr. Vermilyea, relative this this wonderful municipal record he enjoys, and to express the wish that he may be spared to "carry on" abundantly well at least the half-century mark of township service is reached—a civic labor that he loves so well.

The new President of Poland is named Wojciechowski. Why did they shoot his predecessor, Narutowicz?

The British, Australian and New Zealand elections, coming almost at the same time, are further proofs that peace is hard on war Governments.

Another stoppage of coal mining in the United States is promised for the spring. The plan seems to keep people shivering all winter for want of coal and shivering all summer with apprehension over a shortage in the winter.

Some years ago Sir Adam Beck was shouting that every railway, every washing machine in Ontario should be operated by electricity. Now, when it was proposed that part of the Canadian National Railways should be electrified he acts as if he would not fill the order for electricity.

o o o

With coal shipments to Canada gradually easing off it would seem about time for the Ottawa Government to wake up from its lethargy and start in securing authoritative information as regards the development of Canada's hard coal resources.

The trotting horse has now lost his peculiar ability to attract men with curious names. Oliver Wendell Holmes used to delight in the name Bud Doble. We note now that the president of the National Trotting Horse Association is Mr. Reece Blizzard.

HERE AND THERE

LIFE'S MYSTERIES.

On a night I sent my soul afar
To penetrate life's mysteries;
It was midnight on the ocean,
No light was there;
But moaning surge, dark wreaths,
And vanished a star
Shone with a cold and glittering light,
Till wandering spirits of the night
Spread over it their sable robes
And quenched its sight. . . .

Shuddered I turned my eyes,
No light was there!
Upon the mountain tops and down the valley
Swept the night wind,
Moaning as a soul in pain that cries.
Hold back the clouds that veil the light!
So shall we learn the meaning
Of Life's mysteries!
Eastward I turned my tired eyes,
No light was there!
Cold and chill was the gray dawn!
O God, I cried, is there no light?
Somewhere beyond the darkness
Is the red morn!

Beneath that cold and gloomy pall there lies
A glint of opal-tinted skies,
Herald of day break!
Patience, unquiet heart,
At dawning thou shalt see
When tears and pain depart,
What, was life's mystery! . . .

PRESS OPINIONS

ROBBING PETER TO PAY PAUL

(Lindsay Daily Post).

The information revealed regarding the operation of the Central Ontario Power System as a result of the evidence given in report of Mr. Sanderson, K.C., Commissioner for the Gregory Commission, only tends to confirm the suspicions existing in the minds of many regarding the operation of this system.

The report shows that there have been huge deficits in the system and also that in some municipalities (including Lindsay) large profits have been earned. These have been used to wipe out deficits in other municipalities.

In the retailing of electric power in Lindsay from March 1916 to October 31, 1921, a profit of $321,000 is reported. Power users have been paying a high rate locally, and notwithstanding numerous protests, the Commission is able to show a handsome surplus from its operations in Lindsay which is not only creditable to the Hydro-Electric Commission and positively unfair insofar as the treatment of the local consumer is concerned. If this municipality were to exercise the right to take over the Hydro plant the Lindsay rate would appear to be the proper course) and the same course was followed by other municipalities, large sums are represented by "intangibles" would have to be borne by the government. This is only fair and proper.

RUSSIA'S BLOODY RECORD

(Lindsay Daily Post)

A despatch published a few days ago saying that official statistics received in U.S. show that in the four years from 1917 to 1921 the Soviet Government put 1,766,148 persons to death provokes incredulity. To make such a record stand, a week would have been compelled to kill 1,500 people a day, which, making but fair allowance for meals and, most for sleep, would mean one dead Russian for working minute. Moreover, the figures which is given with exactness down to the last unit implies that it came directly from the Soviet record keepers. Would they give any outsider such information? Perhaps they would, for there is no accounting for Bolshevism, but it seems doubtful. On the other hand it is certain that the government at Moscow set out to establish itself by throwing terror into the heart of every opponent, and it made no concealment of the facts. Hence, a number of them in order that all of those who disbelieved in the gospel of Bolshevism might believe. Hence the number of the slain under that bloody defence of communism is precisely that which is now stated.

This is the "ideal" conditions which some Canadian Reds in the labor organizations would like to see introduced in this country.

SHOULD REST IN WINTER

(Kitchener-Waterloo Daily Record)

We defy winter, yet during it are conscious of repeated attacks of lassitude and "out of sorts" feelings and moods that we cannot understand. All these are our inheritance of the ages when Tennyson, "in a time of sitting—the time of severest elimination. The rest and sleep of winter are often the necessary conditions of the vigor or another spring, but in a deeper way it is through the sitting, sodering, pruning or elimination of ages of winters that there has been putting after spring of progressive evolution. It would be perfectly natural for us to toil in summer and autumn, accumulating surplus food, fuel, clothing and shelter for winter. Then, from October to April we could ourselves at ease, playing, visiting, thinking, with occasional sports such as fishing through the ice or hunting. Would you prefer that kind of life?

Wit and Humor

WAS NOT DISCOVERED

A lecturer once, told a story of an engagement he had made to deliver a discourse in one of the towns of the West on the subject of the "Beacon Lights of Civilization." "I reached the place," he said, "a little behind time and went directly to the hall. A large audience had assembled. I was introduced by the president of the literary society under whose auspices I was to appear, and laying my manuscript on the desk before me I opened it and waited a moment for the applause to subside. Imagine my horror when I found that I had brought along the wrong lecture—one on the 'Wonders of Modern Electrical Science.' 'What did you do?' asked one of the group. "I went right ahead," he replied. "The audience didn't know the difference."

LAUSANNE JEALOUS OF RUMP CONVENTIONS

Lausanne, Dec. 23.—In ancient times Lausanne was a series of vine yards scattered along t he jagged foothills overlooking Lake Leman. The vineyards have given way to immense resort hotels and boarding schools, among which winding roads lie pike loop, and cog-railway afford transportation to folks who are in a hurry.

Delegates to the Lausanne conference have discovered that whenever one wants to go anywhere in Lausanne, one starts in the opposite direction and is liable to recross his path several times before arriving at his destination. There is no such thing as a straight street line in Lausanne. Things which are not curved are angular. Even the bridges which span the numerous ravines are seldom straight. Streets, churches, houses and parks are scattered over the irregular heights in a helter-skelter manner which gives the city great charm, but is maddening to newspaper correspondents and delegates who lack the mountain climbing ability of a chamois and find it necessary to visit the scattered delegations and conference centers.

Lausanne's chief business center is located about half way up the mountainside on the shores of Geneva where the opening session of the conference was held. The Turkish and French delegations have taken the Lac Hotel, which is on the same level with the Casino. Also the main telegraph office is on this level. But the Americans, British and Italians, live on the lake shore, near the Hotel du Chateau, where the meetings of commissions are held. This is probably half a mile from the Casino, as the crow flies, but the winding roadways run the taxicab meters up to two miles, and no stranger can find his way without a guide. The Greek, Russian, Bulgarian and other minor delegations are scattered about at different levels between the heart of the city and the shoreline. Many of their hotels are far from cog-railways and tramlines. Consequently Alpine stocks and hobnailed boots are in great demand among newspapermen who must keep in touch with the far-flung delegations.

New delegations are being discovered daily in secluded hotels tucked into mountain groves at reports miles from Lausanne. Montreux, Very and other resort towns along the lakeshore within 20 miles of Lausanne are the seats of all sorts of would-be delegations from Egypt, Arabia, Mesopotamia and other distant lands which are holding rump conventions and forwarding protests to the general secretariat which never get publicity.

Lausanne is in great dread of all these rival meetings. There is constant fear that some other point on the lake may manage to capture a treaty signing, and rob Lausanne of the right to attach its name to whatever documents may be agreed upon in the conference. Rapollo's capture of the treaty between the Germans and the Russians at Genoa is fresh in the mind of the loyal citizens of Lausanne.

ARE THEY ALL INSURED IN ITS FAVOR?

Woman's Sphere

FURNISHING AN EXTRA ROOM

The furnishings of the extra room need not be expensive to be attractive. It is the good judgment with which the articles are selected which makes the room. The woman who finds an extra room in her house need not hesitate to purchase furnishings for it because of an uncertainty of moving to smaller quarters where the furniture may not be usable.

A cozy bedroom, which was set being used by the family, was fitted up into a charming den, which served as a guest room as well when out-of-town guests came to visit. The room was decorated in this way because the furnishings could be used in almost any part of the home, whereas a distinct bedroom set would require a special room for it should the family make a change in residence.

Select your furnishings of the Colonial variety if you would use them later in a room where other periods are shown. Colonial furnishings have a way of forming charming lits about an otherwise unsightly room. Mahogany is always in good taste. It blends with any other kind of wood and doesn't wear. Woven or braided rag rugs are decidedly inexpensive. They add just the correct finishing touch to the small room.

The den that would be a bed-room at will may be furnished in this way.

A divan of mahogany may be used as an article of importance. It serves as a lounge for the den and may be converted into a sleeping couch for the guest room. In place of the regulation dressing table the clever woman who entertained the den-bedroom set selected a small mahogany secretary desk. In this she kept her magazines and papers. But there was room enough on two of the small interior drawers for the conveniences of the dressing table, such as comb and brush, powder and cotton puffs, manicure instruments and fresh soap.

The floor was covered by two oval rag rugs in keeping with the Colonial atmosphere of the other furnishings. The windows were curtained with inexpensive homespun, and edged a scalloped border of red gingham. A cloth cover was made of this same material and matched a small scarf that was kept in the lower drawer of the mahogany secretary desk. And spread on its open front when the desk was converted into the temporary dressing table.

In this way there was no extravagant investment made for the guest room furnishings. Yet the room was cozy and convenient and could be used by members of the entire family for a reading or writing nook.

CHRISTMAS SONG

My song shall be of peace,
The spotless Lamb of God;
'Twas He who did redeem us,
And bring us with His blood.
The Lord of life and glory
Came from His throne above,
Then joy to sing the story
Of His redeeming love.

He saw our lost condition
And left His throne above
To purchase our Salvation,
So wondrous was His love;
The Lord of earth and heaven
Whose glory fills the sky
That we might be forgiven,
Came down to earth to die.

What infinite compassion
That God's beloved Son
Should die for man's transgression,
For him that I had done!
I see Him suffering, bleeding,
Expiring on the cross for me,
And now He's interceding
Above for you and me.

No other name but Jesus
Can calm the troubled breast;
No other name but Jesus
Can give the conscience rest;
Remorse all condemnation,
Before His name must flee,
And gives a consolation
That nothing can destroy.

O Jesus, precious Saviour,
Thou who hast died for me,
And I shall be Thine,
And live henceforth for Thee.
And when I've crossed death's river,
And joined the choir above,
With them I'll sing forever
Of Jesus and His love.

The men were thirsty for something stronger than water at that moment, and while the doctor admitted that some of them had been unfortunately successful in finding it. Meanwhile, two men were dispatched to the ship's galley to get some hot coffee. Then also was sent word to the ministrations of his church at this supreme crisis of his life.

Ayrsworth made a very effort to avail by wishes, but the difficulties were great and delay inevitable.

There were a few who after chilled the young officer for taking death to a man of a n alien church when so many men of his own faith and country were left to face the future unattended and uncared for.

"But he is our guest!" Ayrsworth objected, "and it entailed no disloyalty to war, so to speak. He has a right to die in his own way; and if, like a child in the dark, he asks for someone who understands what he requires, it would be rank discourtesy to deny him his wish."

"Oh, let him finish his life as he pleases," chimed in half a dozen voices at once, with good-natured indifference, "and get him what he asks for if it's in any way possible!"

"He is a man old bird," said a newcomer, 'if it's the old person you are speaking of: one of the men brought in in the last of the rescue. He cannot have left in perfect safety if he had cared to do so, but he absolutely refused and attended to the wants of the dying through the hottest part of the battle, until the flooring gave way from fire and smoke, his obedience inquickened in some measure by the whispered word of a comrade that the man was mined at any moment an explosion might dispose in a summary fashion of both life and hopes of pleasure. He was mined at any moment this earth once for all. It was not a pleasant thought.

But be that as it may, Father Francis —for such it transpired was the old man's name—was carried in safety in a semi-comatose condition within the British lines.

With the horrors of the night that followed we are not concerned here, nor yet with the many redeeming acts of humanity and heroism, the story of which has happily survived; but only with the fortunes of a single man, whose life had long been darkened by a cruel wrong, and with this suffering stranger rescued from a miserable end.

Next day, the aged priest was sufficiently recovered to thank the officer who had befriended him; but his precious privations, the shock of the bombardment, and the long distance had combined to depress the machinery of life below its power to rally, and the old man needed not the doctor's grave looks to tell him that he was on the brink of the unknown.

As these was no minister of his own faith at hand, Ayrsworth was much concerned, for dying man was visibly troubled, and pleaded pitifully for Pardon, Honorable Miss, let I must put him inside. We will go at once to the hospital."

O-San moved over and stared at the very small and wizened, and tears streaked his dirty face. "It's broke entirely," he said.

"Your arm?" she asked politely, in her perfect English.

"None. Though I guess that's broke, too. But it's me sled. Santa Claus brung it, see? And I had to go and git over—and I slip doll, too. See!" He kept on sobbing.

That "Jap doll" stung. O-San looked at him keenly. "What is Santa Claus?" she asked, for something to say.

"Gish! Don't you know about Santa Claus " he asked. He looked at her pityingly and forgot his pain as he explained the story. He was so excited that O-San warmed up and began to talk, too. She was almost sorry when Jerry reached the hospital. "You ain't no doll," he said when he left her.

THE HONORABLE MISS SANTA CLAUS

Little O-San shivered and drew her fur coat closely about her as she looked out at the snow that drifted lazily against the windows of the limousine. O-San's father was a very wealthy importer, and life to O-San meant only the big stone house, her father's office, and the limousine between the two. She looked out now a little curiously at the people hurrying down the streets. Then she sank back in her cozy seat and stared at the back of her chauffeur's head, as she always did when they entered the narrow streets between the ugly houses in the poorest section of the city, which they had to pass on the way to the office.

Suddenly the car stopped, and the chauffeur jumped out. O-San timidly opened the door and put her head out. "What is it, Hirochigi?" she asked.

He came toward her, carrying a funny looking bundle. "A boy," he said simply. "The streets are slippery.

Boy Adventurers

The Cruise of Caribaldi

Guiseppe Caribaldi's father hoped that his son, who later in life was to help in uniting the states of Italy into one nation, would study for the priesthood. Caribaldi liked adventure and didn't show much interest in his father's plan. He would sit for hours and listen to the stirring tales of sailors who lounged about the docks of Nice, where he lived.

These stories fired his blood and made him long for a chance to have such adventures himself. He heard of the battles which his countrymen had with the Austrians, and how often the Italians were forced to flee for their lives before the enemy, who were more experienced in fighting. He hoped that some day he would be able to help his country.

Plan to Sail Away

Guiseppe liked to talk over with the other boys the adventures which had been told to him by the old sailors, and they listened eagerly to all that he said. That's how he and two of the boys happened to plan to sail in a small boat, which one of them owned, for Genoa, many miles away. The scheme was to start early the next day. Accordingly the following morning they were on hand, and with food which they had managed to get from their homes on the sly, they started.

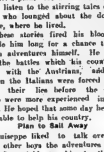

They day was bright, the lake was smooth, and they had a fine time as they went along. In the afternoon the sky became cloudy. It was gradually growing dark. A stiff wind had sprung up and the lake was very choppy. The white-crested waves rose higher and higher, and the boy, who were quite a distance from the shore, were having great trouble in reaching it. Finally a heavy gust of wind overturned the little boat and they were thrown into the cold water.

Parents Rescue Them

In the meantime they had been missed at home. Some one had seen they start in the morning, and, much to their relief, their parents soon came up in a larger boat and rescued them. This incident convinced Guiseppe's father of his son's fondness for the sea and for adventure, and so he gave up his plan to have him study for the church.

During Caribaldi's youth and early manhood, Italy was not the united and powerful nation that it is today. He had shown great skill and bravery as a soldier, and as he succeed at the head of an army of patriots who hoped to form one kingdom, Garibaldi was very popular with his men, and in some cases they fought under his banner against forces much larger in number than their own. Because they were fighting for their leader. He gained some great victories, and finally, in 1870, Italy was united into one kingdom, and to-day is one of the great nations of the world.

"Yes, but I've just found it for the first time, Hirochi. We're not going to the office for father. We're going back to the house to wrap up some things. And you shall take them to the boy in the hospital. And tell him they're from the Honorable Miss Santa Claus." (Copyright, 1922, Associated Editors.)

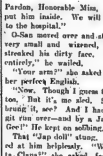

"Hirochigi!" she exclaimed, after they had left the boy, "Did you hear what he said? Liiee? There are lots. See the pretty snow and all the candles in the windows. It's Christmas."

"It's been Christmas all day," answered Hirochigi.

First Steps in Acting

Getting Into Your Part

Mr. Harry Davenport, who has been an actor for more than fifty years gives in this article some pointers for the boy and girl who are interested in amateur acting. Mr. Davenport is a character actor, and it at present taking him five of the eight days in a week.

And,' said another, 'if he is going out with the last post, good luck to him, and a safe journey!' and every man present stood up to drain his glasses in compliment to the gallant old priest within their borders.

The doctor came in, and whispered to Ayrsworth that the old man could not last long and would be better left.

'My son,' said Father Francis as Anyworth bent over chim a few minutes later, 'I fear I must ask a favor from you if it be God's good pleasure I must submit to such severe discipline! But I have a charge which I must entrust to you, seeing that I cannot live to complete my affianced task.'

And then, in spite of his laboured breathing and extreme weakness, he told briefly the story of a wounded man who had been left at the mercy of the enemy on the hills, and whose dying wish he had pledged himself to fulfill.

'And you—you are his countryman,' he gasped, 'and will solemnly promise to carry out his dying request seeing that I cannot do so, although I have striven faithfully; and God deal with you, my son, as you deal truly and by this sacred trust, committed to me as a minister of God.'

Ayrsworth was much moved. He knew he was face to face with a true human soul; the matter of creed or church never once obtruded itself. Father Francis was dying, yet with that great and awesome business on hand his chief concern was to keep his word of a stranger and speed the delivery of some valuable documents, which might aid the ends of justice and mercy.

If you wish to take part in any school play, or act in a farm or garage or before your school, you must be able to do three things—study your part, memorize your part, understand and follow the ideas and instructions of the stage manager.

You must be able to grasp ideas quickly and follow suggestions readily. You must have your lines so firmly fixed in your mind that you won't have to worry about remembering. If your memory is very poor, you should serve your part carefully.

Play Part Faithfully

Play-acting requires also the ability to play a character faithfully. Suppose, for example, you want to play Bill Smith, a bricklayer. Instead of trying to be Bill Smith, be yourself as a bricklayer. In other words, think how you would act if you actually were a bricklayer in real life.

To get your part across you must speak clearly and distinctly, otherwise, no matter how carefully you play your part, much of it will be lost. Practice reading aloud when you are studying, so that it will be easier for you to speak clearly.

Strive for Ease

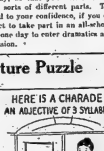

You must learn to be at ease upon the stage, so that you will not move about stiffly or awkwardly. The good actors and actresses are graceful in their movements. Such exercises as fencing and boxing are good to develop grace. They are worth trying, if you wish to be light on your feet and to carry yourself well.

Form a neighborhood stock company, so that you will learn to play all sorts of different parts. This will lead to more confidence, if you ever expect to take part in an all-school play, or one day to enter dramatics as a pro-fession. ' tired after all the day's excitement. "You've gone youire not asleep," asked her mother.

"No, of course not," laughed Helen. There's nothing to be afraid of."

Later in the evening Mrs. Bennett decided to wash out her wilful child. She tip-toed very quietly up into the attic to hang it up. She didn't want to disturb Helen, who was sleeping peacefully in her new bed.

So that is how it happened that when Helen awoke in the middle of the night the first thing that she saw was a white, ghost-like figure standing back and forth near her bed. At first she thought she was dreaming, but when no noise came she changed her mind. "I must be dreaming!" she thought. "I know there aren't any such things as ghosts, but what can it be?" She buried her face in the bed-clothes and then looked back to sleep, but she couldn't for that awful white thing out of her mind.

"Of course it was just a bad dream," she thought. I'll look again to prove that it isn't there.

But it was still there! "I can't be a ghost," she argued with herself, "because there aren't any ghosts, so this has to be a bad dream" She rubbed her head and decided she wouldn't look any more.

When again she looked forth from under the bed covers the sun was shining brightly and the white ghost was gone. Her mother was already ironing down in the kitchen, but of course Helen did not know it. She still felt a little queer. "Right over there is where it was," she thought. "Well, surely was a funny dream. It was real. Why I could even feel the bed-clothes and hear the wind rattling the windows."

The next night Helen looked at her mother and said, "Will you sleep with me to-night, Mother?" she asked.

"Why, Helen, you aren't afraid are you?" laughed Mrs. Bennett. "Why one could carry you off and you would never know it. I was up there twice last night to hang up my white dress and to get it and you never knew it."

"Oh," Helen sighed in relief, "I'm not afraid either. I was just joking.

HELEN'S BAD DREAM

"You won't mind giving your bed to Aunt Jennie and Uncle Peter to-night, will you, Helen?" Mrs. Bennett asked. "You are very, very, I don't know where else we could put them. You can sleep up in the third floor room. You have there's a real nice bed up there."

It was the holiday season and all the Bennett's relatives had descended up on them for Christmas. Even their large house was filled to overflowing.

"If you're afraid up there alone, I'll sleep with you," Mrs. Bennett offered.

"Pooh!" scoffed Helen, "I'm not afraid either. I'll be fine to sleep up there alone."

Helen went to bed early, as she was

ANNUAL CONCERT AT TRENTON HIGH SCHOOL

Very Successful Event on Thursday—Graduating Classes Honored, and Delightful Musical Program

Trenton, Dec. 22.—Trenton High School closed for the Xmas holidays, after holding its annual Concert and Graduating Exercises in the Assembly Hall Thursday, Dec. 21. The auditorium was appropriately decorated in colors, yellow and black. About five hundred people which filled the hall to overflowing, attending the remainder in seat accommodation in the corridors, listened attentively for about 3 hours to the several numbers of the lengthy program.

The Concert was ushered in by the School Orchestra, piano duet by the Misses Parker and Rathbun, followed by a stirring chorus, "Hand of Hope and Glory" and "Cheery Song," by fifty young ladies of the school. All the musical numbers rendered by the girls of boys' chorus were particularly enjoyed, because it proves the necessity of the good work being done along this line and also adds great credit to Mr. Albert Hesell, who had charge of all the musical numbers. The several readings by Miss Pearl Newton, of Toronto, and Miss Dorothy Lee, of Trenton, were indeed splendid. Ye writer is not able to bring to your notice the mastery by the speaker of each selection which Ironold White addressed his audience of about 15 minutes on the subject of "Patriotism," Grace Roberts, the subject of "The Cadet-Corps," and been in fitting words, how "The T.H.S., on behalf of the graduating class of 22, which took back with a great deal of interest, where a number of ex-pupils delivered addresses under similar circumstances, which have been a treat to a point in their particular career. MUSICAL TRAINING IN TRENTON SCHOOLS

Public School Pupils Encouraged to Learn How to Sing by Generosity of Dr. Farley

Trenton, Dec. 22nd (By Mail)—Thursday could well be called music day in our public schools. Some months ago Dr. Farley received the idea that our young students, in particular were not being properly trained in the art of music, in fact could not sing. The National anthem the "Maple Leaf Forever," or "O'Canada" with any matter of success. Neither were they familiar with the tune or the words. In order to install in their young minds the spirit of loyal British subjects pure every Canadian subject should be proud and able to sing with heart and soul all the above mentioned. To encourage the singing in schools, Dr. Farley offered a prize to the class that rendered the best song. Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Simmons are spending the holidays in Hamilton with Mrs. Simmon's mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. Lane.

At midnight Saturday the fire alarm took the department to the home of Frank Cook, Charles street, which was totally destroyed.

Early in the evening a call rang in and fire was discovered in the office of Constable Hugh O'Rorke, Dundas street. At so early an hour and being a short call the crowd at fire was soon dispersed. Mr. O'Rorke is of the opinion that the fire was deliberately started by some unknown person, as a log of chopped coal was found in the centre of the floor smouldering. Luckily little damage was done.

Evidently intent in destroying something of value, some parties broke into the store of Mr. and Mrs. Hollingsworth, Front street. On Friday evening last and maliciously did away with several of his wares. The superior articles, selling at better prices would likely pay the thieves to ship in the like if it were necessary. Many farmers now have household refrigerators or small cold storage plant for keeping the produce for the table, and a market find by experience that it much milk is produced on the farm, so much greater is the demand for the milk.

The Problem Deserves Consideration.

The problem of cream quality should be considered carefully and plans decided upon well in advance of the actual delivery of cream. It may be necessary to make repairs to the present storage room, or a new one may be needed. Construction work on the farm is more easily and cheaply done in good weather, so it is desirable to get the plans completed for the next crop of ice before the wintry weather begins. Ice can be cut as the fall work will permit. It may be necessary to do some of the work in advance, e.g., concrete work, and the ice cut next winter. In all probability leave the rest until later. In all probability the development drives men and teams off the land.

Care of Harvest Very.

The kind of storage for the ice crop will vary with the conditions on the farm, and the ideals and tastes of the farmer himself. One thing is certain, however, namely, that the storage must not be elaborate in order to be economical. It may also be efficient. Many farmers have used for years such makeshifts as piling sole storages as a large bin made of the boards and planks collected in some some well sheltered place, such as the north side of a barn or row of trees or in corner of woodshed, a simple single wall house as in the hilly side of a building, an old abandoned silo, or any convenient place that may provided the following named conditions are not frequently overlooked. Note carefully what they are: Protection from sun's rays, good drainage, ventilation, a poor conductor of heat about the ice on all sides, and sufficient elevation of air over the ice bin, i.e., between the top of the ice and the roof that may be above it. In other words religiously avoid the mistake of packing the ice in hot weather because stagnant air under the roof becomes very hot, and so heat will naturally pass down through the packing and melt the ice and melt it very fast.

Good Drainage a Necessity.

Good ventilation is good drainage, either natural or artificial, under the ice bin, as by providing a box or failing to get away rapidly from the bin. Ventilation is also important and should be kept from getting in at the bottom. Cracks, openings, etc., should be packed in the house on a cold frosty day and so prevent leaks. Any but between them, only around the outside edges. Leave no spaces between cakes because cakes should be filled as well as possible with dry sawdust on the floors of ice. The idea of this is to get rid of the air spaces and thereby make the possible a solid block condition of the ice. Do not fill cracks together with water. Whenever any ice is removed from the bin, replace with dry dust, or whatever covering is used, should be done as soon as possible after storage.

Many farmers store elaborate and cost. ly forms of ice-houses, and also place and other conditions for small ice cold storages, may be secured free of charge by writing to the Department of Agriculture, Toronto, Ont.

USING ICE ON THE FARM

Helpful Advice as to Storing of a Good Supply.

Dairy Products Must Be Kept Cool—A Variety of Plans for Handling Ice—Good Drainage In the Ice House Necessary.

(Contributed by the Dairy Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

It is a very rare occurrence in Ontario that the winter weather is not cold enough to make plenty of ice on our lakes, rivers, small streams, and ponds. This is a very fortunate, feel pretty sure of a good crop of ice this winter.

Ice is the only other means of cooling on farms, except in the case of very large dairies where the use of a mechanical system may be warranted. The one chief obstacle to proper cooling of milk and cream for the dairy is the scarcity of ice, as the lack of a convenient supply in their immediate vicinities. This may now be overcome after a fashion, however, as there is always the possibility of ice being stored in during the winter and stored for use in the summer.

Dairy Products Must Be Kept Cool.

If the quality of our dairy products is ever to be improved, as was the case in the world it will be necessary for the producers of milk to be more astute, beat out of the milk as quickly as possible after it is drawn from under the cows. This will mean more efficient cooling than what most dairy farmers have to-day. Then would ice be required by all dairy farmers who have not the facilities to secure it either from nearby bodies of water or from the ice dealers. The most suitable organization shipping it in as referred to above. The superior articles, selling at better prices would likely pay the thieves to ship in the like if it were necessary. Many farmers now have household refrigerators or small cold storage plant for keeping the produce for the table, and a market find by experience that it much milk is produced on the farm, so much greater is the demand for the milk.

The Problem Deserves Consideration.

The problem of cream quality should be considered carefully and plans decided upon well in advance of the actual delivery of cream. It may be necessary to make repairs to the present storage room, or a new one may be needed. Construction work on the farm is more easily and cheaply done in good weather, so it is desirable to get the plans completed for the next crop of ice before the wintry weather begins. Ice can be cut as the fall work will permit. It may be necessary to do some of the work in advance, e.g., concrete work, and the ice cut next winter. In all probability leave the rest until later. In all probability the development drives men and teams off the land.

Care of Harvest Very.

The kind of storage for the ice crop will vary with the conditions on the farm, and the ideals and tastes of the farmer himself. One thing is certain, however, namely, that the storage must not be elaborate in order to be economical. It may also be efficient. Rome Has Big Sensation

Rome, Dec. 22.—The Italian newspaper readers, because the latter city is at present the open one of the most sensational murder trials of modern times. The case is one that would attract attention in any city in the world, however blase to murder, for some of the circumstances make it unique in the annals of crime. The accused murderer is Ignazio Messano, and he is blind. The victim of the crime was his wife. Her murder was not discovered until she had been in her grave for two years. She was killed by being shot point-blank into the temple. The question the prosecution has to answer is the solution has to answer is how a blind man could the exact spot on the temple. The motive of the crime is said to have been the love of the alleged assassin for another woman, and in the course of the trial there has been produced letters of love which show cold-blooded cruelty brought to light to satisfy the passion.

Messano is a middle-aged man, half Peruvian, half Italian, known for many years in Rome as a hearthreaker, a lover of brilliant life and extravagantly. Some years ago he married a girl of humble origin, who, after a life of misery, died, the reason for which remains unknown. Messano acquired considerable wealth which passed to his children. The trial of this statement. But the parents were not satisfied. Why, they asked, should a girl be infatuated with a man who was blind? Why should he meet cruel treatment, and then subsequently repentance? A couple of detectives were impressed with the unreasonableness of Messano's story, and the investigation was begun, which, after two years, led to the discovery of the young woman's body, and the arrest of her husband, the accused man and a couple of friends, named Beunzel and Lieut. Barbero. These men are now in the cells on for some months past there has been proceeding the legal battle which rivals that between Landru and the unfortunate Madame Caillaux a few years ago.

The reason that the body of Bice was not discovered until more than two years after she was killed she was not identified under her own name, but as Maria Antonia Rotellini. Under this name she had spent several days in two or three hotels in the most disreputable district of Rome. She had arrived with a handbag and her brain lying on the cobblestones in a street near the Porta Portese. She was empty of money, but papers were found in the bag which identified her at local hotelkeepers in their identification of her as Maria Rotellini, and under this name she was obscurely buried, the police not troubling to find a clue to her murderer.

Through some means, not made public, the prosecution compiled a story of the case from the Italian correspondent of the New York Herald, a detective came to the conclusion that the dead Maria was the missing Bice were one and the same, and in accordance with evidence by Benucci, a friend of Messano, confessed to him that he had killed his wife, and later this friend identified the photograph of Bice as that of the missing Bice. The body was exhumed, and an identification was completed by the parents. The arrests followed, and, according to the police, Messano confessed. He said that he had persuaded his wife that the best cure for her illness was to visit the importunate Angella was to kill her, and that for this purpose he took part of which consisting in Bice establishing an identity with Rotellini. She was really digging her own grave for on examining the considered opportune, her husband told her that she must go down into the grave and the two men to kill her. But she, it is said, suspected what her himself. He repudiates the alleged confessions, and the defence alleges that at times since his arrest he has been out of his mind.

Dehydrated Vegetables.

When dehydrated vegetables are stored in airtight containers at ordinary temperatures they undergo little change in moisture content is an important factor in their preservation. There is a "critical moisture content" below which the distinctive flavor of the vegetable is developed for upward of six months. For cabbage this is found to be 5.24 per cent., for onions from 5.74 to 6.64 per cent. There is no advantage from storing in an atmosphere of comparatively high humidity, as the deterioration is less than from similar exposure in a dry atmosphere.—Scientific American.

Too Impolitic.

"My wife was feeling ill this morning, and asked me to send for the doctor, but I reminded her that the sales were starting, and she felt better at once."

"She wouldn't it have been cheaper to send for the doctor?"

"Yes, I never thought of that."

TRENTON WILL LIKELY GET COUNCIL BY ACCLAMATION

(By Mail.)

Trenton, Dec. 22.—If present indications are correct, there will be no election in Trenton, for municipal honors, one week from today. At the meeting in the Council Chambers last night, the usually goodly attendance of interested citizens was below par. Of the seven nominees for Mayoralty, only the present Mayor was present and declared himself a candidate for Council election. After the different Councillors gave a statement of reports for their respective committees, each in turn were declared themselves as being willing to face another contest. Several of the many present for Mayor, there is little chance of an election. There is yet much work to be done, and a new member of new council greatly handicap their good work.

Railway News

Winnipeg.—The principal officers of the Canadian Pacific Railway Employees entertained Major Wm. Kirkland at dinner at the Royal Alexandra Hotel prior to his departure for Montreal where he expects to take duties of the new position to which he has been promoted as general foreign freight agent in charge of ocean service.

Lethbridge.—The requirements of the Canadian Pacific Railway for power for construction work on the Crowsnest line, has helped out the labor situation in the city very materially. About 80 men have been placed on this job through the local government bureau, but in spite of this 194 names appear on the idle list.

"Lethbridge is doing better than most of the western cities," said Supt. Thomas Longworth. "We are starting a few men right along, the C.P.R. is helping us out greatly."

Lethbridge.—The Lethbridge "Herald" says: "Miss Doris Carter, daughter of Dr. Bostin, drove into Magrath on November 8, to meet her friend Miss Cronin who had travelled from Vancouver, in charge of the conductor of the C. P. R." It speaks well for the efficiency of the railway authorities, that a little girl of 11 years of age could travel so far alone in safety. Thanks are also due to the kindness of the Travellers' Aid, who took the child in charge at Calgary and Lethbridge.

Fort William.—That Fort William is rapidly getting into her present stride again was shown by statistics given out to-day by Building Inspector McNamara. Before December the building permits for the 12 months will have reached $1,500,000.

Up to November 22 the total value of building permits issued for this year is $994,650, to which will be added in a few days a permit for the building of another unit to the Canadian Pacific Railway coal dock on Island No. 3, which will cost hundreds of thousands of dollars.

St. John.—Eighteen members of the C. P. R. Investigation Department who are on duty at Sand Point during the winter season have arrived in the city. Others are expected, and with the staff of transport activities at Montreal and the headquarters of all remaining fighting forces will be transferred to the city. The same corps of investigation officials were at Sand Point during the summer season and the report is the same, namely, that as the season progresses the C. P. R. gradually open or close the C. P. R. gates are transferred as the changeable conditions warrant.

Moose Jaw.—Approximately five thousand bags of second-class mail are being handled per day at the depot of the Canadian Pacific Railway depot every day by government transfer agents. The greater part comes from eastern points and the United States.

The volume of the mail began to increase about two months ago, corresponding with the commencement of threshing operations, and it is steadily grown in proportion to the present time and it is not expected that the increasing tendency will cease until after the holidays.

In addition to the mail actually handled here by the transfer agents, baggage cars are loaded full of second-class matter are daily passing through the city for points further west.

Montreal.—A new week-end cable letter service is announced by the Commercial Cable Company, connecting with the Canadian Pacific Telegraphs. The announcement will be of great interest to those who have frequent use for cables to Great Britain, as it sets forth a considerably lower rate for messages over the Commercial's transatlantic cables.

The rates are effective immediately to Bradford, Bristol, Dundee, Edinburgh, Glasgow, Manchester, and Newcastle-on-Tyne.

From Ontario and Eastern Provinces the new rate is $1.20 for a minimum of 20 words, and 6c for each additional word.

From Manitoba: $2.20 for the first 20 words, and 10c for each additional word.

From Saskatchewan and Western Provinces: $2.20 for first 20 words, and 11c for each additional word.

To other points in the British Isles the rate will be: from Ontario and Eastern Provinces, $1.80 for the first 20 words, and 8c for each additional word.

From Manitoba: $2.40 for the first 20 words, and 12c for each additional word.

From Saskatchewan and Western Provinces: $2.40 for the first 20 words, and 13c for each additional word.

GRIM REAPER TAKES HEAVY TOLL

Wife and Son of Windsor Man Dying, Daughter and Baby Dead

Windsor, Dec. 24.—Over the home of Francis R. Fox, a Grand Trunk trackman, living at 404 Caron Avenue, hangs the pall of death. Mrs. Elizabeth Fox, the wife and mother, is dying at Grace Hospital of pneumonia. Only a miracle can save her, the doctors say. On Saturday evening she was brought to the hospital and a few hours later gave birth to a boy boy. The infant died two hours afterwards.

At Harper Hospital, Detroit, Ruth, aged two years, passed away early on Sunday from the same disease. In a hospital at St. Thomas lies the couple's only son. He, too(is in the last stages of pneumonia. The father, half-crazed by the triple tragedy that has come upon him, left Windsor Sunday night in response to a long-distance telephone message that he must hurry if he wished to see his little son alive.

CONVEYOR TUNNEL IS BURNED

Fort William, Ont., Dec. 24.—Fire started in the millwright's shop this morning completely destroyed the wooden conveyor tunnel between elevators "A" and "C" the property of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company and leased to the Gillespie Grain Company.

The fire started from causes at present unknown and spread upwards to the overhead tunnel. The railway and city fire departments arrived in time to prevent it from spreading to either of the elevators which are the oldest on the waterfront, and entirely of wooden construction.

WHAT THE KING SAID 100 YEARS AGO

London, Dec. 22.—The pomp and ceremony attending the opening of Parliament probably attracts more attention in the House of Lords than in the words of the monarch, that is little struggling would be paid to the reading of his speech that he could interpolate any comments he liked without anyone showing surprise.

The bet was accepted. The Regent paused in the course of the address and said distinctly "Baa, baa, black sheep," and then went on. No one took notice of the strange words. Chagrined at the loss of his wager, Sheridan asked George Canning, the Premier, if he had noticed anything strange.

"Oh yes" said Canning, "I heard the Prince say "Baa, baa black sheep" but as he was looking straight at you at the time, I took it for a personal allusion."

PROFITEERS ARE ONLY PATRONS OF MOSCOW TAXIS

Moscow, Dec. 22.—Automobile taxicabs operated by private owners have appeared in Moscow, but the tariff is so high that on several occasions the government has issued warnings to the public in beware of extortion. The street cars, about the cheapest thing in Moscow, are always crowded to such an extent that foreign visitors never consider riding in them. The cabfare is from 500-1000 Soviet rubles, or about two cents.

The fare charged slowly, drawn by one or two horses, which never exceed operation even during the revolution, and the sleigh when snow is on the ground, continues to be the most popular way of getting about the city. The droshky drivers must upon a fare about fifteen times more than the street car charge. The taxicabs are patronized chiefly by speculators who are interested in daily transactions of billions or trillions of rubles, and who care little about what they spend.

FRENCH "CLEO" HAS PERFECT SOLITUDE

Paris, Dec. 23.—Cleo de Merode's allegedly episodic history has been consecrated as a Parisian institution, not to be consecrated by British or U. S. film stars. A Seine tribunal so decided in ordering the words "Cleo the dancer" removed from books which have been sequestered here for several weeks. Although Mlle. de Merode is not mentioned, the movie picture story describes the incidents in the life of the Parisian dancer, such as her love affairs with kings and princes usually ascribed to Mlle. de Merode, who a few years ago mysteriously retired from the stage to live quietly in a country village, devoting her time to charitable works.

The court decided that the film makers had no right to intrude upon her self-imposed solitude by reminding the public constantly of Cleo's career.

CLOSE RIVALS

A colored man took out a marriage license. A few days later he went back and asked the clerk to substitute another woman's name for the one on the license, as he had changed his mind. He was told that would cost him another dollar and a half.

"You mean I got to get a new license?"

"Yes," said the clerk.

The applicant was silent for a few minutes, thinking hard. Then he said with an air of determination. "Never mind, boss, this ol' one will do. That ain't a dollar an' a half difference 'tween them two, nohow."

NOTICE

To the Electors of the Township of Thurlow

In accepting the nomination for a seat on your Municipal Council Board for the year 1925, I desire, firstly to think those who have already pledged their support and I appeal to all others for their vote and influence on January 1, 1925 and secondly to assure all who shall honourably be elected by the false rumor that I am disqualified, that I have had legal advice in the matter and that there is no foundation for said rumor and third by if elected I assure you of my very best services.

Wishing you all the Season's Compliments. I am,

Yours very truly,

GILBERT D. CLAPP. d26tfd

VIEWPOINT OF AN OPTIMIST

"I tell you what," said the fat plumber "you gotta hand it to old man Thrifter for being an optimist."

"What is he an optimist about?" asked the thin carpenter. "I thought he was in jail."

"So he is. So he is."

"Well——"

"And the other day he was sentenced."

"And he is still an optimist?"

"Yes. I was in to see him just after he had been sentenced for 99 years."

"And?"

"What was he happy about?"

"Oh, he said, "It might have been life."

DESERONTO HIGH SCHOOL IS SCORCHED

The First Floor and Basement on the West Side Damaged—Origin of Fire Unknown

Deseronto, Dec. 26.—What at first threatened to be a disastrous fire occurred again in the high school. An alarm was sounded about 10.45 p.m. and the fire brigade, with its modern juice fire truck, responded promptly and succeeded in getting the blaze under control.

The first floor and basement in the west side of the building will be considerably damaged, as is believed that repairs cannot be made in time for school reopening. Flames were first noticed above the fresh air chamber in the basement. The fire spread rapidly, owing to the oiled and varnished flooring and furnishings.

BIG FIRE IN NIAGARA FALLS

Extent of Damage to U.S. Concerns Unknown But is Thought to be Extensive Niagara Falls, Ont., Dec. 26—Fire that started at 10.30 o'clock this morning did more than $40,000 damage of the wheel house of the Cataract City Milling Company and the Pittsburg Cataract Paper Company plants in the lower milling district in the hydraulic canal basin and threatened for a time to communicate to other industries in the section and wipe out a large block of the city's most important manufacturing district. Every available piece of fire-fighting apparatus in Niagara Falls, N.Y., was called to prevent the spread of the flames. The firemen succeeded in confining the fire to the wheel house, although they fought the blaze under hazardous conditions because of the location of the house on the extreme edge of the Gorge bank. The two plants will be shut down for at least two weeks because of the fire and as a result a number of men will be out of work.

The two plants are located close together on the Gorge bank and the shafts and power units of the two concerns are located in the same house, a frame structure that extends over the precipice. Dense clouds of smoke filled the wheel house and the two milling plants located directly above the milling section. The roofs of the smaller structures in the rear of the larger buildings soon were covered and the firemen were compelled to use great care in walking over them as their base, too, is shelved and one step would have sent them hurtling over the roofs on to the rocks in the gorge.

The cause of the fire has not been fully determined, but it is believed to have been due to an overheated bearing. Until an examination of the shafting and gears is made the full extent of the damage done will not be known. The gears and shafting may have been warped.

MAYOR HANNA IS EULOGIZED

Members of Council Speak Well of the Retiring Chief Magistrate

As was anticipated the business brought before the City Council last night was purely of a routine nature being for the purpose of winding up the business of the year. No new legislation was introduced. At the close of the meeting all the Aldermen spoke eulogistically of Mayor Hanna as a presiding officer and his untiring efforts since occupying the mayors chair. The meeting adjourned until Friday, evening next when tenders will be considered for the leasing of the market.

Members present were Mayor Hanna Alderman Ostrom, French, Patterson, Thompson, McCrory, Foster, Green leaf and Robinson.

Minutes of last meeting read and confirmed.

Reports of committees, communications etc, laid on the table and Council went into committee of the whole on reports etc. Ald. Ostrom in the chair.

Accounts recommended to be paid by the various committees were passed and the following recommendations were adopted.

That the recommendation to extend the lease of the market for one month in the present lease be accepted.

That the present lease of the market be allowed to settle for $2000 in full for the market tolls for the year.

NORTHERN FIRE RELIEF.

The Council of the town of Sudbury asked the Belleville Council to assist in a motion that the Ontario Government assume full control in the matter of relief to the Northern Ontario fire sufferers.

The Council concurred in the matter.

BOYS' CONCERT.

A communication was read from the boys composing the junior City Council extending a hearty vote of thanks to the members of the Council for favors received and the interest the members had taken in the Junior Council. The boys also wished all members of the senior Council a Happy New Year and their re-election to the Council.

Ald. McCrory said the work of the members of the Junior City Council was commendable. The members of the Council appreciated their work.

The committee rose and reported, having in their charge the matter, and pleased at the communications received from the boys.

Ald. Ostrom said he could endorse all that had been said. The boys were doing well.

ENQUIRIES.

Ald. McCrory—What progress has been made in the issuing of the statement to debentures, debt etc, of the city.

Ald. Ostrom—The matter will be ready for the public meeting on Friday night.

Ald. Foster—Any report to make as to the proposed new intake pipe.

Ald. French—Not yet.

Ald. French asked about the city pound and how it was leased.

Ald. Greenleaf—There are some 4 or 5 loads on hand.

MOTION.

Ald. Thompson moved, seconded by Ald. Patterson that the motion giving the present lessee of the market one months extension be rescinded.—Carried.

City Clerk—It should be paid monthly.

MAYORS WORTH.

Ald. Ostrom—This being the last meeting of the Council he desired to express his appreciation of the untiring services rendered the city by Mayor Hanna. Our Mayor has been a benefactor to the city. He was sorry Mayor Hanna was leaving the Council but he would carry away with him the best wishes for his success in the future.

Mayor Hanna said he had always tried to do his duties, and had always tried to do what he considered was right. He did not regret what time he had spent or money expended as he had been in the Council for 5 years. He appreciated the remarks of Ald. Ostrom.

Ald. McCrory said on behalf of the mate of the Mayor he was proud of him. The Mayor had made a fine leader and he felt a satisfaction to know he had fulfilled his duties in a fearless manner.

Ald. Robinson endorsed what had been stated by the previous speaker. No doubt if Ald. Ostrom was elected he would prove a good successor.

Ald. French said it had been a pleasure to sit for 2 years in the Council under Mayor Hanna.

ASPIRANTS FOR COUNTY WARDEN

According to an arrangement which was made a few years ago in reference to the Wardenship of Hastings County a District will occupy that position next year. Mr. J. V. Walsh who has been Reeve of Tyendinaga for some time, fills the position with the marked ability, is an aspirant for the position and they possibly be selected. We understand that should Mr. J. L. Paris, Dec. 27.—The Society of Independent Artists has just resolved to regulate itself. Its principal characteristic, heretofore, has been the complete absence of regulations from its annual salon. Members sent any sort of a picture and it was hung in any sort of way without regard to its class, merit or subject.

The eccentricities of the Independent's salon sufficed to make it a success, and with success came the inevitable critic. The organization still depends upon the taste and talent of the artist. There will, as of old, be no jury, meritocracy to reject, and the artists will be permitted to set a price on all pictures shown.

RECOVERED NICKLE — LOST $600

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Jersey City, N. J., Dec. 23—(By Canadian Press)—Mrs. Mary Cyrek, No. 283 Grand Street, dropped a nickle on the floor of her home. The coin rolled under a bed. Mrs. Cyrek put a match to the floor to look for the nickle.

When the Fire Department arrived Mrs. Cyrek was in a frenzy. It was found she had been on the way insured by the fire, which destroyed only the furniture of the bed under which the nickle had rolled. There was no money to be the reason for the woman's anxiety until it was learned the fire had destroyed $600 she had hidden in the bed.

She recovered the nickle.

WOMAN'S BODY FOUND FLOATING

Was Identified as Miss Margaret McAlpine of Maynooth

Kingston, Dec. 26.—To find the body of a woman, later identified as that of Miss Margaret McAlpine, of Maynooth, Hastings County, lying in the water just where she was throwing out breadcrumbs for birds, was the grim discovery of a housewife of one of the homes near the foot of Emily street on Sunday morning about eleven o'clock.

The body had been in the water for some time and in the place immediately. They saw the body there and immediately the police were notified and an undertaker was called. One of the constables and the undertaker's assistant lifted the body from the water and took it to the undertaking parlors, where it remained until a late hour Sunday afternoon before being identified. It was then discovered that it was the body of Miss Margaret McAlpine, of Maynooth.

The circumstances surrounding the finding of the body in the water were told to The Standard as follows: Miss Margaret McAlpine was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John McAlpine, of Maynooth and her father had died some time ago. Miss McAlpine had been troubled with nerves and came to the city on the sixteenth of January last to take treatment from a doctor here. She had lived with friends on Lower Johnson street and had been taking treatment regularly.

Deceased had been at the house on Thursday night as usual. That was the last seen of her by anyone in the house. On Friday morning one of the occupants went up to her room to call her but it was found that she was not there, and that the bed clothes were not very much disturbed. It was believed that Miss McAlpine had gone to Church, and the other members of the house did not bother much at the time. She did not appear in for breakfast or dinner and then the alarm was given and the police were notified.

It was found on investigation that she had purchased a ticket for her home in Maynooth but no trace of her could be found until the discovery of her body was made by the housemaid on Sunday morning.

The late Miss McAlpine was thirty-eight years of age and was a Roman Catholic. She was said to be very quiet at all times and spoke very little of her affairs. She is survived by six brothers and five sisters. The remains were sent today to Maynooth for burial by S. S. Corbett, undertaker.

ARGENTINA'S PUBLIC DEBT 340 MILLIONS

Buenos Aires, Dec. 27.—Argentina's unconsolidated public debt now amounts to 809,574,218 pesos, or roughly $340,000,000, according to figures submitted by the Accountant-General's department to the new chief executive, Dr. Marcelo Vergas, who sought the information to prepare the budget of 1923.

The figures are noted with surprise by some newspapers, which refer do former statistics indicating that the debt was some 184,000,000 pesos less. It appears from the report that the 184,000,000 consists of debts not subject to any precise term of payment, the remainder being represented by liabilities maturing at specific dates.

A bill for the authorization of an internal loan to consolidate the debt, in whole or in part, is being considered by the Ministry of Finance in lieu of seeking a foreign loan.

NEW ZEALAND EARTHQUAKE CONFINED TO SOUTH ISLAND

Wellington, N.Z., Dec. 26—The earthquake of Christmas afternoon was confined to the upper and middle portions of South Island. The shock was experienced severely in North Canterbury and recalled memories of the quake in Cheviot County in 1901.

Pelphrake, Dec. 26—Tonight the C. P. R. hockey team of Sudbury played the Pembroke team in a game that lasted over an hour and a half, with the close it stood 8 to 4 in favor of Sudbury. Some of the Sudbury Wolves played with the C. P. R.

WAS FIRE AT BRIGHTON ACCIDENTAL OR NOT?

Rumors Are Afloat that Skulls of Father and Young Daughter Were Fractured—Tragedy it is Alleged Is to be Investigated

In connection with the fire which on Christmas Day, destroyed the home of Mr. William Firman, at Brighton village, resulting in the death of Mr. Firman and his little daughter, rumors are rife that the terrible affair was not an accident. It appears that Mrs. Firman and her 12-year-old son were attending a Christmas entertainment in the village and when apprised of the fire reached the burning building as quickly as possible, but were unable to render any assistance as the building was enveloped in flames. After the fire the charred body of Mr. Firman was found in the ruins and nearby the body of the child. It is stated that there is some evidence that the skull of the unfortunate man was fractured also that of the child, which has led to a'rumor that the victims were foully dealt with previous to the destruction of the building by fire. It is also stated that Mr. Firman had a considerable sum of money in the house at the time. We are informed, whether rightly or wrongly, that the affair is to be investigated by a Provincial officer. Mr. Firman had no enemies as far as is known.

PROVINCIAL OFFICER GETS IN WRONG

Strong Feeling in Ottawa Against Action of Officer Who Searched Car

Ottawa, Dec. 26.—That the presence here of members of the provincial police force is deeply resented, and that citizens of Ottawa would like to see them withdrawn, as the Ottawa police force, which, he maintains, is most efficient, is capable of enforcing law and order without their assistance, is the contention of H. P. Hill, K.C., M.L.A. for West Ottawa, in a strongly worded letter t ollon. W. E. Raney, attorney-general of Ontario.

Mr. Hill's letter is the result of the action of Albert Fox, who claiming to be a provincial liquor constable, showed a nickel badge with the word Toronto on it, and held up an automobile loaded down with Christmas gifts near Bank and Pine streets here Friday evening, and demanded the right to search for liquor.

The automobile was driven by Mrs. J. W. Kirke, 99 Strathcona avenue, and her daughter, who were distributing gifts among the poor on behalf of the Open club, a charitable organization formed during the war.

Mrs. Kirke and her daughter, who said they smelt liquor off Fox, were not satisfied with his credentials, and appealed to the city police station, which sent two constables, who detained Fox and his two alleged assistants, and allowed Mrs. Kirke and her daughter to proceed on their errand of mercy.

CHICKEN SWALLOWS GEM

Knoxville, Tenn., Dec. 23—(By Canadian Press)—One of 150 capons belonging to R. L. Bowman of this city has looked in his crop a $500 diamond which fell from Mr. Bowman's ring while he was feeding his birds.

Mr. Bowman is puzzled. He dislikes killing all the capons and making a thorough search, and he hardly feels safe in relying upon the honesty of the culinary department of some unelected kitchen.

ARRESTS THREE, HAS SCUFFLE

Three O.T.A. Cases Constituted This Morning's Police Court Calendar

When Mike Debont, Joe Tuzont, and Clifford Daby, all of Trenton, dropped out of a Front street pool room on Tuesday afternoon, they walked into the arms of the law, so to speak. For P. C. William Jones sighted them, and their unsteady step, and corralled the three of them. Daby did not accompany the officer long like, but gave battle and is alleged to have struck the officer on the face. After the scuffle, however, the three men were taken to the tolls and locked up.

This morning they appeared before Magistrate Hanna and Ketcheson. Debont, Debont and Tuzont, on charges of being drunk in a public place, were assessed $10 and costs, the minimum fine. They were put off their beat by strong cider, consumed in a private house in Trenton, so they explained in court this morning. Daby was assessed a similar amount, but is also charged with resisting arrest and assaulting officer Evans. On this charge, he will be tried on January third, one week from today. Bail of $100 was asked by Acting Crown Attorney Donnan.

REMAINS OF PREHISTORIC MAN FOUND IN MALTA

Valetta, Malta, Dec. 25.—Scientists digging for prehistoric records in a cave on the island of Malta have found teeth which they believe belonged to a man who lived contemporaneously with the Neanderthal man. The theoretical skull was found in Germany in 1856, and is said to be the oldest record of the human race in Europe.

The teeth were found in a remote section of the much frequented cave called Ghar Dalam. The visits of many souvenir hunters have made more difficult the labors of the investigators, but nevertheless they are preparing to excavate further in the hope of finding more evidences of pre-historic life.

PROHIBITION OFFICER MURDERED IN ALLEY

Steubenville, O., Dec. 26.—Christ Bliss, 45, prohibition officer, was found murdered in an alley here early today.

"Go to Marsh alley and you'll find a dead man," a mysterious telephone call from Wheeling, another in his head, and a third through his right hand. Bliss' identity had just been killed with his own gun. His money was gone.

Bliss had made many enemies through vigorous enforcement of prohibition laws.

RANEY AND ROWELL SEE KING AND GOUIN

Seek an Interpretation of the Prohibition Laws—Legal Men Have Different Views

Ottawa, Dec. 26.—Attorney General Raney, and Hon. N. W. Rowell are in Ottawa today to interview Premier King and Sir Lomer Gouin in reference to interpretation part four of the Canadian Temperance Act which provides that a province where prohibition is in force may prohibit the importation of liquors from other provinces after a referendum. The effectiveness of this portion of the Canadian Temperance Act has been questioned by a man named Smith who takes the position that Ontario is not under prohibition because of a clause in the Ontario Temperance Act allowing the sale of native wines. Prominent lawyers have given opposite views on this point. J. J. Ewart, K.C., and others with Ontario connections exhibit the importation of liquors under the Canadian Temperance Act while the native wine clause remains in the O.T.A. John A. Patterson, K.C., of Toronto and others, however, believe that if Ontario repudiates the sale of the native wine clause. The Attorney General will ask that the Dominion law be amended to remove all doubt.

migration Plans Are ... Now Being Considered ... For the Indian Empire

...TH Colombia correspondent of the Christian Science Monitor writes: The committee appointed by the Imperial Legislative Council to discuss the immigration question with the British Guiana and West Indian deputations sent at Guild recently, Hon. Dr. J. J. Nunan, Attorney-General of British Guiana, and ...ER Hill deputations, a barrister and Indian resident of the colony, were present to continue their scheme and give evidence with regard to it. Mr. Reserve was elected president.

Dr. Nunan said that he represented the Agricultural and Commercial Society of British Guiana. The Legislative Council of that colony had accepted his scheme of colonization and the whole colony supported it, as well as the local Legislature and executive.

The first question to be inquired into was the status of Indians in British Guiana. The deputies said that there were absolutely no racial distinctions whatever, and the Indians had held the same status ever since they started to emigrate into the colony in 1838. There were also no social distinctions and the Indians and Europeans pulled well together. The caste system prevailed but there was nothing called ...ween the Hindus and the Mohammedans. Out of a total population of 318,000 Indians only 1,500 are Mohammedans, and the rest were represented by official members. One reason was that the Indians had not worried themselves over politics, but had confined their activities wholly to economics. They were, however, the deputies said, a most influential community on account of their thrift and industry.

Dr. Nunan said that the Indenture system had been largely abolished and only a few cases remained. Seventy-five per cent. of the cultivated land was held by Indians and they were largely cultivated by unindentured labor. It was the sugar planters who employed it and it was they who had most felt its abolition. Of the capital of ten millions sunk in sugar factories and plantations, more than half was British owned and the rest by Indian people, while the state owned the land. Compulsory education was in force and the younger part of the emigrating population would not suffer for lack of educational facilities, while the teaching was carried on in their own vernaculars and the caste system was kept up.

The object of the Government was to make it into practically an Indian colony and the Government would pass into their hands and they were prepared to face their responsibilities. The deputies said that they were quite willing to accept an arrangement by which, after a year's trial of the scheme, the Government of India should send a deputation to investigate the matter and see how it had worked; and also that a clause should be resident in the colony a representative of the Government of India to watch over the interest of emigrants.

As regarded the scheme itself they said that £600,000 would be set aside to encourage emigration. The colony had arranged for a regular passenger and cargo steamer service to and from India for the first three years. Not more than 5,000 adults a year would be given free passages. On arrival they could obtain land on easy terms in small or large holdings, or if they preferred government employment they were guaranteed the local rate of pay. The fare for piece work in the sugar plantations came to three rupees a day and also the cost of living was 40 per cent. cheaper than the corresponding rate in corner could save at least one rupee a day, and he would also be provided with housing accommodation. Wages would be controlled by special arbitration boards and rewards or five acres of coast or river land, provided from floods, would be given to families after three years' agricultural work in the colony.

With regard to repatriation the scheme provided that at the request of the representative of the Indian Government any family or individual would be repatriated free of cost, while a proportion would be paid of the request came from the individual himself. Cheap return tickets would be provided and a limited number of professional men, including engineers and schoolmasters, would be given free passages or at very low rates. Guarantees of the continuance of existing privileges could be furnished by the colony and the Colonial Office stating that their policy was a continuance of the political and commercial equality of all races.

Problems Now Widely Solved, Puzzled for Centuries.

Many of the world's cleverest mathematicians have spent hundreds of years in attempting to find the square root of 2. It has been calculated to many places of decimals by one somebody. But the exact root remains, and probably always will remain, undiscovered. As a matter of fact, 2 is only human ingenuity itself is too short for the fulfilling of the task.

Just as baffling is the problem of how to square a circle. The cleverest brains of all ages and nations have wrestled in vain to discover the precise relation between the diameter and the circumference of a circle. One Dutch mathematician spent fifty years of his life to this problem. He worked out the equation to over 700 places of decimals, and was then little nearer the end of his calculation than when he began.

A problem to which a satisfactory solution still remains unfound has no certainty of effort, is the following: If two snakes start swallowing each other simultaneously, each getting the tail of the other in its mouth, so that the circle formed by the snakes becomes smaller and smaller, what will eventually become of the snakes?

Another problem on which a man might work in vain for a long life time is this: How long would it take a man to pay off a debt of a pound at the rate of two shillings the first month, five shillings the second month, half a crown the third, and so on, each payment being half the preceding one.

No less tantalising is this problem: A man has in his pocket current silver coin of the realm to the value of fourteen shillings, but he is unable to find change for half a sovereign. What coins has he?

Another interesting puzzle enough to tempt the most cautious to tackle is this: Many people have tried in vain wrestle with it for years; they may never, so it is said, will they find the answer. It is a puzzle which will turn a blind eye to its guileless allurements.

But there is no limit to these tantalising problems. For example:

How would you prove that there are at least two persons in the world who have precisely the same number of hairs on their heads?

How can you discover the assertion that nature never makes any two objects precisely similar?

What is the relation between sunspots and the mariner's compass?

Why does the prevalence of spots on the sun make the compass erratic and unreliable?

What effect has the moon on the weather?

If you would try something positively simpler, the world would like to know the secret of the "rocking stone"—those huge masses of rock, some nearly one hundred tons in weight, which are so delicately poised that the pressure of a finger will set them moving; yet they remain there their balance. How and when did they get there, and with what object? What, too, were the origin and purpose of the monoliths at Stonehenge, on Salisbury Plain? By what means, in prehistoric days, were those enormous stones able to...

If you are unable to find an answer to any of these questions, whatever, do not solve the following riddle propounded by Archdeacon Whately, which he remained unsolved for three quarters of a century:

When from the Ark's capacious round
The world came forth in pairs,
Who was the first to hear the sound
Of boots upon the stairs?

Forbidden Football.

A very curious old engraving has been discovered among some old books sold by a bookseller in Paris. It depicts a game of football played by ladies.

The fact that there were eleven players and that their attitudes were the same as football players of to-day led one of the leading French sporting papers to make some inquiries into the origin of the game.

In 1493, only a few years after the discovery of America by Christopher Columbus, the first Europeans who landed in Guiana were surprised to find that among the games played by the natives was a kind of football.

The game was played by eleven persons, ten standing in a ring with one in the centre. The ball was of leather filled with down.

The English game dates still further back, repeated decrees prohibiting the game having been issued by Edward II., Edward III., Henry IV., Henry VIII., and Queen Elizabeth. The first of these was issued as early at 1314.

A Welding Process.

A new and very useful welding process is based upon the fact that if a piece of copper on an iron plate be heated in an atmosphere of hydrogen, the copper will spread over the iron in a thin, penetrating film, like butter on hot toast. Thus, if the copper be melted between two pieces of iron, it welds them together in a surprisingly intimate fashion, the copper film actually working itself in between the crystals of the iron. The process is practicable to join together, without screws, pieces of the parts which do not conveniently made in two pieces. Blades of steam turbines are welded to the...ticles which have been fabricated by the simple and novel means.—Philadelphia Ledger.

The Rubber Tree.

The rubber-tree was discovered by a Jesuit missionary, Father Manoel de Esperance. He found it out on one of his apostolic journeys among the Cambeiss Indians of South America, and gave it the...pular name of the seringuera, because he remarked that the savages used the sap of this tree, which hardened quickly, to make rude boot's that were shaped like a syringe.

The annual report of the Chief Inspector of Stock of Western Australia shows that there are no fewer than 5,995 camels in that section of the Commonwealth.

MUSIC and DRAMA

KATHERINE MACDONALD IN UNUSUAL SCREEN PORTRAYAL

Katherine MacDonald portrays an unusual role in "The Infidel," her latest Associated First National release which is the feature attraction at Griffin's Theatre, to-night.

The story deals with the South Sea islands opera trade and was written especially for Miss MacDonald by Charles A. Logue, who has written over two hundred photoplays, serials, "originals" and adaptations.

"The Infidel" gives Miss MacDonald an excellent opportunity for the display of her dramatic ability, and it is said that by far the best ensemble acting of her career is shown in this picture.

She is seen in the role of a young girl who believes all mankind are fakers, but who is brought to a realization of her injustice when she is thrown into contact with the missionaries on a South Sea Isle. An absorbing romance furnishes powerful heart interest to the plot.

Fox News Weekly, "Siege of the Lancashire Queen," a two reel Jack London Sea Story, and a Pair of Kings" a highly amusing Larry Semon comedy are being exhibited on the same program.

ALICE JOYCE AT REGENT IN PLEASING ROLE

"Her Lord and Master," a play of American and British life and manners by Basil Mason, one of the first woman dramatists, to achieve success in this country furnishes Alice Joyce with a vehicle that is sure to command attention, and it serves as the feature attraction at the Regent, to-night.

The stage version starred Effie Shannon and the late Herbert Kelcey. It received much favorable comment on Broadway, and it is a tribute to the insight of the author that the play is as true and up-to-date to-day as when first put on. It gives Alice Joyce a type of role entirely new to her, the daughter of a girl who lived all her life in the middle west, imbued with the broad atmosphere and viewpoint of the country and people around her, and goes her way absolutely untrammeled by tradition or convention. It is this engaging figure around which the story moves. What happens when she comes up against the world of standards and conventions in aristocratic society forms the fascinating theme of the picture. Also a Movie Mix-Up" an entertaining Star comedy, the latest chapter of the "Mutt and Jeff" reproduced Negro drama playically called "Love Drops" are also being exhibited.

DE WOLF HOPPER HERE TOMORROW IN "THE MIKADO"

The presentation of a light opera repertoire is a colossal undertaking. A tour of one piece, particularly if the piece happens to be musical, is no easy matter, but when four different operas are presented the difficulty is naturally multiplied by many times. De Wolf Hopper and His Gilbert and Sullivan comic opera company have five Gilbert and Sullivan operas in their repertoire, "The Mikado," "Pinafore," "Pirates of Penzance," "H.M.S. Pinafore" and "Iolanthe." Each one is presented with infinite attention to the minutest detail. The truthfulness of his stage settings is assured by the fact that every detail of scenery, properties and appointments in the four productions is carried by the company and the management prides itself that not one has been assembled for the present season. Two sixty-foot baggage cars are necessary for the transportation of these effects and his Gilbert and Sullivan comic company at Griffin's tomorrow night.

MAYOR HANNA IS EULOGIZED

Ald. Greenleaf felt pleased at the remarks regarding Mayor Hanna, all of which were due him.

Ald. Foster desired to say a good word for Mayor Hanna. It was a pleasure for him (the speaker) to have been a member of the Council under the regime of Mayor Hanna.

Ald. Patterson was in hearty accord with all that had been said of Mayor Hanna.

The members of the Council arose and sang "He's a jolly good fellow" and also gave hearty cheers for the Mayor.

Mayor Hanna said he had become attached to all members of the Council and he felt somewhat sorrowful at leaving the Council work. He would, however, take an interest in municipal matters and would give any assistance he could to further the interest of the city.

A vote of thanks was tendered to the members of the press for their services.

Council adjourned until Friday evening.

In "The Mikado" The company numbers fifty in all, including a chorus of thirty which has received the highest praise everywhere.

SPEED AND FANCY SKATERS IN CANADA

Written for the Canadian Press by Norman Albert

Toronto, Dec. 26.—For many years Canada has provided champion speed skaters. The success of Canada in competition with the best from other countries, notably the United States, has been most remarkable. Such names as Fred Robson and Miss Gladys Robinson, in particular, will go down in the world's speed-skating records.

Enthusiasm is now manifesting itself in quarters hitherto uninvaded. For many seasons knowledge of speed-skating was learned only through the perseverance of youngsters on open-air surfaces. When they showed exceptional speed they were generally taken in hand by a trainer and tested in a series of races. But times have changed. Today speed skating is being fostered by many individual amateur organizations. And most of the past Canadian artists on the long, narrow steel blades are devoting considerable time to coaching the future champions. Girls' clubs as well as men's clubs have been given stimulus. The well-known successes of Miss Gladys Robinson of Toronto in attaining the title of the world's champion woman skater has proved an unprecedented stimulus among Canadian girls. In Toronto alone three large athletic clubs are vieing for the leading position.

All of the leading skaters in Canada are preparing for the winter championships in the United States. The leading men are Russell Wheeler, of Montreal; E. Gorman, St. John, N.B.; Eddie Gloster, Toronto, and Emery Stevenson, Toronto. Frank Wheeler and Gorman must be expected. Three years ago Mike Goodman of Winnipeg (the prairie pride) was regarded as one of the finest speedsters ever developed. But Goodman insisted on also playing hockey, and his speed-skating was retarded. He was a member of the Winnipeg Falcons of 1919, world's hockey champions at the Olympics.

The itinerary prepared for Miss Gladys Robinson, the pride of Canada's skating feminity, would make a travelling salesman jealous. The fair-haired speeding marvel has been practicing daily on artificial ice for a month, in preparation for all the skating championships listed in the States and Canada. Basil Cosgrave, her trainer and a good skater himself, says Miss Robinson is in the best condition of her meteoric career, "Better than ever she was," is his statement. Last winter in defeating Elsie Muller of New York and Rose Johns of Chicago, besides others, the Canadian girl made speeding history. She is now yet 23 years of age—and a world's champion.

Laudation must be given Fred Fred Robson of Toronto, the grand old veteran of the game. Robson has put in 29 years of actual skating. Lot Roe, Piper and Cody are three others of the old Canadian school of speed skating. Last winter after being away four seasons, Robson returned and won the Ontario championship and hardies at Ottawa and had two seconds. When he quit racing he held nine world's records and two Canadian skating records. They nearly all stand to-day. So many prizes has Robson won that he doesn't know their actual value or number off hand. He estimates his collection at about 250 medals and 200 trophies. When Canada-ons his skating apparel he appears to be wearing a suit of armour. Robson is now coaching a recreation club and believes he has several girl skaters who are near champions.

Figure skating has always been popular in Canada. It has made even more remarkable strides than the speed variety, considering the limitations. Figure skating in affiliation with the International Skating Union of Europe. The Toronto Skating Club of Ottawa, the Winter Club of Montreal and the Toronto Skating Club of Toronto are the largest, with smaller clubs in Hamilton, Winnipeg, Calgary and Vancouver.

Every Governor-General of Canada has been personally interested in figure skating. It has been a picturesque feature of entertainment at the Government House, Ottawa, among members of Vice-Regal households who have become accomplished figure skaters is Lady Rachael Cavendish, daughter of the Duke of Devonshire. With a view to encouraging and developing figure skating the four past Govern-Generals of Canada have presented trophies. The Earl and Countess Minto presented the Minto Cup, emblematic of Canada's figure skating championship. The Duke of Devonshire presented the Devonshire Trophy for the champion "woman skater of Canada. Another cup is called the "Minto Challenge Cup" for pairs. For skating in "form" Earl Grey offered the "Earl Grey Challenge Trophy".

And it remained for the Duke of Connaught, brother of the late King Edward VII. of England) to offer an international Trophy, open to any figure skating team of four, consisting of two ladies and two gentlemen. The New York Skating Club sent a team of four accomplished skaters to Ottawa to compete for the Connaught Cup in 1921. With many distinguished visitors as Spectators, the Connaught Cup was won by the Winter Club of Montreal. The New York team came second, and the Minto Club of Ottawa ranked third.

The Minto, Grey, Connaught and Devonshire Cups, emblematic of championships in different classes, are now all held by Montreal or Ottawa skaters. Incidentally the Toronto Skating Club is the only association in the world devoted exclusively to figure skating, that has an artificial surface of its own. A beautiful clubhouse and a huge rink with necessary equipment were constructed again and erected on the shadow-lacing net from what is now Kilsane pull.

Then, one day Nick saw Zbyszko wrestle and there he got the idea of his wrestling act.

"One day I was pulling the wrestling stunt in Washington," says Nick, "I had been pitching to lefters in practice and I was winging wet. I put my hand on my neck preparing to have a struggle period started going down, but the per spiration on my neck made it so slippery that my hand shot off and since I was off balance at the time I went down, all my poundage on the shoulder.

"Talk about a sickening pain—I never felt anything like it before. I thought I'd never get up, but I just tended to be lunching and made my exit. I took a taxi to a hospital and there they found that part of the bone had been chipped from the shoulder.

"After that I was sure my neck was dry before I started the wrestling stunt. Also there are often some serious moments for the performer while he is trying to amuse."

TWELVE-YEAR-OLD GOLFER GIVES PROMISE

Pinehurst, N.C., Dec. 27.—Foiles Wilson, twelve-year-old son of Willie Wilson, the York Harbor and Pinehurst golf professional, played the first half of the championship round in 42 new recently in a nine hole ice-cream frosting bout, and arrangements were soon made whereby part of the ice-cream frosting plant instead of lying idle practically all winter, would pump its brine over to the rink, a distance of about 150 feet. The rink's skating surface is 100 feet by 75 feet, or 12,000 square feet. By securing the aid from the adjoining plant it saved half the heavy expense of installing freezing machinery. There are around 1,300 members in the Toronto Skating Club, and of these about 700 are active figure skaters.

TEA FROM CHINA AGAIN GOING TO RUSSIA

Petrograd, Dec. 26—The war interrupted transportation of tea from China to Russia, and for seven or eight years the Russians, the greatest tea drinkers in the world, have been without their favorite brands of this popular beverage.

Today it is coming again in large quantities. Eight hundred tons arrived from China lately in one shipment, and more is on the way.

ACE OF CLOWNS IN BASEBALL

Nick Altrock Tells How He Secured His Mirth-Provoking Acts

Nick Altrock, king clown of baseball, gets his stuff at various places, and Nick's stuff happens to be baseball diamond art. Not so many years ago it was what he put on the ball, for Altrock was one of the game's greatest pitchers.

Nick's fight-ive act, one of the best things he does, was picked off a black wire in a kark yard. Nick's next-door neighbor was a man who made his livelihood doing slack wire stuff at county fairs in "the summer and autumn months. At the close of the season the performer returned home and practiced new stuff on a slack wire stretched across the yard in the rear of his home, and Nick's act is not a burlesque, but a perfect imitation of his next-door neighbor practicing his program for the next summer.

One day Altrock viewed the training camp of Johnny Kilbane and he saw Johnny shadow box. He came home again and worked up his shadow-boxing act from what he saw Kilbane pull.

Wolfe's showing was a disappointment. He came here heralded as the coming champion many months ago, but his recent achievements being a luring handout out to Joe Lynch, and much was expected of him when he fell short. The crowd watched Gould get a fine deal, as the first half of the battle, and the most of them expected Wolfe to open up towards the end and show something. He did show more aggressiveness in the last two rounds, and landed a few healthy ones, but Gould's defensive tactics resulted in a fifty-dollar fine being plastered on him in the tenth for using his head too freely.

The showing of Gould was an improvement on his last appearance here, when he was badly beaten by Curly Wilshire. Benny has improved a lot, but on last night's showing he has not yet ripe for championship honors. He is aggressive, fairly shifty with both hands and feet, but leaves these openings at times, and it was surprising that a man of Wolfe's experience did not take advantage of these openings. Gould hurt the cleaner blows of the two, although Wolfe had more power in his punches when he did land, but the latter was most of a pawing match than either boxing or fighting. Wolfe was the first at the clinch style, but Gould managed to evade most of the punishment.

BENNY GOULD LIFTS TITLE

Defeats Jack Wolfe, of Cleveland in Poor Bout

Toronto, Dec. 27.—A world's championship, the junior featherweight title, changed hands here last night, Benny Gould, of this city, lifting the crown from Jack Wolfe of Cleveland, the holder, in one of the poorest main bouts witnessed here for some time, and if the battle is an indication of what the junior featherweight title stands for these days, boxing is in a mess and Wolfe loses very little. The bout was close, a draw would have been neither here nor there, in fact, one of the judges called the bouts even at the end of the ten rounds, while the other gave it to Gould by a decision, and Referee Marsh thereupon gave Gould custodianship of the title. The decision was greeted with cheers by the Gould supporters, while the opposition claimed it as everything from a mistake to the work of the boxing jury. There wasn't much on which to decide the best man, but Gould was the more aggressive of the two.

BIG GAME HERE FRIDAY

A. R. Clarke Co., Hockey Squad Versus Belleville Intermediates at Arena Friday Next

On Friday night next, the A. R. Clarke Co. hockey team of Toronto will play an exhibition game here at the arena with the Belleville Intermediates. Definite announcement of this fact was made this afternoon by Coach Marks of the local intermediates, who has been negotiating of late, for such an exhibition game.

The A. R. Clarke Co. squad are the champions of the Industrial League of Toronto, and are no mean squad-ron of puck chasers. Look them over.

There is young Roy Walters, Jesse Spring and "Duke" McCurry, all three of whom are former members of the Timmins Senior Northern Ontario Hockey Association team. McCurry is now with the Argonaut seniors. Then they have Eddie Hoskin, now with the Aura Lee seniors, and "Jock" Easton, formerly with the Iroquois Falls team in the North Ontario Hockey Association. Friar, Draper, and Wells, who are former Collingwood players will also be with the Clarke team, and last but not least, McKinnon, formerly of the Sudbury Wolves of the North, will also grace their lineup.

The simple statements of those facts should be sufficient evidence to convince the fans that Friday's game will be a hummer, and a real turnout is expected.

Watch these columns for further references to the big game, and for the local lineup.

OLD BALL PLAYER PASSES AWAY

Philadelphia, Dec. 26.—Weldon D. "Wee" Fisher, a noted baseball player of a half a century ago, and the first baseman of the original Athletics, died in a hospital yesterday. He was about 81 years old and was born in Camden, N. J. He joined the Athletics in 1865 as an amateur and when the game began to grow in popularity he accepted a salary of $1,500 a year. He was a member of the Athletics in 1874 when that club and Boston made the first trip to Europe of American ball players. Mr. Fisher in his later years was with a firm that made a collar and necktie. He was known as the "dandy" of the diamond. He retired from base ball in 1877 to enter business and was active up to his final illness.

WHAT IS PROFIT?

Ordinarily when a man tells another that he makes twenty-five per cent. on goods he sells, it would appear that his statement was quite clear. But is it? Is the twenty-five per cent, figured on the cost or on the selling price; on total sales, or capital invested? Suppose a man had ten thousand dollars invested in buildings, real estate, stock, etc., had a total yearly sales of twenty thousand dollars, and this twenty thousand dollars worth of goods cost him fifteen thousand dollars, he having turned over a five thousand dollar investment three times in the year. Now his profit would be five thousand dollars. On his original investment his profit is fifty per cent., on his total sales his profit is twenty-five per cent. and on his cost it is thirty-three and a third per cent. Thus it is that figures may not lie, but they do not tell the whole truth at times. Profits themselves when carefully expressed in percentages are misleading as one person knows what they are a per cent. of. Profits can be easily padded or toned down as the emergency requires. When the Business Profits Tax man is around, depreciation of machinery, equipment, buildings, etc., is excessive; sinking funds, bills for repairs, cost of replacing scrapped machines, etc., come high, and profits dwindle. On the other hand, if the gentleman with whom you are discussing profits are selling stock, why profits are excessive, there is little or no depreciation, steady market, no labor troubles, life of machinery and fixtures is long, no repairs, no replacements, overhead expenses low, etc., etc. So after all, when we say we know what profits are, we are usually taking a great deal for granted. Figures do not tell the whole truth when it comes to profits in a business. Profits is a very elusive matter to figure and is second only to cost, in this respect. In fact the method of obtaining one has a great deal in common with the method of obtaining the other. In business where intervals are interlocking and complex, it is extremely difficult to nail down either cost or profit to a definite figure. Most people imagine that definite figures can be assigned and they would be surprised to learn that many assumptions enter into all cost and profit figures.

THE CANADIAN RAILWAY SYSTEMS

Our railway problems may be complex in many ways, but they are simple in other ways—two systems, one privately owned and one publicly owned, the former having a yearly profit on operations, the latter a loss. There is our problem simplified.

Now to be a well-wisher of the Canadian National system it is not necessary to be an enemy of the C.P.R. Some people may not agree with this; others with broader vision will.

The Canadian National is not public owned from choice; it was not a preconceived policy at all. It was just force of circumstances—an accident—that placed the road in the hands of the people.

Now Canada owns a great deal to the C.P.R. It is truly a national asset. That we should not turn against this great enterprise that has done so much for Canada, simply because our own roads, the National Railways, have a huge deficit. To the great hearted men of private resources—pathfinders and upbuilders—who staked heavily and in some cases lost for themselves, that the country might have its first transcontinental road, we cannot be ungrateful. If Canada had been forced to wait until public enterprise built the road across the country, we might not yet have had an unbroken line of steel from Halifax to Vancouver.

Every Canadian who places the country's interests first, must desire the success of the National Lines, even though it is a legacy from the Laurier regime that was forced on the late Borden Government in order that disastrous consequences might be avoided. The present Liberal Government have a new chief executive, a new Board of Directors, and the slate is all cleaned for them in order that they may continue to carry on the good work commenced by the old Board. It is to be desired that they can accomplish their task!

The chief interest of the C.P.R. claims its road is a national road. He asks the question: "What other road or what other enterprise, whether publicly owned or privately owned, has done more to entitle it to be described as national?" It is almost part of the national constitution because it was called for by the pact of Confederation. In the minds of all fair-thinking Canadians, the claim of Canada's eyes, all North America's, first transcontinental road to being national cannot be denied. We owe it to it alone the opening up and settling of the West, whose wealth production from the Prairie Provinces alone this year will, it is estimated, amount to about $400,000,000.

Yes, the C.P.R. too must be considered.

CHARITY AT SCHOOL TRUSTEES

Dr. Sampson P. Robins Wasn't Big Enough to Touch Near Cobourg.

Dr. Sampson P. Robins, born on the 27th, at his home in Newcastle, is the birth and growth of the Protestant school system both in Ontario and Quebec and for sixty years played a vigorous part in the educational history of the former that he has retired the veteran editor-in-chief of the Journal of Education of abstruse mathematical problems, for which he has been famous his powers for hours at a stretch, and has been the recipient of the recognition of prime ministers—a task which only the humanities to date. Seventy-four years ago, when he was but quite a little boy, the future of his first school in a deserted shanty in the backwoods in the neighborhood of Peterboro, his parents having emigrated from the north of Ireland townships of Upper Canada. He received eight dollars a month and was boarded at the homes of the parents of his pupils.

One of Dr. Robins' recollections of these pioneering days is of collecting his pay of oatmeal. There were no mills to grind it, either, but he received the produce on the newly-cleared ground and the color of the cases he brought home subsequently. The men the head remained unchanged to the end of the family would take a small bag of their own with them when they went out chopping, and, in the intervals when they rested from their more strenuous labors, would do the grinding. Some of the boys and girls he taught were much bigger than himself, but Dr. Robins' military drill ed he had no difficulty in disciplining them. In a year in the woods Rev. Robins was appointed to a school six miles south of Cobourg. He was the head of the Board of Trustees greeted his arrival by refusing to pay more than $7 a month, and refused to examine him. But two years later, when the first public examination for teachers was conducted in the counties of Durham and Northumberland, the boy teacher took first place.

"There was some very good teaching in those days, and some very bad, for we were not troubled by inspectors and could select methods as we pleased," he said.

The success attained by Dr. Robins in his several spheres attracted the attention of the Upper Canada Methodist authorities and spread to Montreal, with the result that he was offered the post of first Principal of the newly-established McGill Normal School, which he was connected with for the next fifty years. As organizer of the Protestant Board of Schools of Montreal, under the Protestant Board of School Commissioners, he became recognized as one of the foremost educators of Quebec Province, and his jubilee in 1899, was the occasion of a public dinner in celebration of a public servant's most prominent citizens.

Dr. Robins took full advantage of all educational opportunities and finally graduated in the degree of B.A., M.A., and LL.D., receiving also from Bishop's College University the honorary degree of D.C.L. in recognition of his services to education in the province.

Dr. Robins was born in Faversham, Kent, England, and came to Canada in 1846. He is descended from a long line of Cornish mine captains, and both his father and mother were "travelling preachers." He married Miss Jane Dougall, who is still alive as are their eight children.—Toronto Sunday World.

A Restless Pioneer.

Joseph Larouche, whose family is said to have been the prototype of the Chapdelaine in Louis Hemon's novel of Quebec rural life, "Maria Chapdelaine," is reported dead at Senneterre, Lake Preissac, Northland in the Lake St. John country. Samuel Chapdelaine will stand as the type of pioneer who ever pressed forward to a new frontier in the forests of the Province. His was a restless temperament, the active part of which was spent in ever cutting new trails in the remaining Canadian wilderness, until finally he has scattered the clay belt of Northern Ontario and Quebec with clearings from Quebec to Manitoba and Keewatin territories. Larouche was so he was too restless for the good of his large sturdy wife, and when at last she broke under the burden one of the pioneer's privations of his wife was this:

"When we took up our first land grant in Manitoba we had two cows and very little pasture for them, so I went by all out and was in search of timber and hard to win for the plough. As for me, I picked up a few acres, he said to her: 'Laura, I am going to clear land for you.' And from morning till night it was chop, chop, chop, and every evening back to the log house except for dinner; and all that time she did the work of the house and the cooking; she looked after the cattle, mended the clothes, and, to be honest, never rested from her toiling; and then half a dozen times I would come outside the door and stand for a minute looking at the trees on the fringe of the woods, where I was getting my last little killing for birches and the spruce to make a patch of sugar bush."

Domestic Finance.

The flutter: "I hope, sir, that you will consider me in the matter of an increase, sir. If I may not be able to pay regular dividends."

The Chief's Father: "Ay, dear boy, don't talk of dividends. I shall be only too glad if you don't levy regular assessments on me."

The Critical Listener.

"The coal shortage"—began the appreciative citizen.

"Is it?" interrupted Mr. Stormington Barnes. "My Hamlet gets roasted regardless of the coal question."

PRESS OPINIONS

PROMISES SOUND GOOD

(Guelph Herald)

A definite statement of policy with regard to the Canadian National Railway services is announced by Sir Henry Thornton, and while a portion of his announcement is construed to have no bearing on the radial question now agitating Toronto, Hamilton and St Catharines, the application of his promises in general means consideration to the Dominion as a whole.

First, and most important, Sir Henry refers to the policy which will govern the new board, that policy being, briefly, the protection of the business and improved service to the public. "The Canadian National railways must adequately fulfil their obligations to the public, and furnish that character of service which will meet public requirements and enable the said railway not only to retain but increase gross receipts," he says. Hitherto, the public has not received that consideration from the railway management which it has had the right to expect. Now that the people have come into possession of the system, it is but reasonable to suppose that a better service will be provided.

Another important announcement of Sir Henry's was with respect to the electrification of at least a portion of the National railway system. He regards such electrification of the steam roads as the best means of solving our transportation problems and makes the definite promise to the people of Hamilton and Toronto that the board will "electrify or other wise improve the service of th Canadian National Railways in the City of Toronto and Hamilton from time to time, as circumstances and the demands of the traffic justify. An investigation into an examination of the services between Toronto and Hamilton and Niagara Falls, and between Toronto toward Cobourg, will at once be put in hand, with a view at least to special consideration as soon as possible. Other developments will follow as may be required."

The important departure forecasted by Sir Henry is accepted in some quarters prejudicial in Hydro-radial circles, where the spread of the latter, of course, is one attitude to be expected by those who are opposed to public ownership, but it does not at all follow. Sir Henry's proposal would doubtless only bring into Hydro scheme, which comprised radials to feed the main trunk lines. Electrification has long been regarded as the solution of at least part of Canada's railway problems, and it has been contended that if the north and south lines in and out of the city were electrified the result would be a vast improvement in every way. Time alone will tell how far the Thornton policy will be applied and how far upon the Hydro radial movement.

FRANCE AND REPARATIONS

(Lindsay Daily Post)

The attitude of the French on the question of reparations is one of the perplexing problems confronting Europe at the present time. While the sympathy of the world is with the French people owing to the suffering endured as well as the losses sustained as result of German invasion, this has cooled somewhat owing to the arrogant policy of the government. England has plainly intimated that she will not be a partner to coercive methods against Germany, so that if France acts she will act alone. That she is firm in her intentions can be gathered from a despatch from Paris, which states that any plan which contemplates a reduction of German indebtedness without a corresponding reduction of the allied war debts will be resolutely rejected by France, according to a correspondent of the Paris press. The American solution, which, as now described here, is first to reduce the German debt and then to make a loan to Germany, is therefore certain to be rejected.

Germany is not in a position to meet the French demands. The conditions in the republic are such that a crisis may occur any day. Lamar Lewis told the British House of Commons the other day that Germany was on the verge of collapse." If it is feared that if France takes steps to enforce her demands, revolution will break out in Germany. If this should come the war would have to be borne by France, which would certainly cease to lose in the end.

THE NORTH WIND

(B. Frank Hays, in N.Y. Times.)
The South Wind is sleeping,
The North, full of wrath,
With his locks white with snow
Which he shakes in his path,
Has come the mountains in hurrying south,
And his breath flies before
Like a fog from his mouth;

And over the meadows all barren and bare,
Now the snow, is felt thick as he shakes his white hair;
And here on the mountain, and there on the plain,
The trees are all clothed with white flowers again.

The lake in the valley, the brook in the field,
Are stirred with his wrath, and helplessly yield
And o'er their firm surface he marches as in pride.
And hangs his white cloak on the tall mountain side.

Then over the billows he rushes in glee
But shrinks in despair at the strength of the sea
Which, though he is Lord of the ocean and strand,
But here his dominion is stopped with his hand.

He roars through the alleys, the storms at the locks,
He shrieks down the chimney, each doorway he blocks;
Then, up in the steeple, the great bell he shakes
And laughs at the terror his wild rush awakes.

Now over the gray-yard he mourns fully long,
And kisses all the graves with the whitest of snows—
No one he neglects, be it pauper or King.
And whispers, "Lie warm till the coming of Spring."

FARMING FOR WOMEN

(From a Correspondent.)

For practical purposes we must assume that the would-be woman farmer takes up farming with the intention of making it pay—to the extent, at any rate, of providing herself with a good livelihood or of receiving a percentage on the capital invested. How far is this possible? The answer to this question resolves itself in most cases into a personal one; it depends largely on the individual.

Farming is just a splendid game in which we stake our forces for one big gamble against those of Nature. The margin of profits is barely large enough to allow for the gambling element, whether this latter be due to the local weather, changes in Government policy, or the world supply of wheat. It is never kept constant, therefore, to allow for mistakes; mistakes as to the right time to put in or to use, the right moment to plough a field, to sow a crop, to wean a calf, to sell a pig. You must be prepared to meet and master the one moment for the one job; it may never occur again during the 365 days.

For this, you must have knowledge, whether theoretical or acquired, and some capacity, and sound judgment. If you do not possess all these qualifications, your results will be drawn up by some one who has those which you lack. As regards technical knowledge on the administrative side, many women, just seeing merely a business capacity, have farmed on a large scale with a capable working bailiff to guide them at the start. In a few years as intelligent woman can learn a good deal in this way, and can gain the experience, without buying it too dearly, as she goes along.

DIFFICULTIES OF THE SMALL FARM.

But, if you require such help in management, your farm must be of a size that will carry this overhead charge and employ the whole of this man's time to the full advantage. If you farm on a medium scale, you must be prepared to give your whole time to supervision and must be capable of it. Further, the smaller the farm, the larger the proportion of practical work which you must do yourself, and this involves a knowledge of actual technical operations: when one gets down to a small holding, the sole profit comes out of the return on one's own hard and continuous manual work.

The returns on a small holding do not admit of the employment of much outside labour. The smallholder works extra hours without payment to sow a crop at the critical moment; but no one has more than one pair of hands, and extra hands mean hard cash. This creates a difficulty never recognised by those who write treatises on how to make a living on a small farm, and that is it is a vital one. So when the cow calves, and the bees swarm, and the strawberry crop needs picking and the churning morning, when one is already facing an impending thunderstorm, getting in the hay or the last load of hay, there is no hand to be a foss somewhere: you lose a swarm of bees, or fail to get the top price for your fruit or strawberries.

Again, the capitalist on a big farm, with skilled and hard-labouring machinery and an adequate number of farm hands, can quickly concentrate all forces of labour at the right moment. The small farmer, on the other hand, is unable to cope with conflicting demands for himself, let us say, a sudden burst of sunshine, and his hay just fit to stack cannot be hustled under cover in time, and is laboriously and wearily spread in the intervals of next month's rain.

A LIFE OR A LIVING?

The moral is not necessarily 'do not farm on a small scale, but rather, do not bite off more than you can chew.' Make a farm big enough to employ the whole time of one man, or two men, or three men to the fullest advantage, and choose a type of farming which will give a return on this labour; or, if you are not in a position to employ labour, be content with a small holding which you can manage yourself, and confine your activities to the smallest number of head of poultry and pigs, with possibly two or three cows. In the latter case, remember the old adage—

Three cows are two cows,
Two cows are no cow.

But one cow is no cow at all.

Finally, I would repeat the opening words of these articles: that only the very exceptional woman can succeed. Man is likely to make an entire living; for others it is a life rather than a living. The alternative is, then, that it be as uncongenial existence in a town, and the advantage of having their own home and leading an independent life is more genial surroundings may more than compensate for the hard and often continuous work, and the possible struggle to make both ends meet. Moreover, many things which would be luxuries in a town life are thrown in with a farm life; one can live largely on one's own poultry, fresh eggs, butter and milk, and the joy of getting an ample supply of vegetables and f ruit out of one's own garden is appreciated by every housekeeper.

THE HOUSEWIVES OF SWEDEN

Stockholm, Dec. 25.—A hall mark of purity and excellence on goods for home consumption has been established by the Swedish National Housewives Association, according to Mrs. Agnes Ingleman, president of the Association. Mrs. Ingleman said that the Association for years has been working to secure the best merchandise for the home, subjecting all articles of products offered to scientific purity and quality tests. The Government Testing Bureau, as well as the Technical Science School at Upsale, have now placed themselves at the disposal of the Association.

This guarantee mark on household provisions, groceries, and supplies, will be granted only to those manufacturers whose goods pass the tests, and on condition that they place this mark on all their goods, guaranteed under. Periodically the goods are subjected to new tests to ascertain whether the standard is being kept up. Because the merchandise proves to have deteriorated the manufacturer is immediately notified, and if he then fails to bring the goods up to specifications his right to use the guarantee mark of the Association is cancelled, and the fact that he has been deprived of this privilege is published.

The officials of the Swedish Association are aware of a similar activity in other countries under the name of Contentia movement, and they have entered into correspondence with those back of this movement in America.

WINSTON CHURCHILL

A writer recalls a description of Mr. Winston Churchill as he appeared this year by the ars, at Frishon:

"I shall never forget the sparkle of Winston in the waves, and Winston in holiday garb, with one of his ex-cabinet colleagues, both entirely in portion of his head, grasping a bottle of milk tightly by the neck, and churning along the surf.

Winston's originality asserts itself even in his hours of ease. He went bathing with his hat on, and after carefully tucking up his trousers above his knees, he kept his canvas shoes, hat, and socks on."

Why is it that we always seem so surprised to learn that famous people do ordinary things? Is it for the forgotten the astonishment of a friend of mine when I told him that King George was fond of oranges. Why shouldn't he be And why shouldn' Winston paddle if he wants to?

FOSSIL TUSKS APPEARING ON IVORY MARKET

London, Dec. 26.—The latest addition to the Natural History Department of the British Museum is the skull and tusks of a Siberian mammoth, the first ever brought into western Europe. The skull was dug out of the ice on one of the Siberian islands in the Arctic ocean, and as it was in cold storage through countless centuries it is remarkably fresh, even to the fragments of skin still attached to the great jaws.

By examining the teeth, which are in excellent condition and about six inches in diameter, experts have established that they belonged to a full grown female mammoth. Nine inches of the head are snow white in contrast to the usual fossil bones, which are stained brown or black.

The tusks are 12 feet long, and the ivory is in perfect condition. Their value as ivory is placed at $1,000.

Large quantities of fossilized ivory, dug up in various parts of Siberia are now coming to England for sale, a ship load of these remains arrived recently, and was sold for prices higher than paid on India's ivory tusks.

The supply of such ivory, however is limited and it will not have any material effect on the market

"I intend to dispose of the influence of the vamp, man or woman, as the case may be," the judge said.

CATS QUOTED ACCORDING TO SINGING ABILITY

Winsted, Conn., Dec. 23.—P. T. Bronson of Barkhamsted advertises the following:

"Cats—One beautiful domesticated tortoise shell cat, weight 12 pounds; expression, intelligent, friendly eyes. When she sings his sides swell. The music how it wells from the depths among the cells. Another, a Maltese kit. Cats while they last; all orders filled quick as cats."

Bronson's fine tortoise shell cat is no bird-catcher. The cats are quoted at $2.50 to $5, according to their singing ability.

WORLD'S BUTTER RECORD FOR "MAY WALKER"

(By Canadian Press)

Omaha, Dec. 27.—May Walker Ollie Homestead, a Holstein cow owned by the Minnesota Holstein Co., at Austin, Minn., has broken the world's record for butter production, Henry Fetter, For the 365 days she gave 1,027.27 pounds of butter fat, the equivalent to 1,216.3 pounds of butter, according to A. L. Eberhart, president of the company.

The record of 1,306.9 pounds of butter was held by Duchess Skylark Ormsby, a Holstein that died in Minneapolis a few years ago, he said.

SEVERS ARM TO BE RID OF TATTOO

(By Canadian Press)

New York, Dec. 27.—Because he was tired of a slight tattoo design on his right arm, James J. Scanlon, of Shenandoah, Pa., placed his arm on the block at Bellevue hospital, and with a keen, Scanlon told detectives at the hospital where he now lives to recovering from the result of his act. A trainman drifting freight cars found Scanlon on the track with his right arm severed at the elbow. They believed that the injury of an undisposed woman, whom Scanlon refuses on his arm had grown tired of him and had he deliberately placed his arm upon the track.

ANOTHER COMET DISCOVERED

Cambridge, Mass., Dec. 27.—The Harvard Observatory has received word by cable of the discovery of a comet by Skjellerup, the South African astronomer, at Cape Town, November 26. The comet is described as faint and the position given was in the constellation of Crater.

Telescopic observations taken at Harvard after the receipt of the cablegram show the comet to be brighter than Baade's comet, which was recently discovered, and to be moving more rapidly. It is going southeast at a rate of between three and four diameters of the moon per day. At present it is of the seventh magnitude, somewhat too faint, to be seen with the naked eye.

MILK VERSUS POP

The cow's feelings were hurt. She pensively chewed her chewing gum and blinked to keep the tears back. She had just heard Jack declare that he would rather have a bottle of pop say day than a glass of her milk.

"I don't believe in modern hyeven tonic like pop," declared the cow.

"Neither do I," agreed the horse. "Look at the way the family carries on over the auto. They never pay the least attention to me any more."

"I wish you, too," said the dog. "You should see Mary with that new teddy-bear of hers. It gives a feeble little bark when she squeezes it in the middle. I can bark louder, and I don't have to be squeezed, either."

"Let's run away, "proposed the cow. "Let's go where we are appreciated."

"All right," the others agreed. "Where shall we start?"

"We'll start about eight," the cow said. She always made all the plans.

Shortly at eight the cow was all ready. But she couldn't find the dog anywhere. "Where's the dog?" she asked.

"Why, don't you know?" asked the horse. "Stacy broke her teddy-bear and so he has gone to play with her. He said for us to go on, not wait for him."

"Backing out at the last minute," grumbled the cow. "I might have known he wouldn't stick. 'Well, you're quite welcome."

"Y-y-yes," the horse answered, not very enthusiastically. Just then the cow's feelings were hurt because of the dog

ATLANTIC IN ANGRY MOOD

Fourteen Ships Reach New York Scarred by Heavy Weather

Other Craft Not Able to Make Port According to Schedule

New York, Dec. 26.—Battered and scarred by heavy weather, fourteen ships plowed through quarantine early this morning until late afternoon to-day, the shipyard of many reporting a vicious storm ending battle with a series of lashing hurricanes which seemed to shake the Atlantic to its depths.

The Caronia, which arrived today from Liverpool, via Halifax, brought stories of terrific weather. Another liner reported to her owners that she would be two days late. A third flashed in with a report that she couldn't reach New York until to-morrow, although she was apparently gone sanely through most of the storm.

All of the ships which came into quarantine to-day were freighters. Some of them had parts of the bridge gone. Small boats on their decks were crushed and torn. In one or two instances hatches were pounded in, and all of them reported that the crews had been in oil skins almost steadily for from five to fourteen days.

With fourteen ships reporting in quarantine did not have as many as were expected. Five ships including La Savoie, were overdue. Savoie reported she would be in Thursday but the owners heard nothing from the Lord Byron, the Eastern City and the York Castle, all of which were expected in their docks today. The President Monroe will arrive tomorrow.

Cable and wireless messages told of the ravages on the European side. Falmouth, England, reported three ships had put in there with broken machinery and another went to St. Vincent, Cape Verde Islands, for engines also damaged. The Belgian steamship Longfleur, going to Norfolk, Va., had to stop in Queenstown harbor. Halifax reported that the Norwegian freighter Lorenta W. Hansen, which sailed from Swansea, Wales, December 11, with a load of coal, had been forced to put back to Liverpool, leaking and with her bridge swept away.

London, Dec. 22.—The Canadian Press is able to state authoritatively that there is not the faintest idea at present official action is taken to change the name of the British Empire to Commonwealth of Nations, as has been suggested in a press cable yesterday.

The subject has never been discussed in any responsible quarter, the Canadian Press was informed today, nor has there been any serious representations on the matter.

Gotenburg, Dec. 27.—The radio-phone is becoming a serious menace to the safety of the herring off the Swedish coast. The fishermen out at sea soon will be told from the Gothenburg radio central the exact location of the herring schools. This unique service, which will tend to eliminate wasteful waiting on the part of fishermen, and will doubtless mean a considerable increase in the catches of herring, is the newest commercial use to which the wireless telephone will be put in Sweden according to plans just completed.

While merchant vessels have for some time been required by law to carry wireless equipment, the smaller fishing vessels have hitherto operated without systems of communication with the land. They will now receive weather reports, forecasts, and news, as well as radio tips regarding the appearance of the herring.

Plans are on foot to distribute news in Sweden by radio telephone. Experiments are being made from Stockholm as a center.

BOMB GRIM CURIOR.

shrunken Human Heads Were Found

One of the most fascinating countries of South America is Peru, for it contains literally around its lofty and Pre-Inca ruins and much interest is manifested in the many tribes of Indians who inhabit this Latin American country, but the tribe of most wonders is the Jivaro of Ecuador, who baffle science in their gruesome method of shrinking human heads; a good illustration of this is owned by Mr. G. W. Soiman, ex-M.P.P. of Toronto, who has a well known business man and a world traveler, who has made a magnificent collection of curios, varied and collected from the remote parts of the world, but the most extraordinary, according to Mr. Sulman, is the shrunken heads.

Very little information concerning these heads is available. The Encyclopedia Britannica is very meagre indeed. It says that they thought objects of worship by the Jivaro, who are described as being a very war-like tribe and head hunters.

The shrunken head is, as its name denotes, that of a man's head in a small form, shrunken to the size of an orange without loss of an single feature.

The manner of shrinking is not known to science. It has been said that they brew a concoction of several herbs and shrubs, which is used, has a tendency of softening the skin after which the heads are placed in large piles of sand and a fire kept going for months, night and day, until the head is brought down to the miniature size. They were then taken out and hung in the huts of the owners as either trophies or as objects of worship. It has also been said that the process of shrinking was done by alternately applying heat and then cold, but science has been brain in vain to the actual process.

While in Peru Mr. Sulman was informed that scientists have entered the Peruvian wilds in which the Jivaros have lived and that their heads have come out the same as described, recognizable in every detail.

The head is quite hard and retains the hair and eyebrows and even at close scrutiny the wrinkles in the face.

Through the nose of Mr. Sulman's specimen is a cord showing how the captive was led to his doom. Large holes are punched in the ears of the specimen for ear-rings, presumably the same as the locals, but not as large, as the Incas were ear-rings so heavy that they distended the fleshy part of the ear almost to the shoulder.

Many of the museums of North America and Europe have specimens of the shrunken head, which is considered really more rehearkable than a mummy.

Plan's that Bear Prarie.

Do you realize that there are such things as vegetable parchment?

Now and then in certain tropical plants curious hard round substances may be found nearly drive the compound nail pearls, since their composition is almost identical with the product of the oyster.

Usually these substances are discovered in the joints of bamboos. On analysis they are found to consist of almost pure carbonate of lime, which is the material that goes to make up the oyster pearl.

Sometimes the pearls are found in the endorsperm of the coconut, and they also occur on other kinds of the prune pomegranate trees.

They are sometimes the size of a hazel nut, but more often rather smaller. How these pearls come into being is not really known. They are believed to be due to excess of calcareous matter in the juice of the plant.

In the East Indian Islands these pearls are valued very highly as charms, and the owner of one will not part with it for any figure, because he considers that as long as he holds the pearl he will be immune from all ills.

Mrs. Mary Hiller, of Hamilton, Ont., a Canadian artist, who painted a number of studies of the ground around the Canadian fought in the Great War, has a picture of the market of Ypres, the market being fold amidst the ruins caused by the war. This picture will eventually be exhibited in Canada.

The production of steel in Canada during November declined 1,217 tons or 2.3 per cent. below the output of the previous month. Four furnaces were active during the month including two at Sydney and one each at Sault Ste. Marie and Hamilton.

In England it is stated that agricultural depression is greater today than in 1879 when losses to landowners were greater than the capital of all the joint stock banks.

Export figures of pulp and paper exports for November up nearly 2½ per cent. over 1921. There is an increase in demand for newsprint and all book papers from the U.S.A.

The farmers in the West are not cheerful over the decline in the price of wheat, while other commodities rise. Winnipeg wholesale trade is not elated over the record made in 1922 but have an optimistic view for the coming year.

Sentiment in Wall Street has undergone a decided improvement and a resumption of the major bull movement is being looked for by many of those who had just about given up hope during the recent decline. The market at the close on Friday showed signs of desiring to go higher and in many quarters it is expected that this tendency will be renewed. The news develop ments of the three-day rest for the security markets have been uneven and so far as can be seen without any great marketwise interest either way.

The time had come to dole out the day's rations, and the head of the regiment the quartermaster and his assistant had been portioning them out in preparation for distribution.

The assistant turned round to the quartermaster and, with a twinkle in his eye, said:—"As the glass, sorr, there's a loaf short. Who'll I give it to?"

"Keep it yourself, Mike," replied the quartermaster.

Jews Face Old Prejudice

After the war was over, as a result of it, there has been such a revival of anti-Jewish sentiment as was not of the civilized world as can not been paralleled for centuries There were various reason for this blistering in different countries. In Russia, for instance, there were and are, hundreds of thousands of Americans and Europeans, of their loyalty to the cause of the Allies was under suspicion, and the suspicion was not dispelled because of the patriotic and gallant conduct of some of them. In other countries many of the Jews had been distinguished as anti-militarists. In France they had been distrusted long before the Dreyfus affair. The Russian Jews of the United States and of every allied kitted country failed to show any enthusiasm for a cause that promised to make the czar more secure upon his throne. The great American Jewish bankers found whatever sympathy they might have had for the Allies nullified by the inclusion among them of Russia, a load that they could not think of without intensifying the gloomy arising in their minds.

That Jews were largely responsible for the Russian revolution, which added to the duration of the war, and put the cause of the free people in jeopardy, is not to be denied. Trotsky is a Jew, and other leading Soviet representatives are Jews. Naturally, a civilization that is anti-Semitic turned against the Jewish influence in Russia. That made Henry Ford's paper, the Dearborn Independent, with its series of articles designed to prove that the Jews aimed at the downfall of our civilization for the purpose of building upon the ruins a Jewish autocracy, in other parts of the world, notably in Germany, similar articles were being widely read and having an inflammatory effect upon the masses of the people. This hostility has by no means disappeared. It has manifested itself in England, the land that of all lands has been most hospitable to the Jews and their peculiar ways of living, and has affected political careers.

But animosity to the Jews is no recent phenomenon. It seems to have been in existence as long back as the Jews can trace their own history, and is probably due at bottom to the fact that they have claimed to be a peculiar people under the special protection of Jehovah. They have declined to become assimilated with the other nations among which they sojourned, and have never lost faith in the old belief that one day they would be reunited in Jerusalem in circumstances of unequalled prosperity and magnificence. They were even taught that in plundering any well but that of Palestine they would be defiling themselves, which is one of the reasons that the cities were constrained to become city dwellers, and they have remained city dwellers ever since. As city dweller they were naturally forced into commerce. In order to live, as was pointed out recently in an article in the Atlantic by Paul Scott Mowrer,

In the middle ages they began to specialize in money-lending. It is not to be supposed that they had any racial aptitude for this business. Not infrequently they were the agents and figureheads for Christian magnates who did not dare lend money in person for fear of excommunication. At the same time the growing power of the cities began to take into its own grounds, to force the exclusion of the Jews from most of the principal branches of trade and commerce, until eventually there remained only the second-hand trade and the banking business, which latter was congenial to the Jews, who were glad enough to have their wealth in concrete, easily hidden and easily transportable form, subject as they were to sudden outbursts of religious persecution.

But it is a Jewish historian, Bernard Lazare, and not a Christian, who lays the chief blame for the ostracism of the Jews and the anti-Semitic sentiments that they arouse to the laws of Moses and the victory of the rabbis over the more liberal Jewish scholastics in the fourteenth century. Lazare writes that the doctors of the synagogues had reached their end. They had cut off Israel from the community of peoples; they had made of it a being fierce and solitary, rebellious to all law, hostile to all fraternity, closed to all beautiful, noble or generous ideas; they had made of it a nation small and shrivelled, scarred by isolation, appalled by a narrow education, demoralized and corrupted by an unjustifiable pride." While the Jews of this continent and Western Europe have pretty well freed themselves from these heavy intellectual and spiritual shackles, the Jews of Eastern Europe still live for the most part in strict accordance with the letter of the Thorah and the Talmud.

"Name Yer Place."

A minister was asked to preach a special sermon on the subject of temperance.

After announcing this request, he continued: "There are only two drinks mentioned in the Book of Psalms. One is wine that maketh glad the heart of man, and the other is water, with which the wild asses quench their thirst. You can take your choice of either."

The White Elephant.

A white elephant is regarded as sacred in Siam, and when one dies it is given a funeral grander than that accorded to princes of royal blood. Buddhist priests officiate, and thousands of devout Siamese men and women follow the deceased animal to the grave. Jewels and offerings reverencing much wealth are buried with the elephant.

Canada's Water Power.

The Dominion of Canada possesses 10 per cent. of the world's total water power of 100,000,000 horsepower. The Province of Ontario's resources are estimated at 6,000,000 horse-power, of which 800,000 has already been developed.

Yesterday afternoon Miss Edith Moore, daughter of Mrs. (Dr.) Moore, Albert street, gave a little tea for her friends, after which a pleasant time was spent.

Last evening at the Belleville Club Mrs. (Judge) Wills gave a "reminiscent" party for her daughter, Miss Bl. George Wills, to a large number of young people. The music was in charge of Mr. Al. Wilson of this city, and during the evening light refreshments were served. The affair was removed to be ideal for the occasion.

The latest fine was in perfect condition, which permitted the guests to enjoy dancing to the full. The dance was a huge success, and the music was remarkably good. After the refreshments were served, dancing was continued to the wee small hours.

Dr. and Mrs. Pocock, of Kersey, spent Xmas with Mrs. Pocock's mother, Mrs. Richard Arnott, Albert street.

SEASON'S GREETINGS

LATEST NEWS FROM TRENTON

Mrs. Shaw, (nee Margaret Wiggins) was in town during the holidays visiting her aunt, Mrs. T. M. Hendrick's. Mrs. Shaw now resides in Toronto.

Mr. S. H. Jones, of the Dominion Bank staff, Toronto, spent the holidays with Mr. A. B. Arnott and family, Wooler Road.

Mr. E. A. Rea, president of Dominion Combing Mills, was again a visitor in town on Tuesday.

Mr. Fred Wright, of Benedict Proctor Co., is spending a few days in Cleveland, Ohio.

Owing to the heavy work which has prevailed at the factory during the last month or two, and which necessitated running very late in the evening, it was decided to close down the operating rooms of the Benedict Proctor factory till Thursday in order that the staff might have a much deserved rest.

The fire which destroyed the residence of Mr. Frank Cox, Clarke street, last Saturday night, has left the family in a very precarious position, but owing to the kindness of the mayor and council the G. W. V. A., the Salvation Army, some of our churches and several of our sympathizing citizens, needy articles are being rapidly sent and delivered to the family. By this act of kindness the family are receiving temporary shelter and will in due course be properly cared for. Mr. Cox is a veteran of the war and the family will be very grateful to anyone who cares to assist in any way.

The Xmas season was shocked today to read of the tragedy which befell the home of William Firman in Brighton (Smith's) on Xmas Day. Fire completely ed the home of Mr. and Mrs. Firman and family and Mr. Firman and a little daughter were victims to the flames. Many Trentonians will remember Mr. Firman, as some years ago he was employed on the staff of the Trenton Courier.

Many of our local merchants are very joyful over the splendid Xmas trade this year. In fact, the prosperity is the best ever.

We regret to learn of the recent death in Toronto of Geo. W. Arnott, who died at the home of his son, Mr. Steve Arnott last Saturday after a lingering illness. He was well known to residents of Murray Township and of Trenton and Belleville.

KING GEORGE SCHOOL WILL BE MADE SAFE

Architect Claims Building Will Be Structurally as Strong as Other Schools

A recent article in our columns regarding the King George School, has created more or less comment. In conversation with Mr. Beaumont Jarvis yesterday, he told the Intelligencer that the improvements he was getting in the building will make every part of the building absolutely safe when it is completed. The appearance inside will not be changed owing to these reinforcements, being in the walls of the upper floor.

All these reinforcements are being made at the expense of the contractors, Mr. Jarvis states. It is to be hoped that such an adjustment can be accomplished in an amical manner.

It is claimed that the upper floor of the school will be stronger than the specifications called for in the other school of the city.

Regarding the question of an investigation, it is largely a question of material and it will mean that tests of same will have to be made. It would require the services of specialists with testing laboratories, such as there are at the University of Toronto School of Applied Science, the Canadian Inspection and Testing Co., Ltd., McGill University, and The Million Herbage Co., Ltd.

The design of the building appears to have checked up correctly and the structural working and detail drawings are absolutely correct, says Mr. Jarvis.

Mr. Jarvis is the man chosen by the School Board to look after the interests of the citizens and all statements and information should be backed up by the School Board as long as he is the architect in charge of the interpretation of the drawings and specifications.

At the present time is the School Board aware when the architect will be ready for occupancy. Are they protecting themselves against the contingency that they will possibly be called upon to pay for some of the delay sustained through these unfortunate differences between the architect and contractors?

Is the fact that the use and occupancy of the school is denied the city a matter of no moment? It appears to have been worth at least fifty dollars a day at the time when the contract was let.

The citizens in general are expecting some decisive action from the School Board. The fact that there has been so many serious mistakes, and some errors in judgment, is manifestly evident. Sooner or later these will be investigated and it would appear that points, it would be infinitely better for all concerned if it were sooner. No public operated business would tolerate such a condition of affairs for a moment. Why should the citizens then be called upon to accept such a situation?

TRAMPLED TO DEATH

IN CHRISTMAS RUSH!

Hastings, Mich., Dec. 26.—Russell Smith, six-year-old son of Ralph Smith, was trampled to death by a crowd of children in their mad rush to receive gifts and candy during a ceremony at the Community Christmas tree in the heart of the business district.

The boy was dead before it was discovered that he had fallen beneath the feet of his school mates. His cries apparently were drowned out in the shouting of the children.

Russel had been taken downtown only after he pleaded all during the day, the father said.

C.P.R. EARNINGS SHOW INCREASE

The Grain Rush is Now Over—1921 Figures Surpassed

Ottawa, Dec. 26.—The traffic earnings of the Canadian Pacific and the Canadian National Railways are being followed with interest, for now that the heavy rush of grain for the season has ended the returns now coming in enable one the better to judge the effect of the rate reductions especially on grain, during the period of normal flow of traffic. The Canadian Pacific is faring better this month, duy probably to the fact that it had more grain to handle and that it is also handicapped by the Atlantic ports via the all rail route. Up to the week ending December 21st, the Canadian Pacific's earnings were $1,184,000 over those for the same period for December last year.

In so far as the Canadian Pacific is concerned this is a much better showing than was made last year when during December there was a drop of $450,000 in net operating revenue, as compared with the same month in 1920. The entire 100,000,000 bushels of wheat in the West, of course, makes a difference.

During the period for September 1st to December 14th the Canadian Pacific marketed 162,196,875 bushels of grain, or 58,000,000 more than for the same period last year. The bushels loaded and shipped totalled 153,294,000 or 57,325,000 more than last year. The cars shipped were 102,981 or 35,472 more than in 1921the average number of cars shipped per day was 1144, against 75 last year. This year, the average of bushels per car was 1,467 or 62 more than in 1921. The grain shipments were as follows: Wheat, 131,749,586; oats, 9,129,923; barley, 5,547,240; flax, 1,552,005; rye, 8,795,140.

BERNHARDT WORSE

(Canadian Press Despatch)
Paris, Dec. 27.—Madame Sarah Bernhardt's condition took a turn for the worse today.

HE HADN'T BEEN TIPPED

A traveller on board just dined in a refreshment room, regretting having to leave something on the table, slipped the remainder of a chicken surreptiously into his pocket.

The waiter, who noticed the action, followed the traveller coolly emptied the turcen into the diner's pocket. The traveller, feeling a strong warmth come over him, turned round and queried:

"What are you doing there, waiter?"

"Sir," coolly replied the latter, "you have forgotten the gravy; the two go together."

WILL ATTEND BANQUET

At the Randolph hotel, Kingston, this evening the Ancient St. John's Lodge A. F. & A. M. will hold a banquet. Amongst the speakers will be Mr. F. E. O'Flynn, of this city.

Vienna, Dec. 27.—While the members of the Austrian Rolling Stock Commission are making efforts to decide how the equipment of the former Austrian railroads shall be divided among the newly made states, thousands of locomotives and freight cars are standing idle in all parts of Central Europe. The commission, which is composed of one representative of each state, has received reports from the old Austrian Empire, was appointed under the treaty of St. Germain to dispose of the railroads and rolling stock under a plan favorable to the Allies.

The commission has so far been unable to come to a decision, and it has had to dismiss its staff of engineers and experts because of lack of funds. The British government has been advancing money to the commission for its work, but last summer it refused to loan further amounts until repayment was guaranteed.

The commission has been unable to do this, although the rolling stock in question is said to be worth $500,000,000.

losses, in the belief that as world trade improves it will more than come out even.

But there are many who are not content with this. In the Senate debate, there has been serious talk of the discriminating duty in favor of U.S. shipping. The Jones' shipping law, not on the statute books, makes provision for a discriminating duty and favors the abrogation of treaties with different nations which stand in way of such a discriminating duty. But neither the Wilson administration nor the Harding administration has taken steps toward abrogation of the treaties, though it is well known that it is the judgment of many leaders in Congress as well as some of the foremost Shipping Board authorities, that this is the effective way to build up the merchant marine. Opinions differ as to why neither administration sought to make the law effective. One common view is that the State Department was unwilling to engage in the diplomatic contention which such a step would result in.

However, there is already serious talk of Congress simply by law abrogating the treaties in question and making discriminating duties in favor of U.S. shipping mandatory. Senator McKellar of Tennessee, suggested this in a recent Senate speech. If subsidizing definitely fails, it is not at all improbable that proposition will become acute.

Bureau Aires, Dec. 26.—The strong Italian immigration that once flowed to the United States and which was blocked by he American immigration law, has apparently changed its course to Argentina. Three steamers carrying 5,000 immigrants from Italy arrived here recently, and the agent of the principal steamship line plying between Italy and Argentina says that the third-class accommodation of his ships are booked ahead at Genoa for some time to come.

Washington, December 25.—(By Canadian Press).—What is going to be done with the U.S. merchant marine if the ship subsidy bill fails?

This question is already being asked in Washington and is likely to be asked more and more pointedly as the winter goes on. It has looked for some weeks as if the ship subsidy bill were doomed to failure. At this date, it seems destined to be set aside and proposed measures for the aid of the farmers considered in its stead.

It has been represented to Congress by the Shipping Board that the government is losing $50,000,000a year on its merchant marine fleet. If subsidizing fails, they will come up the problem of what is to be done to meet this loss. One view is that the government should go ahead on it is doing now, search out markets, and try to curtail its

PEACE TREATY TO BE HANDED TO THE TURKS

Show Down Expected at Lausanne by the End of Present Week

Lausanne, Dec. 27.—The inviting powers are preparing the outline of the peace treaty which they will place before the Turks in a few days. British Foreign Secretary Curzon has decided on all points and only awaits French decision on the questions of the Ottoman debt and capitulations.

If, as is likely, capitulations are taken up in the Near Eastern conference tomorrow, there will be a show-down by the end of the week. The powers' terms are:

1. Freedom of the Straits, according to the already discussed allied plan, giving Turkey security for Constantinople and the Sea of Marmora.

2. Turkey's southern frontier to be practically untouched. Mosul will be in oil fields, especially remaining under British control.

3. Protection of minorities under the League of Nations.

4. No forced migration or exchange of populations as was proposed to get all Greeks out of Asia Minor and all Moslems out of Greece.

5. The Greek patriarch to remain in Constantinople as religious head of the Orthodox Church, but shorn of his political power.

6. Partition of the Ottoman debt among the seceded territories except for the war debt, which is to be paid by Turkey alone.

7. The Greek population in Constantinople to live under a separate community administration.

8. A fixed rate for exemption from military service of non-Turks.

Deadlock Over Oil Region.

Questions still unsettled include capitulations. Lord Curzon has told the French propose measures for protection of the Allied financial interests, as they have not been able to carry on privately with the Turks over Mosul.

The British and Turks are at a deadlock over the oil region, as Lord Curzon refused every concession to the Turks this morning. This makes three major points on which the conference is deadlocked, the Straits not being among them."

First to Mosul, which the Turks are bringing to the front. They have awakened to the facts of the world struggle for oil and in their present expansive mood are determined not to possess the oil fields.

Second are the restrictions for foreign populations within Turkey. The Turks are opposed to any compromise on these capitulations, saying it would impair their sovereignty. No amicable solution is in sight.

Third is the discussion of the debt. Turkey insists the war debt, too, be distributed among the states now under mandate.

As the Turks, in private conversations, are showing a daily increasing willingness to compromise, the hope is of receiving the powers' terms may break the conference. But the fact that both sides want peace would go against such an ending, and there are no warlike signs.

Lord Curzon is preparing the terms chiefly to make progress. He has already succeeded in his main purpose of convincing Ali that what the Near Empire is still powerful. Word has come back to Lausanne that news has been passed through the Kazaats that this is to be an English peace. Similarly the word has spread that the Soviets have failed to close the Black Sea.

Thus Lord Curzon has had his way with Ali, ready to sign, and will compromise somewhat on everything but oil.

BRITISH PRESS WISH TERMS MODIFIED

Think U.S. Congress Dictates Harsh Terms for the Repayment of War Debt

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Dec. 28.—The newspapers here express the hope that the British Financial Mission to the United States will persuade Congress to modify the terms for the repayment of the British debt, which they claim are exceedingly onerous. The periods of redemption are particularly condemned, but Chilton suggestion for a forty seven year term is thought to be more reasonable than the twenty-five years set by Congress.

PARSON DOES A LITTLE BOOTLEGGING

London, Dec. 27.—There is virtue in bootlegging, Canon A. N. Goopr, familiarly known as the "Walking Parson," told an audience in Hull. Giving what he called a tip to tourists, he said: "I have learned that there is one way to walk without trouble, and that is to pour whiskey into your boots.

He said he doubted whether this was responsible for the term bootlegging, but he could swear that it worked well, certainly better than pouring it anywhere else. In the last few weeks he has covered 650 miles afoot.

BELLEVILLE CLUB CHRISTMAS TREE

Members Entertain Their Friends and Families—Cards, Dancing and Christmas Tree

One of the most enjoyable functions that the Belleville Club has had for some time was the Christmas Tree held yesterday afternoon and evening. The rooms were most tastefully decorated with evergreen streamers, coloured balls and other appropriate and seasonable articles, such as holly and mistletoe. The Christmas tree was also most artistically illuminated in colored lights and tinsel, was heavily burdened with gifts. The whole affair was a merrily burning and the whole scene was extremely suggestive of the festive season.

The guests to the number of about sixty assembled early in the evening and made very short work of a couple of hours, during which time many pretty selections were heard on the victrola. Aboard the launch Mr. A. Gillen heralded the arrival of Sandy Claus Burrows by strenuously blowing a drum. Santa arrived and proceeded to distribute the numerous presents. Many amusing gifts were received and many of the married ladies appeared to have many admirers. Mr. E. Geo Porter was the recipient of a very cute little monkey that persistently climbed up and down a cord. Another guest produced an accordeon and it hat was soon forthcoming, then Mr. Porter was outfitted as an Indian street musician. The hat receipts were all that could be desired, there being over $100 collected to pay the first installment on a ton of coal.

Dancing was the source of much merriment to all, and it would be difficult to recount the hundreds of little amusing incidents that took place.

Dainty refreshments were served after the distribution of the Christmas tree gifts, at the conclusion of which Christmas crackers were freely passed around. Soon the popping of the crackers filled the air, and then, as if by magic, all the company appeared in the most fantastic of head gear. Dancing followed,

LABOR NOT BEHIND THE WESTERN MINERS

Minister of Labor so Wires President of Mine Workers' Union

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Dec. 28.—Minister of Labor Murdock, states he does not believe any friends of organized labor are behind the Edmonton miners strike, but further stated today, that he believed the movers in the strike are sincerely trying to further the interests of the workers party in Canada. The Minister sent wires to this effect to J. L. Lewis, President of United Mine Workers of America, and to Joseph A. Clarke, Mayor of Edmonton. The mine workers have replied that they never used communistic tactics in carrying on the Edmonton strike, but have always used methods of recognized organized labor.

SHOT TRAPPER'S DOG, MUST PAY DAMAGES

Port Perry Physician Ordered by Court to Pay Damages of $75 for Shooting $400 Dog

At the December sessions of the County Court held recently at Whitby an interesting case was disposed of. It was the case where Charles Bowman, of Port Perry, a trapper, hunter and guide, was suing Dr. McMaster for $200 for damages on account of McMaster shooting his dog.

The dog in question was an Irish water spaniel, a fine retriever valued by witness at $400. The sum sued for was made up of the value of the dog, and loss of business caused by the loss of the dog.

This dog had the habit of going over to Dr. McMaster's house and staying in a shed there. One day it went over and it is alleged bit the defendant's little boy. Dr. McMaster came out later and shot the dog. The defence claimed that when Dr. McMaster came out of the house the dog assumed a threatening attitude and Dr. McMaster shot it in self defence. However, as the Judge pointed out by law, the dog must be attacking a man before he can legally shoot it in self defence.

MUSICAL CONCERT AT THE ARMOURIES

The musical concert held in the Armouries last night was a most successful affair. The hall was filled to the doors and the music being supplied by willing pianists and by the victrola. The party did not break up till the wee small hours of the morning.

The whole affair was unique and provided an evening that will long be remembered by those who were present. The proceeds of the concert will be used for the benefit of the Belleville Rugby Football Club.

AVIATORS THINK TUG CORNELL WAS BURNED

Wreckage Seen East of Erie Pa., in a Fog—Tugs to Investigate

Cleveland, O., Dec. 27.—U.S. Airmen, today reported that they thought they had discovered the wreck of the tug Cornell at a point five miles east of Erie, Pa. The tug has been missing since Thursday, Dec. 21st, and carried a crew of eight men.

The pilots reported that they had seen what appeared to be the hull of a ship about 75 feet long five miles east of Erie, Pa., and a half mile from shore. They stated that the boilers and machinery were above water. Although nearly all of the above were noted with ice, the aviators said that there was no ice on the wreckage. The boat appeared to them to have been burned.

When the aviators first returned from their morning reconnaissance, Mr. Shaver told the Associated Press they reported they had seen no signs of wreckage. Later, after the pilots had their dinner, Mr. Shaver said they returned to the field and reported their find.

Their one thought was that it might be an old derelict. To settle this point, food, clothing flew close enough to get a good view in the fog.

"While they could observe ice on the wreckage, they could see no one on the derelict and this led them to believe this might be the boat. They could distinguish the blackened appearance of the craft that it had gone through an explosion, a fire or something of the sort. The heat from this, they said, must have thawed the ice on the wreck."

Upon receipt of the flyers' report, H. E. Gilpin, President of the Great Lakes Towing Company, announced he would dispatch tugs from Erie tomorrow to search the vicinity where the wreckage was reported to have been seen.

DANGEROUS TRIP ENDS IN FAILURE

Mounted Police Captured Men Running Moonshine Across Detroit River

Windsor, Ont., Dec. 27.—A squad of Mounted Police under Sergeant A. Birtwhistle late today took into custody three men whom they found landing a cargo of what is declared to be Detroit moonshine, on the Canadian shore below Sandwich. The stuff had been brought across the river in a flat bottomed boat fitted with wooden runners and when heavy ice was encountered the boat was dragged out of the craft to the ice floe and dragged the boat along with them. When open water was in sight the boat was pushed in and the trio followed along.

The "moonsters" from a concealed position ashore watched the little craft negotiate a perilous passage. More than once the cargo seemed in imminent danger but always they managed to surmount the difficulties ahead.

The men gave their names as Mayer Cohen and Samuel Zerom, of Windsor, and Harry Gold, of Detroit. They will be held on two charges, violation of the Ontario Temperance Act and the Dominion Customs Act.

Trading Light in Chicago Wheat Pit

Prospects of improved export demand tended today to give an upward tilt to values in the wheat market. Closing quotations were firm at the same as Saturday's finish to 1½ higher, May $1.03½ to $1.03⅝ and July $1.04⅞ to $1.04⅝. Corn finished unchanged to ½c advance, oats at ¾c to ⅞c decline to ⅜c gain. High and prices of the day in the wheat market came after word was received that according to Secretary Hoover, an overflow of gold from the United States was helping to restore the buying power of countries to which the gold travelled. Further than that, it was intimations that export business might be looked for tomorrow when Europeans markets resumed activity after the Christmas standstill. Estimates that 500,000 bushels had been bought today for trans-Atlantic account were likewise a bullish influence. An announcement that the United States visible supply of wheat showed an increase of only 566,000 bushels for the week, whereas a much larger gain had been looked for, counted rather as a handicap to bears. Throughout the day, too, it was noticeably that there was an absence of any decided pressure to sell, notwithstanding that primary receipts over the Christmas holiday were about the largest ever known, especially in the southwest. Although, big arrivals of corn had a depressing effect at times, on prices for corn and oats, a rally took place later as a result of wheat strength.

Industrial Blocked in Montreal.

Canadian Industrial Alcohol proved the feature of a rather quiet day on the unlisted department of the Montreal Stock Exchange yesterday, furnishing trading in 375 shares and gaining ¾ at 34¾ on the second day of its public trading. The tone followed that of the big board, not a recession being recorded during the day.

Canadian Woollens' Slump.

Canadian Woollens suffered the heaviest loss of yesterday's trading, slumping nine points to the new low of 118 on a turnover of 60 shares. The last previous sale of the stock since the announcement in September to the effect that the directors had decided to defer the payment of the preferred dividend. The nine point drop recorded yesterday gives effect to the change of status in the stock as a result of the deferring of the preferred dividend, and in a measure, to the business conditions directly affecting the company. The company enjoys excellent administration and is in a sound financial position, current assets having exceeded current liabilities by nearly half a million dollars in the balance sheet presented to shareholders last fall.

Chartered Bank Statement Issued Yesterday at Ottawa

For the first time in exactly one year, savings or notice deposits of Canadian chartered banks are shown at an increase in the figures for the month of November just vou from Ottawa yesterday. This increase in the savings of the people is, moreover, a substantial one, amounting to over $11,000,000, as compared with an increase of less than a million dollars during October, which was little short of the first increase shown in six months, so it will be seen that the present instance is the second break in a steady decline of 18 months.

The November figures are usually taken to give effect to the deposits of the agricultural community of the country upon the realization from their harvests, and in this respect at least the exhibit is a decidedly encouraging one, for on the figures the farmer would seem to be just about a thousand per cent. better off than he was last year at this time. The figures, of course, do not represent merely the better position of the farmers, as there has been a steady reduction of unemployment almost in the vanishing point, which is now starting to show an increase for winter.

There is also to be noted in the November figures a substantial reduction in current loans in Canada which is attributable in a measure to the same causes as in the case of the increase in savings, as this feature may be taken to represent partly the farmer's liquidation of his indebtedness to the banks.

Other features include a reduction of nearly nine millions in notes in circulation, demand deposits show a substantial increase.

Following are the November figures with changes from the corresponding month a year ago:

Butter and Cheese Trade in England —Cheese Firm

Drastic reductions have been made in the cost of butter and bacon during the past fortnight. The reductions were overdone, prices having been maintained at a high level too long. The decline in bacon values has been sufficient to bring about a healthier state of affairs. The market, however, is overweighted with fat and heavy selections which are difficult to place. The scarcity of Canadian bacon are of increased amount, the bulk of the supplies in Denmark recently having been quite exceedingly large. The better market is very weak and irregular. A headed by De Wolf Hopper has been material fall in prices has taken place, and the further decline this month is not attracted buyers. In volcos and twelve male voices. Mr. Australia the outlook is not favorable Fred A. Bisbop, productions director, for production. Cables were received of the company, spent the entire summer in voice trials. His records show this week stating that Queensland and something over 9,000 applicants; this New South Wales were suffering severely from drought, and that the thirty. Mr. Bishop heard over 2,000 optimized export this season is 50 men and women sing and as each of per cent. below that of last season. applicants sang a few measures he Total shipments of Australian butter argues well for the truthfulness of on the way to this country are much the manager's statement that with Mr. above those at this time last year, Hopper in the very best singing chorus and there is a big increase in shipassembled for light opera.

ments from New Zealand. The export of dairy products from New Zealand has made marvellous growth within recent years, and the production of butter this season is likely to top all previous records.

The position of cheese is very strong but the demand is unusually restricted. There is a shortage of English cheese, while the stock of Canadian cheese is smaller than for some years. The stock of cheese in Montreal at the close of navigation was much below that at this time last year. Recently imports of Colonial cheese has been retarded by high prices. The market cannot receive much relief until New Zealand cheese begins to arrive in quantity towards the end of January. The future position, however, is uncertain, and full of possibilities. The demand for English hams is particularly brisk for light and medium averages at full prices, but the demand for American hams has slackened, and quotations are barely maintained. There is a scarcity of lard on the spot, but prices denote a weaker tendency, lower rates being quoted for prompt and forward delivery. The city market of late has been considerably depressed, and a heavy fall has been established for the higher-priced descriptions. English new-laid are more plentiful, and there is an abundant supply of ordinary selections—a wide and varied assortment being on offer. Thus it will be seen that most articles of provisions are steadily passing through a dull time with steadily declining prices.

BRITAIN HAS PAID $492,838,826 TO U.S.

Is $50,000,000 More Than England Has Received From Her War Debtors

New York, Dec. 26.—According to British Treasury figures, Great Britain has so far received payment of less than 5 per cent. on the amount she has loaned to her allies and dominions for war and relief purposes, says the Bankers Trust Company.

Repayments of principal and payments of interest amounted March 31 last to £92,312,784, while the amount remaining unpaid was £2,017,210,353.

The Bankers' Trust Company of New York is advised by its English information service thatthe repayments of principal amounted to £39,256,572, while interest payments totalled £52,287,112.

The British Treasury's reports indicate that the greater part of the above payments to Great Britain were made since 1918. Out of £78,037,810 in principal and interest paid between 1918 and March 31, 1922, £34,131,409 was paid by British countries which owe Great Britain only about 17 per cent. of the amount of her foreign loans outstanding.

Comparison of Treasury figures issued by Great Britain and the United States discloses that Britain has received considerably less in payments from her war debtors than has been received by the United States.

The amounts paid to, both countries are shown in sterling and dollars, arising from the war compare as follows:

Payments of Principal and Interest	To U.S. (to Nov. 15 of this year)	To G. Britain (to March 31 1922)
	£167,743,911	£182,491,920
	679,082,632	345,155,253
	$641,907,543	447,626,126

Great Britain also paid to the United States $358,526,226, or more than half of the amount received to November 15, 1921, by the United States from all of her debtors. In the last year Great Britain made additional payments that have received from her debtors on war loan account up to March 31 last.

MUSIC and DRAMA

DE WOLF HOPPER AT GRIFFINS TONIGHT IN "THE MIKADO"

The chorus is an important factor in light opera, much more important than in musical comedy. This is in particular true with the works of Gilbert and Sullivan. The ensemble in all of these operas have been written for mixed voices and therefore it is essential that the chorus be composed of trained singers, in fact Sir Arthur Sullivan's music is much too difficult to be properly rendered except by singers of sufficient ability to be soloists. The chorus of the Gilbert and Sullivan Opera Company, which will appear here on Friday night in "The Mikado" is composed of 40 voices and twelve male voices. Mr. Bishop heard over 2,000 men and women sing and as each of applicants sang a few measures he argues well for the truthfulness of the manager's statement that with Mr. Hopper in the very best singing chorus assembled for light opera.

MARIE PREVOST IS LOVABLE STAR IN NEW SUCCESS

A proven combination with two angles was revived at Universal City for the making of "Kissed," the Universal special attraction starring Marie Prevost, which is being exhibited at the Regent tonight to Saturday. King Baggot directed. He guided some of Miss Prevost's earlier dramatic efforts at Universal City and transferred her beauty and talent from the Sennett slapstick fold to the more glorious field."

Doris Schroeder prepared the screen play of Arthur Somers Roche's story, which has proven a success at Miss Prevost's vehicles for screening with a rare understanding of the star's exploitation requirements and abilities. J. Frank Glendon will be seen opposite the star.

Donald Hendryx, Harold Miller, Marie Crisp and Lillian Langdon appear in the supporting cast.

The story has an unique theme: the value of a kiss in determining whether or not the "right one" has been selected. It may prove to girls that there is no sense in rushing into mar-

DEVELOP SPORT IN ITALY

Fascisti Government Made up of Young Men Who Favor Sports

FORM OLYMPIC TEAM

Premier Announces That Funds for Olympic Team are Forthcoming

Rome, Dec. 28.—The advent of the Fascisti government to power will have favorable influence upon the development of sport and athletics in Italy. Premier Mussolini's cabinet is composed mostly of young men between the ages of thirty and forty, the majority of whom at some time or another have taken active part in some branches of athletics and have indeed deep interest in sports. Mussolini himself is an expert fencer and his under secretary of state, Finzi, besides being one of Italy's most renowned aviators was at one time one of the best five thousand metres runner in the peninsula.

The first results of the assumption of leadership of the government by Mussolini, in the field of sports, already have been seen in the promises made by the Premier that appropriations of funds to defray the expenses of the Italian Olympic team to Paris in 1924, would be forthcoming. The Olympic preparation in Italy, which had been stagnant throughout the summer owing to lack of funds and consequent lukewarm enthusiasm, has taken on a new lease of life, and followers of athletics in Italy are rejoicing. The preparation of the Italian Olympic team will be directed especially toward the five and ten thousand metre races, and the marathon. Although sprints will not be neglected, the Italian Olympic Committee feels that they have better material for the distance events. Commencing Sunday, November 30th, when a full distance marathon was run at Milan, there will be five thousand and ten thousand metres races in various cities of Italy, Milan, Turin, Genoa, Naples or Rome, about twice a month. It is the intention of the committee to have four full Olympic distance marathons run between now and the departure of the Italian team for Paris in 1924. The last one will take place about January 1924.

Signor Tenzetti, Vice-President of the committee, is sanguine that Italy has a first class chance of carrying off the blue ribbon of the Olympic Games. In Ari Valerio, of Turin, and Hugo Fregorio of Milan, Italy claims to have discovered worthy successors to Dorando Pietri, whose dramatic failure in the marthon at London, and subsequent races in America against Tom Longboat, Johnny Hayes and Alfred Schrubb, are well remembered in sporting circles. Both Valerio and Fregorio can run all day. What they lack just now is final speed for the last two or three miles. However, they have both negotiated the distance well under two hours and fifty minutes.

In the five thousand metres Italy will present Ernest Ambrosoli, of Milan, and Primo Bregs of Rome. Ambrosoli ran a good second to Paavo Nurmi at Paris some time ago, forcing the record-breaking Finn to the limit in order to win by ten yards in 15 minutes and 1 second. Since then Ambrosoli has run the five thousand under fifteen minutes, 14 minutes and 58 2-5 seconds, to be exact.

Tarzel, of Milan, and Florentino, who was champion of Italy in 1920 but was off form last season, is stepping in great shape just now, but he will rest up during the winter. He recently turned in 32 minutes 9 1-5 seconds.

The sprints, shot-put, javelin and discus throwing are giving the committee much concern, and they do not look forward to earning any points in these events, unless some phenomenal should come to light between now and 1924. The best sprinter Italy can boast just now is Sicca, of Turin. His time for the hundred metres is 10 4-5 seconds.

In the aquatic events Italy expects to make a good showing. The Genoa quartette, as Bagicalupo, Costa Mallio, Sechner and Panero are known, will give a good account of themselves in the tank. The first three have won the "swim across Paris", Mallio defeating Billington, of England, in record time this year. Panero is a mere youth but coming along.

Amateur boxing, especially in the featherweight and lightweight classes, may also prove point winners for Italy, according to members of the Olympic committee. They claim to have a couple of fewers Johnny Dundees under cover in Calabria and Sicily, and they will spring them upon the unsuspecting feathers and lightweights from other countries.

It was pointed out to the correspondent that although politicians in Italy are greatly divided on some of the issues of the day, there is one point upon which unanimity has been reached: sports.

BASEBALL LEAGUES MAY AMALGAMATE

Grand Rapids, Mich., Dec. 26.—William T. Morrissey, President of the Grand Rapids Baseball Club of the Central League, admitted today he plans to attend the meeting at Flint on Wednesday, when the proposed consolidation of the Central and Michigan-Ontario League will be considered, but declined to express his attitude toward the proposed merger.

He has stated, however, he will not participate in the Central League as it existed during the 1922 season.

PRESTON INTERMEDIATES DOWN KITCHENER

Preston, Dec. 26.—Kitchener, intermediate champions of the O.H.A., lost to the local squad in the Arena here tonight by 1 to 0. Woodley of Preston scored the goal that won the game in the third period after 20 minutes of play. Arnott, the star centre forward of the locals, skated in the hole on the ice in the third period, and had to retire.

The game was exceptionally fast, considering the condition of the ice, which was very soft, and combination play was impossible. A thousand fans attended the game, including about 250 from Kitchener and Galt. The victory was a popular one, and it appears as if last year's champions will have a hard time to win the group.

ST. PATS. OBJECT TO CLEGHORN'S TACTICS

Montreal, Dec. 27.—St. Patrick's Hockey Club are after Sprague Cleghorn, of the Canadiens, and have written President Calder asking the head of the National Hockey League to turn the Montreal star to be rough. This is what Mr. Calder had to say about it:

"Referees are instructed to impose penalties provided for by the rules for rough play, and as the most competent men in the game are selling as referees, I have every reason to believe that the rules will be enforced. Particularly is it being emphasized to all players to keep their sticks down."

GREEN AND GOYER JOIN INTERMEDIATES

When the Belleville Intermediates turn out for a practice this evening at the arena, Bill Green and "Soup" Goyer will be in uniform and will work out with the team. With Green and Goyer on the Intermediate lineup it will certainly make a great deal of difference in the strength of the squad. Both these men were members of last winter's Intermediate team, and are two of the best. The announcement that these players have joined the forces will be received very favorably by the hockeyists of this city.

JUNIORS PRACTICE AT ARENA TO-NIGHT

Friday Evening Will be Last Chance for Players to Turn in Birth certificates

The following junior hockey players are requested to be on deck at the arena this evening at 7.30 p.m. for their work out, and all who can, are requested to bring along their certificates. Tomorrow (Friday) evening is the latest date at which the birth certificates will be received.

W. Cook, Myles, B. Buskard, A. Wardraugh, A Kerr, John Hibbert, J. Marshall, J. Arnott, M. Latchford, J. Hunter and S. Pye.

ARNOTT WAS GOOD

Commenting on the recent Preston-Kitchener Intermediate Hockey game, the Kitchener Daily News Record states that Gunney Arnott at centre for the red and white looked as good as any of the Preston team. He is a big boy, uses his head and can shoot. Had he been opposed to a less tow-row and hard checking man than Sherk he would have been distinctly dangerous

NEW RULE PUT IN OPERATION

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Dec. 26.—W. J. Edwards, Secretary of the Sault Hockey Club, has been advised by the C. A. H. A. that the Sault Hockey Club cannot use Alex. Renaud this season, owing to the new residence rule, which debars Canadian players from playing with a Canadian club for at least one year after playing in the United States. Renaud was goal-keeper for Calumet last season, and he now holds an amateur card of the Ontario Branch of the A.A.U. of C. Renaud played baseball with the allstar team of the Sault this summer, and it was hoped here that he would be the Sault's substitute net guardian this season.

SCOTTISH CURLERS TO TOUR CANADA

Port Arthur, Ont., Dec. 27.—Neil McDougal, sportsman's representative of the Canadian National Railways, has been appointed manager of the Canadian tour of the Scottish curlers, who will arrive in Canada early in January.

The "stone pushers" will exhibit their talents in Quebec, Montreal, Ottawa, Kingston, Peterboro', Toronto and other eastern cities. The western tour starts at Port Arthur and concludes at Winnipeg.

CERTIFICATES GRANTED BY O.H.A. OFFICIALS

Oshawa, Dec. 26.—Among the Central League baseball players who changed their residence since January first last, and have been granted certificates by the Ontario Hockey Association are: From Toronto, Len Crooks to Belleville; Barton Cummings and Hgrold Brownscombe, to Lindsay; Alfred S. Hall, Kingston, and Harvey Boyd, Orillia, to Port Hope; Lloyd Walter Chambers and Reginald John Mills, Lindsay, to Bowmanville; D. R. Mallon, Morrisburg, to Belleville; Norman Berry, Kingston, to Cobourg, Peterboro, Leaside and Oshawa are the only towns who were out of luck in the baseball and hockey transfers.

ROME WANTS INT'N'AL TENNIS

Rome, Dec. 22.—Italian tennis circles are awaiting with interest the replies of Allied Tennis Federations to invitations extended to them by the Italian Lawn Tennis Federation to send teams to participate in the inter national Hardcourt Tournament to be held in Rome next May.

The reply of Germany already has been received, and is in the affirmative. Kleinrath, who is playing in his best form just now will captain the German team. He is regarded by many experts as the best single player in Europe at the present time. Count Salm, of Austria, is expected to lead the Austrians.

The feeling here is that Belgium, England and France will abstain, but that Spain will send over its Davis Cup team, the Alonso brothers, Planquer and Count de Gomar.

OTAWAS TIE CANADIENS 2-2

Ottawa, Dec. 27.—After playing twenty minutes' overtime at Dey's Arena here tonight, Ottawa's and Canadiens found it impossible to decide the match, and the game ended with each team having scored two goals, and points were divided. It was a good game of hockey, containing plenty of individual work and a lot of combination plays that gave the crowd something to think about every minute of the game. The teams were very evenly matched, and the feature of the contest was the wonderful display of goal tending by both Benedict and Vezina. Especially was this noticeable in the overtime period, when time after time the forwards would tear down on their opposing defences, and end loose with a shot, only to be turned aside by the net guardians.

The home team had a real chance to take the game in hand in the second period, when they were playing five men to the visitors four. Odie Cleghorn, however, stopped their chances by introducing his dodging tactics, despite the fact that Referee Pulford kept facing the puck off in centre ice, he would immediately take it to his own goal where he would hold it. This was the only unpleasant incident of the game, which throughout was filled with all sorts of those thrills that go to make an exciting hockey match.

The Ottawa line gave a much better display than on their last appearance here at Dey's, Broadbent and Nighbor were a constant source of worry to the opposing defence. Nighbor played throughout the whole game without relief, while the wing men were given rests by Darragh and Clancy. The latter also relieved Boucher on the defence. Gerard played all through. The local attack was distinctive all the way, and had it not been for the strong defence work on the part of Sprague Cleghorn and Gardner and the great display of Vezina there would have been a different story to tell.

ST. PATS DEFEATED BY HAMILTON

Win Hard Interesting Game by 9-6 Score—Babe Dye Has Teeth Knocked Out and Nose Broken

Hamilton, Dec. 27.—Displaying a brand of hockey superior to that shown by them in the opening start against Ottawa, Hamilton stepped in to Toronto St. Pats here tonight and defeated them by a score of 9 to 6. The game was interesting throughout, just enough of the rough stuff being thrown in at times to keep the record crowd of fans in a good mood and, incidentally, Hamilton beat Toronto even at this. The addition of Boschard to the forward line made the difference to the Hamilton team. His boring-in tactics seemed to inspire "Mickey" Roach to greater efforts, and the work of the blonde-haired boy was almost as good as the performance turned in by Bouchard and Corbeau.

For the first 35 minutes Hamilton had much the best of the argument, and only the good work of Roach, in the nets for Toronto, kept the Hams count down. They walked in on the Toronto wizard three men abreast at times, but he managed to get his stick, arm or leg in front of their shots and turned them aside. Toward the end of the second period the diagnose began to tell on them, and they slowed up long enough to allow Toronto to get within hailing distance, but in the final 20 minutes of play they outclassed the Toronto team from the goal end and piled up a safe lead.

"Babe" Dye, who appeared to be inclined to rough things, was given a rather warm reception, and left for Toronto after the game minus two teeth, with a badly bruised arm, and, what is feared, a broken nose.

The disastrous road trip of the Hamilton team did not interfere in any way with the attendance, for when the teams were sent on their way every seat and all standing room available was occupied. From the face-off Hamilton opened an attack on Roach that set the crowd wild with delight. The Toronto wizard was given a real busy season in turning shots aside, but the Hams were not to be denied, for three minutes after play started Frederic on a pass from Corbeau lulled the twine. Toronto had but little of the play up until this stage, having all their time locked into their own corner of the rink.

THE CREST OF THE WAVE?

In this age of machinery, the skilled craftsman is growing very rare. Our factories are surely losing their cunning. It appears that it was quite necessary to press machinery into service to take care of the ever increasing and widening demand of a rapidly growing population, but in our feverish desire to meet wild demand for greater production in all lines, have we not overdone the thing in certain channels?

Take any article that is manufactured as a product to manufacture. Instead of starting in a humble way, as was done fifty years ago, a big factory is immediately constructed, in the mind of the promoter. This factory is provided with a large, well organized staff of specialists. Superintendents, foremen, subforemen, operators, tool departments, engineering departments, sales departments, advertising departments, etc., etc., are all planned. A chain of warehouses, branches, agents, distributors, etc., are also figured out. Then stock is sold and a generous commission paid to the men selling same. Immense sums are spent on real estate, factory buildings, machinery and special equipment. Production stages are reached and immense sums are spent in advertising. The large quantity production reduces the factory cost and the article is cheaply put on the market. It is more often made just well enough to stand the wear and tear incidental to sales and frequently does not give anything like adequate service. Do we like to buy such articles? It is an everyday experience for us to buy an article simply because of a low price. Are not millions of dollars wasted thus every year? Do we not encourage unscrupulous individuals to manufacture and market such trash? On every side we hear complaints regarding these articles. Everyone knows the cheap shoes, (made of paper, some claim), the cheap paints that fade and flake off in a few months, the cheap clothes that fade quickly, won't keep their shape, and soon wear out, the cheap toys of gaudy color made of tin or cardboard, and so on down the list. All these articles are machine-made by the thousand. The labor employed to manufacture them is unskilled, and is being well paid. This kind of employment discourages the youth of the land from learning a trade where skill counts. Inside of a week he can in these large production factories learn enough to enable him to earn as much as his older and more skilled brother. Thus schooling is not given or needed to assist in earning good wages. The development of the mind is not necessary. We are thus allowing our people to become integral bits of machinery.

The articles that are thus produced are usually ridiculously high priced in spite of their apparent cheapness. It is a well-known fact that for every dollar of factory cost, the consumer is asked from five to eight dollars by the retailer. This spread between factory and consumer price is used to pay the stock salesman's commission, interest on the investment, rapid depreciation of overworked machinery, high supervision and high production costs, many mid-dlemen's profits, and last but not least, princely salaries to a wide range of executives.

The same thing exists in all lines. If we go to the movies we expect to see a certain proportion of unthreatening presentations. We also expect to read so many dry books before we get a good one, and so on. Do we as a people like to be fooled? Will we gradually lose our individuality and skill to create worthwhile things? Will things continue to grow worse? Or, on the other hand, will we come to an intelligent understanding of things before it is too late?

Today practically everything we wear, use, eat, and see in our daily labors and pleasures, is machine-made. Rob us of our machines and where would we be?

History shows that China, Egypt, Greece and many other countries rose to a high state of civilization and then decayed. Has our present day civilization reached the crest of the wave?

It is all very well to laugh at our dependence on machinery, but we are teaching a greater proportion of our youth every year to operate machines, and a lesser proportion to build them. When this small number of machine builders reaches the zero mark what will happen? We will have no skilled craftsmen, we will have no machines; will our civilization fade into history?

HERE AND THERE

PREMIER "CONVERTS" A STILL TO LEGAL USE—AT A BARGAIN.

Although born south of the Tyne, the Hon. John Oliver, Premier of British Columbia, yields to no Scotsman in ability to make a dollar do a hundred cents' worth of work on every possible occasion. Mr. Oliver is now a comparatively wealthy man, his income being estimated at well over a thousand dollars a month, but he has not put on any more style than he found necessary when he was a plodding farmer in the Delta district.

As for clothes, the proverbial nine tailors which it takes to make a man look smart would throw their hands in despair if called upon to transform "Honest John" into a Beau Brummel.

Mr. Oliver's love of driving a shrewd bargain is well illustrated by an incident during his recent holiday in the Okanagan district. He spent his vacation helping his son Charles build a canning plant. While sawing wood one day the Premier heard of a bootlegger who, in spite of circumstances not wholly unconnected with police activities, had recently suspended business. The retired bootlegger had a boiler for sale, part of a huge distilling outfit. The boiler was of the type needed by Charles in his canning plant.

Without troubling to remove his overalls Premier Oliver wrote off to interview the bootlegger. As he used to run a shooting outfit, Mr. Oliver knew the law-breaker was not exaggerating when he said that the boiler had cost him $700, and had hardly been used.

"It isn't what it cost that matters," commented the Premier. "You're stuck with it now, and you're stuck hard. Tell you what I'll do, though. I'll give you $150 for it—cash, if you must have it." The bootlegger accepted the offer.

"Hardly got to him before Charlie did," said the Premier later. "That boy's got his head full of science he doesn't know how to take advantage of a bargain!"

"Charlie" Oliver hopes to have his canning plant in operation next year in good time to save the surplus peach crop from going to waste. This year a large quantity of luscious fruit has had to be fed to hogs because there was no available market. The plant is to be located at Penticton, where Premier Oliver and his sons have established a chemical factory, the younger members of the family specializing on fertilizers, sprays and poisons used in agricultural work.

POINCARE MASTERS ENGLISH.

Myron T. Herrick, Ambassador of the United States to the Republic of France, home for a brief leave of absence from his post in Paris, pays a personal estimate of the French President, Raymond Poincare. Mr. Herrick says:

"Poincare is not a creative genius but a great lawyer. He relies upon care in examining facts and precision in analysis as the best guarantees against error. His patient and prodigious industry, his clear and healthy mind are the special tools in forming this system.

If Briand resembles Blaine, Poincare resembles Root. Like the latter, he is reputed to be cold, but to those who know him, his feelings and his passion for the right can fly manifest themselves.

"Like all leading French statesmen he is provincial; he does not perhaps comprehend America or understand how much less our politics are personal than are theirs. But Poincare now speaks English; what is more extraordinary, he has learned it since the war, and this serves to widen his horizon.

His faultless memory, his long life of study and intense intellectual activity, his wide experience in public affairs, especially in finance, constitute a powerful equipment for meeting present problems.

"The thinking public know and express this estimate of him, while the instinct of the less articulate masses, the shrewd peasant class for example, leads them to a similar feeling which they would put thus: 'If he cannot pull us out of the present mess, no one can.' Poincare is hated only by the communists and anarchists.

"In fact, Poincare's thesis has the virtue of that simplicity easily comprehended by the humblest citizen. He holds that Germany wilfully destroyed France's property, was beaten, agreed to repair and restore, and must be forced to execute her agreement. Her taxes are lower than France's, her industries more flourishing, her credit more large. Her restoration to further prosperity is desirable, but it must not be effected at the expense of France.

FRIENDSHIP.

I love to think of old friends—
The friends of the long ago—
Sweet memory a message sends
To those I used to know.

Some of them grew weary
And laid adown to rest,
Forgetting all that was dreary
In the home of the blest.

The tide of chance hath swept
Many into the mists of trade,
But in prosperity or poverty they kept
The old friendships youth made.

Those that are fortunately left behind,
Like to muse over the golden past,
When hearts were true and kind,
And friendships strong and fast.

But, oh, how fast the years pass,
When frost is upon the head,
Yet amid the ruins of every blast
Friendship remains with living or dead.

PRESS OPINIONS

THE BRITISH POUND
(Ottawa Journal.)

While the average person is only dizzied by the mysterious jargon of finance with which great leaders seek to explain the rise of the British pound, there is one simple, fundamental, all-sufficient reason for what has happened.

The world knows that whatever happens to Europe, or to the gigantic debts of world finance, the English will be the last to go down. In other words, they are finding out precisely what Walter Bagehot set when he wrote to President Wilson of the British: "It is not by accident that the people have gone so far in the world."

BENDING BOYS TO PENITENTIARY

(Kitchener-Waterloo Daily Record)

In Norway there are in the penitentiary, in the whole country only 76 men. That probably compares very favorably with the figures in Canada.

In Norway there are no boys in the penitentiary under twenty-five years of age. That is not because they have no wrong-doers under that age, but because they do not believe in sending very young men to such an institution. Once a youth goes to penitentiary, the odds are strongly against his ever again running straight. He comes in contact with the worst kind of criminals. With his still plastic character he can hardly escape becoming deeply infected with criminal tendencies.

In Canada we still occasionally send boys of sixteen to penitentiary, to our shame be it said.

Canadians generally pride themselves on being far in advance of the effete European countries. In some things we have a good deal to learn from them.

SENT TO KINGSTON
(Toronto Globe)

The Kingston Whig criticizes the unlearned and careless scribblers of newspaper items, who say that a prisoner has been "sent to Kingston" for a term of years. The prison, it says, is at the village of Portsmouth, which is adjacent to Kingston. To be sent to Kingston would be no punishment for Kingston, a fine residential city which contains Canada's champion Rugby team, a university college, a big university, and beautiful parks—a place of little unemployment and high financial standing.

We do not suppose that the erring writers have any desire to cast a slur upon Kingston. In fact, there is an implied compliment in the mention of that city. The writers want to indicate exactly the prisoner's destination so they refer to the nearest city of renown. Besides, even if the prisoner were in Kingston, there would be nothing discreditable in the fact. The place that needs to be uneasy is where the prisoner comes from, not where he goes. The man who, in an atmosphere far less beautiful than that of the neighborhood of Kingston has fallen into evil ways is sent to Portsmouth to be reformed. The proximity of Kingston is rightly judged to have a salutary moral influence. It is a post of honor and public service.

AWA' TAE SCOTIA

I'm weary aft for thee, my dearly-lo'ed Scotia.
For thou art ca'd mither by brave hearts a'.
Tis fondly I yearn for thy beauties unmeasured,
Wi' thee an' wi' burnie, wi' loch an' wi' glen.
I'm eager tae roam 'mang thy sweet-breathed heather;
I'd muse aff intently on banks o' thy Clyde;
I'm wearie fae gaze on thy lofty Ben-lomond—
O' a' thy brow mountains, thy joy an' thy pride.

I'd drap on green graves of thine long buried heroes,
Yon tears o' affection which aft I hae's shed,
For Scotia, wha conquered in life's earnest battle,
Or sodgers who bravely by Wallace wad led.

I'd seek, 'mang thy hillocks yon hoose which my father had biggit lang syne, far awa' in Argyle;
I'd catch sweet re-echoes o' skirls frae their pibrochs,
An'-there a' my sorrows I'd quickly beguile.

I'd row on thy streame, for ne'er, ne'er are they drumlie;
I'd climb mony hillsides, tho' rugged an' steep;
I'd mingle wi' Scotsmen frae glen or frae clachan,
Wi' college professors or shepherds o' sheep.
For a' ha'e devotion for thee, bonnie Scotia;
They're true men o' valor wha honor thy name.
Oh! let me awa' owre you deep, briny ocean—
The rest wi' Scotsmen, mang bear ties at hame.

GOLD, FRANKINCENSE AND MYRRH

Through the stable's dusty space
Wavering moonbeams shine,
Where Madonna, filled with grace,
Bending o'er the Christ-Child face,
Happy in this joyless place,
Sings among the kine.

"From the East the Three Kings came,
Guided by a starry flame,
Where in Thy pastiety
The Most High overshadows Thee!
They were very old and wise,
Knowledge filled their lips and eyes;
Yet, my Babe, they offered Thee
Precious gifts on bended knee;
Could they bring thee all the gold
Coolliest kingly coffers hold,
Still with Thee my arms I fill
With a goodlier treasure still!

"Myrrh and frankincense and gold—
All their gifts for Thee I hold;
Gold, because a King to be,
Tribute thou they offer Thee;
Frankincense, in fragrance poured
For the Son of God the Lord;
Myrrh—yet wherefore should they bring
Myrrh to Thee, who art a King?
Speaking with its bitter breath
Of the sepulchre and death—
Thou, the Son of David—Thou,
With God's promise on Thy brow
Thou, God's own Interpreter—
Wherefore should they bring Thee
myrrh?"

Hushed the song, the sunbeams fled,
Dark and silence came instead,
In Madonna's eyes the tears
Told of coming suffering years,
Till upon a day to be
She should stand on Calvary,
With its shadow overcast
He should answer at the last
Thou one question troubling her—
"Wherefore should they bring Thee
myrrh?"

TREND OF FASHION

By HELEN MERRILL EMERY.

When the modes for palm beach and other southern resorts make their appearance she is a wise woman who takes heed of them, regardless of the fact that she cannot have a delightful three months' sojourn in sunny climes.

Everyone knows that these earliest models have a very definite influence upon fashions for spring and summer, and after the rush of holiday activities it is none too soon to begin to think out and plan one's costumes for the next season.

There can be no question in the mind of anyone who has seen advance showings that sports clothes have a position which it would take a great deal to weaken. Among the smartest sport clothes are many kit-tied costumes. There are one-piece frocks and two-piece frocks. There are suits of most delightful cut and color. There are clever and unusual little coats and jackets, and there are three-piece costumes with a cape matching the coat and skirt.

When one realizes that the knitted costume is more or less a recent fashion innovation and looks back only a few years to the first clumsy knitted wool models one is really amazed at the advance in appearance and wearing qualities of clothes of this type.

In some models there is combined a utilitarian quality that is successfully disguised by its very evident smartness.

It is developed in beige wool with a border of the finest tucks across the back of the collar and forming a finish on the coat and skirt.

Also of knitted wool or silk are extremely attractive jumpers and short, loose coats, with colorful embroideries worked by hand across their entire surface.

MISS LEITCH PRAISES THE AMERICAN WOMAN GOLFER

London, Dec. 27.—Miss Cecil Leitch, the former British women golf champion, is at present in the hands of a specialist for treatment of her arm, and she has said recently that she could not define her prospects in the matter of playing in the next ladies' championship games.

Regarding her tour last summer in Canada and the United States, Miss Leitch declared it was purely of a private nature. She was particularly impressed with womens' golf in the Dominion. Of the outstanding players in Canada, Miss Ada Mackenzie and Miss Peyton were probably the greatest.

Miss Alex Stirling was undoubtedly the greatest exponent of women's golf in the United States, in spite of the fact that she curtailed her play during 1922. She was the finest "shot maker" over there. She had more shots almost than any other player. Miss Leitch considers that the majority of women's golf courses in the United States and Canada are easier than those in England. There is no undulation there as in England, and virtually no wind. The courses, however, are very much better kept than in this country.

The Short Story Jr.

ACCIDENTS WILL HAPPEN

Alec pulled on his heavy fur gloves and turned his back to the cheerful blaze. A long, hard drive was before him. He had promised his father that he would have the car in the city for a little time evening.

"I'll have to hurry," he thought, as he jumped into the machine and quickly backed it out of the garage.

Alec's father was one of the reporters for a big city paper. Tonight the wedding of a famous governor's daughter was to take place. Alec was very proud to think that his father had been chosen to "do" the wedding. He had wanted his reader to help him, following.

As the car slid around the first corner, Alec groaned. "Gee, I forgot to get on those chains," he thought. He slowed down and debated whether he should go back or not, but it would take so long to put them on, and it was already beginning to snow a little. He decided to go on.

He stepped on more gas to make up for lost time. Like a flash the low roadster sped along the white road in the blinding storm. He was going pretty fast, but the road was clear.

Suddenly there was a crash. Alec never knew just how it happened.

When he opened his eyes a big chauffeur was leaning over him. "Are you hurt?" he asked.

"Oh, I guess not," Alec tried to sit up but fell back with a groan. "Oh, my arm."

The chauffeur examined it. "It's broken," he announced.

Alec sat his teeth. "How's the machine?" he asked.

"O. K., except for that wheel, and see you have an extra."

"Good! Could you fix it? I've got to get to the city for the governor's daughter's wedding."

The chauffeur seemed amused. "Are you he bridegroom?" he asked.

Alec tried again to get up, but the horrible pain in his arm made him sick. Just then a girl climbed out of the back of the other car. "Oh, are you hurt?" she cried.

"Broken arm," Alec explained shortly. "But I've got to get that machine to the city. I can make it."

"Nonsense! You can't drive that way. You're liable to faint. I'll drive you in. Anne, you go to bed during our car fixed and have it at the Central Garage as soon as possible."

The ride was all a haze to Alec. He remembered the young lady told his father what a brave boy he had been. Then saying she would take him, she hailed a taxi and was off before they could thank her.

Alec sat up in the hospital bed, his arm all bandaged. The nurse brought him the morning paper. Quickly he turned to the society page to read his father's account of the big wedding.

From the center of the page the typed line of that had driven him pallid cot at him. Under it Alec read, "Governor's daughter is late to her wedding."

LINKED LIVES

By

D. Kinmount Roy

He shivered as though all at once thrilled to the bone, and folding his arms tightly to his chest as though to protect his passion of revenge, that it might not be torn from him; for with that line of light came the memory of Father Francis and his dying words: God is Light, my son; God is Mercy! "What! he thought, scarcely to the storm; "must a man forego his just resentment? Must such human verses as mad go in and out among men of trust and honour? What could an old priest know of the misery of deserted minds into whose soul the iron had entered? What thought could he have of the humiliations, misery of deserted plans through long years, the humiliating conditions of his life, the galling limitations to his just ambition, the hideous ghosts of every shape and hue that have mocked and cursed and darkened every waking day of his existence since early boyhood? What could such as he know of such things? Nothing! absolutely nothing!

Again a faint beam of light struggled through a rift in the clouds, and the man's whole frame dropped as swiftly as a soldier's upon parade, and the same amazing chill seemed to freeze him to the very marrow, until he shuddered with some strange sensation—some semi-conscious mental perception, which held him as it were suspended between Heaven and Hell. His breath came in gasps, like a man who had been running for his life, and was near enough to the goal to pause for a brief space.

"Neither Father Francis nor any other, he whispered hoarsely, 'can sound the depths of another's wretchedness, and yet—and yet—if there be a God, that Divine Being must be the fountain of Mercy and Justice—for, Justice: no man can escape punishment, no man can hide himself from the Infinite!' And slowly the thought shaped itself in his mind that God is sufficient for the spreading Erie Hardenstle's crimes and Lord Glenmore's wrongs; and imperceptibly the meaning loomed in a verse before the supreme conception of Righteousness and Pity, and he was still

He had been like a man passion-driven, impetuous, reckless, pouring out his fervent desires in insane frenzy until he began to sink into the abysmal depths of the blackness of darkness, and just as Father Francis and his dying words: "Thy will be done, my son; God is Mercy!" had come to him, so now he put into his hand which led him up the starry way to Mercy and Light.

It had been indeed a fierce and fiery ordeal through which he had passed, but whatever interpretation you may put into what impressed him most were mystical and indistinct, while the general effect of the whole remained with him.

Be that as it may, the memory of that night continued to influence him, colouring his whole life, and giving to his life and character to the end of his days. Trembling, bewildered and subdued, he would let his reins, and even his horse's head down slept for many hours while the good ship held on her way; so profound and bad put on something of the calmness and concerns of life that might lie before him.

The morning dawned bright and cold, with a deep ground-swell which rolled in long waves aboreward and homeward. The wash of the tide with lingered in the crests of the billows, and the blue chasms yawned and vanished, hidden by the rush of the boiling foam. And instead of the cry for vengeance, and the new day brought a longing for a larger life, wider and fuller, in which mercy and truth might kiss each other, and reign: the twin stars in one hemisphere of peace.

Would this happy frame of mind last? Could a man be transformed in a few hours by some great upheaval within him? We all know that men are frequently driven by passionate impulses for which they are unable to account, into the commission of crime; some strange, hidden force, the treasured-up combustion of a lifetime, is suddenly fired without warning, resulting in moral catastrophes truly appalling.

Perhaps it like manner the fetters and conditions which bind a man's better nature may be rent asunder at the bidding of some mysterious force within him which calls into being a nobler self, creating him a new man for all the higher purposes of existence.

Whether some such event occurred to Aylsworth or not, it is certain that when he again examined the precious proofs of his father's innocence his eyes were opened to see something more than the need of vengeance; One thing he saw was a minimum of a sweet woman's face, that moved him strangely and set his pulse throbbing. He studied it long and carefully for days and nights, until it fascinated him, charmed him, dominated his thoughts and held him spellbound. He must have seen such a face somewhere, he told himself: he hunted through all his life for the memory of such a face; he compared the features with his mother's. No! It was not the same; it was not even like it. The resemblance was there, but he knew that expressed its peculiar power eluded him!

A strange shyness touched him as he gazed upon it; he began to feel like a profane person making too free with a divinity; and with a sudden resolve he put it away. But no resolution he could command was able to shut out the new vision that had come to him.

AUSTRALIA CONCERNED OVER CRIME WAVE

(By Canadian Press)

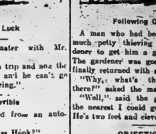

Sydney, Australia, Dec. 27.—So concerned is Australia at the having a law-abiding citizenry that a total of 654 persons charged with crime in six months in a city of 600,000 population—is considered a crime wave, and the Premier of the state has called a conference to deal with the problem.

It will be proposed that the minimum jail sentence be six months, although all but 186 of the 654 persons arraigned were convicted or pleaded guilty. It is felt that the judiciary has shown undue leniency in dealing with criminal cases.

EVENTS OF THE WORLD IN PICTURES

RUINS OF THE FIRESWEPT QUEBEC BASILICA.

The top picture shows the tower of the historic edifice, containing the magnificent chimes, after it had crashed into the street. A great throng of people witnessed the burning of the cathedral and the dramatic episodes connected with its destruction. The bottom picture shows the bare walls, all that remains of what was one of the finest churches in Canada, dating back nearly three centuries. Already over $100,000 has been subscribed towards the work of rebuilding. The property loss alone was estimated at a million dollars.

QUEBEC IN WINTER TIME

(1)—The Chateau Frontenac stands sentinel over Old Quebec. (2)—The Toboggan slide on Dufferin Terrace, Quebec. (3)—Bobsleighing is a popular sport at Quebec. (4)—Quebec fishing maid paused to take in the beauty of her environment.

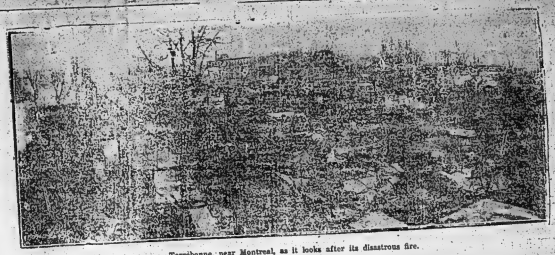

OVER all the world there's not another place like Quebec. Its beauty and its old-world charm have made it famous everywhere. Three hundred years have passed since first it began to be, and each one of those years has left its mark upon the town until it has become a storehouse of Canadian history. It is a place for all the world to visit, and yet it is, perhaps, less well known to Canadians than it is to Americans who every year come north to see it when summer sets bathe its bold outlines, or when winter mows down the lofty citadel and the town's many spires. It is in winter that Quebec is at its best. At no other time is it so characteristically Canadian or so typically French and it is in winter that Quebec most enthusiastically throws open its doors to invite the stranger to see how joyously splendid winter in Canada can be.

Skiing high upon the famous rock and overlooking the wide sweep of the St. Lawrence, and the snow covered Laurentian hills the Chateau Frontenac, always a fitting crown to the splendid scene it now made still more so by the addition of a town that will double the accommodation of this famous hotel. On a winter night there is no more picturesque scene. The thousand lights of the upper and lower town glint on the snow and above them all hang the graceful outlines of the Chateau, every lighted window telling of the comfort and gayety that waits within.

The interior of the Chateau is in perfect keeping with the historic charm of the ancient city, while its appointments and cuisine are the last word in comfort and modern excellence. It is one of those places where home comforts are combined with the conveniences of the up-to-date hotel class hotel.

Arrangements have been completed for Quebec's program of winter sports and as the season has set in with plenty of snow the program may be said to be already under way. A triple chute toboggan slide has been erected to extend from the top of citadel rock down to the terrace and along to the main entrance of the Chateau, and night after night it is crowded with happy parties of tobogganers. The skating rink on the terrace with its warm dressing rooms is a constant source of delight to guests and not a few of the men have already begun the winter's program of curling on the covered rink. The snowshoe and skiing clubs of the city have their programs of events well under way, and there are endless opportunities for the guests to participate in the outdoor sports.

Snowshoe tramps, skiing events, and sleigh driving are daily occurrances and these are organized under the direction of a sports-master whose business it is to see that visitors to the city have every opportunity of taking an active part in the sports if they so desire. Curling will be a special feature this winter, partly as a result of the visit to the city of the visiting Scotch Curlers early in January and on the night of January 31st a parade of snowshoers and a fireworks display will form an outstanding event.

FAST GAME ASSURED ON FRIDAY NIGHT

A. K. Clarke Team Composed of Top Notchers Who Will Set Some Pace For Locals.

As advertised and announced on Wednesday, there will be a snappy game of exhibition hockey played in the arena here on Friday (tomorrow) evening when the local Intermediates will have a reputation battle with the A. K. Clarke squad of Toronto, champions of the Queen City Industrial League.

This team will be made up of some of the most formidable puck chasers in the Province of Ontario. In the opening game of the Senior O. H. A. last night at Toronto arena, when Argos met Varsity, two of the men who will be here with the A. K. Clarke outfit were on the ice with the paddlers. These men are Roy Walters and Duke McCurry, and according to the reports of the Toronto papers they were two of the best men in uniform on either team.

Yes, fans are due to miss something good if they stay away from the arena on Friday evening.

ARGOS PUT SKIDS UNDER VARSITY

Win Senior O.H.A. Opener By 7-2 Score—No Weak Spots on Paddlers' Outfit

When Beattie Ramsay and Elsa Brown copped off their sheepskins and went out into the world with their fifties before them, they left a big hole on the defence of the Varsity hockey team, and that hole has not been filled as was amply demonstrated last night when Argonauts defeated the Blue clad squad, 7 to 2, in the opening game of the senior O.H.A. season. Honorary Coach Beattie Ramsay has been experimenting with his defence since the players got down to practice, and he tried out several hopefuls in the S.P.A. series. And last night he had another new man out, but he has yet to find a pair to successfully fill the breach left by himself and Brown.

Lanky Rowell and Lyle Kennedy, the latter with the S.P.S. Jennings Cup team last season, started out on the defence last night, but they could not stop the clever passing game of the Double Blue. They did very badly against individual attacks, but the passing game beat them repeatedly and only the great work of Jack Langtry in Varsity goal, prevented the score reaching double the figure it did. Not only were Rowell and Kennedy, and Rowell and Harris weak on the defence, but they failed to show the punch Ramsay and Brown, of the attack, with the result that the good-getting strength of the Varsity teams of last year and the year before was sadly lacking.

DISCOVER DIAMONDS IN DUTCH GUINA

Paramaribo, Dutch Guiana, Dec. 27.—Diamonds have been discovered at Brownsweg, 80 miles from this city, according to the members of a local syndicate whose prospectors have brought in seven stones after a search of only a few weeks. The district in which the diamonds were uncovered has yielded gold for the last 47 years, but no systematic search for precious stones has heretofore been conducted. The place is easily reached by rail from Paramaribo, and a rush of diamondseekers is expected.

FOUND VAULT IN BASILICA

U. F. O. STORE BURNS DOWN ONCE EVERY SIX MONTHS

St. Charles, Dec. 27.—For the third time in the last 18 months the United Farmers' Co-operative Company's store here was yesterday destroyed by fire. A few drums of coal oil were all that was saved. Just a week ago the U.F.O. store at Sturgeon Falls was destroyed by a conflagration which burned several buildings.

The fire here was discovered at 3 o'clock in the morning. No cause has been found. Mystery surrounds the former fire. The building has been rebuilt twice. There is some speculation as to whether it will be rebuilt again.

FIRE WOOD IN HASTINGS COMMANDS TOP PRICE

Grain is going comparatively slowly to market, and unless prices improve, much more wheat and oats than usual will be fed to the farm.

Haldimand says: "Considerable hay is moving at the present time. First-class timothy, baled and delivered at the station, selling at $22 per ton. Alfalfa $9.00 to $11 per ton. Farmers are not very anxious to sell at these prices and are holding back.

Dufferin reports a fair quantity of loose hay being offered at from $12 to $13 a ton, and some straw at $6 a load. Hay is quoted at $20 a ton on the Port Arthur market.

Prince Edward says that Spies are selling at $3 a barrel, and other Winter varieties at from $1 to $5 a barrel.

Rural auctioneers state that sales are the latest recently, proving quite satisfactory to sellers.

Farmers are cutting and hauling fire wood at prices running all the way from $5 to $7 a cord in the Rainy River district to $16 a cord in Hastings.

Peel says: "One buyer shipped three car loads of alfalfa seed out of the District recently. There is a limited quantity of No. 1 seed still available. Peel maintained her alfalfa standard by winning the championship at Guelph. Upon request, samples have been forwarded to a firm in Sweden. A few farmers are offering Huban annual sweet clover seed grown in the County this year." Brome says: "The Christmas Fair held at Walkerton on Tuesday, December 19th, was one of the best they have ever had. While the heavy draught classes were keenly contested, as well as the express and roadster classes. The Shorthorn classes were the best they have ever had. The Shorthorn Calf Club was a valuable attraction. There were eleven Shorthorn cows lined up in one class which would be a credit to any of the larger exhibitions. In the calf class there were eleven competitors, and in the opinon of the judge, Mr. John Gardhouse of Weston, they were of somewhat higher merit than the Shorthorn cows. The Junior breeders are particularly well pleased with the showing of this club, and great pride has been taken in their stock by the boys who belong to the Club.

Frontenac reports: "The activity in marketing has been greater during the past week. Dealer's report very little fine beef sold locally. The class of stock coming in are chiefly canners and medium cows. Canners 1c. to 1.5c. medium cows from 2½ to 3c. occasionally choice butcher sells 3½ per lb. Hogs are averaging 9.5c. to 10½c. The few lambs sell at 12½c. a lb. Mature sheep are bringing 6c."

Haldimand says: "The cream supply has greatly fallen off during the past few weeks although not more so than is to be expected at this time of the year. Creameries are unable to fill their orders and are paying 39c. to 40c. per lb. for butter fat.

Leeds quotes local dairy prices as follows: Cheese 19c. lb, No. 1 creamery butter 46c.; whey butter, 35c. milk lb. $3 per cwt. for standard quality.

Leanox and Addington reports milk cows as selling at around $60, light horses $125 each, and heavy draughts $375 a team.

Over forty-one tons of poultry were sold at a turkey fair recently held in Lanark.

Bruce observes an improvement in the quality of fowl owing to the influence of local poultry and pet stock shows.

KINGSTON SOLDIER KILLED BY HORSE

Was Driver on Headquarters Staff R.C.A. and Was Killed in Military Stables

Driver William Smith, of the Headquarters' Staff, Royal Canadian Artillery, died in the General Hospital there Tuesday evening from a fractured skull caused by being trampled upon by a horse in the stables of the Royal Military College, Tuesday evening at about 7 p.m.

It appears that the late Dr. Smith, who is quartered in Tete-de-Pont Barracks, walked over to the R.M.C. yesterday evening to visit a comrade who is a member of the Riding Establishment and who at the time of his arrival at the R.M.C. was engaged in taking the horses under his charge comfortable for the night. Driver Smith was advised to the stables and some few minutes were spent in talking over other Christmases spent together while serving in the R.C.H.A. On passing out of the stables the attention of Dr. Smith was drawn by the appearance of a good looking thoroughbred horse in his stall. Dr. Smith placed his hand on the horse's hindquarters with the remark, "What sort of a horse do you call this?" evidently leaning some weight on the animal, which, not expecting the sudden touch, sprang forward, causing the deceased soldier to fall under his feet, and on the horse regaining his normal position in the stall, Dr. Smith received a severe blow on the head. The injured man was rushed to the General Hospital where Dr. Etherington and Dr. Gardiner examined his injuries, finding a severe fracture of the skull with a portion of bone pressing upon the brain. No hopes were given for his recovery and he passed away at about 9 p.m.

ROTARIANS MET THIS WEEK AS USUAL

Despite Holiday Festivities The Rotary Club Dined on Tuesday.

FATHER AND SON DAY

Fathers Brought Their Sons and Their Neighbors' Sons to the Weekly Dinner—Xmas Cheer Distributed to the Needy and Many Interesting Speeches Made by the Boys.

Father and Son Day was the outstanding occasion at the Rotary Club this week when many enthusiastic sons of Belleville Rotarians, attended the dinner and waxed finest during the speaking. The boys were very eclogatic regarding their respective seats of learning and many pointers were handed to the dads present by the "chips off the old block."

Some of the local Rotarians were unfortunately handicapped, inasmuch as they were unable to bring their own sons but were reluctantly forced to substitute by commandeering the progeny of some of their more fortunate brothers. A few unfortunate slip-ups were made in this game of "pot and take" and the usual club fines were collected, and benevolent advice was extended to the unfortunate step-ony guardians of some other man's son. Dr. Day brought along a whole flock of boys and it was suggested that he could farm a few of them out to accommodate the vacancies in the ranks.

Rotary President W. B. Deacon presided and the following boys delivered appropriate addresses, in both serious and lighter vein:

Wood Deacon, who was down from Toronto University, Tom Wills from the Royal Military College, Gordon Robertson of U. of T., Earl Graham who spoke of his peregrinations a McGill, and Ed. Gowan of the University of Alberta.

Subsequent to the speaking, a vote of thanks was extended to the boys' being proposed by Dr. Baker and by W. Ackerman. The Rotarians at the tables heartily concurred in this feeling and when the sons of their fathers come back again they may rest assured of a hearty reception.

Reports of the Club's activities in the Xmas charities were received. President Deacon reporting the distribution of food baskets, of Good Cheer to needy homes. Rotarian Charley Symons read an acknowledgment from one of the Club's proteges, a youth who is crippled and who, through Rotary care and assistance will soon be enabled to use his limb, again.

Rotary has experienced a most successful year in Belleville and has accomplished much. Nothing is more beautiful in word and spirit, than the Rotary motto—Service and the tewelings and true meanings of this manual have been exemplified in a decided manner throughout the year. To commonly spirit, civic uplift, proper inter assistance to the needy, wholesome fellowship in business and every day life, a closer understanding between men and many other direct results accomplished through the continual application of the Rotary code, have certainly demonstrated its usefull, the part that Rotary has taken in the embellishment, not only of the City of Belleville, but in the achievements of many individuals and Rotarians generally.

TENANTS WON'T PAY—LANDLORDS IMPOVERISHED

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Dec. 29.—A chaotic situation has developed along the Clydside, owing to the refusal of tenants to pay rent for many months past. At least twenty thousand householders are affected. Classes are refusing to pay rent and the landlords therefore are unable to pay their taxes. The situation is result of the decision by the House of Lords, rendering all increases in rent collected, illegal.

TWO EXECUTED TODAY

Dublin, Dec. 29.—Two men named Murphy and Whelan were executed at Kilkenny this morning.

Scene in front of the Quebec government liquor store at Valleyfield, where citizens in barges will bootleggers buy liquor, which is later run over the American border to New York state. All the Quebecers have to do is to enter the store, say "Johnny Walker" and collect their ten cents rake-off on every bottle. The rum-runners do the rest.

KU KLUX KLAN IN GUELPH?

Claim That Hooded Knights Have Organized in City

Guelph, Dec. 28.—Has the famous Ku Klux Klan invaded Guelph?

This is a question which is agitating the minds of not a few of the citizens of this city, at the present time. There is information that an effort has been made, or is being made at the present time, to form a branch of the organization here.

At least one man has been approached by a party said to represent the Ku Klux Klan, who asked if he would become a member of the organization in this city, but the identity of the "scrat" remains a mystery. It is not known definitely whether any meetings have been held as yet, as the city officials are not aware of any such, and the police have no knowledge of the invasion of the city by the Klan.

BLIZZARD IN NEW YORK

Two Dead and Many Injured From Falls in Street

(Canadian Press Despatch)

New York, Dec. 29.—Thousands of volunteer snow handlers were called to shovels today, to help dig New York City out of its first big storm of the season, a blizzard of snow and ice, which during the night threatened to paralyze transportation. The storm took its toll of hundreds of injured. From early last night until daybreak the hospital ambulances were bringing in pedestrians with broken arms, fractured legs and cracked skulls who had fallen victims of the treachery of ice covered streets. Most hospitals were crowded to capacity this morning. At least two persons who were reported killed from falls in city streets.

SLAYER ADMITS DEED—ROBBERY WAS MOTIVE

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Winnipeg, Dec. 29.—John Easton, for whom a warrant for arrest on a murder charge has been issued, admitted staying 16 year old John Pawley, battering his head in with a clawhammer at his home here. Albert E. Happy Norton, who was charged with complicity, testified at the inquest last night. Norton said robbery was the motive.

PARLIAMENT TO OPEN JAN. 25TH?

Ottawa, Dec. 28.—An announcement will be made next week of the date of the opening of the second session of Canada's Fourteenth Parliament, according to the Prime Minister this evening. He intimated that it would be near the end of January, and it is understood that the date will be Thursday, January 25. By that time, or by the beginning of February, it is expected that Hon. W. S. Fielding and Hon. Ernest Lapointe, who will have been absent in Europe five months, and Hon. James A. Robb, who will have been away in Australia about three months, will be here with at least three important documents to submit to Parliament for ratification. High hopes are entertained in Government circles for the results to accrue from the new trade arrangements with France, Italy and Australia.

BELLEVILLE PROPOSED AS SALES CENTRE

Peterboro Report States Dairymen's Co-operative Intend Grading Their Cheese Here

CHANGE IN SYSTEM

Must be Gathered at Central Points and Graded by Government Experts

Peterboro', Dec. 27.—The Examiner says tonight quoting H. B. Cowan, Secretary of the United Dairymen Cooperative Limited that the system of selling cheese in Central Ontario district promises to be abandoned completely before next season. Our Company is in receipt of a letter from the Dominion Government stating that the Government will not allow the factory grading, quite a number of factories have wanted, as at present, to grade their cheese. Instead at Central points and graded there by Government experts.

During the past two and a half years our Company has sold nearly four million dollars worth of boil cheese and butter at Montreal and Mr. Cowan. We propose now of establishing a similar sale for Central Ontario district next season at Belleville. At present, so many new factories in this section have agreed to sell cheese through the Central Ontario Sale, that the plan is likely to mean the closing of several cheese boards. A camp will also be instituted a little later in Peterborough, mostly to ascertain how many local factories will support the Belleville sale. There is reason to believe that they would much prefer to have their cheese graded at Belleville than at Montreal.

According to the plan outlined by us it is intended that the factories within a radius of possibly 30 miles of Belleville shall have their cheese trucked to that city where it will be weighed and graded before the sale and then sold by public auction according to grade. The factories it is, section, and at a greater distance than the sale centre will have to ave their cheese in by freight.

One benefit accruing from this however, would be in the saving in time that the cheese can be placed in cold storage in Belleville and kept there long enough to insure its being given the best possible grade, the results of the company in Montreal having shown that this course does pay in the grade. Another advantage is that the establishment of a grading centre in Belleville will be a great convenional factor for the Central Ontario district, as Belleville is a railway and steamboarders and officers of cheese factories will be able to visit the grading centre more conveniently and easily it compares with those from a large number of other factories.

The progress of the plan will be a benefit to those factories which now lack proper curing rooms, as

EXPLOSION STARTLES DUBLIN

Front of Musical Dealer's Shop Blown Into Street —Three People Hurt

Dublin, Dec. 28.—The whole city was startled this evening by a violent explosion, far exceeding the familiar detonation of a bomb. The explosion occurred in a shop occupied by a dealer in musical instruments, McCullough by name, in Dawson street, where either a land mine or some other great explosive was set off.

The front of the shop was blown into the street, and the story above demolished. Shattered pianos and other instruments were mingled in the wreckage, numerous plate-glass windows were smashed, and the street was littered with glass for two hundred yards. The shop had been closed an hour previously, and, so far as known, nobody was on the premises. The street also was nearly empty, but three civilians, who were passing, were wounded. The windows of tram cars also were broken, but no passengers was hurt.

McCullough, who is not regarded as a political partisan, was recently nominated for the Senate, but not elected. Troops hastened to the scene and searched the neighborhood, but in vain.

HOTEL BURNED THREE MILES FROM TRENTON

Summer Resort Near Murray Canal Is Destroyed

A TOTAL LOSS

Cause of Conflagration Unknown — Partially Insured

The hotel at Twelve O'clock Point, three miles from the Town of Trenton was totally destroyed by fire yesterday. This well-known hostlery served as useful and convenient accomodation for tourists during the summer season, and was the scene of many happy picnics and party outings during the vacation months.

The building was owned by Mr. Harry Groff and was entirely contained owing to the absence of adequate fire fighting apparatus at this particular point.

The loss is conservatively estimated at $5000 of which $3000 is covered by insurance. It is not definitely known how the fire started and no decision has been made as to whether the place will be rebuilt in time for the vacation season next year.

A peculiar coincidence in connection with this fire is the fact that it was just 9 years to a day since the same hotel was first destroyed by fire.

FLEET IN ICE TILL SPRING

Seven Herring Schooners Frozen in at Bay of Islands Must Remain

Curling, Nfld., Dec. 28.—The seven schooners of the herring fishing fleet which are frozen in the ice of the Bay of Islands must stay there until spring. The Canadian Government steamer Stanley, an ice-breaker, sent here to free them, failed in all efforts to open a way to them today. As there was no indication of probable success, it was announced that the attempt to liberate the vessels was being abandoned. Three of the schooners are Canadian, two of them are from the United States, and two from Newfoundland. They have about 10,000 pounds of herring aboard.

MU GAMMA KAPPA CLUB DANCE

In Bonnett's Academy, last night the Mu Gamma Kappa Club held one of the most successful dances of the holiday season. Nearly one hundred were present and Al Wilson's orchestra kept them all dancing. The orchestra introduced to Belleville last night, Victor Rudolf, of Chicago, who played the violin exceptionally well. With the orchestra thus augmented, the young couples could not keep off the floor.

The patronesses were Mrs. R. J. Graham, Mrs. J. Bone, Mrs. R. J. E. Graham, Mrs. Mackenzie Robertson and Mrs. D. C. Ramsay.

During the supper interval, Mr. Victor Rudolf gave two selections on the violin that were greatly appreciated. A delightful supper was served about midnight.

One unique feature of the evening was the balloon dance. A large number of balloons were released, a few from the electric lighting fixtures and during one of the dances after supper these were released. A great scramble ensued, during which the popping of exploding balloons tore the air.

The dance was well organized and was a wonderful success. Unusual as it is, there were actually a larger number of young men than young ladies present. Due to this fact, there was a lot demand for dances with the ladies. Great credit must be given the committees in charge of the dance and in fact to all members of the club,

THIS U.F.O. STORE VIOLATED THE LAW

Peterboro, Dec. 27.—Edgar Carson, manager of the Farmers' Co-operative Store, was fined $50 and costs in the police court this morning for selling Vanilla Extract, containing alcohol, in eight ounce bottles.

Mr. Carson stated that he was for the prosecution, and Mr. Carson conducted his own defence.

ARREST ROBBERS IN NEW YORK

Canadian Govt. Bonds and $11,000 in Cash Seized With Their Suit Cases

New York, Dec. 28.—Two men, believed by the police to be bank robbers, were held to-day for investigation following their arrest in the Pennsylvania Station last night and the seizure of suitcases in which they carried $11,000 in Canadian money, Canadian government bonds and many packets of Canadian whiskey labels.

Comparison of Brrillon records, the police said, revealed that the measurements of the men fitted those of Louis Austin, of Tules, Okla., who was prosecuted for a safe robbery in Beaumont, Texas, in 1912, and Floyd Nolan of Memphis, Tenn., sentenced in 1915 to ten years imprisonment for the hold-up of the Houston, Texas, National Bank. He was pardoned in 1919.

Canadian authorities have been notified of the arrests.

Commissioner Alf. Cuddy, of the Provincial Police, has been notified of the arrests, but as yet the police at Queen's Park are not prepared to make any statement. It is believed on authoritive information that the men are those wanted in connection with the Stouffville bank robbery.

While the Stouffville bank has not yet been notified of the serial numbers on the bonds seized at New York, nor have they been notified officially of the arrests, it is thought beyond all doubt the men are those wanted in connection with the Stouffville branch robbery, but with other bank robberies throughout the west.

The supposition held out in connection with western Canada bank robbies, that safe-blowing and hold-up jobs had been carried on under direction of the big bootlegging bosses, is borne out in the finding of the liquor labels seized along with the bonds.

KU KLUX KLANSMEN WARN LINDSAY MAN

Inform Candidate for Mayoralty to Withdraw His Name, as He is Alleged Foreigner

Some practical joker with a rage for scribbling has been injecting spice into the municipal contest at Lindsay by sending letters signed "Ku Klux Klan" to Mr. J. B. Chamberlain, who aspires for the mayor's chair. He says he received five of these epistles and nearly all were mailed from Toronto. On Wednesday he received the following: Mr. J. B. Chamberlain, Lindsay, Ont.

Sir—If you do not withdraw your name from mayoralty contest by Thursday night next serious bodily harm will be inflicted upon you. It is our sworn duty to prevent foreigners holding any public office. In your case interests act upon this advice. Protest! "Beware!"

K. K. K.

Mr. Chamberlain says he is preserving the letters as jokers and states that they have been sent by one who wishes to have a little fun at his expense.

Mr. Chamberlain is an honest to goodness Englishman by the way.

COMMITTEE CHAIRMAN SAYS AID HOTELS

Wants Province to Aid the Hostelries and Remove Them From Rule of License Board

REPORT PENDING

Edgar Watson Wants the "Cantankerous Cankerworm" of O.T.A. Enforcement Banished—Recommendations of Committee Stated

London, Ont., Dec. 28.—Some of the recommendations to be sent to the Legislature by the special committee which has travelled 15,000 miles in the past few months investigating hotels were made known tonight by the committee Chairman, Edgar Watson, M.P.P., addressing the annual banquet of the Ontario Commercial Traveller's Association.

The committee will recommend that the enforcement of the Ontario Temperance Act be entirely dissociated from the general regulation and supervision of hotels; that a commission representing the hotel business, commercial travellers, the Ontario Motor League and the Government, be established to exercise Government control; that Government financing be made available to assist in establishing first-class hotels where they are required; and, finally, that a publicity campaign be launched throughout America with the objective of making Ontario's tourist business worth $100,000,000 within five or six years.

Province Must Seek Money.

Mr. Watson drew attention to the fact that Cornell University is now providing a course in hotel management, and stated that in Ontario facilities should be provided for the collection and distribution of data on modern methods.

The committee should also have machinery for securing the support of the local municipal authority.

Mr. Watson left little doubt as to his attitude toward the Ontario Temperance Act. He said that he cannot be described as a "very ardent supporter of total prohibition, and that he does not believe that the public at large is in favor of prohibition.

He urged, however, that if liquor were again to be sold in hotels the demand should emanate from the people, and not from the hotelmen. Hotelkeepers Despitably Stigmatized.

Mr. Watson said that the pro-prohibition propaganda had left "a despicable banion of anathema" on the hotel business, and he declared that it should be the business of the Government to restore a spirit of co-operation, which had vanish from the jurisdiction of the Hotel Regulating Commission the "cantankerous cankerworm" of O.T.A. enforcement.

MUSIC and DRAMA

DO YOU KNOW HOW TO KISS? ASK MARIE PREVOST

"Kissed"—p-u-s-s-u-m-m-m-m. . . . What? Well say she was!

The funny part of it was that she thought she liked it yet she slapped him, she boxed for romance and then she drove it away with a pretty frown.

The girl in the Universal picture that carries such a wicked title with it at the Regent Theatre tonight matinee and evening wanted it badly. She stepped out on a second's wanda. Couples came and disappeared in the darkness reminiscent of a glorious moon and a soft night breeze. Signs of Cupid's influence were visible.

She wanted it, too.

Then Romance personified jumped right over the railing of the veranda and captured her by storm. What did she do? Why, she slapped the stranger's misery from the lovers' garden!

Natural thing for her to do, being a well bred girl, but nevertheless she passed through a wonderful days and nights hunting for the author of that divine kiss whom she had so rudely slapped.

It's a role perfect for Marie Prevost and the principal rôles are well fitted to her. Frank Currier, Harold Goodwin Lloyd Whitlock, Harold Miller, Arthur Hoyt, Lillian Langdon, Marie Crisp and Dorothy Cumming.

The story is Arthur Somers Roche's the second. That should be sufficient. Enough said. Such material and directed commendably.

CHARLES RAY IN STORY OF LOVE MYSTERY AND ADVENTURE

If a popular story containing an interesting and dramatic story of love mystery and adventure and thrill makes a big photoplay, then "Gas' Oil and Water" is in this class. It seems as though Richard Lindsay wrote this novel with the films in mind when he conceived egd wrote the story. Charles Ray was selected for the stellar role and his leading lady in this picture is Kathlyn Adams, a cast of well known screen players appear in support of the star.

Arthur Kane well known for his big productions and ability to get the most out of any story in film production, was entrusted with the task of making the picture. He is a stickler for realism and took a personal interest in everything used in making the production. Nothing went into the sets he did not approve. So careful was he of each detail ensure that one of the members of the company remarked: "He even goes through our pockets to be sure we have the proper atmosphere in them".

"A Rambling Romeo" an amusing two reel Christie comedy featuring Neal Burns, Art Acord in a new chapter of the Western adventure play "Buffalo Bill", and a Travelogue are being exhibited on the same program.

The following letter was received from a well known church committee in Toronto and will be of interest to the many friends of Miss Jean McIntosh who has been studying her chosen profession with Mr. Owen A. Smily in Toronto. The recital referred to it will be an accomplished fact ere many moons as Miss McIntosh is filling herself with a splendid programme of musical gems and monologues for a professional debut in Belleville in the early part of the coming year.

Owen A. Smily, Esq.,
173 Roxbrough St.,
Toronto, Ont.

Dear Sir:

Please allow me, on behalf of the Rev. Mr. Carpenter our Rector and committee of the Mens' Club of St. Leonards Church, to tell you how very much we all enjoyed hearing Miss Jean McIntosh last night. Her rendering of the selections chosen for the occasion simply captivated the audience and as Mr. Carpenter said afterwards, we were all sorry she did not appear again on the programme for her part was a genuine treat. We all hope to have the pleasure of hearing her again. She certainly is a great credit to your studio and we were surprised to learn she had not yet given her recital.

Again thanking you for your kindness and assuring you it will not be soon forgotten, I remain,

Yours sincerely,
ALFRED MASON.

EDITOR'S NOTE—The above was received at this office subsequent to the initial publication a day or two ago. Notwithstanding the late arrival of the article we are pleased indeed to have the opportunity of commenting upon the talents of one of Belleville's successful young ladies and we hoped that Miss McIntosh will appear in Belleville as arranged.

BOOK REVIEW

"The Outline of History," by H. G. Wells. Publishers, The Macmillan Company, Toronto, $5.00.

The author of this work is so well known that it is needless for me to tell you, who he is other than saying that he is our greatest historian of the present day. He wrote several volumes upon Social Religious and Political Questions as well as his "Outline of Histories." The present edition, his third, is the one I still treat with here. His efforts are more lucky and contain much detail which is somewhat tiring and sometimes a little deep for the average reader who desires a speaking knowledge of the early History of life as Mankind from the beginning of the world down to the present time.

The present edition is in one volume and is condensed down to the most essential points and explanations. In its 1,100 pages it contains a whole library of information. We are very fortunate in having this volume is used at the same time as Thompson's "Outline of Science" which contains our readers a work well worth perusing, written in the free, graceful and easily understood style that the reader who has not a very extensive knowledge of Botany, Zoology or Chemistry, will find delightfully interesting and instructive. To our these two works is as good as a library of dozens of volumes of other sorts, on the same matters. The outline of History commences with the very beginning of the world as it is reckoned in space and time. It tells in a very simple and plain language of the first inhabitants of the earth and how they lived and worked. Continuing with the Age of Reptiles, the age of Mammels, and the Ancestor of Man, it outlines in a very comprehensive manner the line of descent, of other the various stages and the relationship of the one with the other, even through the countless centuries dealing with the Neanderthal Men, extinct race, during the early Palaeolithic Age of 50,000 years ago when the first true men or the late Palaeolithic Age it tells of the coming or rather the evolution of the men themselves.

The book continues on down, dealing with the Primitive Philosophy or Religion, thought and how these affected the early races of mankind.

The languages of the most main language groups of the Neolithic Ages are vividly described and explained in detail.

The book is most comprehensive and painstaking in detail yet readily readable and understood, it has not a table of dates and terms for reference and mystify the reader but is written in very simple, easily understood language.

It contains the story of the Great War of 1914-1918 and deals with current events up to and including the year 1920.

The chronological table and index are complete in every way and instant reference may be had to any date or name known to us today by this general index.

The book was originally planned to give the average reader a mere thorough knowledge of the history of mankind than he could obtain from a single reference book heretofore and it must certainly fills that need in very way and contains all the information one could possibly put in a single book.

TRY "PICTURE CURE" FOR DRUNKENNESS

Des Moines, Ia., Dec. 28.—John B. Hammond, chief of police, announced today that every drunken man who is brought into police headquarters hereafter will have his picture taken. When the offender has become sober again he will be presented with a picture of himself, so that he may know just how he looked when he was brought to the jail. Hammond hopes this "picture cure" will be a potent weapon against drunkenness.

ONT suffer from this unpleasant and embarrassing disease any longer. It is unnecessary. Why? Because chiropractic methods have reached the cause of catarrh and the way to eliminate this cause.

VICTIMS OF WOLF PACK

Two Indians and White Huntsman Destroyed by Ferocious Pack

Fort William, Ont., Dec. 27.—Six hunting wolf packs recently slain North of Ignace are terrorizing trappers and Indian trips following the successful Christmas massiii on a veteran white huntsman, and the latest destruction of two Indians who were out-maneuvered by the pack, word to Couriers bring word of one monster wolf with dog markings who is leading the most vicious of the marauders.

Back from Ignace to-day, Roadmaster Smith of the Canadian Pacific Railway carries grim reports of the death near a lonely northern out post of a white trapper on Christmas Day after a desperate fight, followed by a long flight through the woods. His name is known to Ignace residents, but cannot be verified until later in the day. Warned by his snowshoes to the dogs and take to flight down to the post office, twenty five miles distant, a store of the Hudson's Bay Company, he laughed to scorn their fears, saying he had lived long enough in the woods to deal with mere wolves, timber or coyote. It raised them goodbye Saturday morning. He reached the trading post, found the mail had not arrived, and took the return trail to his dead!

When the old trapper failed to turn up for the Christmas Eve party, which had always been a feature of the fetes, the sons called Indian companions, followed the trail and came upon a sled, remnants of harness and polished bones of a man, undoubtedly their father.

Now our thoughts of sentiment sent two Indians after that wolf pack. Bounty is what they sought Twenty dollars for each of the 6 pelts in the regulation reward. Within 24 hours afterwards, the Indians, well supported, another party was formed. Less than five miles from the camp two rifles were found and another deposit of pelts, bears. Around about were 14 dead timber wolves. The cartridges of the lost party had given out and the natives were rushed.

A tribal hunt is being formed by the Indians at the little northern station with a view to installing fear in how ering packs.

AUSTRIA TO DISCHARGE STATE EMPLOYEES

Vienna, Dec. 28.—More than 100,000 government employees will be discharged within the next two years under the new economy plan adopted by the Austrian government with the approval of the League of Nations.

It is proposed to discharge the public employees gradually, but in such a way that at the end of two years there will be only 50,000 men on the payrolls of the state.

OLD RESIDENTS CELEBRATE GOLDEN WEDDING

Away back in 1858, on a farm in the Township of Ameliasburg, Prince Edward County, a little lad by the name of Walter Allen Weese came to see the light of a day. Twenty-two years later, at the Xmas-tide he took as his bride the daughter of one of his few neighbors, Ellen Wood. Now, on Christmas Day 1922 the old contented was the scene, of bustling activity as children, grandchildren and many friends, both old and new, gathered to celebrate the golden anniversary.

Besides the four children and all the grandchildren, the fifty guests included Dr. and Mrs. A. J. Fife, who had just recently celebrated their golden anniversary, Mr. H. C. Wood, brother of the bride, and his wife, who celebrated their golden anniversary last Xmas; Mr. and Mrs. L. Parliament, and Mr. and Mrs. R. Pole, two other couples whose years of wedded bliss are soon to pass the half-a-century mark. Thus, too, there were many friends and neighbors present to add their words of esteem and felicitation.

The tables were set in the shape of a triangle, about which the merry guests arranged themselves, the bride and groom sitting at the apex. Before them was a monster wedding cake surmounted by a miniature bride and groom in full wedding regalia. Opposite this fine groom's cake, commemorating the anniversary with "1872-1922" in raised gold letters, from the toast to the bride and groom had been drunk, many pleasant reminiscences and after-dinner remarks were made by the friends present. The Speaker of the Provincial Legislature, Mr. N. Parliament, entertained the guests with his brilliant wit. During the course of the evening's remarks, fitting reference was made to the fact that not one break had as yet occurred in the family circle, which was a cause for great congratulation.

Another feature of the entertainment was a recitation by one grandchild, Miss Gaidys Choate.

The toast master of the evening was W. E. Choate of Toronto. The groom's address, who ably handled his part of the general entertainment, and when he relinquished his rein of office, the assembled guests abandoned themselves to an evening of enjoyment, which drew to a close in the wee small hours, when all departed, wishing their hosts the compliments of the Christmas season and many years in which to enjoy their well earned happiness.

The bride and groom were the recipients of many tokens of affection and esteem, bearing out the scheme of the golden anniversary in one form or another. They came from many points of the compass, the farthest place represented, perhaps, being Pontiac Michigan, others: Thorold, Toronto, Oshawa and Belleville, while there were all sorts and conditions of gifts, from the costly to the useful, all of which bore testimony to the many years of unalloyed bliss.

Among the players here are Clarke and Wilson for goal; Jessie Byrne, "Jolly" Bennett and Spanton for the defence, "Duke" McCurry, Fryer, Williams, Lemon and Eddie Rodden for the forward line.

Maybe they will not have to step out too when they clash with the A. R. Clarke aggregation, winners of the Industrial League of the Queen City.

The weather is fine today, the ice will be excellent, and as explained, the game are there also, so it is up to the hockey loving public to attend the game expenses in a strong line like the A. R. Clarke aggregation are not trimming down here for the first visit there is to it, and their expenses will amount to something. Show your appreciation of the work of the city clubs in securing this team, by putting in an appearance to-night.

IRISHMEN OBJECT TO ROUGH TREATMENT

When St. Patrick entertained Hamilton in Toronto last Saturday night, Percy Thompson suggested to the Toronto management that President Children's attention be drawn to the rough playing of Sprague Cleghorn, and Percy Hambly accommodated him. St. Patrick's were sent to Hamilton on Wednesday and were repaid by being invited to one of the roughest passages they have ever encountered. The Irishmen have not intimated very much they are willing to take the bumps provided that the offenders are penalized, but, according to local fans who accompanied the team to the Mountain City, the Tigers got away with a lot of stuff that Referee Hamilton did not see. Dye lost two teeth, had his arm badly slashed and his nose nearly broken, all by Corbeau, and on many of the other occasions was the big defence man banished.

Just a result of the tactics of the Hamilton players, Corbeau and Wilson in particular, the St. Patrick's have sent a letter to President Frank Calder complaining of the playing of their pair. The Irish point out that they have always given visiting teams a fair break in the games in Toronto and therefore have taken all the rough treatment in outside towns without a murmur, but they have advised the league president that from now on, in Hamilton and Montreal, they will instruct their players to play real hockey until the home team starts the rough stuff, and from then on the Irish will retaliate and give the supporters of the home team a sample of what their favorites have been handing out.

The St. Pats had a rough passage all the way. After the game was over they had to wait an hour for their train to show up to bring them back to Toronto, and between Oakville and Port Credit they collided with a motor lorry. The boys were taken up a bit, but Noble and Ran all were the only ones to be injured former getting a gash over his nose from flying glass, while Randall had a cut on the wrist. Bill Chadwick fared first did. The party left from to death for the remainder of the trip as all the windows had been broken. The accident brought the attention of the club's owners that they were running chances in spending over $25,000 worth of per material, on the hoof, from Toronto to Toronto at night, and so that the team will remain overnight in Hamilton, but it is a hard argument.

New York market irregular. Speculators for rise ran into heavy profit taking and short selling. Over one million shares traded in yesterday—a big day for holiday week trading.

Call funds up to 5½ per cent.; money in London, 1¾ per cent.; discount rate there, 3½ per cent. for short bills. Consols for money, 55⅝. Sterling exchange up to $4.70. New York funds, 1 1-32 per cent. premium with decided strength. Funds are scarce in Montreal. Market seems very bare just now.

Stock of the Canadian Industrial Alcohol, with a plant at Corbyville, closed at 19½ yesterday. The par value of this issue is $25 and there are no bonds or preferred stock out. At this level the yield is over 8 per cent, and yesterday the directors met and declared a quarterly dividend of one per cent. to shareholders on record on Dec. 31st. The dividend is payable Jan. 15, 1923.

Paper stocks strong in Montreal.

Raw cotton up to a new high of 27.00c in New York today.

Canada will likely be a borrower in both London and New York next year. Rumors say that $150,000,000 is to be floated to cover maturities due next year.

The Wheat Market.

With a liberal export demand in evidence and with misgivings prevalent as to the abnormally low condition of the domestic, winter crop, wheat advanced today to a new high price record for the season—$1.26⅝. May delivery. The market closed firm, 1½c to 1¾c net higher, with May $1.26⅝ to $1.26⅞ and July $1.15⅝ to $1.15⅞. Corn gained ⅜c to ½c to 1.05c; oats a shade to ⅜c.

Higher quotations at Liverpool helped to give the wheat market here an upturn at the outset, notwithstanding that the action at Liverpool was said to be chiefly a reflection of yesterday's advance here. Talk was current, however, that there had been a liberal amount of export business put through during the night, and that cash inquiry for wheat at Kansas City was the best in some time. Furthermore, the Kansas State weekly report was given a bullish construction as appearing to emphasize other advices that the winter wheat outlook was dubious.

Persistent selling by houses with eastern connections developed on the price bulges in the wheat market, but had no lasting effect, final trades being at the topmost figures, which for month had reached today. One of the late influences lending weight was a report that Australian wheat supplies were less abundant than was estimated and that shipments from Australia to Europe were being very much restricted as a result.

JOHNNY KILBANE TO FIGHT FRENCHMEN

New York, Dec. 28.—Tom O'Rourke, New York promoter, announced tonight he had received word from his Paris agent that Eugene Criqui, French holder of the European featherweight boxing title, had accepted terms for a world's championship match at the Polo Grounds on Decoration Day, with Johnny Kilbane, of Cleveland, the present titleholder. Kilbane already has signed for the bout.

Criqui's acceptance, O'Rourke said, meant he would receive an option of $25,000 or seventy per cent. of the gate receipts as his share. The Frenchman had originally demanded 22½ per cent. of the gate.

CANADIAN GRAIN VIA NEW YORK

In a recent issue of the Toronto Globe the following item appears:

"Out of 188,510,001 bushels of graded Canadian grain shipped from Fort William during the past season, 115,845,757 bushels went to build up the port of New York. If the St. Lawrence were deepened Canadian grain would go to build up Montreal instead of New York."

It is a very alarming state of affairs, to say the least. We have our Canadian millions spent on elevators, grain handling machinery, port development, and railways, and yet we sit idly by and allow 115,845,757 bushels of Canadian grain to be handled at Buffalo, and from there hauled by the United States railways to New York for shipment overseas. In any circumstances, the situation would be rather disquieting, but under the present conditions it is alarming. Our railway deficits are household topics, and it is a well-known fact that Montreal can handle more grain, while the elevators of the city of Quebec have only handled a very small proportion of their capacity this year and really have never been operated at more than half capacity.

The answer is that it is cheaper to bring grain down by water from the head of the lakes, than it is to bring it down by rail. The freighters carrying this grain are not able to go through the Welland Canal and this grain is discharged at Port Colborne in Canada or Buffalo in the United States. The grain discharged at Port Colborne is transhipped into canal size freighters and taken to Montreal by water. Very little of this grain is taken by rail to the Canadian ports. At Buffalo all but that small quantity sent to New York via the New York State Barge Canal is taken to the United States ports by rail. Now the distance from Fort Colborne to Montreal by rail is less than from Buffalo to New York, and Canadian roads should get large hauls of Canadian grain from Port Colborne to Montreal. The port of Montreal handling grain at a much lower figure than does New York, and the ocean freights are no higher, from Montreal than from New York. Here is a big source of revenue for our Canadian National Railways.

With the completion of the Welland Ship Canal the large upper lake freighters will be able to get down to Kingston or Prescott, where the grain can be transhipped into small canal size steamers, that will be enabled to make many more of those shorter runs than they do at present when the have to go to Port Colborne to load.

Canada's grain handling her grain problem herself with the new Welland Ship Canal and additional elevator capacity at Kingston or Prescott, as also a greater elevator capacity at Montreal. She should not be committed to the expense of deepening the St. Lawrence for a great many years to come.

IN THE ANTE-ROOM

An editorial appearing in the current issue of a monthly magazine conveys the thought that we poor humans on this earth are, during our span of life, merely waiting in the ante-room of the Almighty, awaiting the interview which shapes our ultimate destiny. We quote extracts from the article:

"The world appears like the ante-room of an office. We are shunted into it and told to wait our turn, and at the call of Death, each of us passes through the door, to face, we know not what.

"We do not have to know anything about the next world to know about ante-rooms. We have sat in them by the hour, at the banker's, the lawyer's, the doctor's, and at places where we hoped to make a sale of goods. Now everyone knows that it is a dreadful bore unless there is something to do. So as we sit, we read anything we can lay our hands on, or think as hard as we can, or take a pencil and paper and make notes of things to do, and how to do them. In other words, we busy ourselves, if we can. And as if by miracle, two wonderful things happen. One is that time passes more pleasantly while we are waiting, and the other is that when we get inside, the business that we have come to transact is better attended to than if we had spent the time idly loafing. That it is shown that we are the better prepared by work than by idleness.".

"Now we are in the ante-room of the Almighty. We do not know what He wants to see us about, but while we wait we will be far happier if we work as hard as we can at the job of developing all our talents. And out of that talent we shall be better prepared for the interview that is ahead of us. Nobody on this earth has any use for a dead, inactive, lazy mind—and it does not seem reasonable that the Almighty has.

There are the sentiments of a layman, and not of any churchman; yet it would appear as the doctrine preached in our churches is really along the same lines. There is no greater pleasure in this world than that of accomplishment. All other joys soon fade, but the joy imparted from the knowledge of having done good deeds well, lasts closely approaches perfect happiness than any other form of amusement yet found. It is true, real, and natural, while the lighter and more exciting amusements are purely artificial.

Thus our future wealth, health, and happiness are well protected if we occupy ourselves with useful work.

HERE AND THERE

THE FIRST ANTHRACITE.

It is hard to believe that the first man to take anthracite to Philadelphia—only 110 years ago—had trouble to get anybody to burn it. He—Col. Shoemaker of Pottsville, Pa., and, bundled up in coonskin, he drove up in front of Independence Hall with nine wagonloads. The collision burghers of the old Quaker City had heard of the "stone coal" which the Colonel brought, for it had been shipped over in 1792, but few of them had seen it. In three days Col. Shoemaker's canvass of the blacksmiths and bounders had resulted in the sale of only two loads. Despairing of selling any more, and wanting to return to his family, he offered the balance as a gift.

"You are a dreamer, Colonel," he was told. "The Lord hath ordained that we shall burn wood, and not coal without we stone. You had better throw it into the Schuylkill and cease flying in the face of nature."

After the Colonel had got rid of his remaining seven loads and was preparing at his inn for the return journey, a friend came and told him: "Those to whom you gave the coal could not make it burn and they have gone to the Magistrates and obtained writs for your arrest as an impostor. You had better leave the city at once."

It was the beginning of a long and checkered history of a great natural resource. It is easy to fancy what would happen a Colonel Shoemaker who entered any city now with anthracite he wished to give away or sell. The stone coal of 110 years ago has become one of the most cherished necessities. People whose teeth chatter now for want of it grumble at the cost and at the combination of circumstances which have rendered it so expensive, but they must have fuel.

The wood that the Quaker burghers said was ordained by nature for that purpose has passed away in many sections as a fuel, and even the end of anthracite on this continent may be approximately measured. The production is almost 100,000,000 tons a year, and the anthracite beds in the United States are estimated to be 14,000,000,000 tons. Strikes and other troubles have seriously upset the supply and the price from time to time, until the people are about ready for any change which will ensure a steady supply and fair dealing.

Anthracite was first discovered in the Wyoming region —a valley afterward made famous by Campbell's poem, "Gertrude of Wyoming"—and though at first there was little or no demand for it, the first shipment down the Susquehanna in 1775 was used in making arms for Washington's troops.

THE QUAKER MEETING.

Within the meeting-house, sedate and grey;
There sits a group in silence deep, profound.
There reigns a holy calm on this First day.
Made heavenly by the sunlight gleams around.

Convened apart from battle, noise and strife,
They mingle here, away from passers-by;
Forgotten are the life and cares of life
Within this house beneath the azure sky.

No pealing organ swells upon the air,
No choirs inspiring music chanting near,
No litanies or creeds or forms are there,
The distant chimes send out their clearest clear.

This hour—a fragment of Eternity—
Enfolds the soul, without the written creed,
And deep within the heart, a melody—
Exquisite sense of this world's greatest need.

O Guiding Light, come bear me o'er the tide;
O Heart of Peace, breathe low and make me strong;
O Voice Divine, I know Thee for my Guide
Toward all in life that shapes my silent song.

—Charlotte Carson-Talcott, Bloomfield.

PRESS OPINIONS

DO YOU HATE WINTER?

(Kitchener-Waterloo Daily Herald).

Do you hate winter? It's necessary. Prof. J. Arthur Thomson, in his "Outline of Science," analyzes the blood of the season. Winter, he decides, comes after the great activity of summer by the law that rest must follow toil. Most humans do their best work in winter, instead of resting. That's because we live unnaturally—have artificially built up powers to enable us to "carry on" regardless of seasons, climate or weather. If we lived more naturally, nature would take better care of us. Possibly disease germs and epidemics are nature's ways of punishing us for straying from her fold.

A BOTANIC GARDEN

(Kingston Standard) ..

If Toronto were to start a good Botanic Garden it would be doing good service to the province and to Canada. The fame of the "Kew Gardens" has spread all over the world, and so would a similar institution here. Besides this it should be a paying investment by introducing new plants.

SECRET OF DIPOMACY

(Guelph Herald)

There are few matters that underlead the secrets of diplomacy better than Turkey does, and as a result, no matter what concessions its representatives are compelled to make at the Lausanne conference the Turks will be immune against it. It is some what annoying, but none the less remarkable, to see Turkey's representatives sitting as an equal with Allied diplomats, while only four years ago that country was the most completely beaten and demoralized nation in Europe.

As a result of the tactics which have been pursued in the sphere of military and diplomatic sphere the Turk will come back to Europe with increased prestige; the regime control of Constantinople. Permission is to be granted to the Turkish Government to forge a small island in the Sea of Marmora, and all naval and military restrictions placed on Constantinople. The death of the demilitarized zone at the Dardanelles and the Bosphorus will be replaced by ten miles. The result of these concessions will be to increase the military powers of Turkey immensely, especially for purposes of defence.

DISCERNMENT.

The Italian Senate's unanimous vote of confidence in Mussolini is somehow reminiscent of an old story:

"Why do you think your dog loves you?" asked the nice old lady.

"Because he knows that I'd knock the stuffin' out of him if he didn't," the boy replied.

JONES' WHOPPER

"That fellow Jones is the worst liar I ever met."

"What now?"

"He says he took his car to the garage man and the fellow found there wasn't much the matter with it and actually fixed it—fixed it, mind you—and didn't charge him a cent for the trouble."

Woman's Sphere

TWELVE GREAT WOMEN

A league of women voters in the United States is collecting opinions as to who are the 12 greatest living American women, nearly all the lists sent in include the name of Mrs. Chapman Catt, who worked very hard to get votes for the women. Mrs. Catt herself declines to admit that she has any claim to greatness. "I have only stuck to my work," she says. She has drawn up a list of a dozen women whom she considers really great.

First comes that of Charlotte Perkins Gilman, whose books Mrs. Catt believes "revolutionized the attitude of mind of the whole country as to woman's place." Next on the list is Miss Jane Adams, founder of the Settlement in Chicago, which has been taken as the model for settlements in almost every other large American city. Then any groups of women decided to the class that has educated Eleanor, and their object is to be helped in the same way as she was fortunately placed.

Mrs. Raymond Robbins is a woman of simple manners and social opportunities who gave up her time to the organization of working women, with the aim of improving the conditions of their work. Many laws which protect women in the United States are due to Mrs. Robbins. Miss Carey Thomas was, until lately, head of the famous Bryn Mawr College for Girls. She led the way to a more scientific education for women, and helped to open up many new avenues of livelihood to them.

Mrs. Julia Lathrop is chief of the Children's Bureau, a branch of the American Government. She was given that position on account of her devoted work for children. Miss Addams is pioneer of the Welfare Movement that has done so much to help poor mothers to bring up their babies in health and vigor. Mary Roberts Rinehart is a novelist; Cecile Beaux is a painter. These two have been put on the list because Mrs. Catt likes work. Mary Bradford helped to improve education by bringing country schools up on the level of town schools in the State of Colorado, and so set an example that has been widely followed.

Dr. Katherine B. Davis struck out in like for herself when, early in life, she was impressed by the need of helping girls to resist temptation, and of discovering how to reclaim those who had fallen into bad ways. Miss Anne Morgan, daughter of the millionaire banker, has worked in many directions. Of late her special self-appointed task has been raising money in America for the restoration of the ruined war districts in France, and directing the work done with it.

Ida Tarbell has played a prominent part in the temperance movement, which favored Prohibition. Maud Wood Park is president of the League of Women Voters, and has done a great deal to raise the ideals of citizenship among women. The list is especially interesting, says the "Children's Newspaper", because nearly all the women included in it have been workers for progress, striving to leave the world a better place than it was when they came into it.

LINKED LIVES

By

D. Kinmount Roy

Had he ever seen such a face? he asked himself again; but it is such a real face, or only an artist's dream?

Again he read his father's story of that last meeting in the little hamlet, and found the key to the picture. Yes! it was a real face, the portrait of a trusting and injured woman; and if his father's surmises were correct, it was the picture of a distant kinswoman of his own.

Evidently he was not yet at the end of his troubles: there was still a tangled skein to unravel; but Maitland, he knew, was an expert in such matters, and with the longest key to the mystery in his hand the means ought not to remain much longer doubtful.

Their homeward progress had been slow, owing to the contrary winds; but at last the wind shifted and served, and by dawn next day the good ship dropped anchor in Dover Harbour, and two hours afterwards Aynsworth was on his way to London.

As he was entering the carriage a man with his arm in a sling, and who appeared otherwise crippled, passed him. Fraser-fashion. Aynsworth courteously acknowledged it, and paused to ask him a few questions as to where he had seen service, and pressing a couple of sovereigns into his hands, took his seat. Mumu, his faithful servant, was much less favourably impressed with the crippled soldier than his master; there was a strange look of cunning and malignity on the man's face when Aynsworth turned away which puzzled him.

"What the illbred creature accept handfuls of gold from every stranger gentleman he meets?" growled Mumu, as he settled himself on the box with the coachman.

In truth the world had not gone very well with our friend Kinloss since we saw him last, and more than with his master. He had completely failed to find any clue to the whereabouts of Oona; but then, so long as his employer remained in ignorance of that fact, he did no quite at all about collecting the money he had bargained for. If he had failed all he had promised, he had suffered much more than he had anticipated; for which, he assured himself, he was entitled to consideration and payment. It was true enough from his standpoint: if he was attached to any human being, it was his son and he had left him four days before a hopeless wreck in mind and body, without the slightest prospect of his ever recovering the use of one or the other.

Yes! his son had fallen in the service of Hardcastle: he would wring the last penny in compensation from the Squire. And now to meet young Glenmore was a fresh injury and incentive to revenge; and in spite of all his efforts, the man's evil nature blazed in his face at the young lord turned from him. Oh yes, he would take his gold, seeing the young fool was as eager to part with it as his father was him! Of course he would take it! and be fingered it lovingly. He would take it, and pay it back with interest in a different coinage —see if he would not! And the wretched creature chuckled at his own malicious fancy with devilish enjoyment.

Eric Hardcastle was not in any better frame of mind than his miserable tool. His son had left to join his regiment without any leave-taking,—a contenting himself with a letter which smote the Squire with such cruel reproach and scorn as no son, he told himself, had ever written to a father—and a father who had schemed and cheated and lied as he had done to secure his child a foremost place in the world!

"Foolish boy—foolish, ungrateful boy!" the Squire murmured as he paced the long library with halting steps. 'But surmise what they may, they have no proofs—absolutely no proofs—and what has lied deeper than I think he dare.' Still, the thought was disturbing, and he paused long and anxiously, with white, set face, almost ghastly in its pallor, while his eyes gleamed and shone in the candle-light clear, cold and cruel.

Nothing moved Eric Hardcastle to such fierce anger as to hear men speak lightly of such mere figments as 'honour' and 'truth'; and he asked himself where he would have been had he allowed himself to be governed by such considerations.

That son, his own flesh and blood, should quarrel with his own splendid inheritance because, forsooth it had not been obtained in the usual fool's fashion —despise broad acres and rich mineral wealth which his father's keen, wit and splendid unscrupulousness had gained for him, was gall and bitterness! Were all his long years of sleepless, relentless scheming to come to nothing through the foolish fancy of a pampered boy? Well, if the worst came to the worst, and there were no one, he told himself with well-founded complacency, could do it better; he could be unsolicitously, confidently so, so well that he could impose his own will upon honorable men, until the evidence of their own senses failed them. He was so satisfied and reassured by the consciousness of his own capacity in that respect that he smiled triumphantly, and poured himself out a small glass of brandy, which he sipped with slow satisfaction.

He could lie, he repeated to himself, and they could prove nothing.

The Adoration Of The Kings

From out the distant East He called three men of kingly bearing.
How count it strange if humility for regal rank be caring?
But 'twas for other cause than this that Westward... they faring.

The lowly shepherds on the hills
were of His faith and nation,
But His redeeming Light should shame throughout the whole creation:

His first-fruits these three holy men,
and wise, of kingly station.

His Kingdom compassed earth and sky—His Household knew no strength:
O'er mountain peaks, through desert waste, and many a toil and danger,
They came this wondrous thing to see—a King laid in a manger.

They offered Him their gold—the gold of their affection,
The frankincense of steadfast will,
the myrrh of their subjection.
He was their King, His subject they
—the first of His election.

O windswept cave of Bethlehem—
however poor and lowly—How'er devoid or worth are we—be sin our riches solely,
The Star of Hope still points the way that leads to the All-Holy.

The Short Story Jr.

UNSPOKEN THOUGHTS

Eleanor Sloan had sent out invitations to a big New Year's party. All the girls in the high school were invited. It would be the biggest party of the year.

"Whom are you going with?" Ruth asked Hazel, as the two girls walked home together.

"Oh, no one in particular. With whom are you?"

"No one."

"Oh, shoot," she thought, "now she'll expect me to ask her, and I'd rather go with any other girl in high school. Hazel's such a slick. Why couldn't I have said I was going with Helen or Gladys or any one?" The silence was becoming painful. "Well, I suppose I'll have to ask her."

"Goodness!" Hazel was thinking. "I got myself in bad that time. What ever possessed me to ask her that? Now she'll expect me to ask her to go with me. I'd rather go with any other girl in high school. Ruth's such a little sniv. Why didn't I tell her I was going with one of the girls! Well, it's too late now. I'll have to get something or I'll look like a fool."

At the same instant both girls opened their mouths. "Well, let's go together," they chorused in concert.

Hazel laughed. "We're both of the same mind," she said, thinking how far different she was from Ruth.

"Yes, it's nice always to agree," Ruth smiled grimly. She was thinking what an awful hypocrite she really was.

"Well, good-bye, I'll call for you about seven-thirty," Hazel said as she turned into their yard. She had been home only a few minutes when the telephone rang.

"That you, Hazel? Say, a bunch of us are going over to the ice cream parlor. We want you to come along."

"Oh, shucks!" Hazel sputtered in anger. "I've got to go with Ruth, I promised her, and she'd be hurt if I didn't. Isn't that just my luck!"

Ruth stopped into see Gladys on her way home. "Oh, Ruth, you're the very person I want to see," she said. Dad is going to take us to the party and we want you to go, too."

"Oh, dear," wailed Ruth, "and here I have to go with Hazel. I promised her and I can't go back on my word."

And the two girls started out together. They were the last to arrive at the party. "I'm glad you came after all," thought Hazel, "it's nice to do something unselfish. She enjoyed it, even if I didn't."

"Well, Hazel wanted to come with her," thought Ruth, "I made her happy, anyway. It's nice to know that."

Basketball Lessons

No.5. Foul Goal Tossing

(This is the fifth of twelve lessons in basketball by William G. Grave of the University of Pennsylvania, intercollegiate high scorer for 1921. Mr. Grave was captain of his team in 1920, and was named as All-Collegiate center in 1919, 1920, and 1921. Mr. Grave holds the record of having played ninety basketball games, and losing only five.)

From one-quarter to one-half of the points scored by a team during a game are made by foul goals. In fact, this phase of the game had reached such importance that a change in the rules was sought to prevent a team winning on foul goals alone. The Inter-Collegiate championship was won two years ago because the winning team had a foul goal tosser who shot 132 fouls out of 160 attempts.

Much as practice is needed in perfecting form in the other phases of the game, foul goal tossing demands as much practice as all the other phases put together. If it is your ambition to be the one that will bring his team to victory; to hold the rise or fall of the team in your hand at a crucial moment of the game when one point means rising or losing, then must you stand on the foul line and practice and practice.

Try Underhand Shot.

The underhand shot has proved the easiest and most natural way of shooting. Stand with the feet about ten inches apart and the toes just touching the foul line. Grasp the ball with both hands slightly to the rear and above the center. Hold it about waist high and about six inches in front of the body. Then bend the legs, allowing the body to sink, at the same time lowering the hands until they almost touch the body. From this semi-crouched position straighten the legs and bring the arms forward and upward, throwing the ball underhand toward the basket. Shoot high, so that the ball can drop in easily.

Practice first for direction, so that the ball will go in a line toward the basket and not either side. When you have the direction, the distance will come naturally. Another very important feature is to grasp the ball exactly the same way each time. No ball is exactly round, and if you do not hold it the same way each time it will throw you off. Do the same thing exactly the same way each time and you will be on the road to success in foul goal tossing.

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Dr. J. W. Barton, Canada's Foremost Physical Director

Dr. Barton is writing a daily short story on "That Body of Yours" for the Intelligencer in fortunate in being able to present to its readers these stories which will no doubt prove of inestimable value to many who have minor ailments that are the forerunners of serious complaints.

Perhaps never in the history of Canada has a man so specialized in that unique phase of the medical profession of examining and prescribing for the needs of human bodies as has Dr. J. W. Barton, Toronto. A specialist in his work at an age when most men are but starting, it is little wonder that he has had a life of constant activity as a leader in his specialized line and one of the outstanding successes of his field.

Dr. J. W. Barton is a member of the Medical Council of Ontario; Official Medical Examiner and Physician of the Amateur Athletic Union Boxing Tournaments, Official Medical Examiner and Physician of the Boxing Commission of Ontario; Medical Officer of the Officers' Training Corps; Physical Director of the University of Toronto for the past fifteen years; ten years Physical Director in the Y.M.C.A. and Preparatory Schools; President of Army and Medical Board during the war, picking out the units men in Canada's largest training camp.

Qualifications such as these as well as many others, have been gained by few men. During his fifteen years at Toronto University an army of men have passed through his hands for examination. These men, now graduated and scattered over the entire Dominion know Dr. Barton and know him for the specialist that he is.

Coupled with Dr. Barton's rare gifts for prescribing for the human body, is a natural ability to write clear, forceful articles of intense interest. You will notice a refreshing absence of highflown phrases or trite sayings in his writings—and a masterful attractiveness in the use of plain Saxon words that have a distinct appeal to the average reader. Yet his thoughts are cloaked in such a way that each of his short articles deals with matters of every day importance with a freshness and vigor that you could expect from a man with so much experience close to his subject.

FAKED ANTIQUES IN LONDON SHOPS

London, Dec. 11—The methods by which thousands of persons are cheated annually through the sale by dealers of antique furniture, pictures and porcelain which are "faked", were shown recently when an antique dealer was brought into court charged with fraud.

During the trial it was declared that dealers sell thousands of pounds worth of antiques every year in America and regrets visiting England, and that prices less than five per cent of the purchases are real.

The methods of the antique dealers in which their wares are carried out so skilfully that the experts differed widely in their opinion of many of the pieces brought into court. The favorite system of the crooked dealer is to obtain a genuine antique of a certain period, for instance a chair. This he will take apart, and reconstruct a number of new chairs of the same design, each one imitating a section of the original chair. It was shown during the hearing that an antique bedstead had been taken to pieces, and that the active proprietor fashioned in accordance with the pattern has sold for $3000 each.

Another Chine the work is more delicate. Here, the dealer must make himself conversant minutely to the original and bearing the makers signature. This requires a skill which few dealers possess nowadays, and which only baffles the experts.

It is estimated that sixty of the antiques now being shown in London are not what they are represented to be.

MOTOR CAR AFIRE

When Mr. H. Hungerford attempted to start his motor car this forenoon in his garage, the cars took fire, and excitment prevailed for some time. The fire department was summoned and the reels made a rapid response, and soon extinguished the blaze before any substantial damage had been done. It appears that the wires had become crossed, causing the trouble.

OBSEQUIES

MRS. MARY McGUINESS.

All that was mortal of the late Mrs. Mary McGuinness was this morning placed in the Belleville Cemetery vault. A short service was held in the private funeral chapel in connection with the Belleville Burial Company, Campbell street, by the Rev. W. Elliott, of the Tabernacle, Church.

FRANCE HARNESSING WATERPOWER

Paris, Dec. 29.—The work of harnessing the water power of France is making progress so much faster than the work of settling reparations questions, including coal deliveries by Germany, that some optimists believe the country will be beyond all need of coal from outside before the statesmen finish their parleys.

France is supposed to have nine million horse natural water power. Five hundred thousand horse power had been put to use before the war; an equal amount was installed during hostilities; three hundred thousand have been added since the armistice, and two hundred thousand more soon will be in use, making a total of a million and a half, equal to half the total stationary steam power used in France in 1913.

The plans of the Public Works Department, as explained to the Associated Press, provide for the utilization of approximately four million horse power within five years. The realization of this project will not only make France independent of foreign markets for coal, but will go along way toward making good the big deficits in the operation of French railroads, which will largely substitute all electricity for coal when the current is available. The French railroads paid 184,000,000 francs for coal in 1913, they paid 2,145,000,000 francs for coal about the same quantity of coal in 1920; the difference of approximately 2,000,000,000 francs was just about equal to the deficit for 1920.

The biggest individual job of this kind, the damming of the river Rhone at Genissiat, near the Swiss frontier, to furnish an average of 750,000 horse power at all seasons, is temporarily held up pending agreement between the state, the department of Savoie, and the communes interested. Other work is continuing regularly, however, all along the French Alps, and this in spite of the high costs, reckoned by experts of the Public Works Ministry at four and a half times the pre-war cost.

THESE MEN PAID DEARLY FOR THEIR WHISTLE

And it Was Not Even "Whistle", for One Bottle was Empty, Other Contained Water

A cruel joke was played on two well known business men in Lindsay, on Christmas eve. It was a case of the worm turning as the alleged perpetrator of the joke was himself taken in by the same scheme. An express man on Saturday called at both business houses with parcels to which were attached express charges. Those of course, were promptly paid, when the parcels were opened it was found one contained an empty bottle and the other a bottle of water.

WEST MUST PRODUCE EVERY YEAR 25,000 HEAD CATTLE

Winnipeg, Dec. 29.—"Unless western Canada can organize the livestock trade to produce 25,000 head of cattle annually fit for export, the proposition projected by the provincial department of agriculture whereby the government merchant marine would be pressed into service to carry the best at cost half the present shipping costs, will fail," stated Hon. Neil Cameron, minister of agriculture, to the interview.

In the past years, he said, the total number of cattle for export had been only about one-half of this number and the task confronting the three western provinces was to stimulate general interest to such an extent as to bring the business up to the required amount. Negotiations looking toward the adoption of this plan are continuing between provincial and Federal governments.

A. R. A. READY SEND CLOTHING TO RUSSIA

New York, Dec. 29.—Reports from Russia to the local headquarters of the American Relief Administration set forth the desperate need of many people in Russia, and particularly children, for, warm winter clothing.

To meet this emergency the organization has inaugurated a clothing remittance package which will clothe an entire family for the winter. Twenty dollars sent to Administration headquarters in this city will equip and deliver a package to anyone in Russia. Several thousand banks and other organizations in the United States have agreed to receive the money for these remittances. Through an arrangement with the Soviet government the packages will be delivered free of duty and at the greatest possible speed.

COMPLICATIONS AT LAUSANNE
Lausanne, Dec. 29.—The Near East Conference stood today on the verge of failure with the danger of breaking facing it, from several causes. One is the contest over the ownership of Mosul oil fields and the other question of capitulations. The Allied representatives strongly urge the capitulation claim a flat slam against the subjection of foreigners in Turkey to the jurisdiction of Turkish courts insisting on special courts with foreign judges for cases where foreigners are involved. The Turks claim this is an invasion of the Turkish sovereignty and is only being put forward by the Allies as a means to exert a strong interest in the rich oil fields of Mosul which the British insist they will never surrender. Despite the critical state of affairs, the delegates have not given up the hope of a successful settlement.

"THE MIKADO"
De Wolf Hopper Presents Gilbert and Sullivan's Comic Opera

De Wolf Hopper last night presented the old English comic opera "The Mikado" to a fairly good house at Griffin's. Although the opera is an old one and the actor has been on the stage many years, there is a great deal to be said for the whole performance. It was truly a delightful presentation. De Wolf Hopper plays and sings his role of Ko-Ko, the chief Hih Executioner, with all his old time artistry.

Herbert Waterous who takes the part of Poo Bah possesses a fine bass voice, and sets his whimsical role in an inimitable manner. Hundred Strings as Nanki-Poo, son of the mikado has a wonderfully pleasing tenor voice.

Both the male and female choruses sang with a very pleasing balance. The voices of the chorus and those of the principals blended very harmoniously.

In the love scenes the voices of Mr. Duffy and Miss Alice Mackenzie showed up to advantage. Miss Mackenzie has a sweet soprano voice and acts cleverly the part of the coy but somewhat saucy maiden of old Japan.

Katisha is sung by Miss Bernice Mershon. Her make up was excellent, and only the best were warranted to attract attention to her voice.

The whole opera was grandly enjoyed by all present and if it had not been for the inclement weather there would doubtless have been a full house.

BELLEVILLE PROPOSED AS SALES CENTRE

Continued from page one such factories will be able to get their cheese into cold storage at a very nominal cost, and thereby have it properly cured before it is graded.

The United Dairymen Cooperative Limited, Mr. H. Cowan, believes it should be possible to hold one of the biggest sales of cheese on the continent, and the prices should be the very best.

Among the factories which have already voted in favour of supporting the Belleville sale, are: the Empire Rylestone, and Beaver, of Campbellford boards. A committee to organize has been placed at work, as a result of which it is expected that all the factories will be approached in the matter during the next few weeks.

TORONTO UNION STATION IN USE BY MIDSUMMER?

Sir Henry Thornton Will Try and Get All Parties Together

Ottawa, Dec. 27.—"Tragedy is the only word to describe it," said Sir Henry Thornton, President of the Canadian National Railways, today in talking about the delay in getting the new Union Station in Toronto made available to the public. "When the new arrival in that city has to find his way about that old station it is a black-eye for Toronto."

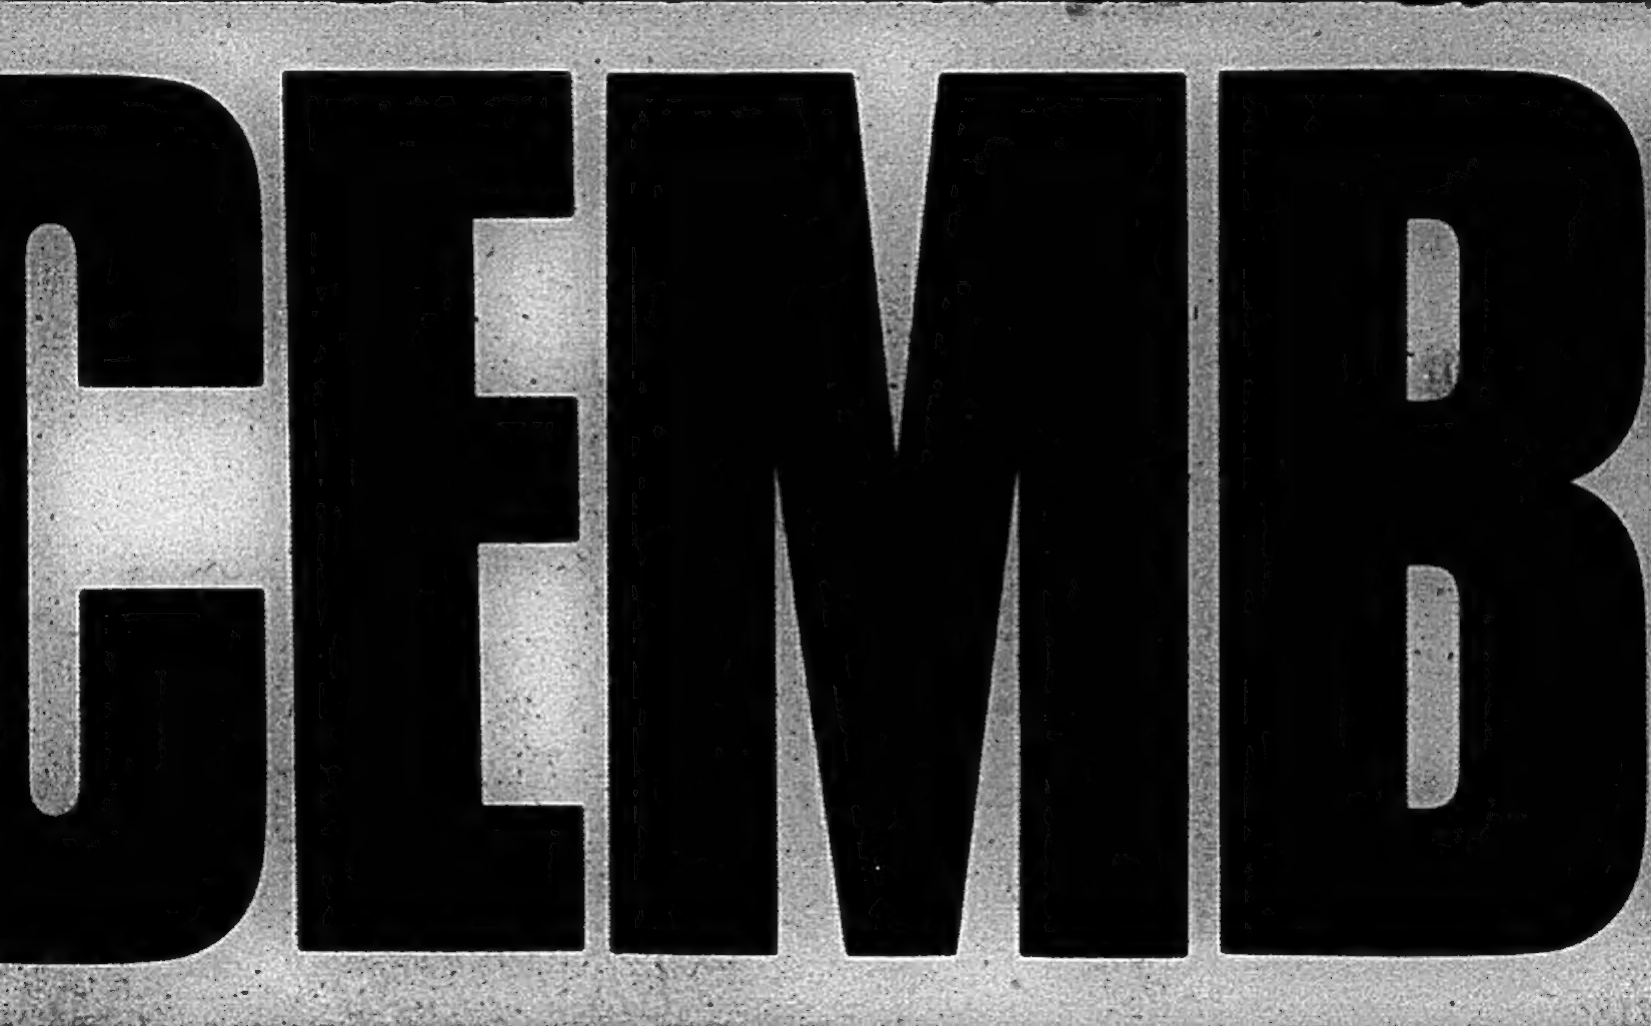

Sir Henry stated that within a short time his wood structure for the head of the various interests concerned in the new depot to get together and devise some means, even temporary, to enable the public to use the new station by midsummer if possible. This would necessitate bringing the tracks in on the low level. Later on another earnest effort will be made to get the vexed viaduct problem solved.

Sir Henry returned to the city this morning after spending Christmas with the bedside of Lady Thornton's father, at Newcastle, Penn.

A MISPLACED REMARK

"I'M afraid, my friend," said Dr. Graves, interrupting his sermon to point an accusing finger at a man who was yawning in a pew, "that you are not following me closely."

"I'm not a friend of yours," said the little man contemptuously, "and I'm not here to listen, I'm waiting to put the lights and lock up in here."
